Montana Cattleman Leaves Harbor Grace in Airplane on Ocean Hop for London

Flyer Keeps Flight Secret Until Takeoff

Diteman, Billings, Mont. Thrill Canadians by Leaving

(By The Associated Press) A golden bird of the skies sailed over the North Atlantic Tuesday, in it a man of 40 who named his fragile craft after a staunch galion, Sir Francis Drake, whom he regards as a forebear—by blood, and apparently, adventure.

This new golden bird was a small monoplane and the new adventurer, who challenged sky as well as sea, was Urban F. Diteman, Jr., who took off without advance announcement from the airport of Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, "bound for London."

Two minutes after the takeoff at 12:45 p.m. (eastern standard time) this Montana livestock buyer landed over Cape St. Francis, 17 miles north of the airport, and disappeared in the east where Dr. James H. Kinnell of the New York weather bureau and unofficial starter for transatlantic flights said "fairly favorable" weather awaited him.

Diteman Leaves Note

Meanwhile back at the airport, 100 spectators who had regarded Diteman as a retiring person using an airplane in jugs around the country to look up records of Sir Francis for use in settlement of an estate in which he was interested, learned of a brief note in which the flyer announced he was "bound for London," and apologized "for so many impromptu lies."

"Many, many thanks, ye Newfoundlanders," he wrote. "Drake did not bring me here nor to London. Sorry if I hurt anyone's feelings. I meant no harm."

The note was signed "Dite." There was nothing more.

From other sources, however, a tale was pieced together and it filled in the gaps of the nonchalant flyer had left before he started in a tiny plane and only 165 gallons of gas on a flight of approximately 2,350 miles which had been dared previously only by planes much more powerful and much heavier fueled.

Wife Known of Flight

Mrs. Diteman in Billings, Mont., seemingly was the only person besides the pilot who knew of the adventure. She knew the takeoff was planned for yesterday, and she shared the confidence of her husband-airman for success.

"The ship was bought and altered with the crossing in view," Mrs. Diteman said, adding that her husband had been flying two years and a half since becoming interested in aviation in Portland, Ore., where his parents now live.

Previously uninformable as to the alterations of the craft, the father of Diteman's Barling low wing monoplane said the ship was not designed for such a long cruise and expressed surprise at the transatlantic start.

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, Oct. 22 (AP)—Moderately good weather prospects awaited Urban F. Diteman, Jr., tonight over most of Ireland. In the north it was fair, and along the coast from Galway to Cork it was showery and overcast with slight breezes but with visibility good.

A sharp watch was maintained along the coast for the American aviator who left Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, today.

Parents at Kingley Unable to Recover Claim for Damages

DES MOINES, Oct. 22 (AP)—Parents of Melvin Gale Dilley, Kingley boy who died from burns received when his kite became entangled in high voltage wires, found themselves unable to establish their claim for damages against the Iowa Public Service Co. The supreme court today affirmed the order of the Plymouth county court directing a verdict for the defendant.

The kite string used by the boy was made of copper wire. An ordinance of the town of Kingsley prohibited kite flying in the town. The transmission wires of the company carried 33,000 voltage current.

Painter Confesses Assault on Woman

CHICAGO, Oct. 22, (AP)—Arraigned today for assaulting and slaying a young woman, John Preston, painter who confessed the crime, entered a plea of not guilty and was held for trial next month.

Preston is charged with the murder of Agnes Johnston, 26, who was slain during a Saturday night party with Preston and a girl companion, Mathilda Murphy. Preston said he was drunk when he assaulted the girl and choked her to death because she tried to repulse him. He is married and his wife said he had been a "model husband." He is held without bail.

Cincinnati in Noisy Adieu to President

Hoover Praises Ohio River Channel in Address

S. S. GREENBRIER, En route to Louisville, Oct. 22 (AP)—President Hoover was steaming down the Ohio to Louisville in his trim little light-house tender tonight to signize with a speech in Louisville the improvement of the river for all year round traffic from Pittsburgh to the mouth.

He embarked at Cincinnati to the accompaniment of noisy salutations of hundreds of factory whistles along the wharfs, steamers on the river and horns from automobiles of the large crowd of citizens who had come down to bid him adieu.

As the president's flag of deep blue with its white eagle was hoisted above the river craft, a stiff biting wind swept over the valley and dashed a foaming spray across the boat's prow.

Praises Engineering Job

Declaring his pleasure to share in the dedication of the nine-foot channel to extend the entire length of the Ohio, President Hoover said the undertaking brought the "engineering mind" to the surface and permitted it to "luxuriate in appreciation of a great engineering job well done."

This new instrument of commerce," the president added, "from which untold blessings will come year after year, is an enduring monument to those patient men of my own profession whose lives are spent in devising means to increase the comfort and convenience of the world."

Pays Tribute to Barton

Hoover paid special tribute to Senator Burton, of Ohio, and Speaker Longworth for their services in projection of inland waterways.

"The engineers found the practical means," the president said, "but many others contributed to the vision, courage, and persistence needed to this accomplishment. Statesmen, river men and business men may share the glory."

At the conclusion of his speech the flag covering the marble shaft rising near the president was drawn aside, while the band struck up the Star Spangled banner. Mr. and Mrs. Hoover then motored to the Longworth home in Rockwood park for luncheon and later appeared for a short time at a luncheon given in the Gibson hotel by the Ohio Valley Improvement association.

Dry Chief Appointed Bootlegger to Office, Says U. S. Attorney

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (AP)—A story of how man described as a former bootlegger was appointed as a prohibition agent in South Carolina with the approval of Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt and Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews was related today to the senate patronage committee.

