IOWA LEGISLATURE ADJOURNS

Writer Says Press to Give Way to Radio

Hamlin Garland Visions Passing of Field of Journalism

"Journalism is in possession of the field; it dominates the world; it colors everything, but it is of the moment. It's going to pass utterly. What's going to take its place? The radio!"

Thus did Hamlin Garland, pioneer literary figure of the middle west, yesterday predict to Times club listeners the vanquishment of newspapers by radio.

Radio belittles type

"I think the radio the most tremendous discovery the world has ever seen," he continued. "It makes the discovery of movable type a small thing."

Journalistic writing, he said, tended to produce stereotyped expressions.

"Journalism has spoiled many writers, though not all, for some extremely clever men have come up in spite of it."

Garland recommended care in the choice of words for literary success. His own manuscripts, he told his audience, he rewrites from 5 to 20 times.

A feeling that New England had not had its cornhusking amply described led to the writing of his early sketches, Garland said.

"I had husked corn in a raw November wind and knew it wasn't done with husking bees and dances."

An article on old-fashioned threshing followed his husking sketch.

"Then, for fear some would think me unnecessarily drab, I wrote 'Husking,' a more picturesque, colorful, and joyous scene."

Receives $30 Pay

For six such articles, the author told his audience, he received $30. "You can see why I wasn't corrupted in my youth," he laughed. The six sketches were the basis for his "Boy Life on the Prairie," published in 1899, and still being reprinted.

Garland explained that his sketches were made in a mood, not of defiance, but of supplementing Eastern concepts.

Ioway didn't like his "Main-Travelled Roads" when it was first published, he said, because it didn't help the price of land or bring in immigrants. "But 'Main-Travelled Roads' is now plain history; it's entirely removed from controversy."

Introduced by Authoress

Garland was introduced by Mrs. Josephine Donovon, the plot of whose novel "Black Soil," is laid around the Cherokee district. Garland's "Middle Border" books have the country about Cherokee as part of their setting.

Three Doctors Fail to Save Byrd's Pet Fox Terrier, Igloo

BOSTON, April 21 (AP)—The peculiarly satisfying comradeship between a man and a dog was ended today for Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd by the death of Igloo, the famous explorer's pet fox terrier.

Three doctors strove vainly to save the little animal's life. Admiral Byrd was preparing to fly to Boston when he learned Igloo had died. Death was due to indigestion.

Igloo had served as mascot on Byrd's expeditions to the north and south poles. As a puppy Igloo went to Spitzbergen when Byrd and Floyd Bennett flew over the north pole. He had attained canine maturity before he accompanied his master to Little America, from which point the explorer flew over the south pole.

Trial Drags; Three Judges Grill Lawyer

S. K. Stevenson Chief Subject in Day's Questioning

The disbarment trial of S. K. Stevenson on 17 charges of unethical and unprofessional conduct dragged on through the sixth day yesterday with the judges ordering the attorneys to avoid repetition in quizzing and to "stop encumbering the records" with irrelevant evidence.

Detailed grilling of the local lawyer came from the three tribunal judges as they compared notes and checked back Stevenson's testimony with the state's evidence.

Volleys of Questions

Stevenson was the chief subject of interrogation. Volleys of questions were aimed at him from his two defense attorneys, Ed L. O'Connor and E. A. Baldwin, prosecuting attorney, Assistant Attorney General Neil Garrett and the judges.

Intensive questioning developed from the handling of $2,500 by Stevenson from the J. Y. Stover estate for the Stover heirs, for whom the defendant had acted as legal counsel.

The state contended that he had no right to cash the check and use the money personally.

"I claim," Stevenson declared, "that I had the authority, as attorney for the heirs, to do what was necessary to clear up the title."

Explanations Cut

His attempts at lengthy explanations were cut short by presiding Judge James DeLand of the fourth judicial district, with the statement, "Account for money that came into your hands, Mr. Stevenson. That is all that is necessary."

Concluding the defense against the Ella Fry Garner charge, lawyers O'Connor and Baldwin argued that the money their client had received was due him as attorney fees and expenses.

Bailiff George J. Balluff adjourned the court with a nod to Stevenson's dealings with Ollie Purvis, guardian of the late Ellis Purvis' three grandchildren, being conducted.

Paris Bound

Ruth Nichols

Ruth Nichols Plans Flight

Woman to Dare Solo Trip to Paris in Monoplane

NEW YORK, April 21 (AP)—Ruth Nichols was planning today a solo flight to Paris—in an airplane three times as powerful as the historic "Spirit of St. Louis" and between 50 and 75 miles an hour faster.

Miss Nichols could not be reached but friends said no definite announcement could be made until her plans were finally completed.

Plane in Chamberlin Plant

Meanwhile the red monoplane in which she has set four world records was being overhauled at the Jersey City factory of Col. Clarence D. Chamberlin, former towman, who it was said had tried to dissuade her, but would fly with her as far as Harbor Grace, N. F., the taking off point, if she goes.

When work on the motor and monoplane is completed, it was said, the ship will have a cruising speed of about 200 miles an hour—cut down to between 150 and 175 on a flight as long as that across the Atlantic. The motor, with a super-charger, will develop 650 horse power. "The Spirit of St. Louis" had a 200 horse power motor and a cruising speed of about 100 miles an hour.

Police Tag Cars

Iowa City police have been tagging cars violating the 10 minute parking time allowed for side parking on Washington street between Linn and Clinton streets. The violators were let off without paying fines, but future violators will have to do so.

Lawmakers Pass 342 Bills, Clocks Stopped for 5 Days

Opponents of Rider Win in Final Count; Senate Accepts Millage Bill at Eleventh Hour

Forty-Fourth General Assembly Goes Into History at Midnight After Session of More Than Three Months

DES MOINES, April 21 (AP)—The forty-fourth general assembly adjourned finally at 11:52 p.m. tonight.

Adjournment came after a day of "watchful waiting" intermingled with eleventh hour business.

The clocks pointed to the hour of 12 noon, and the time officially Wednesday, April 15.

For five days the members had been working with clocks stopped which has been customary in such parliamentary bodies. More than 10 days ago the legislators voted to adjourn finally April 15 and when it was seen this could not be accomplished the clocks were stopped at 11:35 a.m.

In session more than three months, the legislators passed 190 of the 598 bills and joint resolutions introduced in the house and 152 of the 445 bills and joint resolutions introduced in the senate. Of the total bills passed 186 are awaiting action by Governor Turner.

DES MOINES, April 21 (AP)—The house tonight refused to adopt the road extension program mapped out by senate highway leaders. It defeated, 44 to 58, the senate amendments to the Shields road bill. Adjoining hope had been held for its resurrection, the state income tax proposal was killed definitely by the legislature.

As one of the session's last acts, the house refused by a vote of 57 to 46 to keep an income tax rider onto the biennial millage bill. Democrats joined Republican opponents of the tax in defeating the final effort of its advocates to force passage.

The millage bill, which authorizes levying of $790,000 direct property taxes in each of the next two years, was approved. It passed the senate yesterday.

"Political Move"—Charge

The effort to attach the income tax provision to the millage bill was made on recommendation of the house ways and means committee. Opponents of the play charged that it was purely a political move, and several representatives who previously voted for an income tax counselled that it would be unwise to attempt controversial legislation so late in the session.

Among the latter group were Reps. J. H. Johnson of Marion county and M. R. McCaulley of Calhoun county, members of the interim tax committee, who said it would be futile to endeavor to force senate adoption of the measure.

Two-Thirds Vote Needed

The senate meanwhile refused to consider a highway committee substitute for the road bond enabling act vetoed by Gov. Dan Turner. A two-thirds vote would have been required to suspend the rules to permit action on the bill, but its sponsors obtained only 30 votes to 18 against.

Virtually the same provisions, however, were approved later by the senate in passing an amended Shields bill 45 to 4. The measure as approved inserts sections adding all towns of 150 population to the primary road system, providing for additional paving, and adding certain roads along the state boundaries.

