Hoover Faces Selection of Delegate

President Must Name Outstanding Man for Parley

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (AP)—Selection of an outstanding delegate as a member of the American delegation to the proposed January naval limitation conference is one of the tasks President Hoover will have in preparing for American participation in the five power parley.

In all international conferences of such importance the administration has accorded the minority party in this country representation among the American delegates. This is particularly important in the present situation because the president will have to rely upon democratic support to obtain senate ratification of any treaty that may grow out of the meeting.

Selection Easy in 1921

In the 1921 naval conference, President Harding found little difficulty in making a selection. Washington was the meeting place and he was able to appoint the late Oscar W. Underwood, then democratic leader in the senate as the minority representative on the commission even though congress was in session.

At the time of the London conference, the seventy-first congress will be in the midst of its first regular session. Since the 1920 meeting is expected to consume upwards of six weeks there is doubt whether the present democratic leader of the senate, Robinson of Arkansas or any other ranking democratic senator would feel that they could absent themselves from the senate for so long a period.

Dark Name Mentioned

Should that prove to be the case, Hoover would have to look elsewhere for the democratic member. John W. Davis, ambassador to Great Britain under Woodrow Wilson and democratic presidential candidate in 1924, is one of those whose name has been brought into the unofficial discussions.

Secretary Stimson still is regarded as the most likely choice of the president as head of the American delegation at the 1921 conference, and who is a close personal friend of President Hoover, might be selected. There probably will be four American delegates as there were at the Washington conference, three republicans and one democrat. Besides Hughes and Senator Underwood, the representatives at the 1921 parley were Ellihu Root and the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge.

Three Men Die When Plane Crashes From 2,000 Feet Altitude

TULARE, S. D., Sept. 19 (AP)—Three men were killed in an air-plane crash seven miles southwest of here today when their plane failed to come out of an attempted loop and fell from about 2,000 feet.

Those killed were Sylvester Clegberg, Avon, Ill., pilot; and Roy, 30 years old, and Floyd, 32 years old, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Edward MacNeil of Tulare.

Roy MacNeil had been attending an aviation school in Illinois for about a year and returned here yesterday, accompanying Clegberg. Today, the two, accompanied by Floyd MacNeil, went for a flight.

Cutter Fires on Motorship

Canadian Vessel Bears Scars of Shells

HALIFAX, Sept. 19 (AP)—A story of the shelling of a Canadian motorship by a United States coast guard cutter off New York was told today and confirmed in part in Washington and other several hours counsel had been engaged to file formal protest to the Canadian government.

After Capt. John McLeod of the Nova Scotia ship Shawnee brought his vessel into port bearing the scars of two shells, announcement was made that a local law firm had been retained to act for McLeod before the authorities at Ottawa. Meanwhile in Washington the headquarters of the coast guard said the Shawnee had been shelled, but the coast guard statement was at variance with McLeod's data of the encounter and contradicted the assertion that no warning to stop had been given.

Coast guard boat number 145, said McLeod, came up on the Shawnee 26 miles off New York last Friday night, and approaching with all lights out to within 10 yards of the Canadian craft, fired five four-pound shots without warning. Two shots hit, one piercing the stern port quarter and the other striking the rail on the wheelhouse. The Shawnee's crew of six escaped injury.

McLeod said he could give no reason for the attack. Washington advised said the coast guard had listed in Shawnee as a rum runner which had been watched by the American rum chaser.

The coast guard statement said that the 145 on the night of Sept. 1, two nights before McLeod said the episode occurred ordered the Shawnee to New York harbor and that five shots were fired when the order was not heeded. Three blank warning shots and the other two slowed down the Canadian craft. The statement said that the Shawnee was running without lights, and appeared to be an American craft.

Marital Ship of Aged Couple Still Sales Stormy Seas

OMAHA, Sept. 19 (AP)—The marital ship of David DeLair, blind and wealthy Oketo, Kan., farmer and his bride, whose ages total more than 150 years, was still sailing on stormy seas today as they considered sending an emissary to Kansas to straighten out their legal entanglements in that state.

Since cloning to Council Bluffs, Ia., last Monday to escape a Kansas court order, declaring the 82-year-old bridegroom incompetent and forbidding his marriage, the couple has remained in seclusion here, fearing that a return to Kansas will result in an annulment action against them.

By sending an emissary to Kansas, DeLair and his bride hope to have the court order set aside so they can again draw on the bridegroom's bank accounts which are now under control of DeLair's nephew, C. M. DeLair, who was appointed guardian for the aged man.

Piloting the plane was Maj. Henry J. S. Miller, who was unhurt. They were returning from a cross country flight.

MacMillan Locates Remnant of Once Great Ice Field on Expedition Into North Land

The members of the Donald B. MacMillan expedition got their first view of their native country yesterday as the "Bowdoin" (left) and the plane carrier "Peary" sailed into Wiscasset, Me., after a sojourn of three months in the far north.

Commander Returns to Maine After Three Months Trip

WISCASSETT, Me., Sept. 19 (AP)—The locating of the last remnant of the icecap which once covered 4,000,000 square miles of the earth was one of the outstanding accomplishments related today by members of the Arctic expedition of Lieut. Com. Donald B. MacMillan just returned from three months in the north.

Other noteworthy achievements were a collection of specimens for a comparative study of sea and brook trout and first scientific collection of flora and fauna from Frobiisher's bay region.

The Bowdoin, sturdy schooner which has taken the explorer north for several years and which this summer withstood a 12 day assault by an ice pack, anchored off Newagen early this morning. Nine men accompanied MacMillan on the cruise which started from here on June 22.

Now Covers 700 Miles

The ice cap which was described by the explorer as actually two ice caps now covers approximately 700 square miles and so far as he could determine was becoming smaller.

For years, scientists, have sought information concerning the possible remainder of this ice cap of the Pleistocene period which covered all of New England with solid ice to a depth of 5,000 feet, leaving only tip of Mount Washington showing. It is estimated that the ice cap existed for 35,000 years.

Shortness of time prevented the MacMillan party from erecting rock cairns to mark the farthest point of the ice cap, but photographs were made which can be used in determining definitely next year if it is receding.

Finds "Gambler's" Fish

Dr. W. C. Kendall of the U. S. bureau of fisheries, told of finding the "gambler's" fish he ever hooked on a fly in a little pool north of Frobiisher's bay. He said it appeared to be a species of "true" sea trout as distinguished from the so-called sea trout of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

Picking up buttercups, violets, shepherd's purse, dandelions and other of the flora so common in this country, from among the cracks and crevices of rocky barren land with practically no soil, provided Prof. Samuel C. Palmer, head of the botany department at Swarthmore college, with his "biggest thrill."

Results of his studies of arctic growth will go into the arboretum being established at the college, he said.

DOUKHOBORS WIN FIGHT

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask., Sept. 19 (AP)—The Doukhobors, 59 of whom were jailed for staging a nude parade near Canora, have won their fight against compulsory military training in the schools. A radio dispatch from Waskeskiu Lake, Prince Albert national park, today said J. A. Merkle, minister of labor and industries, announced that the government had agreed to abolish this part of physical training as a compulsory measure.

Investigation Into Flogging of Labor Leader Carried On

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Sept. 19 (AP)—Sheriffs of two counties in two different states, the governor of North Carolina and the solicitor of one North Carolina court district today continued their investigation into the flogging and kidnaping of Cleo Tesenair without any results of their efforts being made public.

No statements were forthcoming as to whether any tangible clues had been obtained as to the identity of the three men who kicked in the door of Tesenair's home at Kings Mountain and carried him to South Carolina dressed in night clothing. Tesenair still was confined to his bed in a local hotel today.

Registration for Upperclassmen to Begin This Morning

Upperclassmen, whose number slips authorize them to begin registration today, will follow the same procedure as the freshmen who registered yesterday.

The doors will open at 8 o'clock this morning and students will be admitted according to the hour indicated on their number slips.

The system of number slips is arranged in such a way as to provide for the registration of the same number of students during the first day this year as were registered the first day last year. For this reason, according to Prof. H. C. Dorcas, it is possible to tell at present whether the registration will be larger or smaller than it was last year since the first day's registration on both occasions was approximately the same, although a few more registered on the initial day this year.

Good Outlines Public Works

Advocates Development of Waterways

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 19 (AP)—Complete development of the nation's inland and coastal waterways for transportation purposes was advocated tonight by Secretary Good in an address here before the Atlantic deeper waterways association.

