Mary Evens Wins Hawkeye Sales, Trip to Yellowstone

Rallies Ahead of Opponents in Final Day

Ruth Demorest Second; Dorothy Engle Third

Mary Evens was declared winner of the 1933 Hawkeye sales contest after a final check of sales books had been completed at 12:40 this morning by Francis O. Wilcox, contest manager. By virtue of her lead over other contestants, Miss Evens and her companion, Ona-Mae Ingebratson, will visit Yellowstone National park next summer with all expenses paid.

Ruth Demorest and Dorothy Engle, both of whom have been first place contenders throughout the contest, held second and third place, respectively after the close. The next places, to the sixth, in order, fell to Grace Donovan, Phyllis Michael, and Betty Andersen.

Miss Donovan was also awarded the first prize of $10 as having sold the most yearbooks during the last three days of the contest. Miss Demorest won a second award of $5 for her sales total of the concluding days.

Miss Evens, the winner, is a member of Alpha Chi Omega sorority, and is a sophomore in the college of liberal arts. Her home is at Osage.

Other places in the contest fell in order to: Constance Barsett, Maxine White, Opal Crane, Dorothy Hughes, Alice Perry, Harold Cassill, Wm. Norman Miller and Margaret Miskak in a three way tie, Ed Kelly, Eleanor Ford, Catherine Mueller, and Eugene Schoen.

The business staff of the 1933 Hawkeye will be completed and announced in the morning issue of The Daily Iowan, as will the final results of the vote on the 1933 Hawkeye beauty queens. The announcement of the business staff will be made by Ernest Cassill, business manager of the yearbook. The winners of the first six places in the sales contest are automatically awarded positions on the business staff.

Rail Leaders, Labor Unions Argue Wages

CHICAGO, Dec. 12 (AP)—Railway managements and organized labor began today to muster their forces for an early showdown on the problem of wage reductions.

General chairman of the nation's railway unions and brotherhoods headed for home after their three day meeting with instructions to obtain immediately authority from the men so that union executives could negotiate "to a conclusion" the issues of unemployment and wages.

Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio and leader of the group of executives that originally suggested 10 per cent voluntary wage reductions to the men, conferred with executives of western carriers and planned a meeting of all railroad presidents for next week.

The brotherhoods, in the report adopted last night, promised to fight to the last ditch for existing rates of pay if the roads failed to enter into negotiations with them. But Willard accepted the invitation to a compromise conference almost at once.

The speed with which preparations for the negotiations went forward apparently forestalled what some of the roads threatened a few weeks ago—formal action to lower wages if the men did not volunteer to accept reductions.

Rail executives of the east, the west and the south will hold separate meetings on the labor proposal. It was announced today. A joint meeting is to be held later and it was presumed the authority to negotiate with the unions would be sought at the sectional meetings.

Investigate Attempt to Kidnap Wife of Highway Employee

AMES, Dec. 12 (AP)—An investigation was proceeding tonight into the 18 hour disappearance of Mrs. Melvin W. Vance, wife of a state highway commission employee.

Mrs. Vance drove her husband to work at noon Thursday. Vance enlisted the aid of police officials here but this morning he and Mrs. Vance returned to their home.

Police Chief Cure remained in the vicinity of Humboldt and Pocahontas to investigate the asserted attempt at kidnaping.

Social Service Toy Shop to Guarantee Presents for Poor

Toys for Johnny and Susie in every unfortunate Iowa City family, will fill small stockings Christmas morning through a free toy shop being planned by the holiday department of the Social Service league.

The toy shop, to be conducted in the council chambers of the city hall from Dec. 21 to 24 will be open to all mothers whose family is registered with the league. The mothers may visit the shop and select a toy desirable for each child in the family free of charge.

An admission card from the league officers will admit the mothers to the shop. They are asked to come alone.

A majority of the toys are those donated by Iowa City children who attended the Garden theater matinee last Saturday afternoon under the auspices of the local Boy Scouts. Industrial arts classes at Iowa City high school are preparing them for distribution.

Accept Grid Coach's Note of Resignation

The resignation of Burton A. Ingwersen as university football coach was yesterday afternoon accepted by the board of control of athletics after a three hour meeting.

Discussion of a successor was confined to consideration of manner of selection. It was decided to refer the matter to the committee on staff which consists of Prof. E. H. Lauer, director of athletics, Prof. Frederic G. Higbee, and Prof. Rudolph Kuever. The committee may report on possibilities at the regular meeting of the board Friday afternoon.

The financial situation of the athletic department occupied the remainder of the time of the meeting. The following statement was issued by the board yesterday afternoon.

The situation which has developed to make Burton A. Ingwersen unwilling to continue at Iowa and which leads the board in control of athletics to accept his resignation contains many factors beyond the control either of Mr. Ingwersen or of the board. The spirit manifested by Mr. Ingwersen in voluntarily relinquishing his position as a means of promoting Iowa's athletic interests, is typical of his wholehearted devotion to his appointed work and to the university during his eight years of service.

Ingwersen Tells Reasons

Ingwersen explained in an oral resignation to Director Lauer and President Walter A. Jessup Friday that he felt Iowa would be better off with a new coach, and that he felt it best to resign rather than face the alumni criticism which was arising from the recent losing football season.

His formal resignation, presented to Director Lauer and President Jessup yesterday morning, follows:

Formal Resignation

"I hereby wish to submit my resignation as head football coach and assistant professor of physical education, to take effect at the expiration of my contract, Sept. 1, 1932.

"It is a source of satisfaction to me that this action will leave unimpaired the many valued friendships formed during eight eventful years of happy service."

Director Lauer said that no applications for the coaching position had yet been received.

Every member of the athletic board was present at the meeting.

Savings Bank Pays Children Full Deposits

300 Children Per Hour Besiege Windows; to Continue Plan

Nine hours of effort by receiver-ship officials and teachers of the public schools were rewarded yesterday by the smiles of the children who left the closed Johnson County savings bank with their payments of school savings accounts in cash.

Coincident with the withdrawals was the announcement by the Iowa City Savings bank that they would continue the school savings plan in the form of a trust fund with the bank acting as trustee.

More than 300 pupils an hour besieged the five windows at the bank and kept the teachers busy with their work of identification. However the whole plan was carried out without confusion as the bank paid out over $16,000 to more than 2,000 children. The amounts ranged from one cent upwards and many accounts of comparatively large proportions were paid.

Will Continue Plan

Mr. Opstad stated that he was glad to announce that arrangements had been made for the third plan to continue. The plan will be carried on by the Iowa City Savings bank which will insure the safety of the funds by placing them in a trust fund. It was felt by bank officials that the years that had been spent in encouraging thrift in the public schools would be wasted if the plan were not continued.

A statement from the superintendent to the parents contained the following message:

That due to the fact that officials in charge of the Johnson County Savings bank and the Citizens Savings bank have handled the school savings deposits as preferred claims, no school children will suffer any loss of funds deposited under the Thrift Incorporated plan. All school savings funds have been or will be paid in full.

Express Appreciation

The statement further says that the school board deputy appreciates the action of Ben S. Summerhill, examiner in charge, Mr. L. A. Andrew, receiver, and the court in making possible the prompt payment in full of the school savings accounts. On behalf of the children they extended their thanks.

It further shows that the Iowa City Savings bank, in a spirit of cooperation, has not only consented to provide the school savings plan heretofore, but has agreed to place in trust the savings of the school pupils thus accumulated. For a number of years the schools have encouraged the children to learn the principles of money management and thrift. Nearly every pupil has had a school savings account and most of them have consistently made weekly deposits of small sums.

Encourage Confidence

The board of education asserts that there never was a time when it was so important for the public schools to encourage sane thinking confidence in American institutions and faith in wisdom of their industry; that it is the desire of the schools to lead the way to a return to normal living; that banks and banking are economic necessities; and that a savings account is a better guarantee of future happiness and usefulness than either the hiding of money or the reckless spending of it.

The schools expressed themselves as grateful to the Iowa City Savings bank for its willingness to carry on the school savings plan and take care of the children's savings. Past operation of the plan has proven that to them it is not a profitable undertaking for it involves as much detail and expense as though the deposits were many times larger.

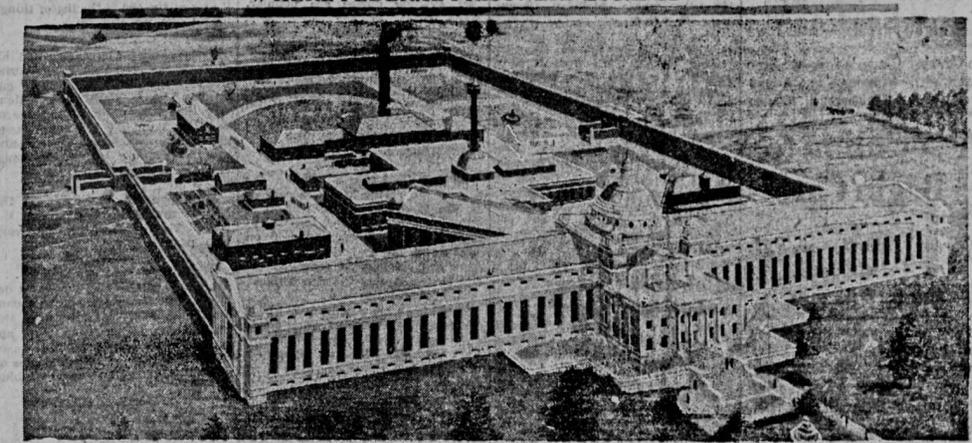

Open Accounts Wednesday

The first banking day will be Wednesday. It is hoped by school officials that all pupils will open an account at that time. Any amount will do. The important thing is that they continue the habit of thinking before spending, of saving for something worthwhile. It is hoped that the action of the Iowa City Savings bank in making it possible for the schools to continue the thrift program will receive the cooperation of parents in encouraging regular deposits.

Wednesday an application card will be filled out by the pupil when he makes the first deposit. New books will be returned for use the following banking day. The Thrift Incorporated, of Oak Park, Ill., has been represented by Stella Lackey in the formation of the plans for the continuance of the school savings.

Late Carleton Rally Downs Hawks 35-26

Iowa Ahead 16 to 11 at Half; Arney Leads Scoring

An outburst of Carleton long shots in the second half of last night's game at the field house sent the University of Iowa basketball team spinning back to defeat, 35 to 26.

The Carls overhauled a Hawkeye halftime advantage of 16 to 11 with 10 field goals and four free throws in the latter period. The Iowans curled up under the deadly sharp-shooting and could gather but 10 points.

Dick Arney, reported from Northfield, Minn., as being too badly injured in football to be able to participate more than a few minutes of the game, played the entire contest and lived up to his vaunted reputation by popping in five goals and two free throws.

Howard Moffitt surged into the lead among Hawkeye scorers by flipping in four field goals. Held to a single basket, Jack Kotlow dropped to second place with 10 points.

Scoreboard table with columns for player, FG, FT, P.T.M., and points.

Better at scoring than guarding, Harold Swaney, husky Hawkeye guard, tossed in four baskets and a free throw. A point behind was Howard Moffitt, starting his first game as an Old Gold regular forward, with four goals.

Loose guarding permitted several Carleton set-up shots in the second period, which added to the long shots, produced 24 points for the Minnetonkas. Strom's daring defense feats repeatedly halted the Iowa offense short of scoring distance.

Coach Rolfe Williams' quiet lookalike rollers of the visitors in the first half. Moffitt and Swaney led the drive that piled up the 16 to 11 lead.

After five minutes of rough and tumble playing in which both teams tried shots from all angles and distances, Swaney heaved in a long shot. Paul Brecher sank a free throw. Moffitt took the tipoff to rush in for a basket, with Swaney's second goal and free throw following to give Iowa an 8 to 2 lead.

