AIR LINER CARRIES 8 TO DEATH

Omaha Lad Eliminates Bobby Jones in National Amateur Golf Tourney by One Stroke

Match Decided at Eighteenth Hole of Play

Victor Then Loses to San Francisco Boy 2-1 Score

PEBBLE BEACH, Cal., Sept. 4 (AP)—Pebble Beach today proved the Waterloo for the Napoleon of golf—Bobby Jones.

Coming to the far west to conquer for the first time, the world's foremost shotmaker and four times holder of the national amateur championship by a 20-year-old Nebraskan, Johnny Goodman of Omaha.

In one of the most sensational upsets the tournament has ever known, Goodman outplayed Jones to win by the narrow margin of one up in a match that went the full 18 holes and was not decided until the final putt.

Goodman's path of glory was brief. He was eliminated himself unceremoniously in the second round by an 18-year-old San Franciscan, William Lawson Little, Jr., two and one, but the Nebraskan was the main shock producer of the day.

Gloom Prevails

So keenly did the gallery apparently feel the unexpected downfall of the champion at the hands of the little known middle westerner that there was as much gloom around the home green at the finish as there was enthusiastic appreciation for the astonishing feat of Goodman, as game a fighter as they come.

Goodman won because he played better golf. There was no doubt about that, just as there was no doubt about the Nebraskan's staying power as he held the champion to even terms with par golf on the last four holes after regaining the lead at the fourteenth.

Fights Uphill Battle

In a bitterly waged uphill fight, after he had lost the first three holes, in startling succession, Jones squared the match at the twelfth, where Goodman was in considerable difficulty. All even and six to go, few figured there was any golfer in the field able to outshoot the king of them all but Johnny Goodman did it.

Instead of the Nebraskan, it was the Georgian who slipped when every shot had its bearing on the outcome. At the 555 yard fourteenth, Jones hit his third into a trap, lost a stroke under a tree, fired his third close

BOBBY MEETS HIS WATERLOO

Bobby Jones saw his hopes for another national amateur championship go glimmering yesterday before the sensational playing of a 20-year-old Omaha youth, Johnny Goodman, who defaeted the Atlantan at the eighteenth hole by the narrow margin of one stroke.

Judge to Deal With Rioters in Jerusalem

JERUSALEM, Sept. 4 (AP) — Sir John Chancellor, British high commissioner in Palestine, today issued a proclamation which was spread throughout the country by airplanes announcing the establishment of special courts consisting solely of British judge to deal with atrocities committed during the recent Arab-Jewish riots.

The proclamation emphasizes the courts will deal with all criminal offenders without distinction of race or creed. It also announced the British government's appointment of the parliamentary commission of inquiry headed by Sir Walter Shaw, late chief justice of the straits settlement.

A proclamation of another character has been reported in circulation among Arabs. It heralds a "fighter's holy war" and calls all Arabs to help insurgents in Palestine whose condition is described in the blackest terms.

The government has issued a sixth bulletin giving the following figures of the dead and wounded during all the trouble of the last two weeks.

Aviator Found Dead in Plane

Major Wood Crashes to Death With Ship

NEEDLES, Cal., Sept. 4 (AP)—A 60-hour search for the veteran pilot, Maj. John H. Wood, 32 years old, Wausau, Wis., ended today with discovery of his body behind the motor of his racing airplane at a point 38 miles northwest of Needles, dashing faint hopes that he, like his mechanic, Ward Miller, 25 years old, might have leaped to safety after a wing of the ship exploded early Monday.

Smith and Bobby Loutt, Los Angeles airmen, who led a land and air search for Wood after his disappearance on a projected non-stop race to Cleveland from Los Angeles, found the body.

Risking their lives in the treacherous rough desert wastes, they landed a small biplane near the wreckage today after locating the plane late yesterday.

In the cabin cockpit they found Wood's torn body, resting directly behind the big 425 horsepower motor.

The ship had not burned, but a wing was gone. This gasoline loaded structure was believed to have been exploded by a bolt of lightning.

Wood was wearing a parachute but aviators said he would have had little opportunity to extricate himself from the cabin in an emergency which probably occured with lightning-like suddenness.

Police Arrest Two Des Moines Youths

DES MOINES, Sept. 4 (AP)—Arrest of two 16-year-old high school youths here is believed to clear up the mystery of six robberies and three automobile thefts within the last week.

One of the youths, William Mcbride, is said by police to have confessed to the act. The other boy is said to be Robert Parker.

The robberies all occurred in the vicinity of North high school, which the boys attended.

STEAMER STRIKES WHALE

YARMOUTH, N.S., Sept. 4 (AP)—The steamer Yarmouth enroute from Boston to this port was delayed in arrival today, having struck a large whale off Yarmouth cape. The ship cut into the mammal so deeply that it had to be stopped and backed to free the body from the prow. The whale died.

Legion Plans for Program

Meeting Follows Dinner at Order's Building

Members of the local American legion post and a number of other interested persons attended a dinner in the newly decorated dining room at the legion building last night and made plans for the gymnasium program for the coming winter.

Thomas Martin, manager of the legion building, presided at the meeting which followed the dinner. He called members to tell what kind of a program should be outlined for the winter months.

The plan which the management desires to follow is to provide facilities for as many men as possible and to include those sports which will interest the largest possible group.

Golf putting and driving was favored by the largest number of men last night. Coach Charles Kennett of the university told how a nine or 18 hole putting course could be laid out in the building so as to not interfere with other activities, either in the gymnasium or other parts of the building.

Others voiced their opinion of handball, indoor baseball, basketball, and gymnastics. Many favored establishing classes for regular instructional work in golf putting and driving.

A suggestion was made that groups be organized for calesthenics under a competent director. This also met with favor from the gathering.

Another meeting will be called soon, according to Mr. Martin, for the purpose of further putting together ideas of the group.

Police Seek Clews of Slayer of Man Found in Mississippi

DAVENPORT, Sept. 4 (AP)—Police here today were seeking clews to the identity of the slayer of Adolph L. Johnson, 46 years old, whose body was found in the Mississippi river a week ago.

An examination of the body by Coroner J. D. Cantwell today revealed that Johnson did not die of drowning as previously supposed, but of a fractured skull. Police believe he was slugged and his body thrown in the river.

Navy Program Hinders U. S., Britain Parity

Present Plans Call for Carrying Out Cruiser Building Bill

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4 (AP) — President Hoover and his naval advisors had another taste today of the "hard work" which Secretary Stimson said is a necessary prelude to a naval parity agreement between the United States and Great Britain.

The president was still hopeful that an understanding could be reached under which it would be unnecessary for the United States to construct the entire 15 cruisers called for in the present authorized program of the navy.

Approaches which have so far been made to a determination of the level of tonnage at which equality can be obtained have been based mainly, however, on the assumption that this nation would carry out its cruiser program. Chairman Hale of the senate naval committee, believes the United States ultimately will build the cruisers regardless of the nature of any agreement with Great Britain.

Attention is being centered on the significant points at issue. Few, but important, these include: 1 — The number of cruisers which each country must have to cover its needs, but at the same time to give a status of parity between the two navies, and

2—The tonnage within which these ships are to be included, with an effort being made to set the tonnage mark at such a point that substantial savings can be made in the naval expenditures of both countries.

Another important question which remains to be settled is how the "yardstick" theory can be applied to the navies of the two countries. This theory has been suggested as a formula whereby relative fighting strength could be determined with considerations of age, armor, gunpower and speed in addition to simple comparisons of tonnage.

MACDONALD OPTIMISTIC ON NAVAL PARITY

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 4 (AP)—Despite the fact that several questions still are unsettled, and among them very important ones, Premier Ramsay MacDonald honestly believes that the outstanding difficulties in the naval conversations between Great Britain and the United States are not insuperable. The British labor premier is optimistic for the results of his talks in London with Ambassador Dawes.

Such is the attitude of Britain's tenacious Scotch premier, as summarized tonight for the Associated Press correspondent by an authorized spokesman of the British delegation to the assembly of the league of nations.

The premier is going back to England to resume vigorously his negotiations with Ambassador Dawes. He will take the train here tomorrow night for Paris and thence will fly to England.

The British spokesman described the premier's attitude as that of a man who was convinced the naval conversations with the United States had reached such a momentum it was impossible to imagine they could fail.

Jury Indicts Four 'Leggers

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 4 (AP) — The county grand jury early tonight returned secret indictments charging conspiracy to violate the liquor laws against J. B. Westman, alias Harry D. McDonald and three others after the confessed bootlegger's repitition before the inquisitorial body of his charges that 20 policemen extorted protection money from him over a period of five years. The grand jury returned to its chambers after indicating more indictments would follow.

District Attorney Buron Fitts, to whose deputies Westman had made two long statements covering his charges, took him before the inquisitorial body at the opening of its session. Four other witnesses subpoenaed by the state waited outside the grand jury room. It was learned that one of them, a bank official, was prepared to corroborate one of Westman's declarations of having paid protection to the police. The witness, from whose bank Westman drew $1,000, assertedly was to tell the jurors of seeing Westman hand the cash to a police detective waiting on the street corner.

