Men Behind the News

Ambassador Sackett Likes Briar, Golf, Bowling

(The Hoover war debt plan negotiations have put Frederick M. Sackett, American ambassador in Berlin, in the center of the spotlight. The following sketch of him is one of a series giving little known facts about personalities in the news.)

By LOUIS LOCKNER

(Copyright, 1931, by Associated Press)

BERLIN, July 2 (AP)—Frederick M. Sackett likes briar pipes, big cigars, the feel of a driver against a golf ball, boating and bowling.

He has been able to indulge his taste for briars lately but has had little time for golf and bowling. Mr. Hoover's war debt plan has kept him too busy.

No Easy Job

Mr. Sackett found no easy assignment waiting for him when he became American ambassador to Germany early in 1930.

His predecessor, Jacob Gould Schurman, through the collection of $250,000 for buildings for Heidelberg university had so endeared himself to the German people that his successor necessarily faced somewhat of a task in winning a similar position.

Popularity Plus

Sooner than anyone expected Mr. Sackett became one of Berlin's most popular ambassadors. He went contrary to tradition right off the bat.

Diplomats shook their heads when they learned that even before he had presented his credentials to President Paul von Hindenburg, Mr. Sackett received the press. German correspondents were flabbergasted. No German diplomat before Sackett had done this.

Newspapers Like Him

The innovation insured for the new ambassador the esteem of newspapermen from the beginning.

Another asset of importance was Mrs. Sackett, who is one of the most charming women in the diplomatic set, and whose taste of dress is the envy of aspiring debutantes.

Welcome Mat Always Out

She soon made the embassy private apartments one of the outstanding Berlin homes which Germans feel honored to visit and which is always open to visiting Americans.

The Sacketts have added to their popularity in the American colony by unfatigably patronizing the concerts and exhibits of American musicians and artists.

Arrest Three Suspects With Stolen Bonds

ST. LOUIS, July 2 (AP)—Police arrested three men today who had in their possession $22,000 worth of securities, some of which were stolen last Nov. 10 in the robbery of the Sheridan Trust company and Savings bank of Chicago, and others in an Iowa bank robbery. The name of the Iowa bank was not announced.

The men were arrested when they came here from Decatur, Ill., to sell the securities to a man whose name was withheld. Chicago police were on their way here tonight to return the prisoners.

The men under arrest are Monte Moore, 53, who has spent 30 years of his life in prisons; Joseph Yates, 35, and William Wallace, 63, all of Decatur.

Police said they learned of the deal for the securities several days ago and conferred with the prospective purchaser at the request of police. He asked the men to come to come to his home today, and when they arrived detectives were waiting for them.

Rain Does Heavy Damage

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, July 2 (AP)—Heavy winds have worked extensive damage in Honduras. Bridges were washed out, roads flooded and crops and livestock destroyed. A train with 70 passengers was marooned between San Pedro Plimienta, and the passengers taken out in boats.

THE WEATHER

IOWA—Fair Friday and Saturday with moderate temperature.

Relief Comes Early Enough to Save Corn

Heat Wave Hits East After Claiming 1,100 Lives

(By the Associated Press)

Widespread rains and clouded skies Thursday brought Iowa definite relief from the long heat wave, halting the growing heat death toll and affording temporary respite to fast drying crops.

Rains and thunderstorms which started spasmodically Wednesday morning had spread over most of the state. Temperatures showed a general drop of around 20 degrees, maximums being largely in the 80's as compared with the numerous 100 degree marks of the previous 10 days.

Lowering clouds that gathered yesterday afternoon poured out drizzling rain over Iowa City beginning about 10:30 last night, continuing after midnight.

The highest temperature yesterday was 85 degrees. Thermometers read 73 degrees at 7 a. m. yesterday, and 79 degrees at 7 p. m.

Corn Crop Benefits

The corn crop was expected to benefit greatly from the moisture, which came at a time when the leaves were beginning to shrivel. Weather bureau officials, however, said the corn had not yet been permanently damaged and barring another protracted hot dry spell, it should mature normally. Some other grains had ripened too fast in the hot sun and were beyond repair.

Eleven More Deaths

Eleven deaths, most of them occurring Wednesday night, were reported Thursday. Three at Dubuque brought the toll in that city for the week to 25. Three others died at Cedar Rapids, two at Waterloo, one at Clinton, one at Fairfield and another at Ottumwa, bringing the grand total since the start of the heat wave to 134.

Weather Bureau Forecasts Fair

(By the Associated Press)

The heat wave that scorched the middlewest for more than a week moved eastward Thursday into the Appalachian region.

Western Pennsylvania, western New York and parts of Ohio, west Virginia and Kentucky felt the scourge of a pitiless sun as the central states grew comfortable again under clouded skies and occasional showers. It was still hot in most of the southwest.

Thunderstorm conditions moving down the Atlantic seaboard gave some relief and threatened to break up the heat wave before it reached the coast.

Thermometers in the middlewest that had held monotonously to 90 and 100 degree readings for a week fell down to 70 and 80 Thursday and in the sun-baked populace considered it cool.

There were enough heat deaths, however, to bring the total to more than 1,100.

The general forecast issued by the United States weather bureau said mostly fair weather with moderate temperatures was indicated for Thursday night and Friday in the north-central states, preceded by local showers over portions of the Great Lakes and Ohio valley regions.

No Privacy for Families

There was no privacy for the flyers or their wives. New York's enthusiasm over their feat was too great for that.

On the city tug, Mocom, which took them from the foot of 44th street to the battery for the start of their triumphant ride to city hall and then back to their hotel, they were photographed again and again.

"Wring His Neck," Shout Conservatives as Laborite Leaves Hall Head Foremost

LONDON, July 2 (AP)—A rough and tumble fight, unprecedented for more than a quarter of a century, took place today in the staid old house of commons, mother of parliaments, when left wing laborites resisted the suspension of one of their members.

Later, after order was restored, the government escaped defeat by only five votes on an amendment to the Snowden land tax bill which would have exempted garden cities and garden suburbs from the tax. Several laborites voted against the government.

Tear Clothes, Hair

When the melee was at its height, with fists flying and members kicking, wrestling and tearing clothes and hair, the speaker was forced to adjourn the session because of the general disorder. This was the first time this action had been taken since the great battles of Irish nationalist days.

Throughout most of the fight, which was between half a dozen left wing laborites and attendants, the conservative members sat aghast and thunderstruck. Finally their

Hot or Not, Earth Will Move Farthest Away From Old Sol

Regardless of the temperature at 4 p. m. Sunday, the earth at that hour will be farthest from the sun, it is asserted by Prof. Charles C. Wylie, astronomer of the University of Iowa.

The point in the earth's orbit where it is farthest from the sun comes in summer in the northern hemisphere, Professor Wylie explains, but it is closest to the sun in winter.

This phenomenon is responsible for the tempering of seasons, making United States summer cooler and winters milder, but it exerts the reverse effect in the southern hemisphere, the university scientist reports.

Iowa Education Head Urges High Level of Teaching

LOS ANGELES, July 2 (AP)—A governor, an editor and two federal educational authorities told the National Education association today what is wrong with the little red school house and some of the ways to correct it.

George H. Dern, governor of Utah, said education "must play an important part in the development of agricultural marketing and fathoming a more equitable way in the division of school moneys."

Keep Schools in County

Consolidated schools, said Clarence Poe, editor of a Raleigh, N. C., magazine reaching rural residents, must be kept in the country and not on city limits.

"In this school of tomorrow," Poe said, "farmers will find help not only in the production of better crops and better livestock but will constantly meet there under leadership developed from their own ranks and with the help of teachers to effectuate rural cooperation."

Farming as an Occupation

Whatever schemes are proposed to promote "back to the land" movements, C. H. Lane, chief of the agricultural extension service, federal board for vocational education, Washington, D. C., said the outstanding fact is that when "farms offer financial and living inducements comparable to other lines of work people will look to farming as an occupation and livelihood."

Walker Presents Medals

He presented each with medals significant of the esteem in which the city held them.

Traffic was at a standstill on Fifth avenue as the string of cars passed, between curbs filled with shouting thousands and windows from which other thousands peered.

Back at the Ritz, they were ushered in through a side door for the luncheon given by Mayor Walker. Among those to pay them tribute there were Colonel Lindbergh, Bernt Balchen, William Brock, Clarence Chamberlin and James Fitzmaurice, all of whom had aided in the writing of aviation's history by transatlantic flights.

Praises Hoover

"I am perfectly certain," he said, "that to whatever political party you may belong, you will excuse me if I say that the recent action of your president to alleviate and soothe the ounds and unhappiness of Europe is an action of great wisdom, of great courage and of deep insight."

Desire to See Fight Causes Broken Leg

Desire to see the wrestling match last night at Coralville between Croly and Parcut resulted in a broken leg for Paul Pelzer, son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Pelzer, 636 S. Dodge street, when he fell from his observation post in a tree.

He was rushed to the Mercy hospital where it was found that he suffered a simple fracture between the knee and hip of his left leg.

MacDonald Pays Honor to United States, Hoover

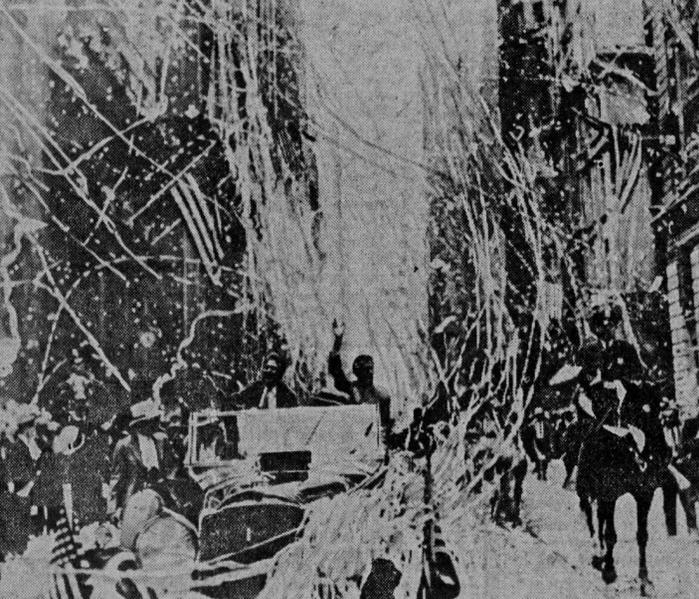

LONDON, July 2 (AP)—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, speaking tonight at the Independence day dinner of the American society in London, called the United States "the greatest nation which now exists on the face of the earth."

