

MERCER TESTIFIES ON LOAN FUND MAJOR TO EXPLAIN IOWA OUSTER

Testimony Provides Partial Check on Charge Made by Cedar Rapids Paper's Chief

Carroll Makes Statement Concerning Detective Roy Lapitz Dismissal; Wishes to Keep Expenses Down

"They used to tell me, and I suppose it is still the case, that if I were a millionaire and chose to send 10 boys through school because they were athletes there was nothing wrong, but if 10 of us went together to send one boy we were clear out side the Big Ten rules."

"To indicate the high caliber of contributors, isn't it true that the Hon. Frank Byers of the inquiry committee was one of them?"

"I am very happy to say that I think he was." "I think there is some rule that says no members of the faculty alumni, or anyone else could do anything to induce anyone to come to school."

"They don't require them to discourage them. Do they?"

According to Mercer, Paul E. Belting told him that President Walter A. Jessup had refused university sanction for a fund provided by alumni and supervised in part by alumni for loans exclusively to athletes.

DES MOINES, March 9—A second version of circumstances surrounding the "Belting" fund was given before the state legislature's investigating committee here today by Willis W. Mercer of Iowa City as president of the Iowa Alumni Athletic association.

The first version, written by Verne Marshall in the Cedar Rapids Gazette in December and made official two weeks ago as the university inquiry opened, has yet to be checked through cross examination by Emmet Tinley, counsel for the board of education.

His turn at Marshall was postponed again yesterday, as it had been the opening day and again at Iowa City.

There was, however, a partial check on Marshall's story through the testimony of Mercer and that of W. H. Bates, who preceded him on the stand with material on the same matter of loans to athletes for 1927-28, the period in controversy.

Assertion by Kelleher that ledger sheets which would have indicated whether these notes were paid separately by individuals or in a lump sum by the "Belting Fund" could not be produced was answered by Bates and McLaughlin, his assistant, with the statement that Bates was not subpoenaed to appear at 10 a. m. Monday until 12:30 or 3 p. m. Sunday.

"I must admit this is a revelation to me," said Representative Miller after Bates had described how before 1926 total remission of tuition could be obtained with the signatures of three county officers, that since then there has been partial exemption on the presentation of two references checked against two others chosen by university officials, or deferred tuition secured by promises to pay, that both men and women athletes and non-athletes benefit thereby, and that athletes have not normally constituted more than 10 percent of the total.

Mercer described his conference with prospective borrowers from the alumni loan fund, saying he told each of them that the principal business at the university even of athletes was to get an education, that he aimed to help them only during the season of competition, feeling that they were free to work at other times.

He corroborated Bates' contention which he had not heard that 10 non-athletes were aided by university loans where one athlete was aided, having his conclusion on his present record in the office of W. H. Cobb.

Kelleher checked the list of athletes' notes with a copy of the Cedar Rapids Gazette, in which a similar list was printed. Mercer said that when he turned the alumni fund balance and outstanding notes over to Edward H. Lauer, director of athletics, at the time of Iowa's Big Ten reinstatement, he understood the remaining fund was to be used for a general fund, not restricted to athletes.

Hubbard Gets $500 Fine, 3 Months in Jail

Charles Hubbard was fined $500, sentenced to three months at hard labor in the county jail, and had a liquor injunction issued against him when he entered a plea of guilty to a charge of illegal transportation before Judge R. G. Popham in the district court yesterday.

Failure to pay the fine will require Hubbard to serve an additional 150 days in jail. The costs of the action were also assessed against him.

Hubbard was taken into custody March 6, with two others when local police raided a house at 1909 G. street, finding a still with an estimated capacity of 30 gallons a day, several gallons of liquor, and a quantity of mash.

Wesley Sedive, Charles Boeck, and Garrett Byrne were the members of the raiding party.

Smith headed the non-partisan ticket. His running mate, Paul Schmidt lost to Miller, the leader of the independent ticket, whose co-candidate was Mrs. Blanche Thoen, as voters split the ticket.

ELECTION RESULTS Non-Partisan Ticket School Director: Herman Smith 1,252; Paul Schmidt 509. Treasurer: Glenn Griffith 1,231. Independent Ticket School Director: Verne R. Miller 938; Blanche Thoen 166.

Scattered votes for director were given William Weber, retiring member of the board, J. L. Plum, Dr. Erling Thoen, Joe L. O'Connor, Vern Smith, Kay Ries.

The election result starts Smith out on his second term on the school board. Mr. Smith lives at 1412 E. Court. He is a partner in the construction firm of Smith and Burger.

Mr. Miller has been employed by the Iowa City Citizens Savings and Trust company for 12 years. He is a member of the Roy L. Chopek post of the American Legion.

Cedar County Farmers Halt Cattle Tests

TIPTON, March 9 (AP)—Cedar county farmers today again frustrated attempts by representatives of the state department of agriculture to test cattle for tuberculosis, despite the presence of 20 sheriffs and deputies to aid them.

A crowd of nearly 800 farmers gathered at the farm of E. C. Mitchell, where attempts to test cattle last Thursday were blocked by an assembly, and threatened the officers and department representatives when they attempted to carry out the tests.

The agricultural agents finally withdrew to await further orders from M. G. Thornburg, secretary of agriculture. Governor Dan Turner had written a letter to Cedar county officers informing them that the law would be enforced.

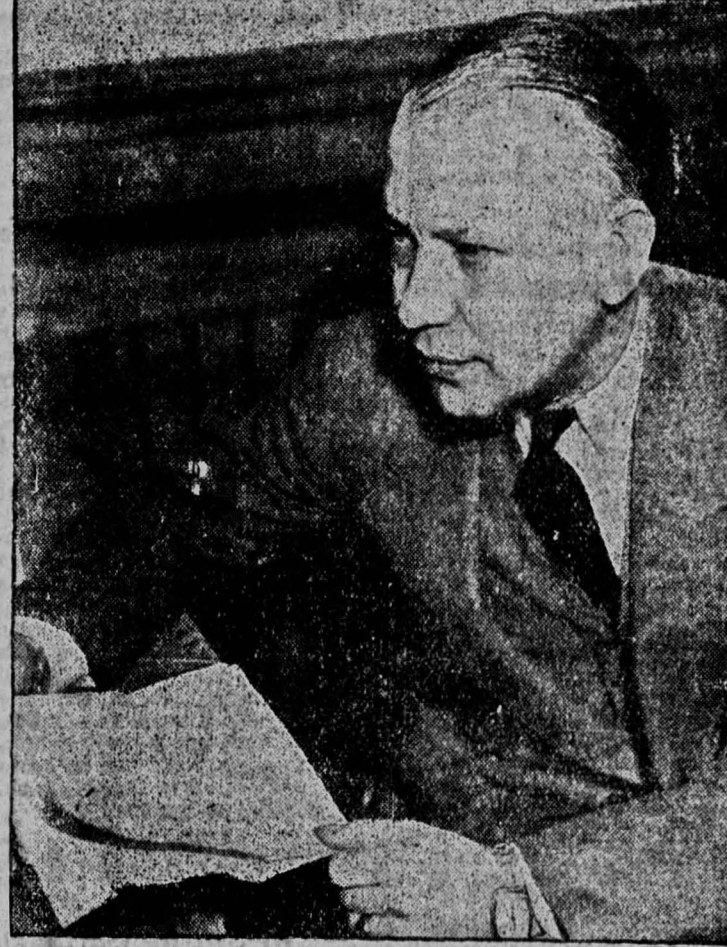

Thornburg, in Des Moines, today said the tests would be carried out, but he was awaiting complete reports from Dr. Peter Malcolm, in charge of the testers here, before determining what further steps would be taken.