Taking up the first rate schedule of the Hawley-Smoot bill—that embracing chemicals, oils, and paints—the senate accepted by a vote of 45 to 33 a democratic amendment to cut 18 cents a pound the existing duty of 20 cents on medicinal tannic acid to ten cents.

Eleven other reductions in house chemical imposts were approved, but all were proposed by the finance committee majority.

The witness was J. D. E. Meyer, federal district attorney of Charleston. He said the purpose of the appointment was to "clean up" Berkley county, that G. D. McKnight, the man who was appointed, was the "king of the bootleggers" there, and that the country was known as the "hell hole" of the state.

When the appointment was announced, Mrs. Willebrandt was assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of prohibition enforcement. Neither is now in office.

As Meyer told the story, bootlegging was "rampant" in the country and it was decided that the way to "clean up" efficiently was to choose a man who was familiar with the situation. McKnight was selected as the "right man," he said.

Durant Will Lecture in Iowa City Oct. 29

Will Durant, lecturer and author of several books, will appear in Iowa City Saturday afternoon, Oct. 29. Mr. Durant lectured here Dec. 8, 1927 on "Is Progress a Reality?" Many persons now attending the university will remember his lecture.

The subject of the coming lecture has not yet been announced. Mr. Durant is the author of "The Story of Philosophy" which became the best selling non-fiction book in America within three weeks of its publication, and is still third on the list as it begins its third year.

CUSHING BANK ROBBED

CUSHING, Minn., Oct. 22, (AP)—Two bands today held up the Cushing State Bank, locked I. J. Ramlo, cashier, in the vault, and made off with $800, virtually all the cash in the bank. Ramlo escaped from the vault with the aid of a screwdriver, cord was taken.

Hundred Day Cabinet Under Briand Ended

Socialists, Marin, Win; No Successor for Briand Chosen

PARIS, Oct. 22 (AP)—The French cabinet, headed for the eleventh time by Aristide Briand, was overthrown in the chamber of deputies tonight less than three months after it had appeared before parliament and asked for a "three months truce" in internal politics in order to face the problems of the Hague reparations conference with security at home.

The "cabinet of the 100 days," as it was then called, went down by a vote of 288 to 277. Briand and his colleagues immediately resigned.

The defeat of the government, coming with astounding effect on the first day of parliament's reunion, was brought about by the votes of the radical socialists, and the right wing group led by Louis Marin, minister of pensions in a former Poincaré government.

Foreign Affairs Cause

It came over the demand of these parties for immediate discussion of foreign affairs, including especially the decisions taken at the Hague conference, the question of the evacuation of the Rhineland, and the negotiations between France and Germany on the Saar valley.

M. Briand, who wished to postpone this discussion until November, posed the question of confidence, staking the life of the government, on the rejection of the demand. The opposition proved too strong for his dwindling majority, weakened during the last few days by internal dissension.

Politicians Confused

The sudden ministerial crisis, involving the defection of groups heretofore supporting the Briand government but opposed to each other, confused even veteran politicians tonight. Observers could do no more than guess at who would be the next premier.

Sen. Harrison Attacks Reed

REED OUT OF RANK AS NAVAL DELEGATE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (AP)—Senator Harrison, democrat, Mississippi, said in the senate today that republicans or higher rank on the foreign relations committee who were equally as well versed in armament questions were "brushed aside" in the selection of Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, as one of the delegates to the naval limitations conference.

Harrison's remarks were prompted by the appearance of Senator Reed in the chamber as a vote was about to be taken on an opposition amendment to the tariff bill, and a plea by the Pennsylvanian for defeat of the proposal.

The Mississippi said the naval conference appointment evidently was "one to the head" of Reed.

Replying the Pennsylvania senator said he intended to point out each day who was "responsible" for delaying the tariff bill "even at the expense of a little personal vaporization."

High Price Legislation

WHAT a change is noticeable in legislators of today when compared with the patriots of the Revolutionary war time and even up to the Civil war period. During the early period of the country's history a position in the legislature was regarded as a sacred trust to be fulfilled with high-minded honesty and loyalty.

The early legislators were paid little or nothing. The nation could barely meet the foreign obligations and the men who guided our country through that period of stress worked, for the most part, free of charge, paying even their living expenses.

Nowadays, the legislature sees more and more steps being taken to capitalize on positions in its ranks. At the last session of the Iowa legislature the members sought to raise the salaries but were blocked by the constitutional provision which says that no legislature in session can raise the members' salaries for that term.

So expense accounts were allowed every member. And the cost of living and travel-immediately soared to the peak, if expense accounts are any criterion. The legislators were all equally active in putting in enormous bills for expenses and the taxpayers of the state suffered.

Congress is in session at Washington. The special session called for tariff revision and farm relief has done little up to date. Likely there will be nothing done before the session closes. The regular session opens in December. The problem confronting the special session today is not tariff so much as it is—"how to get the special session closed two weeks before the regular session opens in order that the members can collect mileage each way for a trip home"—regardless of whether they make the trip or not.

That is the trend of legislators today. Many instances could be cited of just such actions. The public waits patiently to see how big the bill will be.

Why Hawk Wings?

SOMEONE made the remark just the other day that every university student had broken into print at least once. In proof of his statement he referred dubious listeners to the student directory.

That kind of breaking into print, or even the mention of one's name in a newspaper, does not satisfy everyone.

There are students eager to do creative work, to have it printed, and to contribute, at the same time, a little to the enjoyment of others.

That is one true motive of everyone greatly interested in writing, whether in the newspaper and magazine field or in what may more properly be termed literature.

