Psycho-Analyzing Scrooge

"A Merry Christmas, uncle!" "Bah!" said Scrooge. "Humbbug!" Scrooge—a wheezing, wrenching, grasping, scraping, clutching, covetous old sinner! Why did he warn all human sympathy to keep its distance? What made him turn against Christmas and close up like an oyster? Can we learn a truth of our own nature from Scrooge? Rev. Rupert Holloway gives a new interpretation of "A Christmas Carol" (revealing Dickens as a psychologist) at the Unitarian church, Sunday, 10:45 a.m.

MOSES JUNG TO SPEAK Moses Jung, Jewish professor at the university school of religion, will speak Sunday at 6:30 p.m. at the Christian church on the question, "Does religion tend to make one narrow minded?"

Falk Ousts the "Flu"

TO A YOUNG scientist of the medical world, humanity owes a great debt. Dr. Isidore S. Golden Rule Week

THE OLD so-called "sob stories" of little children who each night go to bed hungry seem quite unthinkable in this day and age. But with the observance of Golden Rule week, Dec. 8-15, we learn that famine is not as unknown to child life as we may believe.

Another Marriage Solution

QUITE refreshing in this day of marital unrest is the statement of a Chicago scholar who has made an extensive study of the marriage problem that common sense romance is a winning marriage combination.

cessity of a spirit of compromise might teach the modern youth how to better himself in the bonds of holy wedlock. It will be quite edifying to watch his classes, if they are ever begun, and to note their effect on stabilizing the fluctuating value of marriage.

ALL QUIET on the WESTERN FRONT

By Erich Maria Remarque

The silence spreads. I talk and must talk. I speak to him and say to him: "Comrade, I did not want to kill you. If you jumped in here again, I would not do it. If you would be sensible too. But you were only an idea to me before, an abstraction that lived in my mind and called forth its appropriate response. It was that abstraction I stabbed. But now, for the first time, I see you are a man like me. I thought of your handgrenades, of your bayonet, of your rifle; now I see your face and your face and our fellowship. Forgive me, comrade. We always see it too late. Why do they never tell us that you are just poor devils like us, that your mothers are just as anxious as ours, and that we have the same fear of death, and the same dying and the same agony—Forgive me, comrade; how could you be my enemy? If we threw away these rifles and this uniform you could be my brother just like Kat and Albert. Take 20 years of my life, comrade, and stand up—take more, for I do not know what I can even attempt to do with it now."

It is quiet, the front is still except for the crackle of rifle-fire. The bullets rain over, they are not fired haphazard, but steadily aimed from all sides. I cannot get out.

"I will write to your wife," I say hastily to the dead man, "I will write to her, she must hear it from me. I will tell her everything I have told you, she shall not suffer. I will help her, and your parents too, and your child—"

His tunic is half open. The pocketbook is easy to find. But I hesitate to open it. In it is the book with his name. So long as I do not know his name perhaps I may still forget him, time will obliterate it, this picture. But his name, it is a nail that will be hammered into me and never come out again. It has the power to recall this forever. It will always come back and stand before me.

Irresolutely I take the wallet in my hand. It slips out of my hand and falls open. Some pictures and letters drop out. I gather them up and want to put them back again, but the strain I am under, the uncertainty, the hunger, the danger, confused me. I want to hasten the relief, to intensify and to end the torture, as one strikes an unendurable painful hand against the trunk of a tree regardless of everything.

There are portraits of a woman and a little girl, small amateur photographs taken on an ivy-clad wall. Along with them are letters. I take them out and try to read them. Most of it I do not understand. It is so hard to decipher and I know scarcely any French. But each word I translate pierces me like a stab in the chest—like a stab in the chest.

My brain is taxed beyond endurance. But I realize this much, that I will never dare to write to these people as I intended. Impossible. I look at the portraits once more; they are clearly not rich people. I might send them money anonymously if I earn anything later on. I seize upon that, it is at least something to hold on to. This dead man is bound up with my life, therefore I must do everything, promise everything to hold on to. This dead man swears bitterly that I mean to live only for his sake and his family, with wet lips I try to placate him—and deep down in me lies the hope that I may buy myself off in this way and perhaps even yet get out of this; it is a little straw. If only I am allowed to escape, then I will see to it. So I open the book and read slowly—Gerard Duval, compositor.