Westman was arrested last week by investigators from the district attorney's and federal prohibition offices. He was charged with violation of the prohibition law.

"Chicago We Will" Forced Down After 290 Hours in Air

CHICAGO, Sept. 4 (AP)—The airplane "Chicago We Will" in which Russell Mossman and C. E. Steele are seeking an endurance flight record was forced down at 1:33 p.m., C.S.T. today after having been aloft 290 hours and 57 minutes. Magneto trouble forced their descent.

The Chicago plane was 129 hours 35 minutes 30 seconds short of equalling the record of Forrest O'Brine and Dale S. Jackson and the St. Louis Robin. The St. Louis flyers were in the air 420;21;30.

Revised Tariff Formally Goes Before Senate

65 Senators Answer to Roll Call After Vacation

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4 (AP)—The revised republican tariff bill was placed formally before the senate today but initial clashes between advocates and opponents were deferred after less than a half hour session.

Coming back to start the first general tariff legislation in seven years on its way to final enactment, 65 senators answered to the first roll call since the summer recess was taken in June to permit the finance committee to draw up amendments to the bill passed May 28 by the house.

Offer Resolutions

First a batch of resolutions and nominations, the latter including those of the farm board, were offered and referred to appropriate committees. Chairman Smoot then introduced the tariff measure, submitting along with it the exhaustive majority report of the finance committee. This details the reason for many of the rate and administrative changes in the bill proposed by the committee republicans.

An agreement was reached to make the bill the unfinished business of the senate tomorrow.

Meanwhile, the democrats and republican independents will give further study to parliamentary procedure to determine the best way to proceed with a resolution to limit revision to agricultural tariffs. Many conferences of the minority and western republicans were in evidence on the floor during today's brief meeting.

Simmons Opposes Bill

The first notice of opposition to the bill on the floor was served by Senator Simmons of North aCrolina, who is at the democratic helm for the tariff debate. He said the fact that the minority would not file a separate report did not mean they were not "thoroughly opposed" to the measure.

A republican independent, Blaine of Wisconsin, introduced a joint resolution, which went over without debate, to make all corporation income tax returns available to members of congress during the pendency of the tariff bill.

In this connection, Senator Simmons said he would offer a resolution to authorize the finance committee to obtain any information it desired from the treasury or tariff commission.

Bureau Moves Iowa Offices

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4 (AP)—The internal revenue bureau today announced the removal of the Iowa divisional offices from Dubuque to Des Moines. The change is effective about Oct. 1, the announcement stated.

DUBUQUE, Sept. 4 (AP)—Approximately fifty persons now employed in the Iowa divisional offices of the internal revenue bureau here are affected by the removal of the offices here to Des Moines.

All the persons employed at the office here will be given opportunity to retain their positions by moving to Des Moines, according to an unofficial statement here this afternoon.

Lars Bladine, collector of internal revenue, was not in the city today, but it was learned from deputy collectors that no official notification of the transfer of the offices to Des Moines had been received.

Rumors prevalent here for several days were to the effect that the official announcement of the removali would be made before the end of the week.

DIES AT ALTAR

HAMMOND, Ind., Sept. 4 (AP)—The Rgt. Rev. Msgr. William Berg, 75 years old, dean of the Catholic clergy in the Calumet district in Indiana, where he had been a pastor for more than half a century, was stricken at the altar of St. Michael's church in Schererville, today, and died shortly afterward of heart desease.

Poison Food Causes Death of Local Girl

Eloise Workman Dies on Way to Hospital Yesterday

Eloise Workman, 620 S. Capitol street, an 18-year-old Iowa City high schoo lgirl, died suddenly of convulsions at 2:45 o'clock yesterday afternoon while being rushed to the university hospital. Cause of death is attributed to some food poisoning although doctors who performed an autopsy have not yet determined just what it was.

The young girl was normal at noon when she partook of a light lunch with her mother, Mrs. L. O. Workman, and 11 year old sister, Marguerite. After lunch she appeared to have a slight headache and when questioned later by her mother she began to cry.

Exact Cause Unknown

It was but shortly after this that she suffered severe abdominal pains and Dr. F. L. Love, who was summoned, ordered her rushed as fast as possible to the hospital. She died as she was being removed from the ambulance at the hospital entrance. Exact cause of her death will not be known until later as university doctors who performed the post-mortem have not yet had time to completely analyze stomach contents.

An inquest will probably be held, but Dr. Paul Reed, who is acting as coroner in the absence of Dr. George Maresh, stated last night that nothing definitely will be done pending the outcome of the doctor's investigation.

Senior at City High

Mrs. Workman stated last night that Eloise planned to register at the city high school yesterday. She would be a senior and had delayed her registration with her class from the previous day because of the large number registering.

She partook of the luncheon with her mother and sister and all had the same kinds of food, none of the others feeling the slightest after effects. Mrs. Workman said the menu consisted of beef broth, rice, applesauce, bread and butter, and coffee. Since no green vegetables or canned goods of any type were on the menu, a ptomaine poisoning theory is discarded.

Had Good Health

Miss Workman had not had any serious illness for over 10 years, according to her mother. She has had slight illness but none of the least similarity to the convulsions suffered yesterday.

Besides her mother and sister, she leaves her father, L. O. Workman, an electrical engineer at the light and power plant in Coralville; an aunt, Marietta Workman, N. Gilbert street; and her grandparents, Mrs. J. J. Chihak of Riverside, and Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Workman of Lone Tree. She has other relatives at Marengo, Silvis, Ill., and in Kansas.

The body was removed to the Beckman funeral home and funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Committee to Consider 11 Nominations

Eight Members of Farm Board; 3 Officers Names Submitted

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4 (AP)—The nominations of the eight members of the farm board and of three new diplomatic officers were submitted to the senate today at its first business session after the summer recess and immediately referred to committee for preliminary consideration.

Rumors of opposition to members of the farm board, which has been functioning since July, were heard but no definite voice of opposition has been sounded and the agricultural committee will meet Friday to look over the list of nominees.

Mr. Hoover submitted the names of John W. Garrett of Baltimore, Md., to be ambassador to Italy; Garrit John Diekema of Michigan, to be minister to the Netherlands, and of George T. Summerlin of Louisiana, to be minister to Venezuela. The foreign relations committee will consider these nominees at its regular meeting next week and their confirmation is expected.

Day in Washington

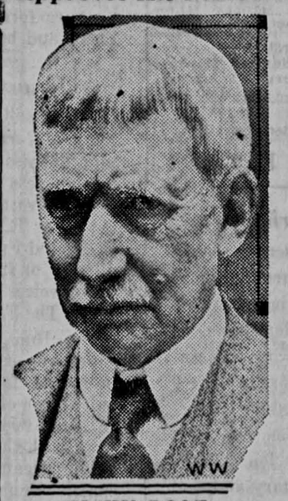
The senate reconvened at noon.

The tariff bill was placed formally before the senate.

The president and his naval advisors continued their study of armament reduction.

President Hoover submitted the nominations of the farm board and other appointees.

Approves His Protocol



ELIHU ROOT

Favor Root's New Protocol

40 Countries Approve U. S.' Adherence

GENEVA, Sept. 4 (AP)—Delegates of 40 countries belonging to the world court for international justice gathered in a great international conference here today, unanimously approved of the revised protocol prepared by the famous American jurist, Elihu Root, for adherence of the United States to the world tribunal.

The unanimous approval of the Root protocol will be made the subject of official notification to the United States government.

During the discussion of the protocol text Sir George Foster, speaking for Canada, said his country was delighted to think that her neighbor and friend now was likely to join the great Hague court which is dedicated to the administration of international justice. What was lacking between the United States and the court signatories, said Sir George, was the contact of conferences. Had these taken place before, American participation might well have been realized several years ago, he said.

The protocol now will go before the assembly of the league for approval. This is considered a mere formality.

Graf Reposes at Home Port After Cruise

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Sept. 4 (AP)—The dirigible Graf Zeppelin reposed in its hangar tonight after having set a new record for world circling by any means and then setting up an even better mark of 20 days 4 hours 18 minutes.

Her officers and crew, idols of a tremendous German welcome, finally obtained much needed rest after a month of blazing new air trails without a single serious damage to their ship or injury to passengers.

Only Capt. Hugo Eckener, the commander who guided his beloved ship around the world from Lakehurst to Lakehurst before turning her over to his first assistant captain, Ernest Lehmann, was missing. He had remained in America to discuss plans for giving dirigibles added importance in the world.

Apparently the Graf and its crew now are to have a period of rest. Official denial has been made that another transatlantic trip was contemplated this autumn. It has been tentatively arranged for the airship to be utilized for Arctic exploration in an expedition to get under way next April.

Two Children Die When Auto Plunges Over Omaha Sidewalk

OMAHA, Sept. 4 (AP)—Two children were fatally crushed when pinned against a retaining wall by an automobile which was catapulated over the sidewalk in a collision with another car here tonight.

The dead are: Iona Isabelle Michaelsen, 7 years old, Donald George Wilson, 1 year old.

A third child, Lois Moore, 7 years old, was critically injured. She is reported to be dying.