Secretary Good outlined a stupendous public works program calling for construction of a deep St. Lawrence river waterway connecting the Great Lakes and the Atlantic, the building of an adequate Great Lakes to gulf waterway, and extension of the navigable channels of the Mississippi and its tributaries to 9,000 miles.

Secretary Good's views were in line with President Hoover's known desires to afford cheaper transportation for inland shippers of agricultural and other bulk products.

"Chicago, Milwaukee, Duluth, Detroit, Cleveland and Buffalo," he asserted, "can and should be turned into ocean ports by the construction of the Great Lakes to the Atlantic deeper water canal. All their tributary states would at once be brought many hours closer to the seaboard, and from the viewpoint of economy to world markets, the fullest economical utilization would give the Midwest its needed direct outlet to the Atlantic."

In the Mississippi drainage basin, Secretary Good said, a modern transportation system of 9,000 miles of connected waterway serving 20 states could be constructed "for moderate cost." It would furnish, he added, a north and south trunk line across the nation through the lake from Duluth through Chicago to the Gulf of Mexico, and an east and west system from Pittsburgh to Sioux City, Ia., and beyond. He pointed out that this network would link up with the Great Lakes navigational project.

Famous Architect to Start Again With Company Backing

New Corporation Will Exploit Genius of Frank Lloyd Wright, Bankrupt Architect

CHICAGO, Sept. 19 (AP)—Another hand grips the purse strings, the shackles of the dollar are loosed and the hand of the artist is free for his art.

This was the explanation given today, by its sponsors, of the new corporation formed to exploit the genius of Frank Lloyd Wright, world famous architect who is starting again—from scratch. Although the new corporation bears his name, Wright has not a single share of stock.

Frank Lloyd Wright, Inc., proposes to lift the weight of business worries from the architect's hand and lend him freedom to play with a new idea. And Wright, busy again at Taliesin, his hilltop bungalow at Spring Green, Wis., promises one day soon to revolutionize the building of skyscrapers by a new

Senate Speeds Up Work; Will Meet Earlier

Anxious to Get Tariff Out of Way; Before Regular Session

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (AP)—Senate republicans, anxious to get the tariff out of the way before the regular session in December, agreed in party conference today to have the senate meet an hour earlier than the usual noon convening time beginning Monday.

The majority senators also listened to a plea by Senator Watson of Indiana, the party leader, that they buckle down to the task of disposing of the issue in the quickest possible time.

Should progress still be delayed after a trial of the 11 o'clock meeting hour, it is planned to propose night sessions or to convene at 10 o'clock in the morning.

Agree to Eliminations

Announcement of the conference action coincided with the disclosure that the finance committee republicans would agree to the elimination of two highly controversial provisions from the pending bill.

One of these would abolish the time-honored custom of making tariff rates determined under the flexible clause equal the differences in cost of production of foreign and domestic articles, and set up in its place the differences in conditions of competition formula. This amendment to the law was written into the bill by the house and the senate democrats and republican independents have said they would strive for its abolition.

Agree to Language

It is understood the finance committee majority will now agree to restore the existing law's language except for the specific definition it prescribed for transportation costs. This factor now is considered in determining differences in cost of production, but no specific definition is provided. The finance committee described transportation costs as the expense of shipping foreign and domestic goods to ports of entry of the importations.

The other committee amendment to be stricken out would bar importation of articles bearing a trade mark owned by a citizen of the United States.

The committee majority is prepared now to favor the house provision prohibiting importation of goods having an American trade mark unless the consent of the owner of the trade mark is given.

Four Boats Race Up Mississippi River in Attempt on Record

LAKE PROVIDENCE, La., Sept. 19 (AP)—Three little outboard motor speedboats were nearing Lake Providence early tonight and a fourth was seeking to cut down their 12 hour lead in a thrilling race up the Mississippi against the "Bogle's" record of 87 hours and 31 minutes from New Orleans to St. Louis.

The quartet of baby craft with a skipper and an engineer each, all Louisianians, broke away from the Canal street wharf at 5:57 p.m. yesterday in their wild dash up the river.

The Vivian G. and the Hombruc Baton Rouge entries, and the Cherie, New Orleans speeder, passed Baton Rouge last night just around midnight and made brief stops before nine o'clock today at Vidalia, La. The Vivian G. and the Hombruc struck for the lead with the Cherie close behind while C. N. Mickler, of New Orleans, skipper of the Bernadette, was seeking to cut down 12 hours time lost in a motor tie up below Baton Rouge at 11:24 a.m. today.

Following their initial struggles with the problems of registration, more than 800 freshmen were officially welcomed into the university last night at Iowa Union.

The class of '33 was given an opportunity to meet the president and deans of the university in the reception preceding the assembly. Members of the student committee for welcoming freshman helped to distribute name tags and to introduce the freshmen.

George F. Kay, dean of the college of liberal arts, presided at the assembly and welcomed the new students into the university "family."

On behalf of the university women, Dean Adelaide L. Burge, urged the freshman women to justify their privilege of enjoying higher education.

The concluding speech was made by Pres. Walter A. Jessup who asked the freshmen to lay out their work so that "the long work comes first."

The assembly ended with the singing of "Old Gold."

Court Takes to Air as Aviator Defends Self for Coney Crash

NEW YORK, Sept. 19 (AP)—A strange court flew over Jamaica bay today, the judge and his attendants sitting in the passenger seats and the defendant, who is charged with manslaughter, silently pleading his case at the controls.

Ten days ago William Alexander brought his transport seaplane down over the surf at Coney Island, where it ploughed through bathers and turned over on the beach after killing two children and injuring a dozen other bathers.

He pleaded in court today that the plane had not responded when he "kicked the stick" in an effort to swerve away from the bathers. It was too technical for Magistrate Leo Healy and he ordered court adjourned to the sky that the prisoner might demonstrate just what he meant.

The same ship that figured in the accident was used. Alexander took it up.

Alexander brought his plane down on the water just beyond the breakers at Coney, showing the judge that at the reduced speed necessary for gliding the rudder was not quickly effective if a sudden turn in the air was desired.

Circuit Judge Cuts Name Off Senators List

Kendall Receives Letter From Jurist Declining to Run for Office

DES MOINES, Sept. 19 (AP)—Decision of William S. Kenyon, judge of the United States circuit court of appeals, not to enter the republican primary race in Iowa, for the nomination as United States senator, today came as no great surprise to those who have kept close watch of the senatorial situation in Iowa.

While strenuous efforts were made on the part of many of the friends of the jurist to induce him to become a candidate, and a special interview on the subject was arranged with former Gov. N. E. Kendall in Maine recently, there has since been a feeling that while Judge Kenyon appreciated the interest, he is well satisfied with his present work.

Kendall Gets Letter

The decision not to become a candidate was phrased in a letter received late today from Judge Kenyon by Mr. Kendall who informed the Associated Press.

"There are some personal reasons known only to you and my other intimate friends which are of no interest to the public but which I must consider in arriving at a decision," Judge Kenyon wrote the former governor. "I have weighed the matter carefully and deliberately and have reached the conclusion not to enter the race for the senate. I am appreciative and thankful to you and to the army who have written me."

Judge Kenyon had originally planned to make his decision on his arrival in Ft. Dodge, his home, late this month, but changed his mind due to "delays" of inquiry from the press and others.

No Thought of Returning

"In view of the very general discussion of the matter by the people of the state, I feel," the jurist wrote, "that if there is no intention on my part to enter the contest, I should say so at this time as my return home has been delayed by work of the national law observance and enforcement commission."

"I do not know just where or how this thing started. When I left the senate there was no thought in my mind of ever returning, and there is no such thought or desire since. I have been happy and contented in my work on the bench and I enjoy the freedom from politics."

The decision leaves but two active candidates in the race for the republican nomination for senator—Governor Hammill and Representative L. J. Dickinson of Algona, although there is a possibility that Howard Clark, a candidate in the last primary, may enter the race.

Two Problems of Import Up Before League

Crusade for Peace and Security Occupies Assembly

GENEVA, Sept. 19 (AP)—Two subjects weighty with importance in the crusade for world peace and security—disarmament and "inapplicable treaties"—engaged the attention of the league of nations assembly today.

The first centered around the problem of limiting trained army reserves in seeking a basis for a general disarmament agreement. It developed a sharp conflict of attitudes between representatives of Great Britain and France.

