Gas Explodes in Mine Fire; Officials Die

rendered helpless by the force of the explosions. Officials said bodies of the known dead had been identified within the mine.

Rescue Work Started

Rescue work was proceeding in an orderly manner tonight with troops of the Ohio national guard doing patrol duty. Frantic relatives of the trapped miners who gathered about the mine mouth soon after the first explosion, were quieted, and those needing medical attention were treated at an impromptu first aid station set up in an engine room of the mine.

Tonight mothers, daughters, wives and sons milled about behind the soldier-dickie lines, anxiously peering toward the mine shaft where rescue parties went back and forth into the workings. Some moaned softly, others were silent. As each relay of relief workers came out, anxious eyes strained, hoping against hope.

Rescuers Find Only Dead

Rescue workers who finally penetrated the gas-filled tunnels found nothing but death on all sides. Most of the dead were far back in the mine where the explosion and fire were most terrific. Even though some of the men escaped the first blast, they must certainly have met death when a second explosion, which endangered rescue workers, occurred.

Temporary hospitals established near the mine entrance in the hope that some of the trapped men would be brought out alive, were immediately prepared to serve as temporary morgues. A corps of embalmers was on hand and ambulances stood by for immediate service.

Red Cross Arrives

Red Cross workers from several cities in Ohio arrived at the mine tonight and established headquarters to minister to needs of the bereaved families of the dead men.

Rescue crews worked in relays, each detachment remaining in the mine so long as the gas, smoke and fire would permit. As each group was forced to leave the shaft, a fresh crew entered.

Workers announced that the work of bringing out the bodies would be started as soon as possible. It was planned to hold them at the temporary morgue at the mine for a time before moving them to a store in Millfield for identification and preparation for burial.

Cause of Blast Debated

Several theories were advanced as to the cause of the original blast. Some said the first blast was from gas, and that it had its origin near a new air shaft in which a fan was being installed. Others expressed the opinion the explosion was caused by a "squeeze" which they explained was the collapse of the roof and walls in an old section of the workings. This section had been braced off from the main mine to keep out gases.

When the squeeze occurred the deadly gases were released into the mine proper, and in some undetermined manner, exploded. The mine had been registered as non-gaseous.

United States Has No New League Plans

GENEVA, Switzerland, Nov. 5 (AP)—There will be no new proposals by the American delegation to the League of Nations preparatory disarmament commission which convenes tomorrow, Hugh S. Gibson, the American ambassador to Belgium, said tonight.

Gibson said he could foresee no change in his government's opposition to the proposal for limiting expenditures by limiting budgetary expenditures, a project championed by France and now understood to be looked upon favorably by Great Britain.

The ambassador would not talk about his conversations with Mussolini and Premier Tardieu, and he appeared unwilling to express either optimism or pessimism regarding the work of the preparatory commission.

The commission will go at its work methodically, he said, drawing up a tentative general disarmament treaty, preparing alternative texts where it is found impossible to reconcile divergences.

There has been little to raise the hopes of those who look for an early adjustment of the Franco-Italian rivalry, which will be a major consideration of the commission.

Fire Chief Injured in $300,000 Blaze

JAMESTOWN, N. D., Nov. 5 (AP)—One fireman was injured and a loss of $300,000 caused early today by fire that destroyed the Capitol hotel block and half a dozen other business buildings here.

Joseph Schless, fire chief, was severely bruised and cut when a wall fell upon him. He is recovering at a hospital.

Cause of the fire has not been determined. Freezing weather hampered firemen and coated the ruins in ice.

Several theories were advanced as to the cause of the original blast. Some said the first blast was from gas, and that it had its origin near a new air shaft in which a fan was being installed. Others expressed the opinion the explosion was caused by a "squeeze" which they explained was the collapse of the roof and walls in an old section of the workings. This section had been braced off from the main mine to keep out gases.

When the squeeze occurred the deadly gases were released into the mine proper, and in some undetermined manner, exploded. The mine had been registered as non-gaseous.

The Pedestrian's Future

IN THE gay nineties, when the beautifully rigged buggy came into use as a conveyance for the wealthy of the nation, the exclamation for a time was: "Look! A buggy!"

In 1910, when the most daring of the dare-devils of the day chugged down the street at the rate of 10 miles an hour, people stared and pointed.

"Look! An automobile!" In 1920, the family car sped down the road at not less than 30 miles an hour, trying to pass up all the neighbors, who also rode in their own automobiles.

Recently Captain Hawks, known to many as "King of the air," flew 70 miles in 17 minutes. The Des Moines Register plane, "Good News," made the trip from Des Moines to Iowa City, a distance of 120 miles, in 43 minutes and regarded it as merely part of the day's work.

At present, the use of the horse and buggy is practically extinct. Those persons who do not own their own cars ride in buses or fast trains. The use of the airplane is daily becoming more extensive.

It looks as if in 1940 people will be loudly crying as they peer over the edge of their planes: "Look! A pedestrian!"

Has the U. S. Lost Control?

AL CAPONE, seeking arbitration with the judicial system, has stated that he will withdraw from all labor activities if his beer racket be unmolested by process of law.

Such a proposal is an insult to every intelligent law abiding citizen in the United States. Why should any man who is at the head of an organized body of crime, which seemingly stops at nothing to attain its ends, be permitted to continue his nefarious work with little or no interference from outside forces?

The real menace, however, lies in the fact that one man has obtained enough power to put him in a position where he can make such a request. The inference is that all rival gangs have been eliminated and the only thing that now lies between the "czar of Chicago" and complete freedom of action is the force of organized law, which, from all outward manifestations, seems impotent to cope with the situation.

ers. Surveys indicate what readers are devouring, and those points are stressed. Circulation figures and the number of Sunday colored comics bear some relation to each other, each making the other possible.

There is another means which not all newspapers utilize—that of making significant news colorful and interesting. When the demand seems sufficient, more of them will.

Is there too much emphasis on sports? Ask the man who surveys the paper's circulation to see what is read. Are too many petty society items included, with little but names in them? Ask the man who keeps his finger on the public's pulse of interest, remembering that papers like the Christian Science Monitor appeal to special circulation.

It is useless to argue that entertainment does not have its place in newspapers, for comics, cartoons, and jokes serve a definite purpose. If they are bad, it is because they are poor of their kind. Usually they are well executed.

The fact that there are so many more competent cartoonists than first rate writers on national and international subjects—for daily papers—suggests that the latter have not received due attention. Dryness and undue length in newspaper reports justify the attitude of the man who prefers his news a week late in a more palatable form in a news-magazine like Time. Yet ordinarily the facts are there and are fascinating to one who has followed the progress of events, so that the reader who wishes to be on his toes has only to follow the daily newspaper and learn to read it properly.