The Michaelsen girl, accompanied by Lois Moore, was pushing the Wilson baby in a gocart along the sidewalk when the crash hurled the car against them. Drivers of both cars were arrested on charges of reckless driving.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 4 (AP)—Nathaniel Montgomery Rice, 61 years old, a vice-president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad company since 1925, and a railroad man for nearly half a century, died in a hospital here today.

Missing Plane Wrecked in New Mexico

Five Passengers, Three of Transport's Crew Lose Lives

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Sept. 4 (AP)—Eight persons, a woman and seven men, rode through a storm in the skies to their death in one of the most desolate sections of the wild west, in the destruction of the west bound Transcontinental Air Transport "City of San Francisco."

Wreckage of the big sky liner, one of the most modern passenger monoplanes in the company's service, was discovered in a storm swept region 26 miles south of Gallup, N. M., official advices made public tonight revealed. This was 30 hours after the air transport had dropped from sight yesterday noon.

List of dead:

Passengers:

Mrs. Corina Raymond, wife of George B. Raymond of Glendale, Cal., clerk in T.A.T. offices here.

A. B. McGaffey, 712 Copper avenue, Albuquerque, N. M.

William Henry Beers, 425 Fifth avenue, New York city.

Harris Livermore, 21 Beaner place, Boston.

M. M. Campbell, 1183 Herschel avenue, Cincinnati.

Crew:

J. B. Stowe, chief pilot.

E. A. Dietel, copilot.

C. F. Canfield, courier.

Little Information Given

Storm conditions and the bleakness of the volcanic lava beds where the air liner came to the abrupt end of its trail with all aboard dead, together with reluctance of the transport company officials to make public all the information received from Gallup, brought comparatively little information as to the scene of the disaster.

The big all metal, tri-motored monoplane, took off from Albuquerque, N. M., at 10:22 a.m. yesterday. Its path to Los Angeles through New Mexixco and Arizona was swept by electrical storms.

Passing over Grants, N. M., on its regular course, the big monoplane encountered heavy sudden storms. Reports of its passage across the Zuni Indian reservation to Old Ft. Defiance, in northeastern Arizona revealed that before noon it was far north of its course.

Shortly after this it appeared over the little trading post of Houck, Ariz., showing that Chief Pilot Stone had swerved sharply to the south, seeking to swing about the storms. Late today an Indian runner appeared in Houck saying he had sighted a big plane on a mountainside about ten miles from Houck.

Carrier Reports Crash

In the early evening a rural mail carrier entered Thoreau, N. M., reporting that the big plane was smashed up in Black Rock valley, 23 miles south of Gallup, N. M., and that all aboard were dead.

Captain Walter Parkin, United States department of commerce inspector, will fly to the scene in the morning to make an official survey.

The official report of the T. A. T. company issued in Los Angeles said "early reports are that the accident was caused by a bolt of lightning striking the ship."

Croatian Miner at Ft. Madison Takes Own Life in Prison

FT. MADISON, Sept. 4 (AP)—George Domyancich, Croatian miner who was serving a life sentence in the state pentiteniary here for the slaying of D. Fulton Rice, Centerville attorney, committed suicide in his cell today.

Domyancich gave himself up after killing Rice, who was acting as his attorney in a slander suit. He was found guilty of first degree murder.

The prisoner used a razor to end his life. Officials said they believed he was insane.

Bootlegger's Wife Mistaken for Milk Man; Asks Divorce

CHICAGO, Sept. 4 (AP)—You can't call a bootlegger a milkman and get away with it. That's fightin' talk in Chicago.

So Mrs. Bernice Ruspantini, 22 years old, wants a divorce.

She didn't mind making deliveries of liquor at night for her husband, who operates a south side cafe, she told the court, but people began looking out of windows in the early morning hours and mistaking her for the milkman.

"Now I ask you, judge, should any wife ought to have to stand for that?"

Lace Curtains Fail to Fool Dry Agents Who Get Large Still

CHICAGO, Sept. 4 (AP)—Clothes do not make the man nor, it developed today, lace curtains the house.

A beautiful fish bowl could be seen through the lace curtains of a neat frame house in Forest Park but that was the only thing in the way of furnishing found inside when prohibition agents broke in.

An elaborate $3,000 still, in full operation, 26,000 gallons of mash and 55 cans of 188 proof pure grain alcohol was the reward for their trespassing.

American Insularity

SETTLEMENT of the American continent, or rather of that part known as English America, began as a means of escape from Europe for the under-privileged middle classes. Stormy New England was founded because of Puritan desire to be free from Stuart interference. Harassed Huguenots began to seek refuge in America early, leaving their native France as long ago as 1624. Political, religious, military and economic oppression drove others from unhappy homes in the German Rhineland, Scotland, and northern Ireland during the eighteenth century.

Aided by a 3,000 mile ocean barrier, those early settlers fought to make their isolation complete in the Revolutionary war and the War of 1812. Public announcement of the separation was made with the Monroe doctrine in 1826. The new nation became less and less dependent on England for certain manufactured goods, and set up a tariff wall.

"Manifest destiny" seemed evident in the spread of a growing country over broad continental stretches and into foreign waters. Here was an independent nation, sufficient unto herself.

Yet never in the whole process was the United States wholly cut apart from Europe. Her population source across the water continued to send labor for the industrialized country. Not only immigration but also commerce provided bonds which wove the world into one fabric, not to be cut apart with ease. Diplomatic ties represented more basic connections not so readily suspended.

Not even in her most extreme self-sufficiency was the United States independent of Europe. Continued contact with the old world culture has kept her abreast of a civilization from which hers is merely an offshoot. Advanced means of communication and transportation have made the intervening distance a mere trifle. Even in her very acts of separation, the wars with England and her Monroe doctrine, it was by virtue of foreign aid that the United States was successful. Without France she could not have coped with powerful England. Without England's unofficial backing her Monroe doctrine would have been a farce.

Today it is the same story. America, a merchant serving the whole world, cannot shut her doors to important customers or to supply sources. Formerly a place of scattered and somewhat isolated entities, this earth has become a neighborhood of nations whose best interests demand harmony. Investments abroad, dependence on foreign countries for a thousand and one things, and countless other ties act like innumerable Lilliputian strings to render a powerful United States impotent to sever relations.

The United States cannot afford to remain insular in her attitude when she is not insular in actual fact. World harmony is the very cornerstone of her national safety. For that reason narrow nationalism must be cast aside for a broader view of things, an internationalism that does not lose sight of national identity, but merges it with the greater unit of which the United States is but one part.

Goodie Two Shooz

NOT SINCE the days of that famous and intrepid reformer Anthony Comstock has this country been so overrun with private persons and organizations seeking to save the nation collectively by censorship.

It used to be characteristic of Boston alone to censor literature. Now it seems to be the vogue wherever books are read and printed. Censorship of course is not limited to the literature. It has been extended to the movies, advertisements, speeches, and human thought and endeavor in general.

There is an excuse for the censorship of the movies because whole families attend these places of amusement. Children are taken there. It used to be that the child depended upon only what the accompanying adult would read to him from the titles. Now the talkies bring him everything.

The censorship, or should we say application of discretion, to the movies and talkies is wise.

The censorship of literature is not so wise. The deletion of, what appear to the censor, lurid passages usually comes from classics. Certainly these books do not depend upon these passages for their high rating, but these excerpts are integral parts of the author's work.

Who, then, are these people who distill the nation's reading matter? They are for the most part self-appointed "stink raisers" possessing scarcely more than moronic intelligence who see certain frank passages as "dirty" and are afraid to trust others to read them.

There is an old adage that says something to the effect that all things are pure to those whose minds are pure. We do not mean to compliment the reformers by the implications of the word "mind." It is perfectly possible for a reader of some intelligence to read a book containing some of these "nasty" bits without being corrupted.

We feel that the removal of such passages from books is entirely out of keeping with the constitution of this country and an insult to the collective intelligences of the country. Unlike the movies, books can be kept from the eyes of children until they reach an age when they can discern for themselves.

We lift as our battle cry: "Literature in its pure form and down with Goodie Two Shooz and her moronic tribe."

One Good Organization

THE SUCCESS of the newly formed federal farm board with its $500,000,000 plan to raise farm marketing to the level of big business seems to depend entirely upon the cooperation of the individual farmer.

Arthur R. Rule, general manager of the Federated Fruit and Vegetable Growers and a leader of the cooperative marketing movement, voices this opinion in the current issue of The Farm Journal.

Mr. Rule explains the several ways in which the new marketing act will aid the individual farmer. But, he points out, the aid will be effective only in the degree that the 6,000,000 farm operators are willing to work with the nation-wide cooperative marketing organizations representing their respective commodities. About 2,000,000 farm operators now are members of 12,500 local and regional cooperative bodies, and these small cooperatives must also be knit into single strong commodity groups if they are to gain the full benefit of the act, the expert shows.

The chief weakness of many local cooperatives to date is that they have not carried cooperation far enough; while cooperating locally they have been competing with hundreds of other small cooperatives in selling to regional and national markets.

So long as we have mere scattered attempts at organization among farmers just so long can we expect the futile returns we have had to put up with in the past. A real organization which will shelve petty jealousies and really work for the one purpose will succeed and benefit all.

