House Faces Showdown on Beer Revenue

Petition Assures Vote on Proposal to Levy Tax

WASHINGTON, May 14 (AP)—The house will go on record Monday, May 23, on the beer-for-revenue issue.

The vote was assured today when Representative Bachmann of West Virginia the Republican whip, stepped to the clerk's desk as the one hundred forty fifth signer of a petition to call up the O'Connor-Hull bill for a tax of three cents a pint on beer of not over 2.75 per cent alcohol by weight.

Declare Percentage

The bill would declare this percentage to be "non-intoxicating in fact."

A burst of applause from anti-prohibitionists greeted Bachmann. Only a few minutes earlier, Representative Kvale, farmer-labor, Minnesota, who represents the district once held by Andrew J. Volstead, author of the prohibition enforcement act, had signed.

Second Vote

It will be the second vote on a legalized beer tax this session. But the first on which the ballots of individual members will be recorded. Representative Cullen, leader of the Tammany delegation, was defeated in an attempt to attach this plan to the tax bill by a 216 to 132 vote.

300 Students in Shorthand, Typing, Meet

DES MOINES, May 14 (AP)—Three hundred high school students, representing 55 Iowa schools, competed in the statewide typing and shorthand contest today, sponsored by the Iowa Commercial Contest association.

Winners were announced in two groups, schools and individuals.

In the amateur shorthand class Creston won first, Winterset second, and Central high of Sioux City third.

Central high of Sioux City won first in the novice shorthand class, Shenandoah was second and Abraham Lincoln of Council Bluffs was third.

First place among schools in the amateur speed typing test was won by Ft. Dodge, second by Sigourney and third by Mason City.

In the novice speed typing division Pella was first, Mason City second, and Monona third.

Amateur accuracy typing was won by Abraham Lincoln of Council Bluffs, with Mason City second and Alta third.

In the novice accuracy typing contest Little Rock won first, Pella second, and Abraham Lincoln of Council Bluffs third.

Cadet Regiment Marches in Review Before Governor of State for Fifty-First Time

For the fifty-first time in the history of the University of Iowa, a cadet regiment, marching to the cadence of the university band, passed in review before the governor of the state yesterday afternoon.

Shining brass, clinking saber chains, the rising inflection of commands, the snap of rifle bolts being sent home—all of that picture ended yesterday for the year 1931-32. In that last appearance, Iowa members of the R.O.T.C. earned the commendation of Gov. Dan Turner, of Charles H. Grahl, adjutant general of Iowa and other members of the reviewing staff and the military faculty.

Praise Efficiency

High praise for the efficiency of the regiment was expressed by the state officers and members of the university faculty.

To company G, second battalion infantry, went the highest honor granted in company competition, the guidon streamer that denotes the greatest perfection of any unit of the regiment. In competition for the honor yesterday afternoon was company B of the engineering battalion.

A triple honor went to the win-

Two Boys Discover Convict Make Escape on Reformatory Trip

MARSHALLTOWN, May 13 (AP)—After two hours of freedom, Lloyd Evans, 21, a convict being taken to Anamosa reformatory, was picked up again today by Sheriff Percy Lainson of Council Bluffs.

While Sheriff Lainson was supervising repairs on his auto, Evans escaped. Two small boys discovered him hiding in an abandoned ice wagon.

Evans, whose home is in Cedar Rapids, was sentenced to 10 years for forgery.

100,000 Yell in New York Beer Parade

Mayor Walker Leads Wet Marchers in Revolt

NEW YORK, May 14 (AP)—New York engaged in a giant demonstration for beer today while Mayor James J. Walker looked on approvingly and the head of the W.C.T.U., dismissed it as a "slumming party."

The longest on record with 100,000 marchers in line. It began before noon and promised to keep going until early midnight, with an intermission for supper and whatever else the hot afternoon sun, beating down on huge pictures of overflowing steins, might have suggested.

W.C.T.U. Comments

In her Brooklyn home, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, president of the Women's Christian Temperance union, said simply:

"No indeed, I will not watch the mayor's beer parade because I never go slumming."

Mayor Walker marched with the paraders half way around Central park and then climbed into the back seat of an automobile to review the seemingly endless line.

"Whew," said he. "I wouldn't mind having a glass myself."

A good natured crowd jammed the line of march all around the

Rapids Man Pays $50 to Punch Cop

Charles Smith of Cedar Rapids was fined $50 and costs yesterday by Police Judge Charles L. Zager on a charge of resisting and striking an officer.

Half of the fine was suspended, and Smith was given until today to pay the $25 and costs or start a 30 day sentence in the county jail. He was also charged with disturbing the peace. This case was continued.

Car Registration Down

DES MOINES (AP)—Motor vehicle registrations reported to the secretary of state for the five months ending May 1, showed a decline of 53,529 as compared with the same period last year.

Garner Would Have Hoover Remain Quiet

Accuses President as Destroyer of Public Confidence

WASHINGTON, May 14 (AP)—Speaker Garner today leaned back in his chair, fingered the stub of a cigar, and accused President Hoover of having "done more to prevent the return of public confidence than any other one thing."

The Texan chose his daffy press conference as the occasion for criticizing what he called "the unending stream of statements from the White House."

Wants Hoover Silent

After saying he did not yet want to talk about his plans for relief legislation, the speaker remarked: "The president's statements have done more to keep the people's minds unsettled than any other one thing. If he would refuse to issue a statement for 30 days, I would guarantee that things would thaw out."

Someone asked whether he thought the president was "campaigning."

"I don't say that, but I think it does indicate that he wants to keep his name before the people," Garner answered.

Has Texas Support

The Texan already has been pledged the California votes for the presidential nomination at the Democratic convention, Texas, too will support him. Campaign headquarters

Reed Makes Second Bid Blames Government for Present World Conditions

ST. LOUIS, May 14 (AP)—With a warning against a "present hour" danger of socialism and bolshevism, former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, tonight formally made his second bid for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The veteran Missouri legislator, who was a candidate for the nomination four years ago at Houston, was the guest of the Missouri delegation, which is pledged to his support at the Democratic national convention.

