Nearby Areas Asked to Place Entries on Exhibition

One of the feature displays at the community garden show June 4 will be dish gardens planned by members of the Friendship circle of the 4th club of Johnson county. Members of the group will also exhibit flowers, fruit, and vegetables from their home gardens.

This will be the tenth annual show to be directed by the garden section of the Iowa City Woman's club and will be from 1 to 9 p.m. in the American Legion building.

Invitations have been extended to members of the garden clubs of Riverside, North Liberty, Solon, West Branch, Kalona, Shueville, and Shuman to enter exhibits in the affair. Other persons in towns and rural areas within a radius of 25 miles are also welcome to place their entries without charge.

Exhibitors are reminded that in order to secure outstanding specimens, a little fertilizer and water should be added to their plants as soon as they show color in the bud. Cultivating and hoeing about the plants is also advisable later. Better single blooms may be obtained by disbudding the plants, especially peonies.

Mrs. W. L. Bywater and Mrs. F. C. Young are co-chairman in charge of plans for the show.

Mrs. Harold L. Hands scored 95 with handicap yesterday afternoon to win the 18 hole contest of the women golfers at the Iowa City Country club. Mrs. C. E. Bloom went through the nine hole contest with low score.

The low score on the "dog leg" hole was a tie between Mrs. J. L. Records and Mrs. George F. Kay. In the monthly team tourney the Queens led for the day scoring 12 to 4 over the Aces.

Mrs. Paul M. Moore, Mrs. J. Hubert Scott, Mrs. J. L. Records, and Mrs. George F. Kay tied in the approaching and putting contest.

Gandhi Upsets Meeting Plans

May Postpone London Conference Set for June 29

SIMLA, India, May 22 (AP)—Arrangements for the federal structures committee meeting in London on June 29 preceding the Indian round table conference were upset today by Mahatma Gandhi, the nationalist leader, who said he could not attend on that date.

Gandhi notified Viceroy Lord Willingdon that he had not receded from his original intention to remain in India until the Hindu-Muslim communal problem is solved and all of the government's obligations under the Delhi pact are fulfilled.

Elaborating on his stand by long distance telephone from Nainital tonight the Mahatma said it would be futile for him to go to London while these two major matters were pending, adding, however, that he would give Lord Willingdon his definite decision on June 3 concerning the question of his going to London.

He said he had no intention of returning to Simla to reopen the subject of conference dates because he had engagements at Borsada, whether he is returning tomorrow.

It generally is believed here that the other Indian delegates to the round table conference will not go to London without Gandhi, in which case Premier MacDonald is thought likely to postpone the structures committee meeting to allow more time for settlement of the communal problem and fulfillment of the Delhi treaty.

KNOW YOUR UNIVERSITY

Order of Artus, National Honorary Economics Society, Headed by Sidney L. Miller

Comparable to Phi Beta Kappa in type and functioning, Order of Artus, national honorary economics society, exists on the Iowa campus today as a quiet but effective stimulus to scholarship in the department of economics.

The Iowa chapter serves as a nucleus for nationwide programs for Sidney L. Miller, professor of commerce and director of the bureau of business research, is national president of the organization, Grand master of the round table is the title he has held for more than a year.

The dual purpose of the founders of the order was that of recognizing scholarship of students majoring in economics and of providing a working group of students and faculty members for the discussion of economic and social problems.

In a brief statement of the history and purpose of the Order issued last winter the tendency in modern college life to emphasize incidental and extra-curricular activities, with its consequent lesser emphasis upon intellectual accomplishment, was decried. Positive action has resulted in an organization with such high standards of eligibility that at the last initiation of the local chapter the lowest grade average made by any initiate was 3.3.

Order of Artus, also known as Omicron Delta Gamma, was founded at the University of Wisconsin in 1915 as a result of a merger between the economics society of the university and the undergraduate society of economists at Harvard university. The Iowa chapter was instituted in 1917. During the last few bi-monthly luncheons and discussions for the purpose of building up a closer relationship among those interested in economics problems.

Walter F. Crowder, instructor in commerce is president of the Iowa chapter. Ralph D. Kennedy, G of Iowa City, is secretary. There are at present 30 members in the chapter, 11 of whom are undergraduates, 5 graduate students, and 14 faculty members.

An arm grasping a sword and rising out of the sea, with the word Artus written above, is on the front of the key, emblem of the order.

New Spanish Cabinet Acts

Group Orders Absolute Religious Freedom in Spain

MADRID, May 22 (AP)—The republican cabinet tonight decreed absolute freedom for all religious creeds throughout Spain.

The Associated Press was informed that the cabinet's step does not mean separation of the church and state in the new Spanish republic. In several quarters, however, the cabinet's action was regarded as the first important step in that direction.

Actual separation awaits termination of a concordat between Madrid and Vatican City, which must be decided in the national assembly.

The provisional government, however, has signified that henceforth it will not profess any official religion in the republic.

The action of the cabinet tonight came 12 days after an epidemic of anti-church rioting in the capital, which was followed by sporadic outbreaks in various cities of the new republic. Many religious edifices were burned during the anti-religious manifestations, and numerous clergymen have left the country.

Meanwhile conferences have been carried on between the papal nuncio in Spain and Alcalá Zamora, provisional president, presumably over regarding the disturbances. No announcement of these conversations or their outcome has been made, and the only official pronouncement from the Vatican has been that authorities there maintain "an optimistic attitude."