Referring to the Boston tea party, he said: "Pride in History"

"That historical incident means that you are able to lift up your head with pride. It means that you are able to lift up your heads to the world, that you have been able to build up by patient labor, by courage and self-respect the greatest nation that now exists on the face of this earth."

GLOBE GIRDLING FLYERS FETED BY BROADWAY

This Associated Press telephoto shows Wiley Post and Harold Gatty riding through showers of ticker tape as New York welcomed them after their record-breaking round-the-world flight. It was one of the most spectacular receptions ever accorded aviation heroes.

Whistles Toot, Ticker Tape Showers as World Circlers Return to Heart of Broadway

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—Wiley Post and Harold Gatty covered today perhaps the most nerve-wracking stretch of their record-smashing trip around the world—the six miles between the battery and Forty-sixth street.

With such fierce-sounding places as Blagoveshchensk, Khabarovsk and Novosibirsk behind, they faced the showers of ticker tape and confetti, screaming sirens and boat whistles, hurrahs of thousands and the stares of lines of humanity along Broadway and Fifth avenue.

Ship Still in Shape

Only the "Winnie Mae" herself, had a chance to take the day quietly. She stood in her Roosevelt field hangar, into which she had been rolled when the world-rounding flight ended last night after eight days, 15 hours and 51 minutes. She could have started out and done it all over again, mechanics said.

The day began for Harold Gatty, navigator of the flight, when his wife, after a plane-train trip from Glendale, Cal., crept into his room at his hotel and awakened him with kiss shortly after nine o'clock this morning. Mr. and Mrs. Gatty and Mr. and Mrs. Post, together with Florence C. Hall, millionaire oil man who backed the flight, breakfasted, then the procession of welcome began.

Four Rescued After Clinging to Bottom of Boat 17 Hours

MOBILE, Ala., July 2 (AP)—Two youths and two girls who clung to the bottom of an overturned sail boat in Mobile Bay for 17 hours, were rescued today after one of them, a young professional swimmer, swam five miles and summoned help. A squall struck their craft and it turned over.

The swimmer reached a channel beacon but was so exhausted he fell asleep on it. The crew of a passing tug found him and rescued the others.

Tugs, Ferries Open Whistles

At the battery New York gave its loudest greeting. Scores of tugs, boats and ferries joined in adding to the roar as fireboats threw streams of water into the air and crowds ashore waved.

Gatty and Post were hatless, the former in a light tan suit and Post in navy blue.

At city hall, Mayor Walker extended the hand of official greeting, saying they had "written another page into the history of science, a page which would make for greater progress, greater happiness and greater thrill to civilization itself."

Launch Boat on Trial Run for Approval

DUBUQUE, July 2 (AP)—The Herbert Hoover, world's largest Diesel-engine towboat, slid into the waters of the Mississippi river today after low water had delayed its launching for two months.

The 215-foot craft will be placed on trial runs for a month, after which it will be christened upon its acceptance by the federal barge lines and placed in operation between St. Louis and Memphis.

A crowd of several thousand watched the big craft slide down the greased runways into the water.

The boat is the "last word" in river craft. Its displacement is 1,300 tons, and its Diesel engines generate 2,200 horsepower as compared with the 500 or 600 horsepower of most towboats. It is capable of towing a 12,000 ton load against the current at five miles an hour.

No Trouble Abroad, Says Gatty; Flyers Speak Two Tongues

NEW YORK, July 2 (AP)—Mayor James J. Walker, who pinned medals on the 'round the world flyers at city hall, and Harold Gatty, who got one of them, bore off the day's honors for wisecracks at today's reception.

The mayor told the voyagers: "When your ship left Roosevelt field it was the 'Winnie Mae.' I have an idea that over Russia and the far north you decided it was the 'Winnie Must.' Last night, back at Roosevelt field it became the 'Winnie Did.'"

Gatty, asked if he and Post had any trouble with foreign languages abroad, replied: "No. You see, I speak Australian and Wiley speaks Oklahoman."

French Vote

Bill to Build New Cruiser

Parry New Program of More Ships by Germany

PARIS, July 2 (AP)—New life was given tonight to the French government's proposal to build a battleship immediately as a reply to Germany's new "vest-pocket" cruiser Deutschland.

By a vote of 165 to 131 the senate approved Naval Minister Dumont's plea for the right to introduce as soon as possible a bill for laying down a battleship of the line. This type of vessel was abandoned by France after the war.

Had Approved Program

The chamber of deputies had previously approved the 1931 naval building program but had voted to defer laying down the battleship until the project had received further consideration.

Long debate preceded the vote by which the senate today took an opposite stand. During that debate it was made clear that the building of the battleship was "designed as a reply to the construction of the Deutschland."

Passes Treaty Limits

Minister Dumont said the sole reason for such a battleship was Germany's new construction program which, he charged, surpassed the limits prescribed by the Versailles treaty.

German plans call for a navy 25 per cent greater than the treaty permits, the minister declared.

"This is not a party that we are organizing but a parade," he said.

"Germany has annexed to her 1931 budget a replacement program comprising eight battleships, eight cruisers, 25 torpedo boats and 28 destroyers."

Students, Alumni Announce Recent, Future Marriages

Names Include Smith, Spafford; Gabriel, Reynolds; Ormiston, Gwinn; Frazer, Dunning; McCahan, Sterling

Alumni and former students of the university continue to join the ranks of matrimony. Not only future but recent marriages are being announced. Following are listed the most recent announcements:

Announcement has been made of the approaching marriage of Kathryn Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Smith of Iowa City, and Fred A. Spafford, son of L. W. Spafford of Iowa City. The ceremony will take place at Syracuse, N. Y., July 15.

Miss Smith graduated from the University of Iowa in 1929 where she became affiliated with Phi Omega Pi, social sorority, Gamma Epsilon Pi, honorary commerce sorority, and Kappa Beta sorority. She has been teaching in the high school at Salem, S. D., the last two years.

Mr. Spafford graduated from the college of chemical engineering last year and was a member of Alpha Chi Sigma, honorary fraternity. The couple will reside at Berkeley apartments at Syracuse, N. Y., where Mr. Spafford is doing research work in chemistry for the Atmospheric Nitrogen company at Syracuse.

Gabriel-Reynolds
Florence May Gabriel, daughter of Mrs. Anna Gabriel of Waterloo, and George F. Reynolds, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Reynolds of Waterloo, were married June 27, at the First Lutheran church at Waterloo. The Rev. H. Mueller officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Attendees at the wedding were Lillian Olsen of Iowa City, and Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Kammeyer of Waterloo. Mrs. Reynolds, a graduate of Buena Vista college, attended the University of Iowa, where she was affiliated with Kappa Delta sorority. She has also taught in the schools at East Waterloo.

Mr. Reynolds is a graduate of the University of Iowa, where he received his B.A. and M.A. degrees. He has taught at Colgate university, Hamilton, N. Y., and was on the faculty of Washington high school at Cedar Rapids this year.

McDonald-Chamberlain
The marriage of Anna Barbara McDonald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George D. McDonald of Anamosa, and William Chamberlain of Cleveland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Park Chamberlain of Anamosa, took place June 17 at the Presbyterian church of Center Junction with the Rev. Abram Alvey reading the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a fitted, white net gown, picture hat, and long lace mitts. She carried a shower bouquet of pink roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Chamberlain is a graduate of the university where she was a member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority. She taught school in Wyoming four years.

Mr. Chamberlain graduated from the college of law, and was a member of Chi Kappa Pi, social fraternity, and Gamma Eta Gamma, legal fraternity. He is associated with a law firm in Cleveland, Ohio, where the couple will make their home.

Ormiston-Gwinn
Announcement has been made of the marriage, June 9, of Mary Margaret Ormiston, daughter of Mrs. George Ormiston of Brooklyn, to Charles P. Gwinn of Washington, Ia., son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Gwinn of Brooklyn. The ceremony took place at the bride's home with the Rev. Russell G. Nye officiating.

Mrs. Gwinn is a graduate of the Brooklyn high school, the Colorado State Teachers college, and attended the University of Iowa.

Sterling-McCahan
The marriage at Detroit, Mich., of Dr. Robert H. Sterling to Bernice McCahan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McCahan of Boulder, Col., was announced recently. The ceremony took place May 29.

Mrs. Sterling is a graduate of the university and was affiliated with Alpha Delta Pi sorority. Dr. Sterling is a graduate of the college of medicine at the university and attended Harvard university.

The couple will reside at Detroit. Frazier-Dunning
The marriage of Paul K. Frazer of Milwaukee, Wis., son of Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Frazer of Ottumwa, to Edith Dunning, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth C. Dunning of Milwaukee, took place Feb. 3 at Crown Point, Ind. The ceremony has just been announced.

Mr. Frazer graduated from the university in 1928 and was affiliated with Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity and Phi Beta Kappa national honorary scholastic fraternity. He is employed as an actuary with the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company of Milwaukee.

Bible Students Close Four Weeks Session With Three Pageants
Students of the Community Bible school presented three pageants in the auditorium of the Methodist church yesterday at 8 p.m. This program marked the close of the four week session of the school.

The beginners group composed of 16 children under the direction of Virginia Hunter presented the drama, "The Bluebird, a messenger of spring."

"Pageant of the nations" was given by the primary group of 24 children directed by Mrs. E. D. Plass.

Sixty children made up the junior group which gave "Judgment of Solomon," directed by Harriet Otto and L. Wadsworth. Mrs. Ruth Crayne has been in charge of the three pageants.

BETTY ROBINSON BATTLES FOR LIFE

Betty Robinson, winner of the women's Olympic 100 meter championship in 1928 and world famous sprinting star, is shown here in the hospital at Oak Forest, Ill., infirmary, where she was taken Sunday following airplane crash in Chicago in which she and her cousin, Wilson Palmer, were severely injured. Physicians say that Miss Robinson has a chance to recover, but she may never compete in another athletic meet. Shown with her in the picture, from left to right, are: Dr. Goldner L. McWhorter, Nurse Margaret Dobson and Dr. Jacob Minke.

She went to Davenport Wednesday to attend a sales manager's meeting and banquet of the Chevrolet motor company at the Blackhawk hotel.

Agnes Clek, 211 E. Church street, leaves tomorrow on a two weeks tour of the middle west.

John Evers, 520 E. Church street, returned Wednesday from a two weeks vacation at his son's home in Merle, Wis.

