

AL SMITH DEMANDS G.O.P. APOLOGY

Medics Ask Full Capacity for Hospital

Urge Appropriations to Provide for More Indigents

CEDAR RAPIDS, Jan. 13.—Although "marked economies have been effected in the purchase of supplies for the hospitals during the term of the present administrator, Robert E. Neff," the Linn County Medical society last night requested a "searching inquiry" to determine procedure of the university purchasing department in receiving bids for hospital supplies.

Other resolutions passed by the society in acting on the report of a special Iowa State Medical society committee concerning the handling of indigent sick were:

(1) Recommendation of legislative action to appropriate sufficient funds for operation of university hospitals at their full capacity and for admission of additional indigent patients.

(2) Recommendation that under such appropriation county care be automatically provided for an indigent patient following his discharge from the state hospital.

(3) Advocacy of examination for commitment of indigent patients by the county medical society instead of by the family physician.

(4) Approval of limiting patient payments in university hospital to 5 per cent of operating capacity, as done under the present policy.

(5) Support of a state law amendment which would make available toward maintenance of the psychopathic hospital fees from private patients, without regard to their number, amounting to about $17,000 a year.

(6) Disapproval of private hospitals which accept indigent patients at less than cost on the ground that such practice involves unnecessary and inequitable hardships on private and religious charities.

(7) Recommendation that in the state law specifying those who may object to use of the body of a person dying in a public institution the word "friend" be omitted.

(8) Confidence in its representatives in the Iowa State Medical society's house of delegates, Dr. J. K. von Lakum and Dr. Thomas F. Schomel.

Will Urge Legislation
(9) Transmission of copies of all resolutions to the Iowa State Medical society's house of delegates and request that it call a meeting at once to instruct the legislative committee regarding bills before the present legislature.

With regard to hospital purchases as in the other resolutions the Linn county group acted on information obtained through investigation by a special committee of the Iowa State Medical society. On this question they favor further inquiry to demonstrate whether practices reported by the committee exist and, if so, if they are consistent with law and accepted business ethics, and conducive to the promotion of public confidence.

What Investigators Said
The state medical society committee report's section on purchases, deemed inadequate by the Linn county group, said in part that "The committee has received several complaints and criticisms of improper practices in connection with purchases for the hospitals on the part of individuals in positions of authority at the university. However, in no cases were such criticisms or complaints accompanied by documentary or other tangible evidence, and the committee has therefore been unable to establish their truth or falsity.

"It appears that there is no formal stipulation that bids on supplies for the medical school or the hospitals should be received and opened simultaneously, and as a matter of fact your committee finds that on some occasions late bidders are informed as to the prices quoted by previous bidders and given an opportunity to meet them or to make lower quotations.

Hypothetical Disadvantage
"This practice, while sometimes favoring purchasing at lower prices, obviously might make it easier for a favored dealer to obtain information which enables him to quote prices very close to those of the next bidder. It might, eventually, nullify the benefits derived from competitive bidding by discouraging other dealers."

Conference Debates Question of Parties
Consideration of the matter of closed fraternity parties will be taken up by the men's interfraternity conference which meets this evening at 8 p.m. at the Phi Delta Theta house.

James E. Carroll, L2 of Davenport, president, will preside at the business meeting following dinner.

State confirmed Edgar B. Broadard and Lincoln Dixon as members of the tariff commission.

Congressional conferees disagreed on $15,000,000 food loan proposal for drought relief.

President Hoover asked $10,000,000 for Red Cross drought relief fund. Alfred E. Smith demanded apology from Republican national committee for circulation of literature in the Nebraska senatorial campaign by Robert H. Lucas.

Huckins Wins Court Order

Court Cites Five Errors in Old Case, Orders New Trial

DES MOINES, Jan. 13 (AP)—George E. Huckins today won at least a temporary reprieve from prison when the Iowa supreme court, citing five errors in his trial for cheating by false pretenses, reversed the conviction and ordered a retrial.

Huckins, former Cedar Rapids baseball club owner and operator of a cigar store there, was convicted for cheating Emil Levens, former major league baseball player, of $300 the latter invested in a business operated by Huckins and his father, Elmer.

Father, Son Sentenced
The Huckinses, father and son, were sentenced to seven years for conviction in separate trials for cheating. They were alleged to have represented to persons investing with them that the business paid annual dividends of 25 or 52 per cent.

In the opinion, written by Justice E. A. Morling and concurred in by seven of his colleagues, the court dealt with seven of 39 errors claimed by the defense but allowed only five of them. Justice John Grimm of Cedar Rapids did not participate in the consideration of the case.

Record No Evidence
The court held that a record of testimony at the grand jury investigation of the Huckins enterprises should not have been admitted as evidence. The record of the trial showed that Levens had identified such a document from the witness stand and that it was introduced as evidence.

Wife of Grocer, 65, Names H. W. Wilson as Husband's Killer

DES MOINES, Jan. 13 (AP)—Deputy Sheriff Robert E. O'Brien said today that Mrs. George Cordaro had identified H. W. Wilson, 35, as the slayer of her husband, a grocer.

Wilson was released from the state penitentiary at Ft. Madison Jan. 2 after serving a year for child desertion. He was arrested last night at the home of Fred Smith, O'Brien said.

Taken to the Cordaro home this afternoon, O'Brien said that when Wilson entered Mrs. Cordaro cried out, "that's him."

O'Brien said that Wilson had quarreled with one of Cordaro's sons. Cordaro, 60, was slain in his store Saturday night when he resisted an effort to hold him up. Several months ago he had frightened away a bandit in a similar manner but in wrestling with the man Saturday, he was shot fatally.

Visited in Europe
His most recent contacts abroad were obtained during a 12 months tour of the world in 1929-30. Mr. Page has crossed the ocean 18 times and visited 35 countries, becoming acquainted with such men as Mahatma Gandhi of India, and Kameawa of Japan, who will be discussed in his vesper talk Sunday.

Among the 700,000 copies of his 10 books and various pamphlets are editions translated into French, German, Dutch, Swedish, Danish, Bulgarian, Spanish, Chinese, and Japanese. His works have also been published in England and in India.

First Choice Book
The latest volume by Mr. Page, "Jesus or Christianity," was selected by the Religious Book club as a first choice for its members.

There is no admittance fee for the university vesper service Sunday afternoon, but those wishing to attend the eastern Iowa conference Saturday and Sunday morning are asked to pay a registration fee of $1. This applies also to delegates from Coe, Cornell, Penn, Parsons, and Iowa Wesleyan colleges.

Elect Officers
The council of the First English Lutheran church met at the parsonage last night and elected the following officers for the coming year: C. W. Lillick, vice president; E. J. Meister, secretary; Arthur Anderson, treasurer, and Mrs. M. H. Taylor, financial secretary. A number of committee appointments were also made.

Lost 6,000,000 Pounds
Clark said the Soo line lost 6,000,000 pounds in class rate freight from one Wisconsin point alone during the five year period from 1924 to 1929 and testified that the road's decrease in merchandise volume was $478,293.13, most of which he attributed to truck competition.

Nitrate Plants Cause Dispute

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (AP)—Dispute over disposition of the nitrate plants at Muscle Shoals to-night had wrecked the tentative conference agreement reached last week and ensnared the legislation in another controversy.

House conferees today insisted the lessee of the nitrate plants should be permitted to manufacture other chemical products besides fertilizer. Senate conferees demanded that production be limited to fertilizer and its ingredients.

Senator Norris, Republican, Nebraska, author of the senate government operation bill, walked out of the conference charging the house conferees had "completely violated" the tentative agreement reached last week.

"This would mean," Norris said, "a great chemical plant operated by private interests with a government subsidy."

House conferees proposed to limit the production of fertilizer to 10,000 tons annually.

Page to Give Vesper Talk, Lead Retreat

Author-Traveler Will Direct Y. M. C. A. Conference

Kirby Page, author, lecturer, who will lead an east Iowa Y.M.C.A. retreat this week end and give the university vesper address Sunday afternoon, has traveled both in this country and abroad.

Born in Texas, he has since made his home in California, Louisiana, Iowa, Illinois, New Jersey, and New York, residing altogether in seven states.