State High School Meet Opens June 1

1000 Pupils to Compete for Many Individual Championships

Nearly 1,000 students will compete for individual championships in the 14 academic events of the state high school contest at the university June 1 and 2. The state contest was preceded May 5 by an every-pupil contest involving 62,000 competitors.

From class A schools will come at least 140 scholars, those placing from first to tenth in each of the subjects in the every-pupil contest. All individuals who tie for tenth place will also be eligible.

Best Representation
Schools in class B will have the heaviest representation, with a minimum of 378, since the total number of pupils enrolled in institutions of this group is much greater than in any other section.

The first three winners in each subject from each of the five districts will qualify, as will each sharer of a third place. Class C and D schools combined will furnish at least 378 other contestants.

All state records for competition of this kind have been broken by the 62,000 entrants from 395 schools. The number represents more than half of the total number of high school pupils in Iowa.

Three Purposes

The three fundamental purposes of the event, as outlined by Prof. E. F. Lindquist, director of the contest, are to provide school with well standardized examinations for measurement of pupils' achievement, to encourage better scholarship and instruction, and to promote increased effort in the improvement of the content of instruction.

The Iowa Art Guild Exhibit

By H. D. JONES
(Editor's note: This review of the Iowa art guild exhibit, now at Iowa Union, is by a student in the department of graphic and plastic arts, who is acquainted with the artist mentioned.)

Mr. Jones also reviewed the Tellander exhibit at Iowa Union last year for The Daily Iowan.

Walk into the Iowa Union lounge and turn to the left. You will see the whole exhibit of the Iowa Art guild huddled in one corner. "The Brass Brocade," "Forest Sanctuary," "Christian Rohrbacher," "Cloudy Day in Vermont," and "Vermont Hills" all hang in one corner while from the rest of the room only a few shine out—"Sidney Dickinson," "Green Glass," and the sculpture, "Awakening."

Would you like to know how some of these paintings were done? At the risk of my "on good terms" and an occasional "won't you come out to dinner, Jones?", "I'll tell you a bit here and there. I trust you will pardon a personal view on some works.

Local Painting
"The Brass Brocade" by Catherine Macartney, recently hung at the National Academy in New York, was painted in the odd looking, windowless building just west of The Daily Iowan. It seems that light emerges from these studios—light of the beautiful. Miss Macartney painted the study "between breaths" while managing the details of the art department during January. The huge brocade was picked up in Italy by Harry Stinson, last summer.

And so was the green glass that is so well painted by Alma Held. It fascinates one to see through the glass. Soap bubble days, highlights dancing with running streaks of red and green are brought to mind by the play of light on the glass. The tiny pewter pan although dwarfed by the large green glass seems to take on a personified air and the two are good pals.

There is none of this poetic quality in the "Older Jug" painted by Alice Davis. It intimates an attempt to do something big with a small conception. Big canvases do not mean big pictures. "Winter Landscape" by Miss Davis was painted at Coralville, a favorite spot with her.

"Forest Sanctuary"
Helen Stearn's still life—why?
"Forest Sanctuary" by Arthur Asa Dillon was painted along the Des Moines river. Dillon carries out these canvases this size, rain or shine, and paints on one till the light changes, then paints on another—several weeks on several canvases.

Edith Bell painted "Vermont Hills" in one day. It was her last day of a vacation painting trip. A 30 mile drive—a hurried sketch in the morning—a few strokes in the afternoon (although the shadow had swung to the other side of the tree) and behold, a charming landscape. Simple, eh? Try it next vacation time on your last day with your trunks yet to pack.

"The Workman." Is he standing or sitting? Are the hands magnets holding up a dinner pail? One fellow phoned Ruth Wilkinson and asked if the fellow was a farmer. He lost a dollar bet. Miss Wilkinson, temperamental and sincere painter, worked long on this portrait and being unsatisfied with the head, dashed it out. Later she fiddled around on it and left it as is. More work will probably be done on it.

Painted in Iowa City
Sidney Dickinson, famous American painter, while in Iowa City painting some portraits last fall, spent his leisure time beating and being beaten at ping pong with Aden Arnold, instructor in the art department. One day Dickinson consented to sit for Aden. Canvas was soon in place at the studio annex—a quick flinging of paint—an hour and a half passes, and here you are—a smart, dashing portrait—a wonderful likeness. When a fellow can swing a paint brush like that, why does he spend time swinging golf clubs or ping pong paddles?

Lynn Stacey found a sleepy little town of 40 people and a few dilapidated old houses at Pentonsport, Ia. He can paint better than "Old Fulton House" indicates. Perhaps the sleepy little town was contagious.

Dreams Come True
The charm and grace of the nude is superbly modeled by Harry Stinson in his statue "Awakening." The flow of line and form are charming. A whole winter to complete this piece—long afternoons—long nights—then packed and sent to New York for exhibition—only to be opened and found broken. Fortunately the breaks were clean and we are now able to see the magic of his dream. I was once asked by a student, "Why does that guy always sit around and read poetry?" This statue is the answer.

Miss Macy paints with a cool eye to nature. Her paintings here are rather old to those who follow the exhibitions. But she has painted many things, going as far afield as Mexico and Hawaii.

Mr. Cumming is represented by his portrait of Mr. Pinkbine. All the artists in this exhibition were at one time Mr. Cumming's pupils. He organized the guild to exhibit collectively. He should be proud of their progress for sincerity and beauty are their greatest assets.