Some have the desire, an inward craving, but are unable to define it. They yearn to express themselves. Often they suffer from an "inferiority complex" in regarding their material unfit and hesitate to make the venture of transferring any of it into form for consumption by others.

Hawk Wings, university literary quarterly, provides an opportunity for student expression. Within its pages students have found themselves. They have produced short stories, poetry, and essay or sketch material. They have given their reactions to current novels and other books for the benefit of those who might care to read them.

Particularly have freshmen been encouraged, in cooperation with the English department. Selections from the best freshman writing are printed in a special section of Hawk Wings to encourage participation of first year students in campus literature.

Unlike similar publications in the midwest, Hawk Wings does not invite contributions from without the student body for which it is intended to afford expression. Students and they alone make the magazine. It is theirs, to write for and to read.

As a campus interpretation of literature and life, Hawk Wings is worthy of continued support from those in whose interest it is published.

The Dance Is Done

VACILLATING in politics but steady in love—so Maria Conesa, "mistress of Mexico."

Even the most romantic extravaganza ends; the curtain lowers the dance is done. The "mistress of Mexico" has been exiled. Exit "the beautiful one," the great dancer, whose fiery smiles and sinuating hips have moulded Mexican history for 20 years and many administrations.

In 1907 Maria Conesa quit the quiet arid reaches of her homeland in Spain. Without money, without "pull," she came, with only a pair of scintillating feet and a bold heart to seek her fortune in the theaters of Mexico.

She danced as no seniorita had ever danced before; she sang as no seniorita had ever dared to sing before. She won her fortune, and with it a place in the heart of Mexico that she held up to the day of her exile: the place of "the power behind the throne." For the "Little White Cat"—so they called her—became a vital political force in the turbulent republic. All the more permanently vital because with each fork of the diplomatic stream, Maria forked with the current.

She was loved as no seniorita was ever loved—duels, deaths, intrigues testify to that adoration—but she did not return love, like the wily politician she was, until she met Gen. Jose Alvarez. Then she loved Alvarez was a smuggler of silks. Naughty Alvarez!

He was arrested. So too was Maria, as his accomplice. Today she is exiled—and resigned. There is no forking in Maria's river of love.

The Modern Version

TIMES have changed. Years ago when a bank run was on, according to the approved wild west "thriller" formula, a messenger on horseback would whirl up in a cloud of dust with the bags of money just as the despairing cashier was paying out the last dollar. The bank officials would shout "It's come," the depositors would cheer, and the line would reform at the deposit window again.

Years went by and the automobile took the place of the horse in the transaction but the general idea and the important details remained the same. The messenger still arrived in a cloud of dust, the bank officials still shouted, and the depositors still cheered.

But at Taylorville, Ill., last week, they took the whole occasion out of the movies and staged it in real life—with trimmings. After runs had forced the other three banks in the town to close and the fourth bank was reaching the end of its cash resources, bags of money were sent by airplane from the federal reserve bank at Chicago, arriving in the nick of time.

And true to the old movie "thriller," the bank officials shouted, "It's come," the depositors cheered, and the line reformed to deposit the money again. Probably the airplane even managed to stir up a cloud of dust when it landed.

But the bank officials probably weren't thinking about their typical "thriller" situation when they heard the plane droning overhead; they were probably much too busy being thankful that someone had invented airplanes.

The Next Step

TWO PERSONS spent many minutes driving up one side of Iowa Avenue and down the other trying to locate Dodge Street. Failing to discern the markings on the curbing they began to turn up the cross-streets in order, traveling several blocks until they were able to discover a legible marking. If they were on the wrong street they would drive to the next cross-street and begin again the search for a discernible marker. After several such procedures they found themselves on Dodge Street.

Perhaps it is more economical in city finance to paint street markings upon the curbing, but should persons not familiar with the layout of Iowa City streets be forced to use such process of elimination in locating a desired street? In an era where time seems as important as it is today the waste of minutes is contrary to the principle of efficiency.

The opening of the repaired bridge across the Iowa River on Park Avenue is a step toward city improvement. Will street markers placed in more conspicuous places and where accumulated leaves and scraping wheels will not obliterate the letters be the next step forward?

Know Your Port

AN OFT QUOTED PASSAGE, "To him that knoweth not the port to which he is bound no wind can be favorable," might be applicable in the case of university students. Most of us have been equipped with brains and the power to use them, but a few poor souls were sadly neglected when brains were passed around.

It should be everyone's concern to make the most of his gifts, and not hide his light under a bushel. Set a goal and then steer for it straight and true. That seems to be the best method of achievement.

Dabbling around here, there, and everywhere seldom gives one any great measure of success. It's the knitter who works on her own particular garment who has the best looking finished product. One loses valuable time when constantly shifting courses. After port is safely reached chart another course and carry on.

Don't be satisfied with anything short of the best. Study your case. Work out a specific plan. Organize your forces. Trim your sails. "When the port is known and the best and safest course is charted, the chances are that all winds will be favorable."

Not much more time would be used if students would make more effort to use the front steps. They were put there to use. Class tardiness might then be avoided. Winter colds, easily contracted in crowds, might be avoided.

CHILLS AND FEVER

And what a Homecoming was it! The editor has been raving over the phone since late Saturday night because copy for this column was not forthcoming, but—Homecoming comes but once a year, and what is a poor column conductor to do?

Anyway, here we come, riding on threats of being fired, canned, or, as the ed. himself expressed it, "Kicked out the door and out of the county."

