Walker, Man of Numerous Careers, Dies

Editorship of Magazine, Newspapers Part of Life's Work

NEW YORK, July 7 (AP)—John Brisbane Walker, 84, whose avid life led him over many trails, from soldiering in China to pioneering in the new west, died today at his Brooklyn home.

His business interests at the height of his activities a score of years ago included control of steam automobile patents, editorship of Cosmopolitan magazine, rancher, educational lecturer, road builder, humanitarian, politician and farmer.

Served in Chinese Army Walker was born in the Monongahela river valley in Pennsylvania. Educated at Georgetown college, Washington and West Point, he went to the Orient and for two years served in the Chinese army. After that he went in the iron manufacturing business in the Kanawha valley, West Virginia. Three years later, when he thought he had won a fortune of $500,000. The great panic left him penniless.

Walker then turned to journalism. His first efforts were for the Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette, a series of articles on business topics. He later was managing editor of the Pittsburgh Telegraph and editor of the Washington Daily Chronicle.

Sold Magazine to Hearst He had $350,000 for Cosmopolitan magazine, then in need of new blood, and quickly jumped its circulation from 16,000 to 151,000 with William Dean Howells as his literary adviser. He later sold it to William Randolph Hearst.

Resume T. B. Testing in 11 Iowa Counties DES MOINES, July 7 (AP)—Receipt of a United States supreme court mandate in the Mitchell county case tonight had paved the way toward the resumption of bovine tuberculosis testing in 11 Iowa counties.

The mandate, which dismissed the appeal of M. J. Loftus and 120 other Mitchell county farmers to restrain state officers from conducting the tests, was received by Clark B. W. Garrett of the state supreme court.

Stay orders had been issued by the state court to 11 counties pending a decision in the Mitchell county case and officials today considered that those automatically had been dissolved.

The counties involved included Tama, Chickasaw, Jefferson, Des Moines, Grundy, Henry, Bremer, Floyd, Delaware, Fayette, and Black Hawk.

An appeal was taken to the United States court from the Iowa supreme court's decision holding the test law constitutional. The state court reversed the decision of the Mitchell county court in granting an injunction.

Tea Time Habit Causes Laborite Defeat in London

LONDON, July 7 (AP)—Quiet cups of tea brought the labor government to defeat this afternoon.

It was only a defeat in a standing committee of the house of commons, and the government will not resign over it. But it left everybody laughing.

The government's bill for creation of consumers' councils was under consideration. The sacred tea hour approached. A number of laborites, believing all was well, slipped downstairs to the tea room. But they were scarcely away when amused conservatives—who, although members of the committee, had been waiting in the corridor outside—entered the committee room.

A vote was called on whether a certain clause should stand as part of the bill, and the government found itself in a minority of five. Returning from their tea, the laborites were chagrined to find another conservative ruse had succeeded.

New Men on Highway Unit Begin Duties

AMES, July 7 (AP)—The new members of the Iowa highway commission today became officially connected with that body by taking part in the first contract letting of the new fiscal year. Their appointments became effective July 1.

Thomas A. Way of Des Moines, campaign manager for Governor Dan Turner last year and a new appointee, was named chairman of the commission succeeding Clifford L. Niles of Anamosa.

Two other new members, W. D. Archie of Sigourney and L. T. Quirk of Wall Lake, also sat for the commission for the first time.

The commission heard the request of former Governor W. L. Harding for the shift of primary 9 in Osceola county to its old location. The county had voted bonds to improve the old location and the commission subsequently changed the route. The Iowa supreme court issued an injunction restraining the issuance of the bonds on the ground that they had been voted to improve the road along the old location.

Rev. Holler Opens Annual Conference of Knights Templars

SPRIT LAKE, July 7 (AP)—The Rev. E. W. F. Holler of Brooklyn, Ia., opened sessions of the 68th annual Knight Templar convocation at Templar park on Spirit Lake today. He is the grand commander of the Grand Commandery of Iowa.

Registration had reached nearly 500 when the annual gathering of Iowa Knights Templar was informally convened with devotional Sunday evening, in charge of the grand prelate, the Rev. H. Sears Thomson of Ottumwa. Sessions will be conducted through Friday, when new officers will be installed. There also will be meetings of the Past Grand Commanders association and the Red Cross of Constantine. An officers' reception is planned tonight.

Annual Shoot Planned DES MOINES (AP)—The eighth annual state shoot of the Iowa Vigilantes will be held at the Ft. Des Moines army post July 20 and 21, Ivan O. Hasbrouck, president of the Iowa Bankers association, announced.

Recapture Two Boy Bandits DES MOINES (AP)—Donald Lamme, 17, was recaptured by police a few hours after he and Harry W. Moore 17, had saved their way out of the city jail. They were held on an auto theft charge. Police are still searching for Moore.

Airmen Fete World Flyers in New York

Pioneer Flyers Laud Post, Gatty on Daring Feat

NEW YORK, July 7 (AP)—Willey Post and Harold Gatty were honored tonight by their own kind, the leaders of American aviation and those who blazed earlier air trails across treacherous seas and distant lands.

They were guests at a dinner given in recognition of their round-the-world flight, by the aeronautical chamber of commerce of America at the Hotel Astor.