Heavy Frosts Boost Kansas Wheat Prices

CHICAGO, May 22 (AP)—Heavy frosts over Kansas gave wheat prices a lift today, especially in the final dealings. Wheat was also assisted upward by a late announcement that the first export sales of United States 1931 new crop had been made today for July shipment, and that New Orleans had cleared some domestic wheat. Corn established a new low-price record for the season, but rallied on account of Iowa reports that corn in some sections had been hit by frost.

Wheat closed irregular, 1 cent off to 1 up, corn at 1 cent decline to 1/2 advance, oats unchanged to 1/2 cent higher, and provisions to 1/2 cent down.

Wheat traders took particular notice of an official report from Dodge City, Kansas, telling of a low temperature of 31, and mentioning that in 1907 the wheat crop of that region had been killed with the temperature at 30. Part of Nebraska as well as of Kansas indicated anxiety about frost damage in wheat. Ice was reported to have formed at many points, with weeds and tree leaves showing a change of color.

Assertions that at least a week would be required to determine definitely whether frost had done serious harm to wheat served to induce enlarged selling at times, and to bring about reactions from price bulges.

Persistent selling, much of it on stop-loss orders, sent corn downward most of the time until near the close. After new low-price records had been made, however, the trade gave sharp attention to reports that cold weather was preventing germination, and that in Iowa considerable corn which was up had turned black. Oats were relatively firm as a result of commission house buying.

Provisions went to around the lowest figures of the season. Hog values were off, and liquidating sales of lard were heavy.

Closing indemnities: wheat—July 59 1/2@, 51; September 59 1/4@, 60 1/4@; 61; December 62 1/2, 64. Corn—July 56, 57 1/2@; September 54, 55 1/2@; December 48 1/2, 49 1/2.

Bonds Show an Irregular Upward Trend

NEW YORK, May 22 (AP)—Bonds were irregularly higher today and the strength had the appearance of broadening because of the gains in the rails following the conference on an increase in freight rates.

The averages composed of the closing prices of ten bonds each of the rail, public utility and industrial groups were all higher than on Thursday. Trading was somewhat less active, however.

The upturn in rail obligations was unmistakable. Pennsylvania Consolidated 48, Union Pacific first 48 and Refunding 48, Atchafalaya General 48, Baltimore and Ohio 48 of 1941, Burlington General 48 and Cleveland Union Terminal 41s reached new high prices for 1931. Most other rail loans closed higher. Nevertheless, it was apparent that the demand was strongest for the high grade issues.

Receding prices for rail bonds recently have been caused in part by the explanation that some of them would be removed from the lists of investments of various states which are considered legal for savings bank and trust funds. Because of the decided earnings of the carriers the plans of the eastern railroad presidents to seek higher freight rate served to stimulate rail bonds today.

Foreign obligations closed irregularly higher after some of them had reached further new low levels. City of Cordoba 7s, Caddis 7 1/2s, Argentine 5s of 1945, City of Buenos Aires 6 1/2s, Province of Buenos Aires 5s and 6 1/2s, and New South Wales 5s of 1957 and of 1958 were so affected. However, Argentine, Berlin City Electric, Republic of Chile, Chile Mortgage bank, and some Brazilian and Bolivian obligations usually made good gains.

Losses of the United States government fluctuated and showed mixed changes at the close. Interest in the public utilities and industrial groups was limited but the high grade bonds reflected the demand for gift ed issues.

Iowa Taxing Bodies Must Reduce Levies

DES MOINES, May 22 (AP)—Taxing bodies must reduce their 1931-1932 levies five per cent in cases where the millage is optional or where the board has the right to decide whether the levy shall be made, the attorney general's offices held today. Budget Director Oscar Anderson asked the attorney general for an opinion on the provision that the new Elliott act shall not affect mandatory levies or payments.

The law passed by the recent legislature requires a reduction from the 1931 figure of 1/2 per cent in total taxes collected in the two years excepting on mandatory levies and fixed payments.

Federal Weather Bureau Finds Big Rainfall Deficiency

DES MOINES, May 22 (AP)—The federal weather bureau today took stock of the 1931 precipitation and found it lacking. The total deficiency of rainfall from normal between Jan. 1 and May 21 was 5.12 inches, the bureau found.

Thus far during May, besides the average daily temperature being more than 4 degrees below normal, the average for the first 21 days of the month of 2.86 inches.

April showed a deficiency of 1.36 inches from the normal rainfall for that month, March 0.26 of an inch; February 1.03 inches, and January half an inch.

Mush in Lieu of Meat

"CAPITALISM," one Ivy Lee is quoted as saying in the Current Golden Book, "recognizes the worthlessness of riches as a means of social or individual happiness and the vast superiority of the joys of the spirit."

Presumably Ivy Lee, whoever that may be, was sober when making that assertion. Yet the available evidence would indict him or her for abstinence from the un-intoxicating cold facts.

If capitalism has the philosophy attributed to it in that statement, capitalism is certainly not being practiced in the United States.

Europe's despised system of nobility and India's vilified caste system are coming to have an equivalent in this country. But the inherited something which makes one person superior to another in the social scale is not so often blue blood, almost never a title. It is expressed in bank accounts, industrial eminence, and magnitude of possessions.

The most successful is, by common assent, the wealthiest. Capitalists supposedly recognizing "the worthlessness of riches" amass as great a quantity of those riches as their fellows will let them. And if there is any recognition that wealth is not necessarily conducive to happiness, it is not a part of capitalism.

Happiness is not, of course, taken to lie in the money or capital itself. Rather is it assumed to consist in the power thus conferred, in the ability to keep up with the Joneses in clothing, automobiles, jewelry, amusements—the list is endless.