The second subject found its vehicle for discussion in China's wish to be freed from what her leaders call the burden of "unequal treaties" with great western nations.

Adopt Report
The assembly adopted committee reports on the protection of women and children, child welfare and mandates.

The clash today between British and French thought on trained army reserves as a factor in disarmament, was foreseen last week when Lord Robert Cecil of Great Britain announced his purpose to introduce a resolution suggesting that the preparatory disarmament commission consider the limiting of land forces.

Lord Cecil, in presenting his resolution today, said that the hoped for naval agreement, while important, would be useless if the nations could not agree also to limit their land and air forces.

Germany Upholds Britain
Rene Massigli, a youthful Frenchman who spoke for his government, said that France believed it would be inexpedient to give new instructions to the preparatory commission while the Anglo-American naval negotiations were still in progress.

Only Germany, through Count Von Bernstorff, ranged herself on the side of Great Britain in the argument.

The Chinese proposal was sponsored by Dr. C. C. Wu, minister of his government to Washington.

China's immediate consideration, said Dr. Wu, speaking in English, was the old "unequal treaties" which existed between China and several of the western powers. He recognized that his proposal was "viewed with apprehension by some statesmen who had concern for political equilibrium in other parts of the world."

Urges Chinese Proposal
Germany, Hungary, India, and Persia welcomed the Chinese proposal warmly and urged that its execution would be a contribution to peace in the Far East.

The British and Belgian delegations, however, regarded China's resolution as inexpedient. They offered instead a proposal that any member of the league is entitled to draw the attention of the assembly to a treaty which appears inapplicable. In this case, the assembly would examine the "receivability" of the communication and would decide the question on its merits.

Federal Farm Board to Organize Banking Division for Funds

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (AP)—The federal farm board laid the foundation today for handling the $500,000,000 farm relief fund on a banking basis by obtaining the services of Thomas Hildt, Baltimore financier, to organize a division of banking operations.

The purpose of the division is to protect the government funds by investigating applications for loans, ascertaining that the security for the loans is satisfactory and otherwise carrying on the usual banking procedure in making loans.

Indict Governor of Kentucky and Seven Others on Charges

FRANKFORT, Ky., Sept. 19 (AP)—Indictments charging Gov. Flem D. Sampson and seven members of the state textbook commission with "unlawfully receiving gifts" from publishing companies were returned here today by the Frankfort county grand jury, which has been investigating state affairs for three weeks.

The alleged gifts were specified as "a great number of common school textbooks, the exact number, description, and time thereof unknown to the grand jury." The books were alleged to have been accepted from eight firms which were seeking to have texts published by them adopted for use in the Kentucky public schools.

The indictments were returned unexpectedly in a partial report of the jury and caused a sensation when read by title only. When the indictment became known there was considerable surprise and speculation.

The indictments followed months of unsuccessful efforts to adopt books for the schools for the current year. Bids have been asked four times. Sampson, a republican, was elected in 1927 after a campaign in which he made free textbooks his principal issue.

Old Capitol

PROUD Iowa students have pointed out Old Capitol to visitors for many years but we doubt that the first state house of Iowa has ever been more beautiful than now at the beginning of another school year when it is lighted at night. Those persons who were responsible for getting the dome of Old Capitol lighted are to be congratulated.

We can show our friends this historic building at night as well as in the day time and feel proud of it.

Freshmen and others coming to the university for the first time can learn to love the old building as do those older men and women of Iowa.

Get the Green Caps

IF YOU'RE a freshman be certain that you're wearing that green cap which is traditional at Iowa.

It is not a sign of degradation, nor does it mean that you are to be hazed at intervals by husky sophomores. Iowa traditions are not that way.

Rather you are to be proud of being able to wear the cap which shows you are now entering the greatest university in the middle west. Hazing is left to the small colleges where horse-play takes the place of real gentlemanly activities.

Here at Iowa the he-men take pride in the Iowa traditions which are traditions any university should be proud of.

Wearing of green caps by the freshmen is one of those traditions. Get the Iowa spirit and wear that green cap.

Read the Directions

BEFORE you go ahead and try to complete your registrations in less than 10 minutes and find that in reality it takes two days, READ THE DIRECTIONS given in your material. You will then find that it does not take so long to get registered and the procedure will be much less harassing.

The registration system is not involved. It is the result of many years of study and if followed by the directions will be simple. Find out first and you will have less trouble.

A Municipal Problem

AN ASSOCIATED PRESS dispatch carried yesterday brings up a problem which should be of concern to those interested in the Iowa City airport and the place which Iowa City is to occupy on the air-maps of the world in the future.

Here is the brief note which tells a big story:

"DES MOINES, Sept. 19 (AP)—Unless the local landing field for air mail planes is equipped with all weather runways, Des Moines may be eliminated as an air mail stop during inclement weather, city officials were informed today by E. B. Wadsworth, superintendent of the airmail service. The city council is in doubt whether it will spend money for the improvement in view of the fact that the landing field is leased and not owned by the city."

In order to have a year round service we must provide means for the plans to land and takeoff with safety. All the local airport needs at present is all-weather runways. Shall we wait until some nearby city has constructed a better port or are we to get busy now and provide a suitable landing field?

Stool Pigeons

BECAUSE he was alleged to have acted as a "stool pigeon" a man was dragged out and branded "Sp" by a group of men who did not like to be molested by federal officers. And here opens a discussion which could be carried on and on.

Some persons are great opponents of liquor would not think of "telling" on violators, feeling it a breach of the ethics of a gentleman. Others think such is their duty.

It all depends upon one's personal attitude upon the matter. Some believe a detective is a dishonest being and some denounce prohibition officers for their methods used in enforcing the laws.

The whole matter calls for notice—when men are burned and seriously tortured by other men because of such activities—caused by prohibition.

Changing the Picture

DAILY we are confronted with problems which would be much more simple to solve if we would but put ourselves into the picture of the other fellow which we can see so easily. John Fletcher writing in Forbes for August 1 gives the following comment which should be of interest to University of Iowa students and Iowa Cityans:

"One of America's greatest sales managers makes it a practice at every convention of the salesmen under him to urge them in their sales to get the customer into the picture, if possible, at the very opening of the sale. To illustrate his point he will first select some rather important man in the gathering as the hero of the story he is about to deliver, and then proceeds as follows:

"Suppose I went up to Niagara Falls with Bill Jones and while we were there I took a picture of Niagara Falls. Now, if Bill sent that picture home to his family it would just be another picture of Niagara Falls and would quickly find its way into the waste paper basket. On the other hand, if I asked Bill himself to stand in front of the Falls and then took a picture in which Bill became part of Niagara Falls, when that picture reached his home Bill's family would surely say it was great, for here was Bill hooked up with a big thing, and the natural result would be that the picture would be framed and hung upon the wall."

"The trouble with most salesmen seems to be that they forget that the man to whom they are talking is more interested in his own business than in anything else."

PARAGRAPHS OF COMMENT ON TOPICS OF THE DAY

A Los Angeles, Cal., roller coaster for motorists consists of a "road" full of rises and dips from five to 10 feet through. Here we've had a potential sport in Iowa City pavement all these years and never realized it.

The woman who used to talk to her husband from the bathroom with her mouth full of pins has a son who dictates to his stenographer while eating sandwiches for lunch.

And now some bright lad tells us that Iowa City's lack of street markers is all part of a plot to confuse the dean of men in his disciplinary duties.

Next time anybody chatters to you about remembering when Iowa had poor roads, just show him some of our back ways such as the detour west on U. S. highway 32.

The Only Kind

The finance writer looked up from his typewriter. "Is there any special name when a man can make both ends meet?" His cynical news editor grinned back. "Yeh, they call him a contortionist."

Or Bathing and Swimming

It is one of our national paradoxes that the small boy who dreads the taste of castor oil sniffs eagerly for its smell on the race track.

Modern advertising in cigarets reminds us that there was a brand of whisky once with the slogan "Not a headache in a barrel-full."

In 1929 it has become "wine, women, and whoopee."

WASHINGTON BYSTANDER

"Two Ruths" From House of Representatives Seem to Have Designs on Senate Positions

By KIRKE SIMPSON
WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—When the seventy-first congress assembled in special session, senate press gallery observers could not fail to note that senate proceedings seemed to have particular interest for two of the "three Ruths" added to the feminine membership of the house in the November elections.