The senate reconsidered its defeat of a resolution to empower the governor to set up a commission for a study of the farm loan situation, with authority to confer with other states and the federal government. An amendment was adopted before final passage lowering the appropriation to $10,000. The resolution then went to the house.

Woman Patient Clad in Nightgown Flees Hospital; Police Nab

The University hospital authorities phoned the local police station last night that a nightgown-clad woman patient had escaped.

But the police had located her before they had been notified. The escaped patient had called at a nearby home and asked for an overcoat, whereupon the station was called and the woman held.

Similar occurrence took place Sunday, when an eight year old boy ran away from the children's hospital. The police had picked him up before they had been notified.

Hoover Says Sandino Will Meet Justice

WASHINGTON, April 21 (AP)—Confidence that Augustino Sandino would be brought to justice for the "cold blooded murder" of eight or nine American citizens and a number of Nicaraguans was expressed today by President Hoover.

In a formal statement the president said he had been advised the Nicaraguan government had placed in the field more than 1,300 men of the newly created national guard in a drive to "clean-up" Sandino and his fellow bandits.

Nicaragua Responsible

The president said the insurgent chieftain had "placed himself outside the civilized pale" and added the Nicaraguan government "has shown itself fully cognizant of its responsibilities."

At the same time the navy department was advised by Rear Admiral Arthur S. Clair Smith, commander of the special service squadron now stationed in Nicaraguan waters, that 15 foreigners, including eight American civilians and one marine officer, had lost their lives in Nicaragua.

Meanwhile, reports from the Honduran rebellion gave no indication that American citizens were in danger. The American government, however, kept warships at both Honduras and Nicaragua as a precautionary measure.

Jerry Buckley Jury Acquits 3 of Murder

DETROIT, April 21 (AP)—The jury of "who killed Jerry Buckley, and why?" remained unanswered tonight. A recorder's court jury returned a verdict of acquittal in the cases of Ted Pizzino, Angelo Livecchi and Joe Bommarito.

Bommarito and Pizzino were accused by the state of being two of the gunmen who entered the lobby of the La Salle hotel at 134 a.m. last July 23, and shot down Gerald E. Buckley, militant crusader for radio station WMBE, two hours after he had announced the recall of the then mayor, Charles Bowles, whom he had attacked in his nightly broadcasts.

Buckley Waiting

Livecchi was accused by the state of signalling the gunmen, as they waited outside the hotel, when Buckley was seated in the lobby and the scene was set for the assassination. There was testimony during the trial to show that Buckley was waiting at the scene of his death to keep an appointment with a woman. Police have never divulged whether they know who made that appointment.

In spite of stern warnings issued by court attendants against any demonstration by spectators, there were repeated cheers when the verdict of acquittal was announced at 7:50 tonight.

Arrested Again

Before the defendants could leave the court room, Pizzino was arrested for another murder and Livecchi was taken into custody for Rochester, N. Y., police on a robbery charge.

Council Reviews Tradition of Green Caps for Freshmen

Green caps for the class of 1935 during its freshman year.

Such was the decree of student council last night, overruling an action taken at a joint meeting of the 1929-30 council and the present group last May, which authorized the change reversible to old gold and black salt hatters. Transfer back to the cap with a bill and a white button was also included in the vote.

Basis for Tradition

Members of the council expressed the sentiment that the new style did not provide for a campus tradition that the green cap had.

Discussion of possible reorganization and means for obtaining continuity occupied nearly two hours. Resulting was a successful motion inviting five professional colleges now represented to select each mid-year a Junior to serve as understudy to the old member from that group and to attain full membership with voting power the next fall.

Arrangements for student elections for board members for Iowa, Ugh and Student Publications, Inc., will be begun at once under the direction of Robert Milligan, C3 of Jefferson, committee chairman.

Count Sforza Calls 5 Year Plan Majestic

Ends Series of Talks of Modern European Situations

Soviet Russia's five year plan was described as "one of the most majestic events in modern history," by Count Carlo Sforza in his final lecture here yesterday.

Comparing the operation of the Russian system to the building of the Egyptian pyramids with wholesale enslavement of population, the Italian diplomat brought to an end his series of talks on modern European history and politics.

The count has been speaking under the auspices of the history department and will conclude a series of seminars in the board room of Old Capitol at 10 a.m. tomorrow.

Prefer Bolshevism

Russia has merely exchanged the autocracy of the old imperialistic regime for the equally autocratic rule of the Soviet Kremlin, explained the speaker. However, the peasants of the country prefer bolshevism as the lesser of the two evils.

Count Sforza was, at the close of the war, appointed high minister in Constantinople for Italy and practically for the Entente. Drawing on his experiences in this official position and years of service in the Italian diplomatic service, he disclosed some of the hidden motives and meanings behind the political situation in Russia.

Nothing Changed

"Nothing is really changed in Russia," said the author statesman. He mentioned the lowering of the moral standard, the censorship of the stage and education, and the oppression of the soviet police as some of the tragic elements of the present situation.

Despite increases in industrial production and wages and a decrease in costs for which the soviet rule takes credit, the country is no better off than before, the speaker pointed out. The people accept the sufferings imposed upon them in hopes that future generations may be spared.

The false impressions so prevalent all over the world with regard to the Russian problem, the count attributed to the sensational exaggeration of the seriousness of the situation by the press of all countries.

White Shrine Will Initiate; Will Have First Ceremonial

Initiation and the first White Shrine ceremonial of the new year for Bethlehem Shrine No. 8 will take place Friday night at the Masonic temple.

The past officers of the Shrine, headed by Lois D. Carson, past worthy high priestess who went out of office April 3, have been asked to take charge of the initiatory work. Petitions of candidacy for membership were required to have been in the hands of Adelaide Goodell, worthy scribe, before the meeting of April 8.

Mrs. Charlotte Meardon, worthy high priestess, will preside during transaction of business. A dinner in the Masonic temple dining hall will precede the ceremonial.

Rotarians to Hear Speech by Richman

Irving B. Richman, author of "Ioway to Iowa," will speak before the Rotary club tomorrow as a part of the observance of Iowa history week, a tradition inaugurated in 1925 by the Iowa State Historical society and the Iowa Federation of Women's clubs.

The book "Ioway to Iowa" forms the central theme of this year's program. At the last meeting of the Iowa City Woman's club, Prof. Benj. F. Shambaugh of the political science department read parts of it.

Lieut. Irving Borts Speaks of Discipline

"Military discipline," was the subject of a lecture given by Lieutenant Irving H. Borts to members of the 18th Hospital company at their regular weekly meeting last night in the American Legion building.

Litter drill was directed by Sergt. Lester W. Herring and Sergt. George J. Krotz took charge of calisthenics.

Edward J. McLachlan, first class private, was presented with a five year medal for service in the Iowa National guard, by Capt. George Maresh. The company has 19 active men with these medals, more than any other outfit in the state, members said.

First Instalment

Engleden walked across the Strand, from the main entrance of the Law Courts to the old doorway of Middle Temple Lane, with his nose in the air. Called to the Bar only a few weeks previously, he had just been briefed for the first time, and had experienced the supreme felicity of winning his case.

It was a beautiful afternoon in early summer, and a golden sunlight was flooding the Strand on the other side of him and Fleet street on the other; to Engleden the world seemed well tuned to sympathy with the season's splendor; he saw shining vistas. After that first brief would come others; he would work; he would succeed; he would take silk, and assume the much-meaning letters K. C. after his name; perhaps he would attain judicial honors and become the Honorable Sir Setton Engleden—the King's Bench Division, he thought, would suit him better than that devoted to Chancery.

He began to build castles as he walked down Middle Temple Lane. Ten years at the Junior bar; ten more after taking silk; then—but at that point, he became a practical young Englishman again, and laughed at himself and his castle-building. All dreams, of course—silly! Still, a good beginning, anyway—a very good beginning.