If, at the other end of the horn of plenty, the unemployed who have less to eat and wear and enjoy themselves with than the wealthy waste and throw away, can console themselves by reflecting that the system which allows for such discrepancies says there is no happiness in riches, maybe the statement has some value.

That a tramp can be as happy as a millionaire no one will deny. But that capitalism's philosophy says so is not so clear. Perhaps the declaration of Ivy Lee was intended to clarify matters on this point for the edification of those who lack sufficient bread and meat—but a diet of such mush is somewhat monotonous, as anyone who has been forced to go without teeth for any period can testify.

According to an apparently obsolete social idea in a document written 150 years ago by Thomas Jefferson, every individual has a birthright to "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." When a system which defines happiness in terms of possessions denies so many of its members a decent share of those possessions, substitution of encouragement to subsist on "joys of the spirit" is a trading for that birthright of a mess of pottage.

An Effective Weapon

IT TOOK a French jury just 16 minutes to acquit Mrs. Charlotte Nixon-Nirdlinger, former St. Louis beauty, of a charge of manslaughter in connection with the shooting of her husband.

What might be called the theme song of the whole proceeding was voiced by the chief defense attorney when he said that Mrs. Nixon-Nirdlinger "is too beautiful to be bad."

The defendant showed great histrionic ability while on the stand, with her pale countenance, nervous manner, and frequent recourse to tears. Her justification of her action as expressed in her last words to the jury: "I did not mean to kill my husband, so I leave the case in your hands, confident of justice."

Irrespective of the merits of the case, the casual observer cannot help but feel that it was very fortunate for the defendant that she was exceedingly fair of face. It is extremely difficult for gentlemen to be severe with lovely women in tears.

An Upper Mississippi Park

IN A FEW weeks an inspector from the national park service will tour the proposed Upper Mississippi river national park area, which extends from Bellevue, Ia., to Wabasha, Minn.

Two University of Iowa men are among those who will confer with the inspector for the purpose of giving him the merits of the area from various standpoints: the historical, Bruce E. Mahan, and the ornithological, Prof. Bohumil Shmek.

Residents of Iowa and bordering states will naturally be favorably inclined towards the proposed project. There is ample reason for such a feeling for this region abounds with enough natural beauty and wild forms of life to be well worth perpetuating in a national park.

The Synthetic Doctor Racket

(From the Cedar Rapids Gazette)

Among other things for which the thinking people of this country owe a vote of thanks to Will Rogers is his declination to receive an honorary degree of doctor of humanity and letters which Oklahoma City university considered conferring upon him.

"What are you trying to do," the cow-country humorist demanded, "make a joke out of college degrees? They are in bad enough repute as it is, without handing 'em around to comedians. The whole honorary degree thing is 'hokey.' I saw some college giving Mellon one and he is a billion bucks short. I got too much respect for people that work and earn 'em to see 'em handed around to every notorious character."

No one ever covered more thoroughly and expressively a sentiment that probably has been felt repeatedly by a large proportion of the populace, particularly the college graduates. Many of our colleges and universities, especially the smaller ones, have made themselves appear ridiculous by their wholesale conferring of honorary degrees. Every visiting celebrity who is in a position to bring an institution publicity or, even better, financial support, is hounded by ambitious college and university executives to parade around their campuses in cap and gown, pose for the photographers, and receive a more or less meaningless queue of letters for his name. Some of the ways of acquiring high sounding academic titles are to make or inherit a million dollars, turn out to be the president's wife, be a visiting member of some foreign royal family, write a biography retelling at $5 a copy, or perhaps capture the tree sitting record. The slightest provocation will do.

We do not contend that the recipients of honorary degrees are not outstanding in certain lines of endeavor, but it is obvious that their lines are not always academic or scholarly. We do not feel that an academic degree means anything in particular outside the educational field, but if it stands for anything at all it stands for scholarly achievement and should be conferred for that alone. Promiscuous distribution of degrees cheapens their value as incentives to scholarly effort. Colleges should guard their prestige zealously. The school of experience will contrive to issue its own degrees in money making and tree sitting.

Tomorrow's University

(An editorial series dealing with present trends and future possibilities of the University of Iowa. The vision of its administrative leaders, potentialities in its program, and transitions already under way will be included among examples and suggestions of how the university's functions might be carried out to better advantage.)

Tomorrow's Alumni

SOME thousand students now in the university will become alumni in another 10 days. By virtue of that fact they will assume a responsibility. Wherever they go, whatever they do, they will stand for the University of Iowa to those who know them as its alumni. The institution will be interpreted in many cases in terms of its graduates.

And not only will the interpretation be by what they do. Interested persons will want to know about the University of Iowa and what it's good for, anyhow. Partisans of other alma maters will expect to swap information and anecdotes.

One duty of the new alumnus will be to keep informed on their university, as a matter of pride, as a matter of interest, as a matter of continuing the relationship which has proved beneficial. And this extends to other matters than the victories and losses of the athletic teams and the doings of the particular professional college in which he acquired his training.

It has been said to the disparagement of Iowa undergraduates that they know the words of other school songs better than their own. Nothing like that, however, can be true of the alumnus if he is genuinely interested in the alma mater which was, translating the Latin, his "soul mother."

No small portion of the responsibility for keeping graduates informed rests with the university itself. One medium, which goes now to 18,500 alumni, and former students, is the monthly news bulletin, containing condensed news items and sketches of activity going forward on the campus.