Auditor William H. Cobb Still at Home Following Collapse

Although reported as "very much improved" University Auditor William H. Cobb was still resting at his home last night following a nervous collapse, induced by two days of testifying before the legislative investigating committee last week.

Mrs. Cobb stated that her husband was "still very tired" and would probably remain at home the rest of the week. He has not been subpoenaed to appear before the hearings at Des Moines but may be in condition to testify again if called to the stand next week.

RETURNS TO CHICAGO

Returning to Chicago last night A. Roy Lapitz closed his work as a special investigator in the University of Iowa's business. He was released by the legislative investigating committee Saturday evening after working for the committee for five days.

All reports of his investigations while working for the committee were turned over to Oral Swift, assistant attorney general. Reports previous to his being hired by the committee were turned over to Verne Marshall who originally hired him to come to Iowa City Dec. 25, 1930.

During his first work in Iowa City he was introduced by Mr. Marshall as a newspaper man, and under the name of Mr. Brandt. A friend, a Mr. Burdett, accompanied him for the first four or five days, but later returned to Chicago.

After being hired by the committee as an investigator at $25 a day and expenses he has worked in Des Moines, Burlington, Waterloo, and Iowa City. Mr. Lapitz said last night that he does not expect to return unless recalled by the committee.

Depositors Receive Dividends From 30 Institutions in Week

DES MOINES, March 9 (AP)—Dividends to depositors in 30 closed Iowa banks totaling $942,902.07 have been approved by the courts during the last week. L. A. Andrew, state superintendent of banking, said today.

The largest sum was paid to depositors in the Waterloo Bank and Trust company, totaling $87,236.29, a ten percent dividend. The Farmers Savings bank of Grant paid a 50 percent dividend totaling $40,818.19, and the Farmers State bank of Linden paid $37,957.65, another 60 percent payment.

Dividends paid by the Chelsea state bank, Clio state savings bank, Citizens savings bank of Letts, Farmers and Merchants state bank of Washington, Jefferson savings bank and Otseon completed liquidation of these institutions.

Inquiry Highlights

By ROLAND WHITE Retaining A. Leroy Lapitz, Burns agency sleuth, was excused on the ground that although he had worked for Verne Marshall, that very fact made him more familiar with the territory and would save time.

Cap it be true that newspaper photographers use unnecessarily loud flash powder to call attention to themselves or to help the sale of the next day's paper?

There is a theory going the rounds that retaining a firm of accountants is a substitute for making a return visit to Iowa City, on the university's home grounds.

Another notion is that this will take the place of the suggested expedient of examining Secretary W. H. Bates and Auditor W. H. Cobb at the same time. One legislator advocated this to keep them from passing the buck to each other on matters which can better be determined from the records rather than from the recollections of men who cannot be expected to remember every detail of university finances for the last decade.

It was at the suggestion of Denis M. Kelleher, committee attorney, that the accountant was retained. Kelleher spent more than half an hour conferring with Louis Muehle, representing the Des Moines firm, following adjournment of the brief Saturday afternoon session.

Group Sends Representative to Procure Deposition From Conference Commissioner

"Other Witnesses" May Include Paul E. Belting, Judge McKinley, Coach Alonzo Stagg; Baird Only Absentee

DES MOINES, March 9—What about the "Belting" fund? For the first time the official version of Major John L. Griffith, Big Ten commissioner of athletics, concerning Iowa's ouster from the Western conference will be told in full today as his deposition is taken by a member of the state legislature's investigating committee at Chicago. Present will be Byron G. Allen of Pochontas committee subcommittee; Henry G. Walker of Iowa City, attorney for the board of education; Earl I. Wisdom of the attorney general's office; and such others as may be invited.

In response to a telegram received just before adjournment Monday afternoon by Chairman H. B. Carroll of Bloomfield, Representative Allen moved that Carroll appoint one member to take the deposition of Major Griffith "and other witnesses."

Senator L. H. Doran amended the motion to include immediate notice to an attorney for the board of education when Griffith is reached. Both motion and amendment passed unanimously. Senator W. S. Baird of Council Bluffs was the only absentee.

Short Spring Recess Ends for Assembly

DES MOINES, March 9 (AP)—The Iowa assembly reconvened today after its ten-day spring recess, entering the final stage before adjournment April 18.

Today's sessions, which began at 1 p. m., were brief. Both houses passed one bill, received a number of new ones and adjourned for the day to hear an address by Senator Smith W. Brookhart.

Brookhart on Conditions Talking on the economic conditions of the country, Senator Brookhart declared there were "great discriminations against the farmer." He said the prices of Iowa farm products were so low that farmers not only had failed to receive a commensurate return but their capital investment had decreased by several billions of dollars.

The surplus in farm products, he said, was due in part to the high freight rates which were based on railroad valuation he considered too high by several billions of dollars. Senator Brookhart attacked the federal reserve loan allotment to Iowa as insufficient compared to the value of the agricultural and industrial products.

Agriculture or Industry The senator said that corporations were controlled only through the anti-trust laws by congress and pointed out that where industry can separate its surplus agriculture is unable to do this.

Wheat price-fixing under the Wilson administration was seen by Brookhart as pointing the way toward the satisfactory handling of the unexportable surplus of all other farm produce. Speculation in farm products must be stopped, he said.

Concluding he said the government had neglected to protect the resources of the country, passing laws to take care of all industries but agriculture.

Ask Speed in Work A concurrent resolution asking the federal government to speed up development work on the upper Missouri river received the unanimous support of both houses. It was said to be similar to one which recently was approved by the South Dakota legislature. The administration, secretary of war and war department engineers are requested to make sufficient allotments for the work.

The house passed the Reimer bill which would authorize a district court judge to sign orders during vacation periods. The bill which passed the senate was sponsored by D. W. Kimberley of Scott county. It would make provisions permitting the issuance of bonds or certificates for equipping fire departments in anticipation of taxes applicable to special charter cities.

Dog Tax Bill Among the new bills received by the house was one by Rep. Ed Brown of Polk county providing for a flat rate of $2 for dog tax. The bill provides that if the sum so raised is insufficient to pay claims the county board of supervisors may increase the tax to $5.

Senator Matt D. Conney of Dubuque introduced by request a bill authorizing counties to adopt the county manager form of government. Upon petition of ten per cent of the voters the question would be submitted at a regular election.

Steindler Will Give Study in Physiotherapy

Discusses Science at Physical Education Assembly

Dr. Arthur Steindler, professor and head of orthopedics at University hospital, outlined his proposed course in physiotherapy before the assembly of physical education majors last Friday. This course, having met the requirements of the National Physiotherapy association, will be given next year if there is a sufficient number of persons registered for it.

Dr. Steindler stated that physiotherapy, as a science, is now at the parting of the ways. It will either skim the surface and develop into quackery, or into an accredited science based on careful study and thorough training.

"To insure a future for this science," Dr. Steindler continued, "a National Physiotherapy association, which sets the ethical standards and training for all physiotherapists, has been organized."

Concluding his lecture, Dr. Steindler showed lantern slides of several physical therapy institutions in Europe.

Priestley Will Give Lecture Here Friday

British Writer Expresses English View of Literature

John Boynton Priestley, British novelist, author of "Angel Pavement" and "The Good Companion," delivered a lecture in New York several days ago, the first of a series of 10 lectures that he will give while on a tour through the United States.