While both houses were in session, hardly a day passed that did not see Ruth Bryan Owen of Florida or Ruth Hanna McCormick of Illinois visiting in the senate chamber.

Both spent a lot of time perched on the slippery red leather covering of the huge settees that line the back wall of the senate meeting place. As a rule they held sort of court back there, with two or three senators gathered about and others stopping to exchange greetings.

Obviously that was a situation that could not escape the eagle eye of any political reporter. Murmurs as to possible significance of these visitations began to circulate in the press gallery.

BLUE BLOOD AND RED

Life had caught him up and was whirling him through some gigantic machinery that nullified the feeble efforts of his mind to guess what it was all about. The discouraging thing was that he could conceive of himself only as a toy, a plaything in the hands of an awful and wanton Fate. Only one central shining focus of truth remained in his breast—his love for Marian Thorndike. Nothing, not even Destiny, could change that.

He wanted, with aching earnestness, to go to her—to put his very life into her hands and have her mould him like clay, as she would and he would be anything she desired—would shape himself into the image of any ideal that was in her mind. Yet, when he had been in her presence, he had faltered and stammered until he must have appeared as either a fool or a scoundrel.

When he went to bed it was as though he sought to hide and shelter himself from a storm that was about to break. A new day would come with new complications. Bernice Veressi, he knew with dread certainty, would return. In this he was correct.

Coming toward the house from the barn he saw her alight from an automobile. While car and driver waited she came to meet him.

An odd thing about his feeling toward her was that she aroused no anger in him. Like himself, she was in the grasp of forces that manipulated her; she was, he conceived, equally helpless with him in the midst of some insolvable jigsaw puzzle of life. It was possible for him to credit her with sincerity—she actually had no desire to ruin his life.

"Why did you hang up on me when I telephoned you last night?" she asked, with a murmur of unhappiness.

Briefly, he explained the public nature of the party line system.

"What are you going to do?" he asked her.

"Please take me around your farm, Eddie, and show it to me," she replied. "Why are you so cold to me when I come out to see you?"

"We've gone over all that stuff," he tried to explain, reasonably.

"If you have anything new to say to me let's get it over with. What's on your mind, Bernice?"

She linked her hand through his arm. "Where shall we go to talk it over? In the house?"

"There was nothing to do but take her indoors—where she would not be visible to anyone passing along the road.

A faint instinctive hope still actuated him. They sat in the long, old-fashioned living room, and Eddie kept warily on the far side.

"I was awake almost all night trying to figure things out," Bernice said, with a tone of reasonableness.

"I made up my mind, Eddie, what you can do I can do. Maybe this trip down here is the turning point in my life just as in yours. I am going to stay, darling, going to settle down in the country, in a little town a few miles from you. There are plenty of opportunities for a girl like me."

Eddie gazed at Bernice Veressi in hopeless amazement.

"You're crazy. You can't settle down in this part of the country!" he told her. "You'd be a fish out of water—you'd perish."

"If you can do it, I can do it," Her voice was mixed with determination. "I can start up a little business of some kind—maybe a beauty shop—and make my own living."

Eddie listened to her incredulously. This was only a scheme, a device to stay near and harass him. "You'd die," he repeated, aimlessly.

"There's nothing for me to go back to New York for," Bernice declared. "Ever since you left I was sick of it anyway. What do I care about the gang I used to run around with? I'll be near you, dear, and I'll be making an honest living so you won't feel disgraced about me. You think I'm foolish, Eddie, but I'm not. I got sense enough to know that you don't want me to be a pest—and I don't want to annoy you, either. After I get settled down, maybe we can see each other once in a while. I'll make myself just as damn respectable as that blood girl that's got your goat."

"I tell you it's no use—"

He started to protest before he realized it was useless to batter her with mere words. She smiled at him with a meekness that was the epitome of all stubbornness. But such humility, he foresaw, could not last in a temperamental as essential violent as Bernice's. This was only a passing phase of her obsession a humility complex. If she was abased, impervious to his coldness, it meant only that her fiery temperament was banking behind barriers that sooner or later must burst.

"Besides, I like the country," she said suddenly. "I need a vacation and it's like getting out of a cage to get away from New York."

A step on the veranda distracted his attention from her and he answered the door. He was amazed to find Tom Freeman.

"I was driving by and I thought I'd stop for a minute," Freeman said with a slow, abashed grin. "I won't take any of your time. I see by the car in your yard that you have visitors. I just wanted to tell you that my sisters are giving a party at our house Saturday night and I'd be glad to have you come. All that old grudge is out of my system and I hope you feel like I do about it, too. Regan. We might as well be friends as long as we are both going to live in the neighborhood."

Eddie, acutely conscious of the menacing presence inside of Bernice Veressi, was, nevertheless, warmed by this unexpected gesture of friendliness from the man who had been his foe in love and in battle.

"That's swell of you, Freeman," he said, sincerely. "It's too bad we got off on the wrong foot at the start. Sure, I'll be glad to come if I can."

Freeman lingered a moment longer as though half expecting an invitation to enter the house.

"I'm going to take Marian myself to the party—so you needn't think I have run up the white flag entirely in that direction," he stated, with pleasant frankness. "It takes more than a fist fight to convince me that you've beaten my time. No use our being a couple of chumps, is there?"

"Sure not," Eddie responded. "All's fair, they say."

CHAPTER XLVI.

This invitation meant another opportunity to see Marian, and Eddie thrilled to the possibility. Still the fact of Bernice inside, troubled him and gave an artificial air to his manner with Freeman. What he wished for desperately was that Freeman would go at once—before there was a chance of his meeting Bernice!

But the hope was doomed to failure. Bernice at that moment believed herself of a handkerchief she had left in the car. By the sound of voices on the veranda, she knew that Eddie was talking to a man, and her negligent social instinct attached no importance to it. For all she knew or cared, Tom Freeman might have been a book agent or the milk man. It was her idea to step out to the car for a moment and return without interrupting Eddie's conversation.

But as she stepped out, Freeman took off his hat—an automatic tribute to her sex—and she saw that he was some one of equal with Eddie. Just for an instant she was confused, and she hesitated. The regretful thought came over Eddie that it was easier to introduce Freeman than to ignore her presence.

"Wait a minute, Bernice," he said, trying to appear casual. "Mr. Freeman, I want you to meet Miss Veressi."

As Freeman acknowledged the introduction, Eddie watched him sharply and saw that he was occupied in the back part of his mind with swift, unspoken astonishment. Bernice's dark beauty had a flashing quality that was instantly arresting, and to Freeman it was startling to see such a girl emerging from Eddie's bachelor establishment.

"Excuse me, please," Bernice said, flashing a smile.

All she wanted to do now was to withdraw herself from the little scene on the veranda, and she passed them again with a smile and entered the house after she had obtained the missing handkerchief. Eddie wondered what Freeman was thinking as the other's eyes followed Bernice through the door. Although he lived in the country, Tom Freeman was no rube.

"She's a beauty, Regan," he said with an admiration that was, somehow, tinged with suspicious significance. "Stranger in this part of the country, isn't she?"

Eddie's blood ran icily, but he de-added to attempt no explanations. Everybody, sooner or later, would know about Bernice anyway. Under this new goading, his spirit refused to rise.

"Yes, she's a stranger."

Freeman looked at him with a slow, peculiar smile.

"You know, old man, you've got me guessing." His voice took on a puzzled drawl. "I didn't have any idea you had a lady visiting you. I reckon I'm a little bit up a tree—about that party the girls are giving Saturday night. Not knowing your lady friend they probably would think it funny if I invited her—and, well, if you're tied up with a previous engagement, of course, I wouldn't want you to feel that you were bound to come yourself. You see, I didn't understand—when I asked you—"

But Eddie understood perfectly. Tom Freeman was withdrawing the invitation. The blight of social ostracism was already falling.

Almost visibly, Eddie could see the hospitable friendship of Tom Freeman beginning to fade. Even among men in this part of the country, no less than with the women, the rigid standards of respectability seemed to be the custom. There was nothing Eddie could do to alter conditions—simply, he had to face them as they existed. Yet he knew in his heart that Tom Freeman was no snob, no prig. He was a two-fisted, hard-living young southerner. But his social life involved his sisters, his mother, girls like Marian Thorndike. Into that circle he had no intention of taking a girl who flashed as Bernice Veressi flashed.

"I understand," Eddie said, awkwardly. "You're all right, Freeman." His visitor was equally embarrassed.