Another opportunity which is largely neglected in the frenzy of the occasions comes at Homecoming and again at commencement, when alumni return for gridiron activities or graduation ceremonies. There is no concerted effort to make available for the alumnus who desires it information as to what this old school of his has been up to, anyhow, this last year.

National Iowa night is another occasion when brief accounts of achievements since the last Founders day and plans which may materialize before the next might well be recounted, for broadcasting over WSUI, in printed form, or both.

Such material as the prospective campus map given out to all seniors—it has been mailed to alumni—and the news bulletin demonstrate the university's intention, which could be carried still farther.

And each of the seniors who takes with his diploma an engineer's sketch of the future campus might well resolve to join the 18,000 alumni boosters, and to base his enthusiasm on knowledge as to the latest activities of the university he is proud to claim.

Among this week's nominations for extermination is the guy who insists on informing you three or four times that examination week is only a "rest period" for him.

A recent dispatch from Spain says that 50 students locked their professors in a classroom until the professors agreed to permit them to pass their courses without examinations. Almost everything but that has been tried in this country, including making the professors read the papers.

It must be a good deal of a jolt to change all of a sudden from a university graduate to a mere guy looking for a job.

EXAMINATION SCHEDULE

Second Semester, 1930-31

Thursday, May 21, 8:00 a.m. to Thursday, May 28, 4:00 p.m., 1931

The regular program of class work will be suspended, and the following semester-examination program substituted for it. Classes will meet for examination in the rooms in which they have been regularly meeting (except classes in French (2) and (4), and speech (2), as shown below). The Program committee directs the attention of both students and instructors and professors to the regulation that there is to be no deviation in the case of any examination, from this schedule—except as authorized by the committee, on the student's written petition filed in ample time, supported by the recommendation of the department concerned—to provide relief from an excessive number of examinations within a single day. Deviation for the purpose of getting through earlier will not be permitted.

Classes (except in freshman English, first and second year French, and speech), N.B. below), whose first meetings occur:

Monday at 8, meet for examination Wednesday, May 27, 10-12	Monday at 10, meet for examination Wednesday, May 27, 8-10
Monday at 11, meet for examination Monday, May 25, 10-12	Monday at 1, meet for examination Thursday, May 28, 8-10
Monday at 2, meet for examination Thursday, May 21, 8-10	Monday at 3, meet for examination Thursday, May 21, 10-12
Tuesday at 8, meet for examination Thursday, May 28, 10-12	Tuesday at 9, meet for examination Monday, May 25 8-10
Tuesday at 10, meet for examination Friday, May 23, 8-10	Tuesday at 11, meet for examination Saturday, May 23, 10-12
Tuesday at 1, meet for examination Tuesday, May 26, 8-10	Tuesday at 2, meet for examination Wednesday, May 27, 2-4
Tuesday at 3, meet for examination Friday, May 22, 10-12

The first meeting of the class means the first lecture or recitation period in courses having both lectures and recitations, and laboratory periods; or, in case of courses involving only laboratory periods, the first clock-hour of the first weekly meeting. For example chemistry (2)B meets for lectures TTh at 11. The first meeting is, consequently, Tuesday at 11; and the class will meet for examination Saturday, May 23, 10-12, according to the foregoing table. Again, physics 126 meets twice a week, TF, for a three-hour laboratory exercise, 1-4. The period for the examination is, therefore, Tuesday, May 26, 8-10.

N.B. All sections of freshman English will meet simultaneously in the rooms designated below, Saturday, May 23, 2-4 p.m.

(Consult your instructor if you have conflicts for this examination period, Tuesday, May 26, 2-4.)

"Odd" classes, whose first or only weekly meetings occur Wednesdays, Thursdays, Fridays, or Saturdays, or which meet "as arranged," will be assigned for examination at either one or another of the following three periods, as announced to each such class by the instructor in charge of the class:

Tuesday May 26 10-12
Tuesday May 26 2-4
Thursday May 28 2-4

It should be borne in mind that there is possibility of announcing two or more "odd" classes for any one or more of these three periods available for "odd" classes. Therefore, in connection with any such announcement it would doubtless be well for the instructor making the announcement to ascertain whether any member of his class is already under appointment for examination in some other class for the proposed period. To be sure, it is possible to have examinations in more than one class at any of these times—if no student is a member of more than one of these classes.

According to one clause in the formal faculty action providing for a special semester examination program, "The instructor may use the examination period as he sees fit, provided he holds the class for the full period. He may have an oral or a written examination, or both, or neither. He may continue regular work or he may use the time for review, or for any phase of his work which may seem to him desirable at this time."

PROGRAM COMMITTEE, H. C. DORCAS, secretary.

The "fez" is not a Mohammedan headpiece: About 100 years ago the Turkish Sultan Mahmud Khan, upon his return from Paris, ordered his subjects to discard the Mohammedan turban in favor of the tall Parisian silk hat, the brims of which he ordered removed in sympathy with the Mohammedan law which bars brims. This was born the "fez" which eventually was destined to become the most distinguishing mark of a Turk. In our days Mustafa Kemal again abolished the "fez" in favor of peaked caps, berets and hats. The abolition of the "fez" is being enforced with severity. This varying fortune of a piece of headgear is an amusing detail in the history of the country.

Penitentiary Sentence Given to Fort Dodge Man After Confession

FT. DODGE, May 22 (AP)—Kenneth Kaufman, 30, of Ft. Dodge, pleaded guilty to a charge of robbery with aggravation today in connection with the robbery and threatened torture of William and Louis Folke, Calhoun county farmers, Saturday night.

