"Where to Look Next," Now Confronting Athletic Board

Crowley Only Mentor Given Definite Offer

2 Favorite Candidates Still Remain as Possibilities

Refuted after weeks of fruitless negotiation with James H. Crowley, Michigan State college mentor, the university athletic board yesterday put Crowley's refusal to come to Iowa out of its mind. Its problem now is, "where to look next."

Follow Program That board members have a definite program to follow at their meeting tomorrow afternoon was indicated in their statement yesterday noon, issued after Crowley's telephone rejection of the Iowa offer. It read:

"Mr. Crowley has notified the board by telephone that he has decided to remain at Michigan State college."

"The board was definitely prepared to receive either an affirmative or a negative decision from Crowley and will proceed to carry out a carefully formulated policy."

"The next meeting of the board will be on Monday, Feb. 29, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon."

Crowley Given Offer Whom the board might be considering for the position left vacant by Burton A. Ingwersen Dec. 10, was kept a state secret, however. Since Ingwersen's resignation the board has called a half dozen men to Iowa City with the view of discussing terms, and has talked with several more.

Crowley, outstanding favorite among Iowa supporters from the start, was the only one to whom a definite offer was made. Crowley was offered a contract in Chicago last Monday by Dean Chester A. Phillips, who waited the former's answer in Michigan until Friday when he returned home.

Two Possibilities Yet Although the terms were not announced, it was understood that they involved a salary in the neighborhood of $10,000 for several years and permission to bring two assistants from the Michigan school.

Of the original six candidates invited to Iowa City by the board only two remain as possibilities. Both of them have rated as the most remote hopes of the list at the time. They are Ossie Solem of Drake and Madison Bell of Texas A. & M. Whether they still are in the field for the job must await further action by the athletic board.

Backers Divided With Crowley definitely out of the field, alumni, students, and other backers of the university who were almost unanimously in favor of his candidacy have split over a number of choices from coast to coast. None of these was given any kind of official support after the board's meeting yesterday which lasted most of the morning.

The new prospects include Frank Wickhorst, assistant at California; Slip Madigan, St. Mary's; Bill Roper, retired Princeton coach; Wallace Wade, who went to Duke after his successes at Alabama; Gus Dorais, veteran Detroit university mentor; Solem, who has had great success at Drake; Mike Hyland, former Grinnell coach; Moray Eby, another veteran Iowa coach at Coe; and Elmer Layden, another of Notre Dame's four horsemen, now at Duquesne.

Money is apparently a minor consideration among members of the board. The opinion seems to be that a winning team will increase gate receipts sufficiently to more than offset expenditure of more money for a head coach.

Crowley Remains at Michigan State EAST LANSING, Mich., Feb. 27 (AP)—James H. Crowley, who lifted Michigan State college football from mediocrity to national prominence, today turned down a Big Ten coaching offer in favor of remaining here.

The Spartan football coach, one of the "four horsemen" of Notre Dame fame, rejected a tempting

"If You Asked Me, I'd Say--"

(Editor's note: Each day The Daily Iowan will ask several students, picked at random, for their opinion on some question of current interest. Their replies, together with the question asked, will be published. Today's question, with student expression, appears below.)

With Crowley and Jones considered definitely out of the race, whom, in your opinion, would be the best man to negotiate with for the Iowa coaching job?

"My selection for football coach is 'Bill' Wade, formerly of Alabama university, and now of Duke university. The coaching situation at Iowa requires a man who has a national reputation, ability and a pleasing personality. Coach Wade has an abundance of all these qualities." —Ed Dolly, A3 of Rock Island, Ill.

"That's a tough question, however, with 'Ike' Armstrong also classified as 'unavailable.' I would like to see Iowa efforts exerted towards the securing of Slip Madigan of St. Mary's college in California. With little material this year he built a powerful team which trimmed Howard Jones' Trojans early in the season. I am sure that the introduction of his Notre Dame system, with its emphasis on speed and brains rather than beef and brawn, would be an excellent investment for Iowa." —Francis O. Wilcox, G of Iowa City.

"Crowley's refusal to sign with Iowa is a striking blow but there are still numerous coaches in prospect who are just as good as 'Sleepy Jim.' Among the leaders of these, in my estimation, is 'Slip' Madigan of St. Mary's college in California. A strong point in his favor is his experience at Notre Dame and a coach of the Irish system. He would be an excellent man to fill the Iowa vacancy." —William O. Rule, A2 of Boone.

"Why doesn't the athletic board negotiate with 'Bill' Roper, recently of Princeton university, and since retired? Roper is a great sports psychologist, and had a reputation for making winners of the weakest teams. His retirement does not mean that he has lost his ability to produce winning eleven. He would make a strong coach for Iowa." —Steve Nielson, A3 of St. Louis, Mo.

"As the matter now stands, the athletic board faces a difficult problem in the immediate selection of a head football coach from the few good men apparently available. Why not continue with our present football staff composed of Gordon Locke, Rollie Williams, Don Hines, and Bert Jenkins for spring football practice, thus allowing the board ample time to pick the RIGHT man before fall." —Howard Moffitt, A3 of Iowa City.

offer to head the gridiron coaching force of the University of Iowa. His decision to remain at State came without the inducement of an immediate increase in salary.

Sticks to Contract Crowley decided to stick by the terms of his present three year contract following a conference with the state board of agriculture, governing body of Michigan State, which met in a special session this morning.

The meeting was behind closed doors. Members declined to comment on what was said in their conference with Crowley, but applause could be heard from the room just before Crowley left the session.

To Get Salary Reward It was understood that a salary reward awaits Crowley at the expiration of his contract, which expires within two years.

The coach's decision brought to an end a vigorous campaign by Iowa to obtain his service. State's young mentor had twice rejected Hawkeye overtures, but the first of this week renewed efforts were initiated by the Western conference institution.

Bliss Willoughby, one of the team taking third place honors with 10,425 points last year, is competing in the Thursday, Saturday group.

Other ex-champions in the same section are George Balluff, one of the fourth place winners, and the fifth highest scoring couple, L. Ann Bender and Ralph Bender.

Six bridge champions of last year's individual tourney are back to defend their titles at Iowa Union. Josephine Ball and Anne Spensley, second place winners who had a total of 11,786 points for six games, are the two erstwhile sharks in the Wednesday and Friday section.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 27 (AP)—A band blared the strains of "Ioway, Ioway" and more than 100,000 persons chorused "that's where the tall corn crows" as sons and daughters of Iowa joined in their thirty-third mid-winter frolic at Lincoln park today.

They went early and stayed late to hear Lieut. Gov. Frank Merriam of California, Paul Shoup, president of the Southern Pacific railroad, Former Governor Friend W. Richardson of California, and Judge K. Van Sante, who first saw the light of day in Iowa.

By noon the sun had boosted the temperature to more than 80 degrees. The picnic butter became thin yellow soup and the "ice cold" lemonade became lukewarm.

Registry clerks were on the grounds almost before sunrise, directing meetings between Iowa pioneers who remembered vividly the grasshopper plague in the early 1880's, and when wheat was selling at 70 cents a bushel.

3 Seek Posts on Iowa City School Board

Three Iowa Citizens were thrown into the local political swirl yesterday when it was made known that George H. Frohwein, Albert B. Sidwell, and Charles G. Sample would be probable candidates for election to the Iowa City independent school board.

Two directors will be elected at the school election March 14. Polling place for residents living inside the school district will be the city hall.

Mr. Frohwein previously stated that he did not desire re-election to the board. It was after requests from school patrons and members of the Parent-Teacher association that he consented to run.

Mr. Sample and Mr. Sidwell are being backed by school patrons for positions on the board. S. T. Morrison, whose term expires this month along with Mr. Frohwein's, announced that he will be a candidate.

The bi-partisan school committee will meet next Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the council chambers of the city hall to nominate two candidates for the school election, Prof. B. Shimek, chairman of the committee, announced Friday.

Mr. Shimek requested that all persons who have names of candidates or who wish to be named as candidates should be present at the meeting.

Campbell Returns Home After Setting Five New Records

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP)—Having established new world's automobile speed records for five different distances, Sir Malcolm Campbell of England, is preparing to return home, but he has tentatively accepted an invitation to come back next year in an effort to boost the marks still higher.

In two runs Wednesday and again on Friday Campbell established new records of 251.340 miles an hour for one kilometer; 253.968 for one mile; 247.941 for five kilometers; 242.751 over five miles and 238.668 for 10 kilometers.

Missing Girls Found CEDAR RAPIDS (AP)—According to information received here, Phyllis Byers, 14, missing since Feb. 19, was located in Omaha. Gladys Detrick of Van Horne, believed to have been a companion of Miss Byers, also was located in Omaha, her parents were informed. Both girls were expected to return home today.

Ford Plans Employment for 400,000

DETROIT, Feb. 27 (AP)—Henry Ford today announced plans which, if they can be carried out, will provide employment for 400,000 men and require the expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars during the remainder of 1932.

"We're going to put up everything we've got," he said, "to help start the wheels turning."

Declaring that huge stocks of materials have been brought into the plants here or have been contracted for, he said he was pointing at a possible production of 1,500,000 cars in the next 10 months.

Ford said production of the recently announced new eight and the improved four cylinder models will begin probably next week and that he hoped to run the output up to an average of from 5,000 to 6,000 units a day "before very long."

Shuttleworth Attorney

He also said that collection on pledges outside of the state had been very good and that suits, instituted in other towns in Iowa had been successful.

Moffitt Leads Hawkeyes to Get 14 Points

A sudden scare was thrown into the ranks of the Michigan Wolverines before they wrung out a 35 to 27 victory over the University of Iowa basketball team in a listless game at the field house last night.

Daniels, Weiss Major Factors in Triumph for Wolverines

Trailing by 21 to 12 at the half the Hawkeyes pulled up steadily on the visitors and then unceremoniously broke through from back of the free throw line reduced Michigan's lead to one point, 28 to 27.

Personal Battles

With little at stake for either team the contest resolved itself into a battle between individuals. Ivan Williamson, whom records show to be the most effective defensive player in the Big Ten, soon learned that he could not stop Moffitt.

Capt. Norm Daniels took up Moffitt's challenge and the rival forwards fired away. The Iowa ace triumphed personally, snaring the honors and outpointing Daniels by 14 to 13.

Separate Agreement

The Union corporation in a separate agreement with the Starke company has promised to retire the notes on a sliding scale, starting with $10,000 in 1932. Final agreements on the plan were made about six weeks ago and since that time the Union corporation has retired $3,000 of past maturity notes.

The notes now outstanding are part of $183,500 issued five years ago on the collateral of pledges to the Union corporation. They were for five year periods and fell due at varying times during the last year.

The full amount will have reached maturity on April 5, 1932. Twenty thousand dollars have been retired.

Interest Keeps Notes

Interest on the notes have been kept up through collection of the pledges some of which were turned over to the construction company early last year. Total pledges used as collateral amount to approximately $500,000.

The Starke company endorsed the major portion of these notes which were mainly sold through the Cedar Rapids banks, and trust companies. It is these banks and trust companies which are now securing the five year extensions. Rohel F. Torstenson, vice president of the Cedar Rapids People's Savings bank, who died Feb. 10, was chairman of the bankers committee.

In Iowa City, the construction company filed 113 suits during last summer against signers of the Union pledges. No case on these suits has yet been tried here. Many of the larger local pledges have, however, been settled out of court.

Shuttleworth Attorney

Shuttleworth, attorney for Theodore Starke and company, yesterday said that those who had not settled would soon have the suits pressed against them. He also said that collection on pledges outside of the state had been very good and that suits, instituted in other towns in Iowa had been successful.

Pledges in Vaults

Uncollected pledges are now in the vaults of the closed Johnson County Savings bank. There is at the present time no trustee to handle the funds collected from these pledges.

A Court Order, issued after the Johnson County Savings bank closed, authorized the appointment of the First National as trustee but as a national bank it was unable to accept the trusteeship and the Farmer's Loan and Trust company, allied with First National, was unacceptable to Union corporation.

Up to Old Tricks

Moffitt was up to his early season trick of registering more than half of his team's total score. Jack Kotlow at forward and Mike Riegert at guard were the only Hawkeyes who rendered much assistance to Moffitt in the scoring. Each sank two field goals. Two of the starting Old Gold quintet—Guedner Krumbholz and Ben Seizer, forward and guard, respectively—failed to contribute a single tally.

House O.K.'s Road Bill to Help Jobless

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27 (AP)—The house passed a $132,500,000 road construction bill to relieve unemployment today, while the senate was in recess.

Act Designed to Make Available Large Relief Fund

The road bill, designed to make the huge fund immediately available to provide work for the jobless, was approved after a single day of debate and sent to the senate.

Awaits Senate Action

It merely added to a pile of legislation awaiting senate action which caused leaders to discuss seriously the possibility of another session of congress after the party conventions in June.

Disposition of one important piece of legislation was virtually completed, however, when house and senate conferees reached an agreement on the terms of the resolution proposing to eliminate "lame duck" sessions of congress. This issue has been in dispute between the two houses for many years.