The presidential aspirant directed his oratorical shafts at Bolshevism and Fascism, saying: "admitting that our industry and commerce are sick, I yet assert that the patients cannot be cured by dosing them with poisonous nostrums suggested by the ignorant, who act out of the abundance of their folly, or of the demagogue who is willing to tear down the constitution, if upon its ruins he can erect a little pedestal for himself."

Reed said economic conditions are bad but they are being "vastly exaggerated," and will return to normal "in due course."

Mrs. Shuell, Mother of Iowa Citian, Dies

Mrs. I. J. Shuell, mother of Mrs. E. J. Giblin of Iowa City, died yesterday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. P. P. Bross of Rochester, Minn. Funeral service will be held Tuesday at 9 a. m. in the Immaculate Conception church in Cedar Rapids.

Barred From Coal Fields

LONDON, Ky., (AP)—On the grounds that bloodshed might follow their visit and a mob that could not be controlled would form in Pineville, an American Civil Liberties union delegation was barred from the southeastern Kentucky coal fields today.

Temperature Reaches 91

Iowa City yesterday sweated under a blazing sun and all needless activity was dispensed with as the thermometer registered 91 degrees, the high for the day. At 7 a. m. the temperature was 68 degrees, the increasing temperature being intensified by a hot wind which caused coats to be discarded and shirt sleeves to come into style.

Peru Severs From Mexico

Asks Withdrawal of Foreign Minister, Staff

MEXICO CITY, May 14 (AP)—Foreign Minister Tellez announced tonight that diplomatic relations between Mexico and Peru had been severed.

The Peruvian government, the foreign minister revealed, recently asked Mexico to withdraw Minister Juan B. Cabral and his staff from Lima, saying they no longer were acceptable as diplomatic representatives.

Names Charges

Peru's action, Senor Tellez said, was based on alleged charges made by Haya de la Torre, a Peruvian, that while in Mexico he had used Mexican diplomatic pouches to transfer private correspondence to Peru.

Peru charged that the Mexican mission in Lima had "intervened in internal politics and served plans of communistic elements to disturb the public order."

Order to Withdraw

Orders were sent to the diplomatic mission in Lima today to withdraw from the country and passports were handed to Oscar Barrenechea Y Raygadas, the Peruvian minister here, and to members of his staff.

Winners of Bridge Tournament Given Prizes at Meeting

Winners in the auction and contract bridge tournament of the University club were presented prizes yesterday at the final party at 7:30 p. m. at Iowa Union. Mrs. J. Hubert Scott and Mrs. Edward D. Reuter won first prize in contract, and Mrs. Nelson Conkright and Mrs. John Query in auction.

Second place winners were Mrs. J. Ned Smith and Mrs. Harry Green in contract, and in auction Mrs. Edward P. T. Tyndall and Mrs. Lewis E. Ward.

Seven couples competed in the contract division of the tournament, and six in the auction. Mrs. Ward was in charge.

Report Lindberghs May Go Abroad to Seek Seclusion

HOPEWELL, N. J., May 14 (AP)—In that same hilltop home from which fiendish kidnapers stole Charles August Lindbergh, Jr., the murdered baby's mother lay ill tonight, under the care of a physician.

The strain of 72 days of waiting, and then the tragic news her first-born had been battered to death, had finally depleted her strength to the point where she needed the care of a doctor, as well as the close companionship of her mother.

Late in August she expects another child.

Reports persisted she and her aviator husband will go abroad to remain until after the child is born. One report was that they would leave on June 4 on the Ile De

WHERE EAGLET WAS FOUND

This photograph shows William J. Allen (right), Negro truckman, who found the body of Charles Augustus Lindbergh Jr., pointing out to Orville Wilson the spot in the tangled underbrush of Mount Rose Hill, where he made the discovery that shocked the world. Wilson had been riding on Allen's truck and was the second person to see the body.

Solon Man Missing; Volunteers, Officers Drag Cedar River

John Vitissel, 27, who lives seven miles northeast of Solon with his father, Mike, has been missing since Wednesday evening.

He was last seen fishing in the Cedar river and later, when he did not return home, searchers found a pair of rubber boots full of water on the bank two miles north of Suttill bridge. The boat which he had been using was located a mile downstream.

Sheriff Don McComas and Fire Chief Herman Amish were notified and a gang of 20 volunteers under the direction of Sheriff McComas dragged the river with grappling irons. Little progress could be made because of high water and a swift current. According to the sheriff, watch will be kept for the body but grappling will be discontinued.

Children's Theater Stages "Cinderella"

Cinderella and her coach and four, the prince, fairy godmother and all, blossomed forth in the second production of the season, "Cinderella," in the studio theater at Iowa Union yesterday afternoon. The cast of children theater members was under the direction of Mrs. Margaret Mary Young, who dramatized the fairy story for production.

Fourteen children took part in the production. The cast will go to Davenport next Saturday to broadcast the play over WOC on the Daily Times hour.

Hurley May Visit Iowa

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley may visit two Iowa cities, Council Bluffs and Sioux City, in the course of a tour along the Missouri river next month.

Lindbergh Agent Forecasts Capture of Abductor While Police Study All Information

Relentless Pursuit Outlined With Federal, State Agencies; Take Fingerprints of Negro Truckman

HOPEWELL, N. J., May 14 (AP)—Pages of intriguing details, indicative of even more important information beneath the shield of police secrecy, came to light tonight in the relentless pursuit of the Lindbergh baby killers.

An outline of the two months' negotiations carried on along the Atlantic seaboard with a five-man gang by John Hughes Curtis became public even as another intermediary, the aged Dr. John F. Condon, asserted the child's "kidnaper" was known to him and would be caught.

Federal Men Probe Gang

Counterfeit Operations in Western Iowa Investigated

SIoux CITY, May 14 (AP)—Local operations of an alleged counterfeit gang that worked in western Iowa and adjacent states were being investigated further today by federal and city officials.

R. L. Ferry, 24, former college student, and E. N. Miller, 39, of Cushing, were arraigned today before U. S. Commissioner J. W. Hubbard and pleaded not guilty to counterfeiting charges.

Holstein Men Arrested

Two others, Merle Fellom, 24, and Arnold Jurgenson, 30, both of Holstein, are implicated in the Sioux City operations. They have been turned over to Cherokee county authorities, however, on charges of possessing counterfeit money.

Others connected with the gang are in custody in several cities, while others have already been committed to prisons on charges growing out of the alleged counterfeiting, hijacking and store robbing operations attributed to the gang.