Hawkeye's Ahead

Taylor's basket and Strom's gift tally brought the Carls' score up to 5. Swaney and Taylor made goals for each team. Moffitt knocked in a basket on a rebound. Arney flipped in a side shot. Harold Eshleman ran the Hawkeyes' advantage up to 14 to 3 on a setup shot.

Arney and Roy Diwocky counted goals as the half ended.

On baskets by Arney and Taylor the invaders came within a point of Iowa. The Hawkeyes rebuilt their margin on goals by Swaney and Jack Kotlow.

500 Persons Greet "Lindy" After Flight

WINCHESTER, Va., Dec. 12 (AP)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh and Colonel Mrs. Henry Breckinridge of New York, flew here from New York today to be the guests of former Governor Harry Flood Byrd on a hunting trip.

Mrs. Lindbergh, who had planned to make the trip, was held at home by a slight illness. A crowd of 500 cheered Lindbergh and his companions as the plane landed.

Judge Jails Liquor Ring

PEORIA, Ill., Dec. 12 (AP)—Fourteen men convicted of a conspiracy to supply the tri-city region with liquor were in jail tonight for the first time since their indictment.

The fifteenth defendant was still at liberty.

Grants Felony

Federal Judge Louis Fitzhenry responded to the request of John E. Dougherty, counsel for Jack Wall of Davenport, Ia., with a delay until Monday of his ruling on motions for new trial. Because Dougherty wanted to bring two other lawyers here to bolster his arguments for Wall, action in the case was continued and Wall was allowed to remain free under his $10,000 trial bond while his co-defendants went to cells.

The court gave little hope, however, that he would be paid to the arguments for new trials. Judge Fitzhenry heard the arguments this morning, but said the "strong probability" was that new trials would be denied and sentence pronounced Monday.

Defendant Remembers

In behalf of Dominic Leonnetti of Des Moines, Dougherty stated that Leonnetti had just remembered he was serving a 14 months jail term during the period of the conspiracy for which he was convicted. The government inquired why he had not so testified during the trial.

Ted Newberry, Chicago gangster, Sgt. Oliver Kempster of the state police and nine others were acquitted.

Board Denies Plea of Railroad to Add Service by Steam

DES MOINES, Dec. 12 (AP)—The Burlington railroad must continue operation of a gas-electric train between Van Wert and Shenandoah, the state railway board has decided.

The board denied the application of the railroad for permission to combine the service of the gas-electric train with that of a steam train, calculated to effect a saving of $30,000 a year.

Members of the board also held traffic is sufficient to require the Rock Island to maintain stations at Udell and East Pleasant Plain, and refused to allow the closing of stations at Tiffin and Hamlin.

Party Heads Ask Delay in Debt Relief

Congress Gives Time to Ratification of Moratorium

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12 (AP)—Congressional leaders today told the administration to forget about further debt relief for Europe and meanwhile every energy was directed toward ratification of the Hoover moratorium.

Senate leaders at a conference with Undersecretary Mills of the treasury emphasized their opposition to President Hoover's proposal for revival of the war debt commission to study additional European relief. It was forcefully suggested that this be not pressed lest it endanger the moratorium.

On Own Responsibility

The congressional chiefs also made it clear that the administration must act on its own responsibility regarding debt payments due America on Tuesday. These would be suspended under the moratorium. The latter cannot possibly be ratified by the time the debts are due.

Mills said that if the question of these debt payments involved any additional European relief, it was forcefully suggested that this be not pressed lest it endanger the moratorium.

Decline Responsibility

Previously house leaders had refused to sign any letter to this effect. In addition they informed Mills they would accept no responsibility for any statement respecting the $125,000,000 in debt payments due the United States on Tuesday.

However, despite the confusion over the Tuesday payments, no one in Capitol Hill expected them to be made nor was it thought that the "technical default" would have any effect on the credit of the foreign powers nor on ratification of the moratorium.

Sidetrack for Revision

The sharp reminder given Mills today by the senate leaders was expected to result also in at least a temporary sidetracking of the administration's campaign for further debt revision. There was no response in Capitol Hill, however, to the vigorous defense of this move made last night by Secretary Mellon.

Senate Plan

Senate leaders also decided today to leave the moratorium ratification entirely up to the house for the present. The ways and means committee will meet today to leave the moratorium ratification entirely up to the house for the present. The ways and means committee will meet next week for hearings on it.

Chairman Collier said Mills would be among the first called at the hearings. House leaders believe the moratorium will be ratified and sent to the senate before the Christmas recess.

Senator McClellan, Democrat of Tennessee, issued a statement today saying the "only possible result of the moratorium will be that it will act as an entering wedge to the complete cancellation of these foreign debts."

Professor Freed of Wife Murder Charge

HAMPTON, Va., Dec. 12 (AP)—Elisha Kent Kane, University of Tennessee professor, was acquitted by a jury tonight of a charge of murdering his wife by drowning her in Chesapeake Bay last September.

The verdict came after three hours and 45 minutes. Professor Kane took the verdict calmly, standing with his father on one side of him and his brother, Dr. Thomas L. Kane, on the other.

Powers to Die on March 18

CLARKSBURG, Va., Dec. 12 (AP)—Harry F. Powers today lost his first legal battle to escape the hangman's noose for killing Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke, Northboro, Mass., divorcee.

Overruling his motion for a new trial, Criminal Judge John C. Southern sentenced him to die on the gallows at the state penitentiary at Moundsville March 18, between sunrise and sunset.

Judge Southern fixed March 18 as the limit for an appeal to the circuit court. Defense counsel Jed Law sought to have the sentence suspended but the court declined to change the date.

The bland defendant, found guilty Thursday of murdering Mrs. Lemke in his "death house" garage at Quiet Dell. After luring her from her home from her home on promise of marriage, sat motionless when Southern meted out the sentence.

Powers, unconcerned about his doom, told Sheriff William B. Grimm when he came back to the county "all that I believe I'm entitled to is a good dinner."

The sheriff granted his wish.

Convict Plan of Dynamiting Wins Break

Warden's Wife Tells of "Blow Up" Threat

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Dec. 12 (AP)—Fred Zerbst, acting warden of the federal penitentiary, said tonight he had dispatched guards to a farm house near Winchester, Kan., where Earl Thayer, 65, the only fugitive of yesterday's prison break, is reported by a farmer to be in hiding.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Dec. 12 (AP)—A "blow up" match, held menacingly near a stick of dynamite by a convict who threatened to "blow up the prison" was given tonight by Mrs. Thomas B. White wife of the warden, as the reason for the initial success of yesterday's prison break.

Mrs. White said her husband, who was wounded by one of the seven convicts who kidnaped him, told her from his hospital bed the threat persuaded him to open the main entrance gate.

Warden Gives Orders

Mrs. White said her husband, who was wounded by one of the seven convicts who kidnaped him, told her from his hospital bed the threat persuaded him to open the main entrance gate.

White's left arm was severely torn by a shot and he also suffered a slight chest wound.

While Mrs. White talked prison guards were being rushed to Winchester, Kan., where Earl Thayer, 65, the only one of the desperate convicts who participated in yesterday's bold break still at large, was reported located. Fred Zerbst, acting prison warden, said he considered the report reliable, but officers at Winchester professed to know nothing of the matter.

While Zerbst, warden of the penitentiary, also is directed criticism at the several guards on duty during the escape, no action had been taken against them.

Criticism Guards

While Fred Zerbst, warden of the penitentiary, also is directed criticism at the several guards on duty at the time the seven convicts kidnaped Warden Thomas B. White from his office and used him and six others as shields against their freedom, no action had been taken against them.

The guards expressed the belief they would be exonerated when the inquiry is completed and that it would be shown they had not displayed any lack of courage.

Hubert Gray, the guard who was in a tower commanding the prison steps was taken to task by Zerbst for not shooting when the escaping convicts marched out the main gate.

"Prison officials are paid for the risks they take," Zerbst said. "Despite the fact that the warden and the other hostages, the guard should have attempted to drop one of the prisoners. I believe such a course would have ended the break."

Break Adds to Sentences

District Attorney Brewster said conviction on charges of escaping the prison would add five years to the terms of the three recaptured men. They are Rom Underwood, received from Duluth, Minn., Stanley Brown, 43, received from Fargo, N. D., and Charles Berta, 30, received from San Francisco.

Brewster said there would "be no hurry" in filing charges. "We've got these men for 25 years," he added.

The bodies of the dead convicts, William Green, 31, mail robber sentenced from Kansas City, Kan., and Grover C. Durfill, 41, and George Wright, 45, Oklahoma train robbers, were buried here unless claimed by relatives.

Culbertsons Gain Points in Card Tilt

NEW YORK, Dec. 12 (AP)—Doubles and redoubles were to the advantage of Mr. and Mrs. Ely Culbertson tonight and they gained 810 points, although losing three of five rubbers to Sidney S. Lenz and Oswald Jacoby, their opponents in a 15-and-rubber test of rival systems of contract bridge.

After 33 rubbers of the series had been finished Lenz and Jacoby were 4,480 points ahead of their rivals in contrast to 5,650 after four sessions. Tonight's was the fifth session.

At one time during the night's play the Culbertsons' deficit was only 2,100 as they made a gain of 1,670 during the second rubber of the night's play. It was during that rubber, the 30th of the series, that doubles and redoubles abounded.

Culbertsons tried three little slams tonight, they made one, were set one in another, redoubled and went down one in the third without a double. Lenz tried one little slam, was doubled and went down four.

Prof. Philip Clapp Entertains Audience of 1,000 in Formal Iowa Union Piano Concert

Player Divides Program Into Two Parts; Presents Debussy, Brahms, Liszt, Chopin, Beethoven

Thundering roll of bass, tinkling of highest treble — and Iowa society at its best. Such was the motif of Prof. Philip Greeley Clapp's formal piano concert, presented at Iowa Union last night. Setting a new standard of excellence for university and city social functions, Professor Clapp thrilled a serious, yet delighted audience of more than 1,000 faculty members, students and Iowa City citizens with Debussy, Brahms, Chopin, Beethoven, and Liszt.

Association to Begin Carols

Mortar Board, A. F. I. to Aid Christian Group in Songs

The Christian association will conduct its first all-university Christmas carol service in the main lounge of Iowa Union this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The association will be assisted by Mortar Board and A. F. I.

Prof. Frank E. Kendrie of the music department will lead the singing. The words and music of the songs will be projected on a screen as they are sung. Harry Thatcher, Jr., will accompany the songs on the piano. A Christmas reading will be given by Carma Wagner, A4 of Reinbeck. Margarita Williams, A4 of Washington, is general chairman of the sing, which will be informally conducted. The program of songs is as follows: "Oh, Little Town of Bethlehem," "Silent Night," "Deck the Halls with Boughs of Holly," "The First Noel," "Adeste Fideles," and "While Shepherds Watch Their Flocks."

Debussy's "Menuet" Stiff formality had no place at last night's concert. The formality was rather that of dignity than of stiffness. One was able to forget time and place, and lose himself in the smooth-flowing melody of Debussy's "Menuet" from the "Suite Bergamasque," as played by Professor Clapp with "Prelude," "Clair de Lune," and "Passepied."

Brahms provided a contrasting mood, yet was as thoroughly enjoyed in "Six piano pieces," "Sonata, Op. 10, No. 2," "Intermezzo, A minor," "Intermezzo, G major," "Ballade, G minor," "Intermezzo, F minor," "Romanze, F major," and "Intermezzo, E flat minor," being played by Professor Clapp as a conclusion to the first half of his program.

Beethoven Rolling, deep and strong, the allegro movements of Beethoven's "Sonata, Op. 57, F minor," brought suggestion of the composer's listening, as musical history tells one he was wont to do, to the rumble and crash of the thunder over the fields near his home. "Allegro assai," "Andante con moto," and "Allegro ma non troppo," were the movements from Beethoven included.