Test Beverages "Did you take advantage of being away from the dry laws while you were gone?" Colonel Peter J. Brady, toastmaster, asked. "Not much," said Post with a smile. "I just had one glass of wine. Gatty did all the beer drinking for us because I don't like it."

Then there was a long pause and the embarrassed pilot, who still seems to be perplexed by the honors being showered upon him, finally said: "Can't Let Partner Beat Me" "I don't seem to be getting along very well, but I can't let that partner of mine beat me at anything, even speech making. The only thing else I want to say is that the biggest thrill of everything was riding down Broadway with one of the greatest men in America, Mayor 'Jimmy' Walker."

Twin bronze plaques emblazoned with the words "Wings around the world" were presented to the flyers by Charles L. Lawrence, president of the chamber.

Only two other aviators have been thus honored by the association, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh and Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd.

Soviet Russia Aims for Old Upper Class

MOSCOW, July 7 (AP)—Through Joseph Stalin, soviet Russia has set out to win over the remaining members of the old intelligentsia, at least that part of the former upper class, as composed of specialists or technicians in business and industry.

For the first time since the revolution these representatives of a class which furnished many anti-pathetic elements to the government not only have been given a definite status in the soviet state but have been invited by Stalin himself to take a larger part in socialistic development.

He has decreed reversal of the iron-fisted policy which liquidated the opposing intelligentsia in favor of a course designed to show more consideration.

Under the new policy, neutrals are not only encouraged to assume places in the socialistic scheme and to develop themselves alongside the masses, but the government is making an effort to attract those who might still be wavering between sympathy and hostility.

Eyes of the world are focused on Secretary of State, Henry L. Stimson, as he arrives in Europe on a "vacation" to be spent in conferences with premiers. He is shown (left) at his desk, and at upper right as Europe's diplomats will see him in formal meetings. But he can lighten serious discussions with a smile, as the picture at lower right shows.

Henry L. Stimson, "Tourist With No Brass Bands," Lands in Naples for European Visits

NAPLES, July 7 (AP)—Henry L. Stimson, American secretary of state who has elected the role of "tourist with no brass bands," landed today to begin his circuit of European capitals for discussions of disarmament and economic reconstruction.

The secretary forgot matters of state for a while after his vessel docked and, like any proper tourist, went with Mrs. Stimson to Pompeii, Vesuvius and Amalfi. His talks with Premier Mussolini and Foreign Minister Dino Grandi have been arranged for Thursday.

"Stimson, Mussolini Harmonized" The foreign minister already has said that Mr. Stimson and Mussolini have much the same views on the problems they will discuss, and so there may be no exhaustive conversations.

The announcement of the Franco-American accord in Paris provided an auspicious setting for the arrival of the secretary of state. He expressed much pleasure and great hope of good results, but emphasized that he would not comment publicly on anything political.

He insisted, in fact, that there was no political mission tied up in his "tourist tour," but at Palermo yesterday he said he expected to make observations and form conclusions during his visits to Rome, Paris, Berlin and London.

Praises Bay of Naples An amusing incident marked his arrival. To newspapermen who met him aboard the Conte Grande he spoke of his great joy in reaching Italy, praised the bay of Naples and referred to Signor Grandi as "your minister of foreign affairs."

His hearers reminded him he was addressing his own fellow-countrymen. Thereupon he looked about for Italian reporters and continued his talk.

Something Wrong, Shouts "Fire!" to Watch Red Wagons

WASHINGTON, July 7 (AP)—William Davis Webb admits something was wrong with him, but he hasn't decided just what.

First he said it was loneliness; then he said he was mad because they wouldn't let him be a fireman; later he explained it might have been because he just wanted to see the red wagons run.

As he sat in jail today he agreed, though, that the experience might teach him a lesson and he would think twice the next time before he turns in 10 false fire alarms in two hours.

Spencer Plans New Buildings

$1,000,000 Recovered From Clay County Bank Vaults

SPENCER, July 7 (AP)—More than a million dollars in cash and securities were recovered today from the vaults of the Clay county National bank, which was destroyed in the $2,000,000 fire here June 27.

Guards Over Vault While a cordon of heavily armed guards stood ready to ward off possible robbery attempts, the officials opened the fire blackened vaults and found the cash and papers undamaged by the blaze.

Meanwhile Spencer continued to clear away the debris which followed the disastrous fire, and commenced rebuilding the four blocks of structures that were destroyed, temporary buildings have been erected on Fourth street.

Announce Building Plans A barber shop has been built, and plans for two permanent theater buildings were announced by owners of structures that were destroyed. These buildings will cost about $142,000.

In addition plans have been made for a $150,000 structure to house four or five stores and possibly the Clay County National bank. Other buildings planned include a $25,000 F. W. Woolworth building, a three-story structure by J. A. Redfield, two auto supply buildings, a clothing store, a cleaners establishment and a drug store.

Bookkeeping Error Throws 11 Towns Into Financial Mess

DES MOINES, July 7 (AP)—Eleven Jasper county towns tonight were confronted with a tangled financial situation said to have been created by a bookkeeping error in the county treasurer's office.

Chief Clerk J. V. Lemley of the state accounting department said today that the annual report of the Newton county treasurer showed eight towns have received more than their share of tax money and three had received less than was due them.