"This is an awful old-fashioned place, Regan," he said, uncomfortably. "Glad to see you again, though." He grinned with an effort at pleasantness. "Call me sometime and we'll go hunting," he added as a parting bid.

Even before it started, Eddie's acceptance into the social life of the country seemed ended. There was nothing he could do, nothing he could say. Morosely he returned to the house and Bernice.

"Gee, you looked upset when I came out," she said, penetrating. "I hope I didn't embarrass you or anything."

"No, that's all right." I was not in his nature to humiliate her with the truth. "Anything you do is all right, I guess. If you want to move down here and set up a business of your own in the county seat, I can't stop you. I'm done arguing with you, Bernice."

CHAPTER XLVII.

Her dark eyes as she looked at him were filled with distressed apology.

"My God, Eddie—you'd think I was the smallpox or something! Honest, I'm not as awful as you seem to think I am. I'm just a girl trying to get along and find a little happiness for myself and you, too. I don't want to take anything away from you, Eddie—I want to bring something to you."

His head fell wearily on to his propped up palm.

"I know—I know. You mean fine—only, we got different ideas. Look here, I don't want to be impolite to you, Bernice—but I do wish you would run along home this afternoon. I—I got work to do."

She with strange meekness did not resent this dismissal; in minor matters she seemed to obey him with a childlike willingness. In leaving she saw he did not want to kiss her goodbye and she made no attempt to thrust a caress upon him.

Alone, he realized that he had to fight off a violent depression and he went back to the timber, where his axe resounded with almost superhuman fierceness through the woods. As an escapement from the sunken state of his heart nothing could equal the narcotic effect of tremendous physical exertion. Despite the downward pull of his mind, the muscular effort sent his heart pumping with a steady rhythm that forced rich currents of blood through his veins. Slowly a flush came to his neck and his face grew wet. Presently his shirt sopped against his perspiring body and his lungs pumped and exhaled the deep, balmy air of the medicinal out-of-doors.

He had never read anything by Oscar Wilde and had no knowledge of the English poet's philosophy that only the body can cure the mind and only the mind can cure the body. But the net result of his prolonged labor was that he returned to the house, aching of toil.

Even as his body was tired, so was his brain from over much thinking. Contrary to his expectations, sleep came to him as soon as his head touched the pillow and a new day found him again fighting for peace—throwing himself like a charging warrior into the task of felling the forest. When night came he was again as ready for slumber as a spent animal.

Tobe had placed a letter from New York beside his plate and with reluctant fingers, Eddie opened it. It was from Mike Arno.

"Dear Pal Eddie," Arno had written. "I pulled off that business transaction I spoke of you about in Richmond and it was very satisfactory. Nothing doing here in the big town right now and it occurs to me that it might be a good idea if I ran down and paid you a little visit. I have been working pretty hard to put that deal over and it wouldn't do me a bit of harm to get out in the sticks and rest up for a while. In fact I want to drop out of sight for a couple of weeks for certain private reasons of my own and I think your place down there would be a great hideaway. You can look for me in a day or two. I don't know just what train I'll come on, so you needn't bother trying to meet me as I will hire a car at the station and drive out. Maybe you've changed your mind and might listen to a proposition to hook up with me in the future. We'll talk it over when I see you. Always your pal Mike Arno."

Eddie, as he put down the letter, noticed that it had trembled between his fingers. This was a new spear thrust, and it reached him with piercing pain. There was no escape! His past, fraught with lingering menace, pursued him with the malignancy that was beyond his power to combat.

Mike Arno—a crook—a confidence man—

The food on his plate remained untouched. It was no good telling himself that Mike Arno was a square guy—as squareness was rated among people of Arno's stripe. Yes, Mike was all right, in his way.

Rain-Soaked Gridiron Fails to Halt Second Hawk Scrimmage of Season

Hawks Drill On Passing, Fundamentals

Burt Drives Backs Into Bucking Harness; Linemen Block

Burt Ingwersen's gridiron charges ignored the handicap of a slippery ball and a rainsoaked field yesterday while they took part in their fourth double-practice session of the week. The squad was given a long forward pass drill in the forenoon which was followed by a stiff workout on fundamentals.

In the afternoon, the linemen were given an intensive drill on blocking and tackling while the backfield candidates took turns at smashing into a bucking harness. At the conclusion, Ingwersen sent the forward wall of his first string eleven and the second team through a scrimmage, stressing defensive tactics against a line-smashing attack.

New faces appeared in the first team roster as the Iowa mentor continued his search for a pair of tackles. Ely, mammoth tackle candidate, replaced Peirsel, sophomore prospect and Fuhrman, veteran second string guard, stepped into Roberts position at guard. Benjamin alternated with Westra, regular guard last season, at tackle while Reedquist and Carlsen perched in like manner with Mastrofer in a like manner with Mastrofer.

The rest of the first string line was made up of Elling, center; and Myers, guard. Besides Hickman, Hauge, Jensvold, and Haggerty who took care of the ball totting for the reserve team, Sanson, whom Ingwersen is grooming for a full-back berth, smashed the front line for repeated short gains.

MID-WESTERN COLLEGES TURN TO SCRIMMAGE
OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 19 (AP)—Creighton university's gridsters got only a light workout today because of the misty weather. There was no scrimmage. Coach Chet Wynne reported Johnny Scott, star Bluejay halfback, laid up temporarily with blistered feet.

GRINNELL, Sept. 19 (AP)—With the varsity squad out to 25 by ineptitudes and injuries, Coach L. L. (Puzz) Watt sent his Grinnell college gridmen through two grueling practice sessions today. An hour of strenuous scrimmage topped off the day's workout. The battle between Billo, a newcomer, and Minter, a veteran, for one end berth lived today with Billo having a slight edge. Walker, a reserve, was making a strong bid for a guard job in place of Humphrey. Heldridge, a leading candidate for center, was nursing an injured leg today but took part in the scrimmage.

A.A.S.S., Sept. 19 (AP)—Swinging into the actual work of preparing for this season's grid series, Coach Noel Workman sent the Iowa State college football squad through their first hard scrimmage session here this afternoon. The first team was composed of Robert Burton and Gordon Nagel, ends; Franklin Nolte and Myron Hard Spear, tackles; Orrie Roe and Capt. Ed Schlenker, guards, and Bob Smith, center. In the backfield were Paul Trauer, Elmer Larsen, Dick Wilcox and Rudolph Tegland.

Hawk Catcher May Resume Law Studies

Clayton Thompson, captain of the successful 1929 Iowa baseball team which carried off second honors in the Big Ten pennant chase this spring, returned to Iowa City yesterday after the termination of his first season as a professional ball player. Thompson, who was a brilliant backstop on the Hawkeye nine, may resume his law studies here at the university. His plans, however, are indefinite.

The Hawk paddist entered the program immediately after the conclusion of the Iowa baseball team's eastern trip when he took up the catching burden for the Waterloo club of the Mississippi Valley league. Later in the season, he was sold to the Des Moines Demons in the Western loop. Thompson led the Big Ten in hitting during the 1927 season, his first appearance in conference circles.

West Virginia Eleven Faces Stiff Schedule Minus Ten Veterans

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Sept. 19 (AP)—West Virginia university will launch upon probably the hardest schedule ever faced by a mountain eleven on Saturday with no less than 10 veteran regulars and reserves of 1928 missing from the moleskins.

Aside from the displacement of Haskell Indians and Lafayette the schedule remains the same as last year with West Virginia Wesleyan, Davis and Elkins, Pitt, Washington and Lee, the Oklahoma Aggies, Fordham Georgetown and Washington and Jefferson on the books to try the mettle of Coach Ira Rodgers' ball pushers.

Whether, with the loss of men like Clarence Keefe, Walter Brewster, "Swede" Hagberg, Eddie Vacheresse and "Big Sleepy" Glenn, Rodgers can shape up an eleven that will perform as creditably as did the 1928 mountaineers who lost only two games—those with Davis, Elkins and Georgetown—remains a question that leaves many rather dubious.

Bruder, Wildcat Halfback, Reports to Coach Hanley

Chicago, Sept. 19 (AP)—Coach Dick Hanley of Northwestern university is too busy building to do any talking about his football team, but the Wildcat campus has plenty to say about Hank Bruder, a 180-pound half back.

Bruder has recovered from injuries which kept him from a regular job last season and is expected to do the punting and to divide the passing with Russ Berghem, a 190 pounder, who is a virtual cinch at fullback.