Arriving in Iowa City Friday, Mr. Priestley will lecture on "An Englishman's view of contemporary American literature." He is on his way to Tahiti in the South Sea Islands where he will stay a year to get atmosphere and material for another book.

The following interview appeared in the New York Times recently: "I disagree with the statement on Michael Arlen that American readers support British authors."

Mr. Priestley said, "My books do better in England than they do here. Arlen's books are very little read in England, and that is a good thing. He writes for the American public. I think the American people buy books when they are in fashion, but they do not read so much."

"There is no such thing as the great American novel, or the great English novel for that matter," he said. "The nearest thing to a national novel of any kind is Tolstol's 'War and Peace.' You turn out here every week at least three great American novels. That ought to satisfy you."

Mr. Priestley is also the author of "Figures in Contemporary Literature," "English Comic Characters," and "Fools and Philosophers." He has succeeded Bernard Shaw and Max Beerholm as regular essayist to the English Saturday Review.

Proceedings of Committee

Mercer's Version

Attorney Henry G. Walker made his debut today to cross examine Mercer, who succeeded Walker as president of the Iowa Alumni Athletic Association.

The Economy Advertising company's president's testimony follows:

Mr. Kelleher—Your name is Willis Mercer, Iowa City Iowa. How long have you lived there?

A—Seven or eight years.

Q—Are you in business there?

A—I am.

Q—In what line?

A—Advertising and printing.

Q—Did you go to school at the state university?

A—I did.

Q—Are you a graduate of that school?

A—Yes.

Q—Were you active in the alumni athletic association, Mr. Mercer in 1927 or prior?

A—Yes.

Q—Did you hold an office in the association?

A—I was president.

Q—What did you do, how did you function during the whole or any part of the year?

A—I ran the athletic student loan fund, which money was furnished by the alumni of the university.

Q—And just in what manner were contributions of that made, by way of a fixed fund on the members or voluntary contribution?

A—Voluntary contribution.

Q—Some members contributed and some did not?

A—Yes.

Q—Was there any treasurer or any other officer, who was associated with you in the getting or holding of this fund?

A—There was a treasurer and he handled the funds entirely.

Q—Who was the treasurer?

A—Thomas Farrell, cashier of the First National bank.

Q—Was this association active in 1927?

A—I do not have these dates fixed in my mind, but I would say yes.

Q—What do you have, a stub cash book?

A—Yes.

Q—Where was the account kept which contained the fund you deposited?

A—First National bank.

Q—Was the fund subject to your signature without counter signing?

A—Yes.

Q—Will you relate in a brief way, just who applied or suggested the disbursement, or would you disburse the fund yourself?

A—The man came and talked to me, and I passed on it myself and made the loans and took the boys' notes for it when they were through school.

Q—Were all disbursements made by money secured by note?

A—In as far as I could control.

Q—The understanding that I had with each boy, was that this was a straight out and out loan and payable when he was through school and supposed to be repaid at the end of that time.

Q—Now did you learn from him, the class he was a member of, so you knew when he graduated?

A—No I made the notes due, as I recall it, during a certain time after graduation.

Q—Now you mentioned that when a man who wanted to make a loan came to you, you interviewed him and if you acted on his application favorably, a note was given and you gave him the money?

A—Yes.

Q—Were those funds disbursed to anyone except those who were engaged in athletics or who hoped to be an athlete?

A—No.

Q—Can you tell by looking at the stub book, about when you started this disbursement fund?

A—My first check was written Feb. 25, 1924.

Q—And going down to 1928, were you still writing checks in 1928?

A—Some, yes.

Q—So that a period covered by you, included from 1924 to 1928 inclusive?

A—Yes.

Q—Now Mr. Mercer have you talked at any time with the men connected with the business office or with the university in official capacity, in regard to your activities, of being able to say to the committee that your activities were not concealed from the business office?

To Tell Story

Major John Griffith

A—Yes.

Q—What persons or individual did you confer with?

A—Dr. Belting and W. H. Cobb.

Q—Were those two the only ones?

A—Well I maybe talked to Mr. Bates.

Q—Did you, Mr. Mercer, receive on or about 1927, a written communication from any of these gentlemen in regard to notes?

A—Yes, I received a letter.

Q—Have you the original letter?

A—I cannot find the original letter.

Q—Mr. Kelleher reads a letter, exhibit No. 125, written to Willis W. Mercer, Iowa City, Iowa, and signed by the auditor, Mr. Cobb, Mr. Mercer in this letter, was there an amount of $1,572.00 in notes and also an amount of $24.00 additional enclosed with the letter that came to you from Mr. Cobb?

A—I do not know.

Q—On getting Mr. Cobb's letter, if anything, what did you do?

A—I called a meeting of some of our interested men and went over the list. I evidently, after conferring with these men, called Mr. Cobb and told him we had no funds available to take care of this tuition.

Q—By telephone or a personal interview?

A—I think by personal interview.

Q—What if anything, was afterwards done?

A—Nothing.

Q—Would you have any knowledge of any money taken from any source to arrange for any of these lists?

A—I heard a rumor but had nothing to do with it.

Q—Did you talk to or were you talked to by Mr. Cobb or by anyone else than Mr. Cobb, regarding the matter at that time? Anyone connected with the University?

A—No.

Q—Was your athletic association then functioning and still active?

A—Not very.

Q—Is there anything in connection with its activities that you can tell us about Mr. Mercer?

A—We practically had to cease operation for lack of funds as the alumni had lost faith in Mr. Belting.

Q—Did that end your connection with that particular transaction?

A—After 1927 I carried on with the small amount of funds that I had. My last check was issued some time in 1930, at the time that Iowa was reinstated into the Big Ten, when I turned over the small balance I had left to Mr. Lauer, who in turn, turned it over to the University. At that time I also turned over to Mr. Lauer the notes.

Q—Who were your predecessors in office (as president of the association)?

A—Judge R. P. Howell, who died about 1923 or 1924, Mr. Henry Walker succeeded him and I succeeded Mr. Walker.

Q—And you say the late R. P. Howell administered before you took charge?

A—Yes.

Q—Before that you were a contributor, before you took charge?

A—Yes.

Q—It was something open and above board?

A—Yes.

Q—To indicate the high caliber of the contributors isn't it true that the Hon. Frank Byers was a contributor?

A—I am very happy to say that I think he was.

Q—Can you tell this committee in any way or another, something about why this fund was established?

A—We felt that all the Big Ten schools were doing something to help the athletes and that if we expected to travel in that company, we would have to compete. The fund was never large. It was more an emergency fund to help some of the men over the rough places. If a man who was playing football, we thought if he kept up and graduated, he could not be expected to earn any money on the outside. I don't know why it is, but 9-10 of the good athletes have no money and we attempted to help these boys through that stage.

Senator Doran—Did I understand you to say that the Big Ten requested this alumni association to cease its support?

A—I have no way of knowing, but Mr. Lauer came to me and said that if it would be much easier if this thing passed out of the picture.

Q—(Mr. Walker) Now you were asked if you had any talk with any one from the University with regard to this fund and you said you had talked with Dr. Belting and Mr. Cobb. I think that the committee will be interested in view of the charges that have been made, what your negotiations with Mr. Belting were, with regard to continuation of this loan fund.

Possible Witness

Paul E. Belting

A—Mr. Belting and I had several conferences about this, trying to work out some sort of a system. It was quite a responsibility, for one man alone to handle this situation.

