Dorothy Sutton Answers Questions in Capacity of Assistant Chamber of Commerce Secretary

By PARK RINARD
Answering questions from "How are I spending today?" to "Where shall I spend my vacation?" is all in the daily routine of Dorothy Sutton, secretary of the Iowa City Automobile club and assistant secretary of the chamber of commerce.

As secretary of the Automobile club, Miss Sutton answers inquiries of all kinds about the roads. Before the Automobile club was established Miss Sutton can remember when out-of-the-state travelers used to come to the chamber of commerce office, fresh from trips through Iowa mud and complain that the farmers went out and poured water on the roads with malicious intent.

Began Work in 1922
Miss Sutton has had the satisfaction of seeing the dream of good roads, which the chamber of commerce has promoted from the first, become a reality.

She began her work as assistant to D. W. Crum, secretary of the chamber of commerce, in the fall of 1922 when the office of the organization was located above the Garden theater. She has been secretary of the Automobile club, which is a branch of the Iowa Automobile association, for three years.

Attended University
She received her higher education at the university and at Irish's business college.

Dorothy Sutton

Miss Sutton believes that chamber of commerce work is one of the most attractive fields for business women.

Of course, you've lived in luxury with the Louis in Versailles... and suffered through the French Revolution. Doubtless, you've torn your hair over French prose composition... and tackled Moliere in the original.

Now let Vogue show you the Paris you—and every woman—really love.

Come with Vogue down the Rue de la Paix for a bit of gay window shopping. Now off to two or three world-renowned couturiers to see their new collections. Luncheons on the Champs-Elysees, tea in the Bois... spying on the clothes of that international crowd who set the fashions of the world... Then lazy week-ends at Cannes and Biarritz to catch the mode at play.

All this is yours in the pages of Vogue—not forgetting the fashions from the New York shops and the inside tips to the girl who must make ingenuity work like dollars!

SATURDAY, JANUARY 31, 1931

Well, Mr. Hoover?

"Hark, hark, the dogs do bark;
Some bark wet,
Some bark dry,
And some bark modification."

SO FAR disgust which has assailed the Wickersham committee's report on national prohibition in the United States leaves out of account an aspect of the question indicated by H. L. Mencken in the Baltimore Sun recently.

Indecision, Well, what of it? The 162 page printed report just released does not, in the aggregate, tell the voting public or the voting public's representatives at Washington what to do. It merely equips them with facts upon which to base any decisions. But the committee was supposed to do just that, not to presume to dictate a solution.

If "Here we are, where are we?" seems the keynote of the report, that is because it is the attitude of the nation. When the eighteenth amendment celebrated its tenth birthday a year ago this month conflicting opinions as to its success were issued by officials of dry and wet organizations. Placed alongside each other in a newspaper, they both looked silly. In reflecting the situation, a committee could not help producing a ludicrous picture.

But a starting point was provided, one with the possible solutions rather clearly indicated and the values to be conserved or gained enumerated in detail. Individual opinions of the committee members, like dissenting views of a supreme court justice, in several cases showed phases of the issue which deserved special attention.

The trouble with too many critics is that they do not really hold open minds. They are not really anxious for a solution. They desire either free liquor or rigid prohibition without regard to the situation which must be faced.

The Wickersham committee found evidence favoring portions of both attitudes, and as a result is accused of fence straddling.

The real responsibility here, however, rests with tentatively dry Herbert Hoover and congress. The "experiment noble in motive" has undergone one notable improvement since Hoover's election in 1928—transfer of enforcement activities from Andrew Mellon's treasury department to George D. Mitchell's justice department.

With a comprehensive analysis of the situation before him, President Hoover should find it possible to do something shortly. That something should first of all, be himself admitted, be in the direction of attempting real enforcement along lines tentatively approved by committee members. Failing that, he should confess the need for change and direct congress to such revision as may meet the situation.

Hoover has taken a first important step in gathering information on prohibition. Whether he will take any others should be one criterion on which the American public bases its presidential ballots in 1932.

Criminal Mentality

THE criminal lawyers of the country may be credited with a prevalent belief that the great majority of criminals are mentally defective or subnormal. This belief has been supported by the orthodox school of psychologists.

But there is another school of psychologists, which styles itself modern, which claims that the professional criminal is superior mentally to the average law abiding citizen, and that, if fact, following a predatory career is a form of revolt against a social order that is deemed unjust.