And—when better stories are demanded, newspapers will print them.

Luck vs. Work

ACCORDING to Julius Rosenwald, chairman of the board of directors of Sears, Roebuck & Co., and many times a millionaire, success is 90 per cent luck and 10 per cent brains and application.

Were this so the world would indeed be a sorry place in which to live. Suppose that all conscientious hard, painstaking effort were of no avail. Suppose that diligence and devotion to duty were negligible factors in the scheme of ordinary affairs. Suppose that intelligence and alertness and common sense and initiative were devoid of any consequence.

Then the largest factor in success would probably be luck—some caprice of fate, a right or a left turn in the road, a tossed up coin. Destinies would be directed by any passing breeze. But until such things have happened, Mr. Rosenwald's stand will be untenable. Far better is Thomas Edison's conception:

"First, trying to do the impossible makes about one-half the impossible seem easy; and second, genius is one per cent inspiration and 99 per cent perspiration."

What Is Success?

SUCCESS, says Webster, is the favorable termination of anything attempted. Yet there is no such thing as success. A man may set his goal and reach it through his accomplishment, but that is not success. That is achievement. No matter how high his goal may be, there is always one a little higher to be reached. No matter how perfectly he has done his work, there is always a greater degree of perfection that can be reached.

The limit of possible accomplishment is not set by what has already been accomplished. No matter what a man has done, there is always a little more to do. When an ideal has been reached it is no longer an ideal.

There is no such thing as success. The man who is content with what he has done will never become famous for what he will do. He has lain down to die.

She—I've been asked to get married lots of times. He—Who asked you? She—Mother and father. —Tale Spins.

The "Rah Rah" Rebels

IF the present generation of college students are not carefully watched alms mater will have to get along henceforth with the spontaneous affection she naturally inspires in her offspring, quite divested of the ceremonial superficialities in which previous generations have clothed the emotions. George Bernard Shaw once said about the filial tie that there was no duty compelling a child to love his parents. If they inspired love, well and good. If they failed to do so, that was not the child's fault. Similarly with college spirit, in the view of our sophisticated youngsters of today, let it express itself as felt and not otherwise.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT (Reg. In U. S. Patent Office) By Ripley

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON The great Mormon tabernacle: This tabernacle, one of the largest auditoriums in the world, is 250 feet long, 150 feet wide and 80 feet high. Originally, it was built entirely of wood, with heavy stone buttresses supporting the 150 foot arches which are of lattice-truss construction. Not a single nail was used in this construction, all the woodwork being held together with wooden pegs, strips of cowhide, and glue. Incidentally, the acoustics are so perfect in this great building that a person standing in the extreme rear of the building can hear a pin dropped on the speakers table. Epsom Salts will lose weight but not strength: The fact that magnesium sulphate will lose its weight and volume, but retain its strength and action, is due to water evaporation and the loss of its water efflorescence. Gathered From the News

Expression of the pain in the midwest over economic condition will be seen this year in Washington in the form of several new faces, according to election returns of yesterday.

Way back when, people thought that when times were tough a revolution would aid the situation. Today the revolting is done with x's on a ballot. Well, the revolutions weren't ever such a success when they tried to change natural business conditions, so people shouldn't expect the coming congress to step up and cure all the things that they promised to cure before election day. It probably looked easier to do farther away.

Speaking of elections, a reform in the present system of voting is being advocated by Albert Edward Wiggam. He would give the franchise to everyone but would give vastly greater weight to the ballots cast by those of "superior character and intelligence." It is undoubtedly true that the votes of moron and genius are now given equal power and that morons probably over-balance the geniuses, thereby too often putting into office men whose chief ability is in the securing of support from large unthinking masses.

But Mr. Wiggam's suggestion is not a feasible cure. No one could devise a scientific measuring rod to accurately tell just how much a given person's vote ought to count. And it is certain that those given the ranking of moron would be in instant favor of a brand new form of government. Possibly we are doing the best thing for the betterment of politics through our public schools where the younger generation is learning to debunk its judgments. If every state could work out a system to see that every child was sent through high school, if mentally capable, and bar from voting those few not capable, government, business, and society in general would be appreciably improved.

600 Attend K. of P. Convention; Delegates From Six Counties

Rank of Page Conferred at Session Here

Degree Work Features Afternoon Program for Delegates

Six hundred Knights of Pythias of eastern Iowa attended the afternoon session of the annual convention of the seventh Pythian district which was held in the Knights of Pythias hall here yesterday. Delegates represented lodges from Johnson, Cedar, Clinton, Scott, Washington, and Iowa counties, which comprise the district.

The afternoon session of the convention, open only to lodge members, was brought to order with ceremonies by Corinth Lodge No. 24 of Iowa City, host to the convention, presiding. John Tank of Waterloo, district deputy grand chancellor, presided at the business session.

Rank of Page Given
The feature of the afternoon program was the presentation of the rank of page to a group of candidates by the degree team from the West Liberty lodge. Harry M. Love of Minneapolis, supreme keeper of records and seals, assisted them. The purpose of the degree work was to serve as a school of instruction for the delegates.

Speakers on the afternoon program were: Frank S. Hite of Marengo, grand chancellor; C. T. Rogers of Adair, grand vice chancellor; "Shop Talk" by Ward Ferguson of Des Moines, grand keeper of records and seals; a talk on the "Speakers' Bureau" by Herman Lord of Muscatine; and a short talk, "How we do it at Eldridge," by Col. Lord Elected to Committee
The closing event of the afternoon meeting was the election of Herman Lord, of Muscatine, to represent this district on the grand lodge nominating committee.

Waldron Speaks to K. of P. Last Night

M. A. Waldron of Marengo, principal speaker at the evening and closing session of the annual convention of the seventh Pythian district which was held here yesterday, pointed out to his audience of 700 Knights of Pythias, Pythian Sisters, and their friends, the beauty of the friendship of Damon and Pythias upon which the Pythian lodge is founded.

He went on to emphasize this point bringing out many famous examples as illustrations. He also stated that if each Pythian was to devote a few minutes each day to the purpose of acquiring new candidates for the lodge this friendship would become more wide spread and the purposes of the lodge would be more truly fulfilled.

Plum Introduces Speakers

J. L. Plum of Iowa City, chairman of the evening, introduced the speakers in turn. He first presented Mrs. Ruth Crane, a member of the local Pythian Sisters lodge, who gave a reading depicting the story of Damon and Pythias.