Investigate Short Sales

The senate banking committee opened an investigation of short selling with a demand from administration spokesmen that it "find the culprits" who they say have been driving the stock market down.

House committees continued to worry over the problem of cutting expenditures, which has caused friction between Democratic leaders and President Hoover.

While the expenditures committee postponed action on the Democratic move to consolidate the war and navy departments, Chairman Byrnes of the special economy committee called on heads of departments for suggestions to cut expenses.

Praises Members of Both Parties in Passing Bill

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27 (AP)—Hailing the Glass-Steagall credit expansion bill as a "national defense measure" capable of placing the resources of the federal reserve banks beyond any conceivable raid from home or abroad, President Hoover late today signed it into law.

Hoover Optimistic

The chief executive was optimistic tonight over its effects. He saw in the bill's provisions for a theoretical credit expansion of $10,000,000,000 and a possible currency expansion of $3,500,000,000, a direct bombardment upon the credit contraction he believes has partially barred the path to economic recovery.

In his formal statement, the president spoke publicly for the first time of the withdrawal of gold reserves from the United States by foreign nations. He declared the Glass-Steagall bill should accomplish two immediate objectives, which he named as follows:

A Defense Measure

"First, in a sense this bill is a national defense measure. By freeing the vast amounts of gold in our federal reserve system in excess of the gold reserve required by law, it so increases the already large available resources of the federal reserve banks as to enable them to meet any conceivable demand that might be made on them at home or from abroad.

"Second, it liberalizes existing provisions with regard to eligibility of collateral and thereby enables the federal reserve banks to furnish accommodations to many banks on sound assets heretofore unavailable for rediscount purposes."

Praises Cooperation

Officials have estimated that approximately $750,000,000 in gold now used as backing for currency above the 40 per cent requirement will be released by the measure. Under it government obligations may be used as backing for new currency.

After praising the cooperation by members of both parties in congress in swiftly enacting the bill, the president pointed to other measures, asking for similar no-partisan action.

Film Colony Makes Reply to Brookhart

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 27 (AP)—The film colony raised its voice today to answer the charges of Senator Smith W. Brookhart, Republican, Iowa, that the industry went goggles-eyed last year over gangster pictures and was headed this year toward a run of productions dealing with indecorous women.

The reply was framed from a survey of the 550 pictures released in the thirteen-month period between January, 1931, and January, 1932. It disclosed that only about three per cent of those films portrayed the story of the gangster and slightly more than two per cent were based on shady women.

In an analysis of the survey, Joseph Breen, assistant to Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, incorporated, said most of those pictures were released to theaters at close intervals.

As a matter of record, he pointed out that only 19 of the 550 films were gangster pictures and only 13 dealt with women.

The cycle of the gangster film has passed definitely for the present.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Feb. 27 (AP)—In the largest downtown realty transaction here in several years, Weaver Witwer, president of the Witwer Grocery company, brought the Cedar Rapids National bank property today for a sum believed to be approximately $150,000.

Most of the main floor was occupied by the bank until its merger with the Merchants National bank late last year, and the rest is leased as store rooms and second floor offices.

Witwer indicated the purchase was made as an investment.

Strolling Through Fashion Lane

By CELIA GOLDBERG
Society Editor The Daily Iowan

Dame Fashion has stripped spring clothes of all mid-Victorian frumpiness. Hoops, bustles, and muttonleg sleeves are gone. Today's street silhouette is slim, moderately short-skirted and suited to the active life of Miss 1932.

Navy blue is the primary color on fashion's palette, and a new bright blue akin to royal, champagne and pinky beiges, grey and black are outstanding. Bright reds and greens are saved for accessory notes.

Belts are of the most varied design and construction ever seen. On spring coats they are uniformly narrow and neat, but those worn on frocks vary in size from a finger's width to the breadth of two hands. Materials are of leather and fabric.

For the woman who is tired of fussy, trailing chiffons, lounging robes, cut like breasted top coats have been designed. They are made of soft wool or heavy satin, and are designed with straight sleeves, manish revers and cuffs, and closed with bold buttons of a contrasting color.

Parent-Teacher Association Work Varies From Giving Haircut Money to Laying Floors, Aiding Armenians

By VIRGINIA MAXSON

Johnny needed a haircut. "Daddy says we can't afford to go to the barber shop," he confided one day to his teacher. She looked at the touselled head and resolved that something should be done. Something was done. Next morning Johnny appeared at his desk, clipped and smiling. The Parent-Teachers association had paid for his haircut.

From donating such haircut money to supporting Armenian children in near east relief work, are a few of the varied activities of the Iowa City Parent-Teacher associations since the establishment of their organization here in 1912. They have brought glasses for needy students, provided milk to the undernourished and closed hills of the city to traffic during coasting seasons.

The work of the organization is not by any means entirely a matter of formally appropriating funds for purchasing stage equipment, or gas stoves, or encyclopedias for the schoolhouses, as is sometimes supposed. Nor does it consist primarily of chatting over the teacups with a sociable teacher who will discuss Junior's difficulties in arithmetic or Mary's spelling ability. Real labor has been contributed by Iowa City mothers and fathers in efforts to afford their children educational facilities that they, themselves, were denied. Fathers of Longfellow school children donned their overalls after working hours and converted two of the building's classrooms into a gymnasium. John Howell, Bert Kent, A. C. Moyer, and R. G. Brown were among those who hammered and sawed far into many nights. Later, they erected playground equipment—$460 worth of swings and slides, put up piece by piece during noon hours and early evening.

In those early years of its existence, the Longfellow association suffered from growing pains. Parents were awakening to the realization that greater cooperation between themselves and interested teachers would materially aid in solving child problems. But the group failed to elicit support of school authorities, and for two years it was forced to meet in private homes. Through persistent efforts the Longfellow P.T.A. was officially recognized in 1914.

The gymnasium floor of Henry Sabin school was also laid by parents of its students. Construction funds for the building, which was considered by many at that time, extravagantly large, ran low before the gym floor was reckoned with. Today the building is completely utilized.

Fathers of Horace Mann school children contribute to the P.T.A. coffers by annually presenting a benefit play. Proceeds have been used for stage curtains, a piano, and a moving picture machine.

All local associations are organized under the general supervision of a council. It was first organized in 1917 by Mrs. Roy Close, Mrs. Ernest Horn, and Mrs. F. A. Stromsten, for the purpose of discussion and deciding problems involving all Iowa City schools. At present, its membership consists of all officers

Ruth Voller, J4 of Iowa City, accompanied Virginia Maxson, A3 of Tipton, home for the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold H. Newcomb and daughter, Martha Rose, of Des Moines are spending the week end at the home of Mr. Newcomb's mother, Mrs. H. B. Newcomb, 314 S. Summit street.

Mary Betty Furnish, A3 of Tipton, left yesterday to spend the week end at the home of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. William M. Furnish of Tipton.

Members of Delta Sigma Pi fraternity who are spending the week end at home are Ben F. Garmer, C3 of Des Moines; John Turkington, A2 of Rochele, Ill.; Peter Kloppenburg, A1 of Davenport; Roland Maack, C4 of Chicago; G. Raymond Nelson, A2 of Davenport will spend the week end in Chicago.

of all the separate associations, school principals, the superintendent of schools, and all past presidents of the council. Any member of the state board of education residing in the city automatically becomes an honorary member. Mrs. A. C. Moyer has been elected president for 1932.

A recent project undertaken by the council is the so-called "summer roundup." In this, all children planning to enter kindergarten in the fall are given a thorough physical examination during the summer preceding enrollment.

This month marks the thirty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the national Parent-Teacher organization. It was formed in Washington, D. C., in 1897, through the efforts of Phoebe Hearst and Mrs. Theodore Birney.

Schools Will Get Hearing on Deposits

Application for Paying of Savings Before Court March 7

March 7 was set as the date for hearing on the report and application for order for payment of school savings deposits in the Iowa City Savings bank by Judge R. G. Popham yesterday in district court. The application was filed by L. A. Andrew, receiver, as was announced Thursday.

Deposits $4,131.09
Amount on deposit in the school savings is announced in the application as $4,131.09. The deposits range from one cent upwards. The application shows that the deposits are now resting in the bank vaults as they were deposited under a trust agreement between the bank, the board of education and Thrift, incorporated, Oak Park, Ill.

The application states that the deposits were received by the bank from Dec. 15 until the time of its closing Jan. 20. It further shows that the funds were segregated from the other deposits of the bank.

Authority for Examiner
The application petitions the court to grant the examiner in charge the authority to make the distribution of the school savings money. It shows that considerable expense would be involved to the receivership in event of litigation for the purpose of establishing the claims as preferred.

It is further shown in the application that the system of school banking was instituted in the public schools of Iowa City as a part of an educational program encouraging thrift. In order that this program might be furthered the agreement was made with the bank acting as trustees for the funds.

The receiver further asks that any pupils who claim interest on their deposits be required to file claims within the period already prescribed by court. If no objections are filed to the application on or before the date of hearing it will probably be granted by the court.

Probable Payment Soon
Ben S. Summerwell, examiner in charge, said last night that the children would probably be paid on or before March 15 if the application were granted. All payments will probably be made on the same day according to the plan used when the accounts in the Johnson County Savings bank and the Citizen Savings and Trust company were made.

The application was presented to the court by H. J. Long, attorney.

Startling Migration May Prove Bird Menace, Says Dill

A new bird menace, the starling, has been reported as migrating to Iowa by Homer R. Dill, director of the university museum. The starling is black, about eight inches long, with a yellow bill, and long black wings. The summer plumage is glossy black, with the head and neck glossed with purple, and the wings glossed with blue or violet. In winter months they are covered with lighter spots.

The starling feeds upon fruit and insects, and in states where they have become numerous they have proved to be a menace. The birds assemble in large groups and are noisy. In some instances large shade trees have been cut down to get rid of the starlings perching in them.

First realization that the birds had reached Iowa came three years ago, when a dead bird found in North Liberty was brought to Mr. Dill. The same year another starling was sent in from West Branch, and since that time good sized flocks have been seen in this vicinity in winter. The birds were first brought to this country by Eugene Schefflin in 1890.

He brought 80 of them to Central Park in New York city, and the following year brought 40 more. Since that time the starlings have increased, and extended their range. Gradually they worked their way westward, and after 40 years found their way into Iowa. It is only a question of a few years until they will be numerous here, according to Mr. Dill. He added that the birds should be destroyed before they become more of a problem than the English sparrow.

Grains Drop With Fall in Export Trade

CHICAGO, Feb. 27 (AP)—Curtailed export demand for North American wheat did much to bring late setbacks in grain values today, and frustrate a promising advance. Only about 200,000 bushels of wheat were taken for shipment overseas from Canada and the United States. A tendency to await March unofficial crop summaries due next week was shown, and comments were pessimistic as to any large reduction of domestic spring wheat acreage this season.

Wheat closed irregular at 1-4 cent decline to an equal gain compared with yesterday's finish, corn 3-4 down, oats 1-4 off, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 12 cents.

Provisions slanted upward owing to indications of smaller marketing of hogs next week.

Closing indemnities: Wheat—May 60¢-61, 62¢; July 62 1-4-3, 63¢-64; Sept. 64 1-4, 65¢. Corn—May 38¢-39, 39¢-3; July 41¢, 42¢.

Hope for Entombed Miners Abandoned; Searchers Continue

POCAHONTAS, Va., Feb. 27 (AP)—Hope for the lives of 36 miners, trapped by an explosion in the Pocahontas fuel company's Boissevain mine, virtually was abandoned tonight.

Rescue squads battled in vain to reach the section where the workers were entombed early today.

Gas and dust, however, forced them back, and Thomas Stockdale, West Virginia inspector, who headed the first rescue crew into the mine, said it improbable that any of the men will be found alive.

Meanwhile crowds, principally relatives of the entombed miners, milled about the mouth of the pit.

The woman said she had been informed of her legacy by her father at Bowling Green, Ky., who reached her through a letter sent to the police department.

Tracksters Defeat N. U. 47 2/3 to 38 1/3; Wrestlers Overwhelmed 19 1/2 to 4 1/2

Saling Runs Highs to Set New Record

Skowbo Sets Up New Record; Dash Mark Tied by Ford

The University of Iowa's track and field team wound up its Big Ten indoor dual season at the field house yesterday afternoon when it turned back Northwestern by a 47 2-3 to 38 1-3 score. The meet, which brought the first victory to the Hawkeyes in three starts, saw two records fall and one equalled.

After the Iowans had trailed at the completion of the first two events on the 10 event program, they stepped into a lead from which they were never headed. Although dividing the first places with the Wildcats, the Old Gold easily triumphed by scoring a slam in the high hurdles, placing first and second in the half mile and shot put, and counting points in every event.

Saling Smashes Record

The feature performance of the day was Capt. George Saling's record smashing trip over the high hurdles in the time of seven and four tenths seconds, bettering by two tenths of a second both the university indoor mark and the field house record which has stood since 1922. The other new record was established when Stuart Skowbo ran away from his competition to set up a new university indoor half mile mark of one minute, 57.5 seconds.