Actual surveys and tests made in various prisons of this country have not produced results of sufficient dependability to settle the question. One difficulty is that the intelligence tests, as now applied, are far from acceptable to science.

However, it is interesting to note that a mental test recently conducted by a committee of a national prison organization among inmates of the New Jersey state prison developed the fact that 57 per cent of the convicts were distinctly inferior to the average population in intelligence.

Such a test will not convince anybody that delinquency and criminality generally point to a lack of intelligence, or that mental inferiority is accountable. When it is remembered that only the inmates of prisons were considered, it might follow that only the least intelligent of the criminals are caught, and that most of those with real brains remain free to prey on their neighbors.

Way of All Flesh

THERE comes a time in every student's life when he solemnly swears to mend his ways and study throughout the semester rather than cram at the end of the term.

Yet every year finds the same number of sleepy-eyed, coffee-drinking youths alternately chewing pencils and scratching heads—vainly trying to do 17 weeks work in one night. Indigestion, poor disposition, brain fog, and low grades are the almost inevitable result, and the direct causes of the above mentioned resolutions.

They are to be pitied—these semi-annual students. Like the pharisee, consider yourself fortunate if you are not as they!

Women's Rights

WOMEN are gradually gaining equal rights with men.

Recently the sheriff in an Ohio county jail was met on his morning round by a delegation of respectful women prisoners petitioning for the privilege of smoking in their quarters.

The sheriff was puzzled. It had been an unwritten rule in the jail, formulated to guard against fire, that women should not smoke there.

However, the male prisoners had always been allowed to smoke in their cells, and none had set his bed on fire. The sheriff pondered, and decided that women are no more careless than men. Furthermore, they were not asking for cigars, but only for permission to smoke their own. The sheriff believed that the fairer sex has as much right to smoke as he himself, so he granted the petition.

And now the women in this Ohio jail have equal rights with the men.

Heflin, Fighter

WHATEVER else one wishes to say about Senator Tom Heflin, who was defeated in his campaign for reelection to the United States senate from Alabama, it must be admitted that he never seems to know when to quit. All his political life the fiery senator has been characterized for his fighting qualities in the face of almost insurmountable odds. Sometimes the odds have been too great for him to combat successfully, but he has always been found in the thick of the fight.

Heflin was forced off the Democratic ticket in last summer's primaries because of his anti-Smith activities in the last presidential election. Undismayed, he undertook to gain reelection to the senate on an independent ticket. The Democratic candidate, John H. Bankhead, won the campaign and is soon to take Senator Heflin's seat unless the latter can prevent him from doing so.

Heflin has given formal notice that he will contest the election of Bankhead on charges of fraud, intimidation, coercion, bribery, and illegal expenditure of funds in the election.

It seems that the Alabama senator does not plan to sit quietly by and watch his party force him from further political activity. It is a safe bet that Heflin will explode some real fireworks when his contest suit comes up before the senate.

Bandit's Sympathy

AN EPISODE which would have done justice to O. Henry's understanding of criminals is reported from real life at Canon City, Col.

Sentenced to hang, young John Walker insisted that his mother not be told and that she be kept from visiting him. He asked that instead she should be told he had received a 20 year sentence.

To conceal the truth further the young convict penned 240 letters to be mailed his mother every month during the 20 years following his death yesterday. His mother, now 71, probably will have died before the end of that time.

It is impossible not to admire such an attempt to prevent a tragedy from marring the life of another needlessly.

The thought inevitably comes, however, that young John Walker might have done better to consider his mother before rather than after the killing for which he was to hang yesterday.

Without knowledge of the circumstances behind his act, some of which may have been the fault of the mother in rearing her son, it is better to remember of the youth that at a time when fear tempts one to cringe at the thought of death his efforts were directed toward the relief of misery he had brought to his mother.

Where is Joseph

HUNGRY farmers with hungry wives and children abound in Arkansas. Wheat, held by the farm board, nobody will buy. Cannot the fat lands be made to feed the lean ones? Where is the Joseph who can cut the red tape and feed his hungry people?

Cannot the nation that fed Belgium, Germany, and Russia do anything about its own children? Is it necessary that governmental hands be banned against a work of mercy and justice?