Bondsman Questioned

A. L. Stein, 41, professional bondsman, and John Milton, 36, salesman, who were questioned last night in connection with counterfeiting operations, were released today.

Stein and Milton were arrested by Sioux City police at the request of U. S. secret service men and accused, police said, of manufacturing and passing fraudulent travelers checks.

Although questioned for several hours by city officials and federal operatives, both denied any connection with the gang and would make no admissions concerning the alleged operations.

Coast Killers Get Sentences

Prison Terms Face Mother Slayers in Seattle

SEATTLE, Wash., May 14 (AP)—Dr. Albert C. McKeown, Seattle dentist, and Leslie Barrett, 19, were sentenced to prison today for slaying their mothers.

Dr. McKeown, who beat his 81 year old mother, Mrs. Rhoda McKeown, of Muscatine, Ia., to death in the basement of his home here March 1, was given a 12 to 25 years term by Superior Judge Robert S. Macfarlane on a conviction of second degree murder.

Barrett was sentenced to five to 20 years. He killed his mother, Mrs. Lucy O'Brien, during a drinking party here March 2.

Dr. McKeown, who pleaded temporary insanity, stood silent after Judge Macfarlane pronounced sentence, but his wife cried out: "Oh, God, is there no justice?"

The dentist's family, including his aged father, N. P. McKeown, escorted him back to the county jail. Barrett pleaded with Judge W. J. Steinhert to "be lenient," thereby echoing the recommendation of the jury which convicted him of manslaughter.

Wheat Crop Abandoned

DES MOINES (AP)—Late freezing and water-logged soil have caused abandonment of 13 per cent of Iowa's winter wheat acreage. This is the greatest loss of such acreage since 1919.

WEATHER

IOWA: Local thundershowers and cooler Sunday; Monday mostly cloudy, possibly showers and cooler in east and south portions.

Police Speaks

Then spoke up the police in the person of Col. H. W. Schwarzkopf: "As has been shown in Dr. Condon's own statements he only saw one member of the gang and the description given of this man does not coincide sufficiently closely to any of these described by Mr. Curtis to cause us to draw any conclusions."

Dr. Condon paid a $50,000 ransom for Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh to a man in a Bronx (New York city) cemetery on April 2. Curtis and two Norfolk, Va., associates began their negotiations on March 9 and continued them until Thursday night when the body of the child was found.

As these and other revelations were bared the principals in the tragic drama maintained an outward calm in their hilltop home. Colonel Lindbergh managed a wan smile of greeting when Prosecutor Erwin E. Marshall visited the residence late in the day. Mrs. Lindbergh, an expectant mother who wavered close to collapse last night, regained her quiet demeanor late today.

Boat Trips

The fantastic story of Curtis, supplemented by a sea captain's description of the boat trips he made with Colonel Lindbergh, even as late as the night of the finding of the body, set a flotilla of coast guard craft to scouring an area off Cape May, N. J.

Officials at the Atlantic City, N. J., coast guard station admitted the searching vessels were carrying more than the usual number of firearms but refused to estimate the number of boats engaged in the task.

Federal Help

From the office of the attorney general in Washington, acting by the direction of the president, a formal offer of vast federal assistance was dispatched speedily to Gov. A. Harry Moore. Both Colonel Schwarzkopf and the governor acknowledged the aid of government operatives since the outset of the state inquiry and the latter said he would reply in writing Monday to the renewed offer of cooperation.

The governor indicated he would accept the proposal of the attorney general placing the federal division of the search under J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the department's bureau of the investigation, and would ask that Hoover get in touch with Colonel Schwarzkopf.

Praises Schwarzkopf

The New Jersey chief executive, who personally has followed the baby hunt since the kidnaping on the night of March 1, took occasion to praise the long hours and strenuous efforts devoted to the case by Schwarzkopf.

The unexpected statement of Dr. Condon, made as he left his New York home for a short trip, was: "I know the kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby and he will be caught, I know his name, his nationality, his physical characteristics and all about him."

This was added to a cryptic utterance of the retired school teacher, as he emerged earlier from the quarters of Charles B. McLaughlin, Bronx district attorney, who has announced his intention of initiating a grand jury inquiry in which Dr. Condon would be a witness.

At that time the 72 year old "Jarfis," who treated with the supposed kidnapers partly through newspaper advertisements, said: "Isn't it bad enough to be silent without being indicted for infringing on silence? Anything I might say might add to the discomfort of a bereaved family."

The disclosures of still another intermediary, Morris Rosner, mysterious undercover man, added to the puzzling mass of data filtering through the hands of investigators. Rosner, who appeared for questioning at police headquarters here, revealed that he took one of the ransom notes to New York and supplied a list of all persons to whom he had shown it. He was permitted to leave without surveillance.

Speaker Asks Play Facilities for Children

Playground Promoters Seek Support for Project

Promoters of the Iowa City playground project are in the same situation as was "little Jimmy the sprinter," who when asked why he lagged at the last and lost a race for the first time in his long sprinting career, replied sadly that "everyone shouted, 'come on Johnny,' but no one shouted 'come on Jimmy!'" This was the opinion expressed by Nora Donohoe yesterday before members of the Child Study club at its final meeting of the season at the home of Mrs. Ernest Horn, 832 Kirkwood avenue.

Like Jimmy, she said, the persons who are working to obtain for Iowa City a summer supervised playground facilities can't win their race unless those on the sidelines are backing them. For three years efforts have been made to establish places for children to play under the direction of experienced supervisors; but little progress has been made. This summer it is planned that definite steps shall be taken to secure these playground facilities.

Questionnaires have been sent. Miss Donohoe said, to towns the size of Iowa City in neighboring states requesting information about playground work. Although the results have been somewhat disappointing, the local committee has received encouraging information in that the reports indicated that where playground work has been started, satisfactory progress is being made.

Miss Donohoe's talk followed a buffet luncheon on the lawn at the Horn home. Sixty-six members were present. A business meeting was also held, in which Mrs. Harold H. Anderson, retiring president of the organization, turned over the official gavel to Mrs. Whipple, president-elect, who will assume her duties next fall.

