CALL TROOPS TO STOP CHURCH RIOT

Two G. O. P. Officials Make Proposals for Tax Revision in Next Term of Congress

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10 (AP)—Two administration Republicans today called for tax revision at the next congress.

Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, high ranking Republican on the finance committee, advocated a general sales tax of one-half of one percent upon all commodities sold to the public.

Luxury Tax

Representative Bacharach of New Jersey, second ranking Republican on the house ways and means committee which originates all revenue legislation, proposed a sales tax on "luxuries and non-essentials"; an increase in rates on incomes of more than $100,000; restoration of the gift tax and a boost in estate tax levies.

The simultaneous declarations assumed added significance in view of the recent word from the White House that President Hoover is studying means of balancing the budget with another billion dollar deficit impending.

Favor Tax Revision

The treasury head is known to favor tax revision.

The pronouncements of Reed and Bacharach followed closely a declaration by Senator Watson, of Indiana, the party leader, against tax revision at this time. Democratic leaders, too, have declared against tax increased and in favor of retarding the debt retirement program.

Senator Reed estimated that his universal sales tax, applying to everything sold in the retail markets, would net the government almost two billions annually, or one-half of its total expenses.

He would retain present income tax rates but would plug up some of the "leaks" which he says are permitting the wealthy to evade their share of the burden at the expense of those earning incomes.

"National Defense Cut Enough"

Senator Reed asserted national defense was down in cost now to the "danger point."

Bacharach agreed with the Republican independents advocating higher income taxes that "the rich are getting richer and the poor are getting poorer."

Reed said the big earner and not the rich capitalist carried the tax burden.

Brookhart Makes Declaration

Senator Brookhart, of Iowa, one of the Republican independents quickly declared against the sales tax proposal.

"I am in favor," he said, "of taxing Senator Reed's income and Secretary Mellon's income. I would boost the rates on the higher incomes and put the estate tax levies back to where they were in 1925."

U. S. Fails to Indict Capone Second Time

CHICAGO, Sept. 10 (AP)—The government's effort to re-indict the millionaire public enemy, "Scarface Al" Capone, on some of the 5,000 prohibition law offenses charged against him went by the boards today. A grand jury report without indictments was destroyed.

The federal grand jury instructed by U. S. District Judge James H. Wilkerson to look over the evidence and see if it might specify more serious charges against the gangster was discharged without returning an indictment.

Judge Refuses Report

The jury refused to report progress of their investigation, but Judge Wilkerson refused to hear it.

What was in the report was not disclosed. The jury foreman informed Judge John P. Barnes there was no report to make. Between courtrooms he had torn up the proffered statement.

The original indictment alleging Capone conspired to violate the prohibition act with 5,000 offenses over a decade still stands, subject to call on five days' notice. Judge Wilkerson allowed Capone to change his plea to not guilty last Tuesday and placed on the docket for future consideration the defense motion to quash the indictment.

Withdraws Guilt Plea

Haq Judge Wilkerson not informed of the gangster in July that he must take the witness stand himself if he expected leniency, Capone might now be serving time with some of his henchmen in Leavenworth prison. But Capone, manifestly disturbed at the prospect of public questioning, protested through his attorneys that the government had promised leniency. The court refusing to be bound by any such agreement, the gangster moved to withdraw his guilty plea and take trial instead. The agreement, made public later, was that the government would recommend concurrent sentences on the prohibition and income tax charges.

The court let Capone change the plea on the tax fraud count and has since fixed Oct. 6 as the date for the trial opening.

Meanwhile the big gangster remaining at liberty under bond, and yesterday was photographed in the front row of the grand stand at the charity baseball game at Comiskey park, surrounded by bodyguards and political friends and with his son at his side.

Miss Muriel McCormick, daughter of Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick of Chicago and granddaughter of John D. Rockefeller, whose engagement to Elisha Dyer Hubbard of Littleton, Conn., was announced Wednesday by her mother. No date for the wedding has been set.

Two "Pirates" Invade Yacht, Seize Owner

Wife Believes Husband Thrown Overboard by Thugs

SYOSETT, N. Y., Sept. 10 (AP)—An amazing narrative of a midnight invasion of a yacht in Long Island sound by two men when either shore the wealthy owner overboard or cast him adrift and then mistreated his wife baffled the police tonight.

The strange tale of modern piracy was told by Mrs. Benjamin P. Collings, who said that after her husband was seized the invaders carried her in a canoe to a motorboat nine miles distant where her shouts attracted attention early today.

Leave Daughter on Boat

The Collings' 5 year old daughter, Barbara, was left unharmed aboard her parents' drifting yacht, Penquin, which was found by a boatman party just before daybreak.

Mrs. Collings' story of mistreatment, related during six and a half hours questioning, further belied the motive for the acts of the invaders. When the two men first boarded the Penquin Mrs. Collings said she overheard them demand that her husband carry a wounded companion of theirs to Norwalk, Conn. Authorities said the story might have been a ruse to engage Collings in conversation.

Upon going on deck she said she found the men tying her husband's hands behind his back. One of the two men held a revolver and forced her to return to a cabin where she heard the sound of breaking glass and then a splash. On those sounds she based her belief that Collings had been thrown overboard.

Thought Cast Adrift

The invaders then carried Barbara, who had been asleep in the cockpit, to a cot in the cabin with Mrs. Collings. The child later said she thought her father had been cast adrift in a small boat.

Mrs. Collings said the men, one of whom she described as being about 50 years old and the other a youth of 17 or 18, then ordered her into a canoe from which they had boarded the yacht.

From Mrs. Collings' story, Inspector Harold R. King of Nassau county police said it was plain to him that she had not resisted when directed to leave the child and accompany the men. He refused to say whether he placed any significance on that circumstance.

Inspector King said that a quantity of jewelry was found in the toe of one of Barbara's shoes, but he could find no reason for its presence there nor could Mrs. Collings shed any light on the discovery.

Five Killed in Auto Crashes

Four Fatal Accidents Wednesday Night, Thursday

(By The Associated Press)

Five Iowans are dead and another seriously injured today as the result of four fatal auto accidents in the state Wednesday night and Thursday.

The dead:

Thomas Wagner, 40, Algona.
Sam Hedrick, 30, Algona.
Don Green, 43, Cherokee.
Mrs. Peter Blumendahl, Ashton.

John Doleshaw, 55, Grinnell.

Wagner and Hedrick were killed Thursday evening when their speeding auto failed to make a curve at the edge of the Algona city limits. Witnesses said the Wagner car plunged off the road as its driver attempted to pass a car driven by Dale Davidson of Algona.

Rolls Over Three Times

The car, a light coupe, rolled over three times, and Hedrick's body was thrown 35 feet, witnesses reported. Coroner L. M. Merritt of Kossuth county said an inquest into the two deaths would be held today.

Wagner, a barber, is survived by his widow and a daughter. Hedrick, an oil station employe, is survived by his widow, three daughters and a son.

Plunge Into Creek

Green was killed and John McAndrews, 42, of Portsmouth, seriously injured three miles northwest of Harlan Wednesday night. The car owned by McAndrews, Shelby county farmer, and driven by Green, his hired man, plunged through the railing of a wooden bridge into Silver creek.

The two men were pinned beneath their machine until 7 a. m. Thursday, when they were found by Tony Pepsche and Joseph Stool, farmers living nearby.

Offer No Aid

Mrs. Blumendahl died in a Sibley hospital Thursday from injuries incurred in an accident four miles southwest of there early Wednesday night. The automobile in which she and her husband were riding collided with a Minnesota machine. Both cars went into the ditch, but the occupants of the Minnesota car drove away without offering aid, Blumendahl said.

The fifth fatality occurred when Doleshaw, a bachelor who worked on farms in Poweshiek county, drove his light coupe onto an arterial highway eight miles east of Grinnell, and a Marshalltown bottling works truck collided with it.

Texans Split on Plans for Cotton Laws

AUSTIN, Tex., Sept. 10 (AP)—Texas' capital was a battleground today for two factions seeking cotton relief legislation to which the entire south looked for a precedent.