Expect Disarmament Boost With Debt Recess; Germany Pledges Economy in Budget

President, Aides, Make Geneva Conference Next Objective

WASHINGTON, July 7 (AP)—A definite advance in world disarmament was expected tonight by the administration as one important consequence of the war debt moratorium.

With the holiday in inter-governmental payments definitely assured and steps already taken to adjust remaining details, President Hoover and his advisors made the forthcoming general disarmament conference at Geneva their next diplomatic objective.

Links Costs With Depression Three times in as many months, the chief executive has linked the increasing costs of armies, navies and fortifications directly with the world's economic burdens.

Acting Secretary Castle of the state department, in a chronological resume of events leading to the president's proposal, disclosed today that the chief executive's first move toward the moratorium was made exactly one week after a public speech in which he linked world economic rehabilitation with the success of the coming disarmament conference.

Addressing the international chamber of commerce, the president then said: "Arms Cut of High Importance" "... We must recognize that reduction of this gigantic waste of competition of military establishments is in the ultimate of an importance transcendent over all other forms of economic effort."

Again, in proposing the moratorium, the president pointed to the contribution of "competitive armaments" to the world wide depression. While asserting his debt plan had "no bearing on the conference for limitation of land armaments," he expressed the hope it would contribute to the good will "necessary in the solution of this major question."

One Cause of Depression Yesterday, telling of the agreement of the major powers on the debt holiday, he again touched on the arms question, this time saying: "I need not repeat that one of these causes (of depression) is the burdens imposed and the fears aroused by competitive armament."

The disarmament conference will be held at Geneva in February under the auspices of the league of nations. America will participate fully and officially.

Woodcock Advocates Letting Conscience be Liquor Users Guide

WASHINGTON, July 7 (AP)—A national prohibition policy of leaving each private violator of the dry laws "to his own conscience and the forces of education" was enunciated tonight by Prohibition Director Woodcock.

Relieved Nation Happy Over Act; Praises Herbert Hoover

President, Aides, Make Geneva Conference Next Objective

BERLIN, July 7 (AP)—The German government today pledged its word that the money made available by the Hoover war debt plan will be used solely for the purpose of bringing about consolidation of the nation's finances.

"Whatever alleviation may come to the credit and money market must redound to the benefit of Germany's business and economy," the government said in an official proclamation.

The proclamation paid warm tribute to President Hoover and bore witness to the feeling of "spiritual relief and hope for improvement in the nation's economic life" induced by the certainty of a year's reparations holiday.

The nation was warned in the government statement that it must be unremitting in its efforts to economize. No increase in the expenditures of any government department will be tolerated, it said.

President Paul Von Hindenburg sent a message to President Hoover telling of the gratitude of the German people and of their hope for a new era of peaceful and trustful cooperation.

Experts' Committee Will Meet in London

PARIS, July 7 (AP)—The Franco-American agreement for economic relief to Germany reached its second stage tonight with the announcement that the committee of treasury experts foreseen by the agreement will meet next week in London.

At the same time the part of the United States in sponsoring a moratorium was virtually ended. Secretary of the Treasury Mellon left Paris for a two weeks' holiday on the Riviera to rest after the 12 days and nights of arduous negotiations.

The quick action in deciding on the experts' meeting made a good impression here. The French government renounced its wish to have the conference at Paris in deference to the invitation of the British government that it be held in London.

The experts' committee will examine the three questions left tentative by the Franco-American accord. These are the question of a French guarantee to the world bank for international settlements in case of a Young plan moratorium, the question of payments in kind and that of common action by central banks for the help of other central European countries.

Justice Court Rules Possession of Near Beer Not Illegal Act

DES MOINES, July 7 (AP)—Possession by the Charles Hewitt and Sons company of 1,271 cases of near beer does not constitute possession of intoxicating liquor, a justice court decided here today.

Peter J. F. Weber, chemist for the Hewitt company, testified that the alcoholic content of the near beer was four-tenths of one per cent—no more than that of bread, malted milk, buttermilk or gingerale.

After the jury's verdict was returned, Justice J. H. Ward said he would order the beer seized June 19, returned from the court house to the Hewitt warehouse.

John Hammond, dry crusader, led the fight against the Hewitt company. Last week a similar verdict was returned in Hammond's case against another beverage company.

The mayhem charge was lodged by the sister, Mrs. Margaret Marvis. The sister said the biting followed her efforts to have McElrane leave her home.

New Courses in Religion to Open in Fall

Three new correspondence courses will be given in the school of religion beginning in September. A basic course "in the study of the Bible, a study of the apocrypha and pseudographs, and a course in the life and teachings of Jesus will be offered.

The first course will be outlined for the benefit of those who are to teach biblical literature and religion in the high schools and colleges. Iowa high schools, among those of several other states, now offer biblical literature as an elective in their courses of study. This basic course is a study of the books of the old and new testaments with regard to their origin, contents, authority, and influence.

The second course will take up a study of the lost books of the Bible. A large amount of literature which influenced new testament writers and is quoted there grew up between the old and new testaments. These are the books that Jesus and the apostle Paul studied.

A third course, the life and teachings of Jesus, will include a study of the teachings of Jesus and the various ways they have been applied through history. Special attention will be given to the application of Jesus' teaching to the problems of modern life.