Kate Wickham, historian, and Mrs. P. J. Leinfelder, treasurer, made annual reports. Plans were made for a meeting of the program committee for next year at Iowa Union, Monday at 4:30 p. m. Members are Mrs. William Morgan, chairman, Mrs. Norman Meier, and Mrs. Dean Lierle.

Harbor Light Shows Battle With Tradition

New England Family in Struggle Against Heritage

The struggle of a New England family against its own family traditions—that is the theme of "The Harbor Light," the play of Owen Davis which will have its world premier in the University theater on this campus Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

The play is the first of what the theater director, Prof. E. C. Mable, hopes to make a series of world premier productions of plays by nationally known authors in the University theater. It is one of the first steps taken in the decentralization of the American theater—supplementing the work and position of New York and Broadway.

Struggles of Family
The play deals primarily with the struggle of the Bradford family, who have been sea men and stone masons for many generations. Members of the cast are as follows:

Ether Bradford, Mrs. Mary Barker or Ruth Forest; Aunt Hattie Bradford, Marie Park; Oris, Richard Madsen, G. of New York City; Amy Levenseller Bradford, Margaret Vetch, A3 of Casper, Wyo.; Richard, Arthur Lee Hunt, A2 of Newton; Cora Norton Bradford, Evelyn Bowman, A4 of Marshalltown, or Leona Leff, A4 of Onawa.

Lee in Cast
Ben Hibbard, Warren M. Lee, G of Iowa City; Jario Hibbard, Priscilla Morrison, A4 of Washington; Dr. Ned Alden, Sydney Smith, G of Council Bluffs; Sarah, Josephine McEwen, A4 of Dixon, Ill.; Jennie, Roberta Proud, A1 of Ottumwa; Rodney Pearl, Albert H. Tanswell, A4 of Iowa City; Molly Burpee, Frances Mollenhoff, A4 of Des Moines; Mary Warden, Leona Leff, A4 of Onawa, or Evelyn Bowman, A4 of Marshalltown.

Beer Parade

park and cheered the mayor, cheered the marchers, and cheered everything else.
Blimp Observes Parade
Police observers in a little blimp that rolled over the parade area estimated more than 500,000 persons lined the curbstones.

Walker was smartly saluted by war veterans, coyly smiled at by women marchers and bombarded with cries for beer.
For the most part the mayor felt this was serious business. He nodded gravely when a big Negro stevedore cried plaintively:
"Hey, Jimmie, we is gonna get beer, ain't we?"
To a buxom woman marcher who saluted him in a deep basso with "Hare yuh, Jimmie, old boy, ole boy!" he doffed his derby and smiled.

Many Collapse
Promptly at noon the mayor halted the parade and asked everyone to stand with bowed head for one minute in tribute to Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh.
As John F. Curry, Tammany leader, marched past, Mayor Walker cried:
"Great stuff, John."
To reporters he said:
"From what I can learn, there are 10 persons standing for every one

Students Will Give Weekly Music Recital

SKIPPY—One of a Kind

Garner

ters have been ordered in Chicago, the convention city, although the speaker never has said he would be a candidate.
"The president says, and keeps saying, that confidence is frozen," Garner continued. "Something brought that about. He started issuing statements in 1929 to thaw things out."

Changes Mind
"His statements have been so contrary—he has changed his mind so many times that in my opinion the people not only have lost confidence in his judgment but possibly in his patriotism, except from a selfish standpoint."

"He has done more in the last six months to freeze public confidence than all other forces put together. If he would just take Cal's attitude for 30 days and keep mum, things would thaw out." Garner said the president could not forget the days when he was a "mining promoter selling stocks."

Propaganda
"He has the idea of propaganda so strongly in his mind that he can't let even the department of Justice, which has the case in charge, give out a statement that it is going to help without signing it himself," he added.
"He not only issues daily statements, but shoots both barrels in one day. All I've got to do to be convinced that there is a lack of confidence is pick up this morning's paper: the president says so."

Honorary Chemical Sorority Entertains 11 Guests at Dinner

Ten members of the Ames chapter of Iota Sigma Phi, national honorary chemical sorority, and Virginia Bartow of the University of Illinois, national president, were entertained by the local chapter at a dinner at Iowa Union last night. The chapter will have a picnic breakfast at the Iowa City country club for the guests this morning at 8:45.

Prof. Elbert W. Rockwood of the chemistry department, spoke following the dinner last night on "Student days in Germany." Other speakers were Miss Bartow; Prof. Edward Bartow, head of the chemistry department, her father; Prof. Mate L. Gibbings of the home economics department, president of the local chapter; and Eleanor Winton of the Ames chapter.

The committee for the dinner was Ruth Catherwood of the technical pediatrics department; Mary Alice Grady, M3 of Iowa City, and Mary Atchison. Prof. Kate Daum of the theory and practice department and Miss Grady are in charge of the breakfast this morning.

Theta Phi Alpha Hostess at Spring Rushing Parties

Theta Phi Alpha sorority entertained at two spring rushing parties yesterday. In the afternoon, a "Lavender and old lace" tea was given at the chapter house from 3 to 5 p.m. Baskets of lilacs and tulips were decorations. Jean F. Beyer, A4 of Carroll, presided at the tea table, decorated with lavender and white tapers and tulips.

A "Fan fantasy" radio party was given at the chapter house last night. Decorations were spring flowers and varicolored lighted fans

Chaperons were Mrs. J. M. Furlong, sorority chaperon; Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Daykin, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wiltner.

The committee in charge of the dance was Elizabeth G. Andersch, A2 of Rock Island, Ill., chairman; Muriel Reynolds, A4 of Carroll, and Catherine M. Brenn, A3 of Early.

MADISON, Wis., May 14 (AP)—Wisconsin handed Iowa its first Western conference defeat of the season here today, 2 to 1, in the last half of the ninth that brought vehement protests from the Hawkeyes and sent the crowd of 2,000 onto the field.

The Iowa nine beat the Badgers, 2 to 1, yesterday and appeared on the way to another victory today when they put over a run in the sixth inning.

Olson started the Badger rally in the ninth when he scored on an overthrow on a fielder's choice and Jimmy Smilgoff converted a ground-er into a run. Umpire Schuler overruled the Iowa protests that Smilgoff should not have been permitted to advance three bases.