Coach Amos Alonzo Stagg gave Chicago's small but enthusiastic squad another play today, and plans to give play a day until the first game. In his search for a punter Stagg called Capt. Pat Kelly back from end. The center job also is a wide open proposition.

Illinois' second scrimmage session produced encouraging defensive results, but the offensive work of four sets of backs was ragged. Frank Walker, reported he had sprained an ankle chasing a street car, and was replaced by Clem Irwin in the number one backfield. Despite a slippery ball and uncertain footing Burt Ingwersen sent the Iowa squad through a long forward pass drill today. A dummy scrimmage emphasizing center smashes and off tackle formations topped off the session. Ely, tackle, and Fuhrman, guard, were moved from the second team to the first, replacing Peirsel and Roberts. Scrimmage for Ohio State was delayed another day while Sam Williamson and his assistants worked on fundamentals.

Coach Pat Page speeded up at Indiana, giving five teams their stiffest practice of the season. Fundamentals and the quest for a punter kept Page busy. Balay, Magrabosco, Ross and Koenig were members of a special squad in punting.

A slashing 45 minute scrimmage behind locked gates was the Wisconsin's squad assignment. Russ Rehholz, sophomore halfback, was outstanding as a ground gainer, while Kenneth Krueger, 230 pound sophomore center, pleased Coach Thistlethwaite by his defensive work.

Dr. Spears devoted another day to routine at Minnesota, giving special attention to "Big" Munn, Munn has almost convinced the doctor that he is capable of filling Nagurski's place at fullback, leaving the latter available for duty as a tackle.

New members of the Michigan squad were given more scrimmage today, while most of the experienced hands were put through a blocking drill. Ray Priest, a star of the 1928 freshman backfield, reported for the first time, and the appearance of Hughes, a second year man, completed the list of those invited for early practice.

Jimmy Phelan's search for line material at Purdue continued with Miller, although lacking weight, showing well at center. Ed Caraway, veteran back, played another day at end and again was the outstanding performer of the session.

Little Hawks Taper Off for Initial Game

In drilling Iowa City high for the first contest of the year, Coach George Wells, has twice been hit by casualties. Yesterday he took no chances and gave his men a light, easy workout.

With the exception of Bruze, second string lineman who is nursing a sprained ankle, the Red and White squad is in good condition. In the scrimmage session earlier in the week, the men looked to be in mid-season rather than early season form.

A well-balanced team will face West Liberty at 2:30 at Schrader field Saturday afternoon. With eight lettermen distributed in the backfield and line and several reliable reserves from last year's squad sure to start the game, chances for a first game win seem the inevitable. A heavy line, averaging better than 160 pounds, will be backed by Howard Moffitt, quarter, Capt. Don Lucky and Horace Redman, halfbacks, and Bud Wright, fullback.

Hull and Mathes are nearly certain of wing positions Taylor and Vestermark are almost sure bets for the tackle jobs, either Callahan, Soucek or Stimmler will be at the guard posts and Isensee, a new addition to the squad, will be at the pivot.

Although the City high mentor is not expecting heavy opposition, he is drilling the Red and White hopefuls against a possible aerial attack.

ROOKIE STARS OF 1929

Sammy BYRD of the Yanks WHO WOULD MAKE A GREAT GOLFER IF HE WASN'T A GREATER BALL PLAYER.

Johnny FREDERICK "DOUBLING DEMON" ONE OF THE FINDS OF THE YEAR! TWO SURE-FIRE STARS.

The current baseball season definitely marks the attainment of big league grade by Sammy Byrd, of the New York Yankees, and Johnny Frederick, of the Brooklyn Dodgers, outfielders both. Frederick is a regular and Byrd still a sub but one who is so skilled that he is practically on a par with the regular garden stars. Byrd, incidentally, is of special interest, because he's the guy who's being groomed for Babe Ruth's shoes. Whenever the hills of athletic age bench the Bam, Sammy gets the ticklish job of romping in Buchan Frederick, indeed, considering that this season has witnessed the coming to stardom of such remarkable rookies as Dale Alexander and Royal Johnson of the Detroit Tigers, Earl Averill of the Cleveland Indians, Billy Dobeck of the Yankees, and the above-mentioned Sammy Byrd.

McCarthy Offers His Best Bets a Holiday; They Decline

CHICAGO, Sept. 19 (AP)—Joe McCarthy, manager of the new national league champions, today was a boss who couldn't get his men to take a holiday with pay. When the Boston Braves clinched the pennant flag for the Cubs by defeating Pittsburgh yesterday, "Marsh Joe" decided to give his players a rest. He called several of them aside.

"You can have a couple days off now to rest up," he informed them. "Not for awhile yet, Hack Wilson, pudgy home run getter of the Bruins replied. 'I am gunning for the home run championship and I'm tied with Chuck Klein and Mel Ott now. I want it and feel myself ready to go on a rampage any day.'"

"If it is all the same to you, I want to play," countered Rogers Hornsby, the only member of the squad who has played every inning of the season. "I have an outside chance to win my seventh batting championship and I am only two homers away from the three leaders. Anyway, I can keep in better shape for the Athletics by playing."

And so it was all down the Bruin line. Only two, Riggs Stephenson and Catcher Zach Taylor who have slight injuries were first stringers who stayed out of the lineup after word was received the pennant had landed at Wrigley field.

McCarthy's flingers, especially Giv Bush who wants to pitch every game of the schedule, were restless and eager to throw more baseballs past the Giants. Except for Charlie Root and Pat Malone, the Cub pitching staff has been wobbly of late and McCarthy isn't concealing his apprehension.

George Beltz Confesses While Being Brought to Iowa City

Solution to numerous robberies in this part of the state was made yesterday with the confession of George Beltz, 18 years old, who was arrested at Lancaster, Mo., for auto theft. Beltz was being returned to Iowa by County Attorney Paul F. Smith of Buchanan county, and the sheriff, Harry P. Willey, of Buchanan county, and made his confession en route.

The officers stopped here to inform Sheriff Frank L. Smith of the confessed hiding place and a loot varying from shot-guns to canned corn, was recovered early yesterday morning at the home of Glen and U. F. Beltz in Penn township.

Beltz also admitted having stolen several automobiles for his escapades about the state and implicated two men and two women, all of Cedar Rapids, in the thefts. Authorities are searching for the companions, meanwhile Beltz will be detained here.

He is sought by several counties on charges ranging from breaking and entering to auto theft. No information has been filed as yet against the two men at whose home the loot was found.

Attempts were being made at the sheriff's office yesterday to identify part of the stolen goods. The office took on the appearance of a cross-road store on bargain day with overalls and blankets draped over the railing, a display of firearms and ammunition on the table, and a conglomeration of Jello packages, canned goods, clocks, socks, and woolens piled in a corner.

37 Veterans Assemble for Annual Meet

Thirty-seven veterans of '61, their wives, and widows of departed members, making 60 in all, gathered at the Johnson county court house yesterday to observe the sixty-seventh anniversary of the 22nd Iowa infantry.

The Daughters of Union Veterans served dinner to the veterans this noon. Following the dinner a short business meeting was held. This was followed by an informal meeting where the veterans talked of old times.

The Women's Relief corps served supper to the veterans and entertainment was supplied by organizations and individuals. The Moosehart junior legion club of 16 members entertained with two numbers, "The Flying Clouds" and "Dance of the Paper Doll." Frances Maude Crayne sang a solo accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Ruth Crayne.

A business meeting in which officers for the coming year will be elected, and a dinner to be served by the Sons of the Veteran auxiliary, are scheduled for today.

Judge Zager Fines Couple $15 on Two Charges Yesterday

Harry Goody and Mrs. John Anderson were fined $15 and costs each on two charges in police court yesterday by Judge C. L. Zager. They were both arraigned for intoxication and disturbing the peace by loud and obscene language.

Neither pleaded guilty to disturbing the peace charge but were found guilty after trial and fined $10 and costs each. They entered a guilty plea of intoxication and were assessed $5 and costs each. Goody paid up and was released and Mrs. Anderson was given until tomorrow to raise her fine or serve 5 days in jail on each count.

They were arrested yesterday morning on information filed by Mrs. A. Appleby, 331 S. Madison street, who testified at the trial. W. A. Spence, same address, also testified. Officers had been called to the Madison street address Wednesday night but made no arrests at that time.