These courses have been worked out in response to an increasing number of inquiries coming to the school from ministers, teachers in high schools and colleges, and students working for degrees, asking for such courses.

Authorities Puzzled With Disappearance of Missouri Farmer

FALLS CITY, Nebr., July 7 (AP)—Taking up the search for George Phillips, 35, Napier, Mo., farmer, after his car was found near the Missouri river at Rulo, Richardson county authorities tonight were considering dragging the river unless some trace of the man was found.

Relatives who identified his car said Phillips had not been seen since Friday when he started for Mound City, Mo., for tractor repairs. He cashed a check for $5 before leaving and was in good spirits.

Phillips when last seen was dressed in blue overalls, a faded blue shirt and tan work shoes. He is about six feet tall and weighs about 155 pounds.

Student Help Reaches New High Figure

1,853 Job Placements for College Year Break Record

Self support labors of University of Iowa students were worth a total of $180,000 to their employers, with the number of job placements the highest in the history of the institution.

This is revealed by the report of Arthur Lentz, manager of the student employment service, covering the period from September to June.

Old Record 1,405

Of the 1,824 opportunities for work offered, 1,853 placements were made. The previous record, set in 1929-30, was 1,405 placements, Lentz reported.

Some sort of work was done by 1,379 of the 3,779 men registered in the university. Three hundred and thirty-two of them held down steady jobs and the other 1,047 were listed as temporary employees.

211 Women Employed

Among women, 211 individuals procured steady jobs and 263 were in the temporary class. Since there were 2,290 women in the university, the figures shown that almost one-fourth of them were engaged in outside work.

Applications for work next fall now are being received by the service and indications are that more students than ever before will seek employment to defray part or all of their university expenses.

Ames Man Visits Tester

L. W. Wood of the department of geology of the Iowa state highway commission, Ames, was visiting here yesterday with Prof. Allen C. Tester.

College of Law Shows Growth

Registration statistics for the college of law show that this year marks the largest summer session attendance in the history of the college. With more than 90 students enrolled for the first semester, it is expected that the additional enrollment of the second term will bring the total to 100.

Plan Picnic for Group

Baseball will feature the last picnic planned for this term of the summer session by members of the department of physical education for women. Staff members and students in the department will meet for the occasion at the city park tomorrow at 5:30 p. m.

Charles U. Becker, candidate for governor of Missouri, used to wear a violet-colored derby.

Lorado Taft to Lecture on Modeling, "Dream Museum"

Lorado Taft, sculptor, will give two lectures in the main lounge of Iowa Union on July 13. At 4 p. m. he will talk on "Clay modeling," and at 8 p. m. he will present his "Dream museum." Both will be illustrated lectures.

Mr. Taft has been assigned on many commissions. One of the most recent was the decoration of the grounds and the capitol building in Baton Rouge, La. He modeled "The Spirit of Adventure," and "The Spirit of Patriotism," to flank the main portals of the capitol building and a fountain typifying the great rivers, Mississippi and Missouri, and their tributaries.

"Crusade" Recent Work

Another recent work is "The Crusade," to be carved in black granite and destined to be the monument of the late Victor Lawson, former editor of the Chicago Daily News. He finished work on the massive figure, a crusader with shield and sword in almost Egyptian simplicity, in November, 1930.

At the present time in his studio on the Midway in Chicago he is working on "The Fountain of Creation," to be left as a pendant to the colossal "Fountain of Time" which stands on the University of Chicago campus.

Bust Modeled by Student

A bust of Mr. Taft now in Iowa Union was sculptured by Alice Little Seims, a graduate of the University of Iowa. Miss Seims studied with him after graduating from the university.

The presentation of his "Dream museum" will consist of famous works in the world that he has seen and come in contact with during his career of work and travel in various countries.

Madison Speaks Today

As second guest speaker in the special social service course, Charles I. Madison, secretary of the public welfare bureau of Des Moines, will present his talk, "The growth and future of community chest movements" to students of social administration in Room 217, university hall, at 8 o'clock this morning. Mr. Madison will also speak at a luncheon in Iowa Union this noon.

Irwin Will Lecture in Psychology Talk

A change in the program of public lectures in psychology has been necessitated by the withdrawal of Herbert H. Jasper, who was to lecture on "Right and left handedness" Friday at 7 p. m. in the chemistry auditorium.

Orvis C. Irwin, research associate in the departments of psychology and child welfare, will speak on "Some aspects of infant behavior," which will take the place of Mr. Jasper's lecture. Mr. Irwin will present findings of the more important experimental studies in infant reactions.

Castle, Trees Form Setting of Richard II

A castle set between two large trees to form a natural proscenium will be the outdoor setting for the Shakespearean play "Richard II" to be presented as the final production of the university theater for the first summer session. E. Dean Payne, visiting director, is playing the role of Richard II as well as directing the play.

The castle, with its high turrets, extending wings on each side, and two sectioned gate, will be constructed on the lawn next to Iowa Union, where the play will be presented on the evenings of July 14 and 15.

Action will take place on the ground before the castle, on a stage two feet high, within the gates, and on a bridge between the turrets. There will be no actual change in scenery, variety being given by change of light to four different areas within the three levels. The set is to be 55 feet wide and 22 feet high.