OPINIONS OF OTHERS

A Census Plot Not Existing

(Minneapolis Tribune)

The announcement of the director of the census that war veterans and their wives or widows will be given precedence over others, whenever it is possible, in choosing enumerators and supervisors is one which is certain to meet with widespread favor. The government would be ungrateful, indeed, if such a preference was not shown, all other things being equal, to those who have served it in time of war. It is to be regretted, however, that a democratic congressman has chosen to interpret the announcement as an indication that the census bureau intends to throw every possible job in the direction of republican veterans. His charge that a conspiracy exists to mulct the democratic veterans out of the opportunity for census work is not only palpably preposterous, but it reveals bad taste on the part of one who is very evidently attempting to make political capital out of a move which must appear, to any reasonable person, to be entirely nonpolitical in motive. As far as we know, there were no party lines drawn on the fields of Flanders, in the swamps of Cuba or on the placid surface of Manila bay. The whole idea of discriminating between republican service in our wars and democratic service in our wars is so repugnant to the average individual that it would never be countenanced by any rational official. The veteran fought without party label, and he will be employed, when the time for census-taking draws around, without reference to such labels. To charge otherwise is not to discredit the republican party, but to libel the sense of gratitude, justice and fair play of the entire nation.

J. H. Thornton to Serve as Assistant History Professor

A new instructor, J. H. Thornton, who will be assistant professor of American history, has been added to the faculty of the department of history, according to an announcement made yesterday from the president's office.

Professor Thornton received his M.A. from Harvard university and his Ph.D. from the University of Chicago this summer. His teaching experience has included some time at Grinnell college.

HOLLYWOOD — Cyril Wiener, local clothing merchant, is truly one of the most airminded business men in the firm capital. The far-seeing Mr. Wierner's business stationery has been imprinted with the picture of an airplane in flight, together with the popular slogan "Use Air Mail." Mr. Wiener conducts an extensive daily correspondence with his eastern representatives and branch offices in paris.

MEN WHO FLY The Air Mail

Since Frank R. Yager commenced flying in November, 1917, he has spent a twelfth of his life in the air! His imposing total of 8,000 flying hours means an average of a solid month out of each year off the ground.

Night and day all look alike to Frank when he has his hand on the controls of the Boeing transcontinental planes. Tucked away in that 8,000 hour total are 2,200 hours of night flying.

From the army—to barnstorming—to the air mail. That's the route pursued by Yager in his flying career to date.

In 1920, when the air mail lines were still operated by the government, with surplus army planes, Yager joined the air mail at Washington, D. C.

During the eight years he has been in the service he has flown the Chicago-Omaha, the Omaha-Cheyenne and the Cheyenne-Salt Lake routes, covering the long solitary stretches of the westbound mail, week in and week out, day or night, without the slightest mishap. Yager recently flew one of the new Boeing speed mail planes between Cheyenne and Omaha, 476 miles, in three hours flat, cutting 10 hours off the fastest train time.

Yager now heads out of Cheyenne, piloting the westbound Cheyenne-Salt Lake mail planes for Boeing Air Transport.

CHICAGO—Americans are large users of European air passenger lines, the American Air Transport Association states in a recent report. Twenty per cent of the passengers traveling on foreign lines are Americans, the report said. As an example, 875 of the 4,229 passengers carried on Austrian lines last year were citizens of the United States.

LOUISVILLE ATTUNED FOR ROLL OF LEGION DRUMS

The American legion is on the way to Louisville. A typical parade scene is shown above, with a bugle and drum corps marching in Paris in 1927. Nor are the women and children neglected, as the picture at lower left attests. Paul V. McNutt (lower right) is national commander of the organization.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 4 (AP)—Louisville, gay city of the southland, is hauling out the flags and the bunting for a visitor.

Twelve years ago the guest of honor marched away in olive drab, in navy blue or in marine green, a sack of tobacco in his ammunition belt and a carefree song in his throat.

Now he's coming to Louisville in a business suit with a blue and gold American legion cap perked over one ear, for the legion's national convention will be here September 30 to October 3.

Mr. Legionnaire isn't the boy he was when he did squads east in 1917-'18; he wears a longer belt than he did when the mess sergeant experimented with the Army Cook's Manual; perhaps he will be accompanied by his wife and some little future soldiers—even so, he is primed for a good time, and Louisville will give it to him.

And maybe Mr. Legionnaire won't show Louisville a good time!

The city that draws a legion convention may as well shut up shop and let the hired help see the sights, for they'll never get any work done. There is too much to see—parades, formal and impromptu; bands, bands, bands; bugle and drum corps by the dozen; serenades on the corners; singing on the streets; gayety by day and gayety by night.

A feature of the entertainment is the American legion derby, to be run on the Churchill Downs track, Sept. 30. Paul V. McNutt, national commander of the organization, will give his dinner to distinguished guests the same day.

That night there will be a golden light jubilee, with fireworks across the Ohio river, and a night flying exhibition for airplanes. The dirigible Los Angeles and army and navy planes are expected.

The annual parade will be Oct. 1. Other events are a "state's dinner;" the Forty and Eight's "wreck;" markmanship events; band and drum corps contests, athletic events and scenic trips.

The convention has a serious side, for the forenoons are largely devoted to business and discussion of world questions.

A NEW YORKER AT LARGE

Tournament Tennis Balls May Cost $360 a Week; More Than for Major League Baseball

By DEMING SEYMOUR

NEW YORK, Sept. 4—A young woman who was born in Russia and who was brought to New York in babyhood, by her immigrant parents, in flight from a pogrom in Warsaw, has grown up to marry well and to be the mistress of an opulent apartment in the fashionable East fifties.

She went to lunch the other day with an old girlhood friend.

"Where are you living?" she asked the latter, who had done pretty well for herself.

"On West End avenue," was the answer.

West End avenue is one of the better residential streets of the town, but the young woman whose parents had been penniless immigrants from Warsaw seemed quite shocked.

"Oh, my dear," she exclaimed, "I don't see how you can endure it. I can't concieve of your living West of Fifth avenue. It's so common."

The other leaned over the luncheon table, and with killing politeness retorted: "Darling, you must be miserably lonesome since the Romanoffs died."

SECOND-HAND SOUVENIRS

At the important tennis tournaments at Forest Hills and other net clubs around New York, boys stand at the portals selling grass-stained tennis balls at a quarter apiece.

They are balls that have been used in tournament play, and they find ready market among folk who want as a souvenir a ball employed in a match by Tilden, Helen Wills or some other court star. Generally the purchaser can get one of the tournament heroes or heroines to autograph the ball.

Such sales reclaim a part of the money spent for balls at the big tournaments. The man who buys the tennis balls for the annual Southampton tournament tells us that he generally has to supply about 72 dozen for the week. At the prevailing price of three for $1.25, that means a $360 outlay.

These are fair weather figures. If it rains, the spheres go dead quickly. Even on dry days balls get grass-stained and their nap is worn off, and a worn ball cannot be made to do tricks nearly so readily as a new one.

BALLS THAT GO FARTHER

Just for fun we looked into the cost of baseballs and golf balls, while we were at it, and found that the balls used in a week of tournament tennis cost more than the spheres employed in a week of major league baseball.

Sometimes five or six dozen balls are used in a baseball game these days, and they cost the major leagues a dollar apiece, but $350 is generally more than enough to buy a weeks supply of baseballs.

In golf most players, including Bobby Jones, tee up a new ball every six holes. The old ball may not be perceptibly cut or dented, but the pounding takes life out of it. A player who goes to the finals will use about 30 ball in a week. That, however, is no affair of the tournament committee, for golfers, unlike tennis and baseball players, furnish their own balls in tournament play.

Slack Demand Causes Wheat Prices to Slip

Other Grains Resist Pressure on Mart to Close Steady

CHICAGO, Sept. 4 (AP)—Pressure on the wheat market found it vulnerable today and despite continued clear weather in Argentina prices here went downgrade. There was slack demand for wheat both here and abroad and available world stocks showed a big increase.

There was pressure on other grains, too, but corn and oats stubbornly resisted and at the end, while wheat was near the low point of the day, corn was at the best price of the session. Wheat finished 1⅛ to 2⅛c lower and corn ⅝c higher to ⅝c lower. Oats were ¼c higher to ¼c lower and provisions steady at the same as yesterday's finish to 25c lower, bellies showing the loss.

Bradstreet showed the world's available wheat stocks to be 345,000,000 bushels against 180,000,000 a year ago, an increase of 9,738,000 for the week. Today's deliveries totalled 857,000 bushels of wheat and 89,000 of corn. Export interest was quiet.

The trade regarded as bullish the government's weekly weather and crop summary of the corn outlook, which reported crop progress in the Ohio valley but drought damage elsewhere.

Kansas, in its weekly crop survey described 50 to 75 per cent of corn as past aid from rain. There was persistent commission house buying of oats. Provisions started a bit higher but the upturn was lost at the last.

September corn was relatively firm, finishing ¼ to ⅜c higher while deferred months eased down. Around $1.01 for December there was good support developing. The spot basis was steady with light country sales reported, and receipts were light with only 43 cars of corn inspected. Foreign reports indicated a good demand, with more active buying for deferred positions, as it is not likely there will be much feed wheat available this year. Local shipments were light at 57,000 bushel.

