Symphony Orchestra Plays to 1,000 at Union Concert

Presenting a program which ranged from Beethoven to Tchaikowsky, 66 members of the university symphony orchestra, under the direction of Prof. Frank E. Kendrie, gave its first concert of the season before more than 1,000 persons last night at Iowa Union.

The program included Beethoven's "Overture to Egmont," "Symphony No. 10 (military) in G major," by Haydn, and Tchaikowsky's "Symphony No. 2 opus 17 in C minor." The best received number was Haydn's symphony, characterized by a novel percussion interlude. The adagio movement, carried principally by the string section, was followed by the allegretto, starting with the wind instruments, joined by the strings and the brasses in the final passages. The minuetto was distinguished by the introduction of a percussion passage just before the trio.

"Overture to Egmont" featured alternating passages between the string and wind instruments. Tchaikowsky's symphony began with the quiet andante sostenuto, the theme presented by the string section, followed by the andantino marziale, with a quiet marcia introduction. Moderato assai: allegro, the concluding movement, started suddenly and loudly by the entire group, followed by a rapid string passage; the theme was taken up by the wind instruments, and gradually by the entire orchestra. The passage mounted rapidly, worked to an intense pitch; a slow, calmer movement by the strings was followed by a gradual working up of the theme, the strings carrying the low pitch, the brasses the high; the strings again took the lead, followed by a passage by the entire orchestra. A pause—a gathering of force and power, and the tremendous swell of sound concluded the symphony.

Thornton Talks to Lions Club; Tells Various Theories Held

"History, like all things which concern man, has its changing fashions," said Prof. H. J. Thornton, speaking on the subject "Changing Interpretations of History" at the Lions club luncheon at the Jefferson hotel yesterday.

Professor Thornton, who is in the university history department, said that theories which explain historic phenomena are changing constantly, and that to get a correct view of history, one must understand the theories of the past.

Explains Primitive View
He first took up the ideas of primitive man. "It was very difficult for the early men to understand history. They believed that historic phenomena could be ascribed to spirits and ghosts," he explained.

Mrs. George Kosek Announces Drive for Good Reading Material

"Everyone who has only two or three hours of work to do each day must necessarily spend many hours in idleness. These people can't afford good reading material, and hence our plea for magazines in good shape to have on hand when these people call," Mrs. George Kosek, local social service chairman, announced yesterday in an appeal for reading material.

Persons having magazines that they would be willing to contribute for these people and their children will please leave them with Lucille Bruner, social service secretary, at the social service office in the city hall.

The Democratic Lineup

FRANKLIN D. Roosevelt, governor of New York, has figured prominently for three years in the speculation as to who will be the presidential nominee of the Democratic party in 1932.

Early discussion of his chances centered on his close alliance with former candidate Alfred E. Smith. It was at first feared that Roosevelt would be nothing but a tool in the hands of Smith and his faction.

Within the last year an irreparable rift has come between Smith and Roosevelt. The moment that the New York governor opposed Smith, his prospect of getting the Democratic nomination was heightened. Subsequent opposition between the two has served to strengthen Roosevelt's candidacy.

Smith, within the last few days, has placed himself squarely on the fence. His meticulously-worded statement leaves plenty of play for both the pro and con as to his candidacy. He was careful to say that he would carry out his duty to the Democratic party by campaigning if he was called upon to do so. He was just as careful to make it clear that he was not aggressively seeking the nomination although he could not prevent his friends and political allies from making efforts to secure it for him.

In so many words, Smith has declared that he will not seek the nomination; yet he would like to get it. It is a curious position to take, but quite advisable inasmuch as his chances for renomination are conceded to be quite slim.

Gov. Albert Ritchie of Maryland has been flirting with the nomination for nearly eight years. He early attracted attention because of his outspoken opposition to the eighteenth amendment, but since then the wet cause has become so popular that Ritchie does not find himself a lone crusader but just one of the wets.

If there be dregs in the ranks of the Democratic party, none of them have had the temerity to enter the nomination race. The other member of the pre-race quartet of favorites, former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, is wet.

If they all agree on the wet issue, however, there will be cause for division over the League of Nations plank. Baker was associated with the late President Woodrow Wilson, who conceived the league and who was primarily responsible for its founding.

Roosevelt has definitely committed himself against the league in a recent speech. Ritchie has refrained from committing himself, while Smith still has a chance to declare himself either for or against without being inconsistent.

But the Democrats cannot afford to quibble over small matters like party platforms. They are faced with the only real opportunity of victory they have had since Wilson "kept us out of war." They will not let that chance slip by letting any side issues bob up.

Their task is to decide among themselves which of the four will bring in the most votes; then go out and present a united front in anticipation of the imminent G.O.P. split.

Competition and Sports

JOHN R. TUNIS in the January Atlantic Monthly attempts, in the best of good humor, to explain what the competitive spirit has done to Americans. He is concerned almost entirely with competition in play, particularly among grown-up business men. They have carried their intense desire to win and achieve success over from their business life into their play, into their golf, their tennis, their bridge and into all the games in which they not infrequently indulge, in the naive belief that they are gaining rest and recreation.

But they aren't doing anything of the sort, the writer asserts, and after going on to point out the difference between English sportsmanship—playing the game for fun, pour le sport, and American determination to break records and to win at all costs, he says a word or two, by way of good measure, about college athletics which may bear inspection. He quotes an authority in American sports that Mr. William Roper of Princeton, who ought to know what he is talking about, and who says, "The football grind is killing the sport."

In other words the competitive spirit in football, and in golf, is one and the same thing. As Americans, declared a recent editorial in the Baltimore Sun (Mencken might have written it) we followed the Notre Dame team of other years in its every move, because we admired its success. The competitive spirit is a part of our national make-up. We play, in college, in business life and on the golf links, to win and we haven't asked the embarrassing question, why? We've been brought up that way, and as yet we haven't paused. Mr. Tunis insists, to inquire into the ultimate value of competitive play. However signs are at hand that Americans, in business life and elsewhere, are becoming more reflective. They are, despite pronouncements to the contrary, beginning to question ultimate values. Some of these days their questioning may bear fruit, and when it does, perhaps a new era will take place in the great and widely popular field of American sports.

Husbands Can Help

IN DISCUSSING causes of divorce, Judge Robert G. Morrow, of Portland, Oregon, says:

"The class of people who pour in here don't use labor-saving devices in their homes. There is no reason why the wife should be a washing machine, a vacuum cleaner, an electric fan or an electric toaster. The kitchen cabinet saves, and then there is the pressure cooker, the electric egg beater; in fact, there is no end to modern devices that not only make housework easier but actually fascinating."

Few homes are not equipped with electricity these days. Even without electricity there are many labor-saving devices that will make the housewife's work easier, will go far toward making any home happy.

Johnson county divorce statistics would seem to show, however, that in most cases where divorce decrees have been granted wives have been provided with these labor-saving devices. Perhaps it isn't the lack of kitchen aids as much as it is the lack of a kitchen aide that is to blame.

TODAY'S TOPICS

By FRANK JAFFE

Unpreparedness is a horrid word—especially on the end of an indiscriminating tongue.

We've just read an editorial in William Randolph Hearst's San Francisco Examiner about the "unpreparedness" of China.

Unpreparedness, to most readers, means lack of ships, soldiers, and other defense instruments. But, in the Hearst editorials, it represents a multitude of sins.

China is unprepared because her resources are undeveloped. China is unprepared because her population of 450,000,000 lacks the mobility and education to act in a crisis. China is unprepared because of great disunity among those 450,000,000—differences in religion, language, geography making unity a difficult problem. China is unprepared because what development she has undergone has largely been at the hands of outsiders. China, incidentally, lacks a well trained national army and navy.