Receiving his bachelor of arts degree from Drake university with Phi Beta Kappa scholarship, he has since studied at the University of Chicago, Columbia university, and Union Theological seminary. As a speaker, he has addressed college audiences on 200 campuses throughout the country, and has been on the program of 10 variously located regional student conferences, including those at Lake Geneva, Wis., attended by University of Iowa delegates.

Editor of Delphi
While at Drake Mr. Page was a varsity basketball player, intercollegiate tennis champion of the state, and editor of the weekly Delphi. He is giving talks tomorrow and Friday to audiences at his alma mater in Des Moines, appearing today on the University of Nebraska campus at Lincoln.

Following his graduation in 1915 Mr. Page became associated with Sherwood Eddy, traveling with him in evangelistic work among soldiers in the war zone from 1916 to 1918, also working with students in the Far East. He was then for three years minister of the Ridgewood church of Christ in New York.

After five years as a publicist, writing and speaking on social, economic, and international questions, he became editor of The World Tomorrow in 1925.

Political Observers Look to Four Possibilities for Mayor

By STAN WOODRING
With but 10 days to file petitions for all offices, except ward aldermen, in the city primaries Feb. 23, the local political buzz has risen to a drone around those places where politicians are wont to chat.

Glen A. Kenderdine, Democratic chairman, banged the opening canon with an appeal to all members to assemble at the city hall Monday at 7:30 p.m. for a mass meeting. Candidates for offices and committee members will be suggested at that time.

The mass meeting is not necessarily called to endorse specific candidates, according to Mr. Kenderdine, but mainly to get a sound and early organization.

Mention 4 Candidates
At least four possibilities for the mayor's office have already been mentioned in Democratic circles. Mayor J. J. Carroll is definitely in the running following his public announcement last week. Edward O'Connor, former county attorney, is endorsed by some strong party leaders but would neither affirm nor deny the fact yesterday, saying it was "too early."

Dr. W. L. Bywater, alderman-at-large, who has withdrawn from the next council race was also spoken of by some who are supposed to be in on the "dope." C. G. Sample, former fifth ward alderman and present milk inspector, is the fourth Democrat mentioned as having his eye on the ring and his hat ready to toss.

Possible Aldermen
Three Democratic possibilities for ward aldermen are also mentioned in early discussions: Mike McGuan, 615 S. Capitol, brother of the late Charles McGuan who was first ward councilman at his death, may seek his brother's office. Edward W. Svbl, 1120 E. Davenport, has a name in the third ward, politicians indicate.

The Rev. C. Rollin Sherck, 313 Ronalds street, also may draw Democratic consideration for third ward representative or possibility of alderman-at-large in the place vacated by Dr. Bywater. LeRoy Mercer will again seek Democrat votes for the other alderman-at-large position and Charles Reagan is again a candidate for the fifth ward choice. No one has yet been mentioned in the fourth ward.

New Terms Delay India's Rule Dream

LONDON, Jan. 13 (AP)—A muslim ultimatum of the age-old Hindu-Muslim quarrel today focused the attention of the Indian round table conference on a problem which may delay the realization of India's dream of responsible government.

Sir Muhammad Shafi, as Moslem spokesman, declared that "no constitution, by whomsoever devised, shall be accepted by Indian Moslems unless their interests are adequately safeguarded in that constitution."

The statement was a mere repetition of the Moslem position but coming as it did almost on the eve of adjournment of the conference, it caused something of a sensation. It followed the outline of a scheme for a federal government, given yesterday by Lord Chamberlain Shanks-Dunlop, which was the basis of a good deal of optimism that the conference labors would be crowned with success.

Sir Muhammad virtually declared today that Indian Moslems will not support self-government for India until their differences with the Hindus are settled.

Thus the conference approaches its final sessions with Premier Ramsay MacDonald again carrying the load of responsibility for British statesmanship.

A. O. Thomas Succumbs to Long Illness

Death Closes 21 Years of Service to His Alma Mater

After 21 years of service in the University of Iowa geology department, Prof. Abram O. Thomas, 54, died at 2 p.m. yesterday at his home, 221 Melrose avenue. He was confined to his bed for the last five months, having taken ill seven months before with an ailment characterized by nerve paralysis.

Professor Thomas, since 1927 a full time professor, received a degree of bachelor of philosophy from the university in 1904 and a master of science in 1909.

Specializing in Paleontology, he received the doctor of philosophy award from the University of Chicago in 1923. Until that year he taught at Sciencetown, after spending four years as superintendent of schools at Wellman.

Field Trips, Expeditions
Each summer the geologist spent his time on field trips collecting materials for his many collections. His group of Silurian coral is among the largest. He gave courses in mineralogy and petrology at Lakeside laboratory on Lake Okoboji for several years and served as geologist and field assistant of the Iowa geological survey.

In 1908 he was a member of the Barbados-Antigua scientific expedition; collecting material for the university museum. He was also a member of the Fiji expedition from the university.

Researches, Memberships
Among Professor Thomas' research projects were the glacial history of the Lake Okoboji region, the Cedar River valley, and Johnson county. According to Prof. Arthur C. Trowbridge of the geology department, Professor Thomas was best known for his work on "Crinoids of the Iowa Devonian" published in 1925 by the Iowa geological survey.

Professor Thomas was a member of several scientific and honorary societies, including the American Academy for the Advancement of Science, the Geographical Society of America, the Paleontological Society of America, Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Xi, and Gamma Alpha. In 1923-24 he was secretary-treasurer of the Iowa Academy of Science. Professor Thomas was also a member of the Iowa Research club, a local scientific organization.

He is survived by his widow, his mother who resides at Williamsburg, three sisters and two brothers.

Sigma Xi Memorial Tonight
A 15 minute memorial service will be held for the scientist before the lecture meeting of Sigma Xi tonight in Iowa Union. Funeral arrangements will be announced today.

Dean George F. Kay of the college of liberal arts and head of the geology department, said in tribute:

"Professor Thomas was one of the most successful teachers of geology I have ever known. He presented his facts with unusual clarity and, without exception, he awakened the interest and enthusiasm of his students. During his illness I received many letters of inquiry from those who had been in his classes. His pleasing personality made lifelong friends with all persons who were fortunate enough to make his acquaintance."

Leading Paleontologist
"He had a thorough knowledge of the paleontology of Iowa, and at the

To Bunk or Not to Bunk? Questions Oklahoma's Head

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 13 (AP)—In one of the numerous recommendations made in the message of Gov. William H. Murray to the legislature today, the new governor advocated the construction of a building in which members of the legislature could live, working on bills at night and sleeping there.

Governor Murray stated the capitol "bunkhouse" would serve to keep the law makers away from the hotel lobbyists "who use poker games, liquor and women and even money for bribery."

Lowering of expenditures was the tenor of many of his proposals which included the revision of the state tax system.

County Gets Request for Aid of Poor

Red Cross Fixes One Thousand Dollars as Quota

Picturing the need of thousands of families actually starving in 21 states of the drought stricken area, a telegram received yesterday by Verne Miller, chairman of the Johnson county chapter of the American Red Cross, called for immediate response by the people of Johnson county to meet this emergency situation. One thousand dollars was set as the county quota.

The telegram, sent by W. M. Baxter, Jr., director of the mid-western bureau of the Red Cross, expressed the necessity of a most vigorous campaign to help those people in the stricken areas. In some sections, it read, the pollution of water supplies by dying cattle is adding to the winter hardships.

Because of general conditions and a greatly increased demand during the last ten days this campaign was started to be imperative, and the results of the efforts, a test of the Red Cross by the president and the nation.

Contributions may be left at any of the banks in Iowa City or at the Red Cross rooms in the city hall.

Emergency States

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (AP)—The drought relief problem faced by the American Red Cross was said tonight by John Barton Payne, the national chairman, to present "the greatest emergency in peace time that the organization has ever been called upon to meet."

His statement was made after President Hoover had issued a proclamation calling upon the public for $10,000,000 to be expended by the Red Cross in buying food and clothing for drought sufferers.

