Completes Harmsworth Course Alone in Third Heat

DETROIT, Sept. 8, (AP)—A Jone hydroplane circled the Harmsworth trophy race today and upon completing three laps, or 15 miles, its driver made formal claim to the honor of having kept the plaque in America.

George Wood contended that his boat had finished third in the first heat and finished alone in the second, it had not been disqualified and was entitled to a chance to win. The racing committee agreed to let him run today so that his name may go upon the trophy as the official winner of this year's Harmsworth race.

The Pledging Problem Again

ALREADY students are beginning to come back to the university campus which they abandoned three months ago. And the reason for most of the early influx is the absolute necessity of having the first chance at the first freshman who steps foot inside Iowa City's limits. Those who are returning this early in the game know what lies ahead — a week of confused scramble for the better prospects followed by blue Monday checkup to find out what has been netted in the rush.

Fraternities do not relish this sort of pledging; they are not at all keen about the ridiculous lengths to which rushing competition often carries them. Yet they are faced with a situation that demands haphazard pledging in order to meet economic necessity. An article in the Intercollegian by William E. Kroll, entitled "Fools Rush In," has some pertinent comment on the situation which is a fairly accurate picture of the situation at Iowa.

"Or again, there is the absurd procedure by which fraternities choose their candidates from among the new students entering college each fall. Before a man has had any real opportunity to prove his fitness for fraternity life or to discover to which particular fraternity he might temperamentally best be suited, and largely on the basis of his high school reputation or the social and financial standing of his parents or the judgment of a distant alumnus or a few present upperclassmen who fancy they see caliber in this neophyte, — the pledging goes on. And usually it goes on, on one form or another, from the very beginning of the year (whatever may be the inter-fraternity rules of agreement) simply because each chapter is compelled to make it go on by virtue of its need for self-preservation or its fear and suspicion of the other fraternities on the campus.

"To be sure, there is often enough the postponement of actual initiation until first term grades are in. And yet, the average low level of scholarship required here can hardly be listed as a worthy indication of a man's fitness to come into the fold. . . if only these groups would take a few more diamonds in the rough instead of so many nicely polished ones; and if only the freshmen themselves had more of a chance to look the various fraternities over. . . it seems reasonable to believe there would be more lasting and effective work done by these organizations than there often is. . ."

These remarks are more or less trite to the fraternity man who takes fraternities seriously, but Iowa students must realize that a new system has become necessary with the increased complexity of the situation, and that that new system can be acquired only through definite organization and concerted effort.

It is none too early to bring the subject up; this year will show the results more clearly than ever before of the rapid physical expansion of Iowa fraternities, and fraternity men might well use 1931 rush week as an observation period with a view to future changes. If the campus at large can be made conscious of the problems now, the fraternities may regulate pledging for themselves before another year has passed. If not, regulations may be imposed by other agencies which might not be as satisfactory as those originating within the organizations themselves.

King George's Gesture

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE not to admire the attitude of King George and other members of England's royal family in asking for a reduction in their respective allowances to help their country tide over its current financial crisis.

Free from all political influence, the king's motives in asking for a reduction of $250,000 annually along with the Prince of Wales, Queen Mary, and others, are clearly unselfish. His attitude in keeping up with affairs in his country to the extent that he was able to unravel a serious governmental tangle when need came, and his example of personal deprivation for public good, smack of fairy tale days when kings spent their lives in serving the interests of their subjects. And that from a king who is supposed to be only an expensive piece of ornamentation that the British insist upon having about.

Although King George will be far from penny if his allowance is curtailed, the decrease he asks represents a very substantial percentage of his private expense money. United States public leaders, of which, of course, there are none in quite the same position as King George, might well set the pace in a similar way as they busy themselves expensively with suggestions for alleviating hard times.

Do Literary Lions Roar?

(From the Christian Science Monitor)

Mr. Sewell Stokes says that on the whole authors are a dull set of people. And Mr. Stokes ought to know, for he has interviewed most of the famous writers of the day for a popular British newspaper. His criticism has not, however, passed without comment, for Mr. St. John Ervine, who sniffs the scent of battle from afar, has rallied vigorously to the support of his literary colleagues, maintaining that in conversational charm and social attractiveness they leave little to be desired.

But in justice to Mr. Stokes it must be admitted that the personal impression made by many authors is at first, at any rate, somewhat disappointing. When Rudelf Besier's play, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," was originally staged in London a year ago it was alleged that it made Robert Browning look and talk like a prosperous stockbroker rather than a poet. To which Mr. Besier might have retorted that a prosperous stockbroker was precisely what Browning did look like.