Although the point of the Hearst editorial is that China deserves no aid from anybody—such as the United States—because "the only thing she has been able to preserve down through the ages is . . . her helplessness." Uncle Sam helps those who help themselves, to be sure.

But, in subtle reference, the editorial says that "China is 'the horrible example' of a nation lost to self-reliance and given over to improvidence and a Hoover policy of unpreparedness."

The writer showed that he knew China's unpreparedness was really not so much military unpreparedness, yet he takes occasion to rap the United States—a nation comparing with China, item by item, in no single respect.

Resources, finances, unity, education, mobility, self-reliance, yes, navy and army, too, adequate for her needs.

The Hoover administration's sending forces to Shanghai with one hand and raising the other in approval of budgetary disarmament doesn't appear like uniform pacifism. The naval force is present and being used in a project that has nothing to do with the national self-defense about which the Hearst writer is concerned—even more than he appears to want.

Wars are not won by arms alone. Napoleon should have beaten England if military supremacy were the whole story. Superior finances and resources were the main factors in England's victory, as they had been before in her defeat of Spain. The same can be said of the U. S. Civil war and many another conflict.

Armies and navies aren't useless in war, and they're an important factor—but they're just one factor among a good many. Italy has the largest army in Europe, but could she, in a war limited to two nations, whip France, say, without regard to naval and air strength? We think not.

Some measure of military preparedness will be necessary as long as the circumstances bringing the tools of war into play persist. Unfortunately excess preparedness provides one of those circumstances, so that Herbert Hoover is right in being for disarmament. But if that makes him a pacifist, William Randolph Hearst is a pacifist for not wanting to fight Japan over China . . . and if Hearst is a pacifist, I'll drink the Pacific ocean tomorrow without fail.

In case of a war that menaced the United States internally—the World war didn't even get across the English channel most of the time—this country has resources to be pretty self-sufficient for food, supplies, and men. She has facilities for turning out needed equipment in any lengthy war. And the conquest of an extensive area like this would be a man-size job for any group of nations.

Maybe it's because we live in the middle west and don't, like editorial writers in New York city and San Francisco, think of a coastal bombardment. But here's what the greatest middle westerner, Abraham Lincoln, said about it:

"All the armies of Europe, Asia, and Africa combined, with all the treasure of the earth (our own excepted) in their military chest, with a Bonaparte for a commander, could not by force take a drink from the Ohio or make a track on the Blue Ridge in a trial of a thousand years."

Borah, Fess Clash in Senate Over Direct Federal Aid for Unemployed; Vote Postponed

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10 (AP)—In one of the senate's most spectacular debates, Borah of Idaho, today took issue with the Hoover administration over direct federal aid for the unemployed and demanded immediate protection of the "hungry." Amid frequent outbursts of applause from the gallery, Borah challenged Fess of Ohio, who came forward with the administration's answer to the LaFollette-Costigan $375,000,000 bill, terming it "the opening wedge to the dole."

Borah Makes Accusation: "A government which will not protect those who protect it," thundered Borah, "is flying a flag which is a dirty rag, contaminating the air in which it flies." "If we leave this relief problem in the hands of politicians," concluded Fess, "God help America."

For more than two hours the scholarly Fess and the powerful Borah duelled on the Republican side of the chamber, flailing their desks and pounding out questions and answers in raised voices.

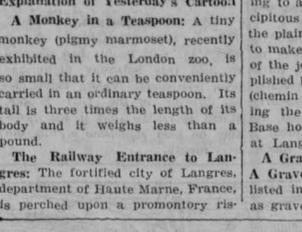

A vote on the issue went over until tomorrow.

Charging that Borah was "making the dole the football of politics," Fess warned that once established there would be no end to it.

"We are simply undertaking the control a crisis," said the Idahoan. "Thousands are unable to take care of themselves. There is not a semblance of a dole here. If this is a dole, then Illinois, Pennsylvania and other states are paying a dole."

Fess Opens Debate: Senator Fess opened the debate with the first attack upon the direct relief bill voiced by the Republican opposition. He said he was opposed to the $375,000,000 direct relief bill as a matter of principle and to the $750,000,000 Democratic substitute because he was not convinced of its

Behind the Scenes in Hollywood By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—More than ever before the moviemakers of Hollywood are watching the headlines in the daily papers. Dramatic news stories promptly find their way into celluloid.

Howard Estabrook, ace scenarist of the company, is adapting the story from an original by Merian C. Cooper.

This picture will supercede "The March of a Nation" on R.K.O.'s schedule, with Richard Dix and Irene Dunne stepping into the new production. Several players who worked with them in "Cimarron" also are scheduled for parts.

LOOK! GARBO HAS SENSE OF HUMOR.

Believe it or not, as Mr. Ripley would say, Greta Garbo has pulled a gag on herself.

The other day, in "Grand Hotel," she was supposed to walk through a crowd of admirers in a lobby.

"Now, Miss Garbo," explained Director Gouling, all you want is to get rid of these people. You go through them like a frightened deer pursued by hounds."

La Garbo inclined her head. "Now," said Gouling, "do you want to rehearse this scene?"

"No," she replied, "I rehearsed it in New York."

DAREDEVIL PASSES.

Lee Nomis, one of Hollywood's most famous stuntmen, is dead. He met his end while cameras were grinding on what was supposed to be a comedy air-stunt.

It was many times less dangerous than other feats he had survived. As far back as 1922, Lee staged the crash in "Manslaughter." You remember?—where Leatrice Joy drove her car into the traffic officer and went on with his sport. Since then, he had braved hundreds of dangers. But fate caught up with him at last. The dwindling ranks of Hollywood stuntmen mourn a fellow spirit and, perhaps, look grimly into the future.

Follows Plan Used in Similar Checkup by Johns Hopkins

In conjunction with the institute of law at Johns Hopkins university and with the cooperation of students in the college of law, the Iowa Law Review is undertaking a survey of divorce statistics in Iowa for the calendar year 1931 which will be published in the May issue of Iowa Law Review.

During spring vacation law students will collect statistics in their respective counties as to the character and extent of divorce in those counties and they will study the way Iowa law is administered locally.

The only permanent divorce records are in the supreme court and the investigation will include a study of trial court records in order to secure figures on divorces in the lower courts where the greater number of decisions are handed down but in which the reasons for the decision are not recorded permanently.

Show Law Operation The survey just begun will attempt to show how Iowa law operated in divorce cases and the percentage of cases which are contested.

"If a divorce is secured by collusion it is illegal," said a review editor, "but the difference between failure to contest a divorce and actual affirmative collusion is not noticeable. Generally in law, cases are fought out in court but now divorce decisions are scarcely ever the result of a contest. They are granted by default."

Follows Johns Hopkins Plan The investigation as carried on by the review editor will follow roughly the plan used by Johns Hopkins university in making its critical surveys. As record of divorce statistics in Maryland and Ohio is being prepared by the institute of law at Johns Hopkins. "We hope this work will in time be taken over by the census takers as information affecting common law is of importance to the public," said the review editor. "Insurance companies secure vital statistics through the census now."

A similar study of criminal law statistics is being made by Prof. Rollin M. Perkins of the college of law. The results of this survey will also be published in the May issue of Iowa Law Review.

Theater Seeks Russian Mood

Lighting Effects, Noises Off-Stage Prove Unusual

To catch the general Russian atmosphere and the varied moods of Tchekov have been the problems presented to members of the technical staff of the University theater, in experimenting with scenery and lighting for the production of "The Cherry Orchard." Feb. 16, 17 and 18.

Russian Life Studied One exterior and two interior scenes are included in the sets, designed by Arnold Gillette, instructor in scenic design. The question of making room for the three sets on the small stage proved in itself to be a problem. The details of Russian life and the Russian household required study in order to make the sets get over the truly Russian atmosphere.