Dr. R. L. Hillman and family of Davenport, will spend the week end at the A. N. Hillman home, 426 S. Clinton street.

Mrs. Martha A. Newton, preceptor at Currier hall, left yesterday to spend the week end at her home in Winterset.

Cecil Heinsius who has been teaching the last year at Bridgeport, Conn., will arrive the first of next week to spend her vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Heinsius, 331 S. Summit street.

Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Crowley, and sons, Jack and Dick, of Elkhardt, Ind., who have been visiting with Mrs. Crowley's sister, Mrs. R. W. Leinbaugh, 741 Melrose avenue, left yesterday afternoon for Ames where they will visit with Mrs. Crowley's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Lang.

Dr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Richmond, 207 Riverview avenue, are leaving tonight for Ft. Madison to visit at the home of Dr. Frank Richmond.

Grace Wormer, superintendent of the order department of the library, will go to her home at Center Point for the week end.

C. Le Verne Kluss, A of Postville, and Robert H. Isensee, 522 Davenport street, are spending Saturday at Mr. Kluss' home at Postville.

Clara Hinton, first assistant in the order department of the library, is spending her summer vacation at Hedrick.

R. Mary Marshall, assistant in the binding department, left yesterday to spend her vacation at Pocomo, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Fischer, 512 E. Bloomington street, will go to Norwalk Saturday to visit relatives.

Leah Wood, assistant in the order department of the library, will spend the week end at Plainview, Minn.

University Women's Dinner Followed by Reception, Program

Pink and green table appointments, miniature flower pots, and tiny green fans lent a suggestion of coolness at the seventh annual all university women's dinner in the main lounge of Iowa Union last night. A reception at 6 p.m., preceded the dinner.

A program of musical numbers by the all state high school chorus and string quartet, and four plays by members of the advanced clogging class were presented following the dinner.

Chairmen of the committees in charge of arrangements were Frances Zull, head of the department of home economics, general chairman; Frances M. Camp, director of teacher's appointment committee, entertainment; Mate L. Giddings, assistant professor in the department of home economics, tickets.

Kate Daum, assistant professor in the department of nutrition, dinner; Ruth M. Pieper, executive secretary of university publications and summer session office, publicity; and Mrs. E. T. Peterson, decorations.

From Other States
(Editor's note: This list includes then names of the 50 students from Missouri. The list will be concluded tomorrow.)

Joseph H. Adams, Liberty; C. Victor Anderson, Booneville; Clarabel Banta, Marshall; Wynette Barnett, Joplin; Mary L. Beauchamp, Kirksville; Laura E. Belt, Maryville; Glenn H. Benton, Springfield; Edwin R. Blades, St. Louis; Lorenzo D. Blanton, St. Louis.

Review of "Hobson's Choice"

By HELEN LEVITT
Despite the prevailing warm weather, a small but appreciative audience enjoyed the pleasing good natured humor of the university theater's premier production, "Hobson's Choice" by Harold Brighouse in natural science auditorium Wednesday night and last night.

The play as a whole was well done. Ruth Forst as Maggie Hobson, a determined woman who manages to get a husband for herself in spite of her age, and also for her sisters, did a good piece of work. She carried her brisk interpretation of the woman who "gets what she wants" and dominates the future of an entire family easily. At times Miss Forst was inclined to enjoy the humor with the audience, but save for this her characterization was consistent.

Hunt Capable
Aurin Lee Hunt, as Willie Mossop the well hunting but rather stupid little fellow without danger of over-acting. His quick rabbit-like movements to escape Maggie, as well as his fear of her at their being left alone on their wedding night, provided high spots of humor. Because of Maggie's guiding hand he rises from a retiring and unassuming bootmaker in her father's shop to confident master of his own establishment and later of her father's.

D. Russell Thorson was not his best as the father of three daughters whom he tries to rule, with little success. His make up was good but he failed to picture the old, victim of Maggie's attention portrayed the part well. He might have carried his characterization a stubborn, rotund Henry Hobson, so fond of his drink, so easily fooled by his own importance, yet so easily outwitted by his clever daughter, Maggie. Thorson's work improved as the play proceeded but he failed to sincerely put himself into the character and portray an old enough man.

Character Well Portrayed
Snippy little Vickey Hobson and her sister Alice were ably portrayed by Maxine Moore and Ruth Bailey. Little effort was expended by Sydney Smith as Albert Prosser, lover and husband of Alice.

Fred Beenstock, Vickey's lover, played by Earl Hoover, might have stepped out of grandmother's old family album with his sleek pasted hair and small mustache. He furnished many laughs as the "would-be" man of importance.

Alfred Looks Part
Thatcher Alfred, looked and ably acted the part of Dr. MacFarlane, called in by Henry Hobson when suffering from acute alcoholism. Mr. Alfred retained his Scotch dialect consistently. Oza Cunningham, though only on the stage for a few moments, pictured for the audience, Mrs. Hepworth, a society patron of Hobson's shop.

Detailed stage effects, such as the moving figures that passed by the overhead windows of Willie Mossop's basement shoe shop, added a great deal to reality.

The play itself, a study of English life in Lancashire, is universal in appeal because of its interesting characterizations. The humor and cleverness preceding the curtain of each act is especially worthy of mention.

B. Ideh Payne, director of the production, provided an entertaining evening for the audience, with his play well done as a whole.

Placed Cornerstone for Old Capitol 91 Years Ago Saturday

Laying of the corner stone of Old Capitol over-shadowed the celebration of Independence day in Iowa

City just 91 years ago tomorrow. Now the administration building of the University of Iowa, the structure prior to 1857 was the scene of territorial assemblies, six sessions of the state legislature, and three constitutional conventions. Fifteen years of intermittent labor elapsed after the placing of the corner stone before the pioneer builders finished the capitol, for it was necessary to transport the 8,000 pound limestone blocks on rafts from the quarries up the river.

Cubs Squeeze Out 2 to 1 Victory Over Phillies in Eleventh Inning Rally

Smith Shades Ray Benge in Overtime Duel

Cayler's Hit Drives in Grimm to Grab Close Win

PHILADELPHIA, July 2 (AP)—Bob Smith bested Ray Benge in an eleven inning pitchers' duel here today and Chicago defeated the Phillies by the score of 2 to 1.

Cayler's hit drove Grimm over with the deciding tally. The Cubs scored first in the opening inning when Taylor tripled after English had singled. The Phils tied the score in the fifth inning on a hit by Mallon, a base on balls to Brickell, and a single by Klein.

Smith limited the hard hitting Phils to seven blows.

Score by innings: R. H. E. Chicago.....100 000 000 01—2 10 Philadelphia 000 010 000 00—1 7 3 Batteries: Smith and Hemsley; Benge and McCurdy.

Giants Even Series With Cards, Win 3-2

NEW YORK, July 2 (AP)—J. Francis Hogan, the Giants' over-size catcher, clouted a home run in the first inning today with two mates on base and gave New York a 3 to 2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals. The Giant victory ended the series all square and again reduced the Cards' lead to 1 1/2 games.

The Cardinals hit Fred Fitzsimmons hard but he got good support and three fine double plays kept him out of trouble.

Score by innings: R. H. E. St. Louis.....000 200 000—2 12 1 New York.....000 030 003—3 10 1 Batteries: Hallahan, Derringer, and Wilson; Fitzsimmons and Hogan.

Pirates Best Braves in Pitching Duel, 1-0

BOSTON, July 2 (AP)—Heinie Meine held the Braves to five hits today to score a 1 to 0 shutout over the Braves in a pitchers' battle with Bruce Cunningham. The visitors took three out of four games.

The lone run was scored in the fourth inning when Comoroski singled, stole second, and advanced to third on Al Spohrer's wild throw. Howard Groszkowski singled him home.

Score by innings: R. H. E. Pittsburgh.....000 100 000—7 7 0 Boston.....000 000 000—0 5 1 Batteries: Meine and Phillips; Cunningham and Cronin, Spohrer.

Robins Nose Out Cincy, 4-3 Score

BROOKLYN, July 2 (AP)—The Reds outbit the Robins, 10 to 5, but the Ploek bunched its blows to send across the plate three runs in the sixth inning in addition to the one tally recorded in the second inning. A 4 to 3 victory was the result. Heimach and Phelps divided pitching duties for Brooklyn, while Johnson and Benton shared mound work for the losers.

Score by innings: R. H. E. Cincinnati.....010 200 000—3 10 0 Brooklyn.....010 003 009—4 5 1 Batteries: Johnson, Benton and Sukerforth; Phelps, Heimach and Lombardi.

"Daddy Dee" Dies
SEATTLE, July 2 (AP)—Mark M. Dee (Daddy Dee), sailor, miner, political worker, manager for John L. Sullivan for three years, and a former husband of Blanche Walsh, the actress, died here last night. He was 73 years old.

Unheralded Golfers Turn in Par Rounds to Lead Open Field

INVERNESS CLUB, TOLEDO, Ohio, July 2 (AP)—Four dark horse members of the American links, unheralded by the inferno of Inverness and unchecked by its hazards, galloped out in front today to establish a four-cornered tie for the lead in the United States open golf championship.

The quartet of unheralded and unattended competitors rode the fairways to finish in a deadlock with old man par with scores of 71 each for the first 18 hole round of the 72 hole championship chase.

The four—Mortie Dutra of Long Beach, Cal., Charles Guest, another Californian now located at Deal, N. Y., and Eddie Williams of Cleveland—charged into the fray to take temporary command of the battle to determine the successor to Bobby Jones.

Nation's Cinder Stars Finish Workouts for National A.A.U. Meet

LINCOLN, Neb., July 2 (AP)—Cinder stars of the nation went through final workouts here today in preparation for the A.A.U. championships Friday and Saturday at the University of Nebraska stadium. Although the big show is set for Saturday, the senior and relay championships will be decided, there will be plenty of activity tomorrow.

Of major interest tomorrow will be the decathlon, in which Barney Berlinger, Pennsylvania; Jim Bausch, Kansas; Wilson Charles, Haskell institute; Jess Mortensen, James Hall and half a dozen others will compete.

The San Francisco Olympic club has a strong team ready to defend its team honors. The New York Athletic club, Los Angeles club, and Denver clubs also have athletic aces entered.

Indians Set Athletics Back by 12-4 Win

Four Pitchers Fail to Halt Cleveland, A's Get 13 Hits

CLEVELAND, July 2 (AP)—Four Philadelphia pitchers were ineffective against the Cleveland Indians today and the tribe won the third and final game of the series, 12 to 4.