Chopin brought society back to the lounge room for the second half of the concert, with "Nocturne, Opus 9, No. 2, E major," "Etude, Opus 25, No. 7, C sharp minor," and "Ballade, Opus 47, A flat."

Lounge Setting Colored lights, crackling wood in the lounge fireplaces, and irregular grouping of the chairs lent the finishing touch to the theme, and Professor Clapp's delightful responsiveness to the requests of his listeners, especially with "Legend of St. Francis," by Liszt, completed the easy atmosphere, as a definitely different type of Iowa social function became history last night.

Strolling Through Fashion Lane

By CELIA GOLDBERG, Society Editor, The Daily Iowan

Since the purse and glove do go "hand in hand" it is only right that they should form an alliance and go in search of smartness together. . . . And so, the designers this season have concentrated on most attractive sets for both day and evening wear.

Antelope is one of the most popular leathers this season and is being used for both day and evening accessories. Beige is one of the best colors for evening gloves, since it blends with most hues.

For formal wear, the short gold fillet evening gloves are popular. Hand made, of the finest gold thread, they are naturally transparent and make the hands look unbelievably white, it is said.

Believe it or not . . . Spring is here! The fact that winter has not yet officially begun means nothing to the men and women who must forecast styles.

"Sweet femininity" will be the key to the spring styles, according to the forecast, and it will be a sleeve season with the interest in the new gowns concentrated on sleeves. Higher waistlines, straighter skirts, and color combinations will be features of the new vogue.

There is an old world charm about the beruffled evening frock that is quite irresistible, and makes one realize why the belles of yesteryear generally had more than their share of romance.

There is scarcely a social function that does not disclose some of these frocks often in crisp taffeta, the ideal medium for this type of frock with its bouffant flare.

Of course, the bias cut continues to be particularly noticeable, and the long, fitted line reaching almost to the knee, with fullness escaping below, is a favored version. Bias cuts, diagonal lines, and surprise bodices are wonderfully flattering, especially if one is not slender.

It is rather interesting to note that stiff satin, and heavy bengaline have appeared on the formal fashion horizon. Also chiffon, georgette, lace and lame brocade are featured.

As for evening colors, white continues in the lead with all its accustomed glory with light shades next in line; black takes a secondary place. High shades: red, emerald, cerise and wine shades are all important. These shades bring a fresh vivacity into the picture. Coat dresses need not be discarded because it is actually "coat time." It is perfectly correct to wear either a costume suit or a coat dress under one's coat. While soft lines and feminine details are much in vogue, one may of course, cling to tailored looking clothes if one is the type.

Lingerie has changed a lot from the starched petticoat era, but women certainly haven't. They still place it way at the top of the list of things they'd like for Christmas.

Some of the new slips could almost be considered an architectural triumph nowadays. It must be cut on the bias in such an ingenious way that not one inch can bulge or wrinkle. Wouldn't it be smart to give someone a daytime slip and also an evening slip in the long, entirely backless style?

Even panties are fitted . . . the legs narrow, and a bias yoke at the waist. They're lovely in the very pale pastels.

Nightgowns are copycats . . . using just as many of the smart details of daytime dresses as they can. The same long clinging lines, the same high waists. They even appear in two colors—pale editions of the contrast theme, in two shades of yellow, or a combination of blue and pink.

Iowa City Teachers' Club Will Entertain at Christmas Dinner

Hazel Chapman and Phyllis Lehmer will sing several selections during the dinner. Group singing which will follow each course is under the direction of Kathleen Porter.

Old-fashioned Christmas games and stunts, and exchange of gifts will feature the evening entertainment.

Mrs. T. A. Gardner, Florence Bradley, Elizabeth Grimes, Elgin Kruel, Esther Reinking, Oyra Hooker and Kathleen Porter compose the committee in charge of the arrangements.

Army Conquers Navy 17 to 7 in Thrilling Struggle Before Crowd of 70,000

Takes to Air After Sailors' Early Threat

Cross Middies' Goal Twice; Score on Field Goal

NEW YORK, Dec. 12 (AP)—Striking with the swift effectiveness of thrusting bayonets, Army flashed through the air today to pierce a raring Navy defense and conquer the Midshipmen 17 to 7 in a drama as spectacular and stirring as all the pomp and splendor of one of sports' greatest pageants.

Outplayed through the first quarter, facing the greatest upset of the football season, the Cadets rallied under the dazzling leadership of Ray Stecker to score a field goal and a touchdown in the second quarter and come back in the final period to cross the goal line again after Navy's desperate bid in the third quarter had revived the sailors' hopes.

$325,000 for Charity

It was a thrilling struggle, matching in suspense and smashing play all the traditions of a bitter rivalry that goes back to 1890 for its inception. A crowd of 70,000 gasped at the swift changes of fortune, roared first with the regiment, then the corps, on a day that was as warm as early autumn.

Charity and the cause of the unemployed that brought the two service eleven together last year for the first time after a break of four years profited by about $375,000. The total for charity is expected to be $325,000 after deduction of expenses.

Just as last year, when Stecker broke loose on a solo flight that whipped the Midshipmen by a single touchdown, it was the blonde youngster from Hazleton, Pa., riding high for the last time in the Gold and Blue of Army, who conquered the Sailors again today.

Substitute Scores

Ed Herb, bulky substitute fullback, made both of Army's touchdowns on short plunges, but it was Stecker who kept the Cadet attack in motion. Army surpassed the Midshipmen in all except the doggedness of a superb Navy defense to win its third straight victory. Navy last won in 1921, and seven times since then, with two ties, Army has conquered.

Except for one amazing pass midway through the third quarter, the occasional charges of "Bullet Lou" Kirn, and sporadic tossing outbursts that could not be put together for more points, Navy was outclassed by the powerful Cadets in all departments of the game.

Kirn, a heroic figure along with McGrunder, Tuttle, captain and center, passed for the Sailors' touchdown in a play as gaudy as any an eastern gridiron has seen this fall.

Dropping back almost to his own 35-yard line, Kirn heaved far and wide to "Joe" Tschirgi, 50 yards away and racing madly down the side line for the Army goal.

Wayne Normal Loses to Morningside 22-12

SIoux CITY, Dec. 12 (AP)—In a rough and tumble game on the Maron floor tonight, Morningside college won a 22-12 cage decision from the Wayne, Neb., Normal school. The visitors trailed 7 to 13 at half time.

Andrews made all of the Wildcats' four field goals and sank two free throws for good measure in gaining a corner on the scoring. Pete Hall with six points and Koberg and De Groot with five each led the Maroons.

Sooters Wallop Tulsa

TULSA, Okla., Dec. 12 (AP)—The Oklahoma Sooners ran over Tulsa university, 29 to 7. The game, a post-season affair for the benefit of the unemployed and for crippled children, was played in the mud, before a crowd of 7,500.

Sportively Speaking

By Matt Melchiorre

If ever a basketball team was outclassed, it was Iowa in last night's game with the visiting Carleton quintet. The visitors handled the ball in a sure manner. No slipshod fashion about the way they passed. It was rare that an Iowa man intercepted.

Carleton's basket shooting was accurate in both short and long tries. Captain Arney especially showed he had the range. His long shots were well executed. Most of the time the ball went in without touching the rim.

That substitute forward for Carleton, Strom, proved adept in dribbling the ball away from the Iowa players. While the Hawkeyes fought had every minute of the contest, there seemed to be something lacking from their play.

To us that something appears to be coordination. It was made more emphatic from watching Carleton perform in the smooth fashion it did. With a couple of more games under their belts, we look for this to be remedied. It was something to be expected with four sophomores on the team.

The veteran Chuck Williamson is going to put in a strong bid for a forward position when he is reinstated with the start of next semester. He was outstanding in the ineligible quintet's victory over the freshman five.

Southern California was not the perfect host yesterday. The least it could have done was to permit the team which traveled hundreds of miles for the game one touchdown to show the folks back home.

Navy was expected to score against the Army by one route. And that was through the air. All season West Point has been notoriously weak in breaking up a pass attack. But it did tighten up after that long Navy forward which resulted in the latter's only touchdown.

Von Elm to Meet Cox in Open Finals

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 12 (AP)—While several thousand spectators thrilled to two great golf duels, George Von Elm of Los Angeles and Witty Cox, tall Brooklyn pro, became finalists of the $7,500 national match play open championship as the result of impressive semi-final victories today.

Von Elm took the measure of Romie Espinosa, San Francisco, 2 and 1, while Cox disposed of another local hope, Willie Goggin, by the same margin of victory.

The winners will meet tomorrow in a 36 hole match with $1,500 as the first prize and $1,000 to the runner-up.

Victories in the 18 hole semi-finals were gained only after close battles. Von Elm held a two up lead at the turn, but Espinosa reduced the margin by one hole at the 13th. The Los Angeles star turned the first nine in par 35, while Espinosa was two strokes over par.

Cox and Goggin finished the first nine all square, and halved the next four holes in sub-par golf. The Brooklyn player forged to the front by winning the 14th with a birdie two and increased his lead at the 16th with a par four. The 17th was halved in par three to give Cox the match.

Wildcats Hand Trojans 22-20 Cage Setback

Cophers Outspeed Oklahoma Ags 40 to 37

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 12 (AP)—A rookie's brilliance and a veteran's substantial play furnished the University of Minnesota with most of its momentum and reliability as it sped to a 40 to 37 triumph over Oklahoma A. and M. in the first basketball game of the season in the Gopher fieldhouse tonight.

Wells Wright, Appleton sophomore, playing his second intercollegiate contest and Virgil Licht, veteran guard, were Minnesota's leaders on the floor as the Gophers annexed their second preliminary game of the year.

Scoring three times from the floor and shaking seven of eight shots from the foul line, Wright paced both teams on the offensive with 13

Ohio State Downs Missouri Tigers 30-17

Missouri Tigers 30-17

COLUMBUS, Mo., Dec. 12 (AP)—Ohio State outclassed the University of Missouri basketball team here tonight to turn in a 30 to 17 victory and take its second pre-conference game.

The Tigers were at no time in the game threatening the lead of the invaders. In its first game of the season defeated Ohio university. After tonight's win it appears to be one of the strongest aggregations in the Big Ten.

Strong Finish Nets Maroons 32-29 Win

CHICAGO, Dec. 12 (AP)—A strong finishing drive which netted seven points tonight gave Chicago a 32 to 29 victory over Bradley college in the opening game of the Maroon basketball season.

Bradley took the lead early and before the first half had ended was in front, 19 to 4. The Maroons raked up 11 points before Bradley could score again, and the count was 19 to 15 at the half. Bradley clung to the lead until the last three minutes when Stephenson and Porter staged Chicago's winning finish.

Illini Scores 31-17 Win Over St. Louis

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Dec. 12 (AP)—Illinois opened its basketball season tonight with a 31 to 17 victory over St. Louis university with a pair of sophomores, and Hud Hellmich and Chinn Kamm, leading the way.

Kamm and Hellmich, playing their first varsity game, accounted for three field goals each, and were so zealous in their defensive efforts that both left the game via the personal foul route. The Illini led from the start.

Carnera Sets Sail

NEW YORK, Dec. 12 (AP)—Primo Carnera, Italy's giant candidate for heavyweight boxing honors, sailed today for his homeland to visit his parents at Segual. Carnera said he expected to return to the United States in January or February.

U. Hi Opens Tomorrow in All-City Clash

Meets St. Mary's Five on City Hi Floor at 7:30

University high's first Kistler-coached basketball team makes its debut tomorrow evening.

Appearing against the tried and proven Ramblers from St. Mary's to inaugurate the all-Iowa City cage season, the Blue and White is potentially one of the strongest quintets in the city, with five lettermen from last year's aggregation on the present squad.