Congress in Deadlock
Meanwhile, the two branches of congress remained deadlocked over the senate proposal to add $15,000,000 for food loans to the $45,000,000 drought relief appropriation bill. Conferees failed to reach an agreement late in the day. The next move in this controversy will be a senate vote on whether to insist on its amendment.

In his statement, Chairman Payne said the 1927 Mississippi valley flood, in which the Red Cross spent $16,994,868 for relief of approximately 600,000 persons, "his aid far to overshadowed in the present drought relief work."

"While at the peak of the Mississippi river flood work we were feeding and providing living quarters in refugee camps for 325,000 people. We find today that we have already given drought assistance to 405,000 persons and calls are increasing daily, indicating that the peak is not yet in sight."

Decision Cuts $17,000 Grant Down to $7,000

Judgment of $17,000 granted Joseph Cerny against Harvey Secor in district court here in November 1929 was reduced to $7,000 in a decision handed down by the Iowa supreme court yesterday.

Cerny filed a suit of $25,000 against Secor following the death of his son Joseph J. Cerny, 19, who was killed, the petition says, when a car driven by Secor in which the boy was riding was wrecked on the Red Ball road toward the northern limits of Iowa City.

Officials in charge of the Fayal naval wireless station tried all day to contact the San Miguel station, and finally succeeded in learning tonight that nothing had been heard of the seaplane carrying Lieut. William S. MacLaren and Mrs. Beryl Hart.

House Passes Bill on Copyright Law

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (AP)—The house today overwhelmingly approved the Vestal bill to revise the copyright laws.

The eight year old proposal now goes to the senate. A vote of 185 to 34 ended the long dispute over this first redraft of copyright laws since 1909.

The bill provides United States membership in the International Copyright union, now including about 40 other nations; and confers automatic and exclusive right to copy upon producers of creative work, with divisible copyright interest for separate uses of the product.

New Yorker Says Cartoon Words False

Republicans Asked to Print Correction of Drawing

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (AP)—Echoes of the 1928 presidential campaign were heard at the capitol today in a demand from Alfred E. Smith, the Democratic standard bearer for an "apology and reparation" from the Republican national committee.

In a letter to Senator Wagner of New York, a Democratic member of the senate campaign funds committee, Smith characterized as "false" statements attached to a barroom cartoon circulated in Nebraska last fall against Senator Norris, Republican independent, by Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the Republican national organization.

Prosperity On Way
The statement, which Smith said was due to a "hoax" on the Joel Parker association of Newark, N. J., and denied by him August 21, 1930, quoted him as saying the Democratic party would soon be in control and "will make this a happy as well as a prosperous nation."

The cartoon was entitled "Al Smith-Raskob-Idea of Happiness." Smith referred to testimony before the campaign funds committee that Lucas had 800,000 copies of the cartoon distributed in several states, including Nebraska, and said:

"I think an apology and reparation is due me from the Republican national committee which permitted its director to do this and that I am entitled to have 800,000 copies of a statement showing that I was falsely quoted, distributed just as widely as the original cartoon was and to the same organization."

He said an "injustice" had been done not only to himself but Chairman John J. Raskob of the Democratic national committee, "to say nothing of Senator Norris."

Fess, Lucas Silent
Neither Chairman Fess nor Lucas would comment on the Smith letter which was read before the Nye committee at the outset of today's session.

J. Matt Chilton, Republican national committeeman for Kentucky, Galen L. Tait, Republican state chairman for Maryland, and F. H. Cretch, Nye committee auditor and investigator, were questioned. Chilton and Cretch were examined principally regarding the circulation of the cartoon and its inclusion in special campaign editions of the Fellowship Forum, a Ku Klux Klan newspaper, which were sent to Kentucky, Alabama and West Virginia.

Copies Cost $3,375
Cretch testified the records of the Independent Publishing company of this city, which prints the Forum, showed $3,375 worth of these "special editions" were distributed in Kentucky and dealt with prohibition and religion. He said former senator Robison, Republican, Kentucky, ordered more than 100,000 copies and said friends would pay for them. The records further showed, Chairman Nye later observed, that Robert M. Estes paid $2,000 of the $3,375 bill.

Mystery Veils Lost Seaplane

HORTA, Island of Fayal, Azores, Jan. 14 (AP)—Information received late tonight from San Miguel Island, Azores, that neither residents of the island nor its wireless station had heard anything of the American seaplane Tradewind, which left Bermuda for the Azores last Saturday and since has been unreported.

This followed receipt of a dispatch from New York which said the

100 Men Will Attend Dinner at Iowa Union

Students and Graduates Invited to Annual Banquet

More than 100 men will be guests at the Finkbine dinner for men scheduled for Saturday at 6 p.m., in the river room of Iowa Union. Students invited to the dinner are asked in recognition of their leadership on the campus.

In the past students and a number of university officials were invited to meet the late W. O. Finkbine's personal friends, a custom which will continue. This year invitations were sent to all persons who have ever attended any of the dinners.

Since the first Finkbine dinner, Feb. 21, 1917, more than 1,100 students have been guests of the alumni at the annual banquet which has become a tradition on the Iowa campus.

Staff Works on Problems of Psychology

Research Workers Study 46 Problems of Man's Mind

The mind of man and its varied ramifications and functions is being subjected to scientific scrutiny in the University of Iowa psychological laboratory as graduate students and staff members undertake 46 research problems.

Investigators quest solution music, art, reading, disabilities, stuttering, social, psychology, and the central nervous system—each has its group of investigators questing the solution of technical enigmas by means of which they hope to learn and prove hitherto elusive facts.

Ten investigations in the psychology of music are based upon the assumption that beauty consists chiefly of artistic deviations from the regular—true pitch, rigid time, even intensity, and pure tone. Voice string instruments, and piano are being studied.

Research includes stuttering. In the realm of stuttering, some of the unique researches include the influence of stuttering upon the development of personality, breathing and eye movements of stutters during silent reading and reasoning, and a photographic study of the stutterer's voice and speech.

Ability Necessary. Recognizing the fact that inadequate reading ability is one of the common causes of failure in college, a corrective service now is in operation for freshmen. After a thorough summation of all the factors involved, a process of re-education is brought about through individual treatment.

The preschool child is the subject for a series of researches in the beginnings of artistic capacity. Aided by a recent grant of $12,000 from the Carnegie corporation, the scientists will carry forward their studies in capacity for sensing rhythm and color, and responsiveness to unity and fitness.

There are 4 graduate students employed in this capacity by the university, 23 seniors, 23 juniors, 6 sophomores, and 9 freshmen. Colleges and schools represented in these ranks and the number of students from each are: medicine 14; journalism 1; dentistry 7; engineering 7; law 5; pharmacy 1; commerce 7; liberal arts 19, and graduate 4.

Newcomers Get Welcome in New Play

Seven newcomers were welcomed to the university stage last evening as "The Perfect Alibi" opened a three day run in the theater. Of the 11 members of the cast of the A. A. Milne comedy, only four have been in university theater plays.

The play was called "The Fourth Wall" in London where it was first played, for the audience sees the action take place through the fourth wall of a private sitting room. There is murder committed in this room, an alibi is constructed before the audience, and the befuddled detectives seek to unravel the mystery before the eyes of the spectators.

Lewis Asks State Senate Appointment of New Committee

DES MOINES, Jan. 13 (AP)—J. C. Lewis, president of the Iowa Federation of Labor, in an open letter to legislators today asked that the senate committees, appointed by Lieut. Gov. Arch McFarlane, be displaced by one appointed by the senate as a whole.

Lewis continued a discussion of his charges that McFarlane misused his office to obtain coal contracts from railroads. He asserted that the lieutenant governor, if innocent, "ought to be clamoring for vindication."

"The question now is much larger than the question of his guilt or innocence," Lewis said. "It goes to the very foundation of representative government."