Zach Ford, star Wildcat sprinter, who last week equalled the American indoor mark in the 40 yard dash, led Capt. Saling to the tape in the 50 yard event to equal the 10 year old field house record of 5.4 seconds.

Saling High Scorer

Iowa was kept from scoring two slams during the afternoon when Tom Moore was disqualified in the shot put for being the sixteenth man on the squad, although he placed third ahead of Ollie Olson of Northwestern, who was given the place after a check. Sansen was easily the winner.

Northwestern made its best showing in the quarter mile and high jump. Reed and Olson tied for first place in the latter event and Duggins split a third with Story and Bryant of Iowa. In the 440 Heyne nosed out Dean in the final stretch to win as his teammate Tetting came up to tie the Hawkeye.

Captain Saling was the high scorer for the day with his first place in the high hurdles and second place in the short dash. Little Leo Campisi, sophomore distance man, was next to his leader with second places in the mile and half mile, staging a brilliant finish in the latter event to come in behind Skowbo.

Okerlin Wins Again

While Trott was winning his initial victory in the two mile, Bob Okerlin, sophomore pole vaulter, continued his winning ways to count his third victory as he again cleared the bar at 12 feet six inches. In the final event on the program, the Wildcat mile relay team nosed out the Hawkeyes to win.

Sportively Speaking

By Bill Rutledge

A competent staff for coaching football at the University of Iowa is more important than the selection of a satisfactory head coach. A strong and sincere effort to get Frank Wickhorst back here as line mentor should be made by the board. Just now Wickhorst is well fixed as "Navy Bill" Ingram's assistant at the University of California.

Hawkeye fans haven't forgotten those forward walls Wickhorst fashioned while he was here, and they would like to see more like them on Old Gold elevens. Last season the California Golden Bears' line won widespread praise for him.

Three Hawkeye track men who must be reckoned with in the Big Ten championship meet at Chicago March 11 and 12 showed their mettle in the last indoor dual engagement yesterday afternoon against Northwestern at the field house. Stuart Skowbo—whose long smooth strides easily outdistanced his rivals from Notre Dame, Minnesota, and the Purple squad in three successive meets—looks like a strong threat in the half mile.

Leo Campisi, who was given the biggest cheer of the meet when he fought off the Wildcat runner Payne to snatch second place in the half mile, must be conceded a chance to place in both the half mile and the mile.

Capt. George Saling and Jack Keller of Ohio State will be fierce rivals in the high hurdle events. When the tracksters move outdoors for competition the two will clash in both the lows and highs. Both are hoping to win a place on the United States Olympic track team.

Howard Moffitt, the pride of Iowa basketball fans, certainly snapped out of his slump last night in the Hawkeyes' game with Michigan. His 14 points brought him up on even terms with Joe Reiff, the Northwestern forward who was idle last night. But Johnny Wooden, Purdue's marvelous guard, is far ahead of both. The standings of the leaders:

Player	FG	FT	TP
Wooden, G. (Purdue)	36	33	105
Daniels, J. (Mich.)	35	28	98
Moffitt, H. (IOWA)	31	24	86
Reiff, J. (N.W.)	32	22	86

Moffitt may climb back into second place tomorrow night in the Iowa-Chicago contest. . . . But wait until the Hawkeyes clash with Minnesota here. . . . Remember Mike Cielusak, Gopher guard, held Howard down to two free throws. . . . Expect to see Cielusak hold Moffitt to about a half a dozen goals.

ference cellar with Chicago tomorrow night when the two rivals clash at the Midway court. Michigan assured itself of a first division position last night in winning its sixth of the race.

First Half Dull

The first half was dull with the Wolverines, particularly Weiss, monotonously making baskets and free throws. The Hawkeyes came back with a rush in the final period to provide lively moments.

Parker Bennett, elongated Iowa center, made the first basket, which was his only one of the game, on a rebound tip in. Daniels retaliated with a goal from the side, and followed in on Weiss' try to count again. Weiss heaved in the first of his long shots.

Ed Garner, center, and Wells added free throws to give Michigan an 8 to 2 lead. Moffitt flipped in a medium long goal and a second later intercepted a Wolverine pass to dribble nearly the entire length of the court to score unaided.

Restores Advantage

Michigan began restoring its advantage on baskets by Daniels and Weiss. Daniels and Eveland followed with goals to make the score 16 to 6. Riegert tossed in a goal from the edge of the free throw circle. Bennett concluded his scoring for the evening by dropping in a gift point.

Weiss counted two goals and Daniels a gratis marker before Jack Kotlow went in to play the remainder of the game at forward for Iowa. Kotlow counted a goal and a free-throw before the half ended.

The second period opened with Daniels sinking a free throw. Moffitt dribbled to make a basket as Williamson fouled him and he sank his charity try. Weiss swished in his fifth field goal and Garner two free throws.

Almost Turns Tide

Moffitt's gift marker made the score 26 to 16. Kotlow and Riegert flipped in baskets in quick succession. Eveland rushed in for a goal. Moffitt dropped in two free throws and then with Williamson closely guarding him dashed in to score. Kotlow added a free throw to tie the score at 28 to 25. Moffitt's bas-

Purdue Downs Wisconsin, 28-21, for Eighth Big Ten Win

Wooden Gets Five Baskets in Close Tilt

Boilermakers Retain Lead in Conference Title Race

MADISON, Wis., Feb. 27 (AP)—Purdue's golden clad basketball team another lap in the race for the Western conference championship tonight when they defeated Wisconsin 28 to 21 in a hard fought game.

By its victory the league-leading Purdue team went definitely ahead of Northwestern which was idle tonight. The Boilermakers played like champions to win although the Badgers spurted twice to make the game interesting.

Johnny Wooden, the sterling scoring guard, again led the point getting, finding the basket for five field goals and two free throws despite sensational guarding by diminutive Mary Steen, the Badger captain.

Pehring started the scoring with a free throw but Griswold countered with a pair of charity tosses that gave Wisconsin its only lead during the entire game. Pehring continued to bombard the basket in the first half, getting most of his points on rebounds from free throws.

The Badgers spurted late in the half to get within three points of the conference leaders but Purdue came back with six points at the beginning of the last half that looked like the start of a rout. Wisconsin then ran up six points but the Boilermakers drew away shortly after, never to be in danger again.

Buckeyes Win Easily

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Feb. 27 (AP)—Ohio State finished on the long end of a 40-31 score in a listless Big Ten cage game with Chicago tonight. The Buckeyes led 23 to 14 at half-time.

Only in the second period did Chicago display any scoring ability. But the Buck regulars were resting then with the second stringers doing the work.

Gophers Nip Illini

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 27 (AP)—The team which all but wrecked Minnesota's drive at the Big Ten basketball championship was forced to pay the penalty tonight as the Gophers fought to a 27 to 26 victory over Illinoi.

ket almost turned the tide for Iowa. The Wolverines drew away on baskets by Altenhof and Eveland. Three free throws by Daniels wound up the scoring.

MADISON, Wis., Feb. 27 (AP)—The University of Wisconsin athletic council met here today to choose a successor to Head Football Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite but adjourned without taking action.

The council will meet again tomorrow. Chet Wynne of Alabama Tech, was being mentioned today as one of the foremost candidates for the post.

Frosh Swim Team Loses by 45 to 30

Varsity Representatives Overpower Green in Close Meet

University of Iowa varsity swimmers proved too strong for the yearling paddlers yesterday afternoon when they tangled in a varsity-frosh tank meet at the field house pool. The veterans won 45 to 30.

The 400 yard relay event was won by a varsity aggregation composed of Ray Mohl, Steve Nielsen, Robert Janss, and Jack McGuire, with a time creditable in any pool.

Taylor Sweeney, frosh breast stroker, won the 200 yard breast stroke event, with Warren Ross, varsity breast stroker, finishing second, and William Roome, another freshman, third.

Frosh Steals Show
Bruce Grove, stellar freshman splasher, stole the show in the 150 yard back stroke event. Roy Bodine and Harvey Lloyd finished second and third for the varsity team.

Chester Mohl, frosh free style, defeated Francis Presler, varsity, in the 440 yard free style event. Mohl has been improving greatly in the last few months.

Capt. Jack McGuire grabbed the 100 yard sprint event away from the frosh contender, Capt. August Anderson. Both these boys are making some good time records in this event. Captain Anderson, a freshman, shows the potential power and stamina of a champion.

McClroy Shows Promise

William McClroy showed exceptional improvement in style when he finished his dives scarcely a dozen points under the 115 won by Wentworth Lobdell, varsity Big Ten champion. William Busby, freshman threat, took second place with 103 points.

Summary of events:

400 yard relay—Varsity (Mohl, Nielsen, Janss, McGuire), Time—2:42.8.

Gene Venzke Sets Another World Mark

Cracks 1,500 Meters Record in K. C. Carnival

NEW YORK, Feb. 27 (AP)—Gene Venzke of Pottstown, Pa., tonight set a new world's indoor record for 1,500 meters in the Knights of Columbus games at Madison Square Garden. Venzke's time of 3 minutes, 53 2-5 seconds for the classic Olympic distance shattered both Lloyd Hahn's American indoor record of 3:55 4-5 and Ray Conger's record of 3:55 outdoors.

Sprinting in the last two laps Venzke left a field of the nation's greatest distance runners far behind.

Venzke, who 10 days ago established a new world record of 4 minutes, 10 seconds for the indoor mile, eclipsed the 1,500 mark just as easily as his admirers had anticipated. Taking it easy until more than half the distance had been covered, he moved into second place five laps from home and did not take the lead until two laps from the finish, when he swept past Frank Crowley of Manhattan college and won going away.

Toppino Again Ties Mark

For the sixth time during the indoor season, Emmett Toppino equalled the world record time of 6 2-10 seconds in winning the 60 yard dash. The Loyola university speedster finished a full two yards in front of Al Kelly of Georgetown, who nipped Eddie Tolian, Detroit's Negro star, for second place.

Percy Beard, national indoor and outdoor hurdles champion, romped in first in the 60 yard high hurdles in 7 5-10 seconds. The New York A. C. star had to hustle to beat out Frank Marduvill of the Boston A. A. Charles Sumnerill of Princeton was third.

Dale Letts of the Illinois A. C. national 1,000 meter champion, won the half-mile invitation after a brisk battle with George Bullwinkle of New York A. C. Letts' time was 1:55 4-5.

Warne Ties Sturdy

Fred Sturdy of Los Angeles, another national champion, could do no better than tie with Tommy Warne, former Northwestern star, in the pole vault, each making 13 feet, 6 inches.

As usual, there was no one to stand against George Spitz, phenomenal New York university sophomore, in the high jump. The world record holder sailed over the bar at six feet, six inches and called it a night, Harold Osborn, Illinois A. C. veteran, tied for second place with Howard Spencer of Geneva college, each doing six feet, three.

New York's mayor, Jimmie Walker, appeared long enough to present Venzke with a cup and a very pretty speech. Venzke, in replying, proved that as a speaker he probably is the greatest mile and 1,500 meter runner in American track history.

Old Gold Rifle Teams Score Kemper Wins

Both Advanced, Basic R.O.T.C. Squads Triumph

By DON KOEBRICK
(Staff Writer, The Daily Iowan)

BOONVILLE, Mo., Feb. 27—Hawkeye marksmen swept all events in which they were entered here today in the Kemper Military school rifle tournament, in which 45 teams, including 300 contestants, were entered.

Iowa won the advanced R.O.T.C. meet, with a team score of 733 points, while Nebraska was second with 729 and Washington university, of St. Louis, was third with 700.

In the basic R.O.T.C. tournament, the Hawkeyes took another championship with a total of 716 points. Kemper was second with 713, Missouri university was third with 707, and Iowa City high school scored 696 points to place fourth.

M. W. Heskett, Iowa rifle star, took first in individual shooting with 89 points, while his teammates, Martin and Ellis, counted 87 apiece to get third and fourth, respectively.

Iowa Cagers Meet Chicago in Return Tilt

Probable Starting Lineups

IOWA	CHICAGO
Moffitt	L.F.L.F. Stephenson
Kotlow	R.F.R.F. Reizinger
Bennett	C.C. Evans
Riegert	R.G.R.G. Porter
Selzer	L.G.L.G. (c) Ashley

To assure themselves of a place in the Big Ten standings above the cellar, the University of Iowa Hawkeyes will be striving for a triumph over Chicago tomorrow night in a return game with the Maroons. The first meeting of the two teams resulted in a 43 to 25 win for the Old Gold.

Several shifts in the Iowa lineup were being contemplated by Coach Rollie Williams after the showings made by certain players against Michigan last night. Jack Kotlow, reserve forward, will probably displace Gueldner Krumbholz, who went scoreless against the Wolverines.

Alex Rogers is certain to see more action at center. His substitute performances at the pivot post have put Parker Bennett's place on the first team in danger.

A victory for Iowa will virtually clinch eighth or ninth place.

Yearling Tracksters Honored for Marks Set in Competition

For their performances in special events at the Northwestern-Iowa track dual at the field house yesterday afternoon, four freshman track and field men were awarded gold medals.

O. B. Whitmore and Roland James were honored for their feats in clearing the bar in the pole vault at 12 feet or better, Whitmore winning the event at 12 feet six inches.