The fact that only three of these veterans have been named in the starting lineup by Coach Kistler, goes to show that the new U. high mentor has considerable talent to work with this year. The river school's attack is built around big rangy Van Phillips, veteran center. At the forward posts will be two exceptionally small men possessed with enough speed to make them bothersome at all times, Wyjack and Beck, the latter having replaced the veteran Meintzer. Two big men will hold forth in the back court, they being the veteran running guard, Dill, and Fuhmeister, a husky sophomore.

But whether they will be able to cope with the fast breaking offensive of the Ramblers or penetrate

Southern California's Mighty Trojans Completely Rout Georgia U. 60 to 0

Lateral Pass Plays Dazzle Southerners

Trojans Score Easily; Intercept Crimson Passes

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 12 (AP)—Southern California, by defeating Georgia 60 to 0, showed again today that a good, big team will beat a good, little team every time. A crowd in excess of 75,000 saw the southerners suffer their first real rout in many years.

The powerful Trojans, off to a flying start with touchdown in the first three minutes of play and another before the game was 10 minutes old, pushed the fast but light players from Dixie all around the lot and seemed to be able to score almost anytime they chose.

Georgia fought courageously, but the Bulldogs had no chance from first to last.

U. S. C. at Peak

Southern California, seemed at the peak of condition instead of completing a hard 10 game schedule while the visitors appeared to be a bit stale. On the basis of today's play, Southern California deserves to rate with the great football teams of all time.

One Georgia player, however, stood out. Playing for an obviously lost cause did not dampen the enthusiasm of Vernon (Catfish) Smith, great Georgia end.

Southern California displayed an unbeatable exhibition of team play. Everything the Trojans did seemed to be just about the right thing to do. The bewildered Bulldogs much of the time did not seem to be able to locate the ball as Coach Howard Jones' students executed intricate lateral passes, reverses and spinner plays.

Football Act

To the amusement of the big crowd, Southern California put on a football act in which the players did most of the tricks in the air. They tossed lateral passes about the place and did not bother to keep the ball in the air. They caught laterals on the bound just as well and at times dribbled the football as though it had been a basketball.

Georgia had only two real chances to score. The Bulldogs with three clever passes and a brief period of efficiency in running attack, advanced to Southern California's 20 yard line but here the ball bounded from the arms of Buster Mott straight into the hands of Hambrick, Trojan back, who dashed 30 yards to the distant goal line and a touchdown.

Georgians Threaten

In the final period the Georgians threatened again when Homer Kelley caught a pass good for 36 yards, but with it ball deep in the territory of the home team, the alert Ernie Pinkert, who played a sensational game for the winners, intercepted a pass and the Bulldogs' last chance had come and gone.

The Southern California line demonstrated in the first few minutes of play that the Georgia forwards had no chance to cope with it and with this demonstration the football game was over. Georgia's backs had lots of speed but little chance to use it on offense and when the Pacific Coast conference champions had the ball they got so much interference in front of the runner, the Georgians could not fight their way through.

Senior-Soph Tank Team Takes Meet

The senior-sophomore tank team defeated the junior-fresh splashes by three points in the interclass swim yesterday afternoon. The final score was 39-36.

The feature of the dual was the 440 yard free style event. Francis Pressler, a sophomore swimmer, and Bruce Grove, a freshman, raced neck and neck until the last width sprint when Grove forged ahead to win by an eight second margin. Robert Janus was unable to compete in this event.

George Ammann won the 100 yard breast stroke event by only a hand flip. Chester Mohl touched the side only two-tenths of a second later.

William Busby, junior-freshman anchor man defeated George Miller by one second in the 100 yard relay event.

Jack McGuire won the 100-yard free style event, establishing a record well under the previous university mark. Harry Haskins came in second, and Steve Nielson third.

In the 220 sprint event Bruce Grove defeated Francis Pressler for the second time by a base second. Harvey Lloyd came in a close third.

Wentworth Lobdell succeeded in taking the diving honors for the senior-sophomore aggregation. William Busby, however, scored within five points of the victor. Busby is doing some exceptionally good diving this year, the first he has participated in university athletics.

Summary:

100-yard breast stroke—George Ammann, first; Chester Mohl, second. Time—1:12.6.

100-yard back stroke—Harvey Lloyd, first; Roy Bodine, second. Time—1:12.3.

440-yard free style—Bruce Grove, first; Francis Pressler, second. Time—5:28.6.

220-yard sprint—Bruce Grove, first; Francis Pressler, second. Time—2:34.4.

160-yard relay—Won by junior-sophomore team. Time—1:15.7.

300-yard relay—Won by junior-sophomore team. Time—3:14.4.

Diving—Wentworth Lobdell, first; William Busby, second.

Coyotes Take Opener From Huskers 41-36

LINCOLN, Dec. 12 (AP)—A belated second half rally fell short and the University of Nebraska basketball team was defeated, 41 to 36, here tonight by the South Dakota university quintet. It was the opening game of the Huskers' season.

Although Nebraska broke the ice with the first basket the Dakotans soon had the lead and after the first few minutes the Coyotes were in front all the way. The score at the half was 25 to 12 for South Dakota.

During the first half, the Huskers threatened several times, but the Coyotes proved their superiority by getting scores when they were needed. Approximately 3,000 persons watched the game.

Wischmeier, Henrion and Lensor led the way for the Huskers, while Olson and Adkins starred for South Dakota. Adkins got 11 field goals and counted on four free throws to take high scoring honors at 26 points.

Olson, Adkins' teammate at forward, was second high scorer with six field goals and one free toss to lead his mates with nine points.

Okerlin Misses Tying Free Throw After Game Ends

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12 (AP)—Alabama's Crimson Tide stars of other years won one abbreviated game today and tied two others, but in doing so they proved the age-old sports axiom, "they don't come back."

Catholic university lost by a 7-0 count in the second of the charity contests. A bulky George Washington eleven battled to a 6 to 0 tie in the matinee performance, and Georgetown ran over the tiring Crimson Tide warriors but failed to score as this game also went decisionless.

Each was 20 minutes, divided into two halves.

Only twice did the mighty players of other years show their full power. Pooty Hubert, leader of a Rose Bowl team of several years ago, bucked his way down the field for Alabama's only touchdown.

Samuelson and Haskinson were leaders in scoring for the Theta Xi's.

The starting lineups: Theta Xi: Underhill and Haskinson, forwards; Samuelson, center; Fryberger and Menzner, guards.

Alpha Chi Sigma: Gantz and Seegers, forwards; Matthews, center; Jebens and Hazitt, guards.

The closest, the fastest, and the roughest of all games played to date—that was the Phi Epsilon Kappa-Sigma Alpha Epsilon battle yesterday. The P.E.K.'s, favorites in their section, trailed the rangy S.A.E.'s team until the last two minutes when Miller tied the score with a shot back of center. Fleitcher then put his team out in front 2 points with another basket.

Okerlin, S.A.E. forward, was fouled while shooting just as the final whistle blew, giving him a chance to tie the score again. He missed one of his shots, thus giving victory to the "hibesiders" who now have won three games in their section.

The starting lineups: Phi Epsilon Kappa: Fleitcher and Miller, forwards; Nugels, center; Reese and Allison, guards.

S.A.E.: Okerlin and Osborne, forwards; Washburn, center; Greedy and Shaft, guards.

Kappa Sigs Win

Kappa Sigma tightened the race in its section in defeating Delta Chi, one of the leaders, 24-14. Shaffer, Kappa Sig center, was the outstanding player of the game. This leaves Sigma Phi Epsilon the only undefeated team in section 1.

The starting lineups: Kappa Sigma: Reddig and Musgrove forwards; Shaffer, center; Nelson and Hill, guards.

Delta Chi: Blythe and Schantz, forwards; Wilson, center; Marshall and Bleky, guards.

Theta Tau Triumphs

Theta Tau and Sigma Chi the two undefeated teams in section 5, met up with the Theta Tau's so superior that the Sigma Chis quit playing at the end of the second period with the score 22-4 against them. Only one field goal could the Sigs produce against the stubborn Theta Tau defense. Aschenbrenner and Brice tossed baskets in at will for the victors.

The starting lineups: Theta Tau: Mullinax and Aschenbrenner, forwards; Clearman, center; Brice and Rohwedder, guards.

Sigma Chi: Wilcox and Schump, forwards; Mitchell, center; Graham and McGregor, guards.

Delta Easy Victors

Whatever doubt there existed as to the Delta Tau Delta men not winning their section was practically erased when they easily turned back their closest foes, Pi Kappa Alpha, 22 to 4. The Deltas had possession of the ball the majority of the time and were the aggressors with Koehn and Becker leading the scoring attack.

The starting lineups: Delta Tau Delta: Koehn and Becker, forwards; Field, center; Elliot and Parker, guards.

Pi Kappa Alpha: Van Puersem and Stieh, forwards; Baker, center; Hoffman and Thompson, guards.

Alpha Chi Sig's Lose

Theta Xi and Alpha Chi Sigma, trailers in section 2, had a game to see who would occupy the cellar with Theta Xi triumphing 18 to 7.

Gandhi Must Change Garb

Pope Refuses Audience to Leader Because of Costume

ROME, Dec. 12 (AP)—Mahatma Gandhi came to Rome today in the hope that he might have an audience with Pope Pius, but the meeting did not occur, apparently because the Indian nationalist leader consistently refuses to wear any costume except his loin cloth and shawl.

Other pressing engagements already made by the Pope were declared by Vatican authorities to have been the reason for the cancellation of the Mahatma's audience.

Raiment Improper But it was learned the Vatican considered Gandhi's raiment scarcely proper and at the same time considered the matter a bit too delicate to suggest that he garb himself differently.

Although Gandhi did not see the Pope, he spent more than an hour at the Vatican, viewing its priceless art treasures.

Received by Mussolini In the evening the nationalist leader was received by Premier Mussolini. What they talked about was not divulged. Gandhi is in Rome on his way back to India from the round table conference in London.

The Mahatma talked with Premier Mussolini in English for half an hour. He walked into the premier's office dressed in his familiar attire and gave "Il Duce" a typical Indian greeting with hands extended before his chest, the palms together. The premier rose, walked toward him and greeted him cordially.

Stockholders Adopt R.K.O. Refinancing Plan by Majority

BALTIMORE, Dec. 12 (AP)—The Radio-Keith-Orpheum corporation's refinancing plan was adopted in a meeting here tonight by stockholders controlling 1,576,834 class A shares and 500,000 class B shares, more than two-thirds majority required. Only 106,028 shares of class A stock were voted against the plan.

More than 38,000 proxies were received in favor of the plan and 80 in opposition. Officials of the company stated after the meeting that the favorable vote probably would make unnecessary the receivership action brought against it by a stockholder and scheduled to be argued here this month.

The refinancing plan provides for the issuance of $11,500,000 of six per cent debentures to meet maturing obligations.

Identification of Mrs. Olive Royalty as Jane Moore, believed by local authorities to be the woman who passed worthless checks here recently, failed yesterday when Muscatine authorities came to Iowa City in an effort to locate a Miss Moore.

Mrs. Royalty was arrested in Fairfield last week as a companion of Ray Hanson, who is charged with murder there. The woman was brought to Iowa City early this week for investigation on suspicion in connection with passing $40 in checks.

Positive identification of Mrs. Royalty has not been made by authorities here, although further investigation is being made.

Survivors of Norway Illicit Liquor Traffic Float Ashore

OSLO, Norway, Dec. 12 (AP)—Two men, more dead than alive, floated ashore near the fishing village of Maaloey today in a battered and leaking lifeboat. With them were the bodies of four of their comrades, dead from thirst, hunger and cold.

The landing of the two survivors marked the tragic end of the German trawler Venus, which has used the shadowy paths of the North Sea and the cover of night to deliver cargoes of illicit liquor on the shores of Norway.