An After-Homecoming Essay—

Dear Doc:

Why do all co-eds (girls, seniors, etc.) refuse to date us Quadranglers? The only dates we can get are with PI Phis, and—Maybe you could help us to some culture, (if you can't help us get that why B. U. is just as good). In your spare time you could give a course in nine and one-fourth lessons in the lounge room. Now that the Ranch is in politics and society (referring to the election), some of us need to become cultured. If you could have who ever caused Roland White to become so cultured come over here, we might make some improvement. The only cultured person now in the Quad is Dana Spear of Charles City, and we all want to be like he is, so gentle and refined.

Yours for culture,
—Black Sheep of the Quadrangle.

P.S. Also enclose booklet on how to tell your roommate that he has halitosis. (Your best friend wont tell you.)

Well, everything was perfect for a perfect Homecoming. Who could have devised better weather except the weatherman who was on duty last Saturday?

Rain... not just one squall or shower, but a series of unexpected outbursts all day and night... kept everyone in good humor... something to remember the day by... and why not?

We're quite outfit ourselves over this weekend, to be certain, but some of the boys from Chicago were here, as well as a couple of the lads from northeastern Iowa, and when boys get together, they will be boys.

"Cry and His Diary"

We have with us "Cry" who writes most delightfully in sophomore English style, such as this:

The drug store boys were whooping it up;

There was Jim and Fred and Willy;

All were going full blast that night;

On good old soprano.

Have You Read:

"Women as I Have Seen Them?"

It's a delightfully refreshing work by Violet Ray.

Well, quit squawking. We had a good time over Homecoming and even if we did miss two days with the old column, we're back, and now watch us go...

LIBRARY SERVICE BEGINS

An inter-library messenger service has been inaugurated in the university library system this fall. The service provides for the transportation of books and periodicals from one library to another, as they are loaned out, and collecting books for repairing and rebinding. Each library is visited four times during the week.

"THE MASKED HOSTESS"

by Blair Stevenson

What has gone before:

An abandoned Long Island estate, "The Firs," is the only inheritance Nathalie Van Slack finds left by her once wealthy sportsman father. Repulsed by her rich aunt, Mrs. Swayne, Nathalie, in desperation, cashes a check with no funds in the bank. Nathalie agrees to act as hostess to a South American, Capt. Ramon Stefano, who has taken over "The Firs" supposedly to entertain his wealthy friends, on condition that she remain masked and her identity secret. John Sloan, young lawyer, has fallen in love with Nathalie. Without her knowledge he has made good the false check. He warns her of this strange venture. Neither of them knows that Stefano is being financed by Ferris, a New York ex-exploitation man, who wishes to obtain possession of "The Firs." Long Islands wealthiest attend the opening of "The Firs" and are intrigued by the Masked Hostess. None of her friends recognize her. Nathalie, fascinated by the handsome Stefano, finds herself in his arms. Mrs. Swayne learns of Stefano's adventure, and Ferris, likewise irritated, questions Stefano about the Masked Hostess. Stefano is warned to look out for Nathalie.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Mercifully for Sylvia Swayne and Monty Delaine, Mrs. Pemberton Swayne had not seen her daughter's sudden capitulation to John Barleycorn.

She was busy "checking up," as Monty said she would be. When Stefano saw her when he came indoors again she was talking to Nathalie and Nathalie was answering in brief sentences. What was visible of Nathalie's face below her mask was expressionless.

The master of the house will spend two days, principally He is in the oil and coal business and falls to profit transferred to her.

"You are a genius, Captain Stefano," she said. "Your party is adorable."

In a sense she meant this. As the party was entirely of her creating it was of course adorable. As to his genius she was prepared to concede that in him, because coming to the house in the conviction that the masked hostess, who received with him in it, might be some high born South American whom he would acknowledge as his affianced some night after she had laid aside her mask she had become convinced after talking to Nathalie that Nathalie was not a person of sort and dignity.

She was not in on the secret of Stefano's reduced financial state.

So since she was not in the secret either of her own daughter's secret engagement to land poor Monty Delaine, she was more than ready to be gracious to Stefano and reinstate him in her mind as a potential son-in-law vastly worth while.

She asked him if he was not going to dance with her.

"From the stars, of course—how kind and chivalrous. But nevertheless one knows, you nice person. For since one does not speak Spanish, and meeting no success in English, one spoke to her in French, and when she replied in atrocious French one knew."

Nathalie's atrocious French—she spoke French beautifully—had been sheer inspiration and her salvation.

Mrs. Swayne dropped the topic of the masked hostess.

"And oh, yes, about my dear niece. Poor child, since her father's tragic death she has grown strange and sensitive and flew at me when she was at Southampton and then went away without telling me where. I have tried to find her but have no trace of her. She is hiding somewhere with some friends of course—probably some one she knew abroad.

It was really she who brought me here tonight, for of course you will tell me who. I can find her since she is your tenant here and must be in communication with her."

Stefano shook his head and explained that the lease he had had been made him by a received and through a market.

"Really?" said Mrs. Swayne. "How baffling she is. Like her father, who was also difficult to deal with. But let us have courage. Do you remember at Southampton you said to us that you had once seen her dance at a masquerade at San Sebastian—or was it Blarritz?—and would know her anywhere again? But, of course you do. Just a while ago you spoke of it again when you insisted she and I danced alike—that it ran in our blood. Some night she may accompany friends here and you will recognize her at once!"

Mrs. Swayne's eyes drifted after a girl in sage green dancing by with a falconer in scarlet. And Stefano chanced to look across the room.