Engleden's chambers—shared with another neophyte—were in Fountain Court, and on an upper floor. He ran joyously up the Stairs, intent on divesting himself of wig and gown and rushing westward, to tell a certain young lady of his success. But, as he neared the door of his rooms, his clerk, who had preceded him from the Law Courts, met him on the threshold, holding out a buff envelope.

"Wire for you, sir," he said. "Found it in the letter-box."

Engleden tore the envelope open, to stare in amazement at what he read on the flimsy sheet inside—

"To Setton Engleden, 53a Fountain Court, Temple, London. Please come here at once. Col. Engleden has been missing from his hotel since last night, and no trace of him has been got up to now. Fear foul play."

"From Superintendent of Police, Barrowsburgh, Yorkshire."

Engleden turned sharply on his clerk; even as he read, he had determined on his course of action.

"Johnson—a railway guide, quick! Here—go to it! Look up a train from Kings' Cross to York—lucky that I know where Barrowsburgh is. I must get down there at once, Johnson—my uncle's missing, and the police fear there's something wrong. That train, now?" he went on, tearing off gown and wig and flinging them aside. "Got one?"

"Five-forty-five, sir," replied Johnson. "Activos York ten o'clock. Restaurant car. Sorry to hear about the Colonel, sir. Anything I can do? You've just three-quarters of an hour."

"By George, yes!" exclaimed Engleden. "Money—I've only two or three pounds on me. Can you get a cheque cashed, Johnson?"

"Yes, sir," said Johnson promptly. "At once, sir—landlord round the corner'll cash anything for me, sir."

"Fifty pounds?" asked Engleden.

"Hundred, if you like, sir—he's always plenty of cash," said Johnson. "If you'll write it out, sir—"

"Fifty'll do," remarked Engleden. He took a cheque book from a drawer in his desk and wrote hurriedly. "Quick as you can Johnson," he said, as he handed the cheque over. "I mustn't miss that train."

The clerk shot out and down the stairs, and Engleden turned into another room for a small suitcase which he always kept packed for any sudden departure. He had just glanced through its contents when Johnson came flying back with a handful of notes.

"All right, sir—I've counted 'em," he said. "Better get you a taxi now, wrong when you get down there."

"I'll let you know, Johnson," replied Engleden. "I'd a letter from the Colonel this morning. He was all right yesterday—enjoying his holiday greatly. Well—yes, a taxi, Johnson."

Five minutes later he was passing the Law Courts, from which he had emerged only a quarter of an hour before, flushed and triumphant; he glanced at them now with no interest. That telegram, he realized, had knocked everything else to pieces: until he knew that Col. Engleden was safe, or had definite news as to what had happened to him, he would know no peace of mind. For Col. Engleden was to Setton Engleden something more than an uncle; in strict truth he had been all the father he had ever known. His parents had died when he was quite a small boy, leaving him almost unprovided for; his uncle, a confirmed bachelor, had adopted him, educated him, made much of him; to his uncle he owed everything, and there was a personal affection between them of the strongest and deepest sort.

It was inconceivable to Setton that he could ever think of another human being, man or woman, as he thought of his uncle—to him the Colonel was a veritable embodiment of everything that was fine in manhood, a fine specimen of the honest, straightforward English gentleman. And the mere idea that some evil fate had befallen him—

As he rode through the dingy Bloomsbury streets on his way to Kings' Cross, Engleden pulled out the wire from Barrowsburgh and read it again. Missing from his hotel since last night! No trace! What did it mean? Col. Engleden was a singularly alert, active man—younger in mind and body than his actual age, sixty-five, would have led you to suppose. He was not the sort of man to run into danger, or even to allow himself to get into any risky situation.

Engleden knew why he had gone (CONTINUED ON PAGE 8)

Sisterhood to Install Second Chapter Here

P. E. O. Organizer to Preside at Affair Tomorrow

Formal organization of a new chapter of the P. E. O. sisterhood in Iowa City will be held tomorrow at 2:30 p.m. at Iowa Union, with Mrs. Betty K. Reed, state organizer of the sisterhood, presiding. The event will mark the culmination of efforts of chapter E, the Iowa City mother group, to secure another chapter here.

Will Elect Officers
Eighteen members of chapter E will be charter members of chapter H, the new organization. Officers will be elected at a business meeting at 11 a.m. at the home of Mrs. George F. Kay, Bella Vista place. They will be installed at the afternoon session.

Charter Members
Charter members of chapter H are: Mrs. A. W. Bryan, Mrs. W. L. Bywater, Beulah Crawford, Mrs. W. S. Dwyer, Mrs. G. S. Easton, Mrs. G. R. Gay, Mrs. L. B. Higley, Mrs. G. A. T. Hise.

Mrs. A. O. Ingram, Mrs. Kay, Mrs. Edwin Kurtz, Mrs. L. C. Lawyer, Mrs. B. E. Manville, Mrs. E. F. Mason, Mrs. F. L. Mott, Mrs. Agnes Royce, Mrs. G. H. Scanlon, and Mrs. S. L. Updegraff.
Members of chapter E are asked to make reservations for the luncheon by 7 o'clock this evening with Mrs. E. K. Mapes and unaffiliated members of the sisterhood with Mrs. Bywater.

Gamma Epsilon Pi to Take in Five at Initiation Ceremony

Gamma Epsilon Pi, honorary commerce sorority will have a formal initiation at 5:15 tonight at Iowa Union, followed by a formal dinner and a Founders' day program. Shades of coral and silver will be used in the decorations. Initiates are: Gertrude Bogan, A2 of Glen Ellyn, Ill.; Myrtle Anderson, C4 of Estherville; Chrystal Price, C3 of Grundy Center; Ruth Davidson, C3 of Elkader; and Janet Boock, C3 of Schleswig.

Speakers on the program are to be Olive Torngson, assistant university examiner; Jeanette Williams, C4 of Williamsburg; and Miss Boock.

Eddith Bingham, Jack Vollertsen Tell of Betrothal

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Eddith Bingham, A4 of Des Moines, to Jack R. Vollertsen, L1 of Davenport. Miss Bingham is a member of university players and secretary of the senior class of the college of liberal arts. Mr. Vollertsen is a member of Delta Upsilon, Delta Sigma Rho, and Pi Epsilon Pi fraternities, a member of A.E.L., and the university debate team. He has one of the Dillon law scholarships, and was winner of Jessup oratorical contest last year. He is a member of Scabard and Blade and was business manager of the 1931 Hawkeye.

Elizabeth Jericho, '30, Weds Jasper Dutton

Elizabeth Jericho, '30, of Fairfield, was married to Jasper Dutton of Mt. Pleasant at Burlington Saturday. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Jericho of Fairfield. Mrs. Dutton was affiliated with Alpha Delta Pi sorority, and was a member of Octave Thanet literary society. The couple will be at home after May 15 at 708 E. Washington street, Mt. Pleasant.

"Continue to Learn" Says G. D. Stoddard

"Everyone Should Have Mental Endeavors After School"

That everyone should continue in some line of mental endeavor after finishing his formal education was pointed out by Prof. George D. Stoddard, director of the child welfare research station, before the Philosophical club last night. The club met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Orvis C. Irwin, 1530 Muscatine avenue, at 8:15 p. m.

Professor Stoddard, who spoke on "A theory of mental development," gave the following five steps:
That definite limits to mental development are set by heredity and they can be measured; that inherited mental ability combined with stimulation has the appearance of increasing.

That in certain ways, the nervous system transforms external patterns into adequate internal stimuli and drives whatever mental mechanism is present accordingly; and that in present day life there are strong forces which are ruinous to mental development.

Prof. Righter Tells Judges of Musicians

High School Festival Attracts 3,600 to Iowa City

Championship decisions in 45 contests will rest with 13 musical experts, the official judges of the high school music festival May 7, 8, and 9 at the University of Iowa.

Prof. Charles B. Righter of the music department, Tuesday announced the appointment of the corps of teachers, band, orchestra, and chorus leaders, and composers representing seven states.