The remaining speakers—Frank S. Hite of Marengo, grand chancellor; Ward Ferguson of Des Moines, grand keeper of records and seals; and E. A. Grimwood, member of the state bureau of labor—all spoke on "this underlying principle of the lodge, each giving his own interpretation. Flying Boat Lands on First Lap of Voyage

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 5 (AP)—The great bulk of the German flying boat DO-X, largest seaplane in the world, floated tonight in the Scheldt, having just completed the first lap of her transatlantic voyage to New York.

A full moon peeked out the figures of mechanics tinkering with the 12 twin-screw engines which had borne her from Switzerland in less than five and a half hours. Thousands watched them at work from the banks which protect the port of Amsterdam against the Zuyder Zee.

Nobody knew for certain when she would start again toward Lisbon, Portugal, where the ocean flight is to begin about Nov. 12. It was thought that only bad weather would cause further postponement of the flight which already had been delayed so long.

It was 11:25 a.m. when she lifted herself of Lake Constance, where so many short trial flights had begun and at 4:50 p.m. she pushed her way through the haze over Amsterdam, circled once or twice and nosed down to a perfect landing on Holland's inland sea.

6,000 Letters Start Red Cross Drive

Six thousand letters were sent out by the Red Cross to people of Iowa City and its surrounding rural districts to start the drive this fall. Verne Miller, general chairman of the Red Cross, reported yesterday afternoon that about 2,000 out of the 6,000 or one third of these letters had been returned with subscriptions. All the members included in the Red Cross roll call are requested to return letters as soon as possible, as they are anxious to determine what may be accomplished this year. Until all responses to the out-going letters have been received, an approximation cannot be made and plans for the future are unsettled.

Fall Session of Court Gets New Trials

Five Judgments Filed at Clerk's Office Yesterday

Five cases for the November term of district court were filed at the clerk of court's office yesterday. Thomas J. Wilkinson asks judgment for $8,502.58 from Marie C. Nesby and James K. Nesby, her husband, et al. in a foreclosure on notes and mortgages. The plaintiff also asks interest, costs and fees. Dutcher, Walker, and Ries are attorneys for the plaintiff.

W. H. Miller and S. D. Miller, executors of the estate of Dan B. Miller, deceased, ask judgment of $6,000 from R. C. Miller, Nancy L. Miller, and Eli Yoder on a promissory note dated March 1, 1928. They also ask interest, costs and fees. Wilson, Clearman, and Brant represent the plaintiff in the action.

Repass Automobile Co. asks judgment against Roy Butterbaugh (doing business as Roy Motor Co.) for $288.83, with costs and interest. The plaintiff charges that Butterbaugh received goods and merchandise for which no settlement was made. Repass Automobile Co. is being represented by Stevens and Long, attorneys.

Judgment for $200, plus interest and action costs, are being asked of Mabel Barger by S. T. Morrison and F. L. Stevens, for rent of a flat in the Washington apartments. Stevens and Long are attorneys for the plaintiff.

Schall Gains Vote Margin in Last Tally

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 5 (AP)—Elmer Holdale, democrat, clung to a steadily thinning lead over Thomas D. Schall, republican incumbent, as returns from farming centers late today stimulated new hope of Schall forces for victory for the U. S. senatorship in Tuesday's election.

When 2,519 precincts of 3,705 had reported, Holdale's lead which once reached 26,000 in the tabulating, had been cut to about 12,000 votes, with 207,396 votes for the democrat, 192,855 for Schall, 133,806 for Ernest Lundeen, farmer laborite, and 12,396 for Charles Lund, independent dry.

The trend of Schall majorities held almost consistently true in returns from nearly every rural county at a ratio which threatened seriously to overcome the Holdale advantage in event the estimates of a total vote of 890,000 is reached.

For governor, the farm-labor victory, Floyd B. Olson, piled up a heavy majority, his ratio of advantage being about the same throughout the state. His majority over Ray P. Chase, republican, passed 115,000 votes.

Republican margins for all other important state offices grew steadily while incomplete returns, offered the possibility of one congressional upset. In the tenth district, Representative Gregory G. Goodwin, republican, trailed Erling Swenson, farmer-laborer. Returns from 219 precincts out of 243 gave Swenson 27,569 votes to 24,773 for Goodwin.

Church May Give Pension

C. J. Robertson Urges Church to Accept New Plan

C. J. Robertson, of Chicago, led a discussion last Sunday afternoon, at the Christian church concerning the proposed pension plan of the Disciples of Christ. Mr. Robertson is in charge of installing this plan in 14 counties of eastern Iowa.

The plan is for the benefit of disabled and aged ministers and will replace the charity relief plan now in use among the pastors of the Christian church. The new system will be supported by payments from its members and churches adopting it. Beneficiaries under the plan will include the widows and minor children of the members.

The specifications call for a service fund of $5,000,000, 2,500 ministers and 2,500 churches. Nearly 3,500 clergymen have accepted the plan but the quota of churches is not filled. Canvassing for the fund will be in the hands of 100,000 volunteer workers.

The pension is incorporated under the laws of Indiana.

Boston Votes Democratic, Wet Officials

BOSTON, Nov. 5 (AP)—Massachusetts voters, responding to the issues of prohibition repeal and unemployment, swung decisively into the arms of the United States senator and governor in the state election. At the same time, they adopted by an overwhelming majority a referendum calling for repeal of the state prohibition enforcement act.

Matthew A. Coolidge, Pittsburg manufacturer, defeated the republican, former Senator William M. Butler of Boston, a textile manufacturer, for the U. S. senatorial seat to be made vacant by the retirement of the republican incumbent, Fredrick H. Gillett. Returns from the entire state gave Coolidge a total of 651,083 votes as against 538,551 for Butler. Butler had the support of former President Calvin Coolidge.

The republican gubernatorial incumbent, Frank G. Allen, lost to his younger opponent, Joseph B. Ely of Westfield, former district attorney. Ely polled 606,175 votes as against 589,779 for Allen. Both Coolidge and Ely had stressed their opposition to the eighteenth amendment.

The referendum which called for repeal within 30 days of the law alienating the state prohibition enforcement machinery with the national Volstead act, carried by a majority of nearly two to one, with the cities and larger communities providing most of the strength. The vote was 641,967 for repeal and 367,165 against.

Lewis Wins Nobel Prize

American Author Wins Prize on Merits of "Babbitt"

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 5 (AP)—George F. Babbitt, that rather pathetic, "frustrated 'typical American'" created by Sinclair Lewis in 1922, has taken the Nobel prize in literature to the United States for the first time in the 29 years since the award was established.