He saw Nathalie with her harlequin—an instantly, by her slender feet, and her supple grace of body, and her turn of neck, and the poise of her lovely head, he knew her for who she was.

"Oh, yes, you do. She's marvelous. What I'm trying to say and you insist on making it difficult for me, because your blood is Spanish and you're chivalrous—"

Mrs. Swayne spoke in French: "What you're trying to prevent my saying is that it would have been unkind of you to have brought a girl of any social stamp in here to help you pique society. And it would have been unkind. If, for instance, you had induced some one who was actually a lady to put her dire need of money above her pride of station and help you with this delightful Latin jest of yours. But instead of that you were kind. Where did you get her really—through some agency?"

"Indeed," and Stefano assumed a mysterious look. "She just dropped in. Wasn't it extra-ordinary?" He did not resent anything she had said or intimated. He believed, now that he knew she had "put over" the masked party, that she had done it out of unmixed feminine curiosity and was talking to trip him into an identification of his hostess by compelling him to defend her.

He did not know that Nathalie, who had recognized her aunt by her voice, had been trembling with the fright she felt.

And she had deceived Mrs. Swayne completely. Else Mrs. Swayne, in whose pride of family ran high, could never have spoken her next few words, still in French, in her voice still low in pitch.

Iowa Gridders Drill in Drizzle for Badger Game at Madison Saturday

Ingwersen to Work Team for Wisconsin

Two Reserve Players to Take Place With Varsity Squad

Hawkeye football aspirants coasted through yesterday's workout in a dismal drizzle. Coach Ingwersen was still dissatisfied with the mediocre showing of his varsity backfield, and borrowed two ball carriers from the "B" team. The Hawks are pointing to the game with Wisconsin at Madison Saturday.

Sew Leeka, passing ace, replaced Bill Glassgow at halfback during part of the drill, and Bud Weller, another reserve, answered the call for another back position. Capt. Bill Glassgow is still nursing an injured leg and was kept out of the active scrimmage.

Brice Thomas, veteran fullback, returned to the lineup yesterday after being kept out of Monday's drill on account of injury sustained to his shoulder in the tilt with the Illini Saturday. Nanny Tipe, flashy half and John Fuhrman, veteran guard, watched the practice in civilian clothes. The pair are involved in new charges of professionalism.

At the Badger camp, Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite believes he has a solidified on one of his reserves backs. Tu-earned a regular berth in the Wisconsin backfield as a result of his showing against Notre Dame Saturday.

ry-Oman, the flying Finn, Oman

Day. Oman will supplement Ernie Bill Lushy and Russ Rebolz as first choice for the running halfback position.

The Badger mentor had reason to feel gloomy in the practice Monday. Three of his guards and an end candidate were on the hospital list. The guards are Armin Laer, Jack Linden, and Henry Hardt. Hardt, especially, was depended upon for the Iowa game.

Capt. Johnny Parks, Al Liehan and Ed Swiderski are the only able guards left on the squad. Milton Skenein is the end who is on the hospital roll.

IRVIN'S FRESH GRID TEAM BEATS HUSKIES

Lesley Irvin's freshman warriors proved to be better than Wayne Sniedes' huskies preliminary to Thursday's titular contest. The Warrior attack was smoother and more consistent. The attack of the Huskies was spasmodic and their passes fell all over the field.

Irvin's faction will rely on line plays to get places, while rely on Shields goal for Thursday's clash.

The latter had an entirely different team in the field, changed primarily for the sake of speed.

The Huskies plan to unloose a passing attack, to which they have devoted considerable time. A. Rogers Bush of Clinton, Don Clark of Dallas City, Ill., Pat Richter of Broken Arrow, Okla., took turns at leaving the ball down to waiting ends and backs.

"Spike" Nelson was engaged in teaching Badger plays to his group, which will be turned loose against the Ingwersen clan this afternoon.

Hawkeye Coach Opens Basketball Year With Practice

"The 1929 basketball prospects are anything but gloomy!" Coach Rollie Williams, Iowa cager mentor said yesterday. "When I look over the material that is piling in this week from last year's fives, I feel confident we've got some mighty stout bums in store for our competitors this season."

With six years as assistant to Sam Barry, Williams enters his first year as head cage mentor this fall. Ten years ago Rollie saw his first service as a University of Iowa coach. Before this he was a guard in the scrappy Wisconsin five of 1920, fighting hard to discourage the all too accurate shooting of Aubrey Devine, George Froehling and Shimke.

During his remaining two years on the Wisconsin campus, he continued as guard on the Badger five, taking permanent possession of a berth as halfback on the varsity eleven and playing several positions on the base ball diamond.

He came to the Hawkeye stronghold following a successful year as head basketball coach at Millikan, Ill. In addition to his cage work Rollie also assists Bert Ingwersen with his first string backfield. Lawrence "Pops" Harrison will work as Rollie's assistant for the year.

Among the men who have reported to Coach Williams from last year's varsity and reserve teams are Leska, reserve center last year, and Benson who will battle him for that position this season. Although Benson has never been under fire in any conference game, Rollie expects things of him during the coming months.

Spradling and Plunkett, who alternated at forward opposite Two-gold last season, are out again, in addition to Nelson and Rogge candidates for the same berths.

Williamson, Figg and Eshleman have also shown up in search of forward positions. The list of guards look well, with Capt. David, Kinman and Reinhardt working out. Reinhardt has had no experience in conference battles, but is also expected to make a good showing. Farroh and Jebens will be with the squad as soon as the football season ends.

No check has been made on the freshman turnout yet. However, Coach Skien will take charge of them.