3,600 Complete

It will be the task of these judges to determine organizations and individuals from among the 3,600 boys and girls of about 120 schools. The officials' roster is the largest in the history of the festival.

These are the appointees: Harold Bachman, Chicago, director of Bachman's Million Dollar band; George Beach, director of Chicago Little Symphony orchestra; Raymond Dvorak, assistant director of University of Illinois bands; T. P. Oiddings, director of music, Minneapolis; Victor Grabel, editor of band and orchestra department of "Etude," music magazine.

Music Heads Judge

Edgar B. Gordon, orchestra authority, University of Wisconsin; James R. Gillette, chairman of music department, Carleton college; Ernest Harrison, professor of piano, University of Nebraska; A. R. McAllister, director of three national championship bands of Joliet, Ill. high school; Wendell Sanderson, director of public school music, Findlay, O.

Frederick B. Stevens, director of music school, University of Illinois; Thompson Stone, choral director, Boston, Mass., and George Venable, conductor of University of Missouri band and orchestra.

Faculty Hears Prof. Leib

Prof. Karl E. Leib of the college of commerce will speak on "The unemployment situation" at the regular meeting of the engineering faculty at Iowa Union today noon.

Prof. Lapp to Give Fourth Science Talk

"The heart of the atom," the fourth of a series of lectures on "The nature of the physical world," will be discussed by Prof. Claude J. Lapp of the physics department at the physics auditorium Thursday at 7 p.m. The lecture will deal with radioactivity, will be illustrated with experiments, and will be of a popular nature.

According to Prof. John A. Eldridge of the physics department, it is through radioactivity that much of our present knowledge of the structure of the atom, especially the nucleus, has been obtained. Professor Lapp will show by means of the experiments some of the direct sources of information through which the physicist has been able to gain this knowledge.

Professor Lapp stated that among the experiments he will show will be several demonstrating directly the presence of alpha particles, one of

California Physicist Halts Trip to Lecture

Methods for the production of high velocity canal rays which do not require high voltages will be discussed by Prof. Ernest O. Lawrence of the University of California at the physics auditorium this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Professor Lawrence is on his way to attend the spring meeting of the American Physical society at Washington, D. C., and is stopping here to lecture before continuing his journey.

Engineers to Speak

Liberal Arts College Deans Attend Two Day Meet Here

Deans of the colleges of liberal arts of 14 state universities of the Mississippi valley will meet in a conference tomorrow and Friday in the senate chamber of Old Capitol. Dean George F. Kay of the University of Iowa college of liberal arts is chairman.

Hold Joint Session

A joint session of the deans with the presidents of Iowa colleges will be held Friday afternoon. Progress of certain educational experiments in curriculum making and administrative organization, namely, "The Ohio State university on upper-lower division," and "The new Wisconsin plan for liberal arts," will be discussed by Dean W. J. Shepard of Ohio State university and Dean G. O. Sellery of the University of Wisconsin.

Present Developments

Significant developments in each of the colleges represented will be told by the deans Thursday morning. During the conference addresses, besides the two named above, will be given by Dean J. B. Johnston of the University of Minnesota, Assistant Dean Wilbur R. Humphreys of the University of Michigan, Dean F. M. Tisdell of the University of Missouri, and Dean S. E. Stout of the University of Indiana.

The conference will be closed Friday evening with an address by Dr. Ben Wood of Columbia university.

Julia Peterson Leads New Poetry Society

Officers were elected for the charter chapter of the College Poetry Society of America, and tentative plans for activity discussed when a group of student poets met at Prof. Edwin Ford Piper's office in liberal arts building yesterday afternoon.

Julia J. Peterson, J4 of Moline, Ill., was chosen president of the local chapter, and Kathryn Smith, A2 of Cedar Rapids, was elected secretary-treasurer. About 45 students have joined the group so far, and membership will be held open for some time longer.

A New Parking Plan

A NEW system of downtown parking in Iowa City promises to remedy, in part at least, the lack of available car space. Center parking on Washington street, together with a ten minute curb stop rule should do away with the disagreeable double parking.

It should also assist in keeping the end loops of Iowa avenue free from the unsightly parking that has existed as a result of overcrowding.

While the center parking does tend to do away with the wide sweep of traffic down the center, Iowa City's streets are wide enough to accommodate traffic in the lanes on either side of Washington street and will facilitate buses in getting close to the curb while taking on or discharging passengers. The system will also allow "minute" shoppers to get their cars somewhere near the place they are going so that they may make their purchases and be on their way without having to leave their car on the other side of town.

The 10 minute parking rule, however, will have to be rigidly enforced if the new plan is to be satisfactory, as will the double parking rule, since any car stopping in the traffic lane for even a minute will block all other cars in the whole block.

A Great Artist

TONIGHT, Iowa City music lovers will gather in Iowa Union to hear a great violinist.

Mischa Elman, conceded by critics to be one of the four or five world's premier violinists, is a Russian who has studied under Fiedelmann and Leopold Auer.

In a world where violin playing is generally good in a technical way and where the violinist must therefore excel in taste and style, he has risen to the peaks. He is a passionate lover of music and plays in a string quartet for pleasure, something that very few of even the finest violinists have done.

"I play all the new works," he says, "but I love Mozart more than ever." Brahms and Bach are others who rank among his prime favorites.

Some critics have been disposed, notwithstanding Elman's genius, to withhold from him a place beside such great artists as Heifetz. This is chiefly because he infuses his own passionate feelings into his work rather than detaching his playing completely from the material world as Heifetz does.

Elman unquestionably is as someone has described him, "a smouldering volcano." It is a matter of opinion whether or not his passion stains his art, but there is no question as to the tremendous range of human appeal which he possesses.

Mud Hole or Dirt Tracks?

A BILL providing that actors, musicians, stage hands and spectators shall be exempt from arrest pending hearing as to the morality of a raided play has passed both houses of the New York legislature and is now before Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt. It provides that author and producer shall take the law's first blows in such a case.

If a crooked house were built, the architect and the contractor should certainly assume first responsibility. After all, the carpenters have to make a living, and if straight houses aren't being built, the laborers cannot be much blamed for accepting work on the others. The question of individual morality is always open for discussion, of course, but most carpenters—and actors—would be quite willing to expend their efforts on good material as on warped.

Just why the spectators should be exempt from arrest while the playwright and producer are held is a more dubious point. Playgoers are under no obligation to attend risqué performances. It may be argued on the one hand that if the public didn't patronize objectionable plays, such pieces would not be produced. On the other hand, if they were not produced, the pupils might not clamor for them.

Censorship has never yet proved very effective in eradicating questionable productions in any field of so-called art, but if suppression is to be employed, legal procedure should be directed at the source of the objectionable element. It is doubtful that incrimination of persons who are paid to serve as mere vehicles for getting the work before the public will be of any advantage. Past instances of such wholesale prosecutions have not seemed particularly effective. Earl Carroll is still finding plenty of material for his "Sketch Book."

Eliminating the "Tennis Bums"

THE elimination of "tennis bums," parasites of amateur tennis, is occupying the attention of the United States Lawn Tennis association these days.

Now that Tilden has turned professional and Johnny Doeg and Wilmer Allison have indicated that they will not be available for international play, the United States has practically no chance for the Davis cup this year.

Realizing this, the tennis association has decided that now is the time for a housecleaning. For years, amateur tennis has been cluttered with athletes who spend their time traveling about the country playing tennis on "expense account" money without forfeiting their amateur standing. To combat this, the association has passed a resolution designed to discourage players from accepting the fabulous bids made for their "expense accounts" by promoters.

If a successful cleanup can be effected, the outlook will brighten for the whole amateur sport in the United States. While several veteran contenders will be eliminated from the ranks, the renewed interest in the game which should follow the housecleaning will more than offset the loss. The "tennis bum" type of player is likely to reach a certain level of accomplishment and to improve no further. In the meantime, the low status of the game discourages participation of other players who may be of championship material.