Offender Given Fine of $25 on 3rd Count

Chris Jacobsen lost another $25 and costs yesterday, bringing his total to $50 in two days. He arrived here from West Branch Tuesday and was jailed for disturbing the peace. He was fined $25 and costs in police court Wednesday only to be arrested a few hours later for intoxication.

The $65 in his possession Tuesday has dwindled to a very small amount with the $50 and several dollars costs of two court sessions deducted.

PEACOCK CASE DEVELOPS INTO "MOTIVELE SS MURDER"

Earl Francis Peacock, 22-year-old radio mechanic, on trial in White Plains, N. Y., for the killing of his pretty young wife, Dorothy Heinzelman Peacock. Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tompkins (inset) is presiding over the trial.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 19 (AP)—The admitted slaying of Dorothy Peacock by her husband, who set her body afire after it had lain in a thicket for six days, seems today to have developed into a "motiveless murder."

District Attorney Frank H. Coyne asked for the death penalty for Earl F. Peacock in his opening statement to the jury, but nowhere in his address did he mention motive.

The district attorney would not discuss this situation today but there were indications that if forced to name a motive the state would call it jealousy.

PEACE HANGS BY THREAD
LONDON, Sept. 19 (AP)—The Jerusalem correspondent of the Daily Mail reports that continuance of peace "hangs by a slender thread."

His article, telegraphed last night, said that grave tension continues and that the only guarantee of security is the presence of British troops. He indicated that important military operations may be developed by the process of pacification.

In reviewing activities of the last year, Mrs. Boole called attention to the fact that the W.C.T.U. was unprepared financially to oppose actively those urging repeal of the Wisconsin prohibition enforcement act when proponents of the movement began their successful campaign, and urged each state unit to maintain a reserve fund to be used when such situations arise.

Mrs. Boole's other proposal, that of popularizing fruit juices, resulted from recommendation by the department of non-alcoholic fruit products of the world's W.C.T.U.

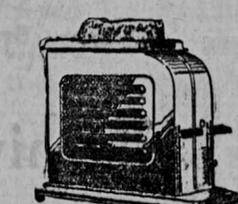

The national president, delivering the keynote message of the convention, suggested that the temperance union take action to aid in a study of the preservation of fruit juices so as to prevent fermentation.

GRINNELL, Sept. 19 (AP)—Only the high jumping coeds will be able to keep late hours at Grinnell college this year, seemingly. Walter A. Jessup Commences 14th Year as Iowa President

University Expands Under His Leadership; Record Embraces Pioneer Projects

As the University of Iowa's fourteenth president, Walter A. Jessup Monday will begin his fourteenth year in the position of chief executive.

It was in September, 1916, less than a month after his thirty-ninth birthday, that President Jessup became head of the university. His term's length now exceeds that of any other Iowa leader.

An enrollment increase of 172 per cent, expansion which has more than doubled the value of the plant, and the establishment of half a dozen major projects are high points of President Jessup's regime, a summary shows.

Holds Six Degrees

He now is the holder of six degrees, three of which are honorary awards conferred upon him by Wisconsin, Missouri, and Indiana. He earned the B.A., M.A., and Ph.D. degrees at Earlham and Hanover, Ind., colleges, and Columbia university, respectively, between 1903 and 1908.

Even before he became president, he was known as an educator. In his younger days, President Jessup was superintendent of two Indiana school systems and dean of Indiana university's education college. Then followed four years as dean of Iowa's college of education, this service just preceding his appointment to the presidency.

Enrollment, Plant's Value Gain

During the first year of his leadership, the university's total enrollment was 3,523 students, almost 1,000 less than attend the 11 weeks of summer session now. By steady increases, the figure has mounted to 9,685 for 1928-29.

Much of the plant's physical growth has come about since 1923, according to official records. The current value of the plant now is about $16,500,000, whereas in 1923 its evaluation was approximately $8,500,000.

One of the first major projects after President Jessup was appointed, was the establishment of the Iowa child welfare research station, pioneer of its kind in an American university. Soon after, the extension division inaugurated correspondence courses yielding regular university credit, which now serve almost 1,500 persons annually.

Unique School Created

A unique organization for a state university is the non-sectarian school of religion in which courses are offered by a Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish professor. So successful has been the Iowa plan that other institutions have modeled their schools along similar lines.

A gift of the Rockefeller foundation and the general education board, augmented by an equal appropriation by the Iowa general assembly, made the sum of $4,500,000 available for a new medical plant. The general hospital and the medical laboratories building were constructed with this sum.

Some of the other projects in which the president had a guiding hand include the construction of a $500,000 field house, and football stadium valued at the same amount; establishment of the college of commerce, and building of the chemistry-pharmacy-botany structure, university hall, a recitation building, and the quadrangle, men's dormitory.

IOWA NEWS BRIEFS

DES MOINES, (AP)—Enrollment in all types of vocational education work in Iowa the past year broke all previous records. F. E. Moore, director for Iowa, stated today. The 1928-29 enrollment was 9,213 compared with 8,325 in the previous year and 6,609 in the year, 1924-25.

CEDAR FALLS, (AP)—The Rev. Floyd D. Reeves of Eagle Grove has been called unanimously to the pastorate of the First Congregational church here to succeed the Rev. George F. Barsalou, who goes to Maquoketa.

ANAMOSA, (AP)—Automobile licenses for 1930 are being shipped from the state reformatory, where they were made, to offices of county treasurers. The plates have a blue background and white numerals and letters.

GILBERT, (AP)—The Story City circuit, board of elementary Christian Education, Norwegian Lutheran church of America, has arranged a Sunday school institute to be held at the Gilbert Lutheran church.

Rev. T. Heimarks congregation, Sunday, Sept. 29. Session will be conducted at 11 a.m., 2:30 p.m., and 7:30 p.m. Leader of the institute will be the Rev. H. P. Grimsby, Minneapolis, president of the general board of elementary education of the church.

MASON CITY, (AP)—Joe Goeders, Emmetsburg middleweight who claims the state title, has signed to headline a boxing show here Sept. 27. No opponent has been found for the 19 year old youth, who recently defeated Joe Thomas of Oelwein by a technical knockout in the third round.

MEN WHO FLY The Air Mail

With 5,500 hours in the air and nine years flying with the air mail, Harry Huking, now flying on the western division of the Boeing transcontinental air mail express and passenger route, has seen the transcontinental emerge from its first "plane-by-day and train-by-night" schedule to the present 32-hour "night transcontinental," by which mail is moved between New York and Chicago with the loss of only one business day.

Huking had the army experience of most pilots flying on transport lines. He was flying instructor at Kelly field, adjutant at Rockwell field and served with the 91st division. Later he became test pilot on commercial flying boats and started to carry air passengers in New York, in 1920, when he joined the air mail service.

His first flying was done over the Chicago-Cleveland section of the transcontinental—the first unit established by the government. For two years Huking was superintendent of the mountain division of the transcontinental airway, but resigned to join the pilot personnel of Boeing Air Transport, when that organization took over the San Francisco-Oakland-Chicago section of the transcontinental. In those days flight flying was eventful and real news. Huking got his name in the papers July 2, 1924, when he made a speedy night run from Chicago to Cheyenne, a trip which is now made in both directions at night by Boeing pilots, as part of the daily routine.

a Waterman's will jack up the handwriting of anyone who has never before used a Waterman's just about 100% in a very few weeks, besides lifting off the mind and hand every writing care. A Waterman's is even more necessary for success in college than an automobile.

The outstanding and exclusive qualities of Waterman's are responsible for its dominating place in the fountain pen world. First, there is the hard rubber holder that is light, stainless, and perfectly balanced. Next, the big ink capacity that enables a Waterman's to do a full day's work without refilling. The simple filling device that works quickly and surely. And the unlimited opportunity to select a pen point that exactly suits your style of writing.

Ask to see Waterman's No. 7 and use it as a pen point guide. There is a Waterman's with a holder and nib to exactly suit you and at a price you'll be glad to pay.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19 (AP)—Cash wheat declines with discounts of only 3 1/2 cents. Everything sold around yesterday's discount and prices were practically unchanged for the day. Deliveries on September contracts were small at 45,000 bushel. Shipping demand remained light with only 3,000 bushel. Reported worked while bookings to arrive amounted to 4,000 bushel. Nothing new in the way of export in domestic hand writers, but Winnipeg reported the best inquiry for sometime past and claimed the working of between 800,000 and 1,000,000 bushel, including some via Vancouver.