District Judge P. J. Klinker before whom the plea was entered, sentenced Kaufman to not more than 25 years in the Ft. Madison penitentiary.

Kaufman in a prior confession corroborated the story of Richard Wolff, 29, of Ft. Dodge, who previously confessed. They named Verne Alexander, Ft. Dodge, as the third member of the gang that threatened the two bachelor farmers with torture, in an attempt to rob them of a sum believed to be as high as $20,000. The trio escaped with $4.50.

Alexander is reported to be under arrest at Terre Haute, Ind. Ft. Dodge police officers are now en route there to return him to face charges here.

Former Muscatine Man to Appeal His Sentence in Prison

DETROIT, Mich., May 22 (AP)—Harry M. Hoxsey, formerly of Muscatine, Ia., director of the Detroit Cancer clinic, tonight was preparing to file an appeal from his conviction and sentence in recorders court on a charge of practicing medicine without a license.

Hoxsey was sentenced today to six months in the Detroit house of correction by Judge W. McKay Skillman. He was convicted before Judge Skillman May 8.

Hoxsey was twice convicted in Illinois for violations of that state's laws. He was at one time associated with the cancer institute of Norman Baker in Muscatine.

Selection of the site for the next convention was left to the executive board. Invitations have been received from Cedar Rapids and Mason City.

The convention named Mrs. Eugene Henely of Grinnell as first vice president; Mrs. H. C. Police Paint, Erect New Traffic Signs

Local police are painting and erecting new traffic signs throughout the business district directing motorists how to use the new inside left turn and telling the time limits on parking.

Black and white are being used on the new signs because it was thought they could be read more easily than the old ones in yellow and black. "Turn left inside with caution" signs are being placed at intersections, and parking signs pointing out the 30 minute limit on center parking and the 15 minute limit at the curb are being placed in conspicuous places.

Jury Awards Albert $1,420

Collision of November 1929 Causes Basis for Suit

E. N. Albert was awarded judgment for $1,420.10 against Maher

Brothers Transfer company, Thursday evening, by a jury which heard the evidence. The case grew out of a collision in November, 1929, between a car driven by Albert and a truck owned by the transfer company. Albert had asked for $7,220.10 on four counts based on injuries to his car and to his wife, his daughter-in-law, Mrs. J. W. Fursel, and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Anna Crimmons.

Albert said that the accident occurred about 12 miles north of Iowa City on highway U. S. 161 when the transfer truck, loaded with furniture and towing another car behind, swerved across the center line on the paving. The transfer company filed an answer Feb. 21 charging that the Albert car had crossed to the wrong side of the road.

Dutcher, Walker, & Ries were attorneys for Albert and Maher Bros. was represented by Frank F. Messer.

Rails Cause Slight Rally in Market

Chemicals and Copper Take Drop; Wheat Takes Rise

NEW YORK, May 22 (AP)—Most stocks were steady to firm today ignoring group weakness in the chemicals and coppers. Trading was dull, but the market closed fractionally higher on the average. Not since early in the month had it been able to maintain a rally for two successive days.

Rails put the list on upward track with a rally of a point or two in the morning. The carriers eventually lost part of their gains, yet their recovery, based on the move for a rise in freight rates, was followed by a relaxation of pressure against the pivot industries and utilities. Air pockets were more or less isolated, confined chiefly to the two groups mentioned and to Eastman Kodak, Peoples Gas, Allied Chemical, Warner Bros., Pictures preferred, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and Gulf States Steel preferred. Chemicals reduced extreme losses of one to nearly five points. Sales for the session totaled 1,600,000 shares, 800,000 less than Thursday's turnover.

Recovery of rails featured the bond market, which was not particularly lively, although the effects of cheap money were again apparent in the high-grade departments. Wheat advanced, but both corn and cotton sagged.

The pointed remarks made by President Farrell of U. S. Steel at the semi-annual producers' meeting concerning price cutting were followed by an early afternoon dip in the market. Whether he meant his company was prepared to do some price cutting itself was not disclosed, but Wall Street is rather of the opinion that such a step by the industry's largest interest would not exactly be welcomed by many of its competitors. A closer study of Mr. Farrell's speech suggested that his seemingly bearish references might have a constructive effect if the conditions he complained of were remedied.

Dividend actions of the day included the declaration of regulars by General Electric and Chrysler Corp., and the omission of the Gulf States Steel preferred payment. The last named stock broke seven points. Cane rallied more than four points in response to the regular disbursements on common and preferred shares voted after yesterday's close. American Telephone, National Biscuit, American Can, North American, Southern Railway, and Woolworth gained one to two net. U. S. Steel, closing at 106, was 10 higher. Sears Roebuck, whole sales off from April 24 to May 21 were off only nine-tenths of a percent, firm, Eastman Kodak had a sharp reaction, losing three points on the day.

Foreign exchanges were firm, especially Sterling Cables which advanced 3/32 to $4.86 1/32.