Jimmy Foxx got his 15th home run of the season in the second, and Earl Averill got his 13th and 14th homers in the third and seventh. Bishop also clouted a circuit drive.

The Athletics got 13 hits against nine for Cleveland, but the Indians scored even when hits were missing.

In the seventh inning they got three runs off four walks and a fielder's choice.

Score by innings: R. H. E. Philadelphia 040 000 000—4 13 1 Cleveland.....002 007 30*—12 9 1 Batteries: Walberg, Earnshaw, Krouse, McDonald and Cochrane, Heving, and Palmisano; Hudlin and Sewell.

White Sox Hurler Blanks Boston, 2-0

CHICAGO, July 2 (AP)—Tommy Thomas pitched one of the finest games of his career today, limiting the Boston Red Sox to three singles as the White Sox took the final game of the series, 2 to 0. Thomas faced only 30 batters, one of them being safe on an error but being erased by a double play in the first inning.

The first Boston hit came in the fourth when Reynolds lost Rhyne's easy fly in the sun, and it fell at his feet for a single. The only legitimate safety was a single to center by Earl Webb in the seventh. The last hit came with two out in the ninth when Sweeney beat out a slow roller to shortstop. Thomas did not walk a man.

Big Bob Kline was a good pitcher, too, but he suffered his first of the season, giving ten hits, three by Reynolds.

Score by innings: R. H. E. Boston.....000 000 000—0 3 1 Chicago.....100 100 00*—2 10 0 Batteries: Kline and Berry; Thomas and Grube.

Senators Rally to Smite Browns, 13-5

ST. LOUIS, July 2 (AP)—Just when the St. Louis Browns thought they were going to sweep the three-game series with the Washington Senators by taking today's game, the Nationals unleashed their heavy bombardment and won 13 to 5.

With their pitching ace, Walter Stewart, on the mound, the Browns got off to a 4 to 0 lead, but from the fourth inning on the Senators scored in every frame. Crowder, who succeeded Burke, was the win-

Short Crop in Canada Lifts Wheat Prices

Yanks Crush Tigers Under 18 Hits by 13-1

CHICAGO, July 2 (AP)—Sensationally adverse Canadian crop reports lifted wheat today, notwithstanding primary receipts in the United States totalled more than twice as much as a year ago. One Canadian authority said that even allowing for any future improvement, this season's wheat crop would not exceed 200,000,000 bushels, compared with 374,000,000 harvested last year. Premier Bennett of Canada was quoted as saying the dominion faced its greatest national disaster.

Wheat closed unsettled, 1 1/2 cent higher, corn 1/2 off to 1 1/2, oats at 1 1/2-1 1/2 advance, and provisions 5 to 15 cents down.

Intimations of liberal export business.

Score by innings: R. H. E. New York.....010 100 032—13 18 1 Detroit.....000 100 000—1 8 3 Batteries: Wells and Dickey; Uhl, Hoyt, and Grabowski.

Meet of Coal Mine Operators Called by Lamont for July 9

WASHINGTON, July 2 (AP)—A meeting of bituminous coal mine operators was called today by Secretary Lamont for July 9 in an effort to find a basis for conferences on conditions in the industry.

The secretary wrote about 25 of the leading operators asking them to meet here. The call grew out of a letter from John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers asking President Hoover to assemble a conference for consideration of the industry's problems.

The president replied last Monday that the "administration is desirous of lending every possible assistance to any constructive program put forward by operators and miners."

Ottumwa Man Held for Carrying Liquor

OTTUMWA, July 2 (AP)—Jess Durbin of Ottumwa was arrested on a road near here today with 150 gallons of alleged alcohol by a squad of federal and county officers.

He is being held on five charges: possession, transportation and selling of liquor, conspiring with others to violate the national prohibition laws and maintaining a liquor nuisance.

Fix Date for Hearing
THE HAGUE, July 2 (AP)—The Hague tribunal has fixed July 20 for the hearing in the Austro-German customs accord case.

Vatican Wants Clubs Open
VATICAN CITY, July 2 (AP)—The Vatican has taken the position that Premier Mussolini must reopen the Catholic clubs he closed May 30 before "amicable discussions" to settle the controversy between the Holy See and the government can begin.

The Emperor of America by Sax Rohmer

Synopsis of Preceding Installments
Commander Drake Roscoe of the United States navy is seeking to expose and arrest a mysterious criminal band known as the Zones, directed by a chief called "Head Centre." With the aid of Dr. Stopford, he makes his investigation. They take him to the home of Page Sutton, a wealthy man who is the most recent object of attack. Madame Czerna, an agent of the Zones, has made the acquaintance of Roscoe and Stopford. She is ordered to motor in the direction of Sutton's home, to disable her car, and then to ask shelter for the night to aid "Head Centre" in carrying out his plans. That night an attempt is made on Roscoe's life. Regan, a private detective in Sutton's employ, arrests Madame Czerna, but Stopford, who has fallen in love with her, helps her escape. She tells him that she became associated with the Zones before she knew their real purpose, and that she would gladly free herself. Stopford takes her to the steamship Ruritania, where he was formerly chief surgeon. Meanwhile, Roscoe has enlisted the aid of the police. Deputy Commissioner Burke has located Zone headquarters, but the criminals have been warned and have escaped. When the Ruritania makes its return voyage with Stopford and Madame Czerna still on board, Roscoe and Regan with Page Sutton and Peter Champion, two wealthy men who have been objects of Zone attacks, seek its shelter. Macrae, a Zone agent, has promised, for a consideration, to tell all he knows of the Zones. But another Zone agent, known as the Duchesse de Greuze, is advising "Head Centre" of what goes on aboard ship.

Twenty-First Installment
In a cavern in the bowels of Manhattan a section of a curious map was illuminated. It showed the streets leading to and immediately surrounding the docks along by the big ocean passenger lines. The vague light shining through the colored sections of the map revealed a black-robed figure behind a long table. Above the map section a spot of red light showed itself. The map disappeared.
"H. Q.," said a nasal voice. "Divisional Chief D reports that great Head Centre orders immediate call X and direct connection. Urgent. Report ends."
"Disconnect," the masked man replied.
The red light disappeared.
A faint sound came from the long table. A green light sprang to life under the yellow hand manipulating a keyboard.
"Head Centre, New York," said the musical voice.
A woman replied.
"Great Head Centre," she said. "Alteration of plan on Ruritania. Port-hole captain's cabin not practicable. Reprimand Divisional Chief C. Centre operations on boat deck, port side, aft of captain's cabin. Act immediately. You are now responsible in person. Reinforce units covering officers. Engage and endanger. Move."
The green light disappeared. Instantly the red light leaped up on the shadowy pillar.
"H. Q.," said the nasal voice.
"Instruct Divisional Chief C.," came an order, "to reinforce units covering dock area. All Sections from West Thirtieth and West Fourteenth streets to Fifth avenue must be open. This is a general emergency order. Instruct Zone Officer 3 C to place Group masters detailed for special duty at selected points on port side of boat deck and to supervise in person. In the event of failure, Zone Officer 3 C will if necessary follow firing routine and take to the river. Advise Group master covering, Divisional Chief C will then report to me, personally. Move."
The red light went out.
Drake Roscoe returned along the alleyway, cursing under his breath. Fortunately, he was familiar with the ship, and having dodged the captain's steward he now headed again toward the cabin. But he was wasting time. Things he wanted to know—must know—were being told in the wardrobe by the renegade Divisional chief. If his instinct should prove to be wrong, he was blundering badly. And it was sheer instinct, or inspiration, which had whispered to him that the telephone call of the Duchesse de Greuze was more important than any revelation Macrae had to make. So far, he had not gathered a word. But as he approached the door, he could hear her voice.
"Officers engaged!" (two or three words which were unintelligible) . . . "Move!"
Silence followed. Whereupon Roscoe rapped sharply and opened the door. The Duchesse had apparently just closed her handbag. But Roscoe concluded that this meant that she had been using a powder puff.
"A thousand apologies!" he exclaimed. "Please don't let me interrupt you. But I think I left a note-book on the table!"
"No apology is necessary, Commander," she murmured. "I fear I must hurry ashore."
"What?" Roscoe exclaimed.
"My pearls—they are historic, you know—were left behind at my hotel