One group bitterly resented the radio "invasion" of Texas by Gov. Huey P. Long of Louisiana in the interest of his plan to prohibit cotton planting in 1932. The other was allied with the Louisiana governor.

In the midst of the fray was the Texas legislature, meeting to attempt cotton relief by law. Proponents of cotton acreage reduction by the senate agreed today on a control bill that would restrict cotton planting to one-third of the cultivated area in 1932 and 1933. Planting any land to cotton in successive years would be prohibited.

Public hearings continued in the house, which named a special committee to study bills introduced and if necessary, write one that would meet requirements. The committee was expected to report by noon tomorrow.

McCormick and Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick of Chicago, today became the bride of Elisha Dyer Hubbard, 53 year old "farmer" of Middletown, Conn. The ceremony was performed in the gardens of "Deep Cove," summer home of the bride's god-parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Alexander McKinlock of Chicago.

Appeals to Farmers to Think for Selves

DAVENPORT, Sept. 10 (AP)—An appeal to farmers to keep their feet on the ground and "think for themselves" during the current depression was voiced today by Charles F. Hearst, president of the Iowa Farm Bureau federation in an address at the annual picnic of the Scott county Farm Bureau.

Hearst declared that in the past few years too much advice to "help the farmer" has been given, with the result, he said, that little or no progress has been made and the farmer is in as much of a quandary as ever.

"It is high time that every farmer in America stands squarely on his own feet and does his own thinking," Hearst said.

Robbers Attack Photographer COUNCIL BLUFFS (AP)—Attacked and robbed of $10 near Missouri Valley, Wilbur Milhauser, 21, an Oklahoma City photographer, was in a hospital here recovering from his injuries.

6 Day Heat Wave Record

Recent Spell Unusual for Month of September

DES MOINES, Sept. 10 (AP)—Weather bureau officials here today checked their records to find a precedent for the six-day heat wave now smothering Iowans.

Mason City today had 100 degrees as its maximum. Inwood yesterday had 101 degrees, and all of Iowa sweltered in maximal temperatures ranging from 92 to 101.

98 Degrees in Iowa City

Yesterday's thermometer registered 98, marking the day the hottest one of the month. At 7 a. m. the thermometer registered 70, and at 7 p. m. the mercury was at 79. The lowest temperature recorded for Wednesday night was 67.

Muriel McCormick Weds 53 Year Old Connecticut "Farmer"

BAR HARBOR, Me., Sept. 10 (AP)—Muriel McCormick, 29, daughter of Harold H. McCormick and Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick of Chicago, today became the bride of Elisha Dyer Hubbard, 53 year old "farmer" of Middletown, Conn. ## Lindberghs Continue to See Japan Before Hopping Off to China

TOKYO, Sept. 11 (Friday) (AP)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, spending an aerial vacation here with his wife, announced today he and Mrs. Lindbergh would take off tomorrow morning in their monoplane for Osaka, metropolitan center of western Japan.

They plan to spend several days seeing the sights in the Kyoto district, he said, and then will continue with their projected journey to China.

Colonel Lindbergh already has arranged for a Japanese plane to lead them to Osaka, as a precaution against breaking Japanese regulations covering flying over fortified areas.

Actor Settles Income Tax

NEW YORK, Sept. 10 (AP)—The Herald Tribune says that Marion Davies, motion picture actress, has settled a $1,000,000 federal income tax case by paying the bureau of internal revenue $325,000.

Burlington Blaze Threatens Entire Downtown District

BURLINGTON, Sept. 10 (AP)—Fire which destroyed the White furniture warehouse here tonight caused damages estimated at near $100,000.

The fire broke out about 6 p. m. in the finishing room of the warehouse and spread rapidly. A south wind for a time threatened the entire business block, but firemen succeeded in bringing the blaze under control within an hour and a half.

The Monmouth, Ill., and Ft. Madison fire departments were not summoned as at first reported. Burlington railroad trains were held up for a time while hoses were strung across the tracks.

Burt Wagner owned the warehouse building, a three-story brick structure.

Reports Give Slight Hopes for Aviators

SEATTLE, Sept. 10 (AP)—Forty-four hundred miles of ocean and land between here and Japan still holds the secret of the whereabouts of Don Moyle and C. A. Allen, missing transpacific flyers.

Reports that an unidentified plane had been sighted or heard in widely separated parts of the north Pacific region mystified searchers, who were at a loss to know where to begin to look for the last California aviators.

Possible Course

The latest report came from Whitehorse, Yukon territory, where it was reported a plane unknown in the region had been sighted flying southward over Carmacks, 200 miles north of Whitehorse, at 9:30 a. m. (11:30 a. m. C.S.T.). If it was the missing monoplane, Clasina Madge, it was far afield from its charted course from Japan to Seattle.

T. H. Maytag, Four Companions Injured as Auto Overturns

NEWTON, Sept. 10 (AP)—Theodore H. Maytag, 65, member of the Newton washing machine family, and four persons riding with him, were injured today when his auto turned over at the junction of highway 22 and 55 east of Grinnell.

Maytag suffered fractures of three small vertebra bones. Physicians who placed him in a cast said he was in no danger of paralysis, but that he must remain in a cast for six or eight weeks.

The other passengers, all of whom received minor injuries, were the Rev. Ernest Early and Mrs. Early of Newton, W. L. Anderson, a missionary, and Edith Sudlow of Newton.

Jury to Hear Customers of Liquor Ring

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 10 (AP)—What action may be taken against Twin Cities purchasers of liquor from an alleged syndicate operating in Minnesota, Iowa, and the Dakotas, cannot be revealed at this time.

This was the statement of M. L. Harney, eighth district prohibition director, here tonight following a conference with his aid, George C. Parsons, deputy prohibition administrator for Iowa.

Parsons brought Harney the list of Twin Cities customers today. The list was said to contain the names of many prominent business and professional men to whom the alleged syndicate supplied the "best goods."

It was found when Frank Wilson, prohibition agent, captured a liquor laden car near Ft. Dodge, Ia.

The listed customers will be asked to appear before an Iowa grand jury in an attempt to discover operators of the syndicate has been started by Parsons. Harney, however, refused to comment on future procedure.

Capper Says State Able to Aid Farmers

DES MOINES, Sept. 10 (AP)—Senator Arthur Capper, Kansas publisher, in an interview tonight on farm problems, held forth the opinion "there is little doubt that the state can aid the farmer."

"The things Governor Murray—in Kansas we take some of the things Governor Murray does quite seriously—the things he did for the small independent oil companies in his state are an illustration of what a state can do for its people."

The statement was in reply to a question concerning the conference to be held tomorrow between a delegation of Iowa farmers and Governor Turner on the so-called "moratorium" on corn and oats.

The plan of withholding from the market seems sound," the senator commented. "I have doubts, however, about the feasibility of the suggested moratorium on farm debts."

Senator Capper referred briefly to the depression. "We are through the worst of the slump," he explained, "and I think that agriculture is going to be the first of the 'major industries' to recover."

Kansas wheat farmers, the senator declared, are learning to take their product to market in the form of pork. "They can get 50 cents a bushel for it that way," he smiled.

The senator is in Des Moines on his way home from Minneapolis where he attended the Minnesota state fair. "I was particularly interested in the cattle," he said, "especially in view of the effort to increase dairying in Kansas. It was the first time I had been in Minnesota."

Order Investigation in Beating of Iowan in Cleveland Prison

CLEVELAND, Sept. 10 (AP)—Police Judge Bradley Hull late today ordered an investigation into a fight between two policemen and a prisoner after he found Harold McCray, 38, Davenport, Ia., held two days on charges of defrauding a taxicab driver, had been beaten in a cell block.

Patrolman Fred Richter told an investigating officer that McCray had attacked him when he went into the cell to quiet the prisoner. McCray admitted the attack to reporters.

Judge Hull tomorrow will hear McCray, who told newspapermen he was head of a $1,500,000 aviation firm and had a plane at Cleveland airport, on charges preferred by James Western, cab driver.