And if it is too dangerous a mission or precedent for the government to embark on anything which looks like a dole, what about the private citizens of this country? Must needs a drastic and horrifying picture be thrown on the screen to instigate human sympathy and action? Americans, surely, are bound by but one precedent—that where ever they have known of want and hunger they have set about relieving it.

To do that is not to wait for a Joseph or for congress to do it, but to contribute now to the Red Cross fund for drought relief.

Another way to solve the unemployment problem would be for the banks to name some more vice-presidents.

If there were some way to induce the rich to spend more money and the poor to save it, then all of the political economists would be satisfied.

Explanation of Yesterday's Cartoon

Shakespeare Never Saw an Actress:
Until 1660 the English theater was an exclusively masculine organization. Men and boys enacted all the roles. The heroine was usually acted by a beardless boy, while older feminine characters would be represented by fully grown men. The England of Shakespeare's time placed actors in the same category with vagrants and malefactors. A woman on the stage would have invited the most summary treatment on the part of the civil authorities and the audience. Not until after the Restoration did English public opinion of the theater become more liberal.

Signature of the Almighty: The Hebrew word "Emeth" (truth) is considered to be the signature of the Almighty. Beginning with the first and ending with the last letter of the Hebrew alphabet, it symbolizes God's eternalness. The Sages of the Talmud narrate that, on frequent occasions, scrolls fell from heaven, inscribed with this word, (the autograph of the Almighty) in answer to prayers.

The Alpha and Omega of the Church is derived from this Hebrew word.

Iron Defense Holds Clinton Five at Bay

Irish Take Lead After St. Mary's Offense Weakens

(Special to The Daily Iowan) CLINTON, Jan. 30.—St. Pat's iron clad defense and smooth working offense accounted for another victory last night as the Irish trimmed St. Mary's of Clinton in the river city by an 18 to 10 score.

The Saints put up a stout fight the whole way but close guarding and accurate basket shooting by the Shamrock five during that last half proved too much for the defenders. After jumping off to a 3 to 1 lead at the quarter on McConnell's net swisher from the center and the same party's free throw, as against a lone gratts toss by Scamell, the Clinton team showed enough to allow the Iowa City cagers to tie it up at five-all by half time.

Irish Forge Ahead St. Mary's weakened after the rest period, while St. Pat's displayed the increase of power that has characterized their play all season. Displaying the same unwavering defense game, the Green outfit, led by Spratt, Megan, and Dvorsky sifted through St. Mary's veterans for enough markers to show a 12 to 7 advantage at the three quarters whistle.

With the same three men again doing the counting, they increased their margin during the closing minutes to give them their 18 to 10 margin at the end.

Clean Play Fast play characterized the work of both squads and the fray was clean throughout with but six fouls being charged to the Irish, and five to their opponents.

The entire St. Pat's team played nice basketball with Wilkinson's clever guarding of McCutcheon, Clinton star, featuring the contest. For St. Mary's the three Mac's, McCutcheon, McGovern, and McConnell, stood out.

Sportively Speaking

By Bill Rutledge

Wearing a heavy coat of tan and evidently rarin' to fight, Max Schmeling champion of the heavyweight division of fistiana everywhere in the world except New York, walked down the gangplank of the "Europa" back into Broadway for the first time since acquiring the title.

His condition and attitude greatly impressed scribes who greeted him. They rejoiced to hear of his eagerness to defend his crown. "Appearing fit and stronger than ever," said the New York Times.

"My work is to fight," Maxie told the Times reporter. "My manager is Joey Jacobs and his work is to pick opponents. I do not care when I fight. I am the champion and it is my business to defend the title. I want to do that and against the best challenger."

If Max is sincere in his statement of willingness to battle, he will find a mob of pugilists, both foreign and domestic, only too anxious to clash with him. Schmeling promised Sharkey a return bout, but Jack has been shown of his drawing power and consequently is out of consideration.

While Max was vacationing at his country home at Bad Sarrow, a suburb of Berlin, Young Stribling became this country's outstanding heavyweight. Sharkey has become a second rate boxer.

Baseball magnates usually seek to suppress information on the holdout situation for the reason the news of one holdout encourages other holdouts. Club owners unthinkingly boasted of the way baseball business held up during the depression. The players on hearing of how large the gate receipts were, promptly began to howl for increased salaries.