I talked to Mr. Belting and we called a meeting of alumni members and coaches and I think some business men of Iowa City to discuss the whole situation. We worked out a plan of putting this fund under one or two representatives of the University and the other member or two members and when we had it all finished, Mr. Belting said that it suited him fine, but he could not give me any answer on it until he talked to Mr. Jessup. Mr. Jessup was out of the city at that time and he said he would talk to him upon his return. We did not get any action on it before school started in the fall and I met Mr. Belting at the first football game. He said he had put it up to him but had not discussed it further, just then Mr. Jessup came in and Mr. Belting talked it over with him, and came back, saying absolutely nothing doing, the President would not stand for it. He said he would not have the University mixed up in it.

Q—Did the association of which you are an officer have volunteer efforts on the part of alumni to get promising athletes to attend the University of Iowa?

A—Absolutely.

Q—Did alumni groups in different cities sometimes offer assistance of some sort or another to these stu-

Shake Hands With Russia

SENATOR BORAH has asked the senate for official recognition of Russia's soviet government. It is to be hoped that the senate will respond to his request impartially and affirmatively. The soviet government has shown its stability and strength in persisting this long in the face of world-wide denunciations and ridicule. It has stood, and stood alone.

Those who heard Max Eastman, Russian sympathizer, talk before the Times club here recently could not fail being impressed by his description of present day Russia and of what the Russian people are trying to do. Whether an advocate of communism or not, one could scarcely escape a conviction of the sincerity of his leaders, Lenin and Trotsky.

Mr. Eastman pointed out that the success of the soviet government in Russia today is in itself disproof of many of the old economic objections, such as that there is no incentive to industry under socialism and that private profit is the indispensable reward of saving.

The United States is hardly in position to adopt a "holier-than-thou" attitude by refusing even to recognize the Russian government. Democracy had not yet become the darling of the political world when the Declaration of Independence was signed in 1776. Nor has the constitution stood through the centuries without amendment.

Russia took a radical step, to be sure. However, it has already swung into a stride. It will undoubtedly stumble into many mistakes in the future, but the trial and error method is the only one possible to such a new form of rule.

Failure in her "noble experiment" will not discredit Russia's best attempt at stabilization. The recognition of settled world powers, like the United States, may be just the support that she needs in building a vital, worthy nation. The disapproval of the world hasn't killed her. Why not test the effect of approval?

The United States government would not be opening its doors to communism by such an act. Recognition would be a gesture of respect to the efforts of another nation to reconstruct itself.

The Franco-Italian Controversy: FOR 11 years, negotiations have been in the making between France and Italy. There has been no cordiality of sentiment between the two nations since the war, and in the last six months, a tenseness has become more and more apparent which has made successful culmination of these efforts impossible.

A diagnosis of the strained relations between France and Italy would reveal three main difficulties. First, colonies; second, the Slav question; and third, parity in armaments.

In regard to colonies, Italy is pressed by a need for expansion. She has never been satisfied with her lot from the war. France, on the other hand, feels that Italy was given an equitable share and that her complaints are unjustified.

The Slav question arises out of Italy's animosity towards France because of France's friendship towards the Slavs in their efforts to resist Italian expansion eastward. The Franco-Yugoslavian alliance encircles Italy.

In the third place, Italy wants parity with France in armaments. However, Mussolini's warlike utterances only serve to make France build up new armaments.

A French writer comments that such concession as Italy is demanding of France are obtained only by a humiliating war or a century of friendly relations.

The first course would probably be ruinous to both countries, recovering from the conflict in 1914. A "humiliating war" would be almost certain to entangle other powers who are watching Mussolini's every step with jealousy and distrust or preparing to fall in behind his blackshirts should they take up arms.

The second course will be followed only if leaders of both countries can keep busy enough at constructive internal programs to obviate need for demanding or granting concessions.

"And the Meek": PEACE reigns once more in India. Mahatma Gandhi, apostle of passive resistance, has made an agreement with Lord Irwin whereby the threatened civil war in India will be averted. And many of Gandhi's requests will be granted.

It would seem that Gandhi, though he may appear ever so insignificant physically, yields more power in India than does the army of the British empire. It was he who was able to bring order out of the confusion existing among the various castes, where the latter failed.

Ghandi, in his one year of civil disobedience has caused more trouble than all of the rest of the Indian revolutions combined. Tagore, a noted countryman of Ghandi's, in speaking of his policy, says that "It has introduced a new technique into international revolution."

Perhaps there is something to the ancient aphorism which states that "the meek will inherit the earth."

Garden Time

IT'S March, warm, and garden-making time. Why not make a resolution this spring to make the family garden a thing of beauty as well as one of utility, or "just another garden."

By careful planning the seeds can be planted with a mental image of their future appearance. Tall vegetables or flowers should form a background for smaller ones.

Since there are so many gardens in Iowa City, if each person does his bit toward making his own plot near perfection, they will add to the beauty of the city rather than detract.

The "Big Ten's" Reluctance

(From the Des Moines Tribune-Capital)

It appears that the athletic authorities and even the still higher academic authorities of the "Big Ten" universities are annoyed by the desire of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools to "investigate" athletic conditions in the "Big Ten."

They are even holding meetings to discuss ways of balking the North Central Conference and in these meetings there is understood to be much indignation because any outside authority should presume to interfere with the "Big Ten's" running of its affairs.

The appropriate comment seems to be "Humph!" A short while back this same "Big Ten" group was giving the University of Iowa an iron-and-rod discipline because ITS athletic policies were said to be not up to "Big Ten" standards.

The suggestion then that possibly any other of the "Big Ten" schools could be disciplined quite as justly, and for substantially the same thing, was treated as absurd. In fact, the indignation of the "Big Ten" was beyond expression.

And the dread specter of a separate investigation by the North Central association, which might not stop with Iowa, was apparently what brought about reconciliation and reinstatement of Iowa in the "Big Ten."

The North Central association is a purely academic organization. Nobody accuses it of playing any favorites in the matter of athletics. It merely gives an academic rating to colleges, and if it finds that athletics are being allowed to run the college, it withdraws its favorable rating. That it is not an utterly unfair body about this is suggested by the fact that it just completed an investigation of Hamline college, in St. Paul, and gave to Hamline in the matter of athletics a clean bill of health. Its report was complimentary, almost eulogistic, in fact.

The Tribune is not arguing particularly for the proposed investigation of "Big Ten" athletics by the North Central association.

But it cannot but wonder a little why the "Big Ten" is so worried. Since only Iowa was at fault a year or so ago, and the rest of the conference was pure as lilies, and since the reform of Iowa has certainly not corrupted Iowa's associates the thing is a trifle puzzling.

Most authorities on athletics maintain that participants in championship golf tournaments undergo greater mental and physical strain than any athlete in any other branch of sport. A championship tournament lasts many days and usually take during the hottest season of the year, which, combined with nervous strain, unfailingly acts as a weight reducer.

Ralph Salstein threw 11 balls to a batter before fanning him: With two out and a man on first, Salstein threw three balls and two strikes to the batter, and then caught a runner off first. In the next inning the same batter was up, and Salstein threw him three balls and three strikes, the batter not swinging at any of them.

Great Future Predicted for State of Iowa

C. of C. Hears Lecture by Holbrook on Industry

A picture of Iowa as a panorama of factories as well as an agricultural center was sketched by Royal H. Holbrook of the extension department of Iowa State college at the chamber of commerce luncheon at the Legion building yesterday noon.

Mr. Holbrook declared that Iowa is "going fast from farm into town," and said that Johnson county has shrunk 100 farms in the past 10 years.