Such a galaxy of young stars as are illuminating the tennis horizon nowadays should make it somewhat easier for fans to bide their time until the Davis cup will once more return to the United States.

Thus, with the cleanup staged by the association another few years should see a renaissance in amateur tennis in the United States.

Tomorrow's University

(An editorial series dealing with present trends and future possibilities of the University of Iowa. The vision of its administrative leaders, potentialities in its program, and transitions already under way will be included among examples and suggestions of how the university's functions might be carried out to better advantage.)

The Higher Standard

CRITICISM, both favorable and unfavorable, has been leveled at university authorities as a result of the decision some time ago to make graduation requirements in liberal arts a matter of a two point rather than a one point five average, this ruling to go into effect next fall.

In other words, beginning next fall a student will have to do a C quality work in all courses or earn enough A's and B's to raise his average to that level.

Every diploma issued by the University of Iowa will thereby have a partial guarantee that the student has proved himself capable of doing average work in the classroom.

The move of the Iowa faculty is not an innovation. Other schools have instituted similar practices. Many of the eastern schools go so far as to require stiff entrance examinations or outstanding high school records as requirements for admission.

Wisconsin, beginning in 1932, will not permit a student who does not maintain a prescribed standard to remain in school after his sophomore year. The standard required there is slightly higher than Iowa's two point requirement.

Whether or not a large university, a state university in particular, should exact standards higher than many students can attain, thereby limiting enrollment, has been questioned.

Certain dissenting groups contend that institutions supported by public money should be open to all who desire entrance. Even the inferior student, they contend, will get something from the years spent at college.

To say that a student cannot continue at an institution may be denying him certain rights and privileges. But to set up a group of standards that must be attained before the stamp of a B.A. or M.D. or J.D. can be placed upon him is not denying him any of his inalienable rights. It is simply guaranteeing to education boards, employers, and the public in general that a stamp of approval will not be placed upon an inferior product.

No student who fails to attain the two point standard set up by the University of Iowa can say that he has been made a victim of the whims of educators. If his failure is due to negligence on his part then he alone is to blame. If it is due to abilities that do not lie along mental lines he should not be in college in the first place.

To Those Who are Writing and Directing Theses and Dissertations in the Graduate College

Recent discussion in the faculty has emphasized the desirability of requiring the doctoral dissertation to be in the form of printer's copy, if it is not already printed at the time the degree is granted. This imposes upon certain limitations of abridgment in the interest of the time of the gentle reader, the author's pocketbook, and the standards set up by good channels for publication. The printer's copy should contain only what the chairman of the committee approves as suitable and ready for publication. The writer should select a standard journal or monograph series and take the content of that as a model for style, technical language, length, and lucidity—for a deliberate and adequate statement of fact.

Since there is much valuable material collected by the writer of a dissertation, it has been suggested that this be assembled in an appendix which, in itself, may be much longer than the dissertation. The dissertation as presented to the committee will then consist of two parts, printer's copy and appendix, and the required library copies will be bound in this form; but when the dissertation is printed, a mere footnote will state that certain data which may be named are on file in the University of Iowa library.

Now I would like to suggest to candidates for the master's degree that the same principles be applied to the writing of a master's thesis, which is, after all, a practice in preparation for the writing of a larger document. My suggestion is therefore this: divide your thesis into two parts: first, the thesis proper, which shall be in the form of printer's copy; and, second, the appendix, which contains all the supporting material.

It is not assumed that every master's thesis contains something that is worth printing. Yet publication, however small, should be the goal in mind; and we speak of printer's copy for an article we should bear in mind that, other things being equal, the shorter it is the better, provided it conveys all the essential facts. It may be two pages or ten, more or less. There are several advantages to be gained by this style of a master's thesis:

(1) It stimulates the effort to find out what really is the heart of the thing that has been found.

(2) It cultivates critical judgment as to values in content, length, style, and channels for publication.

(3) It is an aid to the committee in judging to what extent this type of critical power has been developed by the small part which has been prepared with special care as fit to print.

(4) That type of preparation will, in many cases, lead to publication and therefore becomes an encouragement to the writer, but whether it does or not, it still furnishes the best type of practice in preparation for future writing.

(5) It is better training than the ordinary jumble that often passes for a thesis because it requires the exercise of a higher type of thought processes, and literary and scientific taste.

(6) Publication of a brief note of this kind may serve the purpose of establishing priority.

The above is merely a suggestion to those who may be interested in trying out this feature. Criticisms of the proposed plan will be welcomed. I shall be glad to consult with any writers of master's theses who decide to adopt this form. A follow-up study will be made of these theses in which this plan is followed.

Regimental Reviews Prepare R.O.T.C. for Federal Examination

Regimental reviews will be held Thursday, April 30 and Monday, May 4 with first assemblies sounded at 4:10 p.m., in order that the R. O. T. C. units prepare for the federal inspection which is to take place May 9, according to posted order by Lieut. Col. Converse H. Lewis, of the military department.

On the days set aside for the reviews, all regularly scheduled classes in military training will not meet, but all members of the infantry and engineer units, as well as the university band, will be expected to be present in full uniform.

No one will be excused from the reviews, except students having classes during the hour scheduled for the activities and members of varsity athletic teams who are now authorized to be absent from military.

A number of church and political dignitaries are expected to attend.

Supervisors Accept Bids

Mason City, Iowa City Companies to Do Road Work

Grading work on the Iowa City-Williamsburg-Victor road will be begun not later than May 1 by the American Construction company of Iowa City. Culvert pipe for the drainage and grading project will be furnished by the Iowa Culvert and Pipe company of Mason City. The Johnson county board of supervisors made these decisions in a consideration of bids for the work, yesterday.

The grading company bid on 185,923 cubic yards of excavation at $1.83 per cubic yard, 500 cubic yards of channel excavation at $4.65, and asked $2,156.82 for 108,341 station yards of overhaul. Its bids for installation of culvert pipe were 1,890 lineal feet of 15 inch at $25 per foot, 230 feet of 18 inch at $40, and 90 feet of 24 inch at $50. They agreed to complete the work by November, 1931.

The bids of the Iowa Culvert and Pipe company were: For cross roads; 132 feet of 18 inch culvert pipe at $1.62 per foot, $213.84; 946 feet of 24 inch pipe at $2.17, $2,052.40; 596 feet of 30 inch pipe at $3.65, $2,175.40; 208 feet of 36 inch pipe at $4.30, $894.40; 70 feet of 42 inch pipe at $5.10, $357; 40 feet of 48 inch pipe at $5.95, $238. For farm entrances; 1,890 feet of 15 inch at $51, $963.90; 230 feet of 18 inch at $72, $165.60; 60 feet of 24 inch at $97, $58.20.

The section of road which will be worked is that extending from the poor farm, four miles west of Iowa City, to the Iowa county line and a half mile north from there. Selected readings from the book were also included in the March and April numbers of the "Palimpsest," published by the State Historical society. The readings formed the basis of assembly and club programs in high schools and women's clubs of the state.

The week was established with the purpose of devoting a period each year to Iowa history, in order to stimulate a greater interest in the history of the commonwealth.

Mary Roland Sails in May to See Grave

Gold Star Mothers to Visit Burial Places of Soldiers

Mrs. Mary R. Roland, 1034 E. College street, is one of the 49 Iowa gold star mothers who will go to Europe in May at the expense of the government, to visit the graves of the soldiers killed in the World war.

Sails on May 6 Mrs. Roland will leave for New York May 2, and with 30 other mothers will sail May 6 on the "George Washington." They will return to the United States May 28.

Mrs. Roland will visit her son Homer's grave at Suresness. He died of exposure Dec. 24, 1918 at Base Hospital Number 4.

Edited Iowan Homer Roland sailed for France in the March of 1918, after graduating from the University of Iowa. He was a journalism major, and the first editor of The Daily Iowan after it had been taken over by the university. He was affiliated with the Alpha Tau Omega social fraternity, and Sigma Delta Chi, honorary journalistic fraternity. He was elected to A. F. I.