Nor when it comes to conversation do famous authors always distinguish themselves beyond the emulation of lesser people. Goldsmith talked "like Poor Poll," and Addison's social incapacity for the colloquial give-and-take of the drawing-room, as well as his recognition of his own skill as a writer, are both made apparent in his striking phrase, "Though I have only nine-pence in my pocket, I can draw for a thousand pounds." And it will be remembered that when Stanley met another author of repute, dramatically, and after perilous separation, in darkest Africa, the only remark which he could think of to fit the momentousness of the occasion was, "Dr. Livingstone, I presume?" Nevertheless, Mr. Ervine has a strong case. The remarks of the world-famous conversationalists bear a goodly sprinkling of literary men. What other calling could show such a roster of celebrated talkers as Shaw, Johnson, Wilde, Burke, Macaulay, and Carlyle? Hostesses need not, after all, be unduly alarmed by Mr. Stokes. Invitations to authors may still stand without wrecking the delightfulness of their parties. On the whole, literary lions roar quite reasonably well.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE SIMPSON

WASHINGTON — If there is one man in Washington on whom that perhaps painfully narrow margin of Republican control of the next house is apt to throw added burdens, he is Walter Newton, house contact unit of the White House secretary.

WALTER NEWTON

Since the death of James Good, first war secretary of the Hoover cabinet who was drafted for cabinet service — against his will, he is said, because of his long house service and special standing with house members — the job has fallen almost entirely to Newton.

He works at it when congress is in session. Almost every day sees him churning about the house lobbies on unexplained missions. And it is not to be doubted that he enjoys it.

The former representative from Minnesota is one of those men who get a lot of kick out of the political game for the sake of the game itself.

A SACRIFICE
Newton sacrificed or at least temporarily impaired a political career on his own hook that held great promise when he resigned to enter the Hoover secretariat.

He might very reasonably have hoped eventually to reach the senate, filling a place left vacant since

Knute Nelson, the grand old regular of Minnesota's delegation, died. Newton was a favorite with the veteran, who liked fighting men.

Both Nelson and Newton were Republican "regulars" from Minnesota whose grip on popular favor seemed strong despite the Republican irregularity the state has so long been noted for. Newton resigned from the house just after recording his biggest re-election victory.

"And they haven't forgiven me for that yet," he said, laughingly, although the Bystander thought he detected a bit of pathos in his tone.

The Minnesota man will well, despite his intimate contact with great affairs and great men around the White House these days, a yearning for the personal business of vote-getting for himself. The turmoil of campaigning and the game matching wits with political rivals has a lure all its own.

AFRAID OF HIS TEMPER

Incidentally, Newton told a story of Knute Nelson the Bystander had never heard before. He contends that the snow-haired veteran battled all his life against a temper that frightened himself.

Nelson knew his own weakness so well that when engaged in campaigning he did not dare read newspaper attacks upon himself. He made it a practice to have his secretary censor the papers for him, handing him only items he must see.

Once in a state campaign Nelson bowled a rival over with a swing to the jaw. He never forgave himself for that outburst.

Texas Law Makers Meet to Put King Cotton Upon Throne

AUSTIN, Tex., Sept. 8 (AP)—With the eyes of the entire south upon them, the law makers of Texas met in extraordinary session today to attempt to put king cotton back on his throne.

Arbitrary reduction of cotton planting next year by statute, on a basis which could be followed by the other cotton-growing states, was the formula presented by Gov. R. S. Sterling for dealing with the south's economic crisis.

As the legislators convened, the overproduction problem, which has sent prices down near a nickel a pound, was accentuated by the government crop report. It forecast a yield of 15,685,000 bales this year, the country's largest crop since 1915.

WATERLOO (AP)—Former Representative Burton E. Sweet of Waverly announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination to congress from the third Iowa district.

Bank Directors Fix Wolf's Loot Higher Than First Believed

CHICAGO, Sept. 8 (AP)—Directors of the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company today fixed the bank's loss from the defalcations of Walter Wolf at $3,666,929.06 and announced through Chairman Arthur M. Reynolds that the entire amount will probably be recovered, partly from $2,000,000 insurance.

The amount is higher than any estimates previously made. In a formal statement, Mr. Reynolds said no accomplices have been found within the bank to the scheme of the $75 a week employee who confessed that he took bonds from the bank, used them as margin in his luscious stock transactions, and removed the bank's records to avoid detection.

Judge Allows Capone New Evasion Plea

CHICAGO, Sept. 8 (AP)—"Scarface Al" Capone, facing trial on charges of conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws and of evading the income tax law, was granted permission today to change his plea of guilty in the liquor case to one of not guilty by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson.

The ruling was made at an unexpected hearing in Judge Wilkerson's chambers, the jurist recently having announced that the hearing originally scheduled for today, would not be held until Sept. 10.

In a memorandum which the judge ordered his clerk to file, it was explained that the change in pleas was being allowed because the defendant had agreed to plead guilty under a compromise agreement with the prosecution in which the court could not concur.

The gang leader was allowed to withdraw his plea of guilty to the income tax charge last July 31, the day he was to have been sentenced. At that time, Judge Wilkerson announced he would hear evidence in the case, apparently discrediting the agreement for leniency entered into by Capone and the prosecution.

As a result of Bruno's death Bridges and his promoter were arraigned before an Ohio county grand jury, but were found not guilty.

Two Fail in Trial for New Air Records

CLEVELAND, Sept. 8 (AP)—World and American speed records for land airplanes for men and women withstood the assaults of J. R. Wedell of Patterson, La., and Maude Irving Tait of Springfield, Mass., at Cleveland airport today.