New equipment is being purchased for the production among which are nine 1,000 watt spotlights and eight 500 watt floods. Samuel Selden, visiting technical director of the university theater, is designing the set. Lighting of the set is under the direction of Hunton D. Sellman of the speech department.

A son with two front teeth was born to Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Benney of Lewisburg, Ky.

Riley's Class Gives Drama on Play Hour

A. Dale Riley's class in radio broadcasting will continue its weekly presentation of the theater hour program tonight at 8 o'clock over station WWSU with a cutting from the four act drama "The Frame Up" by Clem B. Parker.

This play enjoyed two successful seasons of road show production in the United States, and a three months' run in the Queens theater, London.

Mrs. Floy Mann Schermerhorn, whom audiences will remember for her work in one of last year's university plays, "The Barong," and for her portrayals in numerous radio dramas during the last month, played the title role in a road show for a full season and will read the part in the radio production tonight.

The cast for the production follows: Tom Shanley, Don Lamond; J. Burton Downs, A. Dale Riley; Gerald Bostwick, Don McLaughlin; Mary, Mrs. Floy Mann Schermerhorn; Aida Downs, Mrs. Eugene Fife; Pedro, Milo Green.

Dill Describes Trip to Billy Goat Pass

Describing a trip by pack train into the Rocky mountains, made in search of specimens of mountain goats, Homer Dill director of the university museum, told of an expedition to Billy Goat pass in the Cascades at the chemistry auditorium last night.

He told of the immense fir forests, the wild life of the region, and the difficulties of living in a forest camp where successive days brought fair weather and snow.

Commerce Group Plans Picnic

PI Omega Pi, commerce organization, is planning the third of a series of picnics for Friday. The group plans to go to the Palisades where they will eat dinner.

A $20,000 school building at Strong, Ark., has been donated as a community building because of lack of funds to operate it as a school.

Post's and Gatty's Flight Brings Other Fast Globe Girdlers to Mind

U.S. ARMY 'ROUND WORLD FLIERS

NEW YORK, July 7 — Now that Post and Gatty are safely back among us after completing a circuit of the earth in the undreamed of time of 8 days 15 hours, during which they put such places as Novosibirsk, Irkutsk, Blagovestehensk and Kharborovsk—which the average person can't even pronounce—on the map, we may look forward to many attempts to lower their great record.

There are always enterprising people with an abounding faith in their ability to go one better than the other fellow and records are their meat.

Naturally the question arises: Who started all this 'round the world competition? For the answer we must go back some 400 years when Ferdinand Magellan caused the skeptics of the period to make loud queries as to his sanity by setting sail from Seville, Spain, with the intention of circumnavigating the globe. Magellan's ship did complete the circuit, in 1,083 days, but the gallant rover never lived to see the end of the adventure. He was killed in the Philippines enroute.

The next man to have his sanity questioned on the 'round-the-world score was Jules Verne, who had his character, Phineas Fogg, make a fictitious circuit of the earth in 80 days. But, even a fictitious record wasn't allowed to stand and so we find Nellie Bly, an adventurous newspaper woman, attacking and beating Fogg's record by completing a trip round the world in 72 days, 6 hours and 11 minutes.

With the advent of the airplane, speed records in all fields fell thick and fast. Small wonder then that we find the United States army flyers setting a new record for girdling the globe in 1924. The men who took part in the great venture are above left to right: Lt. C. D. Schultze, Lt. E. H. Nelson, Lt. L. P. Arnold, Lt. Leigh Wade, Captain Lowell Smith, and Lt. John Harding, Jr.

The army flight of planes flew the big circle in 14 days, 15 hours actual flying time, but it took 175 days to get in that two weeks of flying.

Then along came John H. Mears who, with the late Captain C. B. D. Collyer, made the round trip by plane and ship in 23 days, 15 hours and 21 minutes. That was in 1928.

The following year the Graf Zeppelin, commanded by Dr. Hugo Eckener, broke all records by flying from Lakehurst, N. J., around the world and back to the starting point in 21 days, 7 hours and 34 minutes, total elapsed time. Of course the actual flying time was a great deal less than that.

That record was considered almost unbeatable and when Post and Gatty announced their intention of surpassing it there was no lack of cold water throwers. Now the world knows how they made good, but when some ambitious flyer gaily sets out to emulate their feat in half their time, the world will again turn skeptical and go Missouri.

It is an astonishing fact that we regard as foolhardy any attempt to do something that has never been done before; then when the attempt succeeds we roll our eyes in wonder and murmur "marvelous." And it will be just like that when some Post or Gatty knocks the world for a loop by returning from the moon with the fingerprints of the man therein to dispell our skepticism.

Air Congestion Coming?

THE newspaper that so far forgets itself in these stirring times as to appear surprised at all attention to new developments in science is in danger of being stamped as out of date before it can go to press with its comment.

Included in the thousand and one ways of ending the business depression is the proposal that everybody be relieved of the necessity of paying his bills in order that he may use the money in buying a motor car, or motor ears if he owes enough to pay for more than one.

Some men will go about and brag they are self made men when they ought to apologize. Famed "Jersey justice," supposed holder of speed records in the courts, is in serious danger of being outdone by the also famed Cook county.

There is no such thing as an honest gambler, said "Dr." Thomas Gilchrist, two years ago when he "quit the racket" to show up all the crookedness of the game.