With the dead man's pencil I write the address on an envelope then swiftly thrust everything back into his tunic.

I have killed the printer, Gerard Duval. I must be a printer, I think confusedly, to be a printer, printer—passes. "Comrade," I say to the dead man, but I say it calmly, "today you, tomorrow, me. But if I come out of it, comrade, I will fight against this, that has struck us both; from you, taken life—and from me—? life, also. I promise you, comrade. It shall never happen again."

The sun strikes low. I am stupefied with exhaustion and hunger. Yesterday is like a fog to me, there is no hope of getting out of this yet. I fall into a doze and do not at first realize that evening is approaching. The twilight comes. It seems to me to come quickly now. One hour more. It is more summer, it would be three hours more. One hour more.

Now suddenly I begin to tremble; something might happen in the interval. I think no more of the dead man, he is of no more consequence to me now. With one bound the lust of live flares up to live again and everything that has filled my thoughts goes down before it. Now, merely to avert any bad luck. I huddle mechanically: "I will fulfill everything, fulfill everything I have promised you— but already I know that I shall not do so."

Suddenly it occurs to me that my own comrades may fire on me as I creep up; they do not know I am coming. I will call out as soon as I can so that they will recognize me. I will stay lying in front of the trench until they answer me.

The first star. The front remains quiet. I breathe deeply and talk to myself in my excitement: "No foolishness, now. Paul—quiet, Paul, quiet—then you will be saved, Paul." When I use my Christian name, it works as though someone else spoke to me, it has more power.

The darkness grows. My excitement subsides. I wait cautiously until the first rocket goes up. Then I crawl out of the shell-hole. I have forgotten the dead man. Before me lies the on-coming night and the pale, gleaming field. I fix my eye on a shell-hole; the moment the light dies I scurry over into it, grope farther, spring into the next, duck down, scramble onward.

I come nearer. There, by the light of a rocket I see something move in the distance, then it stiffens and lies still. Next time I see it again, yes, they are men from our trench. But I am suspicious until I recognize our helmets. Then I call. And immediately an answer rings out, my name: "Paul—Paul—"

I call again to answer. It is Kat and Albert who have come out with a stretcher to look for me.

"Are you wounded?"

"No, no—"

We drop into the trench. I ask for something to eat and wolf it down. Muller gives me a cigarette. In a few words I tell what happened. There is nothing new about it:

It happens quite often. The night attack is the only unusual feature of the business. In Russia, Kat once lay for two days behind the enemy lines before he could make his way back.

I do not mention the dead printer. But the next morning I can keep it to myself no longer. I must tell Albert and Kat. They both try to calm me. "You can't do anything about it. What else could you have done? That is what you are here for."

I listen to them and feel comforted, reassured by their presence. It was more drivelling nonsense that I talked out there in the shell-hole. "Look there for instance," points Kat.

On the fire-step stand some snipers. They rest their rifles with telescopic sights on the parapet and watch the enemy front. Once and again a shot cracks out.

"Then we hear the cry: 'That's found a bit! Did you see how he leapt in the air?' Sergeant Oelrich turns around proudly and scores his points. He heads the shooting list for today with three unquestionable hits.

"What do you say to that?" asks Kat.

"I nod.

"If he keeps that up he will get a little colored bird for his button-hole by this evening," says Albert.

"Or rather he will soon be made acting sergeant-major," says Kat.

We look at one another. "I would not do it," I say.

"All the same," says Kat, "it's very good for you to see it just now."

Sergeant Oelrich returns to the fire-step. The muzzle of his rifle searches to and fro.

"You don't need to lose any more cannot afford to be anything but matter-of-fact. So matter-of-fact, indeed, that I often shudder when a thought from the days before the war comes momentarily into my head. But it does not stay long.

We have to take things as lightly as we can, so we make the most of every opportunity, and nonsense stands stark and immediate beside horror. It cannot be otherwise, that is how we hearten ourselves. So we zealously set to work to create an idyll—an idyll of eating and sleeping, of course.