"Let's all be acquainted with the size of our state," was speaker's beginning plea, and he proceeded to outline the history of Iowa from pioneer days when the reports of the Lewis and Clark expedition and of the Pike expedition first drew settlers into the state. Mr. Holbrook declared that the blood of these immigrants who first settled along the rivers was true American blood—and "the best in the world."

Future is Industry
Comparing $780,000,000 worth of manufactured articles produced last year in Iowa with $700,000,000 netted for farm products, Mr. Holbrook pointed out that "although it is now known for agricultural products in the future it will be known for its industry."

"The other side of the story," said the speaker, "is that every place there is a factory, there is a community." He pointed out that with modern transportation facilities, including the improvement of waterways along the Mississippi, that Iowa is drawing persons to establish factories and to locate in communities themselves.

Iowa to Front
In illustrating Iowa's industrial strength, Mr. Holbrook cited industries ranging from the blast powder plant at Keokuk to the brick and tile industry in Mason City.

Mr. Holbrook affirmed that "Iowa is on the upgrade at a rapid rate," attributing this to "community spirit" in those towns which have contributed to its progress. To keep up this progress, he declared that "every community must become more united."

"Ideal Modern Type" Not Extreme Reactionist or Extreme Modernist—Prof. Jung

After five years as professor of religious education at the University of Illinois, Prof. Moses Jung came to this campus to represent the Jewish faith in the school of religion. He is also the faculty adviser of the Philo club.

Professor Jung's education has been international in its scope. He has studied at the University of Berlin, Cambridge university, University of Vienna, London university, and Dropsie college of Philadelphia.

He was director of the Hillel summer school at the University of Wisconsin in 1928. A leader of Jewish thought in the middle-west, Professor Jung is contributing editor of the Jewish Encyclopedia, member of the American Academy for Jewish research, and author of "The Principles of Jewish Law."

Editor's note: This is the eighth of a series of articles on sermons delivered from local pulpits, to be presented on this page every Tuesday morning. The following views were expressed by Prof. Moses Jung in a recent address.

By WILLIAM RUTLEDGE
Turning sharp corners from the past is dangerous. The traditional and modern are not diametric forces. The new is a projection, an extension of the old.

Speaking for the Jewish faith, that was the central point of Prof. Moses Jung's message. Something midway between unqualified adherence to the past and complete rejection of the traditional was urged by Professor Jung "as the golden mean of a just appreciation of tradition and present experience."

Ideal Modern Type
The "ideal type" is neither the extreme reactionist nor the extreme modernist, but one, Professor Jung believes, who "is anxious to have his individual experience checked by past race or group experience (which in its essence is tradition) and through this interplay of tradition with modern life to set up workable standards."

"The most effective way of meeting the challenge of modern life seems to lie in the strengthening of this type, a task to be performed by educators, particularly by educators of minority groups such as the Jewish group, which feels the impact of the modern world more profoundly than majority groups."

"The Jewish group labors under a certain advantage. Its members are dispersed all over the globe and therefore more exposed to the process of attrition by the forces of modern life and the pressure of social, intellectual and religious problems. But the Jewish group also, by reason of its long history, has acquired a

Men Discuss Inventions in Physics Field

Three talks were given by graduate students of the physics department at the weekly seminar yesterday at 4 p. m.

Homer Malmstrom, graduate assistant, discussed recent work of R. A. Millikan and G. H. Cameron on their recent cosmic ray investigation, presenting the evidence for atom building in inter-stellar space.

Harold Koenig, graduate assistant, reviewed an article by O. Oldenberg on the persistence of molecular rotation and vibrations in collisions. In this work it is shown that in band spectra the collisions between heavy and light molecules apparently rotation vary little and vibration even less.

Charles Whitmer, graduate assistant, spoke on the amplification of small direct currents using a new tube designed in the research laboratories of the General Electric company, the circuits being suggested by L. A. DuBridge. With this method of measuring direct currents, great sensitivity is possible. DuBridge has succeeded in measuring currents as small as 30 electrons per second.

is there anything wrong in my urging him to go to my school. A—I father think that now they say there is. I think that there is some rule that says that no member of the faculty, alumni, or anything else can do anything to get that boy to come to school.

Representative Allen—You say the alumni rather let down on contributing because they had lost faith in Belting? Just what did you say was the cause of that loss of faith, failure of athletic teams over a season or two?

A—No I think not. Mr. Belting was a very peculiar type and he just didn't seem to have the faculty of selling himself.

Senator Doran—You say that he didn't sell himself to the alumni or to the men that were athletes or both?

A—To the alumni, I don't know how the men felt about him. I think they had very little contact with him. The feeling was that he was a square peg in a round hole.

Independence Prospects Good
NEW YORK, March 9 (AP)—Prospects for independence for the Philippines at the next congress were declared to be "very good" by Dr. Hilario C. "We have taken care of all the athletes that we possibly could either for a scholarship or for a long time note proposition. I am going to stand pat that these tuition notes must be settled this semester as these athletes will possibly not be permitted to register for the second semester with this old paper on our books."

"The second list of notes, totaling $934 for previous semesters. Such men as Kilsch, Olson, Kaiser, Spindling, etc., have left the university and no one wants to pay their tuitions even though we were assured when they registered that they would be taken care of. There are a few men on this list such as Arml from whom perhaps we can get some money by bringing some pressure to bear."

"These notes are all on our books and in case of any investigation, it is apt to be embarrassing for the athletic situation."

AMERICAN LEGION ATHLETIC NOTES

With an overwhelming score the surprised Legion basketball fans the 15th hospital company completely outscored the Fisher and Stemen cafe quintet 43 to 18 Sunday afternoon in the first of three games scheduled between the two teams to decide the city championship.

Intramuralites

Thirteen fraternities will compete for the championship and participation points are being awarded for all men entered up to and including 30 from each organization.

Sportively Speaking

By Bill Rutledge
A quick showdown between the Big Ten and the North Central association will probably be the outcome of the conference's declaration of war in a confab at Madison Saturday.

The Association has overstepped its field of authority. It was organized for scholastic purposes, particularly to supervise the transfer of credits. The conference was formed to correlate the athletic activities of its members.

Each organization has its own special sphere in which to function. There should not be a clash. The association would have all it could take care of in confining its interest to scholastic ends.

The sudden termination of Henry Canby's career as a Hawkeye vaulter throws a millstone around the neck of Iowa's track hops in relay meets and outdoor cinder carnivals.

The foud between Canby and Tom Worne of Northwestern was expected to reach its apex this season. But now neither is competing. Worne is out with a leg injury. In the meantime last year's second rater, Verne McDermott of Illinois, has become this season's top-notch.

University and town baseball burs took with eagerness and optimism for the inauguration of baseball on the campus. But before the Hawkeye nine makes its appearance on the university diamond in the conference opener April 19 with Northwestern, Coach Otto Vogel hopes to take his troupe on a training trip through Missouri and Kansas.

Lawrence "Pops" Harrison, midget guard who starred on Hawkeye case teams, has turned out a championship quintet in his first year at Westminster college at Pennsylvania. His team averaged 6 feet, one inch in height. It won 12 of 13 frays in the Tri-State conference.

Green Team Lost Games But Improved

St. Mary's Ramblers Close Season for Below .500

Starting the season with an inexperienced basketball squad, St. Mary's Ramblers, under the tutelage of Coach Francis Suelpel, finished the season with a record of wins and losses far below the .500 mark.

Around Gauchier, the single remnant of last year's championship outfit. Coach Suelpel built the 1931 edition of the Ramblers. The veteran has played both center and one of the forward berths, and not only was the team's high scorer, but also a strong defensive man.