Lewis, who declined the Pulitzer prize of 1926 for his novel "Arrowsmith" was selected today as the Nobel prize winner on the basis of "Babbitt" which Sweden regards as his masterpiece. The money value of the award is $46,350, a greater amount than in any previous year.

Joins Famous Authors
The red-haired temperamental American writer now joins the notable company of authors which includes George Bernard Shaw, Thomas Mann, Anatole France, Dostoevsky, and others who have received the award since the first of the series was presented to the Frenchman, Sully-Prudhomme in 1901.

The Swedish academy made it clear that the choice of Mr. Lewis was based on "Babbitt" but it was understood that appreciation also was expressed for "Elmer Gantry" and "Dodsworth," others of his novels. Many of Lewis' novels have been translated into Swedish.

Returned Award Once
In 1926, when Lewis was returning the Pulitzer award of $1,000, George Bernard Shaw received the Nobel prize. Shaw declined to accept the prize for himself, but established a fund to create an Anglo-Swedish bureau of exchange for the translation and publication of the great literary works of both nations.

Kipling is the only other writer in English to have won the Nobel prize. It has been awarded five times each to France and Germany; three times to Norwegian writers, twice to Denmark, Sweden and Poland. Other awards have gone to Switzerland, Ireland, Italy, Spain, Belgium and India.

Chile Detains Peru Bound U. S. Aviator

SANTIAGO DE CHILE, Nov. 5 (AP)—Capt. Albert W. Stevens, United States army air corps, temporarily detached to the National Geographic Society of America, in making aerial photographs in Chile was detained today by Chilean military authorities. Stevens was stopped shortly after he had taken off in an airplane for Peru. The reason for the flyer's detention was not immediately made public.

While the reason for Captain Stevens' detention was not announced by authorities, his friends here believe it was due to his refusal to submit to the Chilean army the photographs which he had taken in this country for the National Geographic Society of the United States. Stevens has taken the position that he need not ask permission of the Chilean government to carry the photographs out of Chile since the pictures were made in cooperation with the Chilean army. He had done his camera work while riding in military planes piloted by Chileans.

It was not known tonight at the American embassy whether the aviator would be permitted to leave this country without further delay.

Ambassador Culbertson tonight prepared a written protest which he plans to submit tomorrow to Colonel Merino who is in charge of the aviation section of the army. The ambassador said he would demand immediate clearing up of the case.

Light Heavies Feature Moose Athletic Show

Local Heavies Meet in Main Boxing Match

Four Other Mitt Goes, One Wrestling on Program

Headlining H. G. Croy of H.P.M., undefeated light heavyweight wrestler, and Dutch Hanson of O'Connell, winner of 53 consecutive bouts, will star in the main event of the Moose Athletic Show tonight.

Although the Croy-Hanson bout is booked as the headline, it is expected to prove to be the chief attraction. It is a three round boxing or wrestling match between two of the best light heavyweights in the state.

Other boxing matches, all carded for three rounds of two minutes each, open the show. Lightning Yavorsky of Downey, and Roundhouse Koyne of Williamsburg fight at 145 pounds just before the Alexander-Kennard mixup.

Farmer Fulton and Joe Humphrey, both of Iowa City, meet in what Matchmaker Alexander says will be one of the fastest bouts staged in local circles. These little fellows weigh 50 pounds each, but Alex says their speed makes up for lack of weight.

Two other "pin weight" bouts open the show. Chuck Fulton and Jack Pettig, Iowa City lads, mix at 65 pounds, and Bobby Gardner and Johnny Risko, another pair of locals scrap at 100 pounds.

Mike Howard, Hawkeye wrestling coach, will referee the bouts, with "Doug" Fairbanks as timekeeper. A boxing commission of John Parizek, Charles Gaeta, and Pete Hardy will have jurisdiction over the show.

The first bout starts at 8 o'clock.

Intramurals

By ED

Crispy fall weather yesterday evidently chased fraternities to warmer quarters for no hitball games were reported and the city park scene of a majority of the contests, was deserted. The deadline on all ball games in the sections has been fixed for Saturday night and managers are urged by Coach E. G. Schroeder to schedule the remainder of their round robin contests immediately. Overcoats and red flannels may be necessary, but the games must be on.

Irvin Plog of Delta Chi and John Palmer of Kappa Sigma staged a fast tennis singles battle yesterday for the right to represent the lower bracket in the tourney finals, Plog winning in straight sets, 6-0, 6-4. Despite the chilly atmosphere both men played a fast game and the score does not indicate the closeness of the match.

Gallup of Phi Gamma Delta displayed a bit of expert dueling in the Tuesday afternoon kitenball game between the Fijis and Sigma Nu. The Sigs had been playing merry-go-round at the expense of the Phi Gams and in a wild mix up one of hilltop performers came tearing to

ELMER SCHWARTZ WASHINGTON STATE'S FULLBACK

SCHWARTZ IS A GREAT LINE-PLUGGER ON A GREAT ELEVEN!

MERLE HUFFORD WASHINGTON'S STAR HALF-BACK—ONE OF THE COAST'S BEST!

WESTERN WHIRLWINDS!

SPORT ILLUSTRATED

Ideal back field stars must have the approximate strength of a Carnera, the defensive skill of a Tunney or Stribling, and the climax punch of a Dempsey in his aggressive zenith. Furthermore, and fundamentally, they must have a good line and at least one masterly interferer to pave the way for important gains. Among the score or more of headlined ball-toters this season, Elmer Schwartz of Washington State, and Merle Hufford, of Washington, were standouts from the start.

Schwartz is a line pounder extraordinary, supported by a team which some day may be acclaimed as Washington State's "best ever." He's also a superb defensive back—alert on passing details and a perfect tackler. "Babe" Hollingsberry, Cougar coach, puts "El" Schwartz on a par with Ernie Nevers who, a few seasons back, was rated by "Pop" Warner as "an even greater football player than Jim Thorpe."

Of course, Schwartz works back of a first-class line and with stellar backfield associates. But as Cougar critics point out, their ace probably would be a better edition of Yale's Albie Booth on any team.

The same virile State, Washington, is also very proud of the havoc-raising Hufford, who seems to be the chief rival of Schwartz in the vast Northwest. Like the crashing Cougar the Huskies' chief hero is a seasoned gridster who appears to have reached the top of his form this season.

For years the argument as to which is the greater back—"El" or Merle, of the Schwartz and Hufford clans respectively—will persist, and that should be as difficult to settle as debates over the relative superiority of Coy or Mahan, Eckerzell or Friedman, Hinkley or Shevlin, etc., etc.