The floor is first covered with mattresses which we haul in from the houses. Even a soldier likes to sit soft. Only in the middle of the floor is there any clear space. Then we furnish ourselves with blankets and siderowns, luxurious soft affairs. There is plenty of everything to be had in the town. Albert and I find a mahogany bed which can be taken to pieces, with a sky of blue silk and lace coverlet. We sweat like monkeys moving it in, but a man cannot let a thing like that slip, and it would certainly be shot to pieces in a day or two.

Kat and I do a little patrolling through the houses. In very short time we have collected a dozen eggs and two pounds of fairly fresh butter. Suddenly there is a crash in the drawing room, and an iron stove hurries through the wall past us and on, a yard from us out through the wall behind. Two holes. It comes from the house opposite where a shell has just landed. "The swine," grimaces Kat, and we continue our search. All at once we prick up our ears, hurry across, and suddenly stand petrified—there running up and down in a little sty are two live suckling pigs. We rub our eyes and look once again to make certain. Yes, they are still there. We seize hold of them—no doubt about it, two real young pigs.

This will make a grand feed. About 20 yards from our dugout there is a small house that was used as an officers' billet. In the kitchen is an immense fireplace with two ranges, pots, pans, and kettles—everything even to a stack of small chopped wood in an outhouse—a regular cook's paradise.

Two of our fellows have been out in the fields all the morning hunting for potatoes, carrots, and green peas. We are quite upish and sniff at the trined stuff in the sump dump, we want fresh vegetables. In the dining room there are already two heads of cauliflower.

Davenport Stops City High, 35-9; St. Mary's Romps over St. Ambrose, 23-3

Wells Team Loses 35 to 9 to Hilltoppers

Krumholz Leads Foes in Scoring With 13 Points

Displaying a fast passing attack that easily swept through a wobbly offense Davenport high school trampled on the Red and White of Iowa City last night on the local court, 35 to 9. It was the opening game of the Mississippi Valley conference for both teams.

A ringer from a tip-off play opened the scoring for the River City team and nine points were rung up before Iowa City broke into the scoring column. Iowa City had to be content with Soucek's lone free throw for its entire first quarter.

Soucek looped one from the side lines at the opening of the second quarter and the Red and White began a steady bombardment of the hoop but failed to sink another basket during the half while Davenport ran its total to 14 points.

Invasion Score Offert Three quick field goals by Seitz, Nickle and Kunkel, put Davenport ahead 20 to 3 and then Captain Moffitt halted Davenport's scoring temporarily while he sank two goals from the center of the court. Once more the Red and Blue went on a scoring spree and chased the count up to 22 before a flock of substitutes entered the game. Soucek's two free throws ended the counting for the local team at nine while Davenport continued up to 35.

Captain Krumholz was high point man for both sides with 13 counters, trailed by his mate, Boetger, who tallied seven. Soucek and Moffitt accounted for all Iowa City's points, with five and four markers, respectively.

Defense Weak The Red and White presented a weak defense that constantly let the River City kids slip through for sets up under the basket. At the same time the locals offense failed to function properly and passes were wild and accounted for the loss of many possible scores.

Soucek was outstanding on both offense and defense while Captain Krumholz, Kunkel, and Nickle showed up well for Davenport. Moffitt and Glick were a constant menace to the Davenport guards but their shots failed to roll through despite repeated attempts from seemingly good positions.

Personal fouls marred the playing of both teams. Iowa City accounting for 10 and Davenport eight. At one time Umpire Hunt penalized the crowd for booing a decision. Captain Moffitt was chased to the showers in the fourth period for too many fouls.

AMONG HOCKEY'S HEROES

Now that our cities have brought the outdoors indoors by building refrigerated rinks, hockey is establishing itself more popularly than ever as America's great winter sport. A strenuous game for you, full of spectacular action—speedy and thrilling in every particular! To play big league hockey, even the less agile players must be whizzes on skates and know how to handle the stick in hard-bitten physical combat. Its body-checking details are as muscle-jarring and as important as the technique of good line play and "take-out" assignments in football. The game is far faster and fully as rough as gridiron embroglio.