Chicago Grains

CHICAGO, Sept. 4 (AP)—Local spot offerings of wheat were rather small, demand moderate, sales were based mainly on December prices, no comparisons possible. Prices showed declines of 1 to 3c as compared with previous sales. Shipping demand light, there were no sales reported. Country offerings to arrive small. Sales to go to store 100,000 bushel. Deliveries on September contracts today 857,000 bushel. Cancellations 5,000 bushel seaboard reported export business in all positions small.

Corn offerings were smaller. Demand moderate and prices about unchanged. Basis steady to ⅛c higher. Local sales 70,000 bushel. Vessel room chartered yesterday for 237,000 bushel No. 1 yellow corn and 134,000 bushel oats to Georgian Bay. BLUE BLOOD AND RED

By Robert Terry Shannon

"Just a moment, please!" said Marion.

What has gone before:

Eddie Regan, once a member of a New York gang, has escaped to Virginia, where he meets Marian Thorndike. He forgets the "gang girl," Bernice Veressi, whom he once thought himself in love with, in his dreams of Marian. Penfield Paradine, last member of an aristocratic southern family, whom Eddie befriends, dies and leaves Eddie all his possessions. Eddie declares his love to Marian, but she discourages him. She comes to his house one night when she is thrown from her horse, where she is found by Tom Freeman, to whom she is engaged, who takes her home. When Eddie calls at Marian's home, Freeman is there, and tells Eddie to stay away from Marian. Tobe, the Negro servant, who is part of Eddie's "inheritance," tells Eddie that Miss Marian is acting mean to Freeman and had refused to go to a dance with him.

Now go on with the story:

CHAPTER XXI

After all, she had not forbidden him to come. Nor had her father—directly. The knowledge that he was not wanted by Mr. Thorndike stung him, but the urge to look on her face again was stronger than pride. When, again, he hitched his horse to the tree in her yard and presented himself at the door his heart was beating with a strong, adventurous rhythm.

"She's upstairs," the Negro woman who answered the bell said. "Won't you come in while I call her?"

But the broad veranda with its wicker chairs and moonlight everywhere was so alluring that Eddie wanted to stay outside.

"I'll wait here," he said.

The servant retired and he dropped into a chair, lighting a cigarette. Inside the house he thought he heard a man's voice and a moment later he was sure of it.

Tom Freeman came out and confronted him. Immediately Eddie got to his feet.

"Well, I see you are here again," Freeman said, coming close to him. They were so near that Eddie could detect the faint aroma of liquor on Freeman's breath. Still the man seemed perfectly sober. "I thought I told you to keep away from this place."

Eddie's voice froze. "Yes?"

"You are not wanted here and you ought to have the good sense to know it," Freeman told him.

"You said that the other time—but nobody else has told me the same thing."

"I am telling you now for the last time. You can untie that nag of yours and drive right back where you came from."

"I will do that little thing," Eddie informed him, "when I get damn good and ready."

"You'll do it now!"

"Yes?"

"Right now," Freeman said. His heavy hand fell on Eddie's shoulder, his fingers clutched in the fabric of his coat and he started to pull Eddie in the direction of the veranda stairs. Like a square stone swiftly flung Eddie's left fist hooked upward and smacked solidly on a broad, protruding chin.

It was a punch he had developed in a dozen New York scraps. By itself the blow might not have been sufficient to damage Tom Freeman, but a right hook rapidly thrown reached the jaw. Two such blows threw the enemy back against the house. For a moment Freeman was groggy, but then, with a muffled cry, he regained his senses.

As Freeman rushed forward to renew his attack, Eddie tried to step inside a swinging blow. Freeman's fist struck heavily but with glancing force above the ear and there was a reverberating shock inside his head. If he was to maintain himself, Eddie realized, he couldn't take many such bludgeoning wallops. Freeman had too much weight, too much strength, for a straight-out slugging match. With the shortest possible delay, Eddie knew, he would have to get in a haymaker—a smashing knock down blow on the chin—on the button.

"Just a moment, please!"

A voice came to them clear, swift, decisive. Marian Thorndike had appeared suddenly on the veranda. Her very presence was a prohibition against the mad, primitive business of battling with the intent fury of Stone Age warriors. Each man, suddenly, dropped his hands. Their whirring, hammering strife was a man's business—they had no mental preparation to deal with the restraining influence of a woman projected suddenly on to their battleground. Marian, fair and startled, stepped between them. Eddie fell back a step or two and Tom Freeman wiped his face with a handkerchief. It had ended—as suddenly as it had started.

"You get yourself the hell out of here." Freeman spoke passionately from his thick throat to Eddie.

"Not on your invitation!" Eddie flung back.

The girl looked at them both without discernible favoritism. "I don't know what the idea is," she said, quietly," but I'm not at all flattered. I'm disgusted with both of you."

Eddie felt a flush of humiliation but he was not able, immediately, to steady his senses. In the few seconds of savage combat he had reached a keyed-up vigor that was wildly, gloriously primitive. Surface civilization had dropped away from him and he had waged with an ancient instinct to destroy a rival. His breath still came heavy, while his head was ringing yet from the heavy blow he had withstood.

"If you'd leave us alone, Marian, I'd keep him off the place—or break his neck." Tom Freeman told her, around you." Level eyed, she rehim around. It's an insult for a piece of trash like him to hang around you." Level eyed, she repelled his anger.

"I'm capable of deciding all that," she said.

The flush on Tom Freeman's face deepened. Here in the presence of a stranger he despised and abominated, Marian Thorndike, apparently, was taking sides against him. A vein in his neck swelled. "If your father was here—" he stoped, inarticulate.

"I'm quite capable of deciding who my guests shall be," she told him steadily.

CHAPTER XXII

Anger mounted in Tom Freeman's face until it began to purple. "All right," he granted. "But if he stays—I go."

"You can suit yourself about that." Marian returned.

Her attention centered upon Eddie. "I'm sorry this happened, Mr. Regan; when you come to my home I don't think you need to expect an assault in the future."

"That's all right," Eddie said, unsteadily. "I had a hand in it myself."

Even as they spoke, Tom Freeman jerked the screen open and secured his hat from the table in the hall. He reappeared, his eyes burning. Without a word he marched across the veranda down the stairs and climbed into his automobile. There was a whirr of the starting mechanism. His headlights threw long beams down the treebordered lane to the main road. He was gone.

"Well, that ends that," Marian said, unhappily.

But Eddie Regan knew that it was not ended. Sooner or later there would be a final decision between him and Tom Freeman—the decision arrived at without intervention of a woman.

"I'm awfully sorry a thing like that happened here at your house," he tried to apologize.

"I don't think either of you were concerned very deeply with any regard for my feeling at all," she told him pointedly. "If you think I like seeing two men fighting, you're vastly mistaken. I hope none of the servants saw it—if they did it will spread all over the country like wildfire."

"I'm sorry," said Eddie, meekly.

"You ought to be. I can't imagine how on earth such a thing could have started."

She sat down and he noticed that his straw hat had fallen heedlessly to the floor. He picked it up and put it on the table.

"You might as well sit down," she told him.

"Are you sure you want me to stay—after all this?" He had no means of plumbing the depths of her irritation and anger. Maybe she wanted him to follow Freeman's course. But his query, implying a willingness to leave, was all a bluff. More than anything else on earth he wanted to stay. "I can't think of anything to say—except that I'm sorry."

"I don't want you to go," she told him, with unexpected suddenness.

He sat down beside her. They were on a porch bench. Sitting so close beside her all of the old fascination came rushing back to him to set his mind and pulse thrilling. Every dream he had dreamed about her came back to him multiplied a hundredfold in intensity; he desired her as he had never before desired love in his life. She sat there little and silent while he marveled at the wonder of it—in the glorious truth that they were together. Just to be with her gave a meaning to all life and a reason for his existence.

Marian had nothing to say to him, and they sat idly and silently gazing out over the moon-lit lawn with its spacious circled grass, its dark island of whispering trees. They were so close together that their shoulders almost touched, and she glanced at him side-wise and then turned her head away. Perhaps it was an accident—perhaps a mutual design—but their shoulders touched with a strange fleeting gentleness. Neither of them drew apart and, subconsciously, the small contact increased in pressure.

The irresistible magnetism that was generated between them crept stealthily through the nerves and fibres o ftheir bodies. Marian could feel his shoulder pressing hers and a tremor ran through her. To desist it, to fight against the spell and break it, was an effort against nature—an effort that she postponed from moment to moment.

Automatically, Eddie's arm began to steal behind her with a slow progress of caustic, dismantling pleasure. Time still remaind for her to draw back. The encircling arm tightened slowly and tenderly, she was drawn to him with inevitable reluctance until, with a sudden surrendering movement of her own, her head rested on his shoulder.

Just for a moment or two she remained thus, and then, with a swift spasmodic repudiation of yielding, she tore herself away from him and sat up straight. But even in this aloofness there was an aching tenderness. Her voice was warm and tremulous.