Robert Cook received a medal for his performance in running the quarter mile in 51 6-10 seconds. Richard Bort was likewise awarded for his half mile time of under two minutes two seconds.

One of the features of the frosh events was the time of five and five tenths seconds in the 50 yard dash by Margrini.

Ramblers in Intra-City Tilt With Irish 5

Ends Regular Schedules for Strong Local Parochials

The classic battle of the Iowa City high school basketball season, the annual St. Mary's-St. Patrick's game, comes due at the Irish gym tomorrow night, winding up the regular cage season in the local prep schools.

The champion of the city may or may not be decided in this game, the Shamrocks holding an edge by virtue of their narrow victory over the Ramblers in the first meeting of the year, but St. Mary's is conceded an even chance of upsetting the strong team of Coach Joe Mowry and gaining a tie for the mythical crown.

Three members on the starting lineup will be playing their last games before an Iowa City crowd. Capt. Leo Gaulchoer, St. Mary's high scoring forward, Ralph Lumsden, the tall rangy Rambley center and guard, who has been scintillating for Coach Suplee's team all season, and Francis "Chick" Meagan, one of the outstanding prep hoopers in the city.

Coach Mowry will probably send his usual starting lineup into the game. Pinney and L. Donohue will most likely open at the forward posts, Joe Scannell at center, and Megan and Joe Glenn at the guards.

In addition to Ralph Lumsden and Gaulchoer, Coach Suplee will probably start three freshman stars, Belger, forward, and Pooler and Maher guards.

Johnson Gets Only Decision for Old Gold

Mueller Draws; Dull, Parmenter in First Setbacks

By GENE THORNE
(Asst. Sports Editor, Daily Iowan)

CEDAR FALLS, Feb. 27—Iowa State Teachers college wrestlers defeated the University of Iowa here this afternoon in a grueling meet 19 1-2 to 4 1-2.

All the matches were closely contested but the well-balanced Tutor team had too much strength for the Hawkeyes. There were no falls.

Larry Mueller, Iowa captain, and Black, State Teachers 115 pounders battled two overtime periods to a draw.

Johnson Wins

Clarence Johnson added the remaining Old Gold points in the 155 pound class, defeating Ducea by a decision. They were forced to wrestle two overtime periods.

In the feature struggle of the meet, Maynard Harmon, Tutor 145 pound ace, eked out a decision over Burt Dull. Both men had a world of speed and Harmon was forced to collect his time advantage second by second.

Rollo "Shorty" Parmenter, 125 pound Iowa sophomore, lost the first match of his career to Harris by a decision. Harris was too cagy for the Hawkeye.

Amle Staves Off Fall

Brindley, Tutor 135 pounder continued his winning streak with a decision over Paul Amle. Amle was in trouble several times, but fought off a fall.

Clarence Hubbard, Iowa 165 pounder, lost his first match at that weight, losing a decision to Sheffield. Hubbard flashed lots of speed but Sheffield was too strong for him.

John O'Leary dropped a decision to Luker in a split period match, and Gerber, State Teachers heavy, hauled and tugged Don San Giovanni, Iowa 155 pounder, all over the mat in a determined effort to add five points, but was forced to win by a decision.

Summary:

118 pounds—Captain Mueller (I) drew with Black (T). Two overtime periods.
126 pounds—Harris (T) defeated Parmenter (I). Time advantage 3:2.

Frosh Laws Will Present Annual Case

Senior Law Students to Act as Supreme Court Judges

The first year class of Law club competition of the college of law will argue its first case tomorrow at 7:15 p.m.

Law "firms" which will argue this appeal case on stipulation of facts are: John Carl Butler, Ll of Des Moines, and Stanley M. Corbett, Ll of Sioux City, appellants, versus William B. Howes, Ll of Davenport, and Joseph A. Concannon, Ll of Keokuk, appellees.

The cases are tried by a student supreme court consisting of members of the senior law class. The work of serving as a judge in the first year law competition cases is included as a part of the trial practice problems course. Senior judges for this case are: Howard W. Black, Ll of Dubuque, George J. Balluff, Ll of Iowa City, John S. Petersen, Ll of Muscatine, William O. Weaver, Ll of Wapello.

The appellate court decides which of the firm wins in the case and also selects the individuals they regard as first and second in ability. Those who win this distinction in each of the cases are eligible for the second year competition class from which eight out of 18 are chosen, and four from these eight, to argue for the senior supreme court day case.

Hebrews 7:21-28.
The Lutheran Church teaches that Jesus Christ, the God-Man, is our only Priest, the only Mediator between God and man; that He in the work of redemption mediated between God and man by performing His active obedience in man's stead that which God demanded of man and which he did not and could not perform, a complete fulfillment of all the precepts of the Law, and suffering in His passive obedience as man's substitute that which according to the Law and God's righteous judgment must have suffered here and hereafter, torments, death and damnation; that He by His vicarious sacrifice rendered full satisfaction to divine justice, making complete atonement and expiation for all original and actual sins of mankind, reconciling the world with God, propitiating God in our behalf, redeeming all men from the bondage, the curse, and the penalty of the Law, from sin, death, and the power of the devil, and earning and purchasing for all sinners perfect righteousness, life, and eternal bliss; and that He still mediates between God and man by appearing for us before God in heaven, making intercession for us, pleading our cause as our Advocate, and securing in God's judgment the full acquittal of all who believe in Him. Christ is our only Priest, our only Mediator, our only Advocate with the Father.

Sunday Library Service

YESTERDAY THE DAILY IOWAN asked several students whether or not they favored having the university library reading rooms open on Sundays and holidays. The replies ranged from firm negative through a half-and-half policy to enthusiastic affirmative.

Considering the number of students who are forced to work in order to remain in school, the number who engage in the outside activities that keep the campus from becoming a cloistered place of continuous study, it seems logical that for many Sunday is the only time when profitable study is possible.

Many students are so pressed for time that they are compelled to leave the bulk of their studying to the week end, preparing during the week only a minimum of daily work. This is often done sketchily, and at odd intervals. Except for Sunday afternoons and evenings it is often impossible for such a student to settle down for several hours of concentrated thought.

As was pointed out in yesterday's answers, some students spend their Sundays in catching up on their social obligations or make Sunday their leisure time. But they are in the minority.

Most city libraries keep their reading rooms open for a short time on Sunday, recognizing that their patrons are busy people who cannot find time during the week to do their reading.

The same principle holds good on this campus, and there can be but little question that the university libraries would be doing the student body a great service by recognizing their need for Sunday library service, if only for the weeks preceding final examinations.

Spring in the Air

PERHAPS, today, it will be snowing—didn't Californians a week ago ice-skate on the same pond they had gone swimming in the day before—but yesterday it was spring. A graduate student appeared in public without vest and string of honor keys for the first time since Homecoming. A sophomore, wearing a numeral sweater and dirty cords, walked slowly across the campus with a girl who was dressed in new spring coat and veiled "pancake" hat.

Few cars were parked near the campus—everyone seemed to be going somewhere. Students went to the library for the afternoon, and walked out before an hour had passed. Three men stood before a clothing store and admired a light tan suit. The male faction of the student body discarded heavy lamb coats in favor of lightweight top coats.

Girls didn't walk with girls and men with men, but suddenly the enrollment of the university was divided into twos, and a man and a girl stood here, and a man and a girl stood there. Several couples rediscovered the view from the west entrance of Old Capitol; at least they seemed to be admiring it.

It isn't right, of course. Spring hasn't any reason to come to Iowa before March 22, when the axis of the earth is at right angles to the direction of the sun. There is nearly a month until winter overcoats can be discarded, or before young men's fancies can traditionally turn to love. Why the ducks haven't even started to fly north yet, and the robin who sat before university hall yesterday couldn't find any other red-breasted birds to keep him company.

Yes, before today has ended the campus may be covered with snow—but yesterday it was spring.

The Left Side is Right

"THE LEFT side is the right side"—when walking on a country road. That is the opinion of Maxwell N. Halsey, traffic engineer of the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters. It is proper for the vehicle to keep to the right, but for the pedestrian it is dangerous, says the traffic expert.

It is estimated that more than two thousand persons are killed annually in this country and thousands injured because ancient custom dictates that one should always keep to the right. Hitch hikers and pedestrians are struck at curves, and narrow passes by cars speeding from the rear. Many are hit on the crests of hills, but the most dangerous time for these "keep to the right" pedestrians is late in the day when drivers are often blinded by the glaring sun, or at dusk, before the headlights are turned on.

At this time of the year when students get the hiking fever again, it is well to throw out the warning that the highway pedestrian should always keep on the left side. By so doing he can see the cars approaching and have ample time to move to safety if necessary.

In a few states the problem is being solved by building sidewalks along the highways.

North Carolina, Kansas, Delaware, New York, New Jersey, West Virginia, and Massachusetts have gone a long way in this project, and other states are considering the same action. But until the day when all highways are flanked by sidewalks, the best advice to insure the pedestrian's safety is "The left side is the right side."

Fast

MR. AND MRS. HARVEY G. BLONDELL probably think this world moves at a rapid rate. They also more than likely believe that "when it rains it pours," and "two is company and three is a crowd."

Last week when Mr. and Mrs. Blondell boarded a train in Los Angeles for Canada, there were just the two in their family. Then somewhere in the deserts of Nevada a third Blondell appeared on the scene, a baby boy.

Papers all over the country told of the unusual incident. The parents were, no doubt, proud of the youngster and the publicity he was receiving. But unfortunately for the Blondells the inspector of the Ontario provincial police read the story and recognized the father's name as one of the five men who held up a bank in Morristown last fall. So when the trio arrived in Galt, Papa Blondell was arrested and whisked away to jail.

People do read the papers here, there and everywhere. Just ask Papa Blondell.

Vagabond Diplomats

(From the Columbia Missourian)

About this time every year students of universities and colleges all over the world begin making plans for trips into foreign countries. The mystery of distant horizons holds a strong lure for youth that has learned something of what lies beyond these horizons.

The necessity of school attendance, fear of venturing out alone, parental disapproval, and other factors usually defeat the realization of these plans. University students do not represent a cross-section of our American civilization. However, as representatives to foreign countries, we could select from no other class of society, individuals who would create a more favorable impression. It may not be true that the cream of the American population is to be found among university and college students. But they are infused with a degree of enthusiasm and initiative which, in Europe, speaks well for America.

TODAY'S TOPICS

By FRANK JAFFE

Japan cannot comply with the four powers' request that no more troops be landed in the Shanghai international settlement. At this stage of the game, a negative reply was all the four powers could have expected. Ambassadors had asked that if Japan send any more troops to Shanghai, they disembark outside the settlement and suggested that if the warships were moved from the Whang-poo river they might not attract Chinese shells, which might fall inside the neutral territory.

But the Japanese are well on the way in their big westward push, so far, in fact, that the Soviet government is beginning to get worried. Reports that Japan was sponsoring anti-Soviet activities in Northern Manchuria brought demands from Russia for explanations. None were forthcoming, but denials were on every hand.

The new Manchurian government, that has been erected with enough pliability so that it might be considered republic or monarchy, at convenient times, is another bugbear to the Russians. A powerful Japanese influence on her eastern frontier is hardly to the liking of the Soviet. Nor does she contemplate sitting idly by while China becomes another Japanese "protectorate."

Japan had better think up some good ones to tell Soviet Commissar Karakhan before he gets mad and tells Stalin. Because if the Russians conclude that Japan aims to take some Soviet territory or "bust up" all the good results of the five year plan, Joseph Stalin will wave the flag, blow a bugle, and wipe Japan off the map.

All this despite the fact that Leon Trotsky, from exile, declares that Stalin's rule at Moscow is crumbling, and the Trotsky principles are hastening the process. I'd say it's just another case of sour grapes. Doubtless Trotsky's principles still influence a large part of the Russian bourgeois population but Stalin will be recognized for "years to come as Russia's "strong man."

The Glass-Steagall bill became a law late yesterday by the hand of President Hoover, thereby strengthening the nation's credit and at the same time helping Hoover along to another term. Commenting on the bill, the much-maligned chief executive said it was, in a sense, a national defense measure. He said it would so increase the resources of the federal reserve banks as to enable them "beyond question to meet any conceivable demands that might be made on them from home or abroad."

Like all emergency measures this latest one is hailed as a forerunner of prosperity, bringing that elusive corner just a few blocks nearer. The new law will make credit more readily available to the banks and will strengthen the federal reserve system with gold from the treasury.

Getting at the roots of the evil, congress will investigate bear raids on the stock markets as another attempt to restore the country's business to normalcy. While the names of the raiders are known, the senate banking committee will start hearings soon to regulate or abolish short selling. It won't be long now before we'll all be eating ice cream for dessert.

Being king these days can't be a very attractive occupation, if Prince Lennart of Sweden would rather marry a commoner than wear a crown. I guess no one can blame him much, considering the way kingships have been going these last few years.

The prince plans to settle down to a quiet life, with his wife, a radio, and a farm—more like an ordinary human being, as he puts it. Of course, people who already have a wife, a radio, and a farm, can't see things his way, probably. They'd all much rather be king. But then, maybe he will, too, after a while.