Cernak Continues Crusade

CHICAGO, Sept. 10 (AP)—Mayor Anton Cernak, continuing his crusade against the city's gambling establishments, today ordered the city law department to seek dissolution of all injunctions restraining the police from raiding gaming houses and other places where they have knowledge the law is being violated.

Rival Groups Battle; Attack Town Mayor

JONESBORO, Ark., Sept. 10 (AP)—Disorders between rival factions in the First Baptist church, including an attack on the mayor and chief of police, tonight caused martial law to be proclaimed in Jonesboro. Authorities said they feared a revival meeting called tonight by the Rev. Joe Jeffers, evangelist, might cause further disorders.

Meanwhile three followers of Mr. Jeffers who are leading a fight for the ouster of Dr. D. H. Heard as pastor of the church, remained in jail charged with assault and battery.

Troops Patrol City

A hundred troops under command of Captain E. Eldridge were ordered to patrol the city after Mayor H. J. Bosler, Sheriff W. R. Nash and the city council requested Governor Parnell to declare a state of martial law to prevent possible further disturbances. A shipment of tear gas bombs was sent here by airplane.

The mayor, as well as Chief of Police Craig, were manhandled by Jeffers' followers who gathered on the meeting which Jeffers sought to hold while waiting for the trial of his followers to begin. The trial was postponed until Saturday.

Grants Concession

Mayor Bosler refused permission for the service, but granted Jeffers' request for a "moment of prayer." Police said the evangelist then launched into a lengthy supplication in which he prayed that a bolt of lightning strike the mayor dead for interfering with the services.

Bosler then interrupted him and ordered that he lead his followers from the city hall lawn. A Jeffers follower sprang at the mayor and threw him to the ground. When Chief of Police Craig pulled him away, he sprang at the officer also and was subdued only when a policeman threatened to strike him with the butt of a revolver.

The disorder at the city hall followed upon a fight last night at the First Baptist church between factions supporting Dr. Heard and Mr. Jeffers. Three followers of Mr. Jeffers were arrested at the church and several hundred of his followers serenaded them with hymns under leadership of Mr. Jeffers.

Charge Assault, Battery

The three were charged with assault and battery growing out of a fight between George Cox, Jr., a Jeffers' follower, and Dr. Henry J. Lile, dentist and member of the Heard faction. Dr. Lile was alleged to have struck Cox' father during an argument in the church after which Cox was charged with attacking the dentist.

Twenty-one members of the Jeffers faction were dismissed members of the First Baptist church who aligned themselves with the evangelist after he had assailed, in his revival tent, the character of Dr. Heard. They were charged with "disloyalty and failure to stand by the church."

Call Prayer Meeting

Dr. Jeffers, informed of the martial law order, gathered a number of his followers about him for a prayer meeting preceding his scheduled revival service, which, Captain Eldridge said, he would not prevent if it were peaceable and orderly.

Mrs. Jeffers told The Associated Press they were praying "if it's God's will that martial law be declared then it is perfectly satisfactory to us because God is mightier than the national guard and he will prevail."

Members Dismissed

The disturbance last night followed an unsuccessful attempt by Jeffers' followers to have the members of the First Baptist church consider in conference the charges against the 21 dismissed members.

The Heard group voted down the proposal.

During the course of his sermon tonight, the evangelist made a vitriolic attack on the private life of Dr. Heard and also on two of the leaders of the church here, Denver Dudley, former state legislator, and Gordon Crenshaw, deacon, who recently flew to Big Spring, Tex., and obtained affidavits supporting to show deacons of the church there vindicated Dr. Heard of any guilt in the Jeffers accusations.

The evangelist asserted the "two edged sword of truth" tending to create divisions was necessary to eradicate the evils of hypocrisy and double lives.

His sermon was punctuated frequently by choruses of "Amen" from the audience.

Speeding up of the registration process at the University of Iowa to result in the saving of a half day was announced yesterday by Herbert C. Dorcas, registrar.

Sept. 16 at 2 p.m. has been set as the official starting time. Then each of the more than 6,000 students, both freshmen and upperclassmen, are expected to report at designated stations to receive registration material and officials' explanations.

Will Close Saturday Noon
By the expediting of the process, it will be possible to close all registration precincts Saturday noon, Sept. 19, with virtually all of the students enrolled and ready for the opening of classes Monday morning, Dorcas said. In other years, all of Saturday afternoon has been used.

Professors in charge of first year courses will devote their entire attention to freshmen during all of Thursday, since no upperclass undergraduates will be admitted to the registration stations until Friday morning.

Graduate Ruling
Graduate students also will complete their enrollment Thursday, according to Dorcas, since all of the professors concerned with graduate major and minor courses will be free for conferences with the mature scholars.

So perfected are the plans for freshman registration that the actual process should require little more than an hour if the first year students follow directions precisely, the registrar declared.

Estimates of Wheat, Corn Fall Shorter

Decreases Over August Prediction Only Small

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10 (AP)—Government experts today forecast lower wheat and corn yields than in their August estimate but the decreases were too small to make an appreciable dent in the agricultural surplus.

The agriculture department said the 1931 probable production of all wheat, including the 775,000,000 bushels of winter wheat estimated on Aug. 1, totals 886,000,000 bushels as compared with the 894,000,000 bushels forecast on Aug. 1. This is 29,000,000 bushels more, however, than was harvested in 1930, and is 64,000,000 bushels above the five-year average of production.

Corn Estimate

The crop was estimated at 2,715,357,000 bushels, a decline from the August forecast of approximately two per cent.

The crop reporting board said, however, that this was only 45,396,000 bushels less than the average production of the five years from 1925 to 1929 and was 622,000,000 bushels larger than the production of 1930.

The forecast said declines in Iowa, Michigan, Nebraska and South Dakota in the period from August 1 to Sept. 1 ranged from two to five bushels per acre.

Prospective Increases

On the other hand there were increases in prospective yields in Ohio, Indiana, Minnesota, Missouri and Kansas from one to one and a half bushels.

The forecast said that yields of spring wheat were better than was expected a month ago in most of the states east of the Mississippi but that this was offset by disappointing yields in some of the important spring wheat states.

In the country as a whole, the department said, crop yields were expected to average about one per cent below the prospects of a month ago but this figure was given as 9.8 per cent above the yields of last year.

Ten Year Average

The forecast said that in comparison with the 10-year average, the low production of corn, spring grains and various other crops was offset by the good yields of cotton, winter wheat and apples.

In most of the eastern and southern states crop prospects have improved and the yields there are expected to be above the average but in the northwestern and some of the central states, including Michigan, Illinois and Kansas drought has caused a further decrease.

Continue Hunt for Kidnapers

CHICAGO, Sept. 10 (AP)—The search for a band of kidnapers was back at its starting point tonight, with five suspects absolved by failure of victims to identify them, but with fresh mysteries awaiting solution.

The quintet rounded up at Decatur and brought here last night were freed today by two men whose freedom was bought for $75,000 and $50,000, but neither James Hackett, Blue Island roadhouse keeper, nor John J. Lynch, racing publisher, could recognize them.

Unexplained yet were the statements of Decatur authorities that Hackett interviewed the five prisoners in a cell for more than an hour Wednesday and positively identified Monte Moore as one of his kidnap-

Eloper's Wife May Be Next School Janitor

THURMAN, Sept. 10 (AP)—The job deserted by Dave D. Rhode, Thurma high school janitor when he "eloped" with Helen Gardner, principal of the high school, is to be filled by Mrs. Rhode, the deserted wife and mother of five children, if the will of Thurman residents is respected by the school board.

Petitions requesting the school board to give the job to Mrs. Rhode were circulated today. The board is expected to act favorably.

The ill fated elopement of Rhode and Miss Gardner ended in tragedy at Scotts Bluff, Neb., when Miss Gardner fell down a nine foot flight of stairs and was almost instantly killed. A brother and sister of the dead woman are in Scotts Bluff to return the body.