Miss Tait failed by only 1 1/2 miles an hour to equal the women's world and American record of 210.64, held by Ruth Nichols, New York society girl, but Wedell fell far short of both world and American marks.

Wedell, flying the Wedell-Williams special speed plane in which he won second place yesterday in the Thompson trophy 100-mile race, climax of the National air races, averages 243-290 miles an hour late today in four dashes over the official three kilometer—1 7/8 mile—course. He made two dashes before a five-mile wind and two against.

SELECT BEAUTY QUEEN OF ETHER WAVES

HARRIET LEE, BESS JOHNSON, EDNA O'KEEFE, AMANDA SAVAL

NEW YORK, Sept. 8 —Cast your mind back over all those evenings when you sat by your comfortable hearth and heard the radio waft into your home the harmonious melody of programs which the ether waves brought to you. Sure, it's great, but just contain yourself until television gives you the opportunity of not only hearing but seeing the stars of the radio firmament.

The cause of all this anticipatory gazing is easily understood when it is known that the annual search for the beauty queen of the air is officially on. Blonde girls, dark maidens, tall girls, girls not so tall — feminine microphone performers of every type — are entered in this hunt to crown the most beautiful radio artist of America and present her to the millions of listeners-in.

As you've heard a girl singing or speaking over the radio, perhaps it hasn't struck you that she might be tall or short, slim or fat, beautiful or plain. The charm of her unseen performance is what gets her across, but, hold on, don't get alarmed. We're not suggesting that if you could see her you might not be so well impressed. In fact, we're propounding just the opposite doctrine, that if you could see her beauty of face and figure, you'd probably have your radio-television machine on far into the night.

We're basing our observations, you see, on the remarkable array of pulchritude which struts its stuff, unsung and unseen, before the "mikes" every day. The fact that these feminine radio artists are beautiful is just coming to light, however, with such a contest as is now being conducted furnishing the thoroughly pleasant expose.

Some radio stations have made as many as six entries for the honor of beauty queen of the ether. Broadcasting stations from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Maine to the Gulf have entered their fairest charmers. The coveted title of "Miss Radio, 1931," is being sought with so much enthusiasm that it proves the number of eligible pretty girls is mighty large.

The beauty who will shortly ascend her throne as the fairest of all fair radio charmers of America will be selected by a group of outstanding personalities in the field of the theater, art and radio.

The highest honors will be bestowed upon "Miss Radio, 1931" when she reigns over the Radio-Electrical World's Fair in New York, Sept. 21-26. The fortunate girl, if she is air-minded, will have the opportunity of "seeing America first" from the sky, as she already has been offered a free trip to Los Angeles via airplane in October.

Some of the beauties entered in the contest, hailing from all sections of the country, are Bess Johnson, of WBBM, Chicago; Harriet Lee, WABC, New York; Edna O'Keefe, KFRC, San Francisco; and Amanda Saval, WKWS, Gary, Indiana. If these fair queens are any indication of how beautiful their sisters of the radio are, there'll be a merry scramble to attain the title of beauty queen.

Of course, you'll see the picture of the reigning radio charmer after she is elected, and that won't be hard to look at—but just wait until television brings her beautiful attributes into your own home, along with all the other pretty girls who perform over the air. That sounds like the millennium.

Plan to Hold Zager Rites on Thursday

Funeral service for Mrs. Mabel Zager, 44, whose body was found floating in the Iowa river Sunday afternoon following a three day search since she disappeared from her home Thursday evening, will be held at the Oathout chapel tomorrow at 2 p.m., under the direction of the Rev. C. C. Garrigues. Burial will be in Oakland cemetery.

Mrs. Zager was last seen alive Thursday evening when she left her home at 218 W. Benton street. Fear was felt that she had committed suicide when she failed to return that night but dragging of the river by members of her family, with police, fire and sheriff's office assistance failed to locate the body.

Early Sunday afternoon, Frank P. Gibson, Riverside Drive, who was fishing in the river opposite the municipal park, found and recovered the body on the surface of the river. Death was pronounced as suicide by Dr. Paul A. Reed, acting coroner, who was called to the scene. Mrs. Zager's relatives stated that she had been despondent over ill health for some time.

Mrs. Zager was born in Johnson county and has lived in this vicinity most of her life. She was a member of the Royal Neighbors of America.

She is survived by her husband, William L. Zager, and four sons, Stanley, Delbert, Louis, and Olin;

Cone Tells of Local Growth in Telephones

Carl Cone, local manager of the Bell Telephone company, gave a talk on the past, present, and future of the telephone organization, at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis club yesterday.

Mr. Cone, talking on the development of the telephone in Iowa City, cited statistics he has gathered which show that less than three years after the first telephone patent was issued an order for three telephones were placed by Pryce and Schell of Iowa City. That was in January, 1879.

In December, 1880, the city council passed an ordinance allowing use of city streets for telephone construction and by February of the following year the first local exchange was in operation.