Cash corn was somewhat heavier and went over the 200 cent mark for the first time in some days past. Trading basis was somewhat irregular, running from 1c lower to 1c higher than on Wednesday, while sales were low. Shipping demand remained rather light with 54,000 bushel reported worked during the session, while the country remains reluctant to sell on the recent breaks. Bookings to arrive were only 14,000 bushel. Warehouse receipts to the amount of 3,294 bushel were cancelled and September deliveries totaled 21,000 bushel.

Cash oats was a little lighter with today's inspections amounting to 48 cars. The moderate weakness in the futures was offset by a trifle better trading basis, the latter being from 1/8c higher and sales reflected this movement and were steady to up. Shipping demand improved with 118,000 bushel worked. Nothing booked to arrive or delivered on September contracts.

Wheat Values Ease Up After Lively Upturn

Likelihood of Rains in Argentina Serve to Lower Prices

CHICAGO, Sept. 19 (AP)—Likelihood of immediate additional rainfall that is needed to remedy moisture shortage in Argentina helped to ease wheat values down today after a lively upturn. Price gains which were thus, more than wiped out were stimulated by European purchasing of Chicago wheat future deliveries and of 1,000,000 bushels of wheat to be shipped overseas both from Canada and the United States. There were also advices that drought in Australia had become increasingly serious, and that Argentine moisture shortage was yet far below standard.

Closing quotations on wheat were nervous at the same as yesterday's finish to 1c lower. Corn closed 1/8c down, oats 1/4c off, and provisions varying from 1/16c decline to a rise of 5/16c.

Until near the end of the day's trading, wheat prices averaged higher, largely as a result of improved demand for wheat from North America. Besides, offerings of wheat future deliveries were relatively scant at times, owing to a good deal of adverse crop conditions reported from Australia, where only half a normal yield of wheat is being looked for unless good rains are received very soon. It was also regarded as evident that Argentine rains had been less copious and widespread than was generally supposed, and that especially in northern Cordoba and Santa Fe provinces.

Corn prices weakened a little on fresh reports from Illinois and Indiana falling to include any mention of important damage. Larger receipts of corn next week were looked for. Oats were mostly governed by the action of corn.

Good prices were registered for corn at the opening but, pressure increased and prices tumbled. Pit traders were sellers and the buying was indifferent. The decline, however, ran into some buying support against the bids. Cash trade continues slow, but shipments were liberal from here, 837,000 bushels with receipts the largest in some time at 206,000 bushels. Showers were shown in the west with the forecast pointing to unsettled conditions with somewhat higher temperatures.

On the whole, the provision market was firm, responsive to scattered buying, despite downturns in the value of hogs.

Selling Wave Sends Stocks Into Confuse

Late Session Offering Wipes Out Early Price Gains

NEW YORK, Sept. 19 (AP)—Retention of a 5 1/2 per cent discount rate by the Bank of England and plentiful influx of call money sent bulls on another wild rampage on the stock market today. But it proved short lived. A wave of selling swept into the market late in the session which wiped out much of the day's advance and turned price trends confusingly irregular.

Although most estimates indicated that the federal reserve weekly call loan figures, to be released after the close, would show little change, traders became apprehensive as the hour for the federal reserve reports drew nearer, and sold heavily.

After renewing at 10 per cent, the call money rate was shaded point by point to 7, indicating that the 10 per cent rate had attracted a large volume of funds, and that the tightening effects of the mid-month settlements, appearing sooner than expected, were also passing earlier than usual. Time money, however, remained unchanged at 9 per cent.

Commercial Solvents was a sensational performer, shooting up 106 points to 700 then reacting to close at 645. Air Reduction rose more than 11 points to a new peak, and American International, American Telephone, American and Foreign Power, Atlantic Gulf, Best & Co., Shattuck, Newport Co., Republic Steel and Woolworth reached new peaks with substantial gains, some of which were lost before the close. General Electric and Montgomery Ward made fair gains.

Such leaders as U. S. Steel and Radio closed 3 and 2 points lower, and oils were inclined to ease, Standard of New Jersey slipping back a point in a heavy turnover. Auburn Auto dropped 14 points, and Cutler Hammer, American Water Works, Johns Manville, Western Union, and Standard Gas were among issues to lose 3 to 6 points. Motors eased, Chrysler selling within about a point of the year's low.

Foreign exchanges were irregular, sterling holding at the lowest rates of the year, with cables at $4.84, while the Japanese yen continued to climb, reaching within 13 cents of parity.

Housing Service Will Aid in Finding Rooms

Permanent quarters for the university housing service are now located in Iowa Union. Students or faculty members who have not yet obtained rooms will be given assistance here. Many rooms are reported still available. This service is located in the lobby of Iowa Union during registration and is under the direction of Prof. Fred E. Holmes, manager of the housing service.

Members of the committee will aid students to find rooms either in town or in the university dormitories. Information relative to housing conditions may be obtained at this office at any time during the year. Iowa City persons whose rooms are on the approved list are asked to call the housing service office if their rooms are taken so that the lists may be kept up-to-date.

Band of 125 Pieces to Represent Iowa

A band of 125 pieces, largest ever organized here, will represent the University of Iowa during the year 1929-30. It has been announced by Director O. E. Van Doren. Exceeding the size of last year's band by fifty pieces, the organization will appear at all home football games and will participate in official university functions such as commencement and Governor's day.

Statements in Trial Crossed

Rebuttal Witnesses in Contradictions

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 19 (AP)—Three rebuttal witnesses called by the state today directly contradicted statements made by two defense witnesses in the trial of Mrs. Lois Pantages, who is charged with second degree murder. Jack Yellin, advertising man, was called by Chief Prosecutor James P. Costello to contribute his statement that John Contorno, a defense witness, had not testified in the trial consistently with a pre-trial statement he had made in the district attorney's office. Yellin testified emphatically that Contorno had told him he could "make some dough" if he would make an appointment with Pantages for him. "Contorno told me to tell Pantages that he could do some good for him," Yellin stated. The witness testified he first talked with Contorno, a gasoline station operator on June 19, two days after Mrs. Pantages' automobile collided with that of Juro Rokumoto, Japanese, for whose death she is on trial. The conversation was at Contorno's oil station, Yellin related, from which Contorno had testified he witnessed the fatal collision. Under cross examination Contorno had admitted that he previously had told the district attorney he did not observe the collision until he heard the brakes screech. The testimony of another defense witness, Mrs. Catherine Mulcahy, had stated that a few minutes after the accident Mrs. Pantages was not intoxicated, was discredited by two states rebuttal witnesses. They were district attorney's investigators, Jack Chris and Jesse Winn, who said Mrs. Mulcahy had told them she had been within a few inches of Mrs. Pantages' face and that "she was drunk." District Attorney Buron Fitts took a personal part in the trial today, addressing the court with a plea that the prosecution be allowed to reopen its case. Fitts asked that state medical experts might be called to testify as to the cause of death in a case such as described in the hypothetical question propounded by the defense yesterday. After Fitts' appeal, the court overruled the defense objection, allowing the state to re-open its case and call its medical experts to testify.

Police Decide Gang Kidnaping Frightened of Frightened Man

CHICAGO, Sept. 19 (AP)—A supposed gang kidnaping, which officers all day had expected would be supplemented by murder, was set down by police tonight as a mere frightening of a taxi driver's frightened imagination. The driver, Erwin Koler, had sped to a police station last night with a story of having seen an automobile forced to the curb by another car and of three men, armed with revolvers jumping out while the driver, with a sawed-off shotgun on his knees, remained at the wheel. The two occupants of the first machine were forced into the supposed gangster's car amid curses of "stool pigeon" and "squawker," Koler related, and one was hit on the head with a pistol when he protested. Sergeant Oris Callahan, leader of a detective squad, said he had stopped three Negroes in an automobile carrying a Michigan license at the same time Koler reported the kidnaping occurred. He questioned the trio and let them go. Police believe Koler saw the squad car stopped beside that of the Negroes and thought a kidnaping was taking place.

and that "she was drunk." District Attorney Buron Fitts took a personal part in the trial today, addressing the court with a plea that the prosecution be allowed to reopen its case. Fitts asked that state medical experts might be called to testify as to the cause of death in a case such as described in the hypothetical question propounded by the defense yesterday. After Fitts' appeal, the court overruled the defense objection, allowing the state to re-open its case and call its medical experts to testify.