Incidentally, Notre Dame is equally proud of another Schwartz, "March" and "March-on" he's aptly christened. He's not related to the Husky hammer except in football skill. But isn't that itself enough to thrill the Schwartz family everywhere?

Leo Jenvold Leads Hawk Yard Gainers

His 4.1 Yard Average Same as Average Team Gain

Leo Jenvold, Hawkeye veteran quarterback, leads the team in net gains from scrimmage, totaling 303 yards in 74 trials, his average being 4.1 being identical to total team gain.

Randahl Hickman, iron halfback takes second place with 229 yards in 53 attempts. Gerhard Hauge, halfback, lost third place with 152 yards to Oliver Sansen, fullback, by six yards, Sansen's total being 158.

Gain Almost Mile

Against strong opposition from each of its five rivals the University of Iowa football team has marched more than three-quarters of a mile up and down gridirons. According to official statistics the Hawkeyes covered 1,399 yards in 335 plays, averaging 4.1 yards, Jenvold's mark.

The team collected 71 first downs in rushes varying from a one-yard smash by a fullback to the 52-yard dash for a touchdown by Jack Warrington which won the Detroit game.

Lead in First Downs

None of Iowa's five opponents succeeded in registering more first downs and the total number for the rivals stands at 34, less than half the number made by the Hawkeyes.

Against Marquette, one of the country's eight undefeated and untied teams, Iowa will try to strengthen their forward pass attack. Out of the 1,399 yards made by rushing only 219 were pass gains. On the other hand opponents have made a total of 1,095 yards against Iowa's defense, 345 by passing and only 650 by rushes.

Little Hawks Beat Second String Team

Stimmel on Sidelines; Wright Works on Punting Drill

Several Iowa City high first string men were not on Shrader field last night for the first scrimmage of the week. Schroeder, Dumphy, Lewis, Stimmel and Captain Bud Wright did not scrimmage. Stimmel was present but not in uniform, because of injuries, and Wright used last evening to practice punting.

The remainder of the first string was sent against the second team. The outcome was about three touchdowns to one in favor of the regulars. The reserves were using Washington high of Cedar Rapids plays against their superiors, who had little difficulty in smearing all attempts.

Homecoming Tuesday

Unusual interest in being shown by the City high boys in Tuesday's game, it is Homecoming to them and therefore the game is more important than the regular week end tilt. The high school is preparing to celebrate Armistice day with all the pomp and ceremony that is befitting to the occasion. It is expected that a number of old graduates will turn out for the contest to cheer their school on to victory.

Last year, Oct. 26, the Little Hawks handed the Tigers a 14 to 12 beating by virtue of a last minute aerial attack.

Garrison Finish

The Wellsmen, with but one minute and 40 seconds of the game left and trailing 12 to 7, started their drive from their own 48 yard line. Moffitt went around end for 24 yards. Lucky added 8 more, then the Red and White gridgers were held to kicking. The punt sailed over the goal line and Cedar Rapids kicked back with but seconds of the game left. Moffitt then hurried a long pass to Mathes, who made good the catch and the touchdown. Lucky added the extra point and the Homecoming crowd of Iowa City high school left Shrader field happy.

This year's City high team is out to duplicate the win of their predecessors.

Bears Battle Cyclones for Third Time

Indications are that a fast game will be played this afternoon on Iowa field when the Bears and Cyclones clash for their third grid game.

The rhinos are in great shape and their coaches expect them to play a fast and hard game. Ray Gaylor, Bears coach, expects his revamped backfield to show powerful ground gaining ability. Captain Bill Rule has been shifted from quarter to a half back position, while Ed Garlock has been moved to the signal post. Emil Zethamel, formerly at right guard, has been moved to the full back position. Harminston holds down the other back field position.

The Cyclones coach, J. D. Weldon, has kept his team intact. Lester Glick, captain is at right end. Lee is the boy that is on the receiving end of the forward passes, and he usually spears the heavens. Bennie Shine, quarterback and leading scorer, is in playing condition after having nursed a wrenched leg, received in last week's game. Bennie has done most of the ball carrying, and undoubtedly will do the bulk of the carrying today.

The rhinos engaged in a light workout yesterday afternoon. Most of the time was spent in running through the signals. Both teams worked out some new plays, which they believe will bring them victory.

Former Hawk Star at Milwaukee Dinner

Mr. Gross, leader of the Milwaukee alumni group expects scores of alumni, former and present students of the university, to rally for the affair at the Hotel Wisconsin.

Undefeated Hilltoppers Present Threat in Speedy Sisk

With the largest number of men on the injured list he has had all season, Coach Burt Ingwersen spared his gridirons from the usual midweek scrimmage and the Hawkeyes will depart for Marquette tonight without having indulged in a hard practice all week. In spite of the handicap of a host of cripples, Coach Ingwersen was far from discouraged after the hard fought victory at Detroit last Saturday.

Higdon Sick
Grover Higdon, veteran guard and captain for the Marquette game, was in bed with a severe cold. Elmo Nelson's bruised hip has slowed him up and the dependable blocker, Gus Hauge, may be out for the week with a twisted knee. A trio of regulars limped through yesterday's workout as Gus Mastrogany, Lloyd Jensen, and George Rogge have had legs. Jimmy Hay's shoulder is improving slowly while the gash above Jerry Kriz' right eye has almost healed.

Following an extended drill on pass formations, Coach Ingwersen sent his warriors through a snappy dummy scrimmage. Jack Warrington, who dashed to fame last week, was unable to report because of an examination. The squad will leave late tonight and will work out in the Marquette stadium tomorrow afternoon.

Marquette Unbeaten, Untied
Iowa will again depend upon a sterling defense in an effort to upset for the second consecutive Saturday one of the United States' unbeaten and untied eleven. Old Gold mentors and fans realize that the team will have to play high class football if it is to blemish the Marquette record at the host's Homecoming. Reports from Milwaukee are that the city is decorated in brilliant fashion in anticipation of the big game.

The Golden Avalanche attack has been good for 18 touchdowns or a total of 123 points while holding opponents to a single touchdown which was registered by a clever Creighton passing threat. Iowa's powerful running game which netted 233 yards against Detroit will again be called upon to bring a second straight victory.

Sportively Speaking

By Bill Rutledge

Reformers and crusaders, shunted out of politics lately, have turned to football as a promising field for their activities. Some of them have been at work for several years, but only this fall has the element gathered enough force to make itself felt.

The most enthusiastic agitation is for the abolition of all-American teams, a few of which are named by skilled experts after intensive surveys, most of which are selected haphazardly by sports writers in the spirit of an ordinary assignment.