11th Carload of Potatoes

Last week we received a carload of Idaho Potatoes, which contained 240 100-lb. bags of No. 2 grade Idaho Russets. Our customers considered these potatoes such a value that we oversold these 240 bags in less than two days. Accordingly, we bought from the same source, the D. E. Ryan Company, another carload of these same No. 2 grade Idaho Russet Burbanks. Idaho fortunately has a very stringent grading law. Idaho Russets are in our opinion the finest potatoes in the world. It is significant that on the future potato market which is being inaugurated in Chicago, January 12th, a good grade of Idaho Russet is made the standard for delivery upon future contracts. These No. 2 grade Idaho Russet Burbanks constitute a splendid eating value. We quote at the following price:—

A Man Who Knew God

PROF. Abram O. Thomas died yesterday after two decades of service as a university instructor in geology. And as he died, hundreds of students who had seen a vision when he spoke in a classroom, knew that his spirit returned to the rocks, to the hills, to nature that was his God.

When Professor Thomas appeared before his classes and spoke with dry Welsh humor and homely farmland phrases, the drab academic cloak of his subject fell away and his hearers caught the fire and inspiration of one who bowed before the majestic grandeur of the universe.

He paid no court to a God of superstition; he was not bound by the fetters of blind religion. Yet he was just as far from doing homage to a cold and rigid deity—he had a broader, more beautiful picture of man's place in the universe.

Intensely eager to stamp out ignorant misconceptions of life wherever he found them, he was equally ardent in painting his concept of God in nature, and nature as God manifested.

With his health failing, he devoted his last energies to his students and there were few, coming perhaps to scoff, failed to grasp a new vision, and a new philosophy of the things that are.

The recognition he won in high scientific circles can never compare with the place he has held in the hearts of those whom he led through new vistas of understanding.

The Lingle Killer

HAS the man been found who killed Jake Lingle? If he has, and if he can be convicted, what effect will it have upon the crime situation in Chicago? These and other questions pertinent to the arrest of Leo Brothers are current topics of comment.

Pat Roche and Charles F. Rathbun, who have been in charge of the investigation, are avowedly certain that they have the right man. He has been positively identified as the one who killed Lingle by witnesses of the crime. Just what other evidence has been collected against the gangster, the state's attorney's office has failed to reveal.

In spite of the jubilation, a reasonable doubt is discernible as to the prisoner's guilt, at present. The well known fallibility of the human perception and memory serves to cast suspicion on such positive identification. Evidence shows Brothers was paid $600 by five others, three of them since shot.

From another angle, the furor which the case caused made some sort of action on the part of the officials imperative. Moreover, the municipal elections are approaching.

At any rate, even a conviction of the St. Louis gangster will not prove a miraculous panacea for all of Chicago's criminal ills, as it is being hailed in some quarters. Pinning of responsibility on George "Bugs" Moran and Julian "Potatoes" Kaufman is not even the whole thing. It would be a note worthy step in curbing crime, a victory over the half world, but only a direct attack on the rotten heart of the city's political organization can do anything effective toward eliminating crime.

Why Not Closed Parties?

SINCE the last meeting of the interfraternity council two social fraternities have lost their party privileges. In one case a chaperon had his cheek injured when a firecracker exploded during a dance which persons not members of the fraternity described as "wild." Blame for the incident was placed upon an uninvited guest.

As the men who will meet tonight as members of the interfraternity council know, a campus policy of sanctioning open parties and not closed ones amounts to passing the buck, a process not recognized by the university social committee.

Since, if other groups are in a similar situation, any fraternity can arbitrarily limit its invitations and even post a guard to inspect credentials of guests. The present attitude is that this would be an unsocial thing to do. That attitude is responsible to a degree for loss of social privileges by one social fraternity and for numerous unreported occasions where unskilled imbibers let their spirits flow too freely.

Even if the responsibility placed upon fraternities by the administration acting through the social committee were unwise, the best thing fraternities could do would be to make the best of it. Since leading Greek letter men favor a similar policy, acceptance of that responsibility seems the logical next step.

A Relapse in Progress

A mob in Missouri wrested a Negro from the hands of the sheriff who held him captive, chained him to the flagpole of a schoolhouse, and proceeded to burn the structure. The Negro had confessed to an assault and murder of a 19 year old white school teacher.

At first thought the average individual is inclined to be in sympathy with the mob. The only just punishment for such a dastardly and wanton crime appears to be death, and that as quickly as possible. However, the orderly process of law should not be set aside at the will of a mass of men moved by passion instead of reason, impelled more strongly by a man's color than by his behavior.

The force of public opinion in the vicinity of the crime would render any verdict but that of death highly improbable. And how much more satisfactory would be a verdict arrived at sanely, and in an orderly manner! Civilization will not have reached its highest level as long as examples of mob violence occur from time to time. A mob is so easily swayed by elemental passion that its verdicts have not the proper components to be considered final.

Organized government becomes a farce if decisions rendered by an inflamed crowd of men are considered equitable.

Where God and Atheism Meet

"NO ONE can study the miracles of plant life and remain an atheist," remarked Arthur C. Pillsbury, naturalist and lecturer, as he flashed on the screen moving pictures of the germination, budding, blooming and seeding of flowers. They were pictures to humble the most overgrown ego, one might say. And on the other hand, one might also say they were pictures to exalt it.

The parallel marvels of growth, maturity and reproduction in animal life were but hinted at by a few illustrations of structural biology, such as arterial circulation, but these were sufficient to project thought further into consideration of the higher phases of intelligent life—sufficient to shame human underestimation or abuse of nature. Viewing them might lead one to forgive such romanticists as Walt Whitman who exalted the beauties of natural phenomena at the expense of reason and ethical judgment.

Mr. Pillsbury's remark concerning atheism indicates how science has led man from the old view of God as a divine judge to God as a divine principle of law of physical life. Medieval Christianity would have called this modern concept "atheism." Today, some persons class as atheists all individuals who do not see in the exquisite timing of a flower's blossoming or in the marvelous provisions for the pollen-reaching and fertilizing the ovule within the flower, a transcendent plan or purpose.

But why stigmatize as "atheist" the man who sees in the phenomena of physical life—botanical, zoological, or biological—the operation of a miraculous law of adaptation to the necessities of environment? If he finds in it beauty and satisfaction, if he builds from it an ethical and moral code that observes and rightly utilizes natural laws—he will have found a religion as legitimate and noble as the worship of a personal God.

Scientists have discovered that cold storage eggs are more potent in preventing rickets than fresh eggs. We need no test tubes or microscopes to tell us that an egg gets stronger with age.

What About Trade-ins?

Magnus Hirschfeld: Divorce would not be so frequent if the average American would select his wife with the same circumspection with which he buys an automobile.

Time for Children

In commenting on the 1930 report of the juvenile court in Johnson county, the probation officer would like to make the following statements.
There has been an increase in the delinquency problem in Iowa City during the last year. In 1929 there were 64 cases of delinquency, in 1930 there were 107 cases. Who is to blame?

President Hoover's statement at the White House conference reveals the new light in which the delinquent child is being viewed when he says "It is not the delinquent child that is at the bar of justice but society itself."
We know that delinquency is not a static thing, that it is contagious, that it breeds and spreads. We do not permit physical disease epidemics to spread in a community without making every effort to check them. This should hold just as true with moral infection. Any community that desires to prevent delinquency must provide recreation facilities for all its boys and girls. No community program is sound that provides social affairs, secret societies, clubs, and groups for adults, and leaves out its children.

In an ideal community there should be no isolated or neglected groups. There is a need for all to live and work together.

No community program can run itself. It must be a continuous and growing process, and only insofar as people believe in a thing and are willing to struggle and work for it can the object become a success. If the people of our community believe that delinquency can be eradicated or diminished, if they are willing to seek knowledge and use every method known to science and mankind to remedy this evil, then, and not until then, can we obtain results in proportion to our efforts.

I believe no finer thing can be said of any community than "They have time for their children."
—Mabel Evans,
chief probation officer of Johnson county.

Explanation of yesterday's cartoon. "Faction Means 'An Embace'" The Fathom, like the foot, yard and others, is an ancient unit of measure derived from the dimensions of the human body. It means literally "embrace" (ancient Saxon "factum") and is defined in the ancient Act of Parliament as "the length of both of a swain's arms around the object of his affection."