Frosh Swimmers Improve; Liddle to Lose His Tonsils

Coach Armbruster combined work with play during the freshman swimming practice yesterday, holding contests in the fundamentals of swimming on which he has drilled the frosh for the last five weeks. The schedule included a short limbering up on lane, 12 starts and turns, 80 yards on the kicking boards, and a brisk 100 yards to finish up.

Among the frosh who show considerable improvement in the three weekly workouts are: Bovine, Nielsen, Meyers, Tompkins, and Fowler.

Old man sickness will cast his shadow among the ranks of the varsity tank team this weekend when Boyd Liddle, crawl stroke ace, will undergo a tonsil operation. Iowa's high point man was seriously handicapped last season by tonsils, being in the hospital for a week and underweight all season.

WENDELL TO COACH

OMAHA, Oct. 22 (AP)—Pete Wendell, swimming instructor at Nicholas Semple Hospital here and the promoter of many midwest swimming contests, has been named coach of the Creighton university tank squad, it was announced late today.

Naming a swimming coach at Creighton means that the university will be represented by a tank team in all Missouri Valley conference meets, school officials said.

Chilly Weather Hits Big Ten; Peters Injured in Iowa Tilt

CHICAGO, Oct. 22 (AP)—Bitterly cold winds, a snowstorm and reports that Iowa may lose Oran Pape through ineligibility, failed to cause Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite of Wisconsin, to deviate from his program of preparation from the Hawkeyes Saturday and he sent his squad through a long scrimmage today.

Already ranked as one of the biggest disappointments of the season, the Wisconsin squad and its coaches, are sparing no efforts to come back, sparing defeats by Northwestern and Notre Dame. Badger freshmen, equipped with Iowa plays, were unable to gain against the varsity today, and the latter using its new plays, ripped the yearlings apart for long advances with the ball carriers.

Michigan spent another afternoon in Yost field house because of rain. Coach Kipke concentrated on two backfields, which he indicated would be alternated against Illinois Saturday.

The Illini listened to bad news in the form of a doctor's report that Forrest Peters received a fractured rib in the Iowa game and will not play against Michigan. Coach Zuppke inserted Mills at quarterback and started on a hunt for more punting talent.

Northwestern was let off with a signal drill for the regulars and a slightly longer workout for substitutes who probably will do the bulk of the playing Saturday. The Wildcats have scheduled a game with the Notre Dame reserves, making their program for Saturday a doubleheader, with Wabash the other attraction. Ohio State continued to participate in the practice because of an injury to his leg.

Minnesota and Indiana also worked outdoors in the chilly weather. The Gophers working on defensive stuff, and the Hoosiers going back to the A-B-C's of football—

University Hi Star Returns

Gloom that has been hanging over the U. high football camp since Monday, lifted when Ed Lenz, first string center, turned out for practice last evening. Lenz had been reported as having had an operation for appendicitis, due to the fact that he was not in school Monday. With the return of Lenz, Prayhl, who was being groomed to handle the pivot position went back to his regular bat at guard.

The performance which the backfield men turned in last night was very pleasing to Coach Hand as they went through their paces with true mid-season form, in far the most creditable manner in which they have performed so far this season. Captain Thomas has taken over the duty of calling signals and will probably hold the job for the remainder of the year.

The line took the usual work out in blocking and tackling, under assistant Coach "Bob" Pollock, who is whipping the line material into some semblance of an impregnable forward wall, to check the onslaughts of Tipton's flashy backfield.

The work of the line on defense which has been one of the chief worries of the Blue and White mentor, is beginning to show signs of improvement, and this together with the return of Lenz, is creating an optimistic atmosphere in university high's grid wigwam.

BOOKMAKERS RAIDED

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Oct. 22 (AP)—Rackets seized Monday by Sheriff Percy A. Lainson in raids on alleged race track gambling centers disclosed that Council Bluffs was a branch of a "bookmaking ring" operated from New York to San Francisco and from New Orleans to Montana.

Whitney Petty, Eddie Barrick, D. W. Young, and Harry Calloway, all of Omaha, who were arrested in the raids were released today on $1,000 bonds following their arraignment on charges of race pool selling.

BOONE, Iowa, Oct. 22, (AP)—Harry Goodrich, Y.M.C.A. secretary here for four years, resigned today to take a similar position at Oskaloosa. He formerly was with the Des Moines Y.M.C.A.

With the scalps of Keokuk and Fairfield tucked under their belt, as a result of last week's triangular meet at Keokuk, University high's hill and dale men are pointing for their dual with Muscatine, which will be run over the Finkbine field course Friday afternoon.

Although the down river meet was almost a walkaway for the Blue and White harriers, they expect stronger competition from Muscatine, reported to have a fast outfit. However, as in last week's meet U high had at least a moral edge over Muscatine by reason of its victory last year.

Coach M. F. Carpenter will run the same men that were entered in the triangular, together with several of his reserves. The men who ran last week were, Herbert and Homer Dill, Van Epps, Van Phillips, McGinnis, Wood and Hebet. Herbert Dill finished second, and with the nose.

TILLIE THE TOILER—Lost Beyond Finding

To, the Poor Athlete of This Day

Lo, the poor athlete who nowadays must face the rigors of amateur status investigation and the uncertainty of eligibility. One day the leading football star is out of the game, the next he is ready for competition again, and on another day he is accused of accepting filthy lucre for his services. No college in the country today is without this situation, Lo coming in for more than its share.