MINNESOTA 13; CHICAGO 3
MINNEAPOLIS, May 14 (AP)—Minnesota overwhelmed Chicago today, 13 to 3, to split the two game Western conference baseball series.

A big second inning in which Pat Page, Jr., Chicago starting pitcher, was forced from the mound and Roy Henshaw, also was attacked heavily, gave the Gophers eight runs. Marvin Shelo restrained the Maroons from any serious assaults thereafter.

Sportively Speaking

By Bill Rutledge

Athletic relations between Iowa and Wisconsin teams have been colored with disputes and crowd demonstrations more than once in the past.

The Badger-Hawkeye football game in the deep mud of Iowa field in 1928, which the visitors won by 14 to 0, caused unruly Wisconsin followers to tear up things around the gridiron and Iowa City. The next season at Madison a delegation of Iowa fans became rough in their celebration of the Old Gold eleven's 14 to 0 win.

Yesterday afternoon's baseball game at Madison brought vigorous protests from the Hawkeyes on an umpire's decision in the ninth inning with defeat or victory at stake. The argument waxed so hot that the crowd of 2,000 swarmed out on to the diamond.

Bill Ricke, the Hawkeyes' best right-hander, hurled a neat game. He allowed only three hits and was in no way responsible for the 2 to 1 setback that sent the Iowans sliding out of first place in the Big Ten standings. The Hawkeyes were effective at bat, outhitting the Badgers by 7 to 3; it was just a bad break in the ninth that brought the loss.

The Cubs have been clicking right along in front of the National league pack for 10 days now. The rookies who had been labelled weak hitters have been clouting the ball around merrily—with special reference to Shortstop Bill Jurges.

The one thing that is most likely to slow the Cubs down is a slump on the mound staff. It was believed that with the insertion of Burleigh Grimes to a regular place on the pitching corps the Bruins would have been an invincible hurling crew. Yesterday Old Burleigh tripped a little and then Charley Root stepped in to trip a little more. Grimes is a valuable man on the Cubs staff if for no other reason than that he can't pitch against them.

Brandt Halts Bruin's Rally in 9th Inning

Root Relieves Grimes With Score Tied, 5 Apiece

CHICAGO, May 14 (AP)—"Dutch" Brandt stepped in with a brand of super-relief pitching today to halt a cub rally and save a 7 to 6 victory for the Boston Braves.

The triumph pushed the Braves to within two games of the pace setting Cubs in the National league race.

The Braves broke a 5-all deadlock at the expense of Charley Root, who had relieved Burleigh Grimes at the start of the ninth inning. A home run by Bill Urbanski, a hit and stolen base by Wally Berger and a long drive to center by Schulermerich, which scored Berger figured in the rally.

The Cubs came from behind twice in the game, which saw a parade of five Boston and two Cub pitchers. The victory gave the Braves the series two games to one.

Cards Beat Phils Third Straight, 7-6

ST. LOUIS, May 14 (AP)—Dizzy Dean won his third pitching victory out of four starts this season as the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Philadelphia Nationals 7 to 6 to make a clean sweep of a three-game series.

Dean allowed 11 safeties, being replaced by Johnson in the eighth when the Cards had a two-run lead.

Klein opened the scoring for the visitors by batting a homer.

Former Dodgers Beat Brooklyn 5-3

CINCINNATI, May 14 (AP)—Former Brooklyn players enabled the Cincinnati Reds to salvage the final game of the series of three with the Dodgers as they set the pace for a 5 to 3 victory today. Ernie Lombardi made a double and two singles and Babe Herman doubled in the seventh to send Gratham home with the run that put Cincinnati ahead to stay. Glenn Wright had tied the score with a homer with one on in the sixth.

Luther Piles Up 76 Points in Triangular Meet; LaCrosse 2nd

DECORAH, May 14 (AP)—The Luther college track team piled up 76 points to win its annual triangular track meet today with LaCrosse, Wis., Normal and Columbia. The Wisconsin school finished second with 41 points and the Dubuque team was third with 23.

Belding of Luther was the outstanding performer, leading the field with 20 1-4 points. The Norwegian won first in the century, furlong and both hurdles and ran in the half mile relay.

Coaches to Discuss Athletic Prospects at P.E.P. Meeting

Seeking to let Iowa men know just how Iowa stands in athletics, and other activities and what prospects are for next year, Pi Epsilon Pi, national pep fraternity has arranged a meeting to be held in the main lounge of Iowa Union Tuesday night at 7:30.

Ossie Solem, head football coach, Rollie Williams, head basketball coach, George Bresnahan, head track coach, and Dave Armbruster, head swimming coach are the speakers on the program. Following the speeches an open forum will be held, in which everyone will have a chance to talk.

The meeting will be open to every-one interested in the university and athletics.

Irish Second in Davenport Cinder Meet

(Special to The Daily Iowan)
DAVENPORT, May 14—St. Patrick's high school of Iowa City took five firsts this afternoon to place second in the St. Ambrose academy invitational track meet here, with a total of 38 points.

St. Ambrose won the meet with 101 points, while St. Matthias, of Muscatine, and Corpus Christi of Galesburg, Ill., scored 15 and 2 1-2 respectively to place third and fourth.

Megan was high point man for the St. Patrick's team winning the 220 yard hurdles in 28.5 seconds, the javelin throw with a cast of 125 feet, and placing second in the discus, and third in the 120 yard high hurdles.

Other first place winners on the Irish team were Wetrich, who took the mile run with a time of 5:14 and also placed fourth in the high jump; Burns, in the 880 yard run, with a time of 2:17; and Emanuel who put the shot 38 feet, 3 inches, to take the event.

The St. Patrick's 880 yard relay team also placed second, while additional points were scored by McNamara, who took second in the 220 yard dash; Gutierrez, who came in third in the mile run and tied for third in the pole vault; and Duane, who tied for fourth in the 440 yard run.

Although the plans of the Irish team for the future are somewhat indefinite, it was intimated that they might be included in the St. Ambrose-University high meet at Iowa City next Friday. Both St. Patrick's and University high are willing, and only the consent of the Davenport school is needed to clinch the matter.

Phillips Sets 440 Record at Davenport

Four U. Hi Tracksters Qualify for Meet at Ames

By HARRY BURRELL
University high returned from the district track meet at Davenport yesterday with fourth place, four qualifiers for the finals, and a new track record.