A coroner's jury in the Nebraska town today freed Rhode of any blame in the death and he expressed a desire to return to Thurman for the funeral of Miss Gardner. A. J. Gardner, the brother, opposed this desire of Rhode's, stating that while he did not wish to have any charges filed against Rhode he did not want the man to return to Thurman until after the funeral.

Mrs. Rhode today said that a reconciliation with her husband was impossible because "then I would lose my job." "The job" was the janitorship which she would lose if she and her husband are reconciled. Two sons would aid Mrs. Rhode at the school if she is given the job.

But We Care What Happens

AN ex-motocycle salesman and an ex-washing machine salesman, one mourning the death of his sweetheart and the other facing a jail term have become in the last 48 hours, by their absence, subjects of concern all over the American continent.

When they left Japan Monday afternoon bent on completing the first non stop flight between that island and America, Don Moyle and Cecil Allen, experienced California flyers, were observed by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who commented: "The boys have all my best wishes. It's a dangerous job they have undertaken."

Waiting at the Seattle airport, W. W. Connor, president of the Seattle branch of the National Aeronautical association, has a brass band ready to play "When Good Pals Get Together," no matter when they arrive.

Even though Moyle, who faces a charge of driving an automobile while intoxicated, said when he started: "If I make it, it means jail. If I don't, well—there's the deep blue sea," and Allen, whose fiancée was killed in an air crash last March, said: "I don't care what happens to me,"—America hopes they make it.

For the two flyers, perhaps, there was little at stake; even the $25,000 prize offered by a Tokyo newspaper losing its glitter in their fatalistic senses. Yet for thousands of aviation enthusiasts, and many more thousands of just plain folk who can feel sympathetic, Moyle and Allen are heroes. And if the intermittent storms that lash the North Pacific prove too much for their plane, veteran of two former similar attempts, Moyle and Allen will not be remembered for their social missteps or don't-give-a-damn attitudes but as martyrs to the cause of aviation.

On, or Off, The Straight?

WHEN Gar Wood, defending the Harmsworth Trophy at Detroit the other day, streaked across the starting line nine seconds ahead of the gun and inveigled Kaye Don, British challenger, to follow him and become disqualified, he started rolling a wave of criticism that has found a strong echo in the British press.

Commenting on the affair, the London Star said: "We are glad to see that Kaye Don is not complaining about the methods of Gar Wood in defeating him. That will commend him to the large mass of Americans whose sporting standards are those of the civilized world." The Star implied, of course, that Wood's standards of sportsmanship were distorted, uncivilized, and unworthy of an American.

But Wood, who has been defending the trophy for the last decade, could certainly not be guilty of such a breach of sportsmanship without due provocation. And his statement headlined in another London paper as: "Gar Wood's Remarkable Admission After Race," we are willing to accept as partial absolution of the American.

Wood had asked for a postponement in order to repair a newly-discovered gasoline leak but his request was refused by the Briton. After the race the defender said: "When they told me I could not have a postponement I made up my mind that I'd show Don a trick or two. I said I'd be over the starting line ahead of the gun and if Don wanted to follow, it was his business."

It seems that the London press is showing less sportsmanship by indicting Wood, although it deplores any attempts to "indict the nation," without giving the matter second thought. And the Star adds insult to injury by saying: "It is shown clearly, as everybody admitted, that Kaye Don could win 'on the straight.'"

The upshot of the "race" was that Gar's brother, George, won by circling the course alone three times at the average speed of 50 miles an hour, defeating the primary aim of the trophy donor of inducing speed competition.

The American standards of sportsmanship have not been violated by Wood's behavior. Rather, a sense of justice has been eliminated from consideration of the affair by most commentators.

Two Days After Ringnecks

THOSE IOWA counties that petition for the open pheasant season this fall will certainly witness an unprecedented influx of hunters since it has been announced that the open shooting on the ringnecks will be permitted only two days this year instead of five, as in previous years.

Cutting three days from the open season will mean that the thousands of men who make a habit of spraying bullets at the pheasants each fall will all be flocking to the Iowa corn fields on the same days, thus throwing those territories open to more shooting in a shorter length of time than in former years, and adding to the danger of human lives that are close to the fields of onslaught.

Six thousand four hundred twenty-five hunters from 92 Iowa counties and five states led the attack on the Chinese ringnecks in 33 Iowa counties last year. These hunters are all coming back this fall in spite of the fact that the season has been shortened three days. Chances are that they will kill just as many birds, and in their mad scramble to get their share of the pheasant loot in two days, there will be more gates left open, more fences torn down, more promiscuous shooting, and more trespassing than ever before.

Although the State Fish and Game commission declares that sentiment among farmers and sportsmen alike led to curtailing last year's open season of five days, it is quite likely that the mistake of granting only two open days will be emphasized before this year's season is closed, and that the error will be rectified by allowing a longer season of warfare on the ringnecks next year.

Indulging a National Habit

(From The Chicago Daily News)
This large nation's political scene would not be complete without Alfalfa Bill. The type is indigenous to our soil. It grows in the great open spaces. Its emotions and its thinking are primitive and picturesque. It is naively egotistic.

The type is always entertaining, and seldom dangerous. When the cheering subsides the common sense of the common people asserts itself. The plaudits are seldom transferable to the ballot box. The applause is not politically negotiable.

The Alfalfa Bill's say the things that relieve the feelings of their demonstrative audiences; but feelings having found relief, intelligence operates to keep the Alfalfa Bills on the stump and to put other leaders in responsible national offices. Oklahoma and Texas and other courageous commonwealths, where the grass grows tall and the public sense of humor is irreplaceable, occasionally elect an Alfalfa Bill as governor. Maintaining a public official of real comedy value is one way of keeping a hard-working population amused and getting the state continually into the news.

When, however, success in the dear old home state inspires the Alfalfa Bills to seek national leadership an amiable country smilingly listens, looks them over and restrains within reasonable bounds its natural love for comedy.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh again proved his prowess as a navigator when he learned to use his chopsticks.

TODAY'S TOPICS

By FRANK JAFFE

There is an English tradition that anyone born within sound of "Bow Bells," housed in the Church of St. Mary le Bow, in London, is a Cockney. Now, the world's supply of Cockneys, if that tradition counts for anything, is in serious danger of being curtailed, for the church is in a sad state of repair and out of funds.

But over in China, officials are taking drastic measures to keep the men from wearing queues and the women from binding their feet. Propaganda has been started by the health bureau warning conservative parents that a heavy penalty will be imposed on them if they bind their daughters' feet. Policemen have been stationed at the market places and public houses armed with concealed scissars.

When a man wearing a queue walks past, the policeman jumps out and clips it off. That's a good idea. Let's do that with long tongues over here. Or with the long-eared variety of homo sapiens. They won't object. Make it a law and they can't.

Confetti, it has been discovered, was first used as such by a French calendar maker, who swept up some of the holes punched out of calendar pads and took them to the opera one night. He sat in the balcony and dropped the pellets down the backs of the patrons below. When other nightwits saw how effectively the paper stuck to peoples' clothes and caused a great deal of annoyance when extricated from the hair, they immediately began to manufacture the stuff on a large basis.

Over in London, they're exhibiting ancient Egyptian bull tombs, in which the sacred animals were buried with the full ritual afforded to a god. They were bedecked with small, and sometimes large, fortunes in gold and jewelry, and their life stories were perpetuated in beautifully ornamented tablets. That just proves they never threw the bull in those days. No, they just laid it away carefully.

Planes will soon be as numerous and matter of fact as model T Fords used to be. Here's one good indication. Two lads were recently forced down in their antiquated plane at Springfield, Mass., airport and sought repairs. But a state inspector grounded them for not having licenses either for the plane or themselves. Now, he's trying to find a licensed pilot brave enough to fly the wreck out of the state.

Some people have the funniest notions about what really is important and worthwhile in this world. A couple of zoologists over in Africa are wondering why there are no crocodiles in Lakes Edward and George in the Uganda district. And here are two of their pet theories on the subject. Either the distribution of crocodiles was completed in a geological era previous to the formation of the two lakes; or there was some chemical characteristic of the water which forbade the existence of reptiles. Who cares, anyway?