Seventeen members of the vessel's crew were either dead or missing. On Dec. 1 the Venus put out from Lerwick, Shetland islands, with almost 5,000 gallons of liquor. Several days ago, after she had succeeded in landing 3,000 gallons on the Norwegian coast, she was found by a coastguard cutter. The cutter fired 20 shots at her, some of them proving effective, but she escaped in the lowering dusk.

Soon afterward she struck the rocks off the Soegne coast north of Bergen. The crew got her off and kept her afloat by pumps only to have her ground again, rip open at the bottom and sink. The seamen attempted to escape in two boats and in pieces of wreckage. One boat capsized and the six men in it were drowned.

The other lifeboat also capsized. The seven men aboard held on to the bottom and succeeded in righting it and regaining their places, with the exception of the captain, who had broken his arm and was unequal to the strain of holding on.

Four of the remaining six died during the long hours when the boat tossed about the wintry sea. The other two, when they finally were found on the beach at Maaloey, were in pitiful condition. Their tongues were swollen and they were almost dead of hunger.

IDAHEL, Okla., Dec. 12 (AP)—Twelve mountain men chose life imprisonment rather than the electric chair today for Charley Draper, called the triple killer of dead man's hollow.

Draper said he was "thankful" to the jury but there were rumors that others felt differently. Reports that a group of men was forming in the mountain country, bent on violence, lacked confirmation.

Draper's conviction was for the murder of E. S. Chappell, Springdale, Ark., slain with two others in a robbery.

Draper likely will be sentenced in a few days.

Chorus Gives Oratorio on Christ's Life

Present Program at Memorial Union December 16

Two separate stages will be necessary when the oratorio, "The Childhood of Christ," is presented Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Iowa Union by the university chorus and the university symphony orchestra, under the direction of Prof. Philip G. Clapp, head of the music department.

The main stage is to be used for the choruses of Herod's soldiers, soothsayers of Judea, shepherds, citizens of Sals, Ishmaelites, and for the final full chorus in the epilogue. Concealed from the audience, the second stage will contain the hidden chorus of angels which is heard from time to time guiding and directing the journeyings of the holy family.

Take Place of Vespers
Taking the place of the usual Christmas vespers which, in past years, have always been held the Sunday preceding the holidays, the oratorio is being presented on a week night this year to avoid conflict with special programs of Christmas music which have been planned by Iowa City churches.

Professor Clapp believes that the program is the most elaborate of any production ever presented by a campus organization in the history of the university.

As has been customary at university Christmas services in the past, no admission will be charged, and the program is open to townspeople as well as to students.

Since part one will contain six numbers performed without pause, and since the doors will not be reopened until the first part is concluded, it is desirable that all those wishing to hear the full oratorio be prompt.

Six Solists Assist
Assisting the orchestra and chorus will be six soloists: Merlin Terhune Diercks, soprano; F. Walter Huffman and Karl Ludwig Benson, tenors; Hugh Jones Tudor, John H. Bloom, and Chesley J. Posey, baritone.

The part of the narrator will be sung by Mr. Huffman, while Mr. Benson and Mr. Posey will have the parts of a Centurion and Polydorus, respectively.

Closed Bank Makes Plans to Reorganize

Will Send Out Letters to Depositors Asking for Cooperation

Four weeks of work by the new bank committee has resulted in a definite furtherance of plans for the reorganization of the Johnson County Savings bank. A letter, asking for cooperation, will be sent to every depositor of the bank tomorrow. A mass meeting of depositors will be held in the near future. If the depositors' reaction is favorable, the letter asks that the depositors visit the committee in its offices in the customer's room of the Johnson County Savings bank and go over the plans with them. Members of the committee felt that they could go no further with the plans until they had received the approval of the majority of the depositors. The committee desires that the calls be made this week but in any event not later than Dec. 24.

Letter Explains Reasons
Reasons for the reorganization are explained in the letter. It states that with the present low market on securities, as well as any other assets a closed bank may have, these assets can best be realized through the cooperation of a reorganized bank in the form of a new bank and the state banking department. It further shows that a liquidation, thus jointly accomplished, should increase considerably the value of the assets of the Johnson County Savings bank and thus enable the depositors to realize more on their deposits. The letter shows that the new bank is being organized expressly for the benefit of the community and the depositors of the bank. It states that future accommodations, both to depositors and borrowers, can better be taken care of with the operation of the reorganized bank in Iowa City. Because the bank would be located here, each individual will be better served since Iowa City is the county seat and therefore center of financial activities.

Committee Functions
Members of the committee have gone over the assets of the bank with Ben S. Summerwill, examiner in charge. Their work will be charted with the classification of claims which have been filed with the receiver. Dan Ernst of the state banking department is expected to be in Iowa City this week to assist Mr. Summerwill with the classification. The personnel of the new bank committee follows: Charles B. Crain, chairman; O. N. Riggs, J. A. Shalla, F. B. Volklinger, L. W. Spencer, Samuel Morrison, Dr. D. F. Fitzpatrick, Dr. George C. Albright, Edward J. Murphy and Ralph White.

University Rifle Club Men Win Over City High School Gunners

With E. Palik shooting for a total of 175, a team representing the University Rifle club sent an Iowa City high school aggregation down in defeat yesterday afternoon by team totals of 795 to 736. Six men shot for the high school, and seven represented the rifle club. Five high scores only were considered for each team total.

The match was a return contest, the teams having met last week, when the university marksmen defeated the prep school shooters by 770 to 694.

Individual totals (URC): Kneeling—E. Palik, 94; F. Palik, 82; Allison 79; Norem, 54; Benda, 87; Fessler, 90; Lande, 81. Standing—E. Palik, 81; F. Palik, 65; Allison, 65; Norem, 44; Benda, 69; Fessler, 69; Lande, 77.

(CHS) kneeling—Carlton, 91; Cone, 72; Singleton, 82; Griffith, 71; Fox, 59; Fousek, 41. Standing—Carlton, 71; Cone, 58; Singleton, 82; Griffith, 71; Fox, 59; Fousek, 41.

Tomorrow night all new men in the University Rifle club will begin shooting for records, the competition ending before the Christmas holidays. Three exchange slips for merchandise prizes will be offered for the best scores turned in during this competition. A second competition, with similar prizes, is planned later, for men who have had more experience, on varsity teams, or in other competition.

Steel Shares Take Fall in Stock Market

Liquidation Persists in Bond Sale; Utility Loans Steadier

NEW YORK, Dec. 12 (AP)—Active selling of industrial shares, notably those in the steel group, carried the stock market lower in the week end trading today.

Late short covering cut down the losses, but final prices were generally off and the averages dipped to a new minimum for the fourth time in as many days. Liquidation persisted in the bond market, although utility loans were somewhat steadier.

Dispatches from Tokyo
Dispatches from Tokyo reported that the successor to the Wakatsuki government would probably reinstate the gold standard. The yen broke more than seven cents in response to these reports, while Japanese bonds slumped.

United States Steel shares were conspicuously weak. The common broke 2 3/4 points to 43 while the preferred, touching par, sold at the lowest since 1928. Equities of other steel producers were likewise soft.

Railroad Stocks
Railroad stocks were firm in the first hour and a few issues, including New York Central, Union Pacific and Southern Pacific closed higher. It was assumed here that the carriers were prepared to file formal notice of wage cuts, meanwhile continuing negotiations for a voluntary 10 per cent reduction.

Steel was off 1 3/4 at the finish but Bethlehem fully recovered. Allied Chemical, Lambert, Liggett & Myers

Iowa Senator Raps Talk of Kansas Chief

Dickinson Denies Truth in Statements of Woodring

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12 (AP)—Senator Dickinson of Iowa, believes that Gov. Harry H. Woodring of Kansas, was correct when he recently described himself as a "grandson of the wild jackass."

In a statement issued through the Republican national committee today Dickinson took issue with a number of statements made last night by Woodring in an address here before the National Democratic Woman's club. The title of Woodring's speech was "Grandsons of the wild jackass," and he said he would accept the classification for himself.

Senator Disagrees
Dickinson charged that Woodring either misrepresented or was ignorant when he stated that the Smoot-Hawley tariff bill "resulted in the collapse of the value of industrial stocks and brought about a world depression."

"For the benefit of the governor," Dickinson said, "it is herewith pointed out that our stock market collapse occurred in September and

"B." Wrigley, Macy, United Gas Improvement, American Power & Light and Corb Products were down one to two. Missouri Kansas preferred and Missouri Pacific preferred lost two and three respectively. American Telephone, Case, Loews, Woolworth, Westinghouse, American Can and Eastman closed firm. Transactions for the two hours totaled 1,628,732 shares.

October, 1929, approximately nine months before the passage of the Hawley-Smoot act.

No Government Interference
"Further enunciating his platform for the Democratic party, Governor Woodring declared democracy must not be led by the clamor for governmental interference in private business with promises of artificial prosperity created by legislative acts," Dickinson said.

"Almost at the same time that Governor Woodring was enunciating these words, which are curiously akin in sentiment to the policy of the president," Dickinson added, "Democrats in both house and senate were introducing dole measures which would cost the taxpayer hundreds of millions of dollars."

CHAPTER I

She stood at the dressing table in the small hotel room and counted the money Tony had thrust upon her, with hands that shook. She did not glance into the mirror as many women would have done, yet her young face, although blind with fear, deserved the tribute of a personal appraisal.

It was very early in the morning. She had come, alone, to the hotel in Oakland the night before. Tony had told her to go there. "It's quiet, see?" he had said, "they'll be watching the hotels in San Francisco. Register as—Miss Smith." He'd smiled, she remembered incredulously, white teeth flashing in the dark, intent face. "I've made your plane reservations," he went on, "Miss Smith. They'll be watching the big commercial airports, too. This is safer."

He had given her a few terse, terse directions, risen from his chair at the plain table, bent over her, and kissed her, and then, "Good-bye, kid," he'd said easily, "happy landings! Watch the Eastern papers for a personal. When I get out of this mess I'll find you again. Don't worry!" From the doorway of that little backroom in the speakeasy he'd waved to her, still sitting there. There was no one else in the room. Tony had seen to that. There, in the doorway, his lips had moved once more making no sound. But she'd thought they had formed the words—"forgive me."

She couldn't forgive him. She couldn't forgive herself.

She counted the money again. Four thousand dollars. Some day she would pay it back. How? When? To whom?

She put the bills in her handbag. Looked, once, briefly, into the mirror, a mechanical gesture. Pulled her small felt hat closer over the broad forehead.

Her skin was satin in texture. It was, amazingly, golden; partly a gift of nature in a benevolent mood, partly a bestowal of the years lived under the hot Hawaiian sun. Against such skin her eyes were as blue as turquoise, her hair heavy, blue black, and her mouth a wound of crimson.

She was a girl at whom the passerby would look twice. . . . "Miss Smith."

She turned from the dresser; walked across the room to the bed and snapped her overnight case shut, picked up a tweed top coat and put it over her arm. She was very plainly, very correctly dressed. Her suit, matching the top coat, was of dark blue, her fine hosiery stockings, small Oxfords, her gloves, smart and serviceable.

She was ready to check out. She went downstairs and asked for her bill. The clerk gave it to her incuriously, accepted the money she handed him and said something conventional and pleasant in farewell. The one uniformed factotum of the hotel took her bag out and called a taxi for her.

On the way to the private flying field she sat well back in the cab, her hands pulled low, her hands twisted together in her lap. Panic rode her like a nightmare; panic greyned the golden skin, whitened the curved red mouth, clouded the eyes of turquoise. Panic was her familiar, her traveling companion, panic ate and walked and slept with her and had done so for these last few hideous days.

A newsboy jumped on the running board as they slowed up in traffic with early editions. "All About the Mystery Woman," he howled, "get your paper—all about the big gang killing. . . ."

The cab went onward with a jerk. The newsboy dropped off. Now "Miss Smith" was perfectly white, white to the lips.

If someone should see her. . . ? recognize her. . . ? as "Tony's girl"?