All growing of what seems to be a foolish and futile attempt to draw a distinct line between amateurism and professionalism. What constitutes professionalism is easily determined but who is an amateur, why your guy is as good as anyone's. Amateurism, usually defined as a private participation in sport (money a thing unheard of), seems to be more secretive while the press regarded by college officials, as far as the high standards of clean athletics, are openly frank in admission of their rank.

Why struggle along with this constant irritation between professionals and, when a single standard would do very much in the way of alleviating this shifting status of players? Why not pay the athletes by furnishing tuition, room, and board—a cost which in no way would cut deeply into the enormous sums realized from their performance for the dear old Alma Mater? The freshman rule takes care of the tramp athlete type and the recent Big Ten ruling which declares ineligible any athletes transferring from competition at another school to any of the conference schools. That eliminates the "loading up" practices to which some colleges have been guilty. Of course, the scholastic rules would still be effective and the athlete, failing in his studies, deserves his disbarment from competition for a failure to work, rather than for some violation of a high moral standard amateur code that is cloaked with suspicion.

Alexander in Wrong Again

News dispatches Monday night carried a brief story about the arrest of one Grover C. Alexander for intoxication. Alexander, more popularly termed the "scapegoat" of the St. Louis Cardinals lost his pitching job with the National team because of his bad record for tipping. It made much ado about his training methods which, in some way, did not affect his establishing excellent records, yet he found that sauce for the gander is not sauce for the Drake cinder track, scene of some of America's greatest track and field performances, will be completely rebuilt for the 1930 relays? The track, with a new drainage system, will be faster than it has been for years, so say the officials.

That pro football is drawing big crowds in New York this fall? What's Red Grange?

That the Badgers have a back by the name of Oman in their backfield? Wonder if they'll nickname him, "Hi" Oman, in case he wrecks up the opposing lines?

It started in the first game," Dykes said, "it got to be so hot in the next four games that before the start of the fifth game Judge Landis called Connie Mack and Joe McCarthy into a conference.

Judge Landis informed the two managers that if any ball player was caught using profanity he would lose his share of the world series money. Also that if the player could not be detected, the manager of that player would have to leave the field for the remainder of the game."

MCCARTHY CHUCKLES AT DYKES' STATEMENT

BUFFALO, N. C., Oct. 22 (AP)—Joe McCarthy, manager of the Chicago Cubs, laughed tonight when shown a dispatch from Philadelphia in which Jimmy Dykes, third baseman of the Philadelphia Athletics, was quoted as having said in an address to the Delaware county real estate board that the Athletics knew all the Cubs' pitching signals and knew just what sort of a ball the pitcher was to throw to the batter.

"That's a curious statement for a supposedly sensible ball player to make before a lot of intelligent men," said McCarthy, "but if the A's had our signals, how is it they didn't score a run in the last game until the ninth inning and why did they wait until the seventh inning in that 10 to 8 game before they got men across the plate."

will use as exhibition material in his classes.

Coach Kennett is the eldest of eight brothers, all of whom are prominent American golf pros, and all of whom learned the Scotch game from "Charlie." "Charlie" himself has played since he was eight years old, serving as golf pro in England for the greater part of his life. Robert Wilton will take charge of all golf classes and tournaments during his absence.

SONNENBERG HURT

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 22 (AP)—Gus Sonnenberg, world heavyweight wrestling champion, appeared at the Central police station today with a profusely bleeding nose and claimed Pete La Djon, a wrestler, beat him during an argument of a downtown street corner.

Sonnenberg said he met L. A. Djon to discuss his employment by the champion as a training partner.

Coach M. F. Carpenter will run the same men that were entered in the triangular, together with several of his reserves. The men who ran last week were, Herbert and Homer Dill, Van Epps, Van Phillips, McGinnis, Wood and Hebet. Herbert Dill finished second, and with the nose.

Mandell, McLarnin Sign to Box Nov. 4

CHICAGO, Oct. 22 (AP)—Sammy Mandell, ruler of the lightweight, and Jimmy McLarnin, Irish slugger from Vancouver, B. C., today signed with Promoter Paddy Harmon, for the 10 round feature bout at Chicago's stadium Nov. 4.

Mandell's title will not be involved, as they will meet at 145 pounds. It will be their second meeting. Mandell having beaten the coast slugger in New York more than a year ago, when McLarnin attempted to lift the lightweight crown.

On the same card Otto Von Porat,

Norwegian heavyweight, will make his first appearance since returning from Europe, in a 10 round bout with Charlie Smith, the latest British heavyweight importation.

HAGENLACHER IN LEAD

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (AP)—Erie Hagenlacher of Germany, increased his lead today over Welker Cochran of Hollywood, in their 3,650 point 18.2 balkline billiards match.

After losing the fourth block this afternoon, Hagenlacher defeated Cochran, 300 to 175, tonight to bring his total points to 1,200 against 855 for the Californian.

On the same card Otto Von Porat,

WEARING THE GREEN

Just now Glenn F. Hoeffing of Marion is coveting on the football field every evening with the freshman squad, but five or six years from now he hopes to be in the ring, flashing his fistive wares.

Hoeffing established some kind of an endurance record during the course of his prep career. He played every minute of every one of Marion high school's games for three years. All-state honorable mention was accorded him in football his last year.

He has the habit, which the coaches will probably have to break him of, of putting only one hand on the ball while playing center instead of using both hands.

Glenn confesses a weakness for boxing. Although he failed to divulge any definite information about his ring ambitions, he did tell us he plans to become a boxer after leaving school.

Smedes picked Hoeffing to pilot his crew of Huskies, but since his showing in that game, Glenn has been elevated to Vogel's group working against the varsity.