Lighting problems for the play are equally difficult. For the first time, according to Hunton D. Sellman, instructor in stage lighting, the new control board will be used completely. The natural lighting effects include a sunrise, late afternoon sun, sunset and moonlight. The latter three follow each other in quick succession in the second act.

Much Experimentation Made The off-stage noises required for the play are unusual, and have been the subject of much experimentation by the technical staff. One of these problems is to produce the sound of the breaking of a harp-string, which gradually dies away. The use of pauses and seemingly insignificant off-stage noises are among factors necessary to portray the moods of the author.

Haskell Calls Free Coinage Policy Unsafe

Change to Silver Basis Will Toss Finance Into Disorder

"The free coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1 with gold would immediately undermine the entire credit structure of the nation," declared Prof. George D. Haskell of the economics department yesterday. His opinion was asked in regard to the movement now in action at Washington by representatives of half a million farmers who ask for the free coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1 with gold as a means to inflate farm prices.

"With the value of silver as unstable as it is for a standard of money, the credit of the nation, which represents 90 cents of the business dollar, would be totally unsteady. Such instability would create distrust and the people would board their money and at the same time drive the gold coin out of circulation."

Advantage to Debtors Professor Haskell pointed out that if free coinage of silver did become statute, debtors would then pay their formerly contracted debts of $4 with four silver dollars which would in reality be worth only one gold dollar. Thus for every gold dollar that went out of circulation, four silver ones would come in.

"The great difference in the values of the two monies," explained Professor Haskell, "would then force the merchants to raise their prices by 300 per cent in order to cope with the comparative low value of silver."

Lower Fixed Income Value Professor Haskell added that with the present market ratio of 64 to 1, a system of buying silver in the market and taking it to the mint for free coinage in exchange for gold coin, if repeated often, could take on the aspects of a highly profitable business.

"Adam's Apple," by Test Dalton, a farce comedy in three acts, is the selection of the Mecca show committee for the presentation of the annual engineer's Mecca week to be given next month. The play will be presented Saturday night, March 19, in the natural science auditorium, Francis Murray, E4 of Iowa City, chairman of the committee, announced yesterday.

Carma I. Wagner, A4 of Reinbeck, will coach the three feminine parts in the play. Male members of the cast will have to content themselves with direction by the show committee members, according to Murray.

First tryouts for the Mecca chorus will be held Sunday at 2 p.m. Tryouts for the parts in the show will be held next Monday at 7 p.m. The chorus rehearsals will be directed by two sorority women to be picked by committee members later this week.

Other members of the show committee are, J. Garland Gearhart, E2 of Corning; Harold A. Peterson, E4 of Essex; Lawrence E. Travis, E4 of Iowa City; John W. McDonough, E3 of Creston; and Ted R. MacDougall, E3 of Conesville.

Ruckmick to End Lectures

Psychologist Completes Series at Cornell, Coe Colleges

Prof. Christian A. Ruckmick of the department of psychology, will conclude a series of lectures today, when his lectures at Coe college and Cornell college on the subject "An experimental approach to the emotions."

The lecturer for a series of this type is chosen annually on the grounds of his distinction as an investigator, and is sent out by the graduate college to the colleges in the state which annually invite the speaker.

Charles C. Wylie Last year Prof. Charles C. Wylie of the astronomy department, the year before Prof. Philip G. Clapp of the music department, and the year before that Prof. Stephen Z. Bush of the Romance languages department, were the lecturers chosen.

It is the purpose of the speaker to present an elementary lecture, illustrating some of the methods and results of his research in such a way as to inspire in under-graduates a love for research in the field that he represents.

Professor Ruckmick's lecture is a semi-popular presentation of research methods that have been applied to the analysis of emotions aroused in a variety of situations.

Studies Emotions He has for 10 years or more studied introspectively and by means of the registration of bodily processes, such emotions as fear, anger, surprise, and the pleasant responses aroused by music. He concludes with a discussion of the role of the emotions in our everyday life.

The following schools were included in Professor Ruckmick's series of lectures: Penn college, Parsons college, Morningside college, Simpson

Hubert Stevens' Record Smashing Runs Win Olympic Boblet Title for U. S.

Death Defying Dashes Upset Young Swiss

Takes Bob Down Slide in 2 Runs Under 2 Minutes

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Feb. 10 (AP)—A flash of almost unbelievable speed gave Hubert Stevens, braveny, iron armed woodsman, the Olympic two man bob sled championship today, the United States its fifth Olympic triumph, and 12,000 persons strewn about the rocky sides of Mt. Van Hoevenberg the thrill of a life time.

Defying everything that has ever been done before on a bob run, accomplishing what he thought himself was impossible, Stevens twice flashed down through the vertical curves and lightning straightaways of the mile and a half chute under two minutes, to make up the 4.38 seconds he stopped Reto Capadrutt yesterday and beat the Swiss youngster for the title 1.54 seconds.

There seemed little chance to defeat Capadrutt unless an accident stopped the mad surge of the young Swiss sophomore from the University of Zurich, when the 12 drivers of eight nations took their sleds and brakemen to the top of the lofty mountain just after dawn to add the final two heats today to the

Seems Hopeless
And when Reto, second down the slide today, found the track blazing fast where yesterday Stevens, leading off, ploughed out the snow for the rest of the field, what little hope there had been died. Down came the Swiss, his white, rope-stepped sled glistening in the bright winter light, hammering through the curves, taking impossible chances, riding higher and wider and faster, to zoom across the finish line in 2 minutes, 3.52 seconds breaking the record Stevens set at 2:04.27 late yesterday.

Stevens, a 220 pound giant, one of the four brothers who promised their mother on her death bed that they'd never ride the suicidal slide together, shook his head and started up the mountain with his brother Curtis, the youngest and biggest of the four. They take Curtis down on the back of the boblet at just such times as this. They boast he can pack a 200 pound deer under his arm as if it were a serlon steak.

When he bobs a sled—heaves forward to increase its speed—they insist he can leap it clear off the ground.

Field Distanced
By the time Stevens took the track for his first run the field had been distanced, although they all tried the trick of heating the sled runners with blow torches, a trick that gave Hubert his 2:04.27 mark yesterday. The competition was Capadrutt and Stevens, and chiefly Capadrutt.

They came down—and the thousands lining the precipitous mountain-side gasped at the flat bullet, two hunched figures heaving madly, flashed in and out of walled ice turns, hitting 65 and 70 miles an hour, down past in the flash of an eye, the runners screaming as they snatched at the ice.

"They're down," the speakers called and the throngs, still breathless, waited the time. It was one minute, 59.69 seconds, breaking two minutes for the first time in the history of two man bobbing, a feat that to those daredevils who ride the skeletons of oak and steel was like Paavo Nurmi running a mile in three minutes flat. The four man bobs with twice the weight and momentum, seldom get under 1:55.

Makes Gallant Effort
In that one ride the Stevens boys caught Capadrutt and made up all but half a second of the total time that decided the championship. The rest was a matter of course, once down safely at that terrific speed. The Stevens boys went back and smashed that record with a run of 1:57.68 while game little Capadrutt, straining, gambling with death on the top of every wall, made desperate descent in 1:59.67. But the championship was gone.

Stevens' total time for the four runs was 8 minutes, 14.74 seconds and Capadrutt's 8:16.28. Jack Heaton and Robert Minton, defending the Olympic title for the United States, were third with 8:29.15, almost 15 seconds back of the winner. Lieut. Papan's Rumanian team finished fourth. Hans Kilian of Germany, fifth; Count Rossi Di Montelera of Italy, eighth; Max Houben, Belgium, ninth, Christian Hansze, Belgium, tenth, Louis Balsan, France, eleventh, and Hugo Weinstengel, Austria, twelfth.