In France, Mr. Roland worked on the staff of "The Stars and Stripes" official A. E. F. paper.

SCHOOL NEWS

Horace Mann

Dimple Stallons, a new member of kindergarten A, was transferred here from Clarinda.

Kindergarten children have been enjoying two books by A. A. Milne, "When we were very young" and "Now we are six."

A miniature band has been organized. The children are learning to play the following Song-O-Phone hand instruments: cornet, trumpet, bugle, saxophone, bass horn, drums, bells, and triangle.

Last week the children colored the following bird pictures in their bird booklets: blue jay, robin, cardinal, red-headed woodpecker, black bird, and scarlet tanager. They listened to bird records played on the victrola and recognized the different notes.

Pupils who have been absent in 1B class have returned except Gloria Schone.

Visitors in the 1A-2B room last week were: Mrs. Fred Messner, Mary Carr, and Mrs. L. Schnoebelen.

Mrs. Rose Kehrer and Mrs. Thomas Christensen visited the 2A room Tuesday.

Pupils in third grade have finished making their bird posters. They are now reading and writing stories about the birds in this region.

Mrs. Oscar C. Johnson and Mrs. Fred Messner visited the third grade recently.

Those in 3A receiving a perfect score in the self-testing drill, No. 14, are Mary Blanski, Raymond Reiland, Arthur Stevens. Those who received a score of 9 are: Marion Farnsworth, Clyde Lenoch, Bobby White, Marie Schmidt, Albert Schmidt, and James Stallons. Pupils receiving a grade of 9 in the self-testing drill, No. 8 are: Vi-

Lincoln

Pupils of Lincoln school are planning to give a program on the evening of May 1.

Every member of the school banked this week, giving them their usual 100 per cent record.

Longfellow

The 2A class at Longfellow school had 100 per cent in banking again this week. This week makes four weeks in succession.

The 3B class is making an extensive study of Indians in preparation for a program that they intend to give. They have organized the Good Citizenship honor roll. Only those who are "good Indians" will get their name on the roll. Practicing honesty and kindness are the two requirements which a pupil must meet in order to be a "good Indian." A big chief and five warriors have been chosen to help in the selection of "good Indians." The big chief is Jane Spencer and five warriors are: Marilyn Glassman, Marion McEwen, Virjean Petersen, Virginia Gartzke, and Shirley Jean Miller. The entire school is planning activity programs which will be held Wednesday, April 29 at 8 p. m. at the high school auditorium and Thursday and Friday afternoons at the school building. The program Wednesday evening will be given by the pupils of the 4, 5, and 6 grades and will consist of songs which they have learned through the year and other musical numbers. The following schedule has been made for the other two afternoons:

Thursday, April 30—Kdg. A—1:35-1:55. LB—2:00-2:30. IA-2A—2:35-3:05. 2A—3:10-3:40.

Friday, May 1—IA—1:35-1:55. 2B—2:00-2:30.

3B—2:35-3:05. 3A—3:10-3:40.

Shimek

Pupils in Shimek kindergarten constructed a terrarium for their polywar and turtle. They nailed the boards together into a box, which they painted black. In the box they planted grass, and placed in it a pan of water.

A new addition to the aquarium is a small snail. They also planted clover in the aquarium. The pupils are experimenting in the planting of nasturtium seeds.

Yankees Bury Athletics; Walter Johnson's Gang Wallops Boston Red Sox

Herb Pennock Brings Mates to Big Victory

Senators Take Revenge for Monday Defeat in Walkaway

NEW YORK, April 21 (AP)—The combined wildness of three Philadelphia pitchers enabled the Yankees to pile up 10 runs in the first two innings today and then coast to a 12 to 1 victory over the Athletics. Herb Pennock pitched a fine game for New York, allowing only seven hits. Three of them were bunched for the only Athletic run in the ninth.

Mahaffey started for the A's and after giving two runs in the first inning and two more hits in the second he gave way to Carter. The second youngster gave four walks and a single before retiring in favor of Ed Rempel, who finished the game. Rempel passed two men at the start, making six walks and eight runs for the inning, but steeled down and homered by Lary and Cook brought the remaining Yankee tallies.

Senators Slap Back Hard

WASHINGTON, April 21 (AP)—Walter Johnson's Senators made it two out of three in the series with the Boston Red Sox by romping away with the final game today by a 12 to 3 count.

Batting hard behind the seven-hit pitching of Fred Marberry, who was making his first start of the year, the Senators staged a form reversal to avenge yesterday's drubbing.

Engineer Dies

DES MOINES, (AP)—Funeral service for Anthony Ruttan, 82, retired engineer for the Rock Island railroad, who died here at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Margaret Core, will be held at 10 a. m. Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Ruttan, 1014 S. 10th St. He was a former resident of Oskaloosa, Albia and Knoxville.

Sportively Speaking

By Bill Rutledge

Stocked up with the largest supply of team spirit and plain fight and aggressiveness the Washington Senators are maintaining a fast clip in the American league and in the opinion of many astute observers they will continue to all season.

Walter Johnson, for several decades "The Big Train" that smoked up the league, has injected a pep serum into his clan. For a spell last season the Griffins hung menacingly over the Athletics.

This year they have won six of their eight games. It may be appropriately argued that the season is still in its fancy and that showings to date account for little. Yet, as baseball philosophers are prone to remark, "A game won today is as good as a game next September."

This would be timely advice to pass on to the Brooklyn Robins, whose floundering about has been the most prominent feature of the league showings. The pitching hasn't come up to expectations, the hitting has been indifferent—between such a combination of circumstances the Flatbrush Flock hasn't been able to do so well. They did manage to wring a one-run win from the Phils yesterday.

And still Nebraska has never played Iowa here. The Cornhuskers were scheduled for two games, yesterday and the day before. The eagerness of both outfits to play baseball was thwarted by April showers and cold.

It's a shame that the Penn and Drake relays are ineffectual. Both will be run off Saturday. The track stars of the east will rally at Philadelphia, while those of the west and far west will congregate at Des Moines. As a whole the marks set by performers west of the Alleghenies have been far superior than those manufactured by athletes on the seaboard.

THEIR GANGS LOOK GOOD

JOE MCCARTHY, N. Y. Yankees.

WALTER JOHNSON, Washington Senators.

These two pilots of American League teams promise to give Connie Mack a merry chase this season for the pennant flag. Johnson's tribe gave the Macs considerable unrest last year. This is McCarthy's first year with the Yankees, but his record so far this season shows that he is on to the signals.

Cleveland Indians Skin Tigers

CLEVELAND, April 21 (AP)—The Cleveland Indians won a 5 to 4 decision over the Detroit Tigers today, after Jonathan Stone, Tiger outfielder, had tied the score in the first half of the ninth inning by hitting a home run over the fence with two on bases. It gave the Indians a 2 to 1 margin in the series.

Vic Sorrell walked Hunnefeld in the ninth and was charged with the defeat. Stone's home run was his third in three games.

Phillies Down Robins, 7 to 3

PHILADELPHIA, April 21 (AP)—Jumbo Jim Elliott gave the Phillies some first class pitching today and they backed it with effective slugging to beat the Brooklyn Robins, 7 to 3, in the series final. Elliott allowed only nine hits and kept them well scattered.

Babe Herman gave Brooklyn a one run lead with a homer in the third inning but muffed Klein's fly in the same inning and allowed a Philly run to score.

Score by innings: R. H. E. Brooklyn 001 100 001—3 9 2
Philadelphia 004 000 210—7 12 1

Batteries—Helmach, Moss, Gallivan and Lombardi; J. Elliott and Davis.

Braves Drop Giants, 5 to 1

BOSTON, April 21 (AP)—Behind the fine five hit pitching of Southpaw Ed Brandt, the Braves defeated the New York Giants today 5 to 1 and gained an even break in the four game series.