A total of 1,200 cases was handled in Manhattan and Brooklyn over the recent Labor day week end, with one person taking care of 537 cases in four hours. There were Scotch and — oh, all nationalities, practically, represented in the traffic violation cases in the New York courts. Let's see, at $30 a case, that would be enough to provide lots of the kind of grease the Wickersham commission mentioned in one of its recent reports.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE SIMPSON

WASHINGTON — A Texas friend of the Bystander's insists that the 15th congressional district of that state is a very remarkable place.

JOHN N. GARNER

It leads the world, he says, in production of honey and goats.

A variety of weed known as catclaws, very dear to bees, explains the honey; the liking of people in hot climates for suits fabricated from mohairs explains the multiplicity of goats, says this authority.

The district's other chief production seems to be votes for John N. Garner for congress.

The official congressional biography of that gentleman of the ruddy face, the tousled white hair and the far from honeyed tongue consists of nothing but a recapitulation of his elections and it takes four printed lines to get 'em all in.

They begin with the 58th congress and include the 72nd, over the house of which it is quite possible Mr. Garner may preside as speaker. Who knows?

RETIRING?

There is one little habit the "Hon. Jack" has set up all these years, however, which might not be a very compelling argument in his favor among his house colleagues. It is authoritatively reported that he has never mailed out a copy of a speech by himself.

Mailing speeches is a very popular pastime with most house members. Garner's attitude is somewhat of a congressional eccentricity.

Looking over the book of congressional facts you come across a statement that the minority floor leader of the last house was John N. Garner and that "E. R. Garner" was his secretary. Which just goes to show that this Garner monopoly on the 15th Texas is a family affair after all.

E. R. Garner is otherwise known as Mrs. Jack Garner, and nobody, least of all her husband, has ever been able to persuade her that she could find more fun in her Washington life otherwise than by taking an active part in her husband's personal and party political affairs.

LOST WITHOUT JOB

The Bystander's Texas friend says Garner once did persuade Mrs. Garner to take things a little more easily. He had another secretary for a brief interval. It did not work.

Mrs. Garner was so down-hearted and lost without her congenial secretarial duties that she was back on the job mighty soon. The congressional representation of the 15th Texas continues as a Garner family affair.

If Garner should become speaker, he would climax his long political career with a supreme test.

Whoever is speaker of the house of the 72nd congress, be he Republican or Democrat or what have you, faces that. With the party lines so close, the speakership will be no bed of roses for anybody.

LORD BYNG OF VIMY

SCOTLAND YARD

London, Sept. 11—Such is the world constituted that what causes apprehension on one hemisphere would be hailed with rejoicing in another.

London and New York speak the same language, both are of nearly an equal size, numerous things they have in common, but the matter of crime, the prevention of it and the arrest and conviction of criminals they are as far apart as if they represented the metropolises of distant planets.

Where the British capital is troubled by the fact that it had 21 murders in 1930, New York would be surprisingly pleased if it could hold up such a record. What one city is ashamed of would be the pride of the other. Well, let's see why.

The annual report of Lord Byng of Vimy, Commissioner of Metropolitan Police, states, with worry written between every line, that there were 21 homicides committed within the area supervised by the London police during 1930. That area has nearly 12,000,000 people.

Lord Byng, a hero of the war, later Governor-General of Canada, and now chief of one of the most efficient police departments in the world, amplifies his astounding (to British minds) report by pointing out that 21 murders in one year brings the average to that of post-war days and represents a tremendous increase over the number committed the previous year, which was 10.

However, this doughty warrior who is protecting Londoners with a higher rate of efficiency than was ever dreamed of on this side of the Atlantic is a city of similar size, is happy to state that 10 of the murders were arrested and punished, nine committed suicide, including one who had done two of the murders, which leaves only one slayer at large. And with such a record, British law enforcement authorities are fretful!

Now we'll take a hasty and shame-faced glance at the criminal record of New York. Prepare yourself—

Vinegar Spill Aids Workers in Finding New Floor Cleaner

Necessity may proverbially be the mother of invention, but accident may serve as well, if a workman's discovery of the latest in household hints is an indication.

Men working at the Iowa Union had met with little success in cleaning plaster and mortar from the tile floor of the lobby after plastering in the room had been completed. That is until one of them happened to spill some vinegar on the floor during his lunch hour.

The sour liquid proved to have high efficiency in cleaning up the stains, and a five gallon container of it was brought to the building at once to complete the job.

Iowa City Soon to Have Through Traffic From St. Paul to St. Louis Over Old Red Ball Highway Route

In 1913 the "Red Ball" highway was located and marked between St. Paul and St. Louis. Out of this pioneer movement for better roads has developed a concrete highway passing through Iowa City, which is destined to carry a great volume of overland traffic.

The "Red Ball" highway routing was changed to highway No. 40 in the first general rearrangement of highways a few years ago. Today the highway is marked as U. S. highways No. 61, 161, 30, 218, and 65.

A glance at an Iowa road map shows that a great many east and west roads have been surfaced with concrete between the eastern borders of the state. There are only a limited number of direct paved routes crossing Iowa north and south. Only one, the Jefferson highway, No. 65, is completely paved.

With the opening of the Red Ball paving in Washington county all through and intermediate traffic will follow this highway and Iowa City will enjoy the benefits of its location on a through road.

Washington on Route

The link now being paved was seriously handicapped travel as it has been merely a dirt road from Alnsworth to the Johnson county line. Washington, Ia., can soon be reached over all paved roads, using U. S. highway No. 161 to Alnsworth and route No. 2 west to Washington.

As it will be preferable to highway No. 1, which is rough and dusty, it is probable that the bulk of traffic to and from Washington will travel over the new highway.

Going from Keokuk the Red Ball road is marked U. S. highway No. 61 for a short distance, then marked U. S. highway 161 to Cedar Rapids. U. S. highway No. 30 is followed for 19 miles west of Cedar Rapids to a junction with U. S. highway No. 218 which can be followed to Oattona, Minn. U. S. highway No. 65 leads from there to the Twin Cities.

U. S. highway No. 218 is paved to Floyd, north of Charles City, then gravelled to Austin, Minn., and paved from Austin to Oattona. The gravel section from Floyd to Austin is well maintained.

Cubs Stage Batting Carnival to Overwhelm Phillies 17-4; Get 21 Hits

Smash Long Losing Streak; Malone Hurls

Pat Smacks Homer; Hartnett Drives in Six Runs

CHICAGO, Sept. 10 (AP)—The Cubs broke a nine game losing streak this afternoon when they slaughtered the Philadelphia Phillies by a 17 to 4 score. It was the first league victory for the Bruins this month, and enabled them to gain a game on Brooklyn for third place.

The Phils, weakened by the absence of Chuck Klein, who is suffering from lumbago, were in the ball game for four innings, but in the fifth Chicago scored nine runs off Jim Elliott and Watt and after this continued to score freely in every inning. Gabby Hartnett drove home six runs with a home run, a double, and two singles. Every Cub who was in the starting lineup got one or more hits during the melee. Malone and Hurst also hit home runs.

In the second inning, Vince Barton scored the first Chicago run when he raced all the way home on Dan Taylor's long fly to Brickell in center field.

Pat Malone, making his first start after his recent fine by the club, was a fair pitcher and, aided by the heavy attack of his mates, had little trouble getting his thirteenth win of the season.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
Philadelphia.....0 10 011 000—4 10 2
Chicago.....010 093 13*—17 31 1

Batteries: Malone and Hartnett, J. Taylor, J. Elliott, Watt, Fallenstein and Davis.

Hallahan Hurls Win No. 16 Over Braves

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 10 (AP)—Hurling shutout ball for eight innings, although weakening temporarily in the ninth, Bill Hallahan scored his sixteenth victory of the season for the Cardinals here today as the National league champions turned back the Boston Braves, 7 to 3 in the first of a three-game series.

The Cardinal southpaw allowed but one hit until the seventh, but with substantial lead compiled by his mates, let up in the final frame, three hits and an error in the ninth producing all the Boston tallies.