Van Phillips, Joe Cannon, Bill Ohlmacher, and Bob McCloy turned in the best performances of their careers to give the local school 38 1-2 points, 2 1-2 points behind Muscatine team. Davenport's colorless and methodical crew counted 91 1-2 to top Clinton's 54.

Phillips cracked the track and district mark in the 440 when he ran away from the field in a 5:16 race. He finished more than 15 yards ahead of Buckner of Davenport. The University high junior also won the half mile run with a time of 2:11, and placed second in the javelin with a toss of 123 feet.

Great 220 Sprint
The half mile victory came only after a great sprint over the last 220 yards. After leading all the way, Phillips fell back to fifth place in the back stretch and only a remarkable 25 second furlong saved him from defeat.

Capt. Joe Cannon, whose courage apparently knows no limit, for the third straight week cut down his time for the mile. Hooking up with King, Little Six mile champ, he cut six seconds off his best mark to finish a yard behind the Musky Miller. His time was 4:47, six-tenths slower than the winning time.

Ohlmacher Surprise
Bill Ohlmacher, almost accounted for an upset when he placed second to Nelson of Clinton in the broad jump. Ohlmacher jumped 21 feet, 2 1-2 inches and led until Nelson added 6 1-2 inches to the jump. This exceeded Ohlmacher's best previous jump by one foot. He also tied for fourth in the high jump.

A vault of 10 feet, 6 inches qualified Bob McCloy for the state finals at Ames next Saturday. He also placed fifth in the low hurdles.

Homer Dill threw the discus 110 feet for a third place in the event; Fred Moore ran a .56 quarter to finish fourth; the mile relay team placed fourth; and the half mile relay finished fifth to complete the University high scoring.

Hawk Tennis Team Loses to Minnesota

Gophers Sweep Every Match to Attain 6-0 Win

By KEN ALLARD
Minnesota tennis men methodically pounded out a smashing victory over the Iowa squad here yesterday with a 6 to 0 score.

Playing close, tight tennis, the Gophers steadily amassed the winning points. A general below-par performance was evident in the number one doubles event. While erratic, unsteady playing was emphasized to a marked degree in the Old Gold squad, the Gophers played an unexciting, steady, pounding game.

Capt. Ron Reddig started the day in fine shape against Britz in the singles, but before the first set had progressed very far it was apparent that he was no match for his opponent; in the second set he rallied and gave a better account of himself, but could not match the steady drives of the Gopher first stroker.

Wally Theiss was faced with the same brand of smashing tennis which defeated Reddig, and dropped the match with only four games to his credit. John Beckner played the only good match of the day, losing both sets with a 7-5 score. Beckner was steady, but lacked the control which his rival possessed.

John Kinnemann, losing the first set, forced the play in the second round and managed to hold off the match point for several additional games, but finally gave way to an 11-9 count.

In the number one doubles match, Reddig and Beckner were not able to cope with the terrific drives of the Minnesota netsters, and made several errors which resulted in points for the opposing team.

Theiss and Kinnemann played a defensive game almost exclusively, and were unable to match the accurate, deliberate strokes of the Gophers. The number two doubles proved to be more even than the number one match, with Theiss and Kinnemann garnering eight games.

Summaries:
Singles: Britz (M) defeated Reddig (I) 6-1, 6-3; Scherer (M) defeated Theiss (I) 6-2, 6-8; Stein (M) defeated Beckner (I) 7-5, 7-5; Johnston (M) defeated Kinnemann (I) 6-2, 11-9.

Doubles: Britz and Scherer (M) defeated Reddig and Beckner (I) 6-2, 6-0; Stein and Johnston (M) defeated Theiss and Kinnemann (I) 6-4, 3-4.

Cross Country Club to Initiate New Men at Breakfast Today

The Iowa cross country club will meet at Iowa Union this morning at 8:30 for breakfast and for the purpose of initiating new members.

The club, which has as a prerequisite to entrance, the registering of a certain time or better over a specified distance, holds meetings and moving pictures throughout the year in order to stimulate an interest in long distance running. Eric Gunderson, as president, will preside at the meeting this morning.

Iowa State Golfers Lose to Gophers 16-5

AMES, May 14 (AP)—University of Minnesota golfers mastered the Iowa State team today, 16 to 5. The Gophers won four singles matches and one doubles, and the other matches were tied. Larson of Minnesota, was low medal scorer with a card of 73.

Iowa City Firemen Answer 2 Alarms

Iowa City firemen were called to the Quality Quick Lunch, 107 E. Washington street, yesterday at 3:45 p.m. to put out a fire which started on the roof in a piece of oil-soaked gunny sack. According to Fire Chief Herman Amish, it was apparently started by rays of the sun which heated the tin roof on which the sack lay. No damage resulted from the blaze.

The firemen were also called at 8:30 p.m. Friday, to the corner of Brown and Governor streets to extinguish a fire which started in a garbage dump. The fire, which had gained considerable headway, was put out after a two hour fight.

Burgoo King Triumphs in Pimlico Race

BALTIMORE, Md., May 14 (AP)—Burgoo King, a royally bred son of the blue grass, moved into the select circle of great thoroughbreds as he capped his Kentucky Derby victory with a driving triumph in the forty-second running of the Preakness at Pimlico today.

Coming from behind to nab the decision in the closing strides, the E. R. Bradley colt equaled the performances of the mighty Sir Barton and the great Gallant Fox, heretofore the only two horses that have won both the Derby and the Preakness.

The King, meeting eight crack eastern three year olds, was a great horse in his victory. Running over a track at least a second slow, he came within one and four-fifths seconds of equalling the track record as he reeled off the one and sixteenth miles in 1:59 4-5.

A crowd of 40,000, said to be the largest in the history of the classic, saw the chestnut son of Bubbling Over edge out Mrs. Louis G. Kaufman's Tick On, the favorite, and Walter M. Jeffords Boatswain, an outsider, in the final stride.

The victory, carrying a purse of $50,375, boosted the King's total earnings in eight days to $102,590.

Earle Sande, seeking his second Preakness victory with Walter J. Salmon's Mad Pursuit, finished fourth, four lengths back of the three leaders. Strung out to the rear in order were War Hero, Gusto, which ran coupled as an entry with Tick On, Daisaburo, Curacao and Lucky Tom.