Black Paint Makes White Paint Whiter: By adding four or five drops of black paint to a pall of white paint, the black drops act as a bleaching agent, making the white paint even whiter.
The White Rhinoceros: While on an exploring and hunting expedition in Africa, G. G. Schilling had the unique experience of shooting a rhinoceros which was unusual in two ways. It was of the Burckell's rhinoceros group (commonly known as the white rhinoceros) which is now practically exterminated, and it had a horn which measured 6 feet 9 inches in length. Rhinoceros's horn usually measure only three or four feet.

CHILLS AND FEVER

DOUSING THE DEPRESSION
Dear Mr. Chills:
I have some ideas on this era of Republican prosperity that should be disclosed to the general public. I've known for a long time that they are economically sound but have kept my mouth shut, waiting for more proof. Now I have it. One of the economics professors of the university, in a lecture early in the week, outlined the immediate causes of the depression. He stated that as credit was withdrawn, prices went down, and production was, of course, lowered. This naturally threw men out of work, and, as the lecturer said, "money got locked up in bank vaults."
There, Mr. Chills, is the solution. In a nutshell, the money in an eggshell. If that money, now locked up in bank vaults, was put back into circulation, the problem would be solved.
My fingers are sensitive, friend, and I've opened many a bank vault in my day. The cops picked me up ten years ago and unemployment didn't bother me until last fall. I'm a modest man, but if the depression and unemployment situation disappear within the next few months, you can thank my buddies and me.

Board Picks Dr. Bywater as President

Installs Six Directors; Hears Year Reports at Meeting

Dr. W. L. Bywater was elected president of the chamber of commerce for 1931 at a meeting of the board of directors last night in the office of the American Legion building. E. A. Chappell was named vice president, and J. A. Parden and D. W. Crum were re-elected treasurer and secretary respectively.

The meeting was the first of the year and six newly elected directors were installed. A financial report of the 1930 activities showed that approximately $2,000 was expended for the year's work. A resolution was unanimously passed praising the president and other officers for the quality of the administration. Discussion of plans for the new year occupied the remainder of the time.

Dr. Bywater, who succeeds Carl Cone as head of the organization and Mr. Chappell who follows Vernon R. Bales as vice president, are both members of the present board of directors and have served previously. Mr. Parden is serving his third term as treasurer, and Mr. Crum is in his ninth year as full time secretary.

Dorothy Sutton will continue as assistant secretary, a position she has held for eight years. Mr. Crum said last night.

Handmade Flags, Insignia of Local Bohemian Societies, Added to Library Collection

Among the latest additions to the display of historical relics in the State Historical library in the liberal arts building, are two handmade silk flags, insignia of local Bohemian societies which until 1928 were active in Iowa City. They were made by John Zerzan of Omaha, who, until his death last year, was one of the few remaining artists in that field in this country.

The flags are approximately 5 by 8 feet in dimension and double, carrying on one side the American flag and on the other the insignia of the Bohemian lodges for which they were made.

"Slovanska Lipa," the oldest society, which was organized here May 11, 1863, met regularly in the C.P.S. hall on Johnson street until it was disbanded on Oct. 18, 1928.

It had an average membership of 80. The name "Slovanska Lipa" is embroidered in gold and jewels on the white stripe; the date of organization appears on either side of the wreath on the blue; and Iowa City, Iowa is lettered in gold and red.

The second society, "Zastit," was organized Feb. 1, 1870 and disbanded Sept. 22, 1928. Its banner is similar to the one previously described, but is made of two wide stripes of white and red with the name and dates differing.

The flags were presented to the State Historical society by Anton Nerad, 619 E. Fairchild street, who was treasurer of "Zastit" for 21 years and president of "Slovanska Lipa" for 13 years. He was given charge of the flags at the time the lodges were disbanded. Mrs. Nerad is the sister-in-law of Zerzan, maker of the flags.

Arnold Cross entered a plea of guilty in district court yesterday to violating a liquor injunction and was fined $300 and costs. The injunction was issued Oct. 3 by Judge R. G. Fosham.

Should Cross wish to serve out his fine, Judge Harold D. Evans decided, he will be allowed to apply 26 days he has spent in jail awaiting hearing on the 90 day sentence which is the alternative.

The roster of 40 nominees for the new officers in the University of Iowa alumni association soon will be announced by Prof. F. G. Higbee, executive secretary of the organization, it was reported Tuesday.

With 20 offices to be filled, balloting will begin on March 1 and April 1, and the officers will be installed at the June meeting of the association.

Alumni will choose a president, two vice presidents, a director from the first, third, fifth, seventh, ninth, and eleventh Iowa congressional districts, and eleven new members of the nominating committee.

Benjamin F. Swisher of Waterloo, now is holding the presidential position for the second consecutive year, while Robert J. Bannister of Des Moines, and Henry G. Walker of Iowa City are the vice presidents.

Nurses Make Plans for Yearly Report

total cases were 317; and office work reported 112 letters written, 543 telephone calls, and 111 office visits.

The dairy department, just recently added, reports that since Dec. 18, 25 families have been supplied with from 25 to 40 quarts of milk daily.

Kiwanis Install Chapter
MT. PLEASANT, Jan. 13 (AP)—A chapter of Kiwanis international was installed here today by Henry A. Dormeyer of Chicago, district governor, Clubs from Burlington; and Carthage, Hyde Park, and Hamilton, Ill., were represented by delegations.

Iowa City High Defeats University High in Rousing 14 to 10 Contest

Little Hawks Come From Behind to Win

Hawket Captain Tallies Seven Markers to Lead Team

Iowa City high came from behind in the second half of its game with University high last night to win the contest, 14 to 10. The Little Hawks trailed 6 to 4 at the halfway mark but outscored the Handymen 10 to 4 in the third and fourth periods.

Miss Hoop

The Wellmen outclassed the Blue and White from the start but were unable to hit the hoop. The Handymen played their best basketball game of the year staving off the threatening avalanche of Hawket points by their fighting spirit. The third quarter was the most exciting of the game with neither team able to get over a two point lead. The stanza ended with the score tied at nine all.

"Pinky" High Scorer

Capt. Eldred Vestermark was the outstanding player on the court, garnering seven points for the high scorer. Capt. Ed Fairchild of the University high team was high point man for his crew with five counters. Wright of Iowa City high and Foster of the Handymen were next in line for personal honors with four tallies each.

City high outclassed their opponents in both offense and defense, having control of the situation nearly at all times. The Handymen were only able to score on breaks of the game and were continually rushed by the Hawket's aggressive tactics. The Blue and White cagers were ineffective in their handling of the ball and only their inspired playing kept the score low.

U. High Misses Chance

University high missed its chance to at least tie the score by the inability to make its free throws good. The Handymen missed six out of eight free shots while the Hawket only missed four out of ten. Therein lies the difference in the score for each team made the same number of field goals.

In the first half the Blue and White basketed had their chance to get the lead. They got it but two points were not enough. In the second half the contest was waged almost entirely under the Iowa City high guard with University high getting few chances to carry the fight into their own territory.

Takes Lead

University high took the lead at the start of the game when after two minutes of play Foster, Blue and White forward, sank a short shot. At the middle of the initial quarter Wright, Iowa City guard, made two charity tosses count and the session ended at 4 to 2 in the university school's favor.

In the second quarter Foster made a wild dash along the sidelines and dropped the ball through the hoop, netting his team another two points while Vestermark dropped a long one for Iowa City and that concluded the scoring in that frame.

Nip and Tuck

The third period was a neck and neck race with each team getting the lead but unable to keep it. It ended with the score nine all. The frame was marked by a reversal of form on the part of the Iowa City high team and the gradual slowing up of Coach Handy's men.

Only Charity Toss

In the final stanza, the Wellmen found themselves and kept University high from getting a shot at the basket except by the charity route. Vestermark made a field goal and a free throw and Wright a field goal while Lenz of the river school was making one charity toss. The quarter ended with Iowa City in possession of the ball and ready to do more damage to the three University high team.

Sportively Speaking

By Bill Rutledge

Former favorites have found that they need something more than their reputations to keep them buoyed up. They can't sail along on their past performances—not in the jumbled race of this year.

With a bruising attack that was no respecter of basketball reputations, the Hawkeys hustled themselves to a startling 25 to 23 triumph over the Bollermakers in a game that threw Old Gold fans into paroxysms of ecstasy.