Fuhrman Manages New Pro Aggregation

The Iowa All-Star basketball team, a local semi-professional club recently organized and composed of a number of former Hawkeye football stars, has arranged a schedule that will pit them against some of the leading professional teams in the middle west. The opening game of the season is tomorrow afternoon against the Davenport Meccas. The River City officials report a complete sell-out for the contest.

Some of the athletes now engaged by the club are quite prominent: George Van Deusen, former Hawkeye cage captain and an all-American professional man last year with the Springfield Empires, is expected to carry the brunt of the scoring attack. Joe Dorgan, former St. Ambrose star and last year with the Davenport Meccas, and Pete Westra, star lineman of the last three years, complete the scoring array.

Sueppelmen Win Contest at Davenport

Iowa City Team Takes First Triumph in 19 Years

DAVENPORT, Dec. 13 (Special to The Daily Iowan)—Nineteen years of defeat were wiped out last night, when St. Mary's of Iowa City completely routed their old enemy, St. Ambrose, state champions and contenders for the national title last year, 23-3, in a hard-fought battle here.

In spite of the one-sidedness of score, the St. Ambrose men put up a stiff battle, but were unable to sift through the tight St. Mary's defense for as much as a single field goal, while the Iowa City cagers tossed in nine field goals and five charity throws to win their first victory from the tricity hoopers since they began playing them 19 years ago.

The Sueppelmen's game was perfect teamwork both on offense and defense, with Knoedel, flashy St. Mary's center, tallying four field goals and one free throw in what was his best exhibition of the season. The rest of the Iowa City scoring was done by Fay, forward, and Captain Grim, guard, each tallying the opposition bank board for seven points.

Varsity Swimmers Meet Freshmen in Annual Dual Today

This afternoon at 3 o'clock the frosh and varsity swimming teams will open the aquatic season with the annual frosh-varsity meet. The tankers have been taking hard workouts in preparation for the meet; and have rounded into good shape although still lacking mid-season polish.

Odds are against the frosh taking the meet, but the yearlings are expected to give a good account of themselves in several events. In the 44-yard swim a group of freshmen, Meyers, Bodine and Janns will give McCulley, Naylor and Bagon, the varsity men, a close race for honors. The 40-yard swim is also an event in which the frosh are strong, and their representatives, Nielsen, Finfer, and Brozman are expected to push the varsity performers, Crookham, Snell and Mitalvsky to the finish.

The freshman divers, Rawdon and Blades will compete against Lobdell, Ferstenfeld, and Smith, the three crack divers of the varsity squad. Rawdon and Blades are entirely at ease on the boards and may aid their teammates considerably in piling up points.

Evans, leading breast stroker of the varsity men, will face a worthy opponent in Frank Conway, Des Moines tank flash, who has been turning in fast times in this event.

Moines tank flash, who has been turning in fast times in this event. The following men will participate in the meet and in these events. 100-yard relay—Varsity, Crookham, Snell, Liddle, and Larsen; Freshmen, Nielsen, Mohl, Finfer, Petersen.

Diving—V. Lobdell, Ferstenfeld, Smith; F. Rawdon, and Blades.

Handy Drills U. High in Cage Session

Coach E. R. Handy pitted his University high cagers against a strong alumni team yesterday afternoon in what proved to be a stiff practice for the inexperienced Blue and White cagers. The Handymen did not look very promising in yesterday's workout, being handicapped by size.

The Blue and White men changed his men about a great deal as he was experimenting to find the hoopers that have the most ability. Howe and Thomas played the majority of the time and looked best against their rangy foes.

McGinnis and Sook alternated at center, and Fairchild, Dill, Lent, and Van Epps worked at the defensive post, with Fairchild playing the best game. Handy sent in some of his second string men near the end of the game to test their mettle and ability, but the recruits were unable to halt the powerful offensive of the alumni.

The university high team does not begin its regular schedule until after the Christmas vacation. Coach Handy intends to scrimmage his men against the former prep cagers again next week.