The Cardinals got to "Socks" Seibold in the early innings, Frankie Frisch, in the second, doubling with the bases filled to drive in three runs. Jim Bottomley hit a homer off Harold Haid in the eighth.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
Boston.....000 000 003—3 7 1
St. Louis.....140 000 11*—7 13 1

Batteries: Seibold, Sherdel, Haid and Spohrer; Hallahan and Wilson.

Giants Halt Bucs' Streak, 6-1 Score

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 10 (AP)—The New York Giants halted the Pirates' winning streak after eight straight victories today when they pummeled Remy Kremer for five hits in the first inning and took the series opener 6 to 1.

Carl Hubbell limited Pittsburgh to four hits, two of them coming together to produce the Pirates' only run in the first inning. Jensen's triple and Traynor's double brought the score. The Bucs used four pitchers but all the Giant runs came off Kremer and Bob Osborn in the first two innings.

Freddy Lindstrom made his first appearance in the field for the Giants since he suffered a broken foot July 9. He played five innings at second base.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
New York.....510 000 000—6 11 1
Pittsburgh.....100 000 000—1 4 1

Batteries: Hubbell and Hogan; Kremer, Osborn, Wood, Spencer and Phillips.

Sportively Speaking

By Bill Ruledge

Getting enough hits and runs to win three ordinary games, the Cubs finally swung back in a winning stride yesterday afternoon in whaling the Phillies 17 to 4. It can now be safely predicted that they will wind up in third place.

Until yesterday it appeared that the Bruins might sink into second division, with the Pirates the most probable team to jerk them from the upper tier of the National league.

The Cubs' trouble may have been that they were using too many rookies. At times over half of the team on the field was rookies. Manager Rogers Hornsby, whose scintillating performances were the principal factor in the good showing of the Chicagoans in the fore part of the race, has returned to active play at third base, and since then the Cubs have been winning.

Jackie Berg of England enhanced his reputation as being one of the greatest battlers in the fight game by lasting 15 rounds against Tony Canzoneri in a scrap for the lightweight championship at New York last night.

Berg should have taken a knock-out defeat in the fourth round. Every time he was floored he bounced up like a rubber ball. He hung on and hung on under the most terrific fire little Tony could unleash. At the final gong the Englishman was still on his feet.

The Big Six race for batting honors has tightened up to the point where four figures are necessary to separate the leaders. Babe Ruth holds first position by .0003 points over Al Simmons. Chuck Klein is at .0004 points behind his teammate, Virgil Davis.

For a few days last year the fight for the leadership of the National league between the Cubs, Cards, and Robins was so furious that four figures were necessary in the standings.

Reds Break Loose to Whip Robins 5-1

CINCINNATI, Sept. 10 (AP)—After seven innings of a close duel between Red Lucas and Dazzy Vance that gave Cincinnati a 2 to 1 lead, the Reds broke loose against Jack Quinn in the eighth and trounced the Brooklyn Robins, 5 to 1.

Vance gave only five hits before he was removed for a pinch hitter in the seventh but three of them were combined with an error in the fifth for two runs. Quinn yielded four blows and retired one man on a sacrifice in the eighth then stepped down for Hollis Thurston, who was touched for the last Cincinnati run. Red Lucas gave 11 hits but the only Robins counter was scored on two singles and one of the Reds' five double plays.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
Brooklyn.....000 100 000—1 11 1
Cincinnati.....000 020 03*—5 10 0

Batteries: Vance, Quinn, Thurston and Lopez; Lucas and Sukeforth.

Tony Canzoneri Wins 15 Round Decision Over Jackie Berg of England

Champ Flays Englishman in One-Sided Go

Drops Kid With Foul Blows; Wins 10 of 15 Rounds

POLO GROUNDS, New York, Sept. 10 (AP)—Tony Canzoneri, brilliant champion of the lightweights, flayed Jackie Berg into defeat again tonight and once and for all hammered all the title aspirations out of the British challenger.

For fifteen rounds, with only a break here and there as the grinning Italian chose to be merciful, Tony battered the thin-faced Englishman around the ring in the big National league ball yard while 17,000 of the faithful, who paid $15,000 to see the duel, cheered, groaned and sometimes booed.

Twice Berg was knocked down for counts of nine, the second time by a left hook to the body that was palpably low, and a half dozen times he reeled, bleeding and groggy, scarcely able to keep his feet under the punishment the flashing champion dealt him.

"Under the Gun"
Berg, lacking in the early rounds much of the dash and incessant punching ability he displayed in his rise to the position of a title challenger, was nailed "under the gun" by Canzoneri's whistling right hand and he went down for a count of nine from a smash to the chin before the first round was half over.

For a few seconds it seemed that the Englishman would not go as far as he did in Chicago, when Canzoneri knocked him out in two rounds, but Jackie rose and finished the round without running into further trouble.

The second time Berg was on the floor, in the eighth round, the blow that dropped him would have cost Canzoneri his title on a foul if tonight's duel had been fought before the New York state athletics commission outlawed low blows.

Lands Foul Blow
A left hook that landed deep in foul territory dropped Jackie groaning but there was nothing the referee, silver-haired Patsy Haley, could do but count nine over him. Berg came up without trouble but this time Tony lashed him about the ring under a volley of vicious body blows and while the crowd roared its disapproval Jackie stumbled through the bombardment to the bell.

Aside from these two rounds, the highlights of the evening, Canzoneri fought the battle of a master, battering Berg ceaselessly in all but three rounds where he tried to outslug the game but failed. Here Berg, a piston-shooting dynamo at close range, managed to outmail the champion and win the fifth, sixth and tenth rounds. Despite the knock-down he suffered, Berg was credited with the eighth round because of the low blow that floored him. The fourteenth round was even.

Takes Terrific Beating
For the remainder of the distance Canzoneri gave Berg a terrific beating. In the first round, before flooring the Englishman, Canzoneri opened a gash in Berg's eye-brow with a right hand smash. Within two more rounds he had Berg's nose bleeding and in the late rounds he cut Berg again with his accurate punches about both eyes.

The Englishman scarcely was able to stagger through the last five rounds as Canzoneri stood off and blasted his head and body with rocketing left and right hand smashes. But he never quit trying, however, and at times Tony seemed to let him rest and regain the stamina necessary to carry him through the entire fifteen rounds.

The Associated Press score card gave Canzoneri an edge in ten rounds, with four for Berg and one even. Berg had about a three pound pull in the weights, scaling 134 1/2 to 131 3/4 for the champion.

English Women in Finals
PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 10 (AP)—John Ridley and Mrs. Elsie Goldsack Pittman, both of London, England, today entered the finals of the women's middle states tennis championship at the Philadelphia Cricket club. Iowa's football prospects for 1931 were discussed by Coach Burton A. Ingwersen in a talk at the Knights of Columbus banquet last night at the K.C. home.

The center of the line will be strong with Marcus Magnusson, Ed Dolly, and Nelson Tompkins—but the outer edges present a difficult problem, Coach Ingwersen said.

Gordon C. Locke, Ingwersen's new first assistant, also talked. He said he was glad to be back in Iowa City and back on the coaching staff.

William L. Condon, chairman of the lecture committee was in charge of the banquet. Reports were made by J. M. Bradley and C. C. Ries on the supreme convention at Indiana. E. W. Connell of Grand Junction was a guest of J. E. Galens.

Pat Malone stepped out yesterday and chalked up his thirteenth victory of the season.

With men on first and third in the opening inning, Cleveland failed to score as Morgan drove into a double killing, Cronin to Myer to Kuhl.

Rail Decline Sets Pace in Stock Prices

Net Reductions Mostly Moderate; Some Early Gains

NEW YORK, Sept. 10 (AP)—Stocks settled a little closer to the June lows today.

Although net declines were mostly moderate, the market's failure to follow an early rally plainly indicated that shorts still felt reasonably secure and wanted to hold out a while longer.