The Wrist Mark

by J. S. Fletcher

Synopsis of Preceding Installments

Colonel Engleden, formerly governor of Southmoor prison, is murdered. An investigation by a nephew, Sefton Engleden, and his law clerk, Johnson, reveals that during the colonel's time, at Southmoor two prisoners, Snelling and Hardie, escaped. The theory is that the colonel had found the men and that they killed him. Millwaters, a former prison warden retained to aid in the investigation, is also murdered. Captain Shoreham, of Southmoor, gives a description of the escaped convicts. Snelling had a birthmark on his right wrist. Young Engleden recalls that Sanderson, on whose estate the colonel's body was found, wears a broad bracelet on his right wrist. The question arises is Snelling Sanderson? Johnson thinks he is, and that Hewitt, his butler, is Hardie. When an attempt is made to verify this belief, it is found that both men have vanished. A townsman, Francis Silverstein, tells Johnson that Sanderson, with Sadler, the town jeweler, and Bratten, a merchant, is perpetrating a financial swindle, and suggests that the colonel was murdered because he threatened to expose the fraud. He is also convinced that a farmer named Beckett, who had known Sanderson very well, is one of the former prison wardens through whose treachery the two convicts escaped. Captain Shoreham identifies the man as Settle, the ex-warder. Johnson sets out for Settle's farm. There he is joined by Silverstein. They find Settle and Bratten at the farm-head. Sadler attacks Johnson and Silverstein. Mallison and his men come to the rescue, but Sadler escapes. The bodies of the dead men are searched. It is established that Settle was concerned in the death of Millwaters. The next development is a visit by Sanderson's wife to police headquarters.

Twenty-Eighth Installment

Mrs. Sanderson drove up to the Barrowsburg police station that morning just as Mallison, Engleden, and Shoreham were coming out. "Now Mr. Mallison," she said, without preface, "I've done precisely what you advised me to do—come here at once! I want a talk with you. But first—have you any news?" "There's news, ma'am," replied Mallison. "But none of Mr. Sanderson or of Hewitt." Mrs. Sanderson glanced inquisitively at Mallison's companions and gave Engleden a slight nod. "I know that gentleman," she said. "Mr. Engleden— I have seen him about the town. And— this gentleman, Superintendent?" "Captain Shoreham, Mrs. Sanderson," replied Mallison. "Deputy-Governor of Southmoor." Engleden was watching Mrs. Sanderson closely; at the mention of Shoreham's name, he saw a sudden keen, inquiring look come over her face. It passed quickly, and she turned to Mallison. "I suppose these gentlemen know all about this terrible business," she said. "So— where can we talk, Superintendent? I've a great deal to say." Mallison led them all to his private room; Mrs. Sanderson sank into the easy chair. "You say there's no news of my husband?" she asked again. "None," Mallison. "The last thing we know about Mr. Sanderson and Hewitt is that they were seen in the magistrates' court on the conclusion of the proceedings against the two soldiers, were never seen to leave the court, and have never been heard of since. That's the last we know." "Except," said Engleden, "that there has been a report that Mr. Sanderson and Mr. Sadler have left England for South America." "That's true," agreed Mallison. "But we know that news is false—as regards Sadler, at any rate. It may be about Mr. Sanderson." "Why not about Sadler?" asked Mrs. Sanderson. "Because of certain events last night, ma'am," said Mallison. He went on to tell the story of the doings at Starrick Priory. Mrs. Sanderson showed no surprise. "Then Sadler is still at large?" she asked. "Still at large. I don't see how he's to remain at liberty very long," replied Mallison. Mrs. Sanderson suddenly brought her hand down on the desk by which she was sitting. "Gentlemen!" she said. "Sadler is at the bottom of everything in this affair of everything." "You know him better than I do, Mrs. Sanderson," remarked Mallison, pointedly. "I only knew him as a model of rectitude." Mrs. Sanderson looked from one man to the other. "Rectitude!" she said. "Sadler is a thoroughly bad man— capable of any crime! And he has been my husband's ruin. He— he had a hold on him!" The three men exchanged glances. Shoreham spoke. "Mrs. Sanderson," he said, "we may as well tell you that we know that your husband is in reality, John Snelling, who escaped from Southmoor some years ago in company with a man named Hardie— Mrs. Sanderson waved her hand. "I know all that. Captain Shoreham!" she said. "We know my husband here, and what I want is to find him, or to find out where he can be found. Mr. Mallison," she went on. "I've come here to tell all I know— is there anything you want to ask of me?" Mallison turned over documents on his desk and consulted two or three before replying. "Well, I should say there's a good deal you can tell us, Mrs. Sanderson, if you will," he said. "What happened at your house, Wraishy Abbey, on the evening of Col. Engleden's murder?" "I can, and I will, Mr. Mallison!" she answered. "I've had to keep in all my knowledge of that, and I wish I'd spoken before. But I was afraid of implicating my husband. Well, what I know is this—that evening Sadler called to see my husband; he had not been there very long before Bratten, the linen-draper, came, too. Then Bratten went away. I heard Mr. Sanderson order the chauffeur to get out one of the cars. Soon afterwards Mr. Sanderson and Sadler went out on the terrace and walked up and down, talking. Oates brought round the car—it was then, I think, about half past nine—and Mr. Sanderson got into it. Sadler stood at the door for a few minutes, talking—urgently, it seemed to me. Then he went away towards the river, and the car went off, towards Harlington. In less than an hour Oates came back with it. I was on the terrace as he went past, and I asked him where his master was? He replied that Mr. Sanderson had gone down towards the ruins of the Abbey with a gentleman they'd fetched from Harlington. I returned to the house. Just before eleven o'clock my husband came in with Bratten. They—

"A moment, Mrs. Sanderson," interrupted Mallison. "You say just before eleven o'clock. He again consulted the papers lying before him. "Can you be more exact? How much before eleven o'clock?" "Mrs. Sanderson reflected. "Well," she said. "I remember the clock chiming the three-quarters after they came in. So it would be about twenty minutes to eleven when they came in."