Drizhal, Seaman Scorers
Rittenmeyer, Griffin, Drizhal, and Seaman have all performed at the scoring position this year, the last two playing the majority of the time.

Pooler and Seaman are new men who became eligible at the start of the second semester. With their advent the Ramblers starting lineup in most of their contests was as follows: Seaman and Drizhal, forwards; Gauchier, center; and Pooler and Bradley, guards.

The Suelpelmen started off the season with a rush, capturing their first three contests. This was followed by a long string of defeats, and a period of experimentation with different players. The team slowly improved, and pulled several upsets during the latter part of its schedule.

Gophers Win Final Game, Tie Michigan
MINNEAPOLIS, March 9 (AP)—Minnesota tonight became a share-holder in second place in the final game of the Big Ten basketball campaign by dealing defeat to Ohio State, 31 to 24, in a rough contest.

It was the Gopher's eighth triumph in 12 engagements, but came only after the Maroon and Gold replied to a threatening rally by the Buckeyes, who rose suddenly at the start of the second half to cut down a wide Minnesota margin.

The introduction of reserves as the second period opened threw the Gopher quintet off balance, and the 17 to 8 lead at the intermission quickly vanished when the Buckeyes tossed in four successive field goals.

Answering this, Minnesota sent back its regular outfit and after a brisk sortie marred by illegal tactics, with Ohio State the main offender, returned to a more comfortable advantage and picked up further points to win.

Grapplers Work for Big Ten Title Meet

Hawkeye wrestlers began the final week of practice last night as they started the priming process for the Western conference meet to be held at Chicago Friday and Saturday.

Coach Mike Howard has not as yet made any announcement as to what men will make the trip, but indicated that four or five men will be entered. He intimated that his decision would not be made until Wednesday, and as a result, the squad worked hard.

Captain Loren Poyner, rated as the classiest 165-pounder in this half of the circuit is the only man sure of entering. He was undefeated this season, although illness forced him to forfeit the Illinois match.

Coggon Beats Handymen in Sectional Tilt

Eliminated in Round 1 16-8; 14 Season Setbacks

The University high basketball squad completed a disastrous season Friday when it was defeated by Coggon, 16 to 8, in the first round of the sectional tournament held in Cedar Rapids.

The Handymen met six opponents in the Little Seven conference, played two games each with St. Pat's, Iowa City high, and St. Mary's, and completed the longest schedule in years by clashing with three other schools.

Coach E. R. Handy did the best job he could with the material at hand and at the start of the year the Blue and White seemed to have the makings of a good outfit.

Defeat St. Mary's
The bright spot in the season was the victory over St. Mary's. The Handymen came through for a 21 to 17 win after a hard fought and rough game, but reverted back into the loss column.

Tracksters Settle Down to Training for Illinois Relays

After returning from the conference meet the track squad settled down yesterday to intensive training for the Illinois relays. The workout last night consisted mostly of sprints and form in the jumps and weights.

Sprinters took a few gun starts and finished the evening's workout by broad jumping. The broad jumpers made a few trials for adjustments in their marks, then took two leaps for distance.

Distance men ran 100-yard dashes and ended by jogging three quarter miles. Weight men made a few trial pats, but spent most of their time on form.

Michigan Win Nets Tie for Second Place

ANN ARBOR, Mich., March 9 (AP)—The University of Michigan basketball team went into a tie for second place in the Big Ten race by defeating Chicago, 29 to 15, in the final game of the season at Yost field house tonight.

The defeat dropped Chicago to a tie with Wisconsin in seventh place. The Wolverines kept control of the ball from the start but were wild in their shots. Seven minutes elapsed before Eveland began the scoring.

Immediately after the game Michigan lettermen met and elected Norman Daniels of Detroit captain of next year's team.

Hays Signs Up

BILOXI, Miss., (AP)—Infielder Jack Hays today signed the 1931 contract offered him by the Washington Senators.

Hawkeye Gunners Smash Gallery Records—Shoot at Minneapolis This Week End

All previous team score target records made in the Hawkeye rifle gallery were shattered last week when the varsity gunners chalked up a score of 3,770. The aggregate tally represents the scores of the 10 highest men shooting in the four regular positions.

Ellis Tops List
High scoring honors went to R. C. Ellis and T. F. Challis whose net results amounted to 377 and 376 respectively. Their score is largely attributed to the challenging count they hung up in the standing position.

Distance men ran 100-yard dashes and ended by jogging three quarter miles. Weight men made a few trial pats, but spent most of their time on form.

Invade Gopher Camp
The Hawkeye experts are continuing to polish their target tactics this week in preparation for the individual shoulder to shoulder matches in the Gopher gallery at Minneapolis this Saturday.

Paul Wanner Ready
PASO ROBLES, Cal., (AP)—There was joy in the Pittsburgh Pirates' training camp today. The reason was contained in a telegram from Paul Wanner, who advised he was about to start for California from his Oklahoma home.

The scores of the military team are identical with that of the varsity group except that Challis is omitted, his score being supplemented on the R.O.T.C. sheet by those of G. F. Martin who tallied a total of 366.

The TREASURE HOUSE of MARTIN HEWS

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

Synopsis of Preceding Installments Beatrice Essiter is kidnaped by Joseph, the leader of a gang of thieves, while she is at a night-club with Major Owston, secretary-guard to her uncle, Martin Hewes, a cripple whose lawless methods of collecting are well known. Owston enlists the aid of Inspector Bloor, of Scotland Yard. He tells Bloor that he believes that the acquaintance who took them to the club—a man named Leopold—is one of Joseph's agents. Bloor and Owston visit the club, where they learn that it is frequented by a mysterious person known as Polly Harten. While they are there, a reservation for Polly Harten is telephoned in. A moment later Joseph telephones, taunting Bloor with the failure of his efforts. When Owston and Bloor return to Bloor's rooms, they find Joseph's former sweetheart, Rachel, there. Her head has been shaved and she is unconscious. She had gone to Joseph's secret hiding place in a fit of jealousy after hearing of Beatrice's fate. Owston reports all this to Hewes, who casually commissions him to pay five hundred thousand pounds for a one-eyed Buddha that has been brought to England from an eastern temple.