Mr. Cone demonstrated the use of the dial telephone, which he informed her father, D. C. Lewis, and two brothers, Malcom and Bert Lewis, all of Iowa City.

The Kiwanians were to be put into use in Iowa City around the middle of August, 1932. He also described the present remodeling of the telephone exchange here to increase its size by two stories. Cost of the enlarging will amount to around $430,000.

Announcement was made at the meeting by President Edward S. Rose that at the next meeting the wives of members would be invited to celebrate "Constitution day." Guests at the meeting were: Otis Testers, guest of his father, Dean W. J. Testers; Robert R. Aurner, professor of commerce at the University of Wisconsin, guest of his father, C. Ray Aurner; and Earl Taylor, guest of A. E. Lambert.

Cubs, White Sox Clash Today in Charity Game; Bruins Lose Ninth in Row

Unemployed to Get Entire Gate Receipts

Cards Defeat Bruins Twice 1-0, 8-3; Bucs Win

By BILL RUTLEDGE (Special to The Daily Iowan) CHICAGO, Sept. 8—Tense baseball factionalism pent up among Chicago fans will be given vent this afternoon as the Cubs and Sox battle at Comiskey park.

The followers of both teams will be out en masse to witness the special act of intra-city rivalry for the benefit of charity.

Every cent that comes in at the ticket booths will be turned over to Gov. Louis L. Emmerson's committee for unemployment relief.

Both contestants will be in splendid fettle. The Cubs have primed themselves for the long-looked-forward-to engagement by absorbing nine consecutive defeats.

Last week Manager Rogers Hornsby announced Pat Malone as his pitching nominee.

The fine imposed on Malone makes it doubtful that he will start. Bush publicly switched his selection to Vic Frasier.

The underdog ranking of the Comiskey's makes them a favorite with many. Logic, however, says that the fourth place team in the National league should be better than the seventh position outfit in the American league.

Labor Day Games

The transfusion of minor league blood into the sickly Cubs failed to revitalize them to the extent that they could check the champion Cardinals.

Realizing that the old Bruin standbys were falling away, fans spurred the rookie recruits on with rousing cheers.

The former Des Moines player slapped out a single in his first appearance and another single in the morning game off Paul Derringer.

Bob Smith and Derringer buckled down to a sparkling pitching duel. A chance to score came the way of each team. The Cubs could not cash in on their opportunity, and the Cards could.

When the teams retired for lunch Derringer had obtained his sixteenth victory of his first season in the majors by a 1 to 0.

Kreevich's headbase base running cost the Cubs their sole chance to score. The ex-western leaguer singled in the opening round, stole second, English beat Adams' throw to first.

Adams counted the only marker of the game in the seventh on Jimmy Adair's wild throw.

Under the guidance of the wily old Grimes the Cubs went backsliding in to fourth place. Every time they became dangerous, the veteran spitter balked, while the Red Birds were pecking away at Guy Bush.

A medley of timely clouts in the second inning netted three runs for St. Louis. Bottomley, Hafey, and Martin scored.

The Bruins retaliated with two tallies in their part of the second. Danny Taylor felled a homerun over the right field fence.

The victors doubled their score in sixth and seventh with the aid of two passed balls by Hemsley, several infield errors, and a few solid blows.

Kiki Quyler skipped over the plate in the seventh following his triple. Cards added another run in the ninth off Johnny Welch, who replaced the ineffective Bush.

Score by innings: R. H. E. St. Louis.....030 012 101-8 9 1 Chicago.....020 000 010-3 11 3 Batteries: Grimes and Wilson;

Up in their cool quiet Allegheny mountain camp, the Pitt Panthers start today on their third day of grid practice. Next Tuesday the Hawks begin their training grind.

Each team will have five seniors on the squad. Iowans finishing their collegiate competition this fall are Capt. Oliver Sanson, Marcus Magnusson, Nelson Tompkins, Bud Willer, and Elmo Nelson.

The world series schedule has been arranged for the coming classic. Assuming that the Cardinals grab off the National league bunting, the first contest will be held at Sportsman park, St. Louis Oct. 1 and the second game next day.

The rivals will spend Saturday and Sunday travelling to Shibe park, the home lot of the Athletics, where the third and fourth games will be fought out Oct. 6 and 7.

If the series goes any further, the squads will journey back to St. Louis for a sixth battle Oct. 9 and a seventh—if a seventh is necessary—Oct. 10. A schedule of play has been arranged in case the Giants cop the title, but with a six game lead and in their own yard for the remainder of the season, it does not appear at all probable that the Red Birds won't win.

There are very few posts on the Cub team that are certain. Rookies are coming up from all parts of the baseball world to bid for every position.

Manager Hornsby has forgotten about the matter of winning and losing, and has turned his entire attention to the development of new Bruin strength. Spring training is usually the time for giving rookie try-outs. Hornsby believes in putting them right under fire.

St. Patrick's gridders went through their first formal practice paces yesterday afternoon.

Coach Louis Loria sought a punter and a passer for his eleven. He has probably found both in Joe Glenn, who showed up well in those departments of the game yesterday.