—and they have disappeared!"
"But—what shall you do?"
"I shall go ashore," she replied. "I don't dare to face my husband without the Greuze pearls! My baggage my maid will see ashore at Cherbourg."
She held out her hand. Drake stopped, and kissed the tapered fingers.
"Forgive my rudeness," he said, "but I must go!"
He raced back to the wardrobe. As he burst in, Stopford grasped his arm. Madame Czerna raised a finger to her lips.
"X Radio!" Burke whispered. "Quiet!"
Robert Macrae was seated at a table. Before him rested the tiny instrument. He depressed a button, and:
"H. Q.," said a nasal voice—apparently in the wardrobe!
Raising a warning hand:
"Division B," Macrae replied.
"Your report—quickly!"
"Now in my cabin. Party assembled remains the same but now in wardrobe. Have not been put in touch with any other officer aboard. Standing by. Urgent. Timed 12:53."
"Proceed to the boat deck," directed the nasal voice. "Cross to rail—port side—between two boats. A Zone officer will meet you. Head Centre's orders. Move. Disconnect."
"I must carry out my orders," Macrae said. "Otherwise I should be of no further use to you! If you follow me, Mr. Burke or Mr. Regan, keep out of sight. If my Zone duties take me ashore, wait my call later tonight. I shall call you, Mr. Champion. Stand by at home!"
He hurried from the room. Roscoe exchanged a glance with Stopford and went after him.
"Cover me, Regan!" he snapped.
Ned Regan followed Roscoe out. Down in the second-class accommodations a young fifth officer was escorting the lovely Duchesse de Greuze through piles of baggage to where a military gang-plank still connected the Ruritania with shore. This phenomenon was due to captain's orders. Nobody knew why those orders had been given.
Someone was coming up the gangway.
"Stand away there!" roared the fifth officer. "Go back!"
"I'm Captain Markham from police headquarters."
"I don't care. Get off that plank!" Markham hesitated. But the officer won.
"Allow me to precede you, Madame," he said.
The dock gained safely.
"If you're from police headquarters," said the ship's officer to Markham, "you can do a useful job. This lady is the Duchesse de Greuze. She has lost historic pearls. Tip off the customs people and see she's taken care of. She's returning to her hotel."
Police Captain Markham saluted the fair passenger.
"At your service," he said, "although my time's short."
The Duchesse extended her hand to the fifth officer.
"Thank you," she said.
And as he turned on the gang-plank to look back, a frightful scream came from high up in the ship. It rose shrilly . . . and ceased suddenly . . .
A red light glowed in the darkness below Manhattan.
"H. Q.," announced a nasal voice.
"Report of Group Master 1, Sector 3 C 1, covering Ruritania from river. Zone Officer 3 C swam aboard. Group Master 4, Sector 2 D 1, also swam to the boat. Group Master 2, Sector 3 C 2 is unreported so far. Ruritania pulling out. Timed 1 a.m. Report ends."
"Report of Zone Officer 3 C."
"To hand, Divisional Chief B was removed from the rolls at 12:54. Zone Officer operated in person on boat deck, covered by Group Master 2, Sector 3 C 2, now missing. Report ends."
"Report of Divisional Chief C."
"To hand, the Duchesse de Greuze came ashore six minutes before ship sailed. She has proceeded to her hotel. Group master covering. Number One came ashore less than a minute before sailing. He has proceeded to his home. No cover. He is accompanied by Ned W. Regan and Deputy Commissioner Burke. Page Sutton and Peter Champion sail with ship as notified. Dr. Stopford and Madame Czerna have also sailed. Commander Drake Roscoe remained on board. Divisional Chief C on his way to H. Q. Timed 1:05. Report ends."
Instantly came an order:
"Cover Number One and party. Advise Divisional Chief D. File quarterly reports of movements of Ned W. Regan and Commissioner Burke. Zone Officer 3 C is responsible for Group Master 2, Sector 3 C 2, unreported. Advise Zone officer. Instruct Group master in charge plane G await Ruritania's dropping pilot and report. Divisional Chief C to be admitted by Entrance Two. Move."
The red light went out . . .
"What makes you think there's a man overboard?" the pursuer asked.
"Well," said his second, "four people have said so. A couple of deck-hands report that two men went overboard a minute before we pulled out."
"Making three!" growled the pursuer. "Any more trouble?"
"Yes. The Duchesse de Greuze went ashore at the last moment. Her maid's left in charge of her gear."

Up in the wardrobe:
"That poor devil had a premonition of what was coming to him," said Roscoe. "Later, we can tabulate what we've learned . . . because we'll learn no more, from him."
"You mean he was murdered?" said Peter Champion hoarsely.
Madame Czerna spoke listlessly. She was very pale.
"I knew he would be murdered," she said.
"Position is," said Page Sutton bitterly, "that Champion and myself have already lost millions to this Zone gang. Now they're covering us again. We're fugitives in our own country. When we get ashore, what do we do?"
"Remains to be seen," Roscoe answered dryly. "You're by no means alone."
There was no moon, and a long oily swell stirred the sea when the Ruritania dropped her pilot. Only a few passengers witnessed the event. Stopford went down the ladder first, followed by a slender boy whose trousers didn't seem to fit too well. Gauzy frocks and high-heeled shoes are no sort of kit for this kind of work, and Madame Czerna had availed herself of Stopford's wardrobe.
Then came the pilot and a couple of hands with baggage. Next, Page Sutton managed to transfer without accident.
Peter Champion was standing at the head of the ladder, hesitating, when the ship's searchlight suddenly came to life and swept the dark, heaving breast of the ocean.
"Pilot just leaving, sir," said the officer supervising and well aware that time was valuable. Then:
"Follow me, Mr. Champion," came a peremptory voice. "Watch your step."
Roscoe appeared out of the shadows and went on to the ladder.
"Can I be of any assistance, sir?" the ship's officer asked.
Peter Champion grinned wryly.
"Thanks all the same," said he. "I guess I can make it!"
On the bridge:
"Pilot away, sir," somebody reported.
But Sir Harry Bristol and two of his officers were focusing their glasses on a seaplane which, as the lights picked her up, had skimmed swiftly westward, and now, pursued by the white beam, was taking the air.
Bristol turned.
"Log that," he directed. He gave the signal which meant in effect:
"All out for Cherbourg."

A New Yorker at Large

By MARK BARRON
NEW YORK—The reputation of being bad men held by New York's "public enemies" is largely mythical. In most every instance, newspaper reports show, the racketeer and gangster proves a whimpering coward when cornered.
Only when he knows there is little chance of his being challenged does he boast loudly of putting enemies "on the spot" or taking them "for a ride."
It is this cowardice, this inferiority complex, that persuades him to build up a false ego by becoming a gangster. Psychologists say it is this fear rather than any spirit of loyalty which makes gangsters remain silent on their death beds. They believe they might get well and if they talked they would have to face the wrath of those betrayed.
FISTS SHAME "TOUGH GUYS"
The two hard fists of Irish Johnny Broderick, chief of the police strike arm squad, repeatedly have knocked away this fake ego and revealed the shivering streak in those lads who boast they are such tough hombres.
Broderick fights them with fists, not with a gun, and he has sent "Little Augie" and a dozen others to the hospital.
Broderick doesn't mind putting away his badge and gun, then fighting it out man to man with one of these men. Yet invariably it is the case that the challenged hoodlum falls to the ground, covers his head with his arms and begs for mercy.
"Dutch" Schultz, said to be the beer king of the Bronx, showed his true colors when detectives cornered him in a gun battle on Fifth avenue.
Shaking and white with fear, he covered on the floor of the precinct station and begged for a sedative to steady his nerves.
When "Legs" Diamond was shot down in an Acra roadhouse, he cried with fear and pain for many minutes before anyone came to his rescue. His bodyguards were cringing underneath tables inside the building.
Larry Fay, who has the reputation of being the most dangerous of all, once was chased from his own night club by an irate Boston college football star.

LATEST GOSSIP
While executives and writers were searching for stories or an idea for Pola Negri's first talkie, Thilde Fors- ter, an unobtrusive German girl and a novice to the picture game, submitted the one that has been selected. Miss Fors- ter arrived in Hollywood three weeks ago, ostensibly for a vacation. When she read that they were looking for a Negri story, she sat down and wrote one which she titled, "A Woman Commands." Apparently she has forgotten the vacation, as she has completed another, which Paramount is seriously considering for Marlene Dietrich . . . There was a clic in the directions to a Malibu house that I overheard the other day. "You know where Mr. and Mrs. So-And-So live, don't you?" asked the person describing the route to be taken. The answer being negative, she continued, "Well, walk down the beach novel, called 'The Bandit Prince'"

CHEROKEE GIRL IN PAGEANT. Anna Ross, known as "White Flower" to her people, the Cherokees, was selected to portray one of the leading characters in an historic pageant and festival in Ontario, Cal. She is from Oklahoma.

POST AND GATTY WAVE TO NEW YORK'S CHEERS. This Associated Press telephoto shows the record-smashing round-the-world flyers, Wiley Post (left) and Harold Gatty, responding to New York's tumultuous welcome from the rear seat of an automobile as they were driven up Broadway amid a shower of ticker tape.

SPAIN'S PREMIER? Alejandro Lleroux (above), foreign minister in the first Republican cabinet of Spain, appears to have won a great triumph in the general elections just held, although definite effects of the voting are not known yet. Lleroux is slated to be the first president of the new republic of Spain, or else its premier.

PLUCKY RUTH BACK HOME. Ruth Nichols, prominent society aviatrix, injured recently on the first leg of an attempted solo flight across the Atlantic when her plane crashed at St. John, N. B., managed to produce a cheery smile as she was brought home on a stretcher in a plane piloted by Clarence D. Chamberlin, her technical advisor. Standing back of plucky Ruth is Chamberlin and his wife, who accompanied the aviatrix on her ambulance-plane ride back home to Rye, N. Y.

Everett Needham Case and his bride, the former Josephine Young, only daughter of Owen D. Young, industrialist, are shown leaving the University church in Van Hornesville, N. Y., after their wedding ceremony. Case is the son of the chairman of the New York Federal Reserve bank.

PRETTY? THEY'RE ENTRIES IN SWIMMING MEET. They're pretty enough to be movie stars but they're not. Rather they are swimming stars entered in the Women's National A. A. U. outdoor swimming championships July 16-19 at New York. Helene Madison, Seattle marvel, will attend the four titles she won last year. Eleanor Holm of New York, will look to her backstroke and medley honors, while Georgia Coleman of Los Angeles, will compete in diving events. Josephine McKim of Los Angeles, is entered in swimming events.

CARDEO'S CHOICE. Vera Crawley, a Mississippi blond, is engaged to Frank Cardeo, Notre Dame's All-American quarterback who will coach at Purdue next year.

REUNITED AFTER 42 YEARS. Separated 42 years ago in Russia, Mrs. Lillian Winer (left) of Mattapan, Mass., and Mrs. Eva Levenson of Los Angeles, sisters, are shown at the Winer home, where they staged a grand and glorious reunion. Can't you just imagine the supreme joy of their meeting after all of those long years? It's not such a bad world after all!

Arita Jensen Busch, 15 year old bride of Leslie Busch, son of wealthy and prominent residents of Larchmont, N. Y., suburb, smiles happily at the photographer to prove her happiness and to show her 20 year old husband that she has courage to deny her father's charges that she was kidnaped. Busch's mother, a member of one of President Hoover's research commissions, has welcomed the couple at her show-place estate while maintaining that there was no kidnaping and that the youngsters are in love.

HERO GOES BACK. Lieut. John L. Leitzing (above), probation officer at the Roxbury, Mass., court, and reputed to be the first American soldier to capture a German prisoner during the World War, is going back to the scene of his triumphs in France and Germany. He goes in a happy mood of peace this time, though.

GRAF MAKES FIRST LANDING ON WATER. For the first time in its career, the giant Graf Zeppelin was landed on the water when it came to rest majestically on Lake Constance, Switzerland, without the aid of any landing crew. The test landing on water was arranged in preparation for the North Pole flight of the Graf, in the course of which the Zeppelin will attempt to establish contact with Sir Hubert Wilkins of the Arctic submarine Nautilus. The Graf is shown on Lake Constance, where it appears to be resting as easily as an over-sized duck.

DEDICATE WILSON STATUE JULY 4. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, shown at left, will be one of the guests of honor when the statue of her husband (right) wartime president of the United States, is dedicated at Poznan, Poland, today. The statue, the work of Gutzon Borglum, was presented to Poland by Ignace Paderewski.