The Cleveland Indians have been the hardest hit. Their five best players are unsigned. The leading recalcitrant is Eddie Morgan, the slugging first baseman, who says he's going to get a salary of $15,000 in baseball or he's going to forsake the pastime and go into his father's box manufacturing business.

Other members of the Tribe holding out for larger wages are Earl Averill, Johnny Hodapp, Wes Ferrell, and Dick Porter.

The second worst case is that of the Yankees. Lou Gehrig leads the galaxy of Manager McCarthy's holdouts. The other are Lynn Lary, Meryl Hoag, Charley Ruffing, and Henry Johnson. The Cubs big holdout is Hack Wilson, who wants $40,000 a year. Bill Terry and Freddie Linstrom haven't signed with the Giants. Neither has Wally Berger of the Braves, Al Simmons of the Athletics, Babe Herman or Dazzy Vance of the Robins.

Iowa State Matmen Beat Syracuse 38-0

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Jan. 30 (AP)—Iowa State's wrestling team whitewashed the Syracuse university matmen by a 38 to 0 score in the first eastern appearance of the Ames grapplers here this afternoon. All but one of the bouts went to the visitors on falls, the 128-pound match going to Williams of Iowa State by decision.

A deadly body scissor, tougher than any grip the Syracuseans have been called upon to break in eastern meets, was the weapon used most frequently in bending the Orangemen to submission, but the Iowans appeared stronger in every department of the mat game.

The meet was the first of three scheduled for the Iowans in two days.

Last Quarter Rally Turns Fray to Rout

Hawket Third Period Rally Falls Short of Victory

(Special to The Daily Iowan) CEDAR RAPIDS, Jan. 30.—What seemed to be a close game in the third quarter turned into a rout in the final period as Grant high school of Cedar Rapids, led by Hurst, Negro ace, swept the Iowa City high school aggregation off their feet to gain a 28 to 11 verdict in the Coe gymnasium at Cedar Rapids, last night.

Both teams started out playing a cautious game and relying on a strong defensive, five minutes of the game having slipped by before Sargent of the Panthers slipped one through the hoop to give Grant high a two point advantage. With two minutes of the first quarter remaining, Stimmel sank a long one from mid court to tie up the count at two all.

Panthers Take Lead Nolan replaced Lines for the Panthers at the start of the second quarter and they jumped into the lead with baskets by Sojka, Sargent, and Hurst and a free throw by Hurst. Toward the close of this period Captain Vestermark left off guarding Hurst long enough to sink a basket, leaving the Little Hawks on the short end of a 11-4 count at the end of the half.

In the third period Barrick counted a free throw for the locals and three baskets by Van der Zee placed the Little Hawks within two points of their Parlor City rivals. It was at this point that the dusky lad came to life and counted two baskets in less than a minute to place the Panthers ahead 15-11. With the aid of Sojka, Hurst continued the barrage on the basket to give his outfit a 24-11 margin before he was removed from the game, the Panther reserves adding two field goals before the final gun.

Hurst Stars Hurst's fast break and dribble, coupled with his ability to hit the hoop made him the outstanding man on the floor and he carried off high scoring honors with 13 points. Sojka and Martin also showed up well for the Grant high five, while Captain Vestermark, Van der Zee, and Barrick showed up best for the locals.

Wyjack Stars as Handymen Invasion Fails

Hart Leads Attack for Mt. Vernon With 9 Points

(Special to The Daily Iowan) MT. VERNON, Jan. 30.—University high of Iowa City was no match for Mt. Vernon here tonight, losing 22 to 13. The entire Mt. Vernon team presented a well balanced, fast breaking offense, crashing through the Blue and White ranks for numerous short shots at the basket, while the home defense held the invaders almost helpless.

Wyjack Helps University high showed their best form of the evening during the third quarter when, bolstered by Wyjack, who entered the game about the middle of the period, the Handymen braced and scored seven points. In the fourth quarter with the game safely stowed away, Mt. Vernon ran in the second team, and piled up 13 points for the largest quarter score of the game.

Many Forwards In an effort to stop the Mt. Vernon onslaught and organize a scoring combination for themselves, University high used seven forwards during the game. With the exception of Wyjack, who led the attack with five points, none were effective. For Mt. Vernon, R. Neal and Hart, who topped the scorers with nine points played the best ball.