A first string backfield combination of Jay McNamara, quarterback; Glenn, fullback; Vincent Wetrich and Fleschinger, halfbacks was tried out. Nolan, Pugh, and Donahue were used at halfback posts.

Francis Meegan donned a uniform and went through a light workout, but it is still doubtful whether he will be available for this season.

Operate on Coach PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 8 (AP) The condition of Albert E. Wittmer, head football coach of Princeton university, who underwent an emergency operation for appendicitis today, was reported as "satisfactory" by Princeton hospital authorities.

After six stinging setbacks to the tailend Reds, the Cubs staggered back into Chicago for a Sabbath day game with the Pirates.

Charley Root, the ace of the hurling staff, was delegated as the man to set the team back on its feet.

The Bruin speedballer found the graceful young Glen Spencer his superior.

Twenty thousand fans moaned as the Bucs helped themselves to a two run lead in the second, cheered as the Cubs tied it up in the same frame— and went away disgraced as the Pittsburghers gathered in a 5 to 4 victory.

The Chicagoans had the bases clogged in the eighth with one out. Adair's single scored English. Hartnett was passed. Hemsley batted for Root and hit smack into a double play that cut Grimm down at the plate and nulled the pinch hitter at first.

Score by innings: R. H. E. Pittsburgh.....020 000 120-5 9 1 Chicago.....020 000 110-4 11 1 Batteries: Spencer and Grace; Root, Sweetland and Hartnett.

The fading Hack Wilson was blotted completely out of the Cub picture Sunday. The holder of the National league homerun record watched the game from a box seat.

A conference between Hornsby, Owner William Wrigley, President William Veeck resulted in the action. Simultaneously Malone was assessed a heavy fine. The playboy antics of the two at Cincinnati Saturday night in violation of training rules was the cause of the punishments.

The next day Wilson was paid off. He had narrowly escaped suspension several times previous. His failure to come through this year had kept him on the bench. His $33,000 per season salary was given him last winter on the basis of his league records in homers and runs driven in established in 1930. Last year he blasted out 46 circuit drives. This season he has hit 13.

Wildcats Loom as Ferocious Contenders for Big Ten Grid Crown

N. U. Stronger Than in 1930; Russell Back

Renter's Eligibility in Doubt; Line Slight Problem

EVANSTON, Ill., Sept. 8 (AP)—Northwestern's Wildcats threaten to be wilder and more ferocious.

Untamed in their Big Ten football jungles last year Coach Dick Hanley's Wildcats appear to be even stronger than they were last year when they shared the Western conference championship with Michigan, losing only to the national championship Notre Dame eleven in their last game of the season.

The impression prevails that the Wildcats, undefeated in Western conference competition last year, rate along with Michigan as the outstanding challenger for the 1931 title. This is because of the material Coach Hanley has available to fill the gaps due to graduation of several of last year's stars.

Technically George Wood, brother of the famous Gar, won the cup driving Miss America VIII. Gar and Kaye Don was his Miss England II were both disqualified for jumping the starting gun.

Don beat the gun by seven seconds but unknowingly went on to overturn further on. He and his mechanic were taken out of the Detroit river to their hotel rooms at Detroit to learn that Miss England II had been disqualified.

The British speedboat challenger took the first heat by beating Gar Wood by more than a mile over the 30 mile course.

It was Gar Wood's first defeat in a Harmsworth cup race.

Coach Hanley will have as the spark plug of his passing game, "Pug" Renter, halfback, and "Red" Russell, the line pulverizing fullback, who will be the big offensive guns of this year's team.

There is a possibility, however, that Renter may not be eligible, but this remains to be settled. Hanley may have a little more difficulty in rebuilding his forward wall to replace "Red" Woodworth, guard, Frank Baker, the end who led the conference in scoring most of the season, Larry Oliphant, end, and Bob Clark, center.

From last year's freshmen team Hanley expects to obtain the services of a dozen players. The most promising is Ken Meenan, a fullback star of Oak Park, Ill., high school. He is 19 years old and packs 135 pounds and is six feet, two inches tall.

Another sophomore fullback candidate is George Potter from Omaha, Neb., weighing 178 pounds, and a six footer. From Wheaton, Ill., the town that produced "Red" Grange comes "Oley" Olson, a promising halfback and a kicker of ability.

New line candidates are not so numerous but they will be much in demand as last year's line was thoroughly rattled. The center promises to be a difficult one to solve, but Harold Weidman, 165 pounds, third stringer, may inherit the job. He is a good defensive player, but the lack of weight kept him from seeing much service. Captain Dal Marvill and Jack Riley, last year's tackle, will be back. These two along with Jimmy Evans, a guard, were the only regular linemen who will return to school.

Coach Hanley faces the task of whipping his Wildcats into fighting trim early to play the toughest kind of a schedule.

The schedule follows: Oct. 3—Nebraska at Evanston. Oct. 10—Notre Dame at Soldier field, Chicago. Oct. 17—University of California, southern branch, at Evanston. Oct. 24—Ohio State at Columbus. Oct. 31—Illinois at Evanston. Nov. 7—Minnesota at Evanston. Nov. 14—Indiana at Evanston. Nov. 21—Iowa at Iowa City.