Spain's new proposed constitution has it all over the best monarchical government in the world as the Spaniards will soon find out. Besides granting equal suffrage and sex equality in matrimonial cases, it provides six year terms for the president.

Johnson County Cattle Safe ANNOUNCEMENT by the department of agriculture that Johnson county has been placed on the bovine tuberculosis eradication accredited list should give the entire county a feeling of satisfaction.

the dilemma. The church and church publications will get nowhere by making sensational attacks upon the supposed tsar of the motion picture industry. Rather they might get behind and push.

Both have the same end in view; if they can get together on the proper means they will accomplish their end, but not before.

A Blow to the Hometowners

LONDON, according to latest census returns, retains its prominence as the world's largest city, thereby bringing disappointment to several million loyal New Yorkers.

That spirit of fidelity to the home town, so overworked on vacations and visitors, is thereby handed a setback. The inhabitants of America's largest city must now resort to a new gag.

Rather than a feeling of disappointment, however, New York city's 6,981,917 should be happy that there are not several million more of them. They should forget their great American complex of being "the best" or "the greatest" or doing "the most."

A Washington Bystander

By KIRK SIMPSON

WASHINGTON-About the time General MacArthur as army chief of staff was announcing new plans for mounting most of Uncle Sam's once washing cavalrymen on gas-engine chargers, the editor of the Arkansas Gazette of Little Rock, which boasts that it is "oldest newspaper west of the Mississippi," began looking over old files.

The Gazette has such a collection that "One Hundred Years Ago" is the caption it uses to top off its column of republications.

A MOTORIZATION PARALLEL

And the editor found an army transportation parallel to match with the news about gasoline cavalry. It was the proposal of the remount and Indian subsistence office at Little Rock for purchase of "sixty pair (or yoke) of oxen, between the ages of five and nine years, to be in good order, well broken to work and no ox to weigh less than 600 pounds."

"I thought somebody at the war department might be interested in this advertisement concerning the 'motorizing' of the army a hundred years ago," the editor wrote Secretary Hurley in forwarding the clipping. It tickled the secretary, who promptly forwarded it to General MacArthur for comment.

EXPLANATION OF YES-TERDAY'S CARTOON

A piece of flying steel removed an eye cataract: Robert F. Lanham of Bessemer, Ala., who had been practically blind in one eye for many years, was recently employed as a mechanic in the auto repair shop of Leon Mulkey, 341 Monroe avenue, Memphis, Tenn., and in the course of his work had a slight accident in which his eye was hit by a flying bit of steel. The steel shaving miraculously removed the obstruction over his eyeball, causing him to regain his sight completely after a period of a few days.

William Beckford wrote a book at a single sitting: William Beckford (1759-1844) wrote "The History of the Caliph Vathek," a bolteristic masterpiece, without a stop for food or sleep within 3 days and 2 nights. Beckford, who was an English eccentric of colossal wealth, wrote "Vathek" in the French language. In 1781, it was subsequently translated into English, and is described as a volume of Oriental fiction which has no equal in European literature in its power to impress the imagination.

Tomorrow: "The cat that never purred."

Last Summer Trip of First Term Will Include Amana Visit

The morning's tour will include visits to the woolen mills, the community store, and the village school at Amana, and a 10 mile tour through other villages of the Amana group. Luncheon will be had at South Amana, after which the excursionists will visit the village bake shop, the community kitchen, and the church in South Amana, returning to Iowa City by 3:30 p.m.

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments
Commander Drake Roscoe of the United States navy is trying to break up a criminal band known as the Zones, directed by a chief who is called "Head Centre" and who is said to look like Napoleon. With the aid of Dr. Stopford, Roscoe makes his investigations. Deputy Commissioner Burke of the police department locates the headquarters of the Zones, but the criminals have been warned and have escaped. New headquarters are immediately set up. After a daring raid which nets them millions, the Zones operatives turn to politics. Roscoe has fragmentary information regarding their plans. He takes John Wilberforce Wright, against whom their activities are at present directed, and Peter Champion and Page Sutton, two wealthy men who have also been attacked, to Champion's yacht. Burke and Ned Regan, a private detective, are also on board. Roscoe feels that there is no safety on land, but that the sea offers a refuge.

Twenty-Fourth Instalment
"It's interesting," said John Wilberforce Wright, and his face was lit up by his famous smile. "But I'm still mystified. Seems to me, 'Champion'—turning to his host—" that this pleasure cruise is a frame-up."
The party assembled in the saloon of Peter Champion's yacht, White Hawk, awaited the host's reply. Peter Champion looked around the table.
"Judge for yourself," said he. "Before a month you're liable to be governor. Page Sutton, here, and I, aim to make sure you are. There's Deputy Commissioner Burke lacing you and Ned Regan on your left. Without wishing to be rude to the company on board, I may add that Commander Drake Roscoe isn't here for his health."

A sense of tension made itself felt. Dr. Stopford studied the face of Peter Champion, Junior. In spite of his youth, this was the face of one who had suffered.
"My son," Champion added, "can tell you something about the Zones."
"Ah!" said Wright. "I thought so. This short cruise was a frame-up?"
"So far as you're concerned," Burke broke in: "Sure! There was a plot back there, sir, to kidnap you on the eve of the election!"
"To kidnap me!"
"Just that."