Iowa's outlook for victory is the most complete upset of the race thus far. In making chumps out of Johnny Wooden et al, the little lads from the state of the tall corn battled desperately and fought brilliantly through a sizzling contest.

The rugged Riegert, who scored not a point against Minnesota, blazed forth with four field goals in the first half. Incidentally it was Bolla Williams' first Big Ten win since becoming cage mentor.

The closeness of the race can be deduced from the fact that the first place Wildcats won from the last place Illini by a single basket. Two points difference between what are probably the best and poorest teams in the conference.

Chicago showed the Hoosiers that their fears were not unfounded in eking out a 28 to 27 triumph Saturday night in overtime. Indiana came back Monday evening to barely win over Ohio State, 23 to 21. The Buckeyes had previously spilled Wisconsin, 29 to 19. Not only was the Buckeyes' victory surprising, but even more so was the decisiveness of the outcome.

Iowa's loss to the Gophers Saturday night was due primarily to the invaders' strength rather than any weakness on the part of the Hawkeys. Coach Williams displayed a promising squad that rosters were sure would do well in subsequent encounters. But they had no idea that the team would rise to the heights of licking Purdue.

Northwestern is slightly ahead of the nine other Big Ten outfits, with a pair of victories. The conference standings:

Northwestern	2	0	56	49
Chicago	1	0	28	27
Minnesota	1	0	26	22
Michigan	2	1	74	66
IOWA	1	1	47	49
Indiana	1	1	50	49
Ohio State	1	1	50	42
Purdue	1	2	75	69
Wisconsin	1	2	48	61
Illinois	0	3	51	71

Daniels, Michigan's elonized center, leads the individual scorers with 23 points. Wooden, Purdue's star guard who was held to a free throw by Iowa, is second with 20 tallies. Here are the leading point makers in conference games. You will notice that Chuck Williamson, the plump and agile Hawkey forward, tops the Iowans.

Ralph Parcaut Defeats Croy in Feature Bout of American Legion Show

Mat Champ Drops First Fall to Croy

Hills Teacher Unable to Continue Match; Timm Wins

Ralph Parcaut, world's middleweight wrestling champ, mastered Harold Croy, aspiring Hills schoolmaster, last night before the largest Legion fight crowd of the season. Croy won the first fall in 20 minutes and 23 seconds on a toe hold when Parcaut signaled the referee after withstanding the twister for more than three minutes.

Parcaut took the offensive during the second period and after 8 minutes and 5 seconds of slow grappling, picked up his opponent and slammed him to the mat, pinning him with a reverse wristlock and flying mare. A physician was called into the ring but Croy was unable to continue because of a torn ligament and Parcaut was awarded the third fall and the match by default.

Croy Starts Fast

Croy surprised local fans when he outwrestled his veteran opponent during the early stages of the bout. The Hills schoolmaster clamped on a number of headlocks only to have the speedy Newton middleweight slip out of them consistently. Croy succeeded in getting a toe hold on his powerful rival that finally forced him to yield the fall. Parcaut took things easy throughout, then at the right moment, crashed the younger wrestler to the mat to put a sudden end to the performance.

Harold Timm of Muscatine tossed Ray Neffenecker of Kalona in 7:05. Both men rushed around the ring in a furious battle and the Kalona husky almost flopped the youthful Timm with a headlock. However, Timm's experience proved too great a handicap for the rival light heavy for he pushed Neffenecker's shoulders to the mat with a body scissors and wrist headlock.

Green, Hamilton Even

Buddy Green of Lone Tree and Jimmy Hamilton fought to a draw in four slow rounds. Hamilton bettered his rival with a snappy left jab and made the Lone Tree junior-weight miss time after time, but neither fighter had a decided advantage. Both pugilists failed to show any aggressiveness and neither had an edge in the infighting.

Russ Yedlick of Lone Tree knocked out Rudy Raback of Cedar Rapids in the first round. Yedlick rushed the Parlor City southpaw from the starting gong and a barrage of rights sent Yedlick to the canvas. The fighters weighed in at 135 pounds.

Hargrave Beats Snyder

Roger Hargrave of Iowa City shaded Blondy Snyder of Cedar Rapids in a featureless contest. Hargrave's advantage in reach and his constant rushing of his opponent won him the decision. The bantams clinched time after time as the crowd demanded more fighting and less wrestling, but neither boxer appeared willing to fight.

Olsen Cross won a decision over Douglas Hargrave in a slow four rounder. The Iowa City 135 pounder was held to please the crowd because of their constant clinching. Cross fought more cleanly and made his opponent miss his intended knockout swings, to win the preliminary match.

Track Mixer Attracts Over 100 Thinclads

Prentiss, Miller, Bush Tuttle Give Short Program

One hundred track men gathered at the river room of the Iowa Union last evening to help fire the starting gun for the 1931 track season. This annual event was arranged for by Everett Ferguson, A4 of New Lenox, Ill., and his committee.

Bush Tosses Mat

Prof. Stephen Bush acted as master of ceremonies, introducing Prof. Sidney Miller who gave a brief talk on his track recollections. During this talk Professor Miller urged the Iowa squad to have a team spirit and work together as a team throughout the year. "That is the way to have a team. Have every man working for the squad and not for individual honors," stated Professor Miller.

Dr. Henry J. Prentiss, former chairman of the Iowa athletic board told of the foundation of this annual track mixer. "I remember it was after Iowa had lost at the state meet for 12 years, that we fired our coach and took on Coach George Bresnahan. We only had two letter men back on the squad and things looked very doubtful for track prospects.

"We held the first track mixer and had 125 men signed up for the sport before the evening was over. Iowa won their first place at the state meet and have ever since," were Dr. Prentiss' remarks. This gathering was started in 1918 and has continued as an annual event every year.

Something new in regard to athletics was suggested by Prof. W. W. Tuttle and that is to make sports, what could be classed as a laboratory and give regular university hours. This would enable athletes to have a high scholastic average and still do justice to sports. Many interesting details about scholastic averages were brought out by this speaker and he revealed that most prominent athletes had very good jobs today.

Iowa-Hoosier Dual

A motion picture showing the Iowa-Illinois dual meet of 1929 was shown to give sport fans various forms in different outdoor track events. Other entertainment during the evening were musical numbers by Gus Fuhrman, A2 of La Crosse, Wis., and Carlton Vernon, E3 of Corning. Refreshments were served at the close of the track mixer.

Fencers to Receive Practical Instruction

In order that Ernest G. Schroeder, fencing coach, may see how his clasher perform under stress, he has grouped the men into pairs, and in that way, the fencers get practical not only in offense, but also defense.

The men are now learning the methods of parrying, the extension thrust, the thrust, and the charge, in addition to the foot work. Up to this time, the fencers have learned the fundamentals of the art, and now they will go in for the more intricate parts of the sport.

Sam Erhardt Lost to Wrestling Squad

The injury jinx swooped down on the Hawkeye mat squad again last night and as a result, Sam Erhardt, 135 pounder, will be out of the game for some time. Erhardt sustained rib injuries in the tryouts for the Wisconsin meet. Paul Amle, Erhardt's opponent at the time of the accident, is certain to see action against the Badgers.

Tryouts are scheduled to continue tonight with four grapplers scraping for heavyweight honors. Lloyd Oliver will wrestle Neidon Wigie, and Al Coons is to take on Floyd Ernst. Coons, a natural 155 pounder planned to attempt 145 pounds, but had great trouble in getting rid of the surplus flesh. Coach Mike Howard has two good 155 pound men in Coons and Pat Richter. Richter proved that he can take care of himself in the heavyweight division, so Coach Howard has several different combinations to use against the Madison outfit.

Coach Arnbruster Prepares Splashers for Minnesota Meet

Coach Arnbruster Prepares Splashers for Minnesota Meet

Coach Dave Arnbruster pushed his swimmers through a brisk practice last night covering starts, turns, and other points of the sport. The divers were on hand polishing off some of the rough spots in their form and the water polo team went through a half hour of drill.

Ray Mohl, holder of the two A.A.U. records, Jack McGuire, a promising freestyle, Rolie Evans, 220 yard breast-stroke record holder, and Bill McCully, free-styler, looked the best among the splashers.