Stevens conquest completely overshadowed the triumph of Sweden in the 13 kilometers ski running race, which also formed half of the combined running and jumping event that ends tomorrow on the tall intervals olympic jump. Sven Utterstrom, world champion at 50 meters, raced home first in one

Sportively Speaking

By Bill Rutledge

The ragged, dispirited workout of the University of Iowa basketball squad yesterday afternoon offset the cheerful news from Dr. L. P. Ristine, medical supervisor of athletics. Dr. Ristine, who has had Ben Selzer and Parker Bennett under his care since the Chicago game, says that both will probably be able to play against Northwestern Saturday against Michigan the following Monday.

Without the star guard and the elongated center the Hawkeyes' chances of topping the Wildcats from the undefeated class would be very slight; but with Selzer and "High Pockets" in the game the chances are in the better.

The Purple champions had to quell a desperate Old Gold rally in the first clash of the two teams here Jan. 11 before edging out a 32 to 26 decision. And that was against the "old" team. This new outfit has cast a rosy glow over the ease outlook and at top strength it must be conceded a good chance to down Northwestern. Yes, on the Purple's home floor!

Boxing fans have been getting impatient with Jack Dempsey. His second comeback campaign has been strung out for over four months now. Still everybody, including Jack himself, is wondering whether or not he will get into another championship bout.

Dempsey knows full well that it takes time, and plenty of it, to get up into the contending class. Perhaps the Mauler remembers the years he spent knocking around the small towns, boxing in mining town opera houses, and fighting in athletic club shows before he attracted much attention.

Precedent is all against Dempsey. It is a very trite saying that "There's no harm in trying, and lots of money in it for a drawing card like Jack. You can look forward to a Dempsey-Schmeling bout this year or another bloody Dempsey-Sharkey scrap.

Bill Glassgow, Iowa's all-American halfback of 1929, has resumed his law study. Which isn't news at all. . . . Bill says he'd like to see Frank Wickhorst as the new Hawkeye football coach. . . . Rifle Teams Start Firing in 14 Matches

With 14 postal matches, including a Big Ten match with the University of Wisconsin, scheduled for this week, University of Iowa varsity and R.O.T.C. rifle men are bearing down on the targets in an effort to add more victories to their already extensive list.

In the varsity section matches are being fired with the following schools: University of Georgia, University of Nebraska, Mississippi A. and M., Indiana university, Ohio State, University of Cincinnati, and West Virginia university. The freshman squad will fire a postal match with the University of Indiana frosh.

The R.O.T.C. squad is firing matches with South Dakota State, North Dakota university, Western Maryland college, South Dakota university, University of Kentucky, Lafayette college, and Presbyterian college of Clinton, S. C.

With the reporting of a 1872 to 1299 win over the West Point Military academy, Iowa varsity shooters had a perfect record for the seven postal matches fired last week.

Hawk Gym Squad Starts Preparation for Big Ten Meet
With the Minnesota meet out of the way, varsity gymnasts are rounding into form for the conference championships at Chicago. The Iowans received some valuable pointers from their first competitive meet, and with the knowledge gained will be making an attempt to redeem themselves at the conference.

St. Patrick's Quintet Upsets St. Ambrose Cagers at Davenport 22 to 21

Revenge for Irish by Win in Close Tilt

Scannell, Pinney Each Count Nine Points for Winners

(Special to The Daily Iowan) DAVENPORT, Feb. 10.—St. Patrick's of Iowa City invaded the St. Ambrose academy stronghold here tonight to gain revenge for a previous defeat and score a great 22 to 21 upset victory.

The Ambrosians, strengthened by several additions to the squad since the start of the new semester, were big favorites to repeat their 21 to 13 victory of two weeks ago, but when the final gun sounded the fighting Irish from the university had successfully atoned for that drubbing.

Nip and Tuck
The scoring of the game, which was nip and tuck all the way, was mainly done by two men on each of the teams, Nolan, forward for the Little Saints, was individual high scorer with four field goals and two free throws for 10 points. Thompson, rangy home team center, counted nine points, but this total was matched by both Pinney and Scannell, tall forward and center for the Iowa Citizens.

The game started slow with neither outfit being able to pierce the rival's defense with any degree of success, but things livened up as the play progressed, the half finding the visitors trailing by 13 to 10.

Forge Into Lead
They came back with a strong bid in the third quarter to forge into a 19 to 17 lead as the last period got underway. The St. Pat's boys grew cautious in the final frame as the Ambrosians desperately attempted to overcome the Irish, but all their efforts were in vain.

St. Mary's to Play Twice in Two Days

The St. Mary's Ramblers leave town at noon today to be gone for two days. When they return they will or will not have registered their twelfth and thirteenth basketball victories of the season.

But whether they win or lose, and they will be striving to protect their unbroken string of victories which now stands at six, Coach Suplee will send his boys against two reputed teams in southeastern Iowa parochial circles.

When they stop off at Ft. Madison tonight, the Ramblers will be seeking revenge for their first defeat of the season, a one point loss to Central high of that city. The Central quintet is reported to be improving as the season goes along, and one Davidson, the boy who personally proved to be the thorn in the side of the Blue and White in the last meeting, has recovered from a recent illness.

Tomorrow night, the Iowa Citizens go to West Point to meet St. Mary's of that place. In an early season game, the Suplee men turned in a decisive victory and hope to repeat tomorrow, although the West Point outfit is now near the top in the southeastern parochial league.

Coach Suplee, in addition to the Rev. Walter Boeckmann, athletic director, is taking the following 10 men on the trip: Capt. Gaulocher, Belger, Dick Lumsden, and Rittenmeyer, forwards; Maher and Consumus, centers; and Ralph Lumsden, Bradley, Pooler and Vogt, guards.

Umpires Get Release
KEOKUK, Feb. 10 (AP)—Release of Umpires Row, Fox, Buckley and Tobin was announced by Dr. C. R. Logan, president of the Mississippi Valley baseball league. Tobin will join the staff of the New York-Pennsylvania league. Logan said no new contracts had been signed with umpires.

Set New Mile Mark

The highspot of the annual games of the Millrose Athletic association at Madison Square Garden, New York, was the amazing performance of Gene Venzke (above), amateur track star of Pottstown, Pa. Venzke won a sensational victory in the Wanamaker mile, the feature event, by setting a new record of 4 minutes 11.1-5 seconds, breaking the long-standing mark of the great Finnish runner, Paavo Nurmi.

Theta Tau to Meet A. T. O. Five Tonight

Both Undefeated in Play for Title; Pi K. A. in Action

By Harold Mitchell
Theta Tau and Alpha Tau Omega, both boasting two victories and no defeats in the interfraternity championship fight, will clash tonight with the winner of the battle being assured of at least a tie for the first place position.

Pi Kappa Alpha will tangle with Delta Chi in the other game of the evening's play. The Pi Kappa Alpha's have lost one contest, and still have a possibility of tying for first place. The Delta Chi's best efforts will bring them but second place honors now as they have dropped two and won one game.

Many Upsets
There have been a good many upsets in the league so far, and the A.T.O.'s have figured in some of them. At the start of the race they didn't appear to be such a strong outfit. But as the play progressed the team kept on winning ball games. Tonight they face the rangy Theta Tau's with a perfect record. In the persons of Peterson, scintillating center, and Barber, mountain gander, they have two shining players of the league.

The Theta Tau's unquestionably have the best record of any team in the league. Aschenbrenner and Mullineux, forwards over six feet tall, have piled up some heavy scores in their string of victories. Clearman, pivot man who is also a six-footer, is an artist in locating the basket, too. These three players each connected for 10 points in the Delta Chi fracas.