"Goodbye, kid," he'd said easily, "Happy landings."

She mustn't think of herself. She must think of Tony. Must pray that he get off. . . safe. . . . No matter what he had done, no matter how mistaken she had been in him, she laughed aloud, thinking of the glib girl who had come to San Francisco from Hawaii eight short months ago—no matter how things had turned out, he had been good to her after his fashion; had even loved her—after his fashion. And she had loved him, in a thoughtless, thrilled, unthinking sort of way. . . . in the way of first love, careless and sweet.

That was all over now.

She sat quite still trying to think of all his last directions. She was to go to this flying field. It was owned by a small commercial company. They operate planes for private charter. One had been chartered by a rich man and his family, to make a two-stop flight to New York. At the last minute two of the passengers had been unable to come; the plane had quickly been filled; Tony had heard of the final vacancy, in his underground fashion. How Tony heard things, she never knew, never had known. So he had reserved the place, in the name of. . . Miss Smith.

They were at the field now. She got out of the cab and paid her driver. She walked over to the little office. A plane was just landing. Another was tuning up. She looked at it, dully. It was, she thought, the one which would take her. Once—oh, a hundred years ago, the prospect of the long flight would have filled her with adventurous rapture. Not now. Just a means to an end. Just an escape. An escape. . . . from peering faces, from newspaper headlines, from some stolid faced man, a stranger, handing her a subpoena. . . . from men who would try to win from her all her knowledge of Tony, his means of living, his method of business, his whereabouts. . . .

An escape.

At the office the formalities were completed, the money paid. Miss

Smith's name was crossed off the list. The overnight stops explained to her; the route which would be taken. There was a refreshment stand nearby, a mushroom-like growth. She could have coffee there, the man in the office told her. She refused, forcing a smile. She had had early breakfast at her hotel. Mr. Eames and his party had arrived for one more passenger "we expect her at any moment now," said the office manager.

The girl left the office, stood for a moment at the barriers to the field. An elderly man, a fat, comfortable woman and a young man stood together, their luggage about them, talking excitedly. It was a very windless, warm day in summer. The sky was without a cloud. The sun shone brilliantly. How could it? thought the girl, standing there alone.

The field was vocal with activity. The plane, in readiness, was of a twin-motored cabin type, carrying eight passengers including pilot mechanic and steward. The girl walked toward it just as the office manager turned from his desk to greet the last arrival who came up in a pasting taxi.

Presently. . . . The passengers climbed in settling themselves. Mr. Eames arranged his party fussy. The office manager standing on the field made the introductions. Mr. Eames, his wife and son acknowledged the presence of "Miss Smith." They looked conscious that she had only joined the party by a fluke, the failure of their own friends to make the trip. The last passenger was also a woman; a young woman. She climbed in, taking her place beside the solitary girl. She casually looked at her and then smiled suddenly, with obvious delight.

"Why, Fanchon Meredith!" she exclaimed, "who in the world would have thought of seeing you here?"

Professor Nagler Makes Collection of Historical Iowa Water Wheels for Hydraulics Laboratory Display

By ED STEINBRENNER

Old water wheels are just so much scrap iron to the junkman but to Prof. Floyd A. Nagler of the hydraulics department, they represent historical significance in the development of the water wheel.

The hydraulics laboratory has one of the three collections of the obsolete but historic water wheels in this country. The others by proprietors of the locks and canals on the Merrimac river at Lowell, Mass., which city is rich in hydraulic history, and a museum at Watertown, N. Y. These collectors have tried to get the Iowa collection consolidated with theirs but, so far, their attempts have been futile.

Slight Cost

"Most of the wheels have been obtained through personal contacts with hydraulic engineers in Missouri, Nebraska, Illinois, and Iowa," said Professor Nagler. "I've saved them from the junkman in some instances. They are mostly donations, however, and cost us only the freight charges."

The first iron turbine wheel in Iowa was taken from the old Terrell mill north of Iowa City almost directly opposite the Red Ball Inn. This mill was the first on the Iowa river and traces of it have almost disappeared. The wheel, with a wooden shaft, remains as a part of the collection that may be seen in front of the hydraulics laboratory.

Four of the water wheels are the first models of various companies and are of considerable interest to these manufacturers.

C. E. Bassett and J. R. Groff, engineers of the James Leffel company of Springfield, Ohio, recently visited the laboratory to see old wheels put out by their company.

L. F. Harza of Chicago attempted to get the collection for the new Industrial Arts museum in Chicago recently. Exhibits are to be shown of the devices of all industries. The intention was to start the exhibit of the devices showing the development of water power by securing the Iowa collection.

Collection to Grow

Professor Nagler intends to add to his collection and, later on, to put same plates on the wheels which will also give their history. They will be lined up along the wall in the hydraulics laboratory.

"There are water wheels that are buried in the mud in various places in Iowa and there are others still in operation that I've got my eye on and will save from the junkman when they become obsolete."

Professor Nagler outlining his plans for enlarging collection.

LEGION PROGRAM TO HOOVER

The demand made by the American Legion, at its recent convention at Detroit, that something be done about prohibition, had its aftermath when Henry L. Stevens, youthful commander of the veterans, laid the Legion program, calling for a prohibition referendum and a treaty navy, before President Hoover. The Legion also asked for an additional expenditure of $25,000,000 for veteran relief. Photo shows Stevens (left) with the president on the occasion.

Report Deficit of $20,000 in Poor Funds

County Treasurer Charles L. Berry announced yesterday an overdraft of $20,880.57 in the county poor fund up to the present date.

Mr. Berry stated that this is the first time since 1923 that there has been a deficit in this fund and he attributed it to the large amount of unemployment, causing a heavy demand upon the poor fund in excess of what had been gathered in taxes.

Different banks with which the county is associated are holding warrants for the amount of the deficit, receiving an interest of 6 per cent.

Bonds are to be issued Jan. 1 to pay for this overdraft and will continue to be issued at regular intervals in 1932 until enough taxes are paid in to take care of the deficit.

The new Chevrolet Six combines the advantages of two inventions... Syncro-Mesh and Free Wheeling... to assure quick, quiet, easy gear-shifting and positive control of the car under every driving condition

One of the biggest driving thrills in modern motoring is now available at one of the very lowest prices in the automobile market. Silent Syncro-Mesh gear-shifting is combined with simplified Free Wheeling in the new and finer Chevrolet Six!

No other car offers this double-feature for so little money. Syncro-Mesh is recognized as the most advanced type of transmission ever developed by engineering science. Free Wheeling is that new, up-to-date sensation which adds so much to the zest of driving. The two make a matchless combination! They bring about an entirely new kind of driving ease and car control, far beyond anything you have ever enjoyed before. They give you quick, quiet, easy shifting and complete mastery of the car, under all conditions of road and traffic. They enable you to do things in driving that are impossible to do in a car without both these features.

Then, along with these two big motor-ing thrills—Chevrolet offers you 60-horse-power "six" performance, higher speed, faster acceleration, greater smoothness, smarter Fisher bodies, matchless economy, and a first cost among the lowest in the motor car market. Certainly, it's the great American value for 1932!

News from Manchuria

As Viewed by an Eye Witness

(Editor's note: T. Z. Koo, author of the following, is a close friend of Prof. Charles M. McCloy of the department of physical education, and it is through the latter that this letter is available.)

Mr. Koo was associate general secretary of the national council of the Y.M.C.A. at Shanghai, an organization with which Professor McCloy was connected during several years stay in China. Mr. Koo is a graduate of St. John's Episcopal college at Shanghai, where he was educated in theology.

He was at one time connected with an international council of churches at Geneva where he had an opportunity to observe the League of Nations at first hand for several years.

Professor McCloy endorses Mr. Koo as extremely intelligent, and an honest, impartial observer, not likely to be influenced by false patriotism in describing the Manchurian situation.)

29 Li Lu Hutung, West City, Peiping
Oct. 20, 1931

DEAR Friend:

My last letter was written just on the eve of the outbreak of the Japanese incident in Manchuria. Then, very few people realized the seriousness of the incident. Now the whole world is aware of the gravity of the situation. In order to get a personal impression of what is actually going on in Manchuria during these days, I made a brief visit to Mukden from Oct. 8 to 13. In this letter I will give a brief account of the impression gained on this trip together with some of my own reflections upon the situation.

The train for Mukden left Peiping at 8:25 p. m. on Oct. 8. Travelling on the same train with me was Chester Rowell of California, publicity director of the Institute of Pacific Relations. The first evidence of the trouble in Manchuria met our eyes when our train reached Chinchow, an important city on the railway, 246 miles west of Mukden, the center of Japanese occupation. Chinchow was bombed by 12 Japanese military planes at 1 p. m. on Oct. 8. Our train was the first train to reach Chinchow from the outside after the bombing.

The objectives of bombing were the wireless station, the railroad station and yards, and the temporary offices of the civil government which were in the buildings of the Communications university. The bomb intended for the station missed its mark and hit a provision store just across the street, tearing a jagged hole in the roof and killing two of the inmates. Mr. Rowell visited the railroad yards where most of the casualties were reported. In all, three bombs were dropped on the wireless station, about 15 on the railroad yards and about a dozen on the university.

WE CONTINUED our journey towards Mukden after spending about two hours in Chinchow. When our train reached Chu Lui Ho just beyond Hsin Min Fu, we came upon the second evidence of the Japanese occupation. Two Japanese soldiers with fixed bayonets came into the car in which I was sitting. One of them pointed his bayonet at me while the other searched my person, presumably for hidden arms. This was done to every passenger in the car. A little later, two more soldiers came through to inspect our baggage.

At 1:30 p. m. on Oct. 10, we reached Huang Ku Tun, the station just before the Mukden city station. Our train could not actually go to Mukden because the Japanese have torn up a section of the Peiping Mukden line between Huang Ku Tun and Mukden city. As it was not safe to go into the city after dark, Mr. Rowell and I spent the rest of the night in a service car placed at our disposal through the courtesy of some British members of the railroad staff at Huang Ku Tun.

At 8:30 the next morning (the tenth) we entered Mukden. Fortunately for me, our car was not challenged by the Japanese sentries and so we slipped in without attracting undue notice upon ourselves. The city looked like a Chinese city passing the first three days of the Chinese New Year. Most of the shops were closed and the streets looked deserted. A temporary force of Chinese policemen controlled by the Japanese were patrolling the streets. At every police station I passed on the way I saw Japanese soldiers quartered in it. The headquarters of the Japanese army of occupation is established in Mukden and the city government is in the hands of a Japanese mayor assisted by the usual departments also administered Japanese nationals.

IN ADDITION to these Japanese military and civil administrative organs, Mukden also boasts of a Chinese committee called the Committee for the Preservation of Order. The chairman of this committee is Uyan Chin Kai, an old time gentry of the city. This committee is really a dummy committee formed at the instigation of the Japanese. It can do nothing without the approval of the Japanese mayor's office. One then begins to wonder why create such a committee? On closer scrutiny I found that the committee, being a Chinese body, provides a convenient peg upon which to hang the pseudo-independence movements in Manchuria. You will undoubtedly have read in your papers reports of independence movements emanating from Tokio.

Yuan Chin Kai's committee was saddled with one of these independence movements. A second purpose is the more subtle one of using the dummy committee as a cover for anything the Japanese want to take over or do in the city in which they do not want their own name to appear. So far this committee has tried to hold to its single purpose of preserving order in the city of Mukden and has resolutely refused to have anything to do with the independence movements or the sequestration of increasingly difficult and several members Chinese properties. But its role is becoming more and more conspicuous as the Japanese were contemplating flight from the city when I was there.