Divers, led by Captain Wentworth Lobdell, looked good.

The water polo team will see no action at the Minnesota meet Feb. 6, that school having notified the Iowa aggregation that they have dropped the aquatic game from their repertoire. The Iowa team will see its first action when it meets Northwestern. Later in the season they will clash with the representatives of University of Chicago and Wisconsin.

Winner to Clash With "Man Mountain" Carnera

By HERBERT W. BARKER (Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (AP)—Max Schmeling of Germany will defend his heavyweight title against W. L. (Young) Stribling of Macon, Ga., next June, and the winner will face Primo Carnera, vast Italian carpenter, in September under terms of a contract signed by the interested parties late today.

The contract was signed on behalf of Schmeling, Stribling and Carnera with the Madison Square Garden corporation of Illinois.

Meet in June

Briefly it calls for Stribling and Schmeling to meet in June for the Illinois corporation with the Hearst milk fund as the beneficiary, and the winner to battle Carnera for the Illinois corporation alone. A third stipulation was that the ultimate survivor of these two matches would defend the title for the milk fund alone in 1932.

Neither the exact date nor the site for the Stribling-Schmeling bout was fixed but it was understood the bout week in June had been decided upon and that the site would be either Jersey City or Detroit.

Jersey City Site?

"Selection of Jersey City as the place for the battle depended. It was said, upon whether a new stadium to seat something like 100,000 persons would be constructed in time.

"If it is found that Jersey City cannot be selected, Detroit was understood to be the second choice. Some experts cling to the belief that before the selection is finally made, Chicago would be suggested as the logical place for the bout. Soldiers' field in that city will accommodate about 125,000.

Old Contract

One odd quirk in the contract was insisted upon by Carnera representatives, Leon See and Billy Duffy. They had inserted in the agreement provision granting Carnera the right, should he win the championship, to fight at intervals of 30 days should he so desire.

Neither Stribling nor Schmeling will engage in any bouts until they clash for the title.

The entrance of the Madison Square Garden corporation of Illinois into the negotiations may bring down upon the New York Garden the official wrath of the New York State Athletic commission.

Two Order Suspension

Both Schmeling and Carnera are under suspension in this state and a commission rule provides for the suspension of any promoter or organization which deals with a boxer on the ineligible list.

Bill Carey of the Madison Square Garden corporation of New York took no part in the negotiations. The Illinois corporation was organized by Rickard to handle the second Dempsey-Tenney match as a gesture of friendliness to the Illinois boxing commission.

Another of the interesting angles to the heavyweight situation was the complete exclusion of Jack Sharkey, Boston sailorman, from the picture.

Financial Arrangements

Financial arrangements for the Schmeling-Stribling bout call for the usual percentages, 37 1/2 per cent to the champion and 12 1/2 per cent to Striblings.

William E. Saxe, president of the Illinois Garden corporation, carried on negotiations on behalf of the corporation; Stribling was represented by his father-manager, "Pat" Stribling; Schmeling by Joe Jacobs, his manager, and Carnera by Duffy and See.

Some experts cling to the belief that before the selection is finally made, Chicago would be suggested as the logical place for the bout. Soldiers' field in that city will accommodate about 125,000.

Old Contract

One odd quirk in the contract was insisted upon by Carnera representatives, Leon See and Billy Duffy. They had inserted in the agreement provision granting Carnera the right, should he win the championship, to fight at intervals of 30 days should he so desire.

Neither Stribling nor Schmeling will engage in any bouts until they clash for the title.

The entrance of the Madison Square Garden corporation of Illinois into the negotiations may bring down upon the New York Garden the official wrath of the New York State Athletic commission.

Two Order Suspension

Both Schmeling and Carnera are under suspension in this state and a commission rule provides for the suspension of any promoter or organization which deals with a boxer on the ineligible list.

Bill Carey of the Madison Square Garden corporation of New York took no part in the negotiations. The Illinois corporation was organized by Rickard to handle the second Dempsey-Tenney match as a gesture of friendliness to the Illinois boxing commission.

Another of the interesting angles to the heavyweight situation was the complete exclusion of Jack Sharkey, Boston sailorman, from the picture.

Financial Arrangements

Financial arrangements for the Schmeling-Stribling bout call for the usual percentages, 37 1/2 per cent to the champion and 12 1/2 per cent to Striblings.

William E. Saxe, president of the Illinois Garden corporation, carried on negotiations on behalf of the corporation; Stribling was represented by his father-manager, "Pat" Stribling; Schmeling by Joe Jacobs, his manager, and Carnera by Duffy and See.

QUAD SIDELINES

By "MEL"

Section D lightweights scored their second point in three games, when they dropped their third game to section A's lights, 15 to 10.

The teams played but one of the three regulation periods. A section D player left the game after the first period leaving the team with but four available players.

Victor Henningsen, a forward, was the star of the abbreviated contest. He flipped in four field goals. Kinneman and Don Curtis counted a basket apiece for the winners.

Arthur Peay scored the losers only point.

Section C lights overwhelmed their section B rivals, 19 to 4, to annex their third consecutive victory. While limiting their opponents to two goals, the leading lights ran through the B's ineffective defense for nine baskets.

Dale Reichs led the C offense with six points. Lou Loria played a flashy floor game besides making two baskets. Field goals were also scored by Greenfield, Paul, Okerin, and Duckett.

John Johnson and Criswell hit the hoop for section B's tallies.

HELP YOURSELF TO HAPPINESS

Synopsis of preceding instalments:

Anne Harkness is trying desperately to avoid being arrested on a charge of murder. While looking for work, she answered an ad that took her to the studio of an artist, Steve Bernaberry, who had just told his friend, Inspector Lavin, of the police department, that he despised of finding a suitable model. Bernaberry was delighted with Anne's appearance. A professional model, Carlotta Pascoe, who loved the artist, appeared during Anne's visit and became furiously jealous. She shot Bernaberry and then tried to kill herself, but Anne wrested the gun from her. Carlotta then drove her, minus her coat, from the studio. A few hours later Anne learned that she was regarded as the murderer. Thinking that her own mother would doubt her innocence under the circumstances, she boarded a train, intending to go as far as she could. On the train she met a young woman who said she was running away from the man she had married that morning. These confidences were interrupted by a wreck. Anne woke up in a farmhouse, wearing the clothes and jewelry of her train acquaintance. When she refused to give the reporter her name, she was thought a victim of amnesia and her description was published. This publicity had an unexpected result. A man who said he had identified his wife from the description of the clothing and jewelry Anne wore put in an appearance. He is Peter Bernaberry, brother of the murdered artist. On seeing Anne he demanded to know her name and asked where his wife was. Anne refused all information and Bernaberry said he would hold her as a hostage until his wife returned. He informed her without being questioned.

"I know," Anne said without thinking.

"You know?" Sharply. "How?"

"I could tell from the fact that you don't look like a man who has committed justifiable homicide. Even though you are tired."

"I suppose not. Hating is a fatiguing business."

"Yes. But what else can I do?"

"I don't know. What would your brother do?"

"He'd laugh and say that any man who let a woman get close enough to him to kill him deserved to be punished for his carelessness. Steve laughed at nearly everything—not at things that were intended to be funny but at life in general—at what other people thought was serious."

"He lived, then, mostly for the hour that was on the reel—not for the past and future as you do."

"As I do? Do you think that I live for the past and future?"

"Don't you? A good hater must. So does a man who is afraid."

"I'm not afraid."

"Perhaps not afraid of tigers or ghosts or guns or anything that might cut or tear your flesh. But you're afraid of not doing what is expected of you. Your brother, Steve, from what you tell me, would not be afraid of anything—not even death."

"He didn't believe in death."

"Probably he doesn't believe in it even now. I imagine that the only people who really die—die forever, that is—are the ones who expected to."

Julie brought in Anne's breakfast.

"Give Mr. Bernaberry this cup of coffee, Julie, and bring me another."

"I had my breakfast," Peter protested as Julie offered him the cup.

"But you did not eat it," Anne pointed out. "And you'd better drink that coffee and swallow a little toast before you start on another nerve-racking day. No good wife would let her husband leave the house without something in his stomach."