Lindstrom drove in the only Giant run in the first inning when Richmond lost sight of the ball in a cloud of smoke from the nearby railroad and it fell safe for a triple.

Chilly Winds Delay Drake Relay Trials

Tracksters Don Heavy Shirts in Brief Workouts

Blasts of cold wind from the northwest kept the Iowa cindermen in heavy sweat suits yesterday and the scheduled time tryouts for the Drake relays were postponed until this afternoon. The sprinters and distance runners confined themselves to a few laps around the oval but the weight men were out in force to get the experience of throwing on a sooty field.

Six Relay Contenders

Six athletes probably will carry the hopes of the Old Gold in the 440, 880 and mile relays. Gordon Lagerquist and Everett Ferguson are likely to run in all three while Ralph Adamson and Paul Conway will assist in the sprints and Calv' Hoskinson and John Beckner will complete the mile team.

The fastest half mile quartet in the history of the university composed of Lagerquist, Ferguson, Adamson and Conway will run at Drake. They lowered by a half second the old Iowa record of 1:27.5 at Lawrence Saturday but bowed to Kansas whose time in another heat was 1:26.5.

6 Wins in 8 Years

The Hawkeye mile baton passing team has won the Drake carnival six times out of the last eight years and may be a strong contender this week end with a team capable of nearly 2:50.

In addition to athletes in most of the individual events, the University of Iowa will have a fast shuttle hurdles team chosen from Ed Gordon, Everett Handorf, LaLue Thurston, Hugh Bryant and Merritt McDaniel, and a threatening two mile quartet with Stuart Skowbo and Fremont Isaacs as the best men.

Paving Company Deal

WATERLOO, (AP)—The major interest in the Bryant Paving company has been acquired by Phillip L. Bryant, president of the company, who has bought the interests owned by his three brothers, James E. Bryant of Hollywood, Cal., Leroy W. Bryant of Waterloo and Frank R. Bryant of New York city.

Advanced Natators Compete in Class Meet; Plan 5 Events

Members of the two advanced swimming classes will compete in a meet tomorrow at 7:30 p. m. in the field house pool. Each man may enter as many events as he likes, but all must enter at least two.

Entries thus far are: 40 yards free style—Deur, Scott, Black, Koopman, Nowlin, Lunch, Stoker, Kimberly.

100 yard breast stroke—Kellough, Bartness, Boe, Taylor, Black, Banwell, Scott, Koopman, Hughes, Gunwell, Cayis.

100 yard back stroke—Kellough, Bartness, Boe, Hughes, Gunwell, Stoker, Peterson.

100 yard free style—P. Anderson, Mosler, Deur, Nowlin, Lunch, Kimberly, Cayis.

440 yard free style—Mosler, Taylor, Banwell, Peterson.

Intramuralites

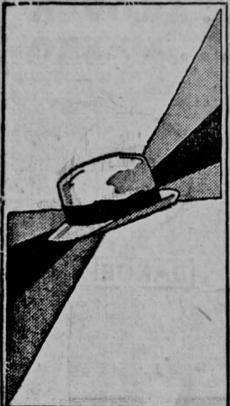

Beating the Delta Chi and the Phi Kappa Psi clubs, the Phi Chis won the finals in the intramural volleyball tournament last night. The first game against the Delta Chi was won by a top heavy score of 15 to 5. The Delta Chis came back strong in the second game, but lost by the score of 15 to 11.

The Phi Chis took the first game against the Phi Kappa Psi in a handy fashion with a 15 to 3 score. The second game was bitterly fought but the Phi Chis were victors with a 15 to 12 score.

to Barrowsburgh, Col. Engleden was an enthusiastic archaeologist, with a special love of the old romantic town of the North of England, and Barrowsburgh was one of the most notable and interesting of those towns; Seton himself knew it well, having once spent a holiday there to see the famous Norman castle and the ruins of the adjacent Wraishy Abbey. Was it possible that in wandering about one or the other he had met with an accident and was at that moment lying helpless—or dead? Something of that sort, perhaps, and many hours must elapse before he, Seton, could get down there. Still, he gathered from the wire that the police were at work, and so—

He hurried into the big station presently, and, finding that he had ample time before the departure of the express, turned into the telegraph office and sent a message to Barrowsburgh:

"To Superintendent of Police, Barrowsburgh, Yorkshire, Leaving at once please wire me to train Grantham if any further news and later to Station Hotel York. Shall come straight on from York.

"From Seton Engleden Kings Cross Station."

Nothing for it, then, but to get a first-class ticket, and to know that at best more than two hours must elapse before he could hear anything further. The train slid out noiselessly and went smoothly away on its two hundred-mile run. Dinner came along; he ate and drank mechanically—it flashed across his mind that if he had not been there, speeding north at fifty miles an hour, he would have been dining with the girl to whom he had been so eager to tell his news of the afternoon's success—and he had forgotten her! That must be put right—he wrote out a hurried message to be sent from the first stop, Peterborough. And dinner came to an end, and he felt little inclined for smoking and sat gloomy and uneasy until the train ran into Grantham.

It was at the door of his car before the wheels stilled to stillness; a moment later he was stretching out his hand for the telegram that came along with the crying of his name; in another second he had taken it its news.

"Nothing discovered yet, exhaustive search continuing. The train went on again; another hour's run, and then at Doncaster Engleden bought the last edition of the Yorkshire Evening Post, and his uncle's name, beneath a heading almost the first thing he saw was in big type:

"Mysterious Disappearance at Barrowsburgh"

"The police authorities at Barrowsburgh are much concerned about the disappearance from his hotel there last night of Col. Engleden, an elderly gentleman who arrived in the town two days ago for the purpose of visiting his famous antiquities. Col. Engleden dined at the Castle Hotel yesterday evening at half past seven, and after spending an hour or so in his smoking room, went out at half past nine, remarking to the porter that he was going to take advantage of the fact that there was a full moon that night and that he wanted to see the Castle by it; he also enquired if there was a night porter. The porter replied in the negative, but said that he himself should be on duty till 12 o'clock. Col. Engleden said that he should be in before that and was seen to go across the Market Square in the direction of the Castle. He had not returned at midnight, and Mr. Christmas, landlord of the Castle Hotel, sat up for him until half past two. As he was still absent at that hour, Mr. Christmas informed the police, who at once instituted a search. This has gone on continuously in all parts of the town and its immediate neighborhood, ever since, but up to six o'clock this afternoon no trace of the missing man has been met with.

"According to the current issue of Who's Who, Col. Engleden, who is 61 years of age, and unmarried, was formerly in command of the First Battalion of the King's Own Northern Borderers, and served with great distinction in the South African war 1898-1900. Retiring from the army a few years later, he became governor of Southmoor Convict Prison, from which post he retired a few months ago. According to the same book of reference, his chief recreation is in archaeology, and he has published two or more important pamphlets on certain questions relating to medieval military architecture in England. He resides at 851, Lennox Gardens, London, S. W., and his club is the United Services."

Engleden sat gloomily speculating while the train rushed on—to be suddenly aroused by a remark from one of two men sitting near, who had been reading his newspaper. "Queer business, the disappearance of that old chap at Barrowsburgh!" said this man.

"Such a small place—you'd think nobody could disappear there!" "Um!" replied the other, "there may be a reason. He'd been governor of Southmoor."

"Well and what of that?" demanded the first man.

"Plenty, I should think," answered the second. "I daresay there are lots of men who've been under an ex-governor—I mean when he was governor—who'd be ready enough to get a bit of their own back, if they met him outside. They used to send some pretty black specimens to Southmoor!" "Depends on what sort of man the governor was," said the first man. "Besides, I doubt if there are any ex-convicts about Barrowsburgh. No—I should say the poor man's fallen into some one or other of the places in the old Castle—beastly dangerous place that, in my opinion. I was at Barrowsburgh last year with my family, and I wrote a letter to the authorities there when I got home, saying that they ought to fence in the various places into which strangers could easily fall. There are two or three openings there, in the ruins, which

York! Engleden seized his suitcase, elbowed his way out of the train, and ran for the hotel. Within two minutes of leaving his seat in the dining-car, he was questioning the reception clerk as to a telegram. The porter came up.