Encouraging Start The opening gave promise of a fairly respectable improvement, for a number of prominent issues made overnight gains of one point or more.

However, the pace was slow and before the session was very old the market had run into the Rock Island dividend omission, an obstacle at which the rails quickly shied.

New lows for eight or ten carriers demonstrated that the group had not been immunized against unfavorable news.

The action of Rock Island's directors seemed unexpected, for the stock broke 10 points before reducing its decline to 6 3/4 net, Baltimore and Ohio, Northern Pacific and Norfolk and Western lost 2 to 3.

York Central was steady and Atchafalaya off only a fraction.

1-3 Point Drop Westinghouse, General Electric, Corn products, Procter and Gamble, a number of other specialties and most of the utilities made unimpressive showings, down 1 to nearly 3 points.

For U. S. Steel, American Can, American Telephone, National Biscuit and Bethlehem the support was firmer and their final changes were unimportant.

International Telephone was sold in anticipation of the dividend cut, announced after the close.

A payment of 25 cents a share, against the previous quarterly rate of 50 cents, was ordered. The decline was leisurely and the market paused long enough in the afternoon to allow a slight stiffening of prices, but the closing tone was heavy.

A net loss of 1.1 points carried the composite for 90 shares to 109.2 compared with the June minimum of 96.8.

Sales fell off to 1,510,250 shares, about half a million under yesterday's volume.

To Vote on Power Plan FAIRFIELD (AP)—Residents here will vote Oct. 13 on the question of constructing a municipal light and power plant not to cost more than $400,000.

State Surveys Iowa River for Sanitation

DES MOINES, Sept. 10 (AP)—While engineers continue their studies of sanitary conditions in the Little Sioux, Iowa, Wapsipicon, and Nishnabotna rivers, Dr. D. C. Steelsmith, state health commissioner, was going over testimony on Cedar river conditions.

Dr. Steelsmith said engineers are compiling data on surveys of the Iowa river and that their report would be expected next spring. He said he might have a decision regarding the Cedar river conditions, about which a hearing was conducted here Wednesday, in about two weeks.

Wheat Takes Another Rise; Corn Weaker

CHICAGO, Sept. 10 (AP)—Enlarged milling demand reflected by more than 4 cents bulge in September delivery of wheat at Minneapolis gave strength today to the wheat market here.

A further stimulus for bullish sentiment was the fact that contract grades of wheat available to be used at once were commanding good premiums in all domestic centers.

Previous speculative sellers of wheat at Minneapolis were reported to have switched to the buying side, with Minneapolis top quotations up more than 8 cents a bushel in less than a week.

Wheat closed unsettled, 1.8 to 3.4 cents up, corn 1.8 to 1.2 off, oats unchanged to 1.8 higher, and provisions unchanged to 12 cents advance.

Corn weakened under selling pressure ascribed largely to the principal Chicago holder. There was also some selling of corn against purchases of wheat.

The government crop report on 1931 corn production came after trading had ended, and was regarded as moderately bullish, totaling 18,000,000 bushels less than the average of recent private returns.

Cash interests were buyers of oats. Provisions responded to upturns in hog values.

The Wolves of the WaterFront by Edgar Wallace

Synopsis of Preceding Installments

Lila Smith, formerly a lodging house slave, whose past is shrouded in mystery, is lured by her old employer, Mrs. Oaks, from the place of safety in which the police have hidden her. Inspector John Wade, of the London police, loves Lila and believes her to be Della Pattison, an heiress. Her captors place her aboard a vessel, and she finds that Golly Oaks, an old river front idler is a fellow passenger. He is wanted by the police, having been implicated in an attempt to kill John Wade, while the officer was on the track of a criminal gang known as the India Rubber men.

Nineteenth Installment

"Pilot?" cried Lila Smith. "What! Are we going to sea?" she asked in alarm. "Where are we going, Mr. Oaks — Uncle Golly?" He shook his head. "Nobody quite knows." "Why am I being kept here?" "For your own good, my dear." He sat down and drank his tea in large, noisy gulps. "For your own good," he repeated. "There are all sorts of people after you. That man Wade!" He shook his head solemnly. "What a rascal! What a villain un'ung! One of the trickiest men in Wapping. Lives on graft — the India Rubber men have paid him thousands."

She could not believe her ears, but Mr. Oaks seemed very serious. He was almost convincing, too. "I'm telling you," he said solemnly, "that I wouldn't be surprised if he is one of the India Rubber men himself. Haven't you read the papers lately?"

"But Mr. Wade couldn't do a thing like that," she said indignantly.

"Oh, couldn't he?" demanded Golly, with a sarcastic smile. "You never know what a fellow like that will do. What's his pay? A beggarly five pounds a week. Do you think he can live on that? No, my dear, he gets money from people who've got to keep him sweet — gambling house keepers, for instance. He was after your money."

"My money?" Mr. Oaks recovered himself quickly.

"That's what I call a figure of speech. He wants somebody who'll be a sort of servant to him — bake and iron and wash and keep his house for him — for nothing. A beggarly fellow like that would want a cheap kind of wife. He couldn't afford—"

"But you said he made thousands by dishonesty," said the girl.

Mr. Oaks coughed. He had fallen into error again.

"In a manner of speaking," he said vaguely. Then, in an effort to change the subject: "Plenty of books here — books that will amuse you. Pity you can't read foreign languages; that's where all the literature is."

He indicated a very well stocked book shelf, at which the girl had not yet looked.

"Look after yourself. I'll send the captain to see you."

"The captain? You mean Mr. —"

"Alkness his name is," interrupted Golly. "Never mind what you called him before. The gentleman that used to take you out to supper."

He was watching her closely as he spoke.

"Nice feller, isn't he? More like a father than anybody you've ever met, I'll bet. Fifty-eight, that's how old he is. If he tells you he's fifty-two, he's telling a lie."

And, after giving her this piece of information, he went out with a cheery wave of his hand.

He left her with plenty of food for thought. The Mr. Oaks she knew had gone forever. This was a new man, fantastic, unreal. But nevertheless, she was glad that he was on board. She felt safer now. Somehow, she preferred him to his wife; they had always been very good friends, and he had often told her his troubles.

The ship was scarcely moving now. Lila had thought earlier in the day, that something had collided with it — probably a tug, but it must have been a powerful tug, for the entire vessel had been shaken.

She went to bed early that night and woke at four to hear a curious sound — the lowing of a cow. Then it came a second time. And then she heard a cock crow, and a bell struck the hour. Cows and chickens and village chimneys did not accord with Mr. Oaks's statement that they were lying in midstream at the mouth of the Thames. Finally the creaking of cart wheels was distinctly audible.

She determined to ask Golly, when she saw him, whether she could go on deck. There was plenty of fresh air in the cabin, but she wanted to see the sea breezes and to see the light of day.

Captain Alkness called just before lunch. He did not wear his uniform, but was plainly dressed in flannels and carried a soft felt hat. He was so tall that he had to stoop as he came into the cabin, and, for the first time, she looked at him closely. Fifty-eight was more likely his age than 52, she told herself.

"Well, my dear, getting tired?"

He patted her on the shoulder, and, for some reason, she shrank from his touch.

"We'll have you ashore in a day or two," he said. "I've got a car waiting to whisk you off to the west of England. But, for a little while, I think you'd better keep out of sight."

He asked her if Oaks had been to see her that morning, and when she said 'No,' he seemed relieved.

"Is Lord Sinford on board?" she said. She had meant to ask Golly the night before, and had forgotten.

Alkness looked as if the name of Lord Sinford were distasteful to him.

"No, he's not," he said shortly. "You can put that fellow out of your mind, Lila. He's not worthy of you, or any other woman."

This was a relief to her — a great relief. Ever since she had come on board, she had expected, at any moment, that the door would open and the fatuous face of his lordship would appear.

The attitude of Captain Alkness was very different than it had been on their occasional meetings. Then he had seemed self-confident, able to meet any situation. Now he was strangely nervous; he made several attempts to speak, cleared his throat, and relapsed again into silence. Finally he asked:

"How old do you think I am, Lila?"