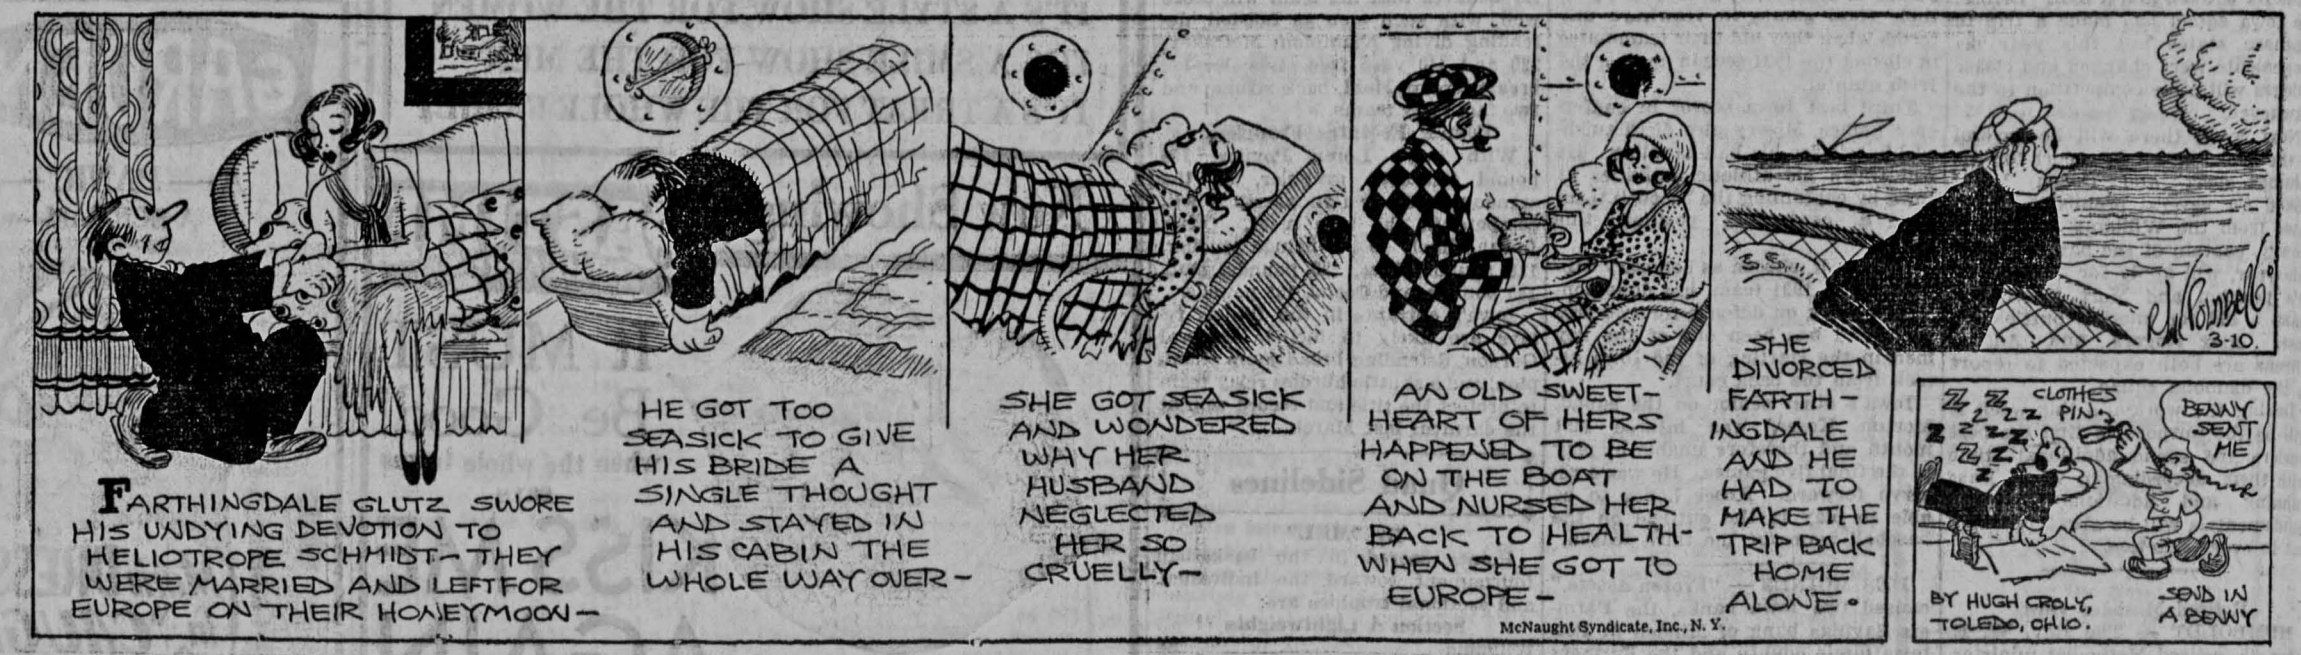

I found a car outside my rooms, and Bloor, as nearly excited as I had ever seen him, waiting for me. "Good evening, Major," he greeted me. "I thought I'd look in and say you the news. We're for it to-night." "The raid?" He nodded. "Information has been coming in fast and furious," he confided. "Let me tell you this first, though. We are out of one of our troubles. We got the Chesapeake burglars. A fair catch, it was, too." "Good work!" I exclaimed. "Whereabouts?" "We got them in a restaurant down by Liverpool street. No signs of a squeal from them, but one of our men caught Rogers—the leader of the three—trying to swallow a piece of paper. It was a note the waiter had just brought in. Evidently one of their places of call. Can't tell you what was in the note, but it means that things are moving. Then the men I planted down Shore-ditch way have been sending messages up, one by one. They are all agreed the gang's full strength is concentrated in a cramped radius of a few hundred yards." "But what about Joseph?" I asked anxiously. "It's no good waiting forever," Bloor pointed out. "When Joseph left Eldon street, he left the neighborhood altogether and we haven't a line on him yet. All the same, if we can break the gang, he'll never again be the man he was. Just cast your eye on this plan." He spread one out upon the table, and I looked over his shoulder. "It's a nasty district," he explained, "and the danger is that they'll slip away from the further houses and either get us on the flanks, if they want to fight, or creep away, one by one, to the lodging-houses by the river, which are hard to search. We'll have to take our chances. Here, on the river, you see and along there are the wharves. We've got the firm that own the big yards to close their gates, so there's no getting past those, and we've a couple of police boats on the river. This row of houses is called Tanner's Cottages, and in Number 3 we know that Clooney is hiding, the man who's wanted for that bank business. We shall open up there looking for him, and down behind, in this corner, Pat Riswell was seen yesterday. We want him, too. The road on the other side is Fellmongers Lane—nearly the worst spot in London. We're going to comb that up with picked men who are used to handling a gun. We could have stirred things up there before, but we decided to wait until we could make the big noise, and I'm glad we did. Getting the Chesapeake burglars has set our hands free. The Chief doesn't mind so much now what we do." "Supposing they won't come out?" I suggested. "Supposing they start the Sidney street business again?" "We are ready for that. I have an armored car at London Bridge station. They can take their time. The blocks of cottages have only two possible ways of exit, and we're ready for them either end. Every one who will come out unarmed and can prove himself the next morning to be an ordinary citizen, we shan't interfere with. Everyone who doesn't come out is one of Joseph's gang." "What time is the lineup?" I inquired. "Not too early. I am sending my men down two or three at a time, and they are closing in as the clock strikes twelve. I don't want the slightest sign of anything unusual until then." I drew a sigh of relief. By midnight, if all went well, I should probably be a free man. "I'm in it, or course?" I asked. Bloor appeared doubtful. "You're a bit of a marked man, you know," he reminded me. "You made yourself very conspicuous and obnoxious to the gang down at Breezley. Then, if by any chance Joseph gets to know of the fighting and comes down to help, he'll take jolly good care that you're put out of the way." "If there was any chance of Joseph's being there," I told him savagely, "it would take all Scotland Yard to keep me away. I'll be frank with you, Bloor. I've got another job on hand, but the moment that's over, I'm for the East end. I know where to find you, and I hope I'll ed, throwing open the door of the sitting room. Mr. Tul-Kak, who had been standing with his back to the window, bowed formally and advanced. He was a small, salow-faced man, carefully dressed in European clothes. He waved us to chairs. "I am Tul-Kak," he said, as soon as we had disposed of ourselves, and our guide had taken up a position facing the door. "I have with me the treasure. With which of you do I talk?" "I am the dealer," Isaacs replied. "Let me see your treasure." Tul-Kak moved to the sideboard, upon which was standing what I had thought to be an ebony tea-caddy, but which I now saw was a very wonderful oriental casket. There were three locks to it, each one of which Tul-Kak opened with a separate key. Inside was a lining of deep violet plush, and in the middle of it, reclining there with its one eye fixed upon the ceiling, was the statuette. Tul-Kak went down on his knees for a moment and bowed his head. Then he rose up, took the statuette reverently from its place, laid it in the palms of his hands, and brought it over to Isaacs. "Two thousand years," he confided, in a voice which trembled slightly, "have passed, and no man's hands save the Priests of the Inner Order, have touched it. Millions of worshippers have bent the knee at a distance and passed on. Now the days of faith are finished. If curses could kill, I am a dead man already, and as it is, the knives of thousands are sharpened for my life. But I, Tul-Kak, am a plain merchant, although my forefathers were priests. Take the One-eyed Buddha into your hands, Isaacs, and buy or return." Isaacs looked down at it through his horn-rimmed eyeglass, turning it this way and that. I fancied that he was seeking some opportunity for criticism and falling to find it. He passed it to me, and, strangely enough, I felt a spark of almost the same reverence as had inspired Tul-Kak. Yet, as I looked at it, I felt a queer sense of trouble. The sightless eye met mine for a minute. It seemed to me there was almost a threat in its cold stare and in the curve of the mouth. I handed it back. "It is wonderful," I murmured. "You buy?" Tul-Kak asked Isaacs. "I buy for my master, if we can afford." "I do not know that word," was the frigid rejoinder. "It is strange to me. You buy—you pay me five thousand pounds." Isaacs made a motion to take up his hat. Tul-Kak turned to the man who had received us downstairs. "You will telephone," he directed, "to number—". Then I, in my stupidity, made one of the worst breaks, I was afraid