Mallison turned to Engleden, tapping a paper that lay before him. "This is the man Archer's statement," he said. "He says that he saw the two men— of whose presence, you remember, he told us the morning of the discovery of Col. Engleden's body— on the river bank at eleven o'clock. Now, if Mr. Sanderson was in his own house at eleven— or? He didn't go out again, Mrs. Sanderson?" "No, Mr. Mallison— he never went out again that night. He and Bratten came in at what I am sure was well before a quarter to eleven, and remained in the study until nearly half-past. And then Sadler came back with another man."

"Did you know the other man, Mr. Sanderson?" "Well, I did. He was known in Wraishdale as Beckett, a farmer. But his real name was Settle, and he had once been a warden at Southmoor. Why he came into these parts was—

"Just let that wait a moment, Mrs. Sanderson—we'll go into that presently. Now, what happened after the last two came in?—Sadler and Settle, or Beckett?" "I can't say. I went upstairs. After some time, I heard the car brought round to the front; somebody, Settle, I suppose, was driven away. A little later, I heard Sadler and Bratten going away."

"Did you ask Mr. Sanderson any question as regards all this?" "Not particularly— he disliked business mentioned at home. Of course, I knew that Sadler and Bratten were directors of the society of which Mr. Sanderson was chairman."

"What do you know of that society, Mrs. Sanderson?" "Practically no more than I suppose you do, Mr. Mallison! Except this— Sadler was the mainspring. My husband has been under Sadler's thumb all his life— first in the south of England, then in London, then here."

"Mrs. Sanderson," asked Shoreham, "had Sadler anything to do with the escape of your husband from Southmoor?" "He engineered the whole thing—and very cleverly. Sadler had been mixed up with my husband in the affairs which got him— my husband— into Southmoor. He was responsible for getting him there—and he got him out, eventually fixed him up here, where, of course, nobody knew him, and made use of him again in this society."

"And Settle, Mrs. Sanderson?" asked Mallison. "Settle began coming to Wraishy Abbey a few years ago, first," replied Mrs. Sanderson. "I believe now that he's back here with my husband. Then Mr. Sanderson got him up on a farm in Wraishdale— Starrick Priory. He was known as Beckett."

got away successfully, as you know."

"As we know," assented Shoreham, "and now, it's quite immaterial, I think, as to how you got away. What I've been wanting to get at, Superintendent, is— who killed Millwaters at Harlington? I don't think there's much doubt about it, now, from what we know, Settle?"

"Not a doubt!" agreed Mallison. "Millwaters had recognized Settle and accosted him. But— who killed Col. Engleden?"

"Superintendent Mallison!" broke in Mrs. Sanderson. "What is being done about my husband and Hewitt? Now that I've heard all you can tell, I'm certain they never left this town! Where are they— what is being done to find them?"

Mallison made a gesture of despair.

"My dear lady, I personally, have done everything that mortal man can do!" he exclaimed. "It's my belief, ma'am, that only one man knows where they are, and that man is Sadler! When we get him—"

But the days went by, and no news of Sadler came to hand. He, like Sanderson and Hewitt, seemed to have vanished from the face of the earth. Mallison, prompted there by Johnson from his bed in the hospital, made an exhaustive search of the communications between Town Hall and castle and of the various ramifications of the latter, without result. And nearly a fortnight had passed since the affair at Starrick, when, one morning, an old man hobbled into the police station and asked for the superintendent.

GOOD ADVICE

And then there's the story of the supervisor who put his associates at ease in a story conference. "It's going to be very informal," he said, "we'll just think out loud."

Whereupon a cynical voice from the rear remarked: "Don't be a sucker."

LATEST GOSSIP

It is costing Radio Pictures plenty to keep Richard Dix. He is said to get $50,000 a picture plus percentage. And after one more, there'll be a new deal all around. No doubt, Richard will boost his ante... incidentally, Director Paul Sloane is bowing out of R.K.O. . . . Harry Rap's son, Maurice, is M.G.M.'s newest writer . . . Polo is turning out to be a rough game. Johnny Farrow limps around on a cane and is otherwise bungled up. His horse sat on him Saturday . . . Talk about address books. The casting director at M.G.M. knows the phone numbers of 3,000 pretty girls . . . One of the larger studios has found it advisable to lift its ban on smoking on the sound stages. The actors were too hard to find when it came time to shoot a scene . . . The role of a modern Paris was braved this week by Clive Brook. He selected the prettiest girl from several photographs to go into the year book of Whitman college in Walla Walla, Washington.

FAST THINKING

Joe E. Brown is a great adlibber. His stage role as the conceited baseball pitcher in "Elmer the Great" calls for him to eat large quantities of food. One night a large hunk of grape fruit slipped off his fork and slopped down his vest. Instantly, Joe turned to another character. "Gee, Boss," he exclaimed, "that's the first error I've made this season."

The line went so well that the incident has gone into the show.

PLANS CHANGED

After all, Barbara Stanwyck will not star in "Safe in Hell" for Warners. Studio officials have decided to limit the picture to featured roles. No feminine lead has been selected, but Richard Bennett has been engaged for an important part. Roy Del Ruth is looking the rest of his people. The story, as you may have heard, is by Huston Branch. It's as daring as the law allows.

DID YOU KNOW

That Irene Dunne's father used to build Ohio River paddlewheel steamboats? That Phillips Holmes doubled for Bessie Love at the age of 10? He did riding scenes in a picture.