Engineers to Name Queen

Will Choose Sovereign of Mecca Ball Thursday

One of 10 women selected by the executive council of the Associated Students of Engineering yesterday will be chosen Mecca queen by a vote of all engineering students, Thursday, March 3, and will be presented to engineers as their sovereign, March 18, at the Mecca Ball.

"Great care will be taken to keep the identity of the queen secret until she is formally presented at the Mecca Ball," said Leo J. Asehenbrenner, E4 of Dysart, president of the A.S.E.

Behind the Scenes in Hollywood

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—American film stars, not the dictates of Paris, set the modern styles in hairdressing. So contends Ernie Westmore, one of Hollywood's foremost authorities on makeup and head of this department at R.K.O.

Mr. Westmore, for instance, believes that many American girls are watching the screen to see whether they should go on with the trying business of letting their hair grow, or whether they should cut it. He looks for the long bob, now affected by the film people, to be reflected all over the country. In Hollywood, of course, this bob was adopted for practical reasons. An inch above the shoulder, it enables the actress either to tuck on half or to curl up the ends. Though the average woman hasn't the same problem, Westmore believes she will follow the stars.

"Look around you," he said, "and see the imitators of Greta Garbo's straight-back, sophisticated full bob. Miss Garbo and Lily Damita also have been instrumental in bringing back the Parisian bangs. Then there was the platinum blonde epidemic following Jean Harlow. And everybody knows that Clara Bow popularized the wind-blown flapper bob. And if you want to go back farther, it was Gloria Swanson who really started American women to wearing the large wide wave. Hollywood always leads the way."

SYNOPSIS

For years, Paco Morales ruled the pawns in Mexico with an iron hand, confiscating their lands and driving them from their homes, but the crisis has come. "El Coyote," the mysterious bandit, avenges every outrage perpetrated by Morales. The ranchers await their unknown protector's word to revolt. Morales, with the aid of the U. S. Cavalry under Major Blount, has searched for the bandit in vain. Ted Radcliffe, an American whose late father was ruined by Morales, is in love with Adela, the Spaniard's beautiful niece. Jito, Morales' ward, is jealous of Ted. Bob Harkness, Ted's friend, tells him he has plans for settling the score with Morales. While out riding, Ted and Adela lose their way and spend the night in the desert. Adela resents her uncle's suspicions. Later, Bob returns home with Ted and learns that some of his cattle were stolen. He doubts that "El Coyote" is responsible. At Mendocino's, a notorious resort, Bob leaves Ted and goes upstairs to visit Ann Reed, an entertainer. Bob is "El Coyote" and Ann his spy. She is deeply in love with him. As autumn comes, "El Coyote" makes ready to overthrow Morales. When Ted notices Bob's stolen cattle among Jito's herd, the latter explains he just found them and intended returning them. Major Blount invites Bob and Ted to his headquarters to learn the identity of "El Coyote." Bob is present. Morales and Jito are also present. Morales and Jito are the former, one of "El Coyote's" lieutenants, is expected momentarily.

"Who is El Coyote?"

CHAPTER XXXV

"He calls himself Antonio Ortega." Don Bob moved over so slightly in his chair. "A short, stocky chap with a scar over his eye?" he asked. For the first time Jito spoke. "I gave him that scar," he muttered. "It lies above his right eye." The major nodded. "That's the fellow. A villainous sort of ruffian. Last week he came here at night, half frightened to death. Told me he had a secret to tell. I felt like kidding him, but in this life one works with the tools one finds. I tried to get him to tell me then and there, but not he. Said in a week he would be ready to leave the country and that the night he told me it was to pay him the reward and escort him to the fort. Oh, the fellow was in a terrible funk. He must have loved money very much to dare this thing in the face of his fear. He was so rotten scared he jabbered and perhaps you can't blame him. You all remember what happened to the last man who gave information." The major touched his chest. "Two shots through the throat and a handful of gold coins scattered over him to show El Coyote's contempt. I've had to promise this fellow military protection and a safe escort out of the country. By God, I'll see nothing happens to him. If anything did happen, we wouldn't be able to get another man to open his mouth if you offered him the Homestake Mine. So make yourselves comfortable, gentlemen, until nine-thirty. And then for El Coyote."

In silence the four men considered the major's table. Blount himself walked restlessly up and down the tent. Never before had he been so near his quarry. He buttoned and unbuttoned his coat. A few minutes more. Ted felt the tension. At last Don Bob looked at his watch. "Nothing to be done for twenty minutes. Think I'll go out and take a look about your camp, major. No, don't bother coming. I just want to stretch a bit." And smiling at Ted he passed out of the tent.

Thoughtfully Morales looked after him. "So at last Don Bob's romantic hero comes to the end of a bloody trail. It was bound to be. For how can one put trust in this scum of the border and hope to live? One offers money and nothing happens because men are afraid. One offers more money, and sooner or later comes a man whose greed for gold is greater than his fear of the Coyote's vengeance. So it is with this Antonio. For him rewards and protections are too good. I would learn what he knows and cut his throat."

"Except that I have promised him both reward and protection," the major reminded.

Morales' smile held an amused pity. "As you will. You Americans and your sentimental moralities! They amuse me, if I may say so without offense. You believe in keeping faith even with the faithless. An expensive gesture at times. But protect him, by all means, my major. Qué va, what we want is El Coyote."

another ripped its way into the little group. Each man started to his feet. Loudly Blount called an orderly. "Find out what that damned shooting's about." Perspiration had broken out on his face. "Ordinarily I wouldn't worry—but, by God, if anything goes wrong—"

Reaching in a canvas knapsack he buckled on his army automatic. Muttering with impatience he walked twice the length of the floor. A footfall sounded on the sand outside and a long shadow fell across the tent wall. Quickly the major raised the flap. In the moonlight stood Don Bob, rolling a cigarette. He nodded, and scratched a match on the tent pole.

"I just heard two shots, major," Bob inhaled the fragrant smoke deeply. "Do you suppose it could mean something's wrong with your information?"

Before the major could answer a little knot of soldiers approached, bearing a Mexican between them.

"He was shot just outside the line, sir," a corporal announced. "We heard two shots almost together, then somebody cursed in Spanish and this bird came running into us screaming. One shot got him. He's just about gone."

Blount looked closely at the man. He held the lamp nearer and a bitter curse rolled in his throat. "It's Antonio, by God! Put him in that chair. Get some brandy." He raised a futile hand aloft. "By God," he said helplessly. Roughly he shook the inert form.

"Who is El Coyote?"

The Mexican's glazing eyes opened and turned in terror toward the light. A rasping cough trembled in his throat. Desperately the major said to Morales; "Ask him in Spanish. Quick. The man is dying."

The Spaniard's face glowed with a dark fury. He glared at the Mexican. "¿Quién es El Coyote?" he hissed. "¿Digame, pronto, quien es?"

Slowly the Mexican's head moved, his lips opened and his eyes roved about the little group. At last they rested on the face of Don Bob. A little convulsive quiver ran through the wounded man, his jaws dropped, and he slumped limply forward. The major's hand closed on the Mexican's pulse. No beat of life. It was over.

Students Will Give Group of Radio Recitals

Musicians Selected on Ability in Weekly Performances

A system of "honor recitals" will be inaugurated by the music department in cooperation with station WWSU Wednesday, when selected students from the department start a series of broadcasts. The first program will be presented from 9:10 to 10 p.m.

Students who will participate in these honor recitals will be selected from those giving the best performances at the general recitals presented Friday afternoons throughout the year. A recital jury, consisting of five members of the instructional staff of the department, will meet each Friday after the recitals and rate the performances as failed, passed, above average, or excellent.

In accordance with the usual radio practice, the performers in the honor recitals will use printed musical texts, although the selections presented in the general recitals will be performed from memory.

The honor recital will be performed in the large recital hall of the general music building on the main campus. No admission charge will be made, and the public is invited. Because the program will be broadcast, and must not be interrupted, members of the audience are requested to be in their seats by 9:10, and not to enter or leave the room during the broadcast.

The first program to be presented will be:

- Prelude and Fugue, C minor...Bach (Well-tempered Clavier, vol. 1)
- Ballerina Lindemann, U of Iowa City
- Baldade, opus 47...Chopin
- Grace Gibbs, A2 of Farley.
- The Piper of Love...Carew
- Florence Vanderwicken, A2 of Ireton

- Hugh Maurey Baylor, A2 of What Cheer
- La Cathedrale Engloutie...Debussy
- Helen Whitebook, A4 of Council Bluffs
- J'ai Pleuré en Reve...Hue
- Vision Fugitif...Massenet

Owners Ask Salary Slice

LOGAN, Feb. 27 (AP)—The Harrison county taxpayers league has adopted a resolution, calling upon state officials getting a salary of more than $2,000 to accept a 10 per cent reduction for the rest of 1932 and "smile about it."

Another resolution asked congress to enact laws looking to the reduction of 10 per cent in salaries of all federal employes and legislative members. The proposal would be effective March 4 and continue for one year.

The resolution stipulated that cabinet officers and the president, and all members of their families who are on government payrolls should be included in the proposed reduction.

The league advocated reducing juries from 12 members to six with a provision for a five-day return verdict. For cases involving $500 or less a trial by a judge was proposed.

SHEFFIELD, Feb. 27 (AP)—Charles Eickmeyer, 61, implement dealer here for 30 years, ended his life by hanging this afternoon. The reason for his act is not known.

Stocks Drone Through Dull Day of Trade

Extend No Sympathy to Auburn's Early Decline

NEW YORK, Feb. 27 (AP)—Patiently waiting for something to turn up, stocks today droned through the dulllest Saturday since last August. Transactions amounted to 400,340 shares and price changes slithered down toward the vanishing point.

The market refused to express sympathy over Auburn's early slide to a new low. The list's behavior hewed bore out the consensus of brokerage house opinion that a professional trading area was all that could be expected until events change the viewpoint.

Railroad earnings statements provided material for further comment. Santa Fe had an operating deficit of $125,901 last month, which prompted some selling of the stock. However, the extreme 2 point loss was halved, Baltimore & Ohio made a good showing.

Henry Ford's announcement of his big production program, involving enormous expenditures for raw materials and labor, was naturally received with wide interest, especially the figures on the amount of steel he intends to buy in the open market. In some quarters it was suggested that such impressive psychological effect.

American Telephone, Consolidated Gas and Canadian Pacific each firm a point. U. S. Steel, American Can, Westinghouse, General Motors, Gillette, New York Central, Union Carbide and Allied Chemical returned small and mixed net changes. Transamerica was heavy, off half a point.

Girl Scouts Plan Course in Leadership

To familiarize students with the possibilities of Girl Scouting, to train new leaders, and to make suggestions to present Girl Scout workers are the main purposes of the course in Girl Scout leadership which will be given at the women's gymnasium from Feb. 29 to March 12 under the direction of Ida May Born of New York, N. Y.

Miss Born comes to Iowa City as a representative of the national Girl Scout headquarters. Before becoming a member of the field training staff of the organization, she spent some time as instructor in physical education at Newcomb college, part of Tulane university, in New Orleans, La. Miss Born has also been director of the Girl Scout camp at Covington, La., and local director of the New Orleans Girl Scouts.

Miss Born suggests that college graduates who are lonely might become Girl Scout leaders just as children who are lonely join the Girl Scouts.

"The college graduate is old enough to know the value of the Girl Scout game and young enough to share the same period of thought as the girls who are learning to grow-up way, to be junior citizens, ought to be just the satisfaction she needs," Miss Born pointed out.

The course, which is given annually as a part of the recreational leadership program, is open to anyone interested. It will be given every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday at 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. Miss Born will be available for individual conferences at other times during the two week period.

Geology Club to Meet

"Pollen studies in pleistocene peats of Iowa" will be discussed by George H. Linn at the regular meeting of the Geology club tomorrow afternoon.

DES MOINES (AP)—Gov. Dan Turner informed Gov. F. B. Olson of Minnesota he will attend a conference of governors urging passage of federal legislation for a nine foot channel in the upper Mississippi.

Be It Ever So Humble

By Don Pryor

FOR the first time, John Moreland knew that he was 82. He could feel it in his shoulders and in the stiffness of his legs. But mostly he could feel it in the weight of the little white envelope that he took from the lawyer and carried away in his hand.

All he had to do was give it to Martha and she and her husband and her daughter would leave. They would leave and never come back. And he would be alone again in his house.

The lawyer had said to him, "That's what you want, isn't it, to get rid of them?"

"Yes," he had said, "that's what I want." And then he had explained it all again to the lawyer, carefully, convincing himself. "I didn't want them in the first place," he said. "I could take care of myself. Even after the funeral I had $2,000, Mr. Case. And my pension coming from the railroad. And my house all paid for and all.

"I wouldn't have let them stay, Mr. Case. But it was right after my wife died and it was good to have somebody clean up the house and keep things going. And then Jim—that's my son-in-law—was out of work, and I thought I'd even things by carrying them over until he could find a job. But he don't look for work, Mr. Case. I haven't got a cent but my pension now.