Behind the Scenes in Hollywood

By HARRISON CARROLL HOLLYWOOD, Cal. — If Paramount can close a deal for the talkie rights, "Tom Sawyer, Detective," will be made this summer in Hollywood. Though lesser known than "Tom Sawyer" or "Huckleberry Finn," the Twain sequel is said to provide good picture material. In case it is made, the leading roles will be taken, of course, by Jackie Coogan, Mitzie Green and Jackie Searies, John Cromwell will direct. "Tom Sawyer" has turned out to be one of Paramount's big money pictures of the year. Also it has brought Jackie Coogan back as a star. And, of more far-reaching effect, it has turned all Hollywood to the task of winning back its most loyal audience, the children of the land. AND HE SENT IT COLLECT Solly Violsky, the scenarist, recently got a bill from the Lamb's Club in New York. He wired back: "Got your bill that I owed you $186 stop send me $14 and I'll owe you an even $200. Don't stop." Marx Brothers migrate. Teet Carle reports the four Marx Brothers — Harpo, mighty pantomimist; Chico, mighty musician; Zeppo, mighty wag, and Groucho, mighty lak' a rose, were given a thunderous welcome at the station by three baggage men, two red-caps and a fellow named Willie, who said he loaned Harpo six bits in 1924, and what was to be done about it? "Have you boys any desire to play Hamlet?" they were asked. "Not unless they give us a stroke a hole," replied Chico. LATEST GOSSIP Colleen Moore didn't make a picture, after all. She has left for New York. Al Scott, the boy friend, lives there. B. B. Van Dine, the mystery writer, clips his own beard. It takes four pairs of clippers. Jean Harlow was 30 years old this week and Paul Bern gave her a birthday party. Eddie Nugent's first role as a free-lance will be the boy who married millions in Paramount's "Up Pops the Devil." Richard Rowland, former boss of First National, will be assistant to Paramount's Walter Wanger in New York. This dispenses of rumors that he will be connected with Tiffany. Buster

THE OLD HOME TOWN

Keaton raises crawfish and wild quail at his Beverly Hills home. Don't ask me why—the race for stars is extending to writers, directors and studio executives. It will be a golden year for the hired help in Hollywood. DIRECTOR TO SPAIN As soon as he completes "Mme. Julie," Victor Schertzinger plans to take a camera crew and sound equipment to Spain to film atmospheric shots for radio pictures' forthcoming special, "Marcheta." One of the objects of the trip is to record a 60-piece guitar orchestra in Madrid. Radio officials figure that the song "Marcheta," with a sale of more than 2,000,000 copies, has created a ready-made interest in the title of the picture. The fact that the film will bring Richard Dix and Irene Dunne together again also is looked upon as a box-office factor. NEW DIRECTOR FOR CLARA With the picture already a week under way, Richard Wallace has been drafted to replace Lethar Mendes as director of Clara Bow's new vehicle, "Kick In." Mendes asked to be relieved when he couldn't agree with studio officials on the treatment of the story. "Kick In" is Willard Mack's underworld melodrama, and is the first picture Clara has made since her recent court troubles. DO YOU KNOW That Irene Rich once owned a chicken ranch in Honolulu? That William Beaudine, the director, writes stories for children under an assumed name? That Claude Allister is really Claude Palmer, son of a general in the English army? That Clara Kimball Young's father was one of the founders of Ringling Brothers' circus? That John Gilbert once was a cop boy extra on Bill Hart films?

City Junior High

The 8B general science classes and their teacher, Russia Harris, of the Iowa City junior high school recently made a trip through the Iowa City water works. The object of the trip was that they might see how their drinking water is prepared. A discussion of the plant was held the next day and question blanks for the students' notebooks filled out.

Trips of this sort are made in place of classroom experiments. In the spring the classes will study erosion at the river.

Effort is made to make the class interesting as well as instructive. Next week a study of the camera lens will be made.

Longfellow

The kindergarten A of Longfellow is working on a "store" project. It is not entirely developed yet, but the children do have some of the "fruit" and "canned goods" made. They have made the "apples," "oranges," and "bananas" from clay and they are making paper sacks to put "sold" goods in. The "canned goods" is made from paper and the pupils print the name of the contents on the outside and put a colored picture on the outside. The store itself is made of orange crates nailed together with shelves made from boards. When the project is completed the pupils will "sell" and "buy" the "groceries."

Those in this class who have not been absent nor tardy the first six weeks of the second semester are: Jean Anderson, Billy Barth, Allen

In the kindergarten B Eloise An-claus, Lawrence Conner, Anna Gay, Raymond Kloos, Lois Vulliamer, Le-atrice Wagner, and Helen Marlow have been neither absent nor tardy for the last six weeks.

In the 1A class those who have been neither absent nor tardy for the last six weeks are: Kenneth Ben-nett, Ronald Burkett, Howard Camp-bell, James Hanna, Lewis Jenkinson, Burton Rosenburg, Dewey Stoops, Louis Vopali, Robert Vitosh, Ken-neth Vitosh, John Winslow, Maxine Daniels, Eileen Hines, Carol Knotts, Betty Kondelka, Dorothy Von Ach, and Pearl Watts.

Keith Rogers of the 2B class cele-brated his eighth birthday Monday by bringing the pupils suckers. The children sang a birthday song for him and because it was his birthday he was allowed to choose his favorite story.

The 3B class is studying bricks. They are learning the different kinds of bricks and as a project they are going to make one. "You . . . are to be congratulated on the high quality of milk . . ."

Prof. A. W. Rudnick [Ames]

Prof. A. W. Rudnick and his two as-sistants of Iowa State College (Ames) make pe-riodic visits (at our request) to our plant to aid in se-curing of milk of a superior quality and flavor.

Prof. Rudnick is considered an ex-pert in the field of milk production.

His rigid tests of the milk from each of our producing farms, in addition to our own work, enables us to give you a milk excep-tionally low in bac-teria.

Prof. Rudnick's letter tells most convincingly of the care and attention we exercise in the production of superior milk.

This inspection by so outstanding an authority is one of the most significant "chapters" in "The Story of Sidwell's."