MUSKOGEE, Okla., (AP)—Despite more, including nearly $1,500 in back salaries of players, Muskogee fans at a mass meeting decided to keep the club in the Western association for the rest of the season.

To raise funds an "appreciation night" was planned, all proceeds to go toward paying the players dug wages. The city offered the ball park rent free, and the electric company lights for the night contests.

Shade, Jody Draw NEW YORK, Sept. 8 (AP)—Dave Shade, veteran California middleweight, and Ben Jody of New York, fought ten rounds to a draw in the feature bout of the Queensboro stadium's boxing card tonight. Shade weighed 159; Jody 160.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., (AP)—Melvin Shimek, assistant track coach at Marquette university, hasn't run a race for two years, but he still adheres to all varsity training rules.

SIoux CITY (AP)—Chester E. Ford, Des Moines, was named president of the Iowa Association of Insurance Agents. W. A. Scherfe of Ft. Madison was elected vice president. The 1932 convention was awarded to Des Moines.

DON BEATS WOOD IN SPEEDBOAT TEST

In the first heat of the Harmsworth trophy race on the Detroit river Kaye Don, British speed ace, drove his Miss America II 89.91 miles an hour, a new competitive speed record, to defeat Gar Wood, who drove Miss America IX. Don's boat (left) is shown leading Wood along the 30-mile course.

Racine's eked out a 7 to 6 win over Alex's Rangers at the municipal field in the kittenball league last night.

Arguments among the players and with the umpire caused the game to be stopped in the fourth inning. Geiger and Kelleher formed the battery for the victors.

Four homers featured the game. Three were clouted off by Racine players—Don Brown, Al Burger, and Waldo Geiger. Linder connected for the circuit for the Rangers.

George O'Hara's hitting led the Knights of Pythias to a 15 to 8 triumph over the Dairy Boys. O'Hara socked a double and two singles in three times at bat.

Wallen hurled the Elks to a 5 to 1 win over the Press-Citizen. Katzenmeyer was his battery mate. Chervenka pitched for the losers, McGee behind the plate.

The 15th Hospital company team rallied to overcome Dee's recreation parlor nine by 9 to 5. The game was called at the end of the sixth inning because of darkness.

Propose New Conference SEATTLE, (AP)—A rowling conference, composed of Washington, Wisconsin, Marietta and California, was proposed here recently by Ellis McDonald, former husky oarsman, now crew coach at Marietta college in Ohio.

In a conference with Al Ubrich scum, head coach of the Washington crews, McDonald sought a triangular regatta with Washington, Wisconsin and Marietta meeting on the Ohio river next spring.

McDonald predicted that other Big Ten universities soon would follow Wisconsin and develop crews. He said that Minnesota, Michigan and Ohio state likely would lead the way.

The Wolves of the WaterFront by Edgar Wallace

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments
The efforts of Inspector John Wade, of the London police, to capture a gang of criminals known as the India Rubber men are complicated by the murder of Lord Siniford, who is suspected of being in league with the gang. However, Wade succeeds in proving that the "Seal of Troy," a mystery ship apparently under the command of a sinister individual named Alkness, is used by the gang. Golly Oaks, a river front idler whom Wade suspects of being involved in an effort to murder him, disappears and is sought by the police, while his wife, who is responsible for the abduction of the girl with whom Wade is in love, is detained by the authorities on another charge. This girl, Lila Smith, a former slavey in a lodging house, is believed by Wade to be Della Pattison, an heiress.

Seventeenth Instalment
The secret of the "Seal of Troy" was a secret no longer. The captain of the ship had wired a frantic protest to the Brazilian government, and the British government, after receiving a protest from Brazil, has issued a statement explaining the reasons for searching the vessel.

That afternoon, along with an account of the murder of Lord Siniford and the raid on the Lothbury bank, appeared the story of the "Seal of Troy" and a list of the deceptions of the India Rubber men. The report of the court proceedings involving "Mum" Oaks received scant notice, for there was nothing in the charge to distinguish it from other minor cases, no mention having been made of Lila Smith's name. There was a brief reference to the fact that Mrs. Oaks's husband had been reported missing for some time, and that the police would be interested in knowing his whereabouts.

In view of the developments of the past few days, John Wade was not surprised to receive a summons to meet the Big Four in conference. He rather dreaded seeing his chiefs, for they were not ready to accept excuses or forgive errors. But they took what he considered a charitable view of the bank episode.

"They're clever, those India Rubber men," said the superintendent. "They'd evidently tried the safe and knew they couldn't open it — it was a stroke of genius to send for the bank manager, and, of course, your being there and his knowing you was a bit of luck. One of the city policemen had seen Cardin, as he called himself, and he produced a Scotland Yard card! No, we're not blaming you, Wade, but we want Alkness and Oaks very badly."

"I knew Oaks very well, 20 years ago," said one of the officials. "He was the cleverest fence in London and must have made a fortune. He speaks five or six languages."