"Understand, Mr. Case, it ain't the money so much. If they would just treat me like I was human. If they would just treat me like I was human, Mr. Case, I wouldn't mind it so much. But they usually don't talk to me at all. Why, I can be a-sittin' there all night, and them a-walkin' around and a-talkin' and they never say a word to me. Unless it's money they want." He had tried not to cry.

The lawyer had nodded and had given him the little envelope. Simply to give it to Martha. . . . So easy. . . . But he could feel the heaviness of the envelope bending him.

HE would give it to her as soon as he got home. That was the best way. He would just walk in and hand it to her. It would be hard. But it would be so much harder to wait. He wondered what she would say. He hoped she would get mad and bluster at him like she could do so easily. But if she cried. . . .

Martha met him at the kitchen door with a milk bottle. "Good Lord," she said, "where have you been? I gotta have some milk. Here, take this and go get me a quart of milk. Dinner's almost ready. Good Lord!" She shoved the bottle into his hand and slammed the door.

On the way to the corner store he decided to wait until after dinner. Jim would be there then. . . . It would be better, he thought, to let them both see it at once. He would wait, though, until Nancy had gone to bed. It would be unpleasant enough, without having a child in the way.

But when he returned with the milk, dinner was ready and Martha was exhorting everyone to hurry. He could hear Jim's thick-necked voice from behind the bathroom door, straining raucously through "Steamboat Bill." Nancy followed her mother back and forth across the kitchen, whining, begging.

"But why can't I go? I want to go!"

"I said you couldn't, didn't I? Well, ain't that enough?"

"But gosh, Ma, don't ya s'pose I wanta go just as bad as you?"

"Will you shut up? Go on in the other room until I call ya. Jim! Good Lord, ain't you ready yet?"

Jim was ready and presently Martha gathered them all into the kitchen. John Moreland remembered what Anna had once said about eating in the kitchen. "It's a sign of poor upbringing," she had said. And here was their daughter serving dinner in the kitchen. He looked intently at her, but saw nothing of Anna there. Martha was heavy and broad, but her face was pinched, squeezed into a sharp edge. Her black, grey-streaked hair, bobbed and shingled, was set in a tight, shellacked marcel. She looked up from her plate with the special, humble expression she used whenever she asked him for money.

"DAD, Jim and I wanta see a show tonight," she said. "We ain't been to a show for weeks and there's a dandy at the Palace tonight. Have ya got some money, Dad? It won't take much. Have ya, Dad?"

"Yes, I've got some money," he said. He was thinking how like Nancy Martha had sounded.

TO A DEAD SELF

*The poet self who might have flourished
Slumbers, a Lazarus without a Christ;
The lyric sense that might have nourished
Now dormant lies, from prosy sleep not waking
By rhapsodic dreams of lovely fairies.*

*The dreamer knew a lovely fairy—once,
Whose charm gave flight to inspiration;
From commonness she fled ere clay took wings
For dreams of soaring contemplation.*

*Time's slow, sure hand seals up the sepulchre,
Seals up the poet soul forevermore—
A memory alone remains unfled;
But no salt tears will keep alive the sore—
The soul that could have cried is dead.*
—Roland A. White.

Nancy had begged to be allowed to go and now Martha was begging for money. They were both petulant and whiny. And hard. Hard and cold. If only Martha were like her mother. . . . He would give them the money. And tomorrow he would give them the little envelope and they would go.

Satisfied, Martha resumed her eating. But Jim felt the tightness in the air. He said, "Ya know, I just missed a job today by that much." He measured off a very short distance between his fork and a piece of bread.

"That was a close shave!"
"Dad!" Martha shot him a glance that was vicious and sharp.

There was a sullen silence during the rest of the meal. When they had finished, Martha put the dishes in the sink and she and Jim left. John Moreland wandered into the front room. He felt very old and tired. The house seemed uncommonly still. After tomorrow it would always be this way, always silent and still. Nancy was lying on the davenport, reading. After tomorrow, even she would be gone. Her feet were stretched over the side of the davenport and he could see that her shoes needed half soles.

For a long time he sat in the rocking chair beside the radio and thought. If only Jim would find a job. If only. . . . But he wouldn't. . . . He had never really tried and he never would as long as he was kept warm and comfortable. There was one alternative. But it frightened him to think of that.

HE looked around at Anna's furniture, some of it more than a hundred years old. The house wasn't much from the outside. It was colored an ugly railroad red and looked like a big T-shaped box. But inside, it was Anna, small and warm and comfortable. He would never give up his home.

At nine o'clock Nancy, who had finished her book and had been quietly watching him, said "Grandpa, ain't Daddy never goin' to get a job?"

"Why sure, child, sure," he said. "Why?"
"Oh, nuthin'. Only Ma said I could have a new dress when he did."

"Sure, you'll get your new dress. Yes. . . . Yes, sure you will. You'd better go to bed now."

Nancy dropped her book on the davenport and went to bed. John Moreland rose, slowly and stiffly, picked up the book she had dropped, glanced at the title, and put it away in the corner bookcase. He locked the back door, turned on the front porch light, and then he, too, went to bed.

He awoke the next morning to feel the warm sun glowing over his face. Through the front window, he could see the men plodding toward the shops. Some of them were young men and some of them were old. But they all walked with the bent stiff leggedness of blacksmiths and riveters and boiler-makers. His own 30 years at the shops he could see in the men as they passed by his window. The young and the old. . . .

He could hear Martha rustling around the kitchen. She was whistling. That was good, for when Martha whistled, she would be pleasant. She would say, "Good morning, Dad." And then she would ask him if pancakes were all right or would he rather have an egg. She seldom whistled. Usually she would just say, "Hi," and give him pancakes.

Martha's pleasantness upset his plans entirely. He had intended to give her the envelope right after breakfast. But how could he give her an oyster notice when she was being so unusually kind? Maybe she had a reason for being kind. He thought of that. Maybe she was just. . . . But that was hardly fair. There was the time two weeks ago when she had been so kind to him. She hadn't asked him for money then.

HE was hardly through with his eggs and toast when he noticed that Jim was nowhere around. He said, "Where's Jim, Martha? Ain't he up yet?"

"Yeh, he's up," she said. "Up and gone. I think he's got a job, Dad. Somebody told him

Book Reviews

Edited by Harriet I. Mahnke

MANHATTAN SIDESHOW by KONRAD BERCOVICI; Century, $4.00.

To the middlewestern New York seems a glamorous place. After he reads Mr. Bercovic's book it will probably seem even more exciting than he had thought.

The author has drawn delightful word pictures of places in New York. Particularly he has peopled it with interesting personages with which the reader is acquainted remotely enough to keep him reading on to the very end before he puts the book away.

One of the characters treated in the book is Joe, owner of a string of speakeasies, who says that even if prohibition goes out the old saloon will never come back. Why? Because women have taken to a cocktail in the afternoon instead of a cup of tea.

There's an especially sympathetic sketch of Saul Elman, philosopher and thinker, great in his own right, but completely overshadowed by his son, the violinist, so that his powers are hidden in the glare of his son's achievements.

Glimpses of Sinclair Lewis, Sherwood Anderson, and others of the literary fraternity—and to make his sideshow complete there's the Hindu fakir and his wife, who was so straight that she had descended to the burlesque stage.

Too, there is the amusing story of the respectable, middleaged couple from St. Louis who were out to see New York. And they did!

Places to eat? Bercovic tells of many. There's a Spanish one, with detailed directions on how to reach it, which is run by a famous Spanish psychologist, not under his real name, who is continuing his study by observing the persons who come to his place to dine.

But there is one thing in the book which I can not forgive. George Cram Cook's name is written George Graham Cook, an error which hurt my proofreader's eye. Cook, a native Iowan and one-time teacher at the university, was a founder of Provincetown Players, and the husband of Susan Glaspell, who has written several delightful books about him.

Certainly there are two or three hours of pleasure in "Manhattan Sideshow." To the person who has never seen New York, because it is a place to look forward to seeing; to the New Yorker away from the city, because it brings back memories of the great city.

MR. AND MRS. PENNINGTON by FRANCIS BRETT YOUNG; Scribner's $2.50.

When you first meet Susan she is a sweet, unsophisticated English girl. When the book ends Susan is an accomplished woman of the world. The metamorphosis of the heroine is the striking thing in Mr. Young's book, for he has portrayed his character in all her various positions with equal skill and finesse.

Susan dreamed of love; she went to a seaside resort and found it.

Dick Pennington was a robust, healthy young Englishman. Descended from a line of clergymen, he was poor. Like Susan he had come to the seaside for a short—and inexpensive—vacation. The couple explored the country on Dick's motorcycle and when the vacation was over had decided to marry.

They lived meagerly in Dick's rooms until Susan decided they should move into a house. Dick didn't want to, because of the expense, but Susan had her way. She always did.

Then Dick lost his job; furniture installments came due; Dick found a job that took him away from Susan. Too many lurid novels and nothing to do, Susan acquired a lover. A spying neighbor informed Dick's employer, who anonymously wrote to him. Dick returned; Susan told her story, truthfully, and Dick went to see the man. He was offered money by the young man's uncle, flew into a rage. And the uncle died—from a chronic heart trouble.

Dick was put in jail. And another Susan emerges—a Susan white-faced and striking in her black attire—disarming in her attitude of frankness. The lawyers couldn't resist her.

The story ends happily with Dick and Susan starting at scratch.

Well-written, the story is interesting and absorbing. Mr. Young in picturing Susan has also included a section of English life, with its economic troubles and the difficulty it has in keeping in step with the times.

Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, is preparing a collection of personal reminiscences which Scribner's will publish soon under the title, "Across the Busy Years."

Houghton Mifflin company are publishing "Czardas" by Jenő Heltai, which is a story of Budapest. The title is taken from a Magyar dance in which a group of mixed dancers, moving to the beat of a disturbing rhythm, rise to a height of furious passion. Woodcut decorations for the book are by Lynd Ward.

Twenty-nine years of intimate contact with Latin America and its peoples as engineer and business man enable Thomas P. Lee to write authentically of Latin American problems, conditions, and affairs. He has observed at first hand the appalling lack of understanding which exists on the part of the American investor, businessman, and banker in relation to Latin America.

Brewer, Warren, and Putnam published Mr. Lee's book, "Latin American Problems—Their Relation to Our Investor's Millions." The book will be reviewed soon in The Daily Iowan Sunday magazine.

Lovers of fine books will be pleased to hear that Random House has printed a new edition of "Beowulf." The text is a new verse interpretation by William Ellery Leonard. The book contains eight lithographs by Rockwell Kent. The text was set by hand in hammer uncial, a type design based on the large round letters used in ancient manuscripts. The book is of large folio size and the edition was limited to 950 copies for America and England. The publishers announce it will not be reprinted in any form. The book costs $25.

Julia Peterkin's new novel, "Bright Skin," will be published March 31 by Bobbs-Merrill company. In this novel Mrs. Peterkin reaches north to Harlem and contrasts it with the world of the plantations of which she has written before.

In this year of the bicentennial celebration of George Washington's birth it is not strange to see many books about the first president on new publication lists. Some of those listed are new editions of old books; others are new volumes. Among the books on the Houghton Mifflin list are: "George Washington—Republican Aristocrat" by Bernard Fay; "George Washington" by Horace E. Scudder; "In the Days of Young Washington" by Nancy Byrd Turner.

Countee Cullen, Negro poet, has written a novel, "One Way to Heaven." This is a story of Harlem which Harpers will publish this month. Mr. Cullen spoke to the Times club here last year.

Campus Jogs

By Virginia Maxson

"THERE ain't no justice," is probably the conviction of a University of Southern California student who is nursing a scalp ache these days. He fell out of a 30-foot tree while trying to put up a sign that read, "Danger, keep out of the tree."

J. RAGLAN Patchmore and his colleagues are about to contribute another institution of higher education to the academic world. At a convention of hoboes in New York city, plans were made for the establishment of a hobo college whose enrollment will be restricted exclusively to hobo students. Rumor has it that the alma mater song will be "Tramp, tramp, tramp."

"BOY friends" at the University of Washington will have to say it with something besides flowers this year. All women who wear corsages at university formals there will have them removed at the entrance of the place where the dance is being held.

FASHIONS in sports are "turning turtle" in California this year. Turtle racing is reported to be one of the latest fads at the University of California.

INTERESTING revelations of man's private life were made recently by a coed at Stanford university. After extensive research, she had published in the Stanford Daily the following statistics: five per cent of the men sleep gownless. A large percentage of college professors stick to the old flannel nightie. Pajamas in pastel shades are most popular for evening wear. Blues and tans are the preferred colors.

"WHERE are you going my pretty maid?" Collegians from the Gopher state may ask as the coeds troop out with milkpails on their arms. Amateur milkmaids of the University of Minnesota have lately challenged their sisters at the University of Wisconsin to a milking contest. An engraved milk can will go to the victors.

AN average of only two out of every 15 pedestrians is honest, according to the results of an investigation conducted by journalists at Marshall college. The students wrapped and addressed packages and dropped them at various street corners. Very few of the packages were returned to the indicated addresses. Well, the pedestrian must have some compensation.