The famous politician looked around amazedly.
"With what object?" he asked. "I can't imagine... unless..."
"If you're thinking," said Burke, "of Bronson, I haven't a scrap of evidence at Headquarters to justify such a monstrous suspicion."
"But there's nobody else my disappearance would benefit," Wright persisted. "It's common knowledge that I'm known as 'Number One' and he as 'Number Two'! Unless there's a great block of dark votes somewhere, one of us will surely be governor. We are in no sense friends, and never have been. But—"

"The idea is preposterous," Drake Roscoe burst in. "A man with Bronson's record couldn't possibly be in league with the Zones."
"They've just raised four million dollars," Ned Regan growled, "in the biggest hold-up this country ever knew. What are they going to do with it?"
"A member of the firm was concerned in the raid on Zone Headquarters, if I remember rightly," Stopford murmured.

"Bronson Brothers' office," said Burke, replacing his cigar, "adjoined. Bronsons were cleared at the inquiry."
"Funny, all the same," Regan growled. "With all the arrests made, we've never got any nearer to finding out who Head Centre is. And as to, Great Head Centre..."
"In short," said Wilberforce snatching me out of New York at the height of my campaign, because—"

"Because," Roscoe finished the sentence, "if we hadn't done so, it's a dead certainty Bronson would be governor."
"Why?"
"If you disappeared, who's to stop him?"
"But I can't remain at sea indefinitely!"
"It isn't necessary," Roscoe assured him. "The plot was fixed to operate yesterday. It won't be any use today. We were almost sure we had it covered, but to make doubly sure we shifted you out of the Zones for thirty-six hours!"
"I see!" The politician smiled wryly. "But are you sure the Zones don't extend to, say, the twelve-mile limit?"

"According to the only Zone map I ever saw," Page Sutton answered, "they extend beyond that!"
At a point roughly corresponding in position with Times Square but nearly a quarter of a mile below it, a woman sat behind a long, narrow table. Several extraordinary pieces of apparatus and unfamiliar instruments lay upon the table, as well as a number of books, papers, and opened charts. The woman wore a black velvet robe and a black silk mask. A curious globular lamp provided the only light, which was cast downward in such a manner that the rest of the room lay in darkness. There was a sound of falling water, far off, like that of a distant cataract. In the darkness before the table an illuminated map shone, as if suspended in space. It was a map of New York city covered with a network of variously colored sections. It was the Zone map for which police had searched in vain.

The Zones—circles surrounding a central point which probably corresponded to the original Headquarters—covered, in addition to the whole of Manhattan, some parts of the Bronx, Long Island, Brooklyn, Jersey City, and a considerable area of ocean. Now the map faded, until a piece of Staten Island and the tip of Sandy Hook were the only points of land showing in a considerable expanse of sea. A red light sprang to view above the map.

"H.Q.," a nasal voice announced. "Report of Group Master I, Sector IAI, aboard the White Hawk. Course changed to westerly. Unless changed again will be crossing steam lane at 8:30 p.m., 40.24 North, 73.59 West. All clear. Timed 6 p.m. Report ends."

The woman at the long table studied those sectors of the map still visible. Then:
"Report of Divisional Chief A," she said.
"No report to hand."
"Report of H. Q. patrol covering."
"Nothing to add to last report."
"Report of air patrol detailed."
"To hand. Group master in charge reports no sign of motor-boat in which Divisional chief set out. In view of weather last night, loss feared. Timed 5:45. Report ends."

There followed a period of silence. Then:
"Advise Zone officer detailed for special observation," the woman's voice ordered, "to report positions of inward and outward steamers, with particulars. Sector captain in charge airplane A is to stand by for instant move. Transmit this order and connect chief chemist..."

Peter Champion wandered the deck of his yacht. He was a man obsessed by two notions. One: the utter destruction of the organization known as "The Zones," two: the elevation of John Wilberforce Wright to the governorship.
He now believed that these aims were identical—that the Zones planned to defeat Wright's election. His walk was elastic, for the old lumberman carried himself like an athlete. Abruptly his promenade ceased. A deck-hand was attaching something to a life-buoy lashed to the port rail.

"By whose orders," Peter Champion demanded, "was that flash fixed to that belt?"
"I was afraid, sir," said the deck-hand. "I am poor swimmer, and if we go down—"
"What's our chance of going down?"
"The man made no reply."
"No weather could sink White Hawk," the remorseless voice went on. "If you're afraid, you have private reasons. What are they?"
Champion called the quartermaster.

"This man's under arrest," he said. "Notify Captain Roscoe."
"You will hear more of this—when we reach shore," said the prisoner.
"Good enough," Champion returned. "So long as I hear nothing more of you while we're at sea."
Three of the women were on deck now—Molly O'Hay, Page Sutton's pretty daughter, and Madame Czerna.

Champion drew Roscoe aside.
"We're covered!" said he. "That man was planning his getaway!"
"Shh!" Roscoe cautioned. "I never hoped we'd escaped the Zones. Leave the position to me. He's probably a mere Group master. We should be grateful, Champion, for some mercuries. We do know the official rating of the Zone officials!"
"What's this?" Champion exclaimed suddenly.
White Hawk's engines had been slowed down.