Japanese military and civil authorities have made a clean sweep of all Chinese governmental organs in Mukden. This is true not only in Mukden but also in the whole occupied area of over a million square miles bounded on the east by Antung and Kirin, north by Changchun, west by Ssipingkai and Hsin Min, and south by Yingkow. In this area, the Japanese have completely throttled the Chinese civil and military administrations, thereby destroying the only existing check against banditry and lawlessness in south Manchuria. Having created this state of affairs, they turn round coolly to the world and say they cannot withdraw their forces because of China's inability to protect the lives and property of their nationals.

* * *

JAPANESE tactics in Manchuria can be summed up under four categories. First, the occupation of strategic centers of military importance. The occupation of Ssipingkai and the seizure of Tunhua are examples. Ssipingkai is a railroad junction northwest of Mukden with lines radiating to three points of the compass, namely north, west and south. Tunhua is the terminus of the Kirin Tunhua railway on the border of Korea. Since its occupation, the Japanese have been forcibly extending the line to connect with the Japanese railway system in Korea thus completing the strategic route from Korea into north Manchuria.

Second, the seizure of economic resources and the disruption of Chinese industries in the occupied area. The chairman of the provincial government and the commissioner of industry are still prisoners in the hands of the Japanese and it is commonly reported in Mukden that pressure is being brought to bear upon these two men by the Japanese to compel them to sign away the economic resources of Manchuria and other valuable properties belonging to the Chinese government. In Mukden, the Japanese have appointed Japanese managers to operate Chinese mills. They are operating the Chinese railway from Kirin to Mukden. What they cannot use, the Japanese are dismantling to destroying. Even if this occupied territory is returned to China later, the loss and damage to us on this score alone will be incalculable and will take our people many tens of years to recoup.

Third, the creation of puppet committees or persons to declare the independence of Manchuria from China. This will bring Manchuria under the tutelage of Japan and reduce her to the same status as Korea before her annexation by the Island Empire. On the same train on which I returned to Peiping on Oct. 13, I found the Mongol Prince Taherhan travelling in disguise with his family. Later I learned that he was escaping from Mukden because the Japanese have been importuning him to declare the independence of Mongolia.

WHEN the Japanese entered the city of Mukden on Sept. 19, they placed a military guard over his residence and then sent emissaries to induce him to start a Mongolian independence movement. This he resolutely refused to do and the Japanese began to double and treble the guards. So finally he decided that Mukden was not a healthy place for him just then and he smuggled himself disguised as a servant. The Japanese have been making frantic attempts to secure other puppets for these independence movements, including the Ex-emperor Pu-yi, but so far without success.

George Gibbs, Iowa Alumnus, New Postal Telegraph Head

THE campus of the University of Iowa, Manila Bay, Alaska, Washington, Kansas, Virginia, Cuba, Washington, D. C., Nebraska, Kansas, Texas, San Francisco, Hawaii, France, the Hague, Governors Island—so led the long trail that George Sabin Gibbs followed up to the position he now holds as president of the Postal Telegraph company. Along the trail, he won his way from the rank of private in the 51st Iowa Volunteer Infantry in 1898 to the office of chief of the signal corps of the United States army with the rank of major general, and then to the vice presidency of the International Telephone and Telegraph company.

Gibbs was born in Harlan in 1875. In '97, he received his bachelor of science degree from the University of Iowa. The following year, the Spanish-American war broke out and he enlisted immediately. He was transferred to the signal corps and distinguished himself at the Battle of Manila. By June, 1900, he was first lieutenant signal officer. In 1901, he was appointed to a similar position in the regular army, and received his M. S. degree from the university.

* * *

SHORTLY afterwards he was transferred to Ft. Gibbon, Alaska, to construct military telegraph lines. During the three years he was in Alaska, he explored 300 miles of the Tanana river on snow-shoes with a dog team and completed over 700 miles of telegraph lines. There followed for him three years of army life in posts in various sections of the country. In October, 1906, Gibbs, then a captain, was ordered to Cuba; a year later, he was made chief signal officer and adviser to the department of communications of the Cuban government.

Kansas, Texas, San Francisco—the trail continued. From 1913 to 1915, he was in command of a signal corps company and department signal officer at Hawaii. During the mobilization on the Mexican border, he was in El Paso, Texas. When the United States entered the World war, he was ordered to Washington for duty in the office of the chief signal officer, remaining until September, 1917, when he was ordered to France.

WITH the temporary rank of colonel and later as brigadier general in the national army, he served as assistant to the chief signal officer of the A. E. F. until June, 1919, and as an observer with the British first army in December, 1917. Upon his return to the United States, he was ordered to the General Staff college as a student. In June, 1920, he was detailed to the general staff and assigned to the research branch of the supply division of the war department general staff.

In May, 1922, he was detailed as executive officer to the assistant secretary of war, a duty he retained until June, 1923. During this time, he was ordered to temporary duty at the Hague as assistant military adviser to John Bassett Moore, American commissioner to the Commission of Jurists, to consider revision of the rules of war.

* * *

HE RETURNED to Alaska in 1924, in charge of operations on the cableship "Delwood," in which capacity he supervised the completion of the Ketchikan-Seward cable in Alaskan waters. In 1925, Gibbs was ordered to Ft. Sam Houston, Texas, as signal officer of the eighth corps area. In December, 1926, he was transferred to the headquarters of the second corps area at Governor's Island. On Jan. 9, 1928, Gibbs, then a colonel, was appointed chief signal officer of the army with the rank of major general. On June 30, 1931, he brought to a close 33 successful years of service by retirement from the active list of the army.

George S. Gibbs '97

In addition to the citation he received "for especially gallant and meritorious conduct" at the battle of Manila, he has been awarded the Distinguished Service medal, and the decorations of Commander of the Order of the Crown (Belgian); Companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George (British); Commander of the Order of the Crown (Italian); and Officer of the Legion of Honor (French).

HE IS a member of several Masonic bodies, of the local chapters of Sigma Nu and Sigma Xi fraternities, the Army and Navy club and other service clubs. He was married to Ruth Annis Hobby of Iowa City Oct. 9, 1899, and they are the parents of a daughter and three sons.

Are Studies Everything?

(From the Daily Trojan)

"Studies aren't everything!" This is perhaps the most perplexing and dangerous statement to be found amid the great mass of advice offered to those beginning college life.

It is perplexing because it is a generalization, and there is no way of judging how true or false it may be in its application to individual cases.

It is dangerous because the average freshman tends to interpret it as "studies are nothing." He beams when the statement is quoted, and is so enthusiastic over it that he may completely abandon all thoughts of study for days at a time. It is a most convenient rationalization for the lazy collegian.

So four years pass (with this philosophy it may easily be five or six), during which time the student has lived by his creed of "studies aren't everything." He has entered into many extra-curricular activities, has "made contacts," has "learned to meet people," and has had a pleasant interlude—but he has paid little attention to the mental training which is the primary reason for the existence of higher educational institutions.

Then the college graduate enters business. Here, in a short time, he discovers that his mind, which should have been disciplined and trained during his scholastic days, is unable to function with the precision necessary in modern "high pressure" business.

About Books

THE VICAR'S WIFE by CICELY BOAS, Macmillan, $2.00.

Here is a book that draws a sordid and pathetic picture of the lives of the poor English clergy. Or perhaps it is not that the lives of all English clergy are so drab, but that the vicar's wife made this particular man's life such a clammy, unbeautiful one. For the vicar's wife had a passion for self-sacrifice and the strictest economy. It wasn't economy so much, but the fact that it hurt her to have nice things, and comfortable surroundings, and the best of food when she knew that there were so many other persons who didn't have even the barest necessities, living in unwholesome quarters, with practically nothing to eat.

This was hard on Carol, for, though he had never been accustomed to luxury, he did enjoy good food, a glass of port now and then, and beautiful things. But he was stimulated by her criticism of his sermons, and her unflinching vitality. He had married her because he was lonesome—his heart was still with the woman who had died two years before—and he was satisfied.

The author draws a beautiful picture of English country life in describing the visit of the vicar and his wife to the country estate of Lady Avonshire. Carol had had no vacation and when he had a chance to substitute at the chapel of the Avonshire estate while the search for a new rector was going on he was eager for the chance. He had a beautiful time, and so did his wife. But when he was offered the position permanently his conscience refused to let him select the easy way and drove him back to his parish in London.

If you are particularly interested in the English clergy this book might appeal to you, but it was too colorless to be very entertaining to me.

FLOWER OF THORN by MARIE CONWAY OEMLER, Century, $2.50. Reviewed by FRANK JAFFE.

This is a story of youth—with all the earmarks of powerful drama of real life—yet remaining obscured under a mantle of juvenile appeal.

Primarily, it is the story of a pure bred Southern maid, Sally Rutherford, and of Sam Winstead, grandson of a Northern carpetbagger who had come fabulously wealthy through "within the law" transactions amid the ruins of the South during Reconstruction.

When Sally's grandfather, Colonel Rupert Rutherford, old Confederate soldier and gentleman, and the envy of all the countryside's male whites, spent the family fortune in wild-cat speculation, and finally killed himself because he had even lost Oakleigh, the family plantation, Sally found herself moneyless, guardianless, and completely in charge of a childish, old grandmother.

As her ideals, carefully nurtured through finishing school and founded in family tradition, were forced into submission by the necessity of earning a living and paying interest on Oakleigh's mortgage, Sally finally broke down and accepted Sam Winstead—although neither could faithfully admit that love had anything to do with it.

But love finally entered the picture—or perhaps it was because Sam's father held the mortgage—and Sally decided "I do," really and truly. That, of course, is as should be in all true southern romances.

But despite the juvenile appeal, Mrs. Oemler makes her story impressive by interpreting Southern character warmly, sympathetically. Yet the dramatic power that belongs traditionally to the South is there—supplying the thread that leads the reader on through the novel—without the tenseness and profundity that weights most other stories of heroes, villains, and mortgages.

"Don't Send My Boy to College!"

(From the Daily Illini)

People are beginning to wonder whether excessive advertising has sent too many American boys and girls to college after the almighty sheepskin which has dropped like other stocks. The press at the college doors is beginning to thin, and the nation is experiencing a reaction from its twentieth century clamor and turmoil over learning. For years the college education has been extolled from the rostrum and the printed page; today, the castle in air has toppled; the old folks and the children are wiping the cobwebs from their eyes.

Rhetoric on higher education is starting a counter movement back to blue shirts and shovels. "Don't send my boy to college" is no longer a joke; the world is taking stock of the college degree for the first time and finds it wanting. The 35 cent collar job has been pushed behind the scenes; our senators are thinking of substituting public improvement work which is notorious for its digging. The following predictions of Mrs. Mary R. Beard, made before the American Woman's association are exemplary of the new literature which is to be fed to the high schoolers of today and the college graduates of yesterday.

"The formally educated are the most helpless people in the world . . . There is a great deal of evidence that college education is not only negative, but is a liability in the business world. I am told that the waiting benches in Wall street are filled with curly-haired college boys who want to become messengers, ordinarily a menial job and one which they cannot do so well as the uneducated persons because of the psychological handicaps. Educated persons cannot compete with the present types. They suffer from repressions and live too much by rule . . . It is likely that this country has reached the point of saturation for the college trained woman as for the college man."

Mrs. Beard is right in part. The majority of the formally educated are babies when they take the cars to the big city after the June fireworks. The depression which began with the market slide in 1929 awakened the American business man and he has disposed of nearly all of his infants whose parents no longer have the pull to keep them in their mahogany stalls. There are lots of straight-haired boys as well as those with curling locks who are out seeking the menial job.

The psychological handicaps which do not permit a college graduate to accept circumstances and make the most of them are not imagined by Mrs. Beard. They exist, and we are still building them in our fraternities; two-thirds of the various houses, the brothers, spend their time paddling freshmen and coaching floor-waxing gangs. They don't do a thing themselves. They are in line for a degree. The queue may be five years long, but what does that matter in luxurious surroundings, with pledge slaves and the degree which some still consider the pass to the job. The gentlemen are living by rule; it's cold reason now that's directing industry and commerce and politics; the soft berths are gone.