Your columnist (?) finds himself in full accord with those who insist that football in United States has grown to the extent that all-American teams are absurd and impossible. Walter Camp was the inventor of the idea. He started naming all-time and all-that teams not because he felt there was any need for them, but to earn a few dollars that accrued from the sale of articles on the subject.

Over 500 colleges throughout the nation are playing football every Saturday. The futility and absurdity of picking the eleven best players from this great army of football men is readily apparent.

Discerning fans have always carried a grudge against such honorary mythical teams, which persist because there seems to be a public demand for them, even though they are unauthentic. Self-confessed experts go on year after year branding a ham player who probably got a lucky break in a prominent game to bring him attention as the west's greatest halfback in decades, etc., and completely overlook steady and consistent players who fail to pull anything sensational.

The latest reform advocated is a classification of grid teams. Under this plan college eleven's would be segregated into class

He has been handicapped by injuries all season but has an average of 11 yards per try in the 12 times he has lugged the ball and has counted three touchdowns. MARQUETTE GRID CAPTAIN

CAPTAIN ARTHUR "RED" BULTMAN - CENTER

A, class B, class C, and class D. The object is to have high class team playing only high class opposition. For instance, teams in class A would play only class A rivals, and so forth.

It is most untimely to broach such a project with team from tin roof colleges slipping the banana peel under many of the big fellows. Iowa thought it had a string of bush league outfits on its schedule for this fall, but it soon found out to its grief that it had first class adversaries.

The class of a given team would be determined by a kind of board or commission. Whenever anyone gets an idea he immediately wants to set up a governing body of some description to enforce his idea. Pacifists are an example. To abolish war they set up the League of Nations and world court in an attempt to put their convictions in force.

Another reform group is the society for the abolition of the extra point, which has been plunging along for years without making much headway. It would enlist the support of a coach after his team had been beaten by the additional point, only to have him cancel his membership when his team won by that extra tally. Thus the organization has been unstable. The president and founder of the movement is Harvey T. Woodruff of the Chicago Tribune. Not being a coach he doesn't care a hoot which team is victorious by the added point. Coaches are more sensitive about the matter.

Still another change that has been suggested is the moving of the press boxes from the top of the stadium to the bottom, on the players' bench. It is thought that putting the scribes closer to the fellows they are writing about would be conducive to improved and more accurate sport pieces.

Handy Works New Men in Long Signal Practice; Means Out

In order to have his men become more familiar with the plays, Coach E. R. Handy pushed the University high football squad through a long session of signal practice yesterday afternoon. With the addition of Bill, a cross country runner, to the team a few days ago and the transference of Means from end to backfield, this practice was considered necessary. Coach Handy has given his gridirons a number of new plays to be

Wearing The GREEN

Meet Edward Garlock. Halling from Plover, "Ed" has started a football career that promises fame on the gridiron. "Ed" is wearing the grid togs for the first time in his life and according to the freshman coaching staff he is a sensation on the striped field.

Playing fullback on the Bears he is listed as one of the most consistent ground gainers wearing the yellow jersey and has chalked up many long gains. Garlock stands 5 feet 10 inches, and carries 180 pounds of beef. He is fast, heady and hits the line like a veteran. In high school "Ed" specialized in basketball. He earned three letters on the floor playing guard.

"Ed" has an uncanny eye for the hoop, and is noted around Plover for his long range shots. In baseball he knocked out two letters in the infield. His batting eye is keen and his fielding is marred by very few errors.

On the cinder path "Ed" stepped out in the half mile event for two letters during his high school career. He is rated as the "find" of the season among the yellow shirts. Coming to Iowa without knowing the feel of the oval Garlock has reaped his share of the gains against opposing lines and he will be heard of often when he later dons the varsity togs. "Ed" expects to resume his career on the basketball floor at the close of the football season, and next spring he will answer the call for yearling flycatchers.

sprung at West Branch Armistice day. These include a lateral pass attack and some fake plays.

During the latter part of the session these new plays were tried out against the second string for long gains. Moore called signals but did not carry the ball because of his injured arm. Means was not in uniform because of slight injuries.

Swim Coach Calls Poloists for Varsity

Big Ten Schools May Revive Water-Polo This Year

Possibility that water-polo will be resumed in Western conference competition this year, has led Coach David A. Armbruster to urge stars in past inter-fraternity matches to report for drill. Last year was the first that conference officials decided against teams being allowed to play water-polo since swimming became an established sport in the Big Ten. In 1929, and other years, after teams had matched speed in the swimming events, they would put the rest of their strength into water-polo.

Varsity swimmers are being kept busy on the water game each Monday, Wednesday and Friday not alone for the prospect of later tangle with other schools, but also for the conditioning derived from a few duckings. The freshman squad is learning the game.

Time trials in the near future will eliminate all but about 25 of Coach Armbruster's freshman paddlers. Wentworth Lobell, Big Ten diving champion, National Collegiate runner-up, and holder of other titles, is leading the divers through their routines three times a week. Each Tuesday the divers hold a session lasting until 7 p.m. Lobby conditioned on the boards in Rockford, Ill., his home town, during the summer.

Bill Rawdon has been kept out of diving by an injured knee, but will slip into the water again in a couple of days the coach believes.

Wisconsin President Taboos Game With Marquette for Poor

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 5 (AP)—The University of Wisconsin athletic council has refused to sanction the proposed football game for charity between the university and Marquette university, President Glenn Frank announced today. "In view of the expressed policy of the Western intercollegiate conference regarding post-season games and in view of the fact that, as a state supported institution, the University of Wisconsin would not be free to restrict the proceeds of a benefit contest to any one city, the athletic council does not consider feasible the proposed post-season game for the Milwaukee charity fund," Mr. Frank said.

The game was proposed by a Milwaukee newspaper several weeks ago. The suggestion met with approval of Marquette football authorities.

Favorable Weather Allows Farmers to Complete Shucking

DES MOINES, Nov. 5 (AP)—Recent favorable weather has allowed Iowa farmers to complete the shucking of between 50 and 60 percent of the state corn crop, the weekly report of Charles D. Reed, federal crop reporter, showed today. The figure is considerably in advance of last year, only 27 per cent of the crop having been shucked by Nov. 1 last year.

Reed's report said that recent cold morning and warmer afternoons have been almost ideal for husking. He reported yields were varying from 5 to 60 bushels an acre. Stalks and stubble are being plowed under on many farms.

Coach Issues Call to Frosh Gymnasts

The first call for freshman gymnasts was issued last night by Coach Albert Baumgartner. Practice sessions will be held every afternoon at 4 o'clock, beginning today. As in every other sport, numerals will be awarded to the best prospects. All first year men should report to Coach Baumgartner at once.