"Do you consider yourself a good wife?"

"I haven't decided yet. But drink the coffee anyway."

Peter did and ate the toast.

Julie reappeared with another cup.

"There is a gentleman to see Madame," she reported.

"A gentleman?" The question from Peter. "What sort of a gentleman?"

"A journalist—what you call a reporter."

"It was Collins, of course. What an unfortunate accident that he had arrived while Peter was still in the house. Anne could not tell him what she wished him to do for her in front of the very man who would brand her story as a lying attempt to evade a just punishment. No, she must see him some way alone.

The natural thing to do, of course, was best. "Tell the reporter, Julie, that I cannot see him just at this moment, but that if he will wait

"Tell him," interrupted Peter, "not to wait at all—that Mrs. Bernaberry cannot be annoyed today."

Julie looked back at Anne to see if she intended to take any exception to the countermanding of her orders. But Anne did nothing. She hoped Collins would go away and come back later.

Conversation languished after Julie left with the message. An election Bernaberry and that's what I called you up about."

"Yes?" Plainly young Mr. Collins was mystified, but willing to be enlightened.

"I can't tell you what I wish to say over the telephone and, even when you know, it won't do any good, but I need help badly."

"Wait a minute. Can I do some little thing for you?"

"I'm afraid it's a pretty big thing."

"Better. I'll be right over."

"Oh, thanks," Anne sighed and dropped back on her pillows. His voice was so friendly and so wholesomely normal that just to hear him lifted a load from her shoulders.

Anne was actually smiling to herself when Peter, driven, doubtless, by convention, came in to say "Good morning." The nurse was there, so the formal ceremony of the evening before was repeated. He did it a trifle more naturally this time and there was less of an aftermath of confusion. Perhaps her lips were not quite such a shock as they had been. Or he had stolen himself against their allure. Anne knew what she must seem very nice, because she had glanced at herself in a hand mirror only a little while before and she was conscious of never having looked so well. A lace cap concealed the head bandage and a crepe de chine nightgown in undoubtedly the most charming of modern feminine costumes.

It was strange to feel a desire to please this man who would strangle her with his hands. If he knew who she was, and yet Anne had a primitive instinct to make him like her, to break down at least in one place that implacable barrier that he had erected against the entire sisterhood of her sex.

Anne could make no satisfactory analysis of her emotions. Partly it was a maternal pity. In some ways Peter was so boyishly ineffectual, he was in a situation that he seemed so naively unable to handle. She wanted to protect him from something, she was not exactly sure of what, most probably it was himself.

Peter sat down a little wearily by her bedside.

"That girl last night turned out to be somebody else's trouble-maker," he informed her without being questioned.

"I know," Anne said without thinking.

"You know?" Sharply. "How?"

"I could tell from the fact that you don't look like a man who has committed justifiable homicide. Even though you are tired."

"I suppose not. Hating is a fatiguing business."

By J. P. McEvoy and J. H. Striebel

Anne read in the morning papers the story of the inquest into the death of the murdered artist. There was actually nothing in the findings of the coroner that she did not already know. It had not seemed to occur to anyone to doubt Carlotta Pascoe's story, and she had not even been bound over to the grand jury. Anne had a feeling that by the time there was any trial in this case Carlotta would have faded into very thin atmosphere.

And Anne's safety, her very life perhaps, depended upon being able to find Carlotta and force a confession from her before her own identity was discovered. It was maddening to be confined to bed, to be watched, as she suspected, by a nurse and a corps of servants, who were instructed not to let her leave the house, while Carlotta was quietly making preparations for flight. Just this one day Anne needed her unimpaired strength and her freedom more than she had ever needed them before in all her life.

There was no one to whom she could trust the relation of confronting Carlotta and forcing a confession from her. Mrs. Harkness, Anne's mother, could not do it, even if Anne had dared let her know where she was. Mrs. Harkness was not the type of woman to deal with a person like Carlotta. Anne's mother was a petty tyrant, a suspicious nag, but not broad visioned enough or powerful enough to force her will on anyone outside of the boundaries of her legal and family domain.

Besides this was a job that required a man. Anne had no men friends. Her companionship with her father had spoiled her for neighborhood intimacies with the young men with whom she would ordinarily have been thrown into contact. And, even if there had been young men friends, even a special boy friend, Anne would not have dared reveal her whereabouts to anyone of her former circle. Everyone she knew was doubtless being watched with the idea that some one of them would eventually get in touch with her.

No, the old avenues were all closed.

The new ones then, Peter, no. The doctor, no. The butler, absurd. That reporter at the hospital—what was his name? Chester Collins.

Why not? It was a desperate chance, and it meant confiding at least part of her secret to a stranger, but was there anything else she could do? He had seemed a nice young man. Maybe—

Anne waited until a moment when neither the nurse nor Julie was in the room and hastily consulted the telephone book for the office of the Chronicle. Then, during another interval, she called up the number and, by an extraordinary good chance, found the young man there.

"Do you remember the girl who couldn't tell her name? At the rail-road wreck yesterday?"

"Do I? I've got you on the front page this morning Mrs. Bernaberry. Did you see the story yet?"

"No," Anne confessed. "I haven't had time. I've just finished reading the article about Mr. Stephment of suspicion seemed to have Peter had been reminded that this person with whom he had been chatting in conventional intimacy was really almost a total stranger and a member of the sex that was antagonistic to his own.

"Monsieur le journaliste say that Madame have sent for him?" Julie returned with that item.

Peter looked at Anne inquiringly. "You sent for him?"

Anne laughed, not so terribly convincingly. "Hardly sent for him. He is the reporter who went to so much trouble to find out who I was and I merely wished to thank him."

Peter scowled. "I'll attend to that, Julie, tell the man to wait. I will see him myself."

Anne could only pray that Collins would have a sudden flash of intuition and not explain to Peter that she had telephoned him so urgently that very morning and asked him to come to her assistance.

Peter, for his part, seemed convinced that the reporter's presence was merely a routine affair or, if he had any further suspicions, he concealed them. In a few moments he left Anne's boudoir and went downstairs to the living room.

Anne wished that she might go to the door and listen to what was said, but an effort to rise only caused an involuntary ejaculation of pain which brought Nurse Bingham to see what was the matter. And the bedroom door was shut, so there was no possibility of hearing anything from where she lay.

Anne could only guess at what happened. A little later, when Julie came in, Anne asked her if the reporter had gone.

"But yes, madame. Almost immediately. He is departed with monsieur, your husband."

Probably Collins would come back later or telephone.

The tunnel was built in one corner of the university stadium and is 56 feet in length, 14 feet in diameter at the bell shaped air intake and 10 1/2 feet at the motor end.

A new course in first aid, designed especially for students in the mining and engineering courses, is being conducted at Kansas by L. L. Naus, of the United States bureau of mines. No more will freshmen at Ohio university fear the discipline of a vigilance committee or be marked by the wearing of the regulation green cap, since abandoning of freshman rules, recently became effective as the result of a resolution passed by the junior-senior governing board.

A men's dormitory and a new biology building are to be included in the projects planned by Ohio university for next year if the appropriation of $1,985,687 asked by the president is passed by the Ohio legislature. The plan has been approved by Ohio's governor, Myers Y. Cooper.

Behind The Scenes IN HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL
HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—Latest reports are that Serge M. Eisenstein the Russian director, will make a picture showing the history of Mexico from the days of the Aztecs until the present. According to letters reaching here from Mexico City, the famous Soviet director of "Potemkin" already has filmed a bull fight, which will be a part of his new film. He is said to be planning to use great mobs of Indians and Mexicans, similar to the technique of his Russian films. The Aztec ruins in the southern republic will form a background to part of the story.

Backing for the venture is said to be of local origin, and the sound and musical effects will be added here in Hollywood.

Eisenstein left the United States upon the termination of his six-months permit, but after a stay in Mexico will be allowed to return for another six months before leaving for Russia.

During his Hollywood visit the director was under contract to Paramount at a reported salary of $3,000 a week. He was mentioned as director of "An American Tragedy," but nothing came of it.

His new picture will have to dialogue.