America's Birthday

TODAY the United States of America, 155 years young, boisterous and reckless, will celebrate its birthday. Some few American citizens will celebrate the founding of their independence with appropriate ceremony and respect for signers of the declaration of 1776, the rest, in wishing many happy returns of the day, will express themselves in noise, automobile accidents, drowning, and high explosives.

It is unfortunate that celebration of July 4 has been diverted so far from its original purpose, that it has become simply a chance to get away from the daily grind and to work off a little steam. But since it must be that, the principal consideration is how to let an entire nation make "whoopie" for a day without loss of life.

Figures released by the National Safety council show that there has been a great reduction in fireworks casualties partly due to regulations governing the manufacture and sale of fireworks. However, the principal factor in the reduction has been the increase of other forms of celebration, chiefly motor-ing. The deaths from automobile accidents on July 3, 4, and 5 have increased in number tremendously to more than offset the decrease in fireworks disasters.

"In the interests of a happy motorized outing" the National Safety council sends out a warning to automobile drivers, anticipating that the greatest number of casualties will take place this year on the highways. The council's recommendations are: 1. Check your car thoroughly before starting long trips, particularly your brakes, lights, steering gear and tires.

2. Remember that in driving strange roads there may be unforeseen hazards. Heavy traffic increases the dangers of unfamiliar highways. 3. Take time to read and heed all traffic signs, warnings, and signals.

4. Stay in line. Very little is gained by cutting around. The risk isn't worth the few seconds gained. 5. Be wary of the other driver's acts. He may be a safe driver, but on the other hand he may be a reckless, irresponsible moron. Often it takes an accident to properly identify and classify this type of driver.

6. Don't "assume" at grade crossings. There'll be lots of these tragedies over the Fourth. Alert drivers will not be listed among these victims. 7. Don't let yourself be carried away by the spirit of Independence Day, the beauties of nature, or the love of conservation. Otherwise you may find yourself being carried away by an ambulance.

In other words it's a mighty good plan to decrease your speed and double your alertness. Or, to sum it all up: Drive slow and think fast!

Highway Life Savers

NEW JERSEY has announced a plan for first aid treatment of accident victims on one of her dangerous highways, a plan which might well be adopted by many other states including Iowa, at least in a modified form.

ployment that an improving trend in business has become noticeable.

Examples quoted by the Philadelphia Public Ledger, show that in Philadelphia there has been a slight improvement in the face of adverse seasonal forces. General factory employment continues to decline seasonally, but certain lines are showing improvement such as the canning, ice cream, woollens, and floor coverings industries are more active. Ship builders also are finding more business.

The Philadelphia report said: "An improving trend is reported by the tanning industry, one company showing a 20 per cent increase over last year. Farm agents report that industrial workers moving to rural districts are getting work. Department store sales in early June were definitely better than in May."

Improvements have also been noted in New England business, especially in the boot and shoe and woolen industries, and several large manufacturers in Chicago last week reemployed several thousand men. Favorable employment reports have also sifted in to Washington from Minneapolis, Memphis, and California. The latter state expects 17 per cent increase in July, August, and September.

Meager as these signs may appear to the man who is still looking for a job, they are tangible evidence of a recovery that has been promised by economists for this year. The skeptical are slow in joining in the gradually increasing optimism, preferring to consider mere promises as a false front, but definite proof should be a potent factor in restoring confidence.

Now that plans are underway for regular stratosphere plane service, some arrangement might be made whereby the passengers would fall up in case of emergency. Except, of course, those who swore just before jumping off.

TODAY'S TOPICS

By FRANK JAFFE

Cupid will give his bow and arrow a long needed rest in Iowa for a week beginning today, and will himself take what will probably go on record as being his first honest-to-goodness vacation. For Iowa's new marriage law that requires a five days' notice of intent to wed goes into effect. Independence day, a legal holiday, and Sunday will allow two additional days of rest for the marriage machinery.

Recommendation was made at the convention of Congregational & Christian churches in Seattle that "our ministers shall use extreme caution in marrying divorced persons, refusing to do so except when the facts indicate the grounds for divorce were acceptable to the Christian conscience." That would just about put an end to some of our better known record breaking streaks and a fine sport would be lost to the world. Of course, it would also cut down considerably the supply of meat for family round tables.

Now that Harold Gatty and Wiley Post have been properly welcomed and bemoaned they are as much in the dark about their future as the rest of the world is. "We have no plans," said Gatty when they had returned to earth. They may write their memoirs, do short talks, appear in vaudeville skits, or even lecture but no contracts have been forthcoming as yet. It will be rather hard for Post to go back to his job flying for an Oklahoma oil man and Gatty to renew his barnstorming career.

Another New York City magistrate was ousted from office when the supreme court found him guilty of unfair and unjudicial conduct, besides being influenced by politics in deciding cases. Perhaps the supreme court ought also to take up the case of the jury that acquitted one of New York's prominent beer runners accused of having tried to shoot detectives who met the hoodlum and his bodyguard in an encounter. The bodyguard was killed in the fray and maybe the jury felt remorseful at the loss to New York gangdom.

One way to get the congregation to church is to bring them there and then take them home after services. The Methodist church of Currituck, N. C., hit on the idea of providing a brand new, commodious bus to increase its regular Sunday attendance. That, although more practical than promises, is just another instance of what the talkies have done to this country.

Sheriff Fred Beal had the tables turned on him the other day with a far more formidable assailant than any chance criminal. Not far from the courthouse on Main street in Bloomfield, Mo., Beal's wife went on the warpath and shot the sheriff full of holes. Strange to relate she was not arrested. Friends of the couple attributed the disaster to marital difficulties.

The frigate Constitution, out of Boston, due for Portsmouth, N. H., on a tour of the Atlantic seaboard, is chockfull of traditions for every true American and lover of the sea. One of the three first vessels in the American navy, the Constitution has maintained American rights on every ocean and has sailed 500,000 miles in her 84 years of active service. Now she is back in service to revive memories of some of her famous masters including Decatur, Stewart, Dewey, and Hull.

Maybe the Republican administration isn't so philanthropic after all in its proposal to postpone payments and collections of war debts. There is no clause in the Hoover moratorium relative to the interests of big business or independent debts owed by Germany to private American concerns. And as long as Germany can withhold $450,000,000 in debt payments, what's to prevent it from paying up its personal debts to our Republican industries?

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE SIMPSON WASHINGTON - Even such a veteran of government departmental service as John Martyn, who is now administrative assistant to Secretary Hurley of the war department and formerly secretary successively to War Secretaries Weeks, Davis and Hurley, found surprising aspects of war department responsibilities in his new job. Eight years and more as right hand man to war secretaries had not served to acquaint him fully with the weird lot of non-military duties and functions imposed by law on the war department.

For one thing, Mr. Martyn discovered to his astonishment that as administrative assistant he had something to do with prohibition enforcement. There is a lot of territory, vaguely defined in the statutes as "the Indian country," where no dentist, doctor, hospital, druggist nor any one else can legally have alcoholic liquors for medical use in his possession without war department permit.

"INDIAN COUNTRY"

Specifically "the Indian country" seems to be any region in any state where Indian wards of the government reside. The act imposing this duty on the war department was put through in 1897 and is probably the most boned prohibition statute ever enacted. It flatly forbids any person to "sell, give away, dispose of, exchange or barter any malt, spirituous, or vinous liquor, including beer, ale, and wine, or any ardent or other intoxicating liquor of any kind whatsoever, or any essence, extract, bitters, preparation, compound, composition, or any article whatsoever, under any name, label or brand, which produces intoxication, to any Indian to whom allotment of land has been made," or who is otherwise a government ward.

GUARDING THE GATE

While Martyn did not happen to know about this, however, there is a lot he does know about Washington and its ways. When he became administrative assistant, with a fine private office at his disposal, did he retire to that dignified official solitude? He did not. He set up his new desk in the same outer office of the war secretary's own office where he has had his official being for nearly a decade.

Book Reviews

"The Last Days of Shylock" by Ludwig Lewisohn; Harpers, $2.50. Reviewed by Dick Baxter. In the "Last Days of Shylock," Ludwig Lewisohn continues to exploit the same idea as is the central theme of "Upstream," "Midchannel," and "The Island Within," the conception of Judaism as a philosophical comfort and Zionism through which the author expresses his convictions. So far as plot is concerned, the book is rather a sequence of events moving forward from the evening of the famous trial in Venice, with occasional backward glimpses at the days long gone by, to the last hours of the hero's life. We find Shylock returning home, distressed over the prospect of enforced baptism and the loss of his daughter. He can manage through the help of Tubal to save some of the confiscated fortune. Through the long hours of the night, he remembers the early days of his life. . . his patient mother, his doctor father, the driving of the Jews into a segregated area, the few happy hours with Leah, and the long wearing of the yellow cap and gabardine, together with his wealth and revenge through the use of it in loans to the un-Christian Christians. Following his baptism he devoted himself to the help of his fellow Israelites, particularly to the ransoming of captives. Eventually he is forced to take refuge in the lands of the Eastern Empire whose chief friend is a noble Jewish woman representative of the Mendez house. There comes a day when among the Jews whose ransom Shylock pays, is his own daughter, Jessica, with her three sons. Her story forms the chapter, "A Tale Told in Cyprus."

The book is replete with sharp vignettes such as the morning Shylock witnesses the Auto de Fe which consumes twenty-five Jews, or the night of the Passover when he becomes betrothed to Leah. However, the volume leaves one, to use a word too frequently misused, impressed. Lewisohn's style does not vary. It is the method of expression which a man uses in demonstrating what he believes with his whole heart. It is clear and steady, shot through with a dark light reminding one of the tapestried gloom of Shylock's own rooms in the Ghetto. As an amplification of the story Shakespeare tells, Lewisohn has completely vindicated his Jew. He has made him the man that most readers feel Shakespeare intended his Shylock to be, one born to be hated, yet feeling the same emotions, enduring the same pains, emphorying the same pleasures as his tormentors. As a revelation of the Jewish philosophy Lewisohn develops his theme with persuasive charm, in depicting in a not too obtrusive manner, the scholarly calm and the subdued flesh of the wise men of the Jews.