Delta Chi's Last Two
After making an impressive record in the sectional play, the Delta Chi's dropped their first two games in the title fight and are out of the race. However, with second place in view, they can be expected to put up a good fight with the Pi K. A.'s.

The Pi Kappa Alpha men rely on a strong defense to bring victory to them. They have won most of their games through the long shooting of Sleh coupled with their tight defense.

Wells Sends City Hi Cagers Through Drill on Handling of Ball

Routine of the Little Hawk basketball practice change slightly last night as Coach George Wells sent his men through drills on handling the ball in a final attempt to acquaint them with the game before their next contest at Dubuque tomorrow night.

A lengthy session on dribbling was followed by short scrimmages in which every man was given a chance to show his ability to play the game and handle the ball either as a veteran or a beginner.

Grunt, Groan Artists Twist Each Other to Edification of Fans as Karl Zbyszko Wins

By Bill Rutledge (Sports Editor, The Daily Iowan) CEDAR RAPIDS, Feb. 10 — A savage comeback by Karl Zbyszko for two falls over Victor Soldat, ponderous Bohemian champion, gave the Cedar Rapids wrestling idol a wildly applauded win in a vicious match.

A near-capacity crowd witnessed Promoter Johnny Fryrear's mixed program of wrestling and boxing at the auditorium here tonight and saw Zbyszko establish himself as the logical person to meet Gus Sonnenberg, former world's champion, in his proposed appearance here.

After both wrestlers had spent 16:02 minutes in getting in and out of excruciating holds, Soldat flung Zbyszko to the mat for the first fall.

Wins Last Two
The local wrestler caught Soldat in a tortuous leg split hold and nearly finished him. Zbyszko's speed and cleverness held off the Bohemian's brute strength. His flying tackle flattened Soldat in 20:20 minutes. It took the entire 10 minute intermission to revive him.

Zbyszko made short work of winning the deciding fall, nailing his dazed opponent in 47.8 seconds.

I was glad that I wore my old hat for shortly before the second fall Zbyszko sent Soldat flying out on to the press table at which Harold Mitchell and I were working. In getting back into the ring, the 225 pound champ mistook the hat for a step into the ring.

Freberg Triumphs
Barefooted and vigorously booed, John Freberg of Minneapolis tossed Montana Jack McCarthy around in burlesque match. In the only fall of the go, Freberg pitched Montana Jack over his head with a backward body slam. Jack was completely knocked out and after Referee Alex Fidler administered a few whiffs of ammonia, he queried, "Is it all over?" and staggered from the mat.

Joe Rivers waited until the last and fourth round of his fight with Gus Anderson in the welterweight class to try to knock him out but it was too late. He floored Anderson for the count of nine and had him tottering, but the Davenport boxer stayed on his feet to lose a newspaper decision.

Gainaway Wins
A technical knockout was obtained by Snubs Gainaway, Davenport light heavyweight, over Johnny Cole of Cedar Rapids. Snubs pounded him through the ropes to the floor. In the fall Cole sustained a broken collar bone.

Clyde Perrego and Caddy Kelly, a pair of local lightweights, flayed away in the opening bout, the latter had three ribs broken in the bout and lost the newspaper verdict.

Hawkeye Wrestling Team Strengthened for Minnesota Dual

Additional strength for the opening of the conference schedule against Minnesota here Saturday evening will be given the University of Iowa wrestling team by the presence of Clarence Hubbard, clever 165 pounder.

Hubbard was ineligible for the Cornell meet Monday because of a technicality, and Coach Mike Howard had no substitute of ability approximating that of the former track star. Loss of a single decision defeated the Hawkeye team.

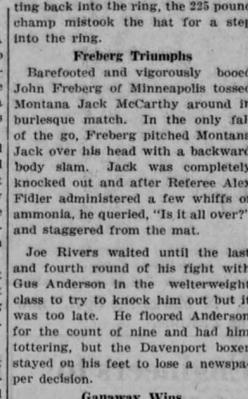

Another strengthening of the team is probable. Claude Peer, veteran 126 pounder until Rollo Parmentier succeeded to the position, has signified his intentions at trying his luck in the 135 pound division.

Titular Game Scheduled for Quad Playoff

If Section D is able to chalk up a win tonight over Section A there will be no doubt as to the winner of the playoff series and the championship of the light-weight division of the Quadrangle basketball tournament. But should the Section A hoopsters cop the fray another three way tie will be the result and the final decision will have to be postponed until further games can be scheduled.

It will be a golden opportunity for Section D and if their sharpshooters are in form they will rule slight favorites for the title. Sherman was hot against Section C Tuesday night and will bring watching by his opponents tonight.

Cue King

Angie Kierekhefer of Chicago registered the fiftieth and winning point as diagrammed to capture the world's three-cushion title in match held at Chicago. It was the tenth title for Kierekhefer, who defeated Otto Reisel of Philadelphia, 50 to 27, in 40 innings.

Champions will be crowned in the finals of intramural boxing and wrestling tournaments held in connection with the charity fund show at the field house Feb. 17. Charles Kennett, chairman of the unemployment committee expects to place tickets on sale soon.

Eighteen rounds of boxing are scheduled in six weights, namely, 118, 135, 147, 160, 175, and heavyweight classes. Bout will consist of three two minute rounds with an extra round in case of a tie decision.

Finalists in wrestling are: 118 pounds—Lawrence Mueller vs. Charles Cline.

125 pounds—Claude Peer vs. John Mitchell.

135 pounds—Gorden Behn vs. Rollo Parmentier.

145 pounds—Burton Dull vs. Wilford Minkel.

155 pounds—Earle Kielhorn vs. Loren Heller.

165 pounds—Alvin Coons vs. Randall Whinnery.

175 pounds—Clarence Hubbard vs. Charles Johnson.

Heavyweight class—John O'Leary vs. Wilton Haas.

Captain Mueller, Parmentier, and Johnson won their matches in the meet with Cornell, while Dull obtained a draw decision. Intense rivalry is manifested in boxing and wrestling, and the finals are certain to be close and hotly contested.

Varsity gymnasts who will compete in the high bar and parallel bar events are: Capt. F. A. Merton, J. Montgomery, C. A. Laughead, A. R. Ellis, L. W. Cassel, and R. E. Bolte.

Tap dancing, cageball, elephant vaulting, clowning stunts, and a boxing baseball game will round out the program of the carnival. Receipts will go to the American Legion fund to aid the needy of the city.

Track Squad Continues to Drill for Dual

The Hawkeye track squad rapidly nears the opening of its indoor dual season with the Notre Dame team here Saturday, continuing the daily drills in an effort to round into condition.

Notre Dame Favored for Win in Dual

Superior in 5 Running Events; Hawkeyes Seek Upset

An uphill battle against Notre Dame speed in five events and a series of stirring duels between crack racers is the prospect for the University of Iowa's track team in its opening meet of the indoor season here Saturday.

The Irish lineup includes three Canadian Olympic middle distance competitors, a sprinter who has equalled an American record, a five mile relay team, and one fast distance runner.

Irish Runners Favorites
So the victors, on paper, are conceded the edge in the dash, quarter, half, two mile, and relay—half of the events. Iowa appears strongest in the high hurdles, shot put, and pole vault, while the mile run and high jump are regarded as toss-ups.

Captains will meet in the 60-yard dash when George Saling competes against William McCormick, with odds in favor of the Notre Dame chief. Alex Wilson, British champion and winner of the Millrose "600" in the New York city indoor games last week, can win the quarter and half mile runs if he chooses.

But Gordon Lagerquist, Iowa veteran, will dispute his right to the quarter, and Stuart Skowho will challenge him in the half mile. Supporting Wilson will be Fred MacBeth and Brant Little, both Canadian Olympic runners in 1928. Little has run the half mile under 1:55 and may be entrusted with this event without aid of Wilson.