Catholic Talks on Sect Ideas

Discusses Prejudices of Two Religions

"What Catholics think of Protestants," a talk on the differences between the two religious sects, was given by the Rev. John E. Ross, Catholic professor and associate administration director of the school of religion, before the weekly luncheon meeting of the Iowa City Kiwanis club yesterday at the Red Ball Inn.

Father Ross told of an experimental test conducted by the Inquiry organization of New York at the home of Prof. Carlton Hayes, dean of the history department of Columbia university, with a group of Catholics to determine the chief prejudices against Protestants. This test was modeled after an experiment called the Fairchild test, formerly conducted by the Inquiry organization among a group of Protestants.

The test was composed of three parts. The first was on the reaction of the subject upon seeing certain religious terms. The second was a test in sociology and the third the reaction of the subject upon a list of assertions Catholics are popularly supposed to make concerning Protestants.

As a result of these tests, Father Ross stated, it was found that the point of greatest friction between the two beliefs lay in a difference of opinion concerning their relationship of church and state in all matters, which did not infringe on the grounds or duties of the other, make for prejudice against Protestants opinion, which sanctions the support of political religious speeches and such organizations as the anti-saloon league.

Following Father Ross' speech, a short talk was given by Henry K. Peterson of Council Bluffs, former governor of the Iowa-Nebraska district of the Kiwanis club. He was introduced by Prof. F. C. Ensign.

Guests at the luncheon were: William B. Stoddard of Carbondale, Pa., with George D. Stoddard; L. L. Jacobs of Cedar Rapids; with H. J. Dane; Dr. J. M. Jones of Shelby, with W. E. Beck, and Mrs. J. A. Anderson, Mrs. S. L. Updegraff, and Mrs. C. L. Palmer, who were guests of their husbands.

Pupils of Five Iowa City Schools Drink Milk Daily

More than 16 gallons of milk per day are consumed by 257 pupils in five Iowa City schools during school hours. A half-pint of milk is offered each morning at 10:30, mainly for undernourished students, but available for all who wish to drink it.

Shimek, Lincoln, Henry Sabin, Kirkwood, and Horace Mann schools already offer the morning milk diet and Longfellow will begin the servings next week. But 15 cents per cup is asked of the pupils taking the milk and undernourished pupils unable to afford that amount are cared for by the city school system.

Henry Sabin has conducted the "milk for health" campaign for 11 years, and at present has 112 out of 263 pupils drinking their milk every school day.

The highest percentage of buyers is enrolled at Shimek school, where 13 pupils out of the 17 enjoy the milk.

Lincoln school accommodates 31 children out of 25 enrolled.

At Kirkwood school 12 out of 48 take time each morning to drink their nourishment. Horace Mann, with a total enrollment of 330, serves only 88.

After the completion of physical examinations this week, the milk ration will be required for those children who are underweight and generally encouraged as a beneficial measure for all. The cold weather is expected by the school principals to increase the number of children drinking milk.

Women's Club Art Class Does Work With Pictures, Clay

The business and professional women's club art class last evening worked on mounted pictures, plaques, and with clay. When these are completed each member of the class will select a particular phase of art work which appeals to her.

The dancing class of the club will meet tonight at 7:30 at Youde's Inn. "Swede" Jensen will continue his instruction in ball room dancing.

Work on Templin Bridge Continues

Work, begun Oct. 16, on widening the arch of the Templin road urban bridge is continuing and the cement work is expected to be completed this fall despite indications of cold weather. A steam shovel and dump wagons and trucks are removing the dirt and timbers beneath the tracks for a distance of 20 to 30 feet on each side of the arch.

Templin road is closed during the widening process and traffic to west side fraternity houses and Manville heights is being routed over Wool avenue or Park bridge.

Senate Plans Wider Inquiry

Lobby Committee Starts Fishery Probe

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (AP)—Preparing to broaden its inquiry, the senate lobby committee today empha-ed a special investigator and attorney, John Holland, who assisted Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, in unravelling the Teapot Dome scandal.

The day's session revolved principally about the activities of the Atlantic coast fisheries corporation to secure a reduction in the tariff on fish in the bill now before the senate.

There was considerable scattered selling during the day by traders, who though thoroughly frightened, managed to hold their stocks through yesterday's ordeal, and welcomed the upturn to get rid of them at higher prices. During the last hour of trading, the earlier gains were rather generally curtailed.

Unitarian Ministers to Exchange Pulpits

Rev. James H. Hart, minister of the Unitarian church on the University of Wisconsin campus will exchange pulpits with Rev. Rupert Holloway of the Iowa City Unitarian church Sunday, Oct. 27.

The subject of the visiting minister will be "The Truth About Gastonia," an analysis of the flare-up and epidemic of strikes in the southern cotton fields.

Oregon Historian to Study at Iowa

Dr. Dan E. Clark, head of the extension division and professor of history at the University of Oregon, accompanied by his wife and children, is making a brief visit to Iowa City while on his way to Washington, D. C., where he will spend several weeks in research of the history of the westward movement. Dr. Clark had been expected to require about two and a half hours and the additional time made it impossible that the case would go to the jury before late tomorrow afternoon or Thursday morning.

Before court recessed for the day Justice William Hiltz announced that the defense would have an hour tomorrow to conclude. Owen J. Roberts, special government counsel expects to require at least two hours in closing the prosecution arguments.

Hogan interpreted the evidence as showing that Fall had little to do with the negotiations of the Pearl Harbor contract and Elk Hills lease. He contended the contract and its preferential clause had never been thought of at the time Fall received $100,000 from Doheny. The government charges the plan was conceived at the time Fall got the money.