Coe Wins in Triangle Meet at Mt. Vernon

MT. VERNON, May 14 (AP)—In a series of record smashing events, the Coe college track and field athletes won a double victory today from varsity and freshman teams representing Cornell college and Iowa State Teachers.

The Kohawks scored 52 points against 44 for the Teachers and 39 for Cornell in the varsity meet, and 60 points in the freshman meet to Cornell's 49 and the Teachers' 26.

Of 11 new varsity meet records established today, Coe athletes set six of them, Cornell three and Teachers college two.

Sebern of Coe, was the individual star with new marks in the hurdle events, another first in the high jump, a third in the 100 yard dash and a place on the winning relay combination.

Little Hawk Netsters Nip Grinnell, 4-3

Iowa City high school tennis aspirants scored another victory yesterday as they defeated Grinnell high at Grinnell 4 to 3. Four singles and three doubles sets were played each being closely contested.

Paul Herd, Donald Chapman, Gilbert Ellis, Edward Lambert, and Sidell Ernsland represented the Little Hawks.

Ellis and Ernsland will go to the state net meet at Ames May 21 by virtue of their victory in the district meet doubles matches held here last week.

State Teachers Lose, 7-2, to Michigan Team

CEDAR FALLS, May 14 (AP)—Michigan State Normal won its eighth baseball decision in nine starts by defeating Iowa State Teachers today, 7 to 2. Four double plays, three of them by the Teachers, featured the game. Bailey hit a home run for the winners.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
Michigan Normal 7 12 1
Iowa Teachers 2 6 4

Brown Shuts Out Red Sox by 6 to 4

BOSTON, May 14 (AP)—While Clint Brown was pitching four hit ball, the Cleveland Indians pounded Danny MacFayden in two innings for a 6 to 0 victory over the Red Sox today. It was the first shut out scored by the Indians this season.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
Cleveland 003 000 000—6 11 0
Boston 000 000 000—0 4 0
Batteries—Brown and Sewell; MacFayden, Wieland, Michaels and Tate.

Pipgras Fills Bases in Ninth; Red Kress Flies Out

NEW YORK, May 14 (AP)—George Pipgras, veteran Yankee hurler pitched his second shutout in a row today, blanking the Chicago White Sox, 6 to 0, in the only game of the series the weather let the teams play.

It was a brilliant performance that carried Pipgras' streak to 19 scoreless innings and the Yankees to their fifth straight victory. Until two were out in the ninth, the Sox got only two hits both in the fourth inning. Then Pipgras eased up, gave two hits and walked a man to fill the bases. In that tough spot he forced Red Kress, moved to the cleanup position for Chicago, to fly out and end the game.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
Chicago 000 000 000—0 4 1
New York 100 000 41—6 9 1
Batteries—Jones and Grube; Pipgras and Dickey.

Senators Rally to Beat Tigers 6 to 4

WASHINGTON, May 14 (AP)—A big eighth inning gave the Washington Senators a 6 to 4 win today over the Detroit Tigers and a clean sweep of an abbreviated series.

George Uhle held the Nationals to three hits and two runs in the first seven innings. But in the eighth he blew up, giving three walks and two singles by Myer and Cronin. Buddy Myer hit a homer in the third.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
Detroit 102 010 009—4
Washington 101 000 04—6
Batteries—Uhle, Hogsett and Ruel; Brown, Burke, Mabrerry and Berg.

A's Trim Browns, 3-0; Grove Pitches

PHILADELPHIA, May 14 (AP)—The Athletics won their third straight victory and Lefty Grove his second successive shut out today when they blanked the St. Louis Browns, 3 to 0.

Grove held the Browns to four hits and struck out 10, piling up seven strike outs in the first four innings.

Jimmy Foxx hit his eighth home run of the season, driving it high over the roof of the left field pavilion. Mickey Cochrane hit his seventh home run of the year in the third inning.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
St. Louis 000 000 000—0 4 0
Philadelphia 101 001 00—3 7 0
Batteries—Hadley, Herbert and Ferrell; Grove and Cochrane.

Miss Kidwell is a coed at the University of Missouri.

Professor Writes Article of Introduction in Law Review

"A Contemporary of Langdell on the Study of Cases" is the introduction written by Prof. Percy Bordwell of the college of law to William G. Hammond's "Plan for a Text-Book," which will appear in the May issue of Iowa Law Review.

This plan for a textbook of law is an extract from the journal of William G. Hammond, former chancellor of the college of law and author of the "Hammond Papers."

Compares to Hammond
In his introduction Professor Bordwell compares the plan of Hammond, of which the outstanding feature is the stress laid upon the study of cases, to that of Langdell of Harvard, who has been credited with launching the present system of case study now widely used in law schools.

"Langdell tells us that he had entered on his duties 'with a settled conviction that law could only be taught or learned effectively by means of cases in some form,'" says Professor Bordwell. "Here he was met by what seemed to be an insuperable difficulty, namely, the want of books; for though it might be practicable, in case of private pupils having free access to a complete library, to refer them directly to the books of reports, such a course was quite out of the question with a large class, all of whom would want the same books at the same time."

Case-Book Answers
"It would be impossible for a student to economize his time or work to the best advantage, and he would be liable to be constantly haunted by the apprehension that he was spending time, labor, and money studying cases which would be inaccessible to him in after life." In other words, the case-book was the answer to large classes and not unlimited library facilities.

That Hammond like Langdell, believed the casebook was the "practical device to make possible the study of law through the cases which seemed the true foundation" is shown in his "Plan for a Text-Book" written in his journal in 1869, one year before Langdell was appointed dean of the Harvard law school.

Lentz Predicts Job Scarcity, Many Old Students to Return

Arthur Lentz, manager of the student employment service, will begin interviewing tomorrow between 300 and 400 students desiring jobs for the summer or the next school year.

A new plan is being carried this year whereby students who have successfully preformed their work this year will, with the recommendation of the department heads under whom they worked, be allowed to apply now for work next fall. Many students have already taken advantage of this opportunity.

Toward Intelligent Voting

DEMOCRACY is desirable. . . So is prosperity. . . And economy in government. . . There are 8,000,000 unemployed in the United States. . . That is a bad situation. . . Bad situations ought to be improved. . . Therefore the people should take the government in hand (which, being freely translated, means vote for your speaker in the June primary and the November election).