Laughing Boy

By Oliver La Farge

(What Has Gone Before)
Laughing Boy meets Slim Girl at a ceremonial dance and falls in love with her because she is different from any other squaw he has ever known.
His family advises him not to go with her, but after he loses his money and horse, Slim Girl persuades him to go with her to her home. She will get him much silver to work with and horses to breed, she tells him.
Slim Girl, who has been educated by the Americans, has copied many of the Americans ways. She has the ability to please white men.
Now and then she goes to the town for an afternoon. She tells Laughing Boy she goes to help the minister's wife. She goes to spend the afternoon with a white man. He gives her money, and with this money she is able to keep herself and Laughing Boy.
But always she is anxious to reclaim the Indian customs and the Indian songs, and she is hungry for the life that she has put behind her.

(Now Go on With the Story)
"You must go away, you must not see me again. I must not see you," she said.
"I asked, 'Why?'"
"She said, 'What is your clan?'"
"I told her, 'I am an Eshlini.'"
"She looked up again. Her face looked calm, but her eyes were wounded. 'I, too, am an Eshlini,' she said."
"We touched hands, and I rode away."

Jesting Squaw's Son bowed his head on his knees. Laughing Boy felt his throat hurt, and yet in a curious way he felt better than he had in a long time. He was taken out of himself; he needed something like this.
"I could not go home then. I rode to To Atinda Haska Mesa, and went up to the top of it. I have been there a day and two nights. I did not eat. Why should I?"

"At first I did not even think. I was just wild at first. All I could do was remember that happiness, that had been for nothing. I felt like asking her to come with me even so. I frightened myself. Am I an animal? Would I sleep with my sister? I did not know what to do. Why could she not have been a Tahchini or a Lucacu or an Eshhontsoni? But it was not her fault. And could I curse my mother because she was not a Bihani or a To Dotsoni or a Nahka?"

"Then I got myself calmer. I could not have her. I made up my mind to it. I accepted it. But I still loved her. I still do. I still remember that happiness.
"That is very bad, it is beastly. My heart must be bad. I am frightened. Perhaps I should kill myself. Why not?"

"I came here to see you. I did not want to go home to all my people. Perhaps you can help me. That is all!"
Laughing Boy stared into the ground. He was shocked, and his heart was wrung. He had never imagined that such a thing could happen; had it been told him of some unknown man, he would have supposed there was something bad about him to start with. It was such a disaster as an angry god might send, as though one heard in some legend. He went mad and fell in love with a woman of his own clan. But his friend was good, all good. He knew what he was suffering. He remembered his feelings those first days at the dance. He thought hard. They must have sat for half an hour there before he spoke.

"Do not kill yourself. And do not feel ashamed. Do not think you have sinned, or your heart is bad. No, you have shown it is good, I think. It would be bad if you kept on wanting to marry her, but what has happened to you is not something you do yourself. It is as though you were shot with an arrow."
"I nearly went away with my wife without asking her clan. We spoke directly to each other, without shame, when we saw there was nothing else to do."

"It is not your fault that you were shot. Suppose you had starved for a week, and some American, trying to be funny, the way they do, offered you fish to eat. If you ate it, it would be bad, but if you belly-clamored for it while you refused it, could you be blamed? No, you would have done a good thing. I think. You have done a good thing, a very hard thing. I think well of you."
Jesting Squaw's Son gazed at him searchingly, and saw that he meant what he said.

"I think you are right. You have cured me of a deep wound. Thank you."
"Let us start home. There are some of my horses in that little canon we shall get one, and turn yours loose. It looks thin. There is pasture there, it will not wander!"
The caught fresh horses, and Jesting Squaw's Son exclaimed at the height of the grass, which in some places grew over a foot, in clumps. There was some like that at Donni-hutso, and in Klet Slet Buckho, but not at this time of year.

"They jog-trotted towards Chizial, silent most of the time, talking occasionally."
"Up there, now, they do not call you by your old name," Jesting Squaw's Son said, and hesitated. Even when he is a close friend, one is not free about discussing a man's name before him.

"I am not surprised."
"They call you 'Went Away.' Your uncle calls you 'Blind Eyes.'"
"Unh! He would. Well, I am changed, it is right that my name should change."
Jesting Squaw's Son trailed his rope to get the kinks out of it. Colling it again, 'But they miss you. You will always be welcome.'
"In the end, we shall return."
"You live close to the Iron Trail?"
"On the other side of it."
"Ei-ye! A good place?"
"You will see, a fine place, but we cannot turn our horses out there, as it is Americans' country."
"But you are near the Zunis, too."
"About a day's hard ride that way. I trade with them—horses for turquoise."
"Have you any children?"
"Not now. We have a plan. We are making much money now, we are working as hard as we can. You would not believe how fast we make it. In a year or two we shall return to To Takai; we shall have perhaps fifty, perhaps sixty hundreds of dollars, in money and silver and horses, I think."
"Ei-ye!"
"We shall be very rich. With that to start on, we shall be rich all our lives. We shall have our children there, we shall have a beautiful life. It is my idea, she thought of it. She takes care of the money, she trades with the Americans. She is remarkable."
"You must be very happy."
"I am," He meant it.

Virginia Senator Began Career as Newspaper Editor, Publisher

Carter Glass, now U. S. senator from Virginia, began his political career as a $300 a year clerk of the city council of Lynchburg, Va., the city in which he was born.

In his long career, he has suffered only one defeat at the polls, when as a member of the house of representatives he sought to unseat Claude A. Swanson in the senate and lost in the primary.

As a young man he entered the newspaper profession, first as a printer, then editor, and later publisher of the Lynchburg Morning News and the Evening Advance. As a result of his positive stand on many issues of the day he was practically drafted in 1899 to run for the senate.

Before completing his term in the state senate he was elected to the national house of representatives in 1902.

He attracted wide attention through his part in constructing the federal reserve act, and his long fight in congress for its enactment into law.

He was selected for the position of secretary of the treasury in 1918 on the resignation of William C. McAdoo.

He resigned from the cabinet after serving 15 months to accept an appointment to the senate to fill the unexpired term of Thomas W. Martin. He has served on the appropriations committees and an increase was made in the banking and currency committee to permit him to become a member.

Behind The Scenes IN HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL
HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—Stories are hard enough to find for dramatic stars, but the comedians are the producers' real worry.

After months of search, Fox has finally discovered a story for an El Brendel starring vehicle.