"Saturday Night at the Greyhound" by John Hampson; Knopf, $2.00. Reviewed by Harriet I. Mahank. The action which takes place one Saturday night at the Greyhound, an English pub, furnishes the theme for this first novel by John Hampson. The occurrences are set forth with direct simplicity that gives the story a movement that complicated writing and diction could never achieve. The novel is realistic in tone, but the realism is not of a defensive, for it is life. The book is divided into three parts: "Nightfall at the Greyhound" in which a description of the places and the background of the characters is given. "The open house" in which the Saturday night revel is the chief topic. "The house closes" in which not only the Greyhound closes, but the lives of the landlord and his wife, Fred and Ivy Flack, and Ivy's brother, Tom, are shattered. Ivy and Tom, son and daughter of a prosperous inn keeper, were brought up in the intricacies of the business and knew it well. When Ivy married Fred, a handsome ne'er-do-well, and moved away upon their father's death, Tom missed her sorely. The girl didn't have an easy life or Fred drank too much and couldn't keep steady employment. As a last resort she bought the Greyhound, situated in a poor, out-of-the-way place, with her legacy. Freddy made extravagant promises and she was very happy, particularly when Tom gave up a job in a first class hotel to join her. But Freddy's promises were never kept. He was a poor inn keeper giving away too much and drinking excessively himself. Moreover he was unfaithful to his wife, and betrayed another girl's trust. Characterization is achieved mainly through the conversation and actions of the persons, very little being direct although some personal description does enter. The characters are convincing and their reality has been, I believe, due to this method. The book is absorbing and holds one's interest from the first page through to the tragic ending. The author has written with a sympathy and understanding of these people that is transmitted to the reader; one feels an intimate concern about what happens.

PHILADELPHIA, July 3 (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Phillies in both ends of a double header here today, 6 to 1 and 7 to 3 to put their lead to 2 1-2 games.

In the first game Rhem outpitched Bolen. The latter started well but the Cards hit him in the closing innings.

The Red Birds hopped on Phil Collins in the opening inning of the night cap to score five runs and take a lead they never relinquished. Stout, making his National league debut as a starting hurler, held the Phils in check until the eighth inning when they loaded the sacks with no one out. Then Lindsey came to his rescue and allowed only one man to score.

Wood to Get Title Vacated by Bill Tilden

Will Win Wimbledon Tennis Crown by Mate's Default

LONDON, July 3 (AP)—Sidney B. Wood, Jr., not yet 20 years old, tomorrow will become Wimbledon tennis singles champion without lifting a racket, succeeding to the title renounced by William Tatem Tilden, II.

Wood's old Roxbury schoolmate and doubles partner, Frank X. Shields, today announced he would not contest the title with Sidney because of an injury to his knee in his semi-final match with Jean Borotra Wednesday and aggravated yesterday by his play in the doubles.

Shields' withdrawal and the play-off of the women's singles title today leaves Wimbledon with only four matches tomorrow, the last semifinals of women's doubles then the finals of that phase of play, and the finals of mixed and men's doubles.

Cilli Aussem defeated her fellow countrywoman, Hilda Krahwinkel, in the women's singles final 6-2, 7-5, to take the title to the fatherland for the first time.

George Lott, Jr., and John Van Ryn advanced to the finals of men's doubles and Lott and Mrs. L. A. Harper to the finals of the mixed doubles.

Lott and Van Ryn, leading American combination and seeded number one in the draw, disposed of G. P. Hughes and Fred Perry, British pair, 6-4, 11-8-6, and will meet Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon, of France, in the finals.

Lott and Mrs. Harper had a walk-over in the mixed doubles, Perry and Miss Mary Healey defaulting while leading by one set and 4-3 in games when Perry injured his ankle as he crashed into the stands after a ball.

The women's doubles may be an all British final, with Mrs. D. C. Shepherd-Baron and Phyllis Mudford already qualified and Betty Nuthall and Mrs. Eileen Bennett Whittingstall playing the French pair of Doris Mestaxas and Joseene Sigart in the first match tomorrow to determine the other finalist.

Miss Nuthall and Mrs. Whittingstall today eliminated the last American pair, Mrs. Harper and Mrs. John Van Ryn, 3-6, 7-5, 6-3.

and creditors of the defunct Des Moines university was effected in open court here today.

General creditors, including 29 former teachers, whose aggregate claims are $85,000 are to receive $20,000 in cash. The Boatman's National bank of St. Louis will receive about $110,000 in settlement of its $204,000 mortgage against the institution. The agreements were based on bank statements showing the present value of the former school's endowment fund is $204,000.

Grounds and buildings will remain under the receivership of John A. Blanchard, Jr.

More than 4,000 deer were bagged in Utah's 29 counties in 1930.

Holiday Sees Stocks Take Steady Jump

Quotations Buoyed by Optimistic Debt Plan News

NEW YORK, July 3 (AP)—The New York security markets did their best to make the Fourth glorious.

Buoyed by expectations of a successful termination to the debt discussions, stocks rallied consistently. The advance was attended by no such enthusiastic demonstrations as marked the first stages of the Hoover plan, but professional and other traders evidently thought the list was entitled to a further rally on the basis of the Paris and Washington dispatches.

U. S. Steel Leads U. S. Steel provided strong leadership, rising to 105 1/2, just a point over its previous recovery top. The final quotation was 105, making the net gain 2 1/2 points. American Telephone, American Tobacco "B," Rock Island and Eastman Kodak rose 3 to 4 1/2 points and a large number of shares gained one to two and more.

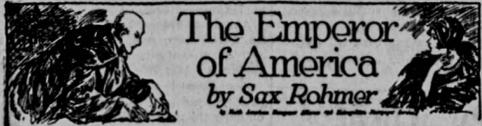

A continued rise in commodity prices was noted by the leading indices. Bradstreet's July 1 index showed a gain of 1.5 per cent over a month previous, the largest advance since October 1, 1927, and the second advance in twenty months. The other occurred last April. Dup's weekly index registered the third consecutive rise.

Holiday Cash Demand The demand for holiday currency throughout the country was estimated at between $60,000,000 and $75,000,000, somewhat smaller than the amount withdrawn in more prosperous years. Money markets showed no effects of the withdrawals and call funds at 1 per cent "outside" were virtually as plentiful as ever.

Foreign exchanges were dull and firm. Far eastern rose with silver and sterling cables advanced slightly.

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments
Commander Drake Roscoe of the United States navy is trying to break up a criminal band known as the Zones, directed by a chief who is called "Head Centre" and who is said to look like Napoleon. With the aid of Dr. Stoppford he makes his investigations. A Zones agent, Madame Czerna, makes the acquaintance of Roscoe and Stoppford and falls in love with the latter. She deserts the Zones, and Stoppford, to insure her safety, takes her to the Steamship Ruritania where he was formerly chief surgeon. Meanwhile, Roscoe has enlisted the aid of Deputy Commissioner Burke of the police department. Headquarters of the Zones are broken up, but are immediately reestablished in another place. Roscoe believes that it is only a matter of time before the gang will be operating again.

Twenty-Second Instalment

The door of a house on an East Side street opened in response to the ringing of the bell. A man entered and the door was closed quickly. There was no light in the lobby. As the car in which he had arrived drove off westward:

"H. Q.," said the new arrival. "Anything to report?"

"No."

The second voice spoke out of the stuffy darkness.

"Stand by," the first directed.

There was a sound of movement. Then the man who had just arrived he had entered and looked about him switched up a light in the room which brightened. He wore evening kit covered by a light overcoat, and a soft black hat. His pale features had a Napoleonic contour. Finding the room empty, he quitted it and descended a staircase into another room, semi-subterranean. He locked the door behind him. Fully half an hour elapsed, however, before a figure wearing a black robe took his seat in a high-backed Spanish chair, ornamented with stamped leather, behind a long, narrow table set before the western wall of the room.

A ghastly yellow mark and rubber gloves of the same smooth substance effectually disguised his identity. One of the flexible yellow hands manipulated a key-board. A man wearing a black half-mask entered through an arched doorway on the right, bowed, and stood still. A further manipulation and a similar figure entered from the left. A third entered behind the first and a fourth behind the second. Then:

"Divisional chiefs," said the musical voice of the mummy-like creature. "Number."

They answered in oddly varied tones:

"A."

"B."

"C."

"D."

"Division B," continued the uncanny president, "you are newly appointed, and your first Divisional duty will be an important one. Tomorrow night, all Divisions will be concentrated upon the Broadway area. It is because of the importance of this operation that you are here in person. The Zones require new capital. Tomorrow night we shall acquire it!"

Dr. Stoppford paced the room restlessly. Drake Roscoe watched him.

"I asked you to come back, Stoppford," he said, almost apologetically, "and to bring Madame Czerna, because I feel that her knowledge of the Zones is invaluable."

"Splendid!" said Stoppford. "But I want to marry her, and you've lugged me back into all this murder piffle. Oh! I'm not grousing, Roscoe. I know the thing's too big for a man to grouch. But you know how I feel about it."

"I know every time," Roscoe replied warmly. "It was fine of you to come. She is safe enough at the moment, but I admit—"

Stoppford finished the sentence for him.

"That her future prospects are pretty bloodsome," said he.

Roscoe nodded, smiling grimly.

"We thought," he went on, "that the New York Zones had been cleaned up. We raided their headquarters, with its mass of secret passages, elevators, laboratories, and so forth. It was only then, Stoppford, that we learned the truth. The Zones are not confined to New York City. There are Zones in every city! We smashed one Head Centre. There are heaven knows how many other Head Centres. And there's a Great Head Centre controlling the lot of 'em! They have been quiet for a while. They are active again."

"So it seems," said Stoppford dryly.

"They have established new headquarters," said Roscoe. "The thing I thought was dead is alive again, and buzzing. The Zones are active. Head Centre is back, the spider in the centre of the web. Meanwhile, look at this!"

He tossed a note upon the table. Stoppford bent over it, read, and then:

"An invitation from the Duchesse de Greuze," he murmured. "To join her in her box at the Roxane Theatre on Sunday for the gala performance in honor of the King of Turkestan. Charming woman! I take it you'll go?"

"I shall go," Roscoe returned. "And I admit she's a charming woman. But—"

"But what?" Stoppford demanded.

"I'm groping in the dark," Roscoe confessed. "To put it bluntly, I don't trust the Duchesse de Greuze. But the Zones have never hitherto attempted open assassination. They have always covered themselves. I don't think I'm in any danger of being shot in a box at the Roxane Theatre. But I have an uneasy notion that there's something afoot regarding the King of Turkestan."

"What do you mean?"

"Well, I mean this: Apart from the fact that his wife carries on her person a small fortune in jewelry, this performance will bring to the theatre other displays scarcely less noteworthy. The ultimate aims of the Zones we don't know, but that they are pirates, we do know. They have to get money. You and I have seen them getting it."