"Why—why do you make me feel this way?"

They were alone—exquisitely alone—and the stark reality of the work-a-day world, its harshness and inhibitions, was transmuted into a strange palpitating sphere of existence where secret thoughts came forth trembling into expression.

"You don't feel the same way I do," he whispered. "You couldn't."

"I cannot understand it," she murmured. "I don't think I'm in love with you, yet when you are close to me something passes over me and I'm not the same person I am when I'm alone. It's like a spell, and my brain doesn't seem to work. No one ever affected me that way before."

This was no conversation of love, but it flooded him with a deep, growing emotion. The conviction was in his mind that he could if he so desired recapture her in his arms, but he made no such movement.

"When did you first feel that way?"

"I was interested in you the first time I saw you—I wanted to see you again, and all the time I knew that I shouldn't. Do you remember that night at your house?"

"I'll never forget it as long as I live," he declared.

"I never dreamed until then when you kissed me—when I kissed you—that I could be so taken out of my usual self. If it could be like that all the time I would know for certain that it was love."

"It must be love," he insisted, with as much bewilderment in his voice as there was in hers. "If it's not love—what is it?"

She was silent for a long time. "I don't know. I've had likings for men—all girls have—but it was never anything like this. I liked them, but they never spread an overpowering weakness through me. If I allowed myself to drift—with you—I would be almost in a swoon in your arms."

"It's got to be love," he told her tremulously. "I know it can't be true—it's too wonderful for me to believe—but a girl like you couldn't feel that way unless——"

Her eyes avoided him.

"If it's not true love," she said, "it's a cheap imitation, and I don't want anything like that."

He laughed nervously. "A funny thing—it sort of makes me afraid. It's something gigantic."

"Yes, it is that way. It's all new to me—this feeling—and somehow I feel I ought to fight against it. Why do you make me so helpless?"

"I don't know," he admitted. "Maybe it's because I've loved you so much and wanted you so hard that it finally broke through and got to you—like radio waves pounding through rain and storms and snow. Maybe love is something like that."

"I think if it really was love I wouldn't be in any doubt about it," she objected. "Love isn't a thing of the body—a physical sensation—it's a background of all feeling. You affect me so potently that I am not myself, yet I can't picture myself married to you and sharing all your life. I've had the vague ideal of a man in mind all my life—and you're nothing at all like I thought he would be. Tell me about yourself, Eddie."

"You might not like the story."

"I want to hear it," she urged him."

Bull Movement Spends Force; Issues React

Fitful Waves of Selling Causes Stock Market to Slip Slightly

NEW YORK, Sept. 4 (AP)—The bull movement on the stock market appeared to have spent its force today and fitful waves of selling imparted an emphatically reactionary tone to the list.

Wall street was inclined, once more, to worry about the credit outlook but regardless of other factors, the bidding up of stocks last week and yesterday had been so rapid that conservative traders felt that a corrective reaction was due.

Call money held at 9 per cent all day, and bankers stated that credit requirements for crop movement was delaying the return of funds to this center after the month end disbursements.

Shares which have been run up rapidly of late were those which felt the brunt of the selling. Such issues as U. S. Steel, American Can, American Telephone, American Water Works, Atchison, Chesapeake and Ohio, Consolidated Gas, International Harvester, Johns Manville, R. H. Macy, New York Central, Norfolk and Western, Union Pacific, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, and Stone and Webster lost from 3 to 6 points, Columbian Carbon, Allied Chemical, and Westinghouse lost about 7 points each.

Bulls concentrated on the two favorites of last year, General Motors and Radio, in an effort to stem the tide of selling. Radio was hurled up more than 11 points to 109¼, the highest price in months, in a turnover of nearly 400,000 shares. General Motors was sent up more than 3 points above 75 in a turnover of more than 300,000 shares. Trading in these two issues alone accounted for approximately 15 per cent of the day's turnover of nearly 4,700,000 shares.

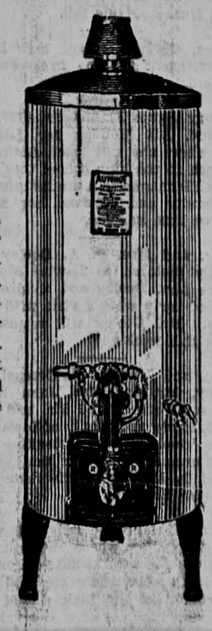
Autohot—The Many Purpose Convenience

Payments Only $5 Each Month

No Interest Added



HAVE you ever stopped to consider the variety of uses to which hot water is put each day? For bathing, washing dishes, washing windows, for the early morning shave, in case of sickness during the night and countless other purposes too numerous to mention. In fact it was learned in a recent investigation that hot water is used 150 times a day in the average home.

IN the Autohot Home a turn of the faucet brings forth an abundant supply of hot water—hot water which never varies in temperature. In the home without this service each call for hot water means a trip to the cellar—a tiresome wait and a trip back to turn off the heater—and the temperature of the water is never the same. In the winter pipes pound and rusty water pours forth from the faucets.

Buffalo Boys Defeat New Orleans Juniors in First Game, 6-4

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 4 (AP)—Playing heads-up baseball and taking advantage of every chance, the boys from Buffalo today defeated the New Orleans team, six to four, at Parkway field here in the first game of the junior world series sponsored by the American legion.

A disastrous seventh inning in which Beach allowed a base hit and issued three walks with the score tied at 3-all cost New Orleans its chance to win the game. With the aid of four New Orleans errors and the charity of New Orleans pitchers, Buffalo made six hits good for six runs.

Some 2,500 persons saw the game. The teams will meet again tomorrow with two out of three games to decide the series.

SPORTS CLOSE-UPS—JACK BERG

The money makers and most popular men of the prize ring have always been the so-called "club fighters"—those busy individuals who start throwing leather with the opening gong and keep tossing until the other fellow collapses, the bout ends, or the lights go out for them.

Such a fighter is Jack Berg, of England, aptly named the "Whitechapel Limited." A veritable bulldog in action, Berg has taken this country by storm. His first appearance here, some months ago, was in Chicago, where his busy style made him a real favorite. Berg then returned to England and recently came back to U. S. A. to continue his quest of gold and lightweight title honers.

His first match in New York was against Bruce Flowers, New Rochelle Negro lightweight, who was being primed for a title bout. At the opening bell, Berg leaped from his corner and unleashed the wildest flurry of two-fisted punching that ever excited the fans of Madison Square Garden. His fighting was sensational. The Garden was seething. Flowers, unable to cope with the Englishman, fought back as best he could. But his best was not good enough. Berg kept up the maddening pace for ten rounds and was awarded the decision. They naturally were rematched and again Berg swarmed all over the New Rochelle star, and again won the decision.

Then came a sensational draw fight against the veteran, Stan Loayza, the Greek buz-saw. What a fight!

Berg then turned in probably the best fight of his career, when he severely trounced Mushy Callahan, junior welterweight champion at Ebbets Field. Berg threw punches entirely too fast for Callahan and gave the Champion an artistic trimming.

No, the "Whitechapel Limited" won't have to go begging for work in this country. His problem will be filling the dates requested by promoters. Madison Square Garden will help to keep him busy, having tentatively matched him with Tony Canzoneri for one of the opening Garden shows this fall.

Big Six

By the Associated Press

The American league section of the Big Six enjoyed an open date in the schedule yesterday, and the feature of the afternoon was the duel between Babe Herman and Frank O'Doul for the leadership of the Big Six and the National league. Each got three hits in nine times at bat in the double-header at Philadelphia, and each lost a point. They remained within a fraction of a point of each other, with Herman still ahead. Rogers Hornsby got three out of six in two games at St. Louis and gained a point.

Omaha Lad Defeats Bobby Jones at 18th

enough to the green to get his par five and took the lead that he fought successfully to hold over the rest of the route.

Jones Gets Breaks

If there were any "breaks," Jones got them. On the ninth Bobby's second shot hit a bank and rolled near the pin. On the thirteenth he was stymied but hopped over Goodman's ball and into the cup with his mashie niblick. On the eighteenth the champion's second shot sliced so far that it hit a tree, bounding out to the fairway, but he hit his chip shot too feebly and had a 35 foot putt left that he failed by a foot to get down as the last desperate stroke of a champion meeting his downfall.

The removal of so outstanding a favorite as Jones, threw the tournament into a somewhat chaotic scramble for the title. If there was anything one sidedly convincing about the opening day's performances, it was turned in by the giant British champion, Cyril Tolley, who crushed his first two opponents, Eddie Held, and Fay Coleman, by margins of 7 and 6, and 8 and 6.

Bobby Has Company

Jones had plenty of illustrious company as he left the tournament. It was another "black Wednesday" for the double barreled day of match play as George Von Elm of Detroit, the 1926 champion, passed out quickly for the third straight year, along with Gene Homans, of Englewood, N. J., co-medalist with Jones, Gibson Dunlap of Los Angeles, whose 69 in the opening round made him a sensation, and Phillips Finlay, another California favorite.

Altogether, the first round was a succession of hectic moments and upsets, with five of the 16 matches going to extra holes and all the stars, save Tolley, George Voigt and Francis Ouimet, having plenty of trouble.