THESE are the bare facts — at Creighton university there are two football players from Hawaii, who refuse to wear shoes in football games.

AND now politics has put a soap box on the campus. A University-Republican club is to be organized at the University of Wisconsin. It will be a permanent organization, backed by the Republican national committee. Through the efforts of national officials, prominent speakers are engaged to speak before the meetings from time to time.

COLLEGES will turn out taller, stronger, and heavier coeds in 1935, if predictions made at Barnard college are correct. Based on data gathered during several years of research, the calculations show that recorded tabulations for 1925 were height, 63.79 inches; weight, 122.98 pounds; grip, 57.11 pounds, and lung capacity, 179 cubic inches, while the 1935 tabulations will be height, 64.33 inches; weight, 124.18 pounds; grip, 70.69 pounds, and lung capacity, 192 cubic inches. At that rate, 1935 figures will probably be those of a group of Amazons.

What Is Your Opinion

M. S. Cries, "Fireman, Save Our University!"

To the Editor:

A fire in Iowa City is not a small affair — on the contrary it's done up in a big way — from cellar to roof. Inexcusable are these fires and for Iowa City to tolerate them is decidedly worse.

For example, let us consider some recent disasters. First, the Mandarin inn catastrophe which took a toll of two lives and caused a property damage of $200,000. Then, the recent fire at the Hawk's Nest cafe which incurred a property loss exceeding $26,000.

These fires occurred within a block or two of the fire station.

Something is radically wrong. Is there a fire department? Assuming such a probability, how is it equipped? How many men are employed?

In the days of our grandfathers, we used to read about the serio-comic fires where volunteers from the town's citizenry had to draw the fire wagon and never got to the fire in time. Some aspect of the present situation may be compared to conditions in those days.

In Burlington, a city of 26,000, the fire department employs 35 men and has five trucks for immediate use. The citizens of Burlington have little to fear from fires for they know they are adequately safeguarded.

What is the solution? The fire department must be increased, trucks and other apparatus of the newer type added and systematic inspections of every building in the city must be held. We must consider it a duty to protect our university with its beautiful buildings and safeguard the lives of the people living here.

The gong of warning has been sounded. The fault does not lie with the fire department—but with the city administration. We await a reply in the form of some action which will tend to relieve the situation.

The university has been growing steadily and rapidly. Our fire department should grow with it.

—M. S., '34.

THEY STILL WRITE THEM

To the Editor:

The editorial in The Daily Iowan, Feb. 12, called "On 'Inane' Theses" was indeed a noble defense of ye time-honored "intellectual curiosity." But, for many a graduate student it furnished, one wagers, a hearty snicker up the sleeve.

That there has been less criticism of advanced degrees and theses within scholastic ranks than from without is not surprising. That there is more respect might be more difficult to establish. People outside think many of the so-called research studies are "inane." Students themselves know very well that many of them are!

Perhaps the true scholar does seek and uncover truth for its own sake. But both students and faculty members know that the campus is not oversupplied with such scholars. In fact, contrary to the opinion of the editorial mentioned, I should say most writers of theses have a very practical end in mind. A thesis must be produced to secure the desired degree. Ergo, a thesis!

The mere statement, therefore, that it is not the purpose of academic research to produce practical findings does not by any means remove these studies from justifiable criticism. It has still to be shown that they are what they are said to be: new contributions to knowledge, evidences of intellectual freedom, and so forth.

It is well known that study after study serves no purpose, practical or scholastic, beyond that of fulfilling the requirements of an academic program. Is it any wonder, then, that people talk about "inane" theses?

—A Graduate Student.

Paternalism Loses to Representation

(From the Daily Cardinal)

The campaign of the six boards for greater student representation has our support. The fact of their campaign seems to class with Dean Goodnight's theory that students are no longer interested in supervising their own activities.

More students on the council would help to bring the whole viewpoint which governs Wisconsin's athletic program back where it belongs—right here on the university campus. We realize that student opinion is not always the opinion of wisdom, but we are confident that any group of students on the council could bring to it more and more the growing undergraduate opinion that athletics were made for the curriculum, not curriculum for athletics. Perhaps the assurance that this attitude is current among the greater percentage of students is all the council needs for progressive action. Representation could and should supply that assurance.

We concur with the desire for greater representation in the second place because iron hand paternalism, we have often emphasized heretofore, has no place in the extra-curricular departments of student life. In the real society, into which the college trained student will graduate, he will be responsible to a great degree for the shaping of his own life. Why make the university society any more artificial than it is by depriving the student of all responsibility for shaping his own life?

When students have previously showed indifference to their extra curricular environment and given self-government up as hopeless, it has been attributed to their attitude of pessimistic fatalism; an attitude born from the realization that "nothing can be done about it, anyway."

An inspiration to deep and serious thought about the social order should be a fundamental result of education, students should begin the practice by critically examining their own life in college; they should constantly ask themselves if their non-academic environment is the best environment possible for the purpose for which they are attending college. But the faculty undermines this beneficial result of education by every fatherly encroachment on governmental or administrative responsibility which rightfully belongs to the student.

Every encroachment sows more seeds for an attitude of base and indifferent cynicism; this attitude, once grown, is as difficult to eradicate as it is venomous. Unnecessary paternalism, therefore, may lead to the nullification of the fruitful results of any educational system, however stimulating it may be.

We would look upon the success of this campaign as a step toward more serious and less superficial concern on the part of students about the athletic situation. The council could stand for student viewpoint, and the students could stand a more rational formulation of their own viewpoints.

Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, is preparing a collection of personal reminiscences which Scribner's will publish soon under the title, "Across the Busy Years."

Houghton Mifflin company are publishing "Czardas" by Jenő Heltai, which is a story of Budapest. The title is taken from a Magyar dance in which a group of mixed dancers, moving to the beat of a disturbing rhythm, rise to a height of furious passion. Woodcut decorations for the book are by Lynd Ward.

Twenty-nine years of intimate contact with Latin America and its peoples as engineer and business man enable Thomas P. Lee to write authentically of Latin American problems, conditions, and affairs. He has observed at first hand the appalling lack of understanding which exists on the part of the American investor, businessman, and banker in relation to Latin America.

Brewer, Warren, and Putnam published Mr. Lee's book, "Latin American Problems—Their Relation to Our Investor's Millions." The book will be reviewed soon in The Daily Iowan Sunday magazine.

Lovers of fine books will be pleased to hear that Random House has printed a new edition of "Beowulf." The text is a new verse interpretation by William Ellery Leonard. The book contains eight lithographs by Rockwell Kent. The text was set by hand in hammer uncial, a type design based on the large round letters used in ancient manuscripts. The book is of large folio size and the edition was limited to 950 copies for America and England. The publishers announce it will not be reprinted in any form. The book costs $25.

Julia Peterkin's new novel, "Bright Skin," will be published March 31 by Bobbs-Merrill company. In this novel Mrs. Peterkin reaches north to Harlem and contrasts it with the world of the plantations of which she has written before.

In this year of the bicentennial celebration of George Washington's birth it is not strange to see many books about the first president on new publication lists. Some of those listed are new editions of old books; others are new volumes. Among the books on the Houghton Mifflin list are: "George Washington—Republican Aristocrat" by Bernard Fay; "George Washington" by Horace E. Scudder; "In the Days of Young Washington" by Nancy Byrd Turner.

Countee Cullen, Negro poet, has written a novel, "One Way to Heaven." This is a story of Harlem which Harpers will publish this month. Mr. Cullen spoke to the Times club here last year.

Campus Jogs

By Virginia Maxson

"THERE ain't no justice," is probably the conviction of a University of Southern California student who is nursing a scalp cut these days. He fell out of a 30-foot tree while trying to put up a sign that read, "Danger, keep out of the tree."

J. RAGLAN Patchmore and his colleagues are about to contribute another institution of higher education to the academic world. At a convention of hoboes in New York city, plans were made for the establishment of a hobo college whose enrollment will be restricted exclusively to hobo students. Rumor has it that the alma mater song will be "Tramp, tramp, tramp."

"BOY friends" at the University of Washington will have to say it with something besides flowers this year. All women who wear corsages at university formals there will have them removed at the entrance of the place where the dance is being held.

FASHIONS in sports are "turning turtle" in California this year. Turtle racing is reported to be one of the latest fads at the University of California.

INTERESTING revelations of man's private life were made recently by a coed at Stanford university. After extensive research, she had published in the Stanford Daily the following statistics: five per cent of the men sleep gownless. A large percentage of college professors stick to the old flannel nightie. Pajamas in pastel shades are most popular for evening wear. Blues and tans are the preferred colors.

"WHERE are you going my pretty maid?" Collegians from the Gopher state may ask as the coeds troop out with milkpails on their arms. Amateur milkmaids of the University of Minnesota have lately challenged their sisters at the University of Wisconsin to a milking contest. An engraved milk can will go to the victors.

AN average of only two out of every 15 pedestrians is honest, according to the results of an investigation conducted by journalists at Marshall college. The students wrapped and addressed packages and dropped them at various street corners. Very few of the packages were returned to the indicated addresses. Well, the pedestrian must have some compensation.

THESE are the bare facts — at Creighton university there are two football players from Hawaii, who refuse to wear shoes in football games.

AND now politics has put a soap box on the campus. A University-Republican club is to be organized at the University of Wisconsin. It will be a permanent organization, backed by the Republican national committee. Through the efforts of national officials, prominent speakers are engaged to speak before the meetings from time to time.

COLLEGES will turn out taller, stronger, and heavier coeds in 1935, if predictions made at Barnard college are correct. Based on data gathered during several years of research, the calculations show that recorded tabulations for 1925 were height, 63.79 inches; weight, 122.98 pounds; grip, 57.11 pounds, and lung capacity, 179 cubic inches, while the 1935 tabulations will be height, 64.33 inches; weight, 124.18 pounds; grip, 70.69 pounds, and lung capacity, 192 cubic inches. At that rate, 1985 figures will probably be those of a group of Amazons.

M. S. Cries, "Fireman, Save Our University!"

To the Editor:

A fire in Iowa City is not a small affair — on the contrary it's done up in a big way — from cellar to roof. Inexcusable are these fires and for Iowa City to tolerate them is decidedly worse.

For example, let us consider some recent disasters. First, the Mandarin inn catastrophe which took a toll of two lives and caused a property damage of $200,000. Then, the recent fire at the Hawk's Nest cafe which incurred a property loss exceeding $26,000.

These fires occurred within a block or two of the fire station.

Something is radically wrong. Is there a fire department? Assuming such a probability, how is it equipped? How many men are employed?

In the days of our grandfathers, we used to read about the serio-comic fires where volunteers from the town's citizenry had to draw the fire wagon and never got to the fire in time. Some aspect of the present situation may be compared to conditions in those days.

In Burlington, a city of 26,000, the fire department employs 35 men and has five trucks for immediate use. The citizens of Burlington have little to fear from fires for they know they are adequately safeguarded.

What is the solution? The fire department must be increased, trucks and other apparatus of the newer type added and systematic inspections of every building in the city must be held. We must consider it a duty to protect our university with its beautiful buildings and safeguard the lives of the people living here.

The gong of warning has been sounded. The fault does not lie with the fire department — but with the city administration. We await a reply in the form of some action which will tend to relieve the situation.

The university has been growing steadily and rapidly. Our fire department should grow with it. —M. S., '34.

THEY STILL WRITE THEM

To the Editor:

The editorial in The Daily Iowan, Feb. 12, called "On 'Inane' Theses" was indeed a noble defense of ye time-honored "intellectual curiosity." But, for many a graduate student it furnished, one wagers, a hearty snicker up the sleeve.

That there has been less criticism of advanced degrees and theses within scholastic ranks than from without is not surprising. That there is more respect might be more difficult to establish. People outside think many of the so-called research studies are "inane." Students themselves know very well that many of them are!

Perhaps the true scholar does seek and uncover truth for its own sake. But both students and faculty members know that the campus is not oversupplied with such scholars. In fact, contrary to the opinion of the editorial mentioned, I should say most writers of theses have a very practical end in mind. A thesis must be produced to secure the desired degree. Ergo, a thesis!

The mere statement, therefore, that it is not the purpose of academic research to produce practical findings does not by any means remove these studies from justifiable criticism. It has still to be shown that they are what they are said to be: new contributions to knowledge, evidences of intellectual freedom, and so forth.

It is well known that study after study serves no purpose, practical or scholastic, beyond that of fulfilling the requirements of an academic program. Is it any wonder, then, that people talk about "inane" theses?

Paternalism Loses

to Representation

(From the Daily Cardinal)

The campaign of the six boards for greater student representation has our support. The fact of their campaign seems to class with Dean Goodnight's theory that students are no longer interested in supervising their own activities.

More students on the council would help to bring the whole viewpoint which governs Wisconsin's athletic program back where it belongs — right here on the university campus. We realize that student opinion is not always the opinion of wisdom, but we are confident that any group of students on the council could bring to it more and more the growing undergraduate opinion that athletics were made for the curriculum, not curriculum for athletics. Perhaps the assurance that this attitude is current among the greater percentage of students is all the council needs for progressive action. Representation could and should supply that assurance.