Iowans Strong in Field
Iowa boys to take first and second in the high hurdles, with Captain Saling as the winner and Captain Oliver going to Hartford or Thurston.

Oliver Sansen in the shot put has a better record than either of the Notre Dame entries, and John Okerlin, star sophomore pole vaulter, figures to outpace the Irish athletes.

If Robert Darling of Notre Dame does six feet two inches in the high jump—his best height—he will defeat the Iowans—Ray Story, Everett Handorf, and Hushes Bryant.

Both teams appear mediocre in the mile run, in which Leo Campisi, Iowa sophomore, will battle Joe Klaus, junior. Ed Hawery, with a record of 9:30, will dominate the two mile run, with Iowa fortunate to snare second place.

The tall center, whose absence probably cost Iowa a victory over Minnesota Monday, still is unable to straighten his right arm after taking a severe fall in the Chicago game.

If rapid improvement occurs by Saturday—which now seems unlikely—he will start against Northwestern at Evanston as his team attempts to end the victory parade of the Big Ten defending champions.

However, Alex Rogers, veteran, is playing improved ball at center, partly compensating for the loss of the six foot five inch sophomore.

Rogers, however, is not consistent in getting the tip-off and cannot approach the efficiency of Bennett on rebounds.

Ben Selzer, the other injured Iowan, still limps from a bad ankle, but probably will be ready to play at least part of the game at left guard. The rest of the lineup will be Howard Moffitt and Guelnder Krumholz at forwards; and Marshall Riegert at right guard.

Bennett Still Bothered by Injured Arm

Selzer Takes Part in Practice as Ankle Improves
No improvement in the condition of Parker Bennett's injured elbow was reported by Coach Rollo Williams as he sent his crippled University of Iowa basketball team through drills for the Northwestern and Michigan games.

Vogel Starts Batting, Infield Practice for Diamond Prospects

In an attempt to increase the batting punch of the Hawkeye team this year, Coach Otto Vogel has started batting cage practice earlier than usual.

The team has eight letter men returning. They are: Wesley Flah, John Ingraham, James Kenny, Captain Elmo Nelson, Gordon Frange, Mike Riegert, Frank Stemple and Leo Frigo.

In a few days two infield combinations will be picked and from this group the varsity infield will be selected. The fielding and throwing of the candidates is being closely watched and checked by Coach Vogel in an attempt to correct the faults which prove disastrous in conference games.

The Gay Bandit of the Border

By TOM GILL Copyright 1931, by International Magazine Co., Inc. Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

SYNOPSIS

The Mexican peons, grown tired of Paco Morales' oppression, await the word from "El Coyote," their masked protector, to overthrow him. Morales has enlisted the aid of the U. S. Cavalry to capture the notorious bandit. Ted Radcliffe, a young American, learns that Morales was responsible for his late father's ruin. Bob Harkness, Ted's friend, urges him not to make an enemy of Morales, as he has other plans. Ted is enamored of Mor-les' beautiful niece, Adela. At a fiesta, Jito, Morales' ward, jealous of Ted, challenges him to a wrestling match. Ted wins, and Adela, sensing Jito's hatred, exacts a promise from Ted never to fight with him. Morales informs Bob that his men will join in the search for "El Coyote" and that Jito has dedicated himself to kill the bandit. Adela tells Ted he must not let his lack of wealth keep him from love.

CHAPTER XX

The fragrance of her seemed very near, and for a moment all life seemed to wait breathless with expectancy. He took a half-step forward, watching the white arm that rose to her neck, and paused there. His own hand covered hers. He bent forward and his lips touched her trembling hand. For a fleeting instant he felt the touch of swift, light fingers in his hair. Abruptly she swayed away.

Silence for a time. At last he asked in a voice not yet grown steady: "What would you think if a penniless man like myself should tell you that he loved you?"

Adela turned with a half-sigh from the window. "I should think it very exciting," she whispered.

That night for Radcliffe was like a page torn from romance. The garden, illuminated with a myriad tiny lanterns, had been thrown open, and since dusk the villagers streamed in and out, dancing on the flagstones to the music, laughing among the shadows, feasting and drinking, a constant flow of color and eager gaiety. It was their day of happiness, of rest from toil and from life's implacable demands, and they gave themselves wholeheartedly to the moment with its song and laughter.

A few Yaqui Indians, tall and unbending, stood in their blankets, watching the women dancing to the soft music, while their own long-haired stolid squaws squatted at cakes that Morales' servants of their feet, silently accepting the fered them.

"Straight, clean-limbed, untamed fellows, these Yaqui," Don Bob was saying. "These at least our host has never brought under his thumb. Morales' reign ends with the foothills and his domination goes no farther than the docile, lowland people. There is something in the mountains that breeds freedom and impatience with servitude. The slaves of the world have always come from the lowlands."

But Ted wasn't listening. Instead he was watching Adela, who, in her role of hostess to these strangely assorted guests, moved quietly among them, giving the children little presents, giving gracious words to all. And always, as if she were something more than mortal, the hats of all the peons swept the dust before her, and the women as she passed reached out and reverently touched the fringe of her Spanish shawl. They followed her with their eyes, smiled when she smiled, each eager for a word or nod.

"How she is loved," Ted murmured. "With good reason. She loves them. If El Coyote only he is afraid for the women. Make Jito send them away."

Slowly Morales turned toward the kneeling man. Deliberately he put his foot on the peon's shoulder and kicked him into the dust.

"Only that?" he asked contemptuously. "Por Dios, if I carried a whip I would cut you to ribbons. Is this some wayside inn that you should rush upon me and my guests with your whining? Get back to your whimpering people. Never once have my men ridden among you but you have come crying with fright to me."

He put his arm about the girl's shoulder and made as if to turn away, but suddenly Adela's eyes blazed. Her slender figure stiffened.

"I will not have it. Mother of God, is there no end to the madness of those vaqueros of yours? This time, my uncle, we will make an end of it."

To Ted it seemed that suddenly into her voice had come some note final and resolute. She flung Morales' hand from her shoulder.

"I will not have these people made sport of by a drunken horde of cowboys. Do you understand me? I will not have it. I am going down to the village. No, you cannot stop me, my uncle."

Her car was standing at the end of the broad driveway, and, throwing off her shawl, she ran and flung open the door. Without a word the two men jumped to the running-board, and in another minute the little car was racing down the dusty, bumpy road. Ahead above the hum of the engine shrouds came to them from the village, and now a volley of shots rattled far down the street.

The girl redoubled her speed.

"Dios," muttered Morales. "This thing they call impetuous youth may break all our necks before the night is done."

The street was filled with riding men, great swart fellows with red and purple shirts and chaps chosen especially for the fiesta. Picked men—Jito's vaqueros. They rode not only in the street but upon the narrow pavements, singing and shouting, laying about them with their rawhide whips. One had driven his pony among the wares of a small fruit store and contentedly watched the horse munching apples and pears, while the helpless proprietor stood by, alternately murmuring curses upon the vaqueros and prayers to his saints. As the car swung around the corner, one of the cowboys, lurching a little in his saddle, began shouting at the lanterns with indifferent success. He swore loudly at each unsuccessful shot. Farther on rose a roar of deep laughter, and the rattle of shattered glass.

As if on some secret mission, the main body of Jito's vaqueros were pushing steadily on toward the farther end of the village, leaving behind them a trail of wreckage and destruction. Suddenly from beyond the village the sky blazed and a shower of sparks flew upward toward the stars. The vaqueros spurred forward, and with flashing eyes Adela looked at her uncle.