"No telegram for you, sir, but the superintendent of police at Barrowsburgh rang up at 10 o'clock, that's to say, a few minutes ago, asking for Mr. Engleden, and if you hadn't arrived would you ring up as soon as you got here? Here's the box, sir."

Engleden rang up Barrowsburgh and the police superintendent. No—there was no news yet of Col. Engleden. Search was being made all over the district, but so far not one single scrap of information concerning the missing man had come to hand. Mr. Engleden might rely on it that they, the police, were doing everything in their power—so, too, were a number of voluntary helpers. And, as there was no train from York to Barrowsburgh that night, would Mr. Engleden come on by the first in the morning?

Engleden replied to that question in a few sharp words. No—he was coming there then and then. He rang off at the last word and turned to the porter.

"Get me, at once, a first-class car, with a dependable driver," he said. "Have it round here as quick as possible. Say it's to take me to Barrowsburgh."

Twenty minutes elapsed, however, before the car came round—it was half past ten ere Engleden could start out on the last stage of his hurried journey. But once away from the city and on the high road to the north, the 50 miles began to grow less and less, and just before midnight the car slowed down to a steady climb into the lower reaches of the great promontory on which Barrowsburgh stands, and Engleden saw, high above him, the frowning keep of the Norman castle. Midnight—but in the little police station all the windows were still ablaze.

Engleden hurried into the half-open door of the police station. Within were several men, policemen in uniform, men in civilian dress. One, a big, military-looking man, detached himself from a group to which he was evidently giving some order, and came quickly towards the newcomer.

"Mr. Engleden?" he asked. "Sorry you've had to come all that way on such an errand, sir. I thought it best, though—"

"Is there any news?" interrupted Engleden impatiently. "Have you heard anything?"

"Nothing, sir! Nothing whatever since I telephoned to York. And nothing before that. We haven't a scrap of information. To put this thing in a nutshell, we haven't the remotest idea of what happened to Col. Engleden, nor any notion of where he went or what he did, from the moment he walked out of his hotel up to this minute. We know nothing and we've learnt nothing. But, if you'll come to my room—"

"I must get rid of my driver and his car," said Engleden. He went outside again, paid off his man, and, when the car had gone, stood for a moment looking around him in the moonlight at the old town and wondering where amidst its queer nooks and corners Col. Engleden, dead or alive, might be.

"Some of the policemen came out as he stood there and went away in the direction of another some of the civilians came out, too, and did the same thing; as they disappeared, he turned inside again, to find the big man standing at an open door and motioning him to enter.

"You are the superintendent of police, I suppose?" said Engleden, obeying the gesture. "I'm much obliged to you for writing me."

"Superintendent Mallison—at your service, sir," replied the other. "As I said before, I thought it best to let you know at once, Mr. Engleden. We found a letter from you to Colonel Engleden in his bedroom at the hotel—that's how I got your address."

"I want to know all about it—and what's been done," said Engleden, as he sat down. "Tell me all you can. I can see you're leaving no stone unturned."

Mallison sat down at his desk and shook his head.

"We've kept up a persistent search, Mr. Engleden, since 230 yesterday morning," he answered, glancing at a clock. "Nearly 24 hours now! And we've got no news and no information whatever. As to what there is to tell, it's not much. This is Wednesday. Colonel Engleden came to the town on Sunday evening, by train from Harlington. He put up at the Castle hotel—the best in town."

"I know the Castle hotel," remarked Engleden. "I spent a week here, at that hotel, a few years ago."

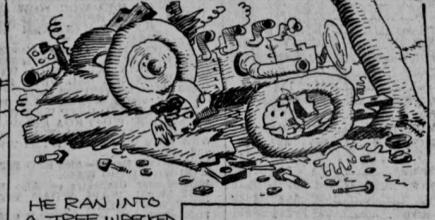

"Then, sir, you'll know Mr. Christmas, the landlord," said Mallison. "Most of the information we have

THE OLD HOME TOWN

London, Mr. Alderman, he continued. "He made a very hurried journey to get here."

The man bowed to Engleden with a mixture of something between condescension and faint interest and took the chair Mallison drew forward. He glanced at Mallison, sharply.

"Have you any further news?" he inquired, in a voice as precise as his expression.

"None? Ah—I purposely waited up in order to come round and inquire." He turned to Engleden, looking him over more closely. "Permit me to offer my sympathy, sir," he said. "I am much grieved that this should have occurred in our town. And I fear that I, myself, am very much to blame!—I fear so! I am greatly concerned by that fear."

"May I ask what you mean, exactly?" inquired Engleden.

"I mean this, sir," replied Salder. "I gave Colonel Engleden advice he evidently took. That advice was to view Barrowsburgh Castle by moonlight. It was well meant, but—"

"I don't think you need worry yourself about that," interrupted Engleden. "In ordinary circumstances, Colonel Engleden was quite qualified to look after his own safety by night or day! But I should like to know how you came across Colonel Engleden and if he said anything that has any bearing on his disappearance?"

"Colonel Engleden called at my establishment on Monday afternoon," said Salder. "I am the leading jeweler in this town, and I have a watch-and-clock repairing branch of my business. Colonel Engleden had experienced a slight mishap with regard to his watch—he wanted it made good. I told him the thing was only an affair of a quarter-of-an-hour or so, and he waited while I handed over the watch to one of my workmen. I gave him a seat in my parlor, and we proceeded to talk of the antiquities of the town: I am president of our local Archaeological society. I discovered that my visitor—whose name, of course, I did not know—was enthusiastic about antiquities, and we spent a very pleasant half-hour chatting about our local monuments of the past; the Castle, St. Firbold's Tower; Wraishy Abbey, and the like. And, in parting, I gave him the advice which I now deeply regret to see the Castle by moonlight."

"It was very natural advice, sir," remarked Engleden. "But—do you think he came to harm at the Castle?"

Mallison broke in there, before Salder could reply.

"I'm positive he's nowhere in or about the Castle!" he affirmed. "We've been over every square foot of it."

"I do not know what you say," said Salder, disregarding this bold statement. "No doubt Mr. Superintendent, as he says, has made a most scrupulously careful search of the Castle and its environments. But he does not know the Castle as well as I, as a local antiquary who have had a long experience of it, know it. There are underground passages and places at the Castle which, to the ordinary sightseer, are impossible of access, but might be discovered, accidentally, as it were, by persons who, like Colonel Engleden, have a knowledge of medieval military architecture. I fear he may have strayed into some such passage or place and possibly fallen into, say, one of the old wells—of which there would be many in a stronghold of such immense area."

"That means a still more exhaustive search," said Engleden. "You could point these places out, sir?"

"Unfortunately, no!" replied Sal-

der. "I do not think anyone could point them out. They are known to be there—from ancient manuscripts and charts—but the mode of access to them is not known. My theory is that Colonel Engleden may, accidentally, have come across such a means of access and have rashly ventured on an exploration. From what I saw of him, I should say he was a best man—devoid of fear."

"He was certainly that," said Engleden. He looked from one man to the other. "Is there anything I can do?" he asked. "I'm horribly anxious."

Mallison got up from his desk.

"The best thing you can do, Mr. Engleden," he said, "is to get some rest at once, in preparation for a stiff day's work. The Castle hotel, as you know, is close by. But if you'll accept it, I've a spare room here in which you'll be not only quiet but comfortable, and ready if any news comes in during the night. Which shall it be, sir?"

Engleden accepted the offer, stipulating that if any information arrived he should be called at once. Then he went to bed, and in spite of his anxiety, fell instantly asleep. So soundly did he sleep that it seemed to him that his eyes opened again. But as they opened he saw that it was on broad daylight and a shining sun. Morning—and somebody was knocking loudly, at his door.