"Stand by number one life-boat!" came a remote cry from the bridge.
"What's this?" Champion repeated, and started for the ladder.
He was interrupted by his chief officer.
"No cause for alarm, Mr. Champion. Look-out has sighted an insensible man wearing a life-belt, right on our course. I'm going off to pick him up."
"Good," said Peter Champion. "Everybody craned over the rails, watching the rescue. The chief officer had gone away without a hitch. He came aboard as smoothly. The rescued man was insensible. He had been badly mauled by the sea. Exhaustion had reduced him to a desperate state."

"Oh!"—the exclamation came from Page Sutton's daughter—"it's Mr. Partington!"
Then others recognized the victim of the sea. He was Hilary Partington.
"Take him to my cabin," said Dr. Stopford. "Don't waste time..."
"Lou" Bronson, John Wilberforce Wright's rival for the governorship, sat in his library. He had scanty, straight hair and colorless lashes. But his strange dark eyes held that magnetism which dominates. Given different complexion and hair, one would have said that Bronson had Napoleonic characteristics.

For a long time he sat staring abstractedly before him. Then a phone bell rang. He took the receiver off one of the several instruments on the table, and:
"Yes!" he said, adding strangely: "Zones," came the reply. "G.H. Q."
"Head Centre, New York."
"Stand by. Great Head Centre wishes to speak."
No change of expression showed upon the pale face. But a new glint seemed to come into Bronson's eyes. Then:
"Great Head Centre," said a woman's voice. "Report to me at once. Disconnect."
Bronson replaced the receiver and crossed to a bookcase, took out a volume from the bottom shelf, and then inserted a key in some hidden lock. He replaced the book, grasped one of the shelves, and the entire section of the case slipped noiselessly upward, revealing a narrow passage. Bronson stepped inside, turned and lowered his nocturnal hood and lowered the concealed door, relocked it below, and walked through the darkness for some ten paces. Another door was opened, a light switched on—and he was in a dressing-room. He sat down in the dressing table... When he stood up again "Lou" Bronson, politician, had vanished. This was a stranger to all who knew the man. He resembled him, facially, but not in respect of complexion or hair. The Napoleonic likeness was greater than ever now.

was weak as a kitten. But some secret dread drove him remorselessly. "There are sentimental things in it. I should hate to offer off one of the several instruments on the table, and:

At about this time a strange scene was taking place in Dr. Stopford's cabin aboard White Hawk.
Following half an hour's anxious work, the rescued man opened his eyes, moved weakly, and looked up at the surgeon.
"Where am I?" Partington whispered.
"You're on board Mr. Champion's yacht White Hawk."
Color had been returning slowly to the man's cheeks. Now it fled—leaving him as pale as when they hauled him out of the sea.
"What time?" he asked.
Stopford answered: "It's just after seven, shore time."
Partington raised his hand in a frenzied gesture.
"My things," said he. "Where are they?"
"Your kit's been dried, Mr. Partington."
"Somebody told me. I haven't hitherto had the pleasure."
The man was sitting up again, glaring wildly.

"Do me a favor," he entreated. "Get my cigar case! It sounds absurd;... His voice faltered him, He Roscoe started for the alleyway. "No wonder I missed it!" he snapped. "Lock the door, Stopyy." Outside the cabin, a distant sound of excited voices reached them.

"What's this?" Stopford murmured.
"Take Partington's kit to him," Roscoe said tensely. "Don't waste a second. I'll join you in your room."
Stopford halted, staring. Under its tan Drake Roscoe's face had paled.
"Old man," he said, "we've played into their hands! The chief enemies of Head Centre are aboard this yacht. We're thirty miles from shore, and the nearest ship to count, La Patrie, is half an hour's steaming away!"

Behind the Scenes in Hollywood

By HARRISON CARROLL
HOLLYWOOD, Cal. — Young-Man-About-Hollywood Joel McCrea is receiving serious attention these days from the producers.
While stardom still hangs fire, he has built up quite a fan following from his pictures with Dorothy Mackaill and with Constance Bennett; so much so, in fact, that Radio has given him one of those coveted year-without-option contracts.
He'll be opposite Hope Williams when the Broadway star makes her first picture in the fall. This will be a sophisticated comedy drama called "Pent-House." John Howard Lawson, who writes the stories in the east and sends them to Hollywood by mail, is the author.
Miss Williams, I need scarcely remind you, is of "The New Yorker" cast. And before that, of "Holiday."

Some time ago this department quoted Rex Bailey as saying that owners of trained dogs are the most persistent callers at the RKO casting office.
Bailey received this indignant letter:
"Well, it might be true that few of them have broken their dignity, but you cannot deliver a proof that I ever was persistent at your office, or that I ever have waited in a pose in front of your studio, yet I have the best dog in the game. For instance, my dog has worked in every studio except R-K-O, where a man needs friends first, and ability afterwards."

WANDERER RETURNS

After working in almost every other studio, Conrad Nagel is hanging up his hat these days at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, where he draws his weekly pay check.
The reason is a part in "Hell Divers," formerly "Sea Eagles," in which Wallace Beery, Clark Gable and Marjorie Rameau also are to be seen. Nagel recently did a part in "Son of India" at M-G-M. But he spends most of his time on loan to other companies.
For all of that M. G. M. likes him, because he's been under contract there steadily since 1923.