"They have fired Dominguez' ranchohouse," she cried, and sped out the hard-baked road. As the car topped a rise Ted saw a solitary dwelling outlined in the lurid glare of flames. But the ranchohouse itself was not burning. Two stacks of hay were ablaze, and as the car swung toward them the roar of flames grew louder. Already a crowd of half-drunken vaqueros rode madly about the solitary ranchohouse, while from the village streamed the rest of Jito's dreaded band, yelling and snapping their whips, eager for whatever new entertainment the night might afford.

"Have they no other use?" Radcliffe asked.

"No longer. I hope they never will. Once my forefathers found need of them in repelling attacks. Still, this hacienda would make a rather strong fortress with those gates closed."

Ted looked up curiously. "But they only hang on those hinges. A strong man could lift them off."

Incredulously the Spaniard raised his shoulders. "A strong man indeed—perhaps Jito or yourself might do that. Yet I remember—"

The words were lost in the mad-dened pounding of horses' hoofs. Beyond the gate a hatless rider had pulled his pony to a halt. Flinging himself from the saddle, he ran toward them, then catching sight of Adela, threw himself to his knees before her. His upturned face was dust-stained, and in the light of the lanterns it gleamed with sweat and with a darker streak of blood. The man was speaking to her quickly, insistently, his face upturned in supplication. Once he raised his hand and grasped her shawl, and now the girl had put both hands before her eyes and swerved. The silenced crowd of peons was falling back, and through them Morales and Radcliffe pushed their way to the girl's side.

Adela turned an agonized face toward them. In supplication her arms reached out to her uncle.

"The vaqueros," she cried. "This man says that Jito's vaqueros are raiding the village, that they have broken into the cantina and are driving the people through the streets. He says they are wild with drink and he is afraid for the women. Make Jito send them away."

Slowly Morales turned toward the kneeling man. Deliberately he put his foot on the peon's shoulder and kicked him into the dust.

Tank Mentor Tries Men in New Events

With scarcely more than a week before the Minnesota swimming team comes to the University of Iowa for the second inter-collegiate swimming meet of the season Feb. 20, Coach Dave Armbruster is attempting to balance and strengthen the Hawkeyes by shifting a few men to swim the new events in a series of time trials.

Steve Nielson was in the hospital Tuesday night suffering from a severe cold, and will probably not be back in the pool for two or three days.

Competition is close between William McCloy, Kenneth Smith, and Roland Tompkins to become the diving partner of Wentworth Lohdell. McCloy was elected to compete in the Wisconsin meet, but it is doubtful as to who will dive in the Minnesota tangle.

Light Workouts on Tap for U. High in Preparing for Irish

Fresh from its 27 to 17 win over Wilton Junction, the up and coming University high cage team will hold nothing but easy workouts in preparing for their game with the local St. Pat's Friday night.

The Blue and White team dropped the first tilt to the Irish but since that time have been clicking at top speed.

The Kistlermen are not worrying about getting the points since the return of their wandering basket eyes. They have dropped in 23 field goals in the last two games as compared with only 38 in the first nine games.

Ed Fairchild's infected foot is expected to be well enough for him to hold down his guard position when the Blue and White outfit makes its big for its initial intra-city victory Friday.

DAVENPORT (AP)—Fire Chief Richard Kelley started an investigation into a fire which caused $1,200 damages to the State Furniture company.

Yale Career Ended

Committed to the House of the Good Shepherd, a home for wayward girls, after she had related how she spent several days in Vanderbilt hall, dormitory of Sheffield scientific school at Yale university, 16 year old Edith Nassella (above), of Philadelphia, implicated 24 Yale students, though refusing to divulge their names. University authorities are conducting an independent investigation.

Mechanical Engineers Edit Blueprinted Booklet Yearly

"Remember when we cut classes, lagged pennies, and told stories no one was expected to believe."

That is what a mechanical engineer graduate writes in "The Mechanical's Bull-Session" which was recently mailed to all members of the class of 1930. Included in the blueprinted booklet is a letter from each graduate in which he gives his experiences, hopes, and plans as developed during the last year.

The idea was proposed to the class at a dinner given by Prof. Huber O. Croft and was immediately accepted. A permanent secretary was elected and under his direction, the first and second issues of this entirely blueprinted and yearly booklet have been issued. Wallace Nelson, instructor in mathematics and physics in the high school at Port Byron, Ill., is the permanent secretary under whose direction Professor Croft's suggestion has been carried out.

"You are members of a great profession," begins the letter by Roy V. Wright, editor of "Railway Age" and former president of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, which is first in the latest edition of the "Bull-Session."

A letter by some one prominent in the mechanical engineering profession is always included. Other letters include one from each member of the mechanical engineering department and one from each member of the faculty of the mechanical engineering department of the class concerned.

The frontispiece on last year's letter was the corn monument which is erected by mechanical engineers every year at Homecoming. This year's frontispiece, drawn to be blueprinted, shows the new mechanical engineering laboratory. That the idea is catching, at least to mechanical engineers, is shown by the fact that at the annual dinner given by Professor Croft to the seniors last year a similar scheme was adopted, and an issue put out by the class of 1931 is to be expected soon. Lloyd S. Houvenagel, of Rock Island, Ill., is the permanent secretary selected by the class last spring.

"Back for Homecoming" "Was back to school for Homecoming. Would have liked to have seen more of you fellows there. I'd give my eye-teeth for one of those bull-sessions we so often held in the senior mechanical room. Bring on the dentist and his chair and we'll make it next Homecoming." This is one of the comments sent in by the graduate engineers.

In another year members of the class will again sit down and pound out their accounts of a year's happenings on onionskin paper. It has to be onionskin or that thin, in order to be blueprinted.

Attorneys in Assault Case Meet Snags

Olsen Seeks Ousting of Questions by Counsel for McCombs

Defense and prosecution counsels in the trial of Vernon McCombs, charged with assault with intent to commit murder, deliberated two hours yesterday afternoon in the judge's chambers over the legality of procedure being employed by F. F. Messer, for the defense, in cross-examining Lyle Lenz, state's witness.

Messer was endeavoring to show the jury, in his cross-examination questions, that Lenz was a constant agitator and that he was known to pick fights at previous dances. Such testimony was objected to by County Attorney F. B. Olsen, prosecutor.

Lenz Goes Alone

Lenz testified before a packed court room that he went alone to the dance at Circle Inn, scene of the fight between himself and McCombs. He denied having purchased intoxicating liquor and stated that he had not been drinking the night of the stabbing, May 13, 1931.

He said that as he was leaving the dance a group of three or four men called him aside. As he started walking toward them he said that McCombs started making short jabs at him.

Cross-Examination

Cross-examination of Lenz was started late yesterday morning by Messer. Lenz admitted that he had been talking with Dewey Gibson of West Liberty on the night of May 13, and that he and Gibson had had a previous misunderstanding.

Messer entered an objection to the introduction of blood covered clothing worn by Lenz during the fight on grounds that further identification was needed. After argument in the chambers it was ruled that the evidence might be brought into court later.

McCombs Returns McCombs

Sheriff Don McCombs, who preceded Lenz on the stand early yesterday morning, told of his trip to Indianapolis, Ind., where he had gone to return McCombs, who was being held there by officials.

According to McCombs, McCombs told him while they were enroute back to Iowa City that he had had a quarrel with Lenz, had used a pocket knife, and had later thrown the knife away. While being held in the county jail, the sheriff stated that McCombs described the stabbing and incidents before and after it in the presence of himself, Deputy Sheriff Preston Koser, and County Attorney F. B. Olsen.

Minnesota Banker Named on Finance Corporation Board

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10 (AP)—Harry Lee, president of the Independent Bankers association of Minnesota, has been selected as a member of the reconstruction finance corporation's advisory committee for that federal reserve district.

The selection was made after seven senators from the northwest called on Charles G. Dawes, president of the corporation, and urged the corporation's activities "be not dominated by the chain banks of Minnesota."