Wade stared in amazement. "Oaks?" he said incredulously. "I've always regarded him as illiterate."

"Not he," said the other. "Oh, yes, he's ungrammatical, but they tell me he speaks French and German like an educated man."

This was a new light on Golly, and it impressed Wade that he made a call that afternoon at the Mecca. He knew Golly's room, and had once made a superficial survey of it. It occurred to him that it might pay to make a closer inspection.

It was a large room immediately over the coal cellar, and rather dark, for it had but one small window. A small iron bed and a large bookcase, filled with paper backed volumes, an old standard lamp, and a well-worn sofa were the principal items of furniture. Wade noticed that in no case was the title of a book visible. They had been enclosed in jackets, and either the man knew their positions by heart, or he must have spent exasperating minutes searching for the volume he required. The little library was, he found, methodically arranged. The first of the volumes was a New Testament in Greek. Then there were half a dozen volumes dealing with strategical practice in war, and these had evidently been read and re-read, for in the margins were innumerable notes, most of them indecipherable.

A number of the books dealt with the theory of music. There was a volume on voice culture, and the rest of the library was made up of books on travel and philosophical works in German, Spanish, French, and Italian. Caesar's Latin Commentaries and a Magyar primer lay on a table. The tiny desk in the corner was spotted with ink, as was the floor. Evidently Golly was untidy.

Searching the drawers of the desk, John made another discovery. The astonishing Golly was a dabbler in the occult.

There was no evidence as to his nautical position; no bank book, thing to indicate the extent of his sessions. If he had been a rich years before — shook his head. Golly was a puzzle of all. He pulled out a book, and went carefully to the index, and tried to find no secret place. He found that great was a small book, titled, "The bore on the inscription: "Presented to G. H. Oaks by his employer, William Dean. Well done, thou good and faithful servant!" Wade could have laughed at this, if he had been in a laughing mood. The character of Dean's business was unexpectedly revealed, for between the pages was an ancient bill-head, "Dean & Abbit, Surgical Instrument Makers," while along the bottom was printed: "Dean's Patent Rubber Gloves for all surgical work." Was there an association between rubber gloves and rubber masks?

The remainder of the day was unsatisfactory. The police of four counties were conducting a diligent, painstaking search, but no news of Lila Smith had reached headquarters. That evening Wade paid a visit to Mrs. Oaks in Holloway prison; she was morose and uncommunicative and the talk ended in a storm of abuse, the woman flying into a fury that cut short the interview.

Wade himself stood in even greater danger than he had realized, at first. He was constantly meeting several of the men he had seen outside the police court when Mrs. Oaks was charged. They appeared in the neighborhood of his home; he met them on his way to report for duty; once, when he was engaged in a special patrol of the river, he passed three of them in a boat, two rowing and one sitting in the stern. He met them again the same afternoon, coming up the river as he was going down, and they obviously altered their course to pass him at short range. Fortunately, there was another police boat across the river, and he signaled it to close with the craft. No sooner did the rowers see this than one of them stopped, and, picking up something from the bottom of the boat, dropped it into the water. A minute later, Wade's launch was alongside.

"What did you throw overboard just now?" he demanded. The stroke rower rested on his oars and stared at Wade insolently. "Groundbait," he said. "We're fishing. Is that against the law?" "Fishing with Mills bombs is forbidden," said Wade, "and, if they weren't Mills bombs you dropped over the side, I've never seen one." He took the boat in tow to the nearest river station. The men were unprepared for this, and were, moreover, embarrassed by the fact that the second police boat had come alongside. As they landed, one of them on his way to report for duty, the river. It fell on the landing, and a policeman picked it up — a Browning pistol, with one cartridge still in the chamber and nine in the magazine.

"Have you a license for that?" asked Wade. "Sure," grinned the man. He was a thin faced, undersized individual, who claimed to be an American citizen. His passport was in order and he had been in England three weeks. The two other men were also from the United States, and their passports showed that they had arrived on the same ship.

What had brought these men into the country? Scotland Yard sent an urgent cable of inquiry to the States, and the following reply was received:

"Three men well-known gunmen here. Riccini and Orvitch twice convicted murderer."

"Is anything known about Golly Oaks?" I mean, has he a criminal record?" asked Wade, and the head of the record bureau nodded.

"He had a conviction in 1915 for stealing from his employers — sheet rubber."

Wade's eyebrows went up. "Sheet rubber?" he laughed. "That's funny. The servant didn't remain good or faithful. Anything else?"

"There was a charge of receiving stolen goods, which was not proved. He ran a gang in Wapping when he was a kid. They used to fight the Brick Lane gang — but he never got in trouble over that. Then he went to Birmingham and organized a gold-stealing business. Birmingham's full of jewelers and gold-stealing used to be pretty easy. You just substituted an alloy for the amount of gold you pinched, and it's surprising how easy it is to get away with three or four pounds of gold. And not even the testing office knows the difference."