We concur with the desire for greater representation in the second place because iron hand paternalism, we have often emphasized heretofore, has no place in the extra-curricular departments of student life. In the real society, into which the college trained student will graduate, he will be responsible to a great degree for the shaping of his own life. Why make the university society any more artificial than it is by depriving the student of all responsibility for shaping his own life?

When students have previously showed indifference to their extra-curricular environment and given self-government up as hopeless, it has been attributed to their attitude of pessimistic fatalism; an attitude born from the realization that "nothing can be done about it, anyway."

An inspiration to deep and serious thought about the social order should be a fundamental result of education, students should begin the practice by critically examining their own life in college; they should constantly ask themselves if their non-academic environment is the best environment possible for the purpose for which they are attending college. But the faculty undermines this beneficial result of education by every fatherly encroachment on governmental or administrative responsibility which rightfully belongs to the student.

Every encroachment sows more seeds for an attitude of base and indifferent cynicism; this attitude, once grown, is as difficult to eradicate as it is venomous. Unnecessary paternalism, therefore, may lead to the nullification of the fruitful results of any educational system, however stimulating it may be.

We would look upon the success of this campaign as a step toward more serious and less superficial concern on the part of students about the athletic situation. The council could stand for student viewpoint, and the students could stand a more rational formulation of their own viewpoints.

But Cantor Says the Depression Has Ended

To the Editor:

Lives there a man with soul so fed With sleep, that he has never said, "Ye gods! Must I get out of bed?"

There are many such now — according to M. S. in last week's letter to the editor entitled "Are We Downhearted?" The depression, understand, has wrought this change in collegiate mankind. What a delight to see all the students joyously "bounding out of bed with a glad cry, refreshed by healing sleep!" (Whoever has tried bounding with glad cries at 7 a.m., please tell M.S. what effect it has upon neighboring sleepers.)

There are other benefits of depression, it seems. (1) The girls are standing most of the expenses. Please do not ask if and why the daughters of taxpayers are less hard-pressed than the sons. It spoils the charming picture.

(2) The students are more alert in classes because of getting more sleep. Anyone who has found the depression conducive to sleep, please correct me at once. I dislike to harbor false economic concepts.

(3) "Those hit by the depression are making one bar of soap do what two bars did before the crash." Furthermore, the dear sacrificing boys are wearing corduroys because they are susceptible to cleaning with a carpet beater and not addicted to creases. Considering these virtues of cords, I really don't understand why men have ever resorted to pressing their own trousers, even in times of plenty. Three cheers for the depression — it has made our college men into heroes, unwashed, unshaven, and unpressed!

And gargling with salt water, bless their hearts. That would make the soul of Stuart Chase glow with gratification. I hope Stuart doesn't find out that it's all due to the depression, not to common sense.

(4) "We have grown poor, but we have gained the worthier riches. . . of the mind." If the depression can make students out of the many who are now merely college attendants, then let us keep the depression always. Let us have bigger and better depressions.

(5) "We have learned what it really means to live close to nature." M. S., what does it mean to "live close to nature?"

Since universities began, true students have made more significant sacrifices for an education than beer and chocolate sodas and movies. Plenty of students are still doing so. But, they do not go about in sackcloth and ashes, and expect the world's acclaim for attempting to realize their personal standard of values.

If economic pressure has made some frivolous students more serious minded, the result is good, but reform that is brought about by merely temporary circumstances is not likely to be a permanent regeneration. Certainly it is not worth being palavered from street corners and newspaper columns. Such bombastic optimism ignores the other side: that many students are doubtless being kept out of school altogether by lack of funds.

Whether the depression has done good or evil, or a little of each, for heaven's sake, let us accept it and adjust ourselves to it and see it as it is — and forego this verbal drooling!

—Jay

WHEN asked to give a synopsis of the verb "breed" in a quiz, two Creighton university students wrote: "The present tense is breed. The past tense is bread." Well, that shows two things: cooperation is good between at least two Creighton students, and a couple of college men probably know about rising in the world.

House, Senate Keep Busy at Bills, Politics

Reports of Committees, Debates, Appear on Floor

WASHINGTON, Feb. 29 (AP)—Measures on the floors of congress today were considered at intervals between politically flavored exchanges among the legislators.

The Democrats did most of the talking, Senator Connally of Texas, aided by comments of Senator Barkley of Kentucky, assailed Senator Moses, (R. N.H.), and the administration. Moses answered spiritedly but briefly.

Critique Road Measure

In the house Representative Warren (D., N.C.) scored Secretary Hyde for criticism of the $132,000,000 road fund measure passed by the house and Representative McDuffie (D., Ala.) in a statement issued off the floor said Speaker Garner would make a good presidential nominee.

Meantime, a hearing on short sales of the commodity exchanges was under way before the house agriculture committee with Russell Clark, president of the New Orleans Cotton exchange, defending the practice.

Inquiry Starts

The senate banking committee also decided to begin an inquiry into stock exchange short selling tomorrow.

Passage of the Norris bill, which would limit the power of federal judges to issue injunctions in labor disputes, was urged in the senate by Senator Wagner, (D., N.Y.).

Investigate Failures

Out of a hearing before the house patents committee came the decision to invite dramatic critics to appear to answer charges by Chairman Sirovich that they are responsible for many show failures.

Representatives of retail associations opposed a bill to fix retail prices of trade marked products at a senate committee hearing.

Hoover's Recommendations

President Hoover sent recommendations for a revision of the bankruptcy and other laws to congress during the day.

A bill to carry out his recommendations where bankruptcy laws are concerned was introduced shortly afterwards by Senator Hastings, (D., Del.).

Girls Will Be Boys!

Leap Year Comes to Aurora, Ill. — And Skirts!

AURORA, Ill., Feb. 29 (AP)—John Livingston, nationally known aviator and No. 1 on Aurora's list of eligible bachelors published at the start of the year, should long remember this day when bachelor girls ran the city government in observance of leap year.

He knows from experience what it is like to be behind the bars of city jail, and to have Eve "pop the question."

Served Bread and Water

Livingston was "pinched" by Police Chief-for-a-day Dorothy Ward on a charge of bachelorhood. The 23 year old brunette escorted him to the city lockup, pausing frequently to readjust her cap, borrowed for the occasion from the "deposed" chief, Otto Wirz.

There he was locked by the "new" city jailor, Miss Mildred McDowell. His next meal was bread and water. In due time he was called before Police Magistrate Florence Atkins, looking judicially severe in a smart spring brown outfit.

Fined on "Bachelor Charge"

"And with what is the prisoner charged?" inquired her honor.

"Being a bachelor," replied one of her aides.

"Hm," hummed the court, "that's bad. And what has the defendant to say for himself?"

"Guilty," gulped Livingston.

"Would he be willing to reform?" asked the court, blushing.

"Would he—would he marry the magistrate?"

"His honor is very beautiful," he said, "but I'll have to maintain my plea of guilty."

"Then I fine you in accordance with an old leap year custom," said the court, "and that is when a man refuses a girl's proposal of marriage he must buy her a new silk dress. I release you so you may fulfill the sentence immediately."

Bus Stops, Too

"Magistrate" Atkins later told the story herself.

"He bought it too," she giggled, "a black satin crepe dress and it just fits."

At that moment a policeman's uniform dashed by. From underneath the cap, many sizes too large, a feminine voice threatened:

"I'll get him for parking inside a safety zone, and right in front of the city hall, at that."

Fines Constable

It was Policeman Katherine Burkel, boss-for-a-day in a borrowed hat, and she stuck a ticket on the car of City Constable Burgholzer.

She and other young women were selected by a secret committee of the Chamber of Commerce to run this city of 50,000 for a day.

Miss Mildred Pratt, 35 year old president of Aurora Business and Professional Women's club, was mayor. She presided at what she called a "perfect" city council meeting. No expenditures were voted, and no taxes raised.

Council Wants Prohibition

But the feminine "council" did vote to ask congress for strict enforcement of the prohibition law or passage of liquor laws which can be enforced with the will of the people.

Two other cities in this section of the state, Joliet and Morris, also went feminine for a day.

House, Senate Keep Busy at Bills, Politics

Reports of Committees, Debates, Appear on Floor

WASHINGTON, Feb. 29 (AP)—Measures on the floors of congress today were considered at intervals between politically flavored exchanges among the legislators.

The Democrats did most of the talking, Senator Connally of Texas, aided by comments of Senator Barkley of Kentucky, assailed Senator Moses, (R. N.H.), and the administration. Moses answered spiritedly but briefly.

Critique Road Measure

In the house Representative Warren (D., N.C.) scored Secretary Hyde for criticism of the $132,000,000 road fund measure passed by the house and Representative McDuffie (D., Ala.) in a statement issued off the floor said Speaker Garner would make a good presidential nominee.

Meantime, a hearing on short sales of the commodity exchanges was under way before the house agriculture committee with Russell Clark, president of the New Orleans Cotton exchange, defending the practice.

Inquiry Starts

The senate banking committee also decided to begin an inquiry into stock exchange short selling tomorrow.

Passage of the Norris bill, which would limit the power of federal judges to issue injunctions in labor disputes, was urged in the senate by Senator Wagner, (D., N.Y.).

Investigate Failures

Out of a hearing before the house patents committee came the decision to invite dramatic critics to appear to answer charges by Chairman Sirovich that they are responsible for many show failures.

Representatives of retail associations opposed a bill to fix retail prices of trade marked products at a senate committee hearing.

Hoover's Recommendations

President Hoover sent recommendations for a revision of the bankruptcy and other laws to congress during the day.

A bill to carry out his recommendations where bankruptcy laws are concerned was introduced shortly afterwards by Senator Hastings, (D., Del.).

Chairman Sumners of the house judiciary committee said his committee would begin hearings within two weeks on proposals for revision of the bankruptcy statutes.

Girls Will Be Boys!

Leap Year Comes to Aurora, Ill. — And Skirts!

AURORA, Ill., Feb. 29 (AP)—John Livingston, nationally known aviator and No. 1 on Aurora's list of eligible bachelors published at the start of the year, should long remember this day when bachelor girls ran the city government in observance of leap year.

He knows from experience what it is like to be behind the bars of city jail, and to have Eve "pop the question."

Served Bread and Water

Livingston was "pinched" by Police Chief-for-a-day Dorothy Ward on a charge of bachelorhood. The 23 year old brunette escorted him to the city lockup, pausing frequently to readjust her cap, borrowed for the occasion from the "deposed" chief, Otto Wirz.

There he was locked by the "new" city jailor, Miss Mildred McDowell. His next meal was bread and water. In due time he was called before Police Magistrate Florence Atkins, looking judicially severe in a smart spring brown outfit.

Fined on "Bachelor Charge"

"And with what is the prisoner charged?" inquired her honor.

"Being a bachelor," replied one of her aides.

"Hm," hummed the court, "that's bad. And what has the defendant to say for himself?"

"Guilty," gulped Livingston.

"Would he be willing to reform?" asked the court, blushing.

"Would he—would he marry the magistrate?"

"His honor is very beautiful," he said, "but I'll have to maintain my plea of guilty."

"Then I fine you in accordance with an old leap year custom," said the court, "and that is when a man refuses a girl's proposal of marriage he must buy her a new silk dress. I release you so you may fulfill the sentence immediately."

Bus Stops, Too

"Magistrate" Atkins later told the story herself.

"He bought it too," she giggled, "a black satin crepe dress and it just fits."

At that moment a policeman's uniform dashed by. From underneath the cap, many sizes too large, a feminine voice threatened:

"I'll get him for parking inside a safety zone, and right in front of the city hall, at that."

Fines Constable

It was Policeman Katherine Burkel, boss-for-a-day in a borrowed hat, and she stuck a ticket on the car of City Constable Burgholzer.

She and other young women were selected by a secret committee of the Chamber of Commerce to run this city of 50,000 for a day.

Miss Mildred Pratt, 35 year old president of Aurora Business and Professional Women's club, was mayor. She presided at what she called a "perfect" city council meeting. No expenditures were voted, and no taxes raised.

Council Wants Prohibition

But the feminine "council" did vote to ask congress for strict enforcement of the prohibition law or passage of liquor laws which can be enforced with the will of the people.

Two other cities in this section of the state, Joliet and Morris, also went feminine for a day.

Petition Filed Against Bank Stockholders

Deficiency in Assets of $174,000 to Pay Claims

An assessment in full on all stockholders of the Farmers Loan and Trust company was asked in a petition filed yesterday in district court by L. A. Andrew, superintendent of banking for the state of Iowa.

The petition, filed through Attorney General John Fletcher, E. F. Rate, D. C. Nolan, and Harold Vestermarck, averred that there is a deficiency in the assets of more than $174,000 with which to pay claims. Claims of the depositors exclusive of bills payable are set at $754,000 in the petition.

Stock Transfers Void

All stock transfers made between Jan. 3, 1931, and Jan. 3, 1932, are null and void, the petition states, and the transferees are liable for the assessment. It was further added that many notes, being held as accounts receivable, were of little value.

The petition asked that judgment be entered against stockholders for payment of the assessment. The stock is assessed at $100 par value a share.