At the urging of these senators the corporation has selected Otto Bremer of St. Paul as another member of the advisory committee.

The supper will be served in the church parlors at 6:30 o'clock by the women of the Pearle Women's Missionary society. B. V. Bridenstine will preside over the program of the evening and Phillip Norman will have charge of the song service. A motion picture review will conclude the entertainment.

Stock Market Suffers From Steady Sales

Persistent Selling Takes Edge Off Few Small Gains

NEW YORK, Feb. 10 (AP)—Persistent selling of a few prominent issues undermined an advance in the stock market today.

Net changes for the general run of shares were fractional, with many leaders showing small gains, but weak spots proved so strategically placed the composite price represented a minute loss.

Rails finished generally higher and the industrials, on the average, were virtually unchanged with few exceptions. Enough utilities sagged to give that group a somewhat heavy appearance. Several preferred stocks of various classifications hardened appreciably, but there was no uniformity to the trend among senior equities. Volume increased to 1,302,548 shares, with a large percentage of the turnover centering in a handful of issues.

Auburn bumped along erratically, recovering a large loss and then dipping again, to close about 3 lower. Eastman broke nearly 8 which meant a new low since the 10 for one split a decade ago.

Consolidated Gas, North American and American Sugar acted tired. On the other hand, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Westinghouse, American Telephone, Standard Oil of New Jersey and Du Pont held steady to firm.

The U. S. Steel tonnage report was closely in line with predictions. The decline, 87,203 tons, brought the backlog to the lowest volume since publication of the figures started more than 20 years ago.

Steel production is making no progress because neither the automobile manufacturers nor the railroads are buying large enough quantities to effect a rise.

Farm Bureau Will Continue Projects

The third year home furnishing project work will be continued today at a meeting of Farm Bureau women from Scott, East Lucas, West Lucas, Madison, Penn, Jefferson, Big Grove, Cedar, Newport, and Graham townships at the courthouse. Nora Workman, extension worker from Ames, will instruct on "Accessories."

The meeting yesterday on Lamp shades" was held in the basement of the Welsh church, Sharon Center, for women of Washington, Sharon, Union, and Liberty townships. The meetings begin at 10 a. m. each day.

Iowa to Save $1,188,000 on 198 Miles of Paving in 1932 According to Highway Head

AMES, Feb. 10 (AP)—A saving of about $1,188,000 in the 1932 Iowa primary road paving budget is indicated in a statement today by Fred R. White, chief engineer of the Iowa State Highway commission.

White, in outlining the state's road building program for the coming season, said it is planned to pave 198 miles at an estimated cost of $5,156,000.

This total, however, he said, is based on an estimated outlay of $26,000 a mile. About one third of the mileage, or 64 miles, has been contracted for at less than $20,000 a mile, the engineer said.

Paving Major Item

The paving plans form the major item in the 1932 primary road construction program for this state. Of a total of $11,097,000 that White estimates will be spent, grading and bridging of 357 miles will cost $4,535,000; graveling of 676 miles will cost $1,242,000, and $164,000 will be used for surfacing 116 miles with bituminous or oil compounds.

Complete Program

These projects, White said, will complete the program outlined on July 4, 1927, when the present primary road law went into effect. Of the miles to be paved, 84.3 per cent will be in counties which have voted primary road bonds. The rest, 15.7 per cent of the mileage and 15.1 per cent of the expenditure for all paving, will be on major highways in four counties which have not voted such bonds.

Huglin Asks Cooperation in Liquidation of Savings Bank

Iowa City people have been slow in filing claims against the receivership for the Iowa City Savings bank, Andrew J. Huglin, who is in charge, said yesterday in asking for cooperation in this matter. Affairs of liquidation would be speeded considerably if such claims were filed in the near future, according to Mr. Huglin.

Receivership officials are also anxious that the depositors of the bank call at the offices for a statement of their account. Depositors with checking accounts are also asked to call for cancelled checks in order to clear the bank files and straighten out such accounts.

Application Filed Jan. 21

The application for order was filed in district court Jan. 21 and Judge Harold C. Evans set March 22 as the time limit for the filing of claims. All claims of depositors against the bank must be filed with the district court or the examiner in charge. If such claims are not filed within the time limit they will be forever barred as claims against the bank. This includes claims for deposits not shown on the books of the bank.

Must Present Certificates

Holders of time and demand certificates of deposit must present them to the examiner in charge before dividends will be paid on them.

Wheat Closes Firm at High Level of Day

CHICAGO, Feb. 10 (AP)—Broadening of North American wheat export business, together with predictions of a new cold wave, had a bracing effect on grain markets today.

Estimates of wheat bought from Canada and the United States for overseas shipments this week were placed at 3,509,000 bushels, all but 600,000 of which were Canadian. Forecasts of much lower temperatures in northwestern states caused a return of anxiety that adverse conditions would develop over the winter wheat belt and bring about crop damage.

Wheat closed firm at the day's top level, 2 1/4 over yesterday's finish, corn 1-4 to 1/2 cents up, oats unchanged to 1/2 to 1-4 of, and provisions varying from 12 cents decline to 5 cents advance.

Preceding the upswing of values, wheat displayed a temporary downward trend associated with bearish reports regarding the crop outlook in the domestic winter wheat belt.

Word, however, that the foreign wheat quota in France had been increased to 15 per cent as against three per cent prior to Feb. 1 gave an immediate advantage to bulls.

Andrew J. Huglin Accepts Position in Pittsburgh, Pa., Bank

Andrew J. Huglin, who has been in charge of the receivership offices for the Iowa City Savings bank, yesterday accepted a position as first vice president of the Diamond National bank of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Mr. Huglin will leave here March 1 to assume his new duties in Pittsburgh. He received notice of his appointment yesterday by telegram from James D. Callery, president of the Diamond National bank.

Relief Plans Set Precedent

Business Experts Say New System Will Handle Crises

Failure of the traditional policy of letting depression cure itself and the resultant federal government relief measures have established a precedent which may overcome future crises.

This is pointed out by experts in the University of Iowa bureau of business research in their monthly comment upon national business conditions.

Old Policy Reversed

When the emergency relief measures were adopted, it marked a complete reversal of policies hitherto regarded as vital to peace-time finance.

The dominant and traditional opinion has been that a depression should be allowed to run its course until the deflation of costs, chiefly those of capital and labor, has brought business to a position where profits could be made, they explained.

However, present day markets are not uniformly flexible, and the process of deflation does not appear to lead to the theoretical equilibrium favorable to recovery. This brought about the overwhelming pressure for emergency measures exerted upon government legislative and executive departments.

Conservatives Balk

The policy change met vigorous opposition in some quarters, especially from powerful conservative interests which balk at any measures favoring of inflation, the university men report. These interests prefer a deepening of depression until a complete readjustment of costs of production has been reached so that surviving business could gain prosperity through the natural emergence of profits.

Scouts Give Demonstration

In observance of the founding of the Boy Scouts of America, five scouts will illustrate various phases of their work before the Rotary club at its luncheon today at the Jefferson hotel. The scouts are Jack Lewis, Robert Spedel, Edward McCloy, Mark Houser, and Merwin Arnbruster.

Keeping ahead of the second hand

To keep telephone service in step with the swift pace of American life, Bell System men tackle many an absorbing problem, find many an ingenious solution.

For instance, they decided that precious seconds could be saved by a change in long-established operating routine. The operator used to repeat the number called by the subscriber—now she indicates that she understands by saying, "Thank you."

To appreciate the importance of the second thus saved, just multiply it by the 40,000,000 conversations handled by operators on the average day.

In the telephone business, major improvements that save the subscriber's time and give him better service often result from just such apparently minor changes.