It's called "Poor John" and is from the pens of two authors on the lot, Sonya Levin and Harry Ref. The principal character is a Swedish janitor in an apartment house.

For some time now, Brendel has had stardom hung tantalizingly in front of him. All that was lacking was a story, and now that is supplied. The comedian's best role to date was the 1920 man in De Sylva,

Brown and Henderson's "Just Imagine."

In research for his coming production of "The Squaw Man," Cecil B. De Mille ran across a faded program for "Morogoo's Burbank Theatre," March 31, 1912.

It was for a production of "The Squaw Man," with Forrest Stanley as the male lead. Way down in a long list of "Jim Carston's Cowpunchers," in pica type, was the name, Robert Z. Leonard.

De Mille showed the program to Leonard. "Ah," commented the portly director, "that was in the

Reilly States Interpolation to Math Club

Prof. Gives Examples to Aid Stresses on Discrimination

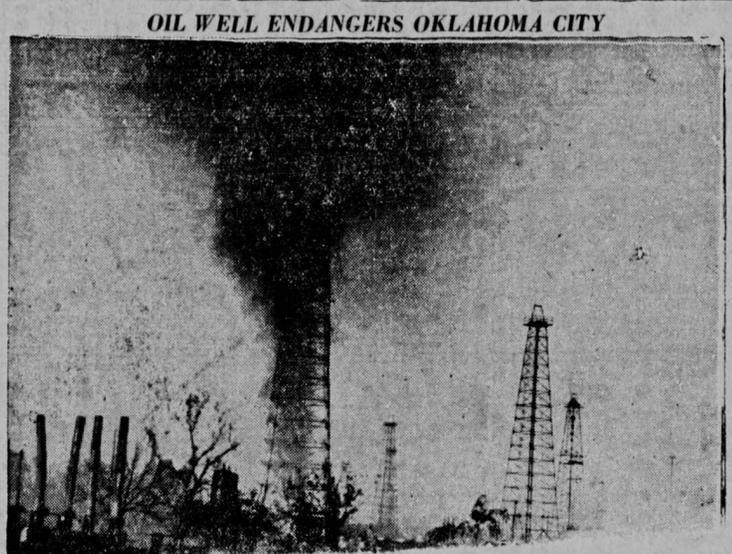

"The process of interpolation consists in finding other values in a sequence of numbers when two or more numbers of the sequence are known," said Prof. John F. Reilly of the mathematics department, at a lecture given in the senate chamber of Old Capitol last night. Professor Reilly, retiring president of Sigma Xi, honorary scientific society, spoke on "Interpolation."

Reilly stressed the point that interpolation should not be indiscriminately used, and referred to fallacies that result when it is improperly applied. An attempt was made to determine the price of a stock listed on the New York exchange on Nov. 1, from the prices listed on Sept. 13, 20, and 27.

The result of interpolation gives the Nov. 1 price as 180, whereas the actual price was about 195, emphasizing the point that this is not a proper field in which to apply interpolation.

Several Variables Considered

The study of the remainder-term was emphasized as being a sufficient test to determine how accurate an interpolated value is. Functions of several variables were considered as well as functions of a single variable.

The southeastern section of Oklahoma City is threatened with disaster as the oil well shown in foreground of this picture continues to spout unabated, blowing a spray of oil and gas toward the business section of the city. The well is estimated to be making 60,000 barrels of oil and 100,000,000 cubic feet of gas. The entire fire-fighting force of the city is being held in readiness to prevent disaster should the well take fire.

Frivol Appears Nov. 14

Frivol will make its second appearance on the campus Nov. 14. It will be the Homecoming number, the cover representing a picture of Old Capitol, with people greeting each other. This issue will be the largest to be published this year.

Country Will Resort to Coal Reserves When All Other Fuel Exhausted-Prof. Olin

When all of the temporary substitutes are exhausted, the nation ultimately will resort to its coal reserves — the staunch and permanent line of defense, it is believed by Prof. Hubert L. Olin, University of Iowa scientist.

At that time, dependence will be placed not in the raw fuel, but in its conversion of oil and gas, says the professor who is spending years in laboratory analysis of coal's properties. Results of much of his study will be published by the state geological survey.

Gas Piped Northward

Competition for coal is being furnished by natural gas, carried from the source fields in Texas and Oklahoma into Iowa and other states via huge trunk pipe line. Much of this natural gas, he said, probably will be used to enrich the blue water gas made from coal or coke, thereby producing a mixture satisfactory for domestic or industrial use.

After adding more than a billion dollars to the wealth of Iowa since its beginning in 1840, the coal industry has slumped in much the same fashion as in other bituminous coal regions, Professor Olin says.

Cites Significant Trends

Significant trends in fuel consumption which have influenced the situation greatly are pointed out by Professor Olin. These are the steady improvement in the efficiency of energy from a given weight of coal and the actual and potential competition of other forms of fuel for power generation and heating.

Statistics quoted by Professor Olin as examples of the improvement in steam power plant efficiency revealed that early engines consumed 30 pounds of coal per horsepower, but that the Watts steam engine ultimately reduced this to six pounds, similar sensational improvements have been brought about in the case of ocean liners and railroad locomotives.

Coal's Contribution Slumps

Citing figures in support of his statement regarding competition, the university man declared that in 1913 the relative contribution of coal and petroleum to the country's needs was 37 to 13 per cent favoring coal.

But in 1928, however, coal's figures had shrunk to 57 per cent while petroleum's mark had risen to 33 per cent. The bituminous fields furnished 73 per cent of the coal in 1913; 15 years later only 57 per cent.

Ticket Sales to Begin Today

Reservations Ready for "Let Us Be Gay," Nov. 11-13

Seat reservations for "Let Us Be Gay," university theater production of Nov. 11, 12, 13, will be made at the speech office beginning today. The play is under the direction of Prof. E. C. Mable, head of the department of speech and dramatic art.

Critics have praised this comedy of Rachel Crothers, terming it brilliant, witty, sophisticated and amusing entertainment. The story is one of love, misunderstanding and reconciliation. The theme is that of the ugly duckling grown beautiful but in this case the transformation is not brought about by a fairy godmother but by three years' playing a grass widow in Paris.

The love and misunderstanding are effected by Kitty and Bob Brown, played by Priscilla Morrison, A2 of Washington, and Delos R. Thorson, G of Missoula, Mont. Reconciliation is brought about by Mrs. Boucault, an eccentric dowager played by Ethel Hanley, A1 of Muscatine.

The rest of the cast, a typical house party crowd, includes an Englishman, a languorous lady, her devoted poetry-reading shadow, an ingenuo and a comedy butler.