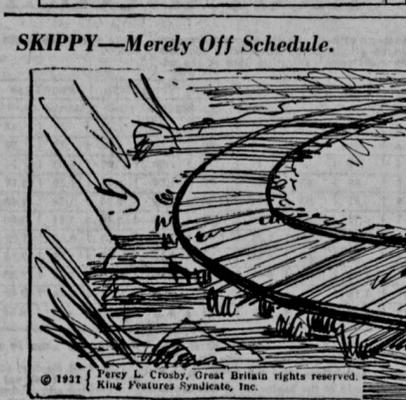

John tried to recall his earlier impressions of Golly Oaks. He had certainly never regarded the man as more than a petty thief, a weak creature who submitted to the nagging of his wife without protest. It was difficult to believe that he ever organized as much as a gang of robbers.

"Has he had any convictions?" "None," said his colleague. And then, thoughtfully: "It's funny how old Golly settled down, for a bit of a time, to being a respectable citizen. Perhaps 'Mum' Oaks tamed him. And perhaps he never was tamed."

"That's my bet, too," said Wade. "I'm beginning to get new ideas about Golly."

A New Yorker at Large
By MARK BARRON
NEW YORK—Cutting straight through the heart of Long Island for more than 40 miles is a private parkway on which there is no speed limit. The roadway was first constructed when it was thought possible that transatlantic liners would dock at Montauk Point at the upper end of the island. If this had happened, passengers would land in New York about five or six hours sooner than they do now. The roadway saves considerable time for Long Island motorists, who travel over it. Heretofore, the roadway has been very popular, but now there is so little business the toll collectors spend their time at back-gammon. The motorists have gone back to using free public highways. They may take more time, but $2 saved a day is $2 a welcome in these times. Then there is the motorist who came skimming over the parkway at such speed that he could hardly stop at the end of it. As he skidded past the gateway and onto the public highway, the toll collector shouted: "That's the way they make cherubs, sonny!" Was the driver embarrassed? Sure, they sometimes leave the big town—And they always come back. A tremendous slanting mirror gives Earl Carroll a view of everyone in his waiting room.

Behind the Scenes in Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Heeding the doctor's advice, which is to the effect that Edmond Lowe will suffer a nervous breakdown if he does not have a rest, Fox has withdrawn the star from two forthcoming pictures—"Creating," and "Disorderly Conduct."

LATEST GOSSIP
Irene Dunne spent considerable money over the long distance phone recently informing her Hollywood friends that she had scored every golfer's ambition, a hole-in-one. She accomplished the feat on the 133 yard, seventh hole at Pebble Beach. Speaking of the League of Nations Kay Francis has a miniature one in her home. Her gardener is Norwegian; the cook, French; the butler, Irish; the laundress of German descent and her personal maid English. Incidentally Kay was born in Oklahoma. James Dunn and Molly O'Day are going around places. After 13 weeks of personal appearances, James Hall is back in Hollywood. He has offers for two pictures since his return. Charlotte Bird, who was reported engaged to Richard Dix when they were both under contract to Paramount, is battling her way back to health in a local sanitarium. On the missing list is a male Scotty belonging to Rose Hobart. He answers to the name of Alice. With that for a name one can hardly blame him for running away. Jimmy Durant has a pet salutation for Louis B. Mayer. Since Mayer put him under contract "Schmozzle" greets him with, "Hi there, Cashier." Roy Riegals, the California football captain, who unfortunately gained fame when he ran the wrong way in an East-West conflict, is the latest platoon star to work in Warner Arien's "Touchdown."

MEXICO BOUND
The latter part of next week will find the advance guard of the "Marcheta" company in Mexico City. There Richard Dix will assume the role of a torador for atmospheric shots for the film. Whether Richard will actually wave a red flag in front of a charging bull is doubtful, but, nevertheless, it will look like it when the picture is shown. Accompanying him on the trip is Director Victor Schertzinger, a cameraman and a make-up expert.

EVALYN TO RETURN
Joyous news for Evalyn Knapp is that she is going to be able to resume work the latter part of this month. After her serious accident in which she sustained an injured spine when she fell down a cliff there were several dark days and prospect of her future career was a dismal one. However after two months in bed she is up again and has been walking for the past week. Current with her improvement, Warner Bros. have cast her in "Honorable Mr. Wong." Edward C. Rob-

Nautilus Back From Journey Under Ice
LONGYEAR CITY, Spitzbergen, Sept. 8 (AP)—Sir Hubert Wilkins' arctic submarine Nautilus arrived today from the north bearing some dents and scar after her encounter with the polar ice, but apparently without having suffered serious damage. The Nautilus probably will remain here for a few days. Further than that, plans have not been decided definitely.

Firemen Answer Two Calls
Two fire calls were received by the local department over the week end but no damage was done by the two blazes. Monday morning a waste-paper basket fire was extinguished by chemicals at the Alpha Delta Pi sorority house, 222 N. Clinton street. Yesterday morning a pile of corn husks at the canning factory on Sheridan avenue became ignited but was extinguished by persons at hand. Engineers from 28 states and four foreign countries have inspected the University of Iowa's hydraulic laboratory in the last two years. Libraries of the University of Iowa now contain more than 800,000 volumes.