A college education is no longer a general admission ticket. Those who feel that they are being sent to college have no place there. If they can use an education, it will do them some good.

Shall We Dutch Date?

(From the Daily Kansan)

Shall university men and women split fifty-fifty on date expenses?

Every year about this time someone brings up that perennial argument. We'd venture to say that this question is just about as old as the university, because we've got the gall to think that men who wore derby hats and flowing moustaches back in the Gay Nineties weren't a bit more chivalrous than college men of the Thrilling Thirties. They probably thought something about expenses, too. In fact, you can't tell us that old Walt Raleigh didn't cringe just a little when Queen Elizabeth trod her dainty dogs all over his velvet coat.

Regardless of other days, however, the question still remains. There are those among college men who weep and wail about the high cost of getting around with a sweet young thing on their arm. Equitable expense is their cry, for after all, they argue, they are mutually benefitted by each other's company. Well, maybe that's so, and maybe it isn't.

On the other hand, there are those romantic descendants of forefathers who fought with rapiers for the honor of that young virgin bud in the balcony. What? Share expenses with a lady? Never, my dear suh, never!

Co-eds at the University of Missouri recently were reported to have favored the "Dutch" date, but close on the heels of a news story, one of the fair sisters gave public warning that any one who escorted her anywhere could plan on being stuck, and stuck plenty.

Personally, we don't think much can be done about it. It's mostly a problem of individual bankrolls. Judging from what's been done in the past, however, we are inclined to favor the idea that somehow it hurts a man's pride to expect anything, monetary or otherwise, from a woman.

Spirit is the highest reality to me; but I believe that it is only attained by a complete denudation of the ego.

—John Middleton Murry

All that is distinctive of man, marking him off from the clay he walks upon or the potatoes he eats, occurs in his thoughts and emotions, in what we have agreed to call consciousness.

Campus Jogs

AT THE University of Arizona, freshmen who are accused of violating campus traditions are not paddled at once, but are summoned before a traditions committee and given a trial. If found guilty, they are given five "hacks." Which seems to be putting off until tomorrow what could be done today.

PRIZE fighters, business men, and movie stars have all deserted their various professions for college—now comes William Grantham, composer of "Leven-Thirty Saturday Night," and "Sing Another Chorus, Please," who left Tin Pan Alley to enroll in Ohio State university. Continuing his music as a sideline, he has organized a college band.

FROM the University of Kansas: "An Ohio court has ruled that failing students may be expelled from state-supported institutions. Well, that might be something new at Ohio, but here at Kansas it's just an old college custom."

SOMETIMES, college journalistic comment on collegiate activity is more interesting than the subject commented on. For instance Martin T. Keaveny in the Daily Cardinal at the University of Wisconsin notes: "'California men prefer their women on a pedestal,' states a Daily Californian editorial. The west, after all, must be declining, for time was when men preferred their women in a rumble seat."

"A BICYCLE built for two," will be a favorite tune again it seems. Since the use of automobiles on the Smith college campus has been strictly prohibited, the students have taken to bicycles and scooters with much enthusiasm. And speaking of the gay old days, back in 1884, the football season at Yale netted the school $3,500, of which $25 was used for training purposes.

AND what is the purpose of this; freshmen at the University of Pennsylvania must wear black caps, black socks and black cloth ties. They also must keep their hands out of their pockets at all times when on the campus and are forbidden to wear slickers with any initials or drawings on them.

"SORRY, teacher; I cut that class because we were having an important little session over at the state house in Mississippi and I had to present a new bill." That's a new alibi, isn't it? But the youngest man in the Mississippi house of representatives can use it, as he is Edwin D. Davis, 21, junior law student in Cumberland university, Lebanon, Tenn.

IT DOESN'T pay to start things, as Prof. Charles Shaw of New York's university of philosophy has learned. Since he made his now famous statement that "he who whistles is a moron," students persist in walking up and down outside his office, whistling in relays.

STUDENTS over the country are wondering what college will be like when professors, house mothers and pledge captains get those new lie detectors. When the University of Chicago threatened to use a lie detector to recover five valuable books missing from the library, the books and five others missing from last semester, were promptly returned.

GIRLS on a floor of one of the dormitories at Texas state college entered their alarm clocks in a which-can-ring-the-longest contest, the prize finally going to the old Ironside which ran steadily for three minutes, 28 1/2 seconds. Just a quiet afternoon at home.

Hawkeye Marksmen Shoot Way to National Fame in Four Years

By John Robert Ellis

MORE than 20 years of successful competition for Hawkeye rifle teams have made a national reputation for Iowa marksmanship. Consistent winnings have banked the trophy cases and walls of the P.M.S. and T. office at the armory with a display of cups, trophies and certificates.

When in 1929, the Old Gold marksmen out-shot all comers in intercollegiate competition, they won the first national championship to come to a Hawkeye team in years. Captain R. O. Miller, head coach for four years, and Warrant Officer J. J. Gibney, assistant coach, attribute the success of their teams to the fact that the marksmen have been trained to follow prescribed military shooting rules.

It is not only since the beginning of the Captain Miller-Gibney regime that Iowa marksmen have been so successful. In 1909, Lieut. M. C. Mumma, now a retired lieutenant colonel, was to organize a rifle team. A winter of experiment and hard work followed, and in the spring several men were ready to match their untried skill with the world. Their first competition was in the indoor intercollegiate shooting league at Washington, D. C., in which they were runners-up for the national title. Since, the teams' several coaches have endeavored to keep alive the tradition of that first squad.

Experienced in handling weapons, the latest Hawkeye coach, has been a decided asset to successful shooting. Captain Miller has enough rifle medals stored away to keep him busy merely scouring them. He has been shooting in rifle and pistol competition since 1914. In 1920, he shot for places on the Olympic team, was on the American infantry team that won the national championship, and won both the Wingate trophy and Osuer match, individual awards.

For several years, Captain Miller turned his attention to pistol work. In 1925, he was on the infantry pistol team, which won the national championship and the N.R.A. award. In 1927, he was captain of the infantry team, and in that year, during the national competition at Camp Perry, Ohio, he established an all time individual pistol record with a score of 283 out of 300.

In 1927 he became assistant professor of military science and tactics here. He has let his own competition slump in the interest of his teaching and coaching duties.

Of 52 postal matches with college teams, the Hawkeye team lost but two in four years. Postal matches are those in which each school shoots on its own range and mails the score to the other competitors. The R.O.T.C. squad did as well in 47 postal matches and also the seventh corps area match, the Hearst trophy, Reserve Officers' roundup at Madison, Wis., and the Kemper national invitational meet at Booneville, Mo. The varsity squad last year placed first in the Big Ten contest for the fourth successive season.

Nearly every basic military student is given some rifle training. Lt. Col. Converse R. Lewis, professor of military science and tactics, has begun the practice of offering medals to all attaining a specified degree of perfection at the end of the various courses of instruction. Every student in the course is required to participate in the governor's match. Last year, for the first time, Glen Martin, a freshman, won the trophy. Martin is training for both the varsity and R.O.T.C. squads.

Still regretting the loss by graduation of B. F. Gibney, Keith Weeber, T. F. Challis and Walter Schump, the coaches are now considering E. Palick, F. Palick, and Martin for this year's team.

The squad will be stabilized by more experienced shots, E. W. Eckhardt of Muscatine, who has a convincing record as ranking man at the infantry R.O.T.C. camp at Ft. Crook last summer. He was appointed captain of the seventh corps area rifle team by Capt. Gilbert E. Parker, area coach, when the team fired at the national meet at Camp Perry, Ohio. M. W. Heskett of Sanborn showed up well last spring. William McCulley will compete again this year. And the University Rifle club of 60 members is bound to develop good material.

News from Manchuria

hute (Manchurian bandits). As far as the ordinary people in south Manchuria are concerned, this move is the most cruel one for them. These bandits are incited by the Japanese to rob trains, villages and cities. I myself very nearly became a victim of these bandits as the train I came back on to Peiping was bandited on the way. My heart aches for the peaceful farmers of Manchuria during the long winter months which will soon come up on them when they have to face the double hardship of Japanese military occupation and widespread banditry.

In the next few paragraphs, I wish to share with you some of my personal reflections as I observed the situation in Manchuria on this trip.

My first reaction is that in this Japanese coupe-de-tat, we see militarism gone mad. I have seen for some time that when nations go on piling up armaments indefinitely, a point will be reached when the itch to use these armaments becomes irresistible. I think this is what has happened with Japan.

* * *

THE Japanese people probably no more desire war than the people in China. But the military junta in Japan, drunk with its own sword rattling, has precipitated the nation into a situation which has practically damned an otherwise admirable people as a pariah in the eyes of the whole world. Today, we see in Manchuria Japanese militarism running amok with all its attendant evils of brutality, murder, rape and lies. Let all who still believe in big armaments for "defensive purposes only" take warning and realize what a dangerous plaything they have in their hands.

My second reflection is in the realm of the future. The status quo in Manchuria presents a picture of Russia in the north and Japan in the south with China sandwiched in between the two. If Japan is allowed to get away with her bluff this time in south Manchuria, she would have brought herself face to face again with her traditional enemy, Russia. Once before when their territories were contiguous, it brought on the Russo-Japanese war. It requires no special foresight to see that with militant Japan facing directly in Manchuria a rejuvenated Russia still smarting under her last defeat, war is inevitable. Thus, unless the status quo is restored, a standing threat to the in Manchuria.

My third reaction comes to me because of my interest in the movement for the outlawry of war. Through Japan's action in south Manchuria, a situation is dramatized in such a way that the whole world sees a nation armed to the nth degree invading another nation which is utterly unprepared militarily to resist the invasion. Under any other circumstance, war between China and Japan would have been unavoidable. But China's rulers adopted a policy of non-military resistance to Japan's act of war and appealed to the League of Nations for arbitration.

* * *

THIS has placed before the League an unique opportunity to prove to the world once and for all whether it has a right to its existence. If the League takes an effective stand in this trouble between China and Japan consonant with the growing sentiment in the world for peace and co-operation between nations and for the outlawry of war, the whole cause for world peace would be immeasurably advanced.

The entire world is asking, "Can the League function effectively in such a situation?" My answer is emphatically, yes. There are people who do not have any faith in the League because they say the League has no military force to enforce its decisions. These people do not understand that for the League to use military force to enforce its decisions is to negate the very purpose for which the League is created, namely, to do away with war.

But the League has an instrument at its disposal far more effective than military force.

India through Mr. Gandhi and now China has demonstrated to the world that armed force can be resisted without resorting to armed force. The use of the boycott method by all the signatory powers of the League covenant against an offending nation will quickly bring that nation to her senses. This international boycott can be applied in three stages. The first stage is for all the member states of the League simultaneously to break off diplomatic relations with the offending nation. After an interval of a fortnight, if the nation is still bent on making war, then the member states will close their sea ports to the shipping of the offending nation.

Perhaps a month should be allowed after this declaration for the offender to think over its own actions. If it proves to be still recalcitrant, then the final stage should be applied, that is, withdraw all financial credit from the offending nation. I feel sure that the use of this method by the League when it has a clear case of international aggression before it will put an effective stop to war.

* * *

IBELIEVE, as all fair-minded men believe today, that in this Sino-Japanese situation in Manchuria, the League has before it a clear case of international aggression, pure and simple. Our government has counselled the people to remain calm under provocation and await action by the League reserving the use of military force for self-defense until every other means to settle the trouble is exhausted. Hence, much is being expected from the League by the Chinese people as indeed by all the world.

I earnestly hope the League will not fail this time. If it fails not only its own existence is threatened but the whole cause of disarmament and world peace is doomed beyond recall.

Forgive me for devoting this whole letter to our own trouble in Manchuria. In these days of suffering and death there I have no place in my heart for anything else.

Sincerely yours,

T. Z. Koo