Caddies Play Off Tourney

Caddies at the Iowa City country club are now engaged in playing off the championship tournament. All but two matches of the first round have been played.

The boys are taking a keen interest in the tournament. A large silver cup for the champion is being donated by Bebe Hands, while other prizes are furnished by Tom Harris, professional.

Following is the status of the first flight:

Dean Lewis and Virgil Schnoebelin; Schonebelin, 3-2.

Paul Hughes and Cliff Warr; Hughes, 4-3.

Paul Huff and Bus McFadden, McFadden, 1 up 13.

Bob Chehock and Will Barger, unplayed.

Dud Huff and Bob Barger, unplayed.

Bert Hughes and Charles Hain; Hughes, 4-3.

Yanks Sign "Lefty"

"Lefty" Holstein, young Philadelphia semi-professional pitcher, has been signed for the 1930 season by the New York American league team. His recent sensational performance of a "no-hit-no-run" game brought Holstein into the Yankee fold.

HERO ONE MONTH, "BOOB" NEXT

NEW YORK, Sept. 4 (AP)—When Donie Bush brought the Pittsburgh Pirates back home July 22 with first place as a prize catch of a fine eastern trip, the Corsair fans openly expressed delight.

But Bush, a veteran warrior with many a hard campaign behind him, was amazingly reticent as the town feted his ball club.

Refusing to be stirred by any premature celebrations, Donie was quoted as saying:

"We are a long ways from the pennant. . . . It is going to be a hard fight."

The once great Detroit shortstop knew how quickly triumph in baseball turns to disaster.

The week in 1927 that he headed the Pirates to Pennantville he was hoisted high as the "miracle man" of Pittsburgh.

One week later, when his men stood disgraced, crushed beneath that ruthless Yankee machine, Donie was the antithesis of greatness as far as Pittsburgh was concerned.

Anyway, five weeks after the outbreak of delirious cheering this year, Donie brought the Bucs back to Pittsburgh into a seething caldron of criticism. Their decline on the diamond had begun the day of the celebration.

The difference in the club's standing then and the rating it had on its previous homecoming was 16 games. The Pirates had cracked. There wasn't even a fighting chance left.

Injuries had broken the very backbone of the team's offensive and defensive strength and bad breaks had smothered its spirit.

So Donie quit.

"Such are the fortunes of war," he said.

It appears to be merely a temporary setback for the plucky little man who was Detroit's shortstop ace in the halcyon days when Ty Cobb and Sam Crawford and others made the Tigers consistent winners.

Baseball men are certain Donie will be back in a managerial role with some major league club if he cares to stay in the big leagues.

Old Settlers Have Picnic at City Park

Kenderdine Addresses Gathering of 75 Yesterday

Visions of Johnson county before the days of the speeding trains, before airplanes droned overhead, and before ribbon smooth highways crisscrossed the country, were pictured to more than 75 old settlers yesterday by Attorney G. A. Kenderdine. The occasion was the annual old settler's picnic at the City park.

Rain fell just before the program opened yesterday afternoon and the groups adjourned to the park pavillion for the speaking. Besides Mr. Kenderdine's resume of the early life in the county the Rev. E. E. Dierks of the local Baptist church, addressed the pioneers.

Mrs. Mary Sunier of West Branch, former school teacher of Pres. Herbert Hoover, presented a paper telling of her trip to Washington, D. C., last March to the inauguration. The West Liberty band entertained with musical numbers.

Albert Baumgartner and Isaac Myers were the oldest of the pioneers. The former has reached four score and nine years, and Mr. Myers is but one year younger. John Wagner, 82 years old, was another past the four score mark. W. E. Foster, and Mrs. I. B. Reed are 78 years old.

Members of Lions Club Tell Vacation Stories at Meeting

"Where were you on your vacation, brother Lion?"

"I was in Europe," said Dr. R. H. Volland, and, "I was at a camp at Trout Lake, Wis.," declared Rollie Williams, and "I splashed around the pool at Wakonda club, Des Moines," chimed Dave Armbruster.

Thus the Lions club provided their own entertainment at the regular noon meeting yesterday at the Jefferson hotel. The members who had sojourned far from the university city reported on the habits of citizens in other haunts, and the rest of the club sat back pleased and listened and envied.

Scout Rangers Get Prizes for Part in Forest Camp Contest

Prizes have been awarded the Scout Rangers who took part in the forest camp at the site of the new Rotary scout cabin last week under the direction of John Schumacher.

Jack Hughes was declared the best outdoor campfire builder, and Royal Crain was the best assistant to the camp cook. The best piece of outdoor cooking was done by Vernal Wagner, and the best all-around campers were Edward O'Connor, Jack Hughes and Martin O'Connor.

This was the first Scout Ranger camp to be held by the Iowa City organization and lasted three days.

Building Inspector Issues Station Permit

A permit was issued yesterday by the city building inspector to the Mid-Continent Petroleum company for the erection of a super-service station and grease station at Linn and College streets, on the site of the present B. F. Carter gas station and law offices. The permit was for a $5,000 station.

Building of the new station will mean the removal of Justice Carter's court and offices, but he plans to continue both at 224 1-2 E. College street. "Squire" Carter, as he is known, has occupied the site for eight years as a station attendant and judge at justice court, and is said to have missed only nine days duty in that time.

LAND TRANSFERS

Seven land transfer deeds were recorded at the court house yesterday. One was a tax deed, another a sheriff's deed, and the others warranty deeds.

Mollie Howell Reese transferred to H. H. Pundt certain property on Governor street near Iowa avenue. Mabel P. Gould to Ivan L. and Ethel G. Pollock lot 5, block 7, near Beldon and Park road.

Former Resident of City Owns and Drives Car at 88

DAVENPORT, Sept. 4 (AP) — Eight years ago, George W. Alt of North Liberty, a Civil war veteran, sought to purchase an automobile. The dealer was hesitant, thinking his customer, who was then almost 80 years of age, too old to drive.

But the aged veteran insisted. He purchased the car and has been driving ever since without a single accident.

Last week he drove from North Liberty to Davenport and back the same day.

Alt is a native of Iowa, having been born in Iowa City in 1843, three years before Iowa became a state.

Consignment of Limestone Leaves City

Company Ships 15 Cars of Soil Building Stone Today

The first trainload of agricultural limestone to be distributed out of Iowa City by special arrangement with the railroad company was scheduled to leave at 7 o'clock this morning. The train, bearing 15 cars of the soil building limestone, will leave on the branch line of the Rock Island for Riverside, Kalona, and Wellman. More than 500 tons will be distributed from the train.

Through special arrangements with Harry D. Breene, local Rock Island agent, 10 cars will be unloaded at various points along the track, most convenient to the farmers who are purchasing the limestone.

Unload at Stations

The other five cars will be unloaded at the stations, for farmers whose farms are close to the towns.

The limestone is consigned by the River Products company of Iowa City, and the train was arranged by J. F. Sproatt, general manager of the company, J. H. Montgomery, county agent for Washington county, and John Shields and Son at Washington.

May Test Soil

By special testing, farmers are able to find out if the soil is deficient in any way. Some soil is lacking in certain elements which cause it to be declared "sour." Use of limestone does away with this condition and the quality and quantity of crops is increased tremendously.

Following are the farmers who will get the limestone:

Claude Sojka, Riverside, one car; Alva Miller, Kalona, two cars; Frank Stransky and Son, Wellman, one car; C. T. Johnson, Wellman, one car; Carl T. Anderson, Wellman, two cars; Ralph Hamilton, Wellman, one car; Charles Nejedly, Wellman, two cars; John Reber, Wellman, one car; David D. Miller, Wellman, one car; Grant Griffith, Wellman, two cars, and Ed Hamm, Wellman, one car.

Actual Circumstance May Play Large Part in Pantage's Trial

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 4 (AP) — Defense questions propounded in section today of a superior court jury for the second degree murder trial of Mrs. Lois Pantages indicated that the actual circumstances of the automobile collision which resulted in the death of Joe Rokomuto, Japanese gardner, would enter largely in to her defense.

From the opening of this second day trial, defense Attorney W. I. Gilbert grilled prospective jurors on their attitude toward traffic rules and automobile accidents. "Do you believe" Gilbert demanded repeatedly, "that a person should make a signal with his hand before making a lefthand turn?"

At the coroner's inquest into Rokomuto's death one of the defense contentions was that the victim was at fault because he turned into the path of Mrs. Pantages' car without making a signal.