"It occurs to me, also," said Stoppford, "that you're rather anticipatory in things."

"Perhaps I am," Roscoe conceded.

"But," Stoppford went on, "remembering that the Zones are primarily a predatory organization, I can see the danger. But I don't admit that it's any part of your troubles."

"It isn't!" said Roscoe, jumping up excitedly. "I might have overlooked it! But for...," he pointed to the letter of invitation lying upon the table.

"Deeper and deeper!" Stoppford murmured. "Let's tabulate your suspicions. You believe the Duchesse de Greuze—absurd idea—to be associated with the Zones. Don't answer me. Let me purge myself in spoken thought. I can see this possibility. She invites you to a certain entertainment. If there was any funny business contemplated at this entertainment, you're about the last bloke in New York one of the gang would invite. I trust I make myself intelligible?"

"You do," said Roscoe. "But the Zones never do the obvious thing, Stoppford."

"I don't suppose you'll see eye to eye with me in this," said Stoppford, "because you are not in love. But the first point that occurs to me is Madame Czerna. All the time you're talkin'—although I'm tryin' to be with you, and meanin' to be helpful—I'm thinkin' of her."

Roscoe turned to him impulsively.

"Don't be so sure, old man," he said. "Perhaps I do understand. And all you do I appreciate most highly."

"Good!" Stoppford murmured; "that's reasonable. In short, if you think there's goin' to be dirty work at the performance, Madame Czerna is out. Is that a bet?"

"No!" said Roscoe. "I'm sorry. But it isn't!"

The red light on the serpentine pillar glowed. The masked man remained motionless in his chair.

"H. Q.," said a nasal voice. "Report of Divisional Chief D. Plans complete for concentrating all units upon Sector 2 D I tonight. Sector Captain I D 3 detailed for special duty has established touch with other Sector captains. His report is expected at any moment. Everything in order. Report ends."

A moment of silence followed, then:

"Report," directed the musical voice, "of Zone officer covering box office, Roxane theater."

"Report to hand," came a prompt reply. Arrangements not yet fully completed. No addition to list of seat-holders other than those notified earlier this morning. All box parties accounted for except that of Duchesse de Greuze."

"Report of Zone officer covering the Duchesse de Greuze."

"No report to hand."

"Report of Group master covering her hotel."

"To hand. The Duchesse is in her apartment, as last notified. Report ends. Times 3:10."

"Stand by for a General Emergency Order," the commanding voice directed. "Disconnect. Connect the chief chemist."

The red light went out, but almost immediately a blue one sprang into life beside the spot where it had been, and:

"Laboratory," someone announced.

"Report to me here, personally, at once."

"I disapprove entirely," said Stoppford. His mark of facetiousness was discarded; he was grimly earnest. "Madame Czerna and I came back to New York at her request. She's ready to help—up to a point—"

"Fleese!" Madame Czerna laid her hand upon the speaker's arm. "I could never be happy," she went on, "and no more could you, if I left anything not done that I could do to defeat these murderers."

Drake Roscoe nodded. "Let's get to work."

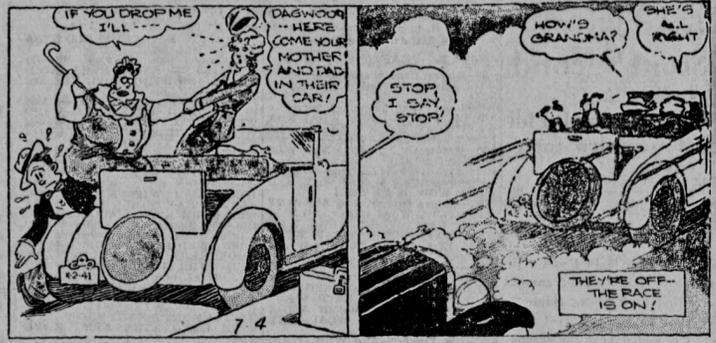

"Here's the box-office plan of the Roxane theater." He spread it out on the table. "Red crosses indicate unknown seat-holders. The others correspond to the list which I have here. As I understand, Madame Czerna, that you know some 20 odd members of the Zones by sight. I suggest that you occupy orchestra stall 14 in Row F. You will be in the midst of a perfect squadron of red crosses!"

All three bent over the plan.

"Here is the box of the Duchesse de Greuze," Roscoe went on, "where I shall be—in full view of your seat. Now—he took her hand—"you are

A New Yorker at Large

By MARK BARRON
NEW YORK — Things I hate about New York:
Restaurants which want to be so swanky that they have menus printed only in French. And nine times out of ten such places really serve Italian dishes.
The arrogance of producers whose names are carved above their theaters on removable signs.
The rats and smoke on Rikers Island, where New York dumps all its garbage.
The law which forbids couples to stroll through Central park after midnight. Also, the one which forbids you to carry a camera there.
The stench of rotten fruit along the waterfront at dawn.
ANYWAY, BLONDS DO
Platinum blonds who grow faster than mushrooms (or, do mushrooms grow very fast?).
Gloomy dining rooms in fading hotels which dot the Murray Hill section.
Incredible numbers of poodle dogs along West Forty-seventh street.
Organized efforts on the part of tradesmen to make out-of-towners think Greenwich Village still is the haunt of Bohemians.
Stage Johns who litter the walls of their offices with pictures of actresses whom they don't know. The lower order of casting agents are especially given to this practice.
Publicity seekers who always are organizing charities for the poor, and very little of their contributions ever arrive at their intended destinations.

wearing a very beautiful ring...
"Thanks," said Stoppford.
"I suggest as you know Morse..."
Madame Czerna caught his idea.
"Yes! I know it, Morse. It belongs to what I had hoped to forget. But I understand, I am to signal to you which of the people I can see belonging to the Zones? How will you know which I mean?"
"Quite," Stoppford murmured.
"That's a snag,"
"No snag," Roscoe assured him. "She will simply flash: 'Orchestra 7, Row D' and I shall know she means that the occupant of this seat is a member of the Zones. I have had the plan of the Roxane theater for the last three days. Give me the box-office number of any seat in the house and I will undertake to walk to it, direct!"
"Intellect!" Stoppford murmured. "But let me get down to a few facts. Madame goes to the Roxane tonight in a white wig an' spectacles. The Zones aren't interested in me. So I'm safe enough. But you are goin' to sit in an open box to be shot at?"
"Not exactly," said Roscoe. "You will find that it'll be a hard job to shoot me without shooting the Duchesse! She's my hostess, Stoppford, and my shield."
He opened a table drawer and took out a black half mask.
"Very popular with the Zones!" said he. "And last but not least—"
He threw on the table a glittering ornament: a large diamond D on an onyx shield.
"The badge of a Divisional Zone chief!" he said. "The body of the man who gave it to me hasn't been recovered yet. And no one knows I have it!"
A bell rang.
"Led Regan!" Roscoe exclaimed. "Let him in, Stoppford."

Behind the Scenes in Hollywood

By HARRISON CARROLL

PEGGY SHANNON CLICKS
Reports from the preview sleuths, who saw "The Secret Call" are that Paramount made no mistake when they put faith in Peggy Shannon's ability, and that she is on the way to stardom. Current with this is the announcement that she will be featured in an all-feminine cast in a prison story, "Ladies of the Big House." The story was bought from Ernest Booth, a life-terminer.

BOLES' NEW ASSIGNMENT
As soon as John Boles is able to resume work, he is to be featured in Fanny Hurst's "Back Street," with Roe Hobar playing opposite. Boles developed septic poisoning and has had to be replaced in the "Strictly Dishonorable" cast Paul Lukas, borrowed from Paramount, has been substituted.

The Universal player is taking a three weeks' rest away from Hollywood before starting the Fanny Hurst story.

John Stahl, who is directing "Strictly Dishonorable," will make "Back Street."

NOT SO DUMB
A colored porter was hired by Paramount to play a part and give technical direction in a Pullman scene in Nancy Carroll's film.

After the take Director Monta Bell asked: "Well, how was that?"
"There was just one little thing wrong," objected the colored man.
"What was that?"
"Nobody remembered the porter, sir."

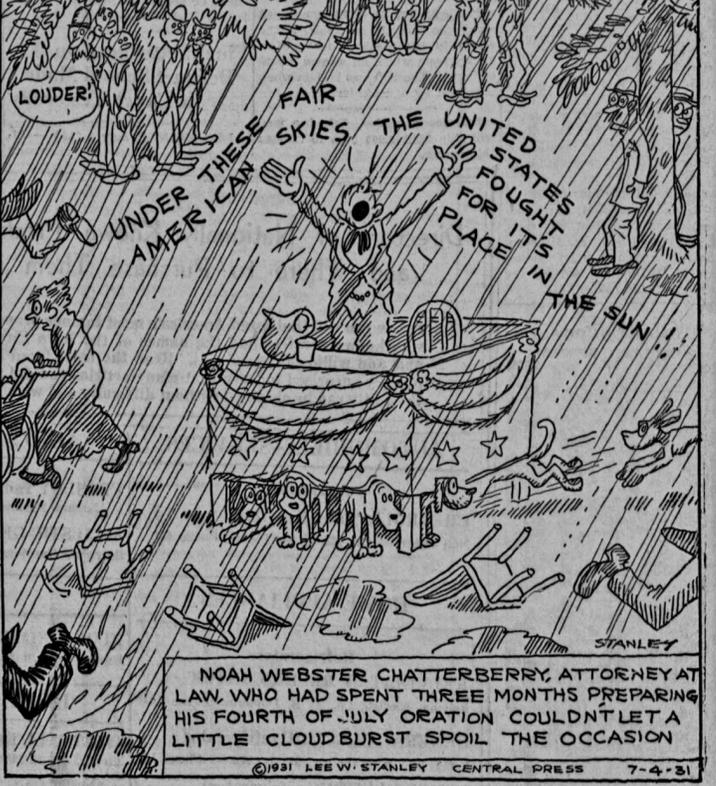

LOCAL BOY MAKES GOOD
The chance of a lifetime has come to Robert Young. He has been given his first major assignment in a motion picture to play the male lead in "Boarding School." His playing of a small part in "Lullaby" won him the role.

Young, although born in Seattle, is more or less a local boy, as he attended high school here and is a product of the Pasadena Community Players.

He is to play opposite Madge Evans, who has one of the three important girl roles in the film. Anita Page and Dorothy Jordan play the other two parts.