"Fifty-eight," she said promptly, and evidently the reply did not please him.

"I'm 52," he said sharply. "Oaks has been talking. He insists on that 58 year nonsense. I'm 52 on the third of July; a comparatively young man, with 29 years of vigorous life before me."

He said this loudly and defiantly. She wondered what was coming next, and half guessed.

"If you ever get married, my dear, choose a man much older than yourself — a man of the world, who can look after you."

He walked to the door, opened it, looked out, and then closed it and came back to her.

"A man who could lift you out of danger and place you safe, as quick as that!" He snapped his fingers loudly.

He surveyed her for a long time without speaking. His expression was so gloomy that she was almost frightened.

"There are a lot of people who want to pick up an easy million," he went on. "Don't lose your head, if somebody comes to you with a good proposition. Remember that I'm around, and, if you wanted to get off this packet, I could do it—like that!" He snapped his fingers again.

And then he went off at a tangent.

"When I came back on this last trip, I knew you weren't a child any more, and you sort of got me." He thumped his chest. "You understand? You meant something to me, and you mean more and more every day. I'd take a big risk for you, million or no million—"

"What do you mean by 'million,' Captain Alkness?"

He coughed and was palpably embarrassed.

"I thought Golly had seen you and had a chat with you. He didn't, eh?" She smiled. He was so obviously uneasy and she felt so completely the mistress of the situation. It was a novel sensation, and it amused her.

"You needn't tell Golly what I said," he continued. "He's a good fellow, generous and all that sort of things."

Golly generous! The little man was indeed changed. What had he been so generous with?

"Have you known him long — Uncle Golly?" she asked.

The big man surveyed her with angry eyes.

"Yes, I've known him too long," he said slowly.

He picked up his hat from the settee, where he had dropped it, and went to the door; he stood there for a long time, as if debating something with himself. Then he said:

"Today or tomorrow it'll be easy. After that, I'm not sure — just tell me when you want to go, and not a word to Golly."

Before she could answer, the door had closed behind him.

He climbed up the companionway and reached the deck, not of any sea-going ship but of a great barge. She bore the unromantic name of "Betsy Jane," and was moored near a meadow that stretched away to a wooded ridge. Behind her was another barge, on which two men were laboriously lowering the mast. There was no one else in sight, except a little man in a striped jersey, ragged trousers, and a huge cap. It would have been difficult to recognize, in this laborer, Mr. Golly Oaks, of the Mecca. He looked up over his glasses as the captain approached.

"You look pretty, I must say," there was a sneer in his voice. "If anybody was to come along and see you, they'd think this was a garden party. Been down to see Lila, I'll bet."

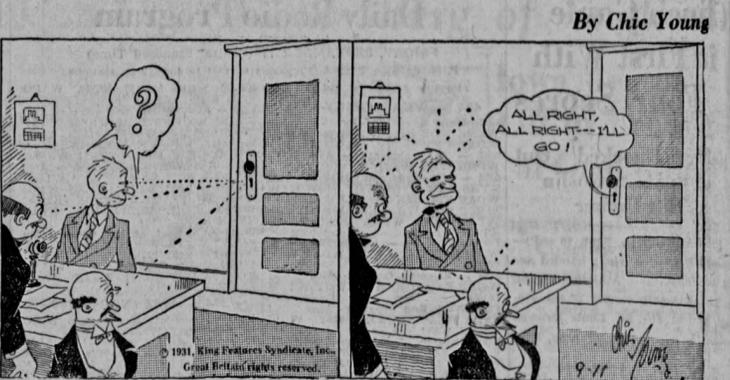

"Yes, I've been down to see Lila," said Alkness, and sat down on the cover of a hatchway and slowly filled a pipe.

Golly shook his head.

"A regular houseboat party, and a couple of 'Bustles' likely to come along at any minute! It took you a week to grow whiskers, and then you shaved them off, because you didn't want a nice young lady to think you were 58."

"I'm 52," growled Alkness. Golly's lips curled so that his mus-

NEW YORK — A family album of typical New Yorkers:

Toughy — He got that name because there wasn't anything too tough for him to tackle when he bounded onto West street's waterfront a half dozen years ago.

He had just deserted his father's farm in Minnesota, his principal complaint being that he had to get up at 4 a. m. to milk the cows.

He worked around the docks a few months, and then spent the next three years chipping the paint on a South American freighter.

He didn't get as much sleep, and work was three times as hard as it had been on the farm, but he was satisfied. He had rebelled against something he didn't like.

The other day he came in on a rusty, old bucket that had been trading along the west African coast. Four months the voyage had been, and Toughy came off with the announcement that he was going back to the farm.

"It'll be easier now," he explained. "The old man has bought an automatic milking machine and a new tractor."

GROUCHLESS GROUCHO

Groucho Marx — He is the sort of fellow you like to interview. You just sit back and listen, asking no questions. For instance, an interview with him develops into a monologue something like this:

"So you want to interview me? tache tilted ludicrously.

"You're 10," he said. And then, in a different tone: "Get out, and slip into your old duds, will you? Then I'll tell you what's happened to the 'Seal of Troy.' It's in the morning papers."

Alkness sprang up, his face pale. "Did they hold it up?"

Golly nodded.

"And found everything," he added cheerfully. "Gold and platinum and diamonds and Heaven knows what! And they'll find you, too, Bill Alkness. Go down and change."

Alkness turned and went slowly below.

"Anything else you want?" he growled.

"Yes," said Mr. Oaks. "Bring me up a bit of black crape. I want to tie it around me neck."

Alkness stared at him in horrified amazement.

"You don't mean—" he began hoarsely.

Golly nodded.

"Yes, I do. All things have got to come to an end, and this one ought to have ended a long time ago."

(TO BE CONTINUED)

Well, I was born at 3 years of age. I got two years off for good behavior. The reason I went on stage was because I couldn't see from where I was sitting.

"As for my likes in the drama, my favorite play is Tinker to Evers to Chance. For a matinee, I like to see Babe Ruth eating a gross of hot dogs.

"As for what I play — you may say, mostly the market. That is, I did play the market. If I had continued, I would now be playing a hand organ.

"I do not believe in spats. I have always been against arguments. Also you can't get your shoes off in a hurry if you should have to do some sprinting.

"Mah nationality is suthun — southern France. Now, good afternoon, and don't forget to leave that cigar I gave you when you arrived."

NEGATIVE NAGS

Sammy — Once he was a manager of a half dozen prizefighters, and, surprisingly, one of them turned into a pretty good slapper. Sammy made a stake with this boy, then bought himself a couple of race horses. Not much of a stable, still a stable.

The nags weren't so good. They got lost in the fog or something in every race, and Sammy quit the tracks before the two selling platters sold up all his bank account in hay and oats.

Now Sammy is a gambler, and he has a reputation of betting on anything. There are two things on which Sammy refuses to risk a single one of his few remaining shillings, not even if he knows the bet to be a sure thing proposition. They are prize fights and horse races.

Chicago still has 10 horseshoeing establishments, but only one has enough business to keep two employees.

Behind the Scenes in Hollywood

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.,—Hundreds of dancers, now out of work in Hollywood, have had their hopes dashed by announcement from William LeBaron that Radio Pictures will abolish choruses in their new musical productions.

The first of the new type of tune films will be George Gershwin's "Girl Crazy."

While Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is using choristers in "Flying High," there is a strong tendency to follow the example of R-K-O and of Ernst Lubitch, whose Paramount musicals all have been of the intimate type.

LeBaron argues that music should be the piece de resistance in these films and that even the best of it suffers in competition with the rhythmic rise and fall of beautiful legs.

Crushing news this to Hollywood's boys and girls of the chorus. They can only sigh for the days when 500 dancers were employed at one time in the various studios.

DR. ROGERS DIAGNOSES

Over on Will Rogers' set they were detained for 20 minutes last week while a prop man went in search of a wheel chair.

Along towards the end of the wait Rogers went up to the irate director and addressed him soothingly: "Maybe they're bolting them all down to get one big enough for the whole country."