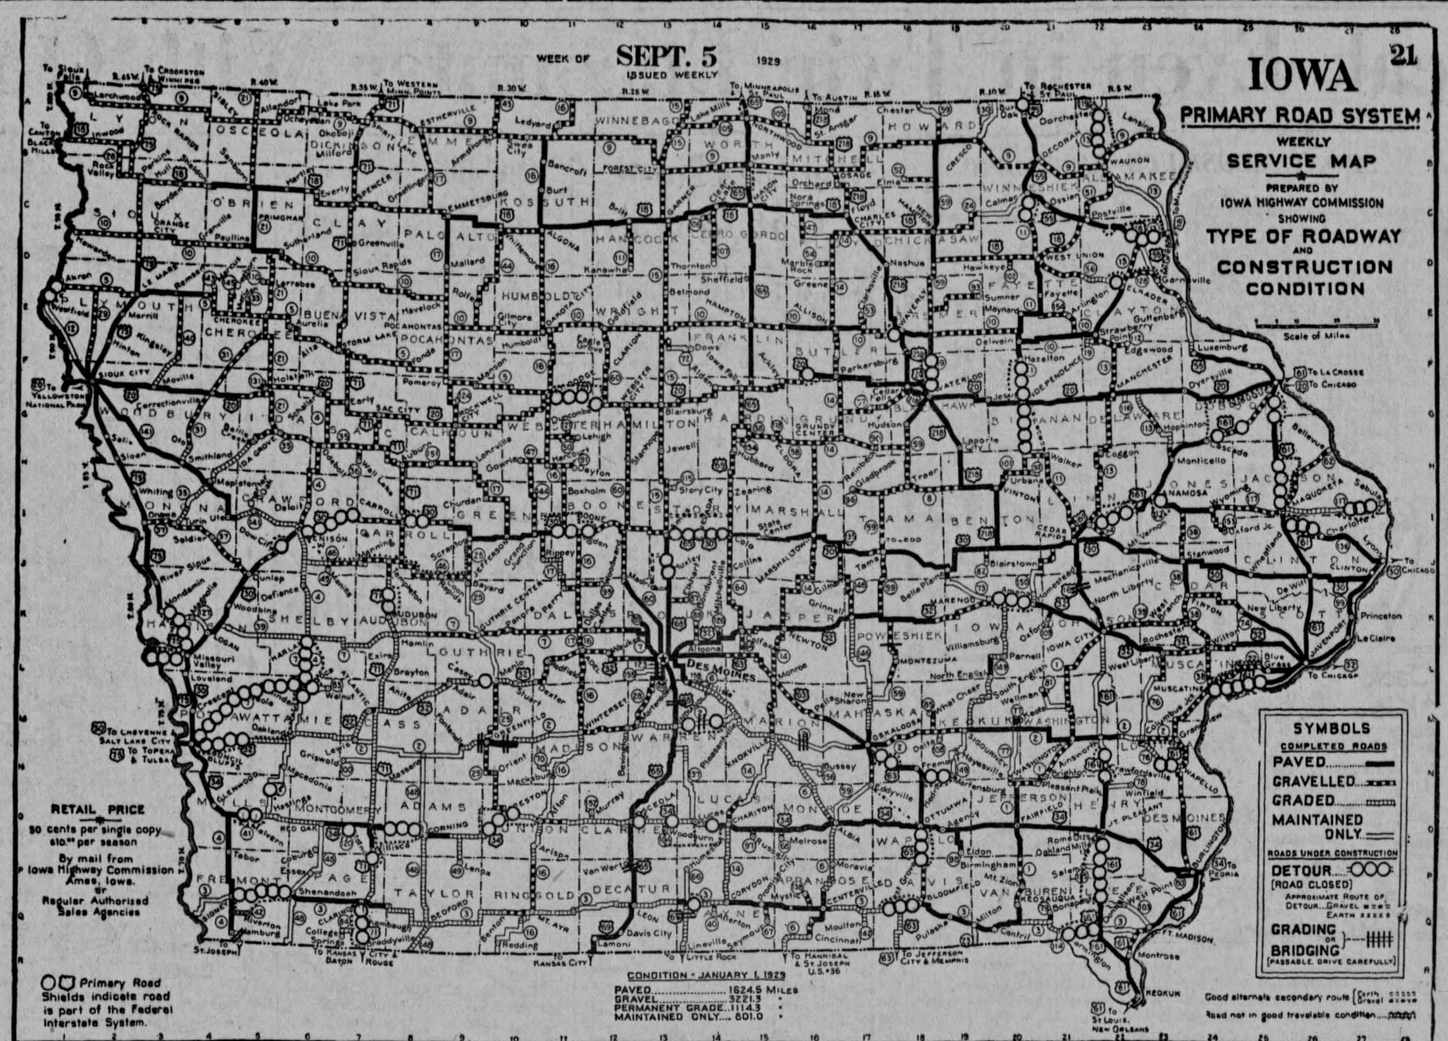
The state claims Mrs. Pantages was intoxicated at the time of the collision, and that before driving her car into Rokomuto's she had zigzagged down the street hitting three other machines.

Rains in Wisconsin End Menace of Many Raging Forest Fires

RHINELANDER, Wis., Sept. 4 (AP)—A heavy rain poured down on north Wisconsin to end the menace of two score forest fires.

With its advent, wardens in charge of fire fighting operations, declared that the situation which had been fraught with danger, was now well under control save in a few isolated spots.

A lighter rain fell in the upper Michigan peninsula, where confidence was expressed that large fires in Ontonagon county pine lands would be quelled. There was no word, however, concerning a large fire burning on Isle Royale, scenic spot 60 miles out in Lake Superior.



Service Desk Work Planned

Information Available on Varied Topics

Plans to make the service desk in the front lounge at Iowa Union the one spot on the campus where more general information about the university is available than at any other place are being rapidly completed. The slogan of the desk is "You ask the question, we'll answer it."

The service desk will be under the direction of Lloyse Fisher, with Margaret Echlin, A4 of Iowa City, and Merritt E. McDaniel, P2 of Washington, Ia., as assistants. The desk will be open from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily.

Definite services as well as information will be offered by the service desk. Reservations for activities at the Union, private dining rooms, or parties must be made at the desk.

Articles may be checked at the desk at any time, and a lost and found service will be maintained. Students may receive mail there, general delivery. Stamps, stamped envelopes, postal cards, and stamp books may be obtained there, and laundry bags, parcels, and packages may be sent there.

Tickets for university parties, university theater productions, and such events as the Dad's day and Mother's day dinners will be on sale there. Registration for conferences and for Homecoming and other special university celebrations will be conducted at the service desk.

Miscellaneous articles such as ink, stationery, newspapers, clips, matches, change, class schedules, and rubber bands will be available. Phonograph records and equipment for games such as ping pong, chess, cards, checkers, and cribbage will be checked out from the desk.

While the desk was operated along the same line last year, the services offered were not nearly as complete and varied. Then part of the alumni work was handled at that office, but the present plan it to make the desk purely a service and information organ.

Injured Girl Remains Same

Geraldine Smith Hovers Between Life, Death

The condition of 9 year old Geraldine Smith, injured Tuesday in a playground accident at the city park, was reported as unchanged last night at Mercy hospital. Suffering a fractured skull, which was pierced by a sharp rod, the little girl hovers between life and death 40 hours after physicians declared there was little chance for recovery.

The child was injured at play early in the morning when she and a 9 year old cousin were riding a whirling-teeter-board at the park playground. A spring broke on the apparatus and the whirling motion drove a T shaped handle into her temple as she fell beneath the board. The rod pierced the brain.

Rushed immediately to Mercy hospital doctors expressed little hope for her because of the location of the wound. The child made only a faint rally Tuesday afternoon when she did speak for a short time. Since then her condition has been absolutely constant, with no improvement and no relapse.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Smith of Vicksburg, Miss. The Smiths with their seven children and Wilbur Smith and family of Erie, Pa., were camped at the local tourist park enroute to Miles City, Mont. The child had gone to play before breakfast as the adults packed up preparatory to leaving. Family members are in constant attendance at her bedside.

July Building in City More Than in June

Permits Eclipse Those of Previous Month by Five

(Special to The Daily Iowan)

DES MOINES, Sept. 4 (AP)—Iowa City showed an increase of five more building permits issued during the month of June, according to the report of the state labor commissioner, H. V. Hoyer.

Valuation of the permits issued for building in Iowa City for June totaled $38,180 and for July, $76,380. There were 13 permits issued in June and 18 in July.

This does not necessarily indicate the extent of building and construction work in Iowa City because improving done by the state on the university grounds is not covered by permits issued by the city.

DES MONEIS, Sept. 4 (AP)—Employment in seven of Iowa's larger cities showed an average increase of 1.4 per cent in August over July, H. V. Hoyer, state labor commissioner, disclosed today in his monthly report.

Burlington's increase of 13.8 per cent was the largest, followed by 8.1 per cent at Sioux City, and 4.6 per cent at Des Moines. Cedar Rapids showed 4.2 per cent increase, and Dubuque .3 per cent. Davenport and Waterloo reported decreases, the former a drop of 2.1 per cent and the latter a decline of 6.7 per cent. In all, 174 firms reported.

Building conditions in 15 cities were shown as follows:

	July Permits	Valuation
Burlington	30	$ 159,361
Cedar Rapids	115	339,730
Council Bluffs	35	91,100
Davenport	145	236,778
Des Moines	134	814,705
Dubuque	102	41,152
Ft. Dodge	35	41,375
Iowa City	18	76,380

Sioux City	68	1,073,750
Waterloo	257	648,100
Total	1,086	$3,782,330

The state-federal employment office report for the period from July 15 to August 10 showed 2,033 applicants and 1,204 jobs offered for farm workers, making the average placements higher than the previous period.