Such immortal truths as would be expected fell on the ears of the handful of citizens who attended Friday night's presentation of platforms put forth by seven candidates for the nation's legislature.

But there was much more than drivel. Candidates expressed opinions and policies on concrete issues, either in 10 minute talks or in reply to questions from the audience. The listeners had an opportunity to sift from the lot those whose stand seemed best, as well as those whose speaking appearance said most for ability to represent Iowa and the first district in congress.

The merger attendance—much smaller than for many a Baconian lecture in the same auditorium, on questions of more academic and less civic nature—is no reflection on the organization under whose auspices the program was presented. The opportunity was provided for the civic minded.

So if the decrepit, bearded proposition is brought forth that as many as possible should vote, the Iowa City League of Women Voters need not feel negligent for not concentrating on getting out the vote. That is more commonly the business of organizations with an axe to grind. The local group has an idea that there are more important things on election day than how long the ballot ester has had his second teeth and how many noses, red or otherwise, are counted on a prohibition referendum.

When this country, with twice the population of Germany, musters about the same size vote, no doubt the apathy thus indicated is bad. But it may be a little less important that the ballots cast should greatly exceed 36,000,000 than that those voting should know the difference between a Republican and a Democrat—or, in this state, to simplify the matter, the difference between a Republican and Senator Brookhart. Any activity toward discrimination by the electorate deserves the utmost in praise.

Making Kentucky Happy

THE TWO leading horse races of the year are history, and Burgoe King's victory in the Pimlico Preakness yesterday convinced a sporting world that his decisive victory over the nation's favorites in the Kentucky Derby the previous week had by no means been an upset.

Nor is Burgoe King just another winning horse. The recent popularity of the Bradley horse is merely a continuation of the picturesque and romantic history of that stable. Burgoe King is the son of Bubbling Over, a previous Kentucky Derby winner, and his victory in the last Derby marks the second time in history that a son of a Derby winner has carried on the family tradition.

Burgoe King's owner, E. R. Bradley, has not only spent thousands of dollars in producing a line of prominent horses but has established himself as one of the leading philanthropists in the state of Kentucky. Maybe that explains why a Bradley horse always has the full backing of all Kentucky's sports fans. Fans will be quick to recognize the names of some of the famous Bradley horses, all of which begin with "B," such as Behave Yourself and Black Servant who finished first and second in a previous derby.

All the sports world loves a good sport. Bradley is that kind of a sportsman.

Do You "Know Iowa"?

BEFORE "Know Iowa" week comes to its close, it might be timely to take inventory of some of the things which make this state one to be proud of and to check up on general knowledge of its assets.

Did you know:

That Iowa is first in value of corn, oats, horses, hogs, and poultry?

That Iowa leads in value of farm land and buildings?

That Iowa's soil produces more wealth each year than all the gold and silver mines of the world?

That Iowa is first in the percentage of farm land improved?

That the per capita wealth in Iowa is $4,617? Compare that with $3,062 per capita for the rest of the United States.

That no single point in the state is more than 12 miles from a railroad?

That Iowa's 691,000 licensed automobiles are a larger number than any other state in the country?

That these cars run on 20,000 miles of surfaced roads, a total exceeded by only three states?

That Iowa's factories have an annual output of more than $745,000,000 and more than $450,000,000 invested in plants and machinery?

Iowa may be only sixteenth in population and twenty-third in size, but there is much stamina yet untried in that populace, and untold resource in that area.

There are many more "firsts" and "leads" in Iowa to be added to this list of statistics. This is only a start. "See Iowa" and then tell the rest of the world that Iowa is the "finest state in the Union!" Make "Know Iowa week" a "Boost Iowa" campaign!

Washington Wins First Place

Original convictions have been vindicated on a little matter pertaining to George Washington and it will not be necessary now to make a hasty cancellation of remaining bicentennial programs. It had been generally understood that Washington was the first president of the United States, but competition for that honor became so keen that the position he had held in history seemed to be menaced. Claims were advanced for Thomas McKean, who had been one of the presidents of the continental congress, and for John Hanson, who was the first president of congress after the articles of confederation had become effective in 1781.

The issue went to the state department, whose ruling is decisive and, presumably, final. It is that "George Washington was the first president of the United States of America," under the constitution framed in 1787, and later adopted, which specifically provides for that office.

Now that momentous question is settled, perhaps the state department will rule on whether Senator David R. Atchison of Missouri really was president for one day, March 4, 1849.

TODAY'S TOPICS

By FRANK JAFFE

Speaker John Nance Garner leaned back in his legislative chair yesterday and let the world know that he thought President Hoover had "done more to prevent the return of public confidence than any other one thing." And all because Hoover has been seeing his real duty to the people in the last few weeks, that of trying to get the legislature to do something effective in a hurry.

In criticizing the "unending stream of statements from the White House," Garner pointed out that they have kept the people's minds unsettled, if such a thing were possible, than anything else. And he added gently: "If he (the president) would refuse to issue a statement for 30 days, I would guarantee things would thaw out."

By "thawing out" Garner probably meant that congress will have limbered up sufficiently by that time from its period of inactivity, from the refter standpoint, to really put something across.

Perhaps Hoover does remember, as the speaker of the house claims, the days when he was a "mining promoter selling stocks," but if it takes the same sort of perseverance to get congress out of the mud, then Hoover deserves the credit for being resourceful, at least.

Perhaps Garner of Texas is of the opinion that since nothing can be accomplished anyway, he might as well join with the rest of his Democratic presidential candidate colleagues in singing the line that it's the other fellow who's singing it. But Garner seems to have convinced himself that Hoover is working against the house and even goes so far as to doubt the chief executive's patriotism.

If there were no point to Hoover's recent messages to congress one might side with Garner against the president. But from all indications, there has been little cooperation, little non-partisan attitude, few attributes of a really active, responsible representative body. On the other hand, however, all indications point to Hoover's messages and urgent appeals for economy and relief legislation as having done some good.

Yesterday, even while Garner was speaking, off the floor, a dominant bi-partisan majority worked in the senate to effect a compromise relief program, along the lines—but not too much—of President Hoover's second omnibus plan. In fact, work progressed so satisfactorily from an administration point of view, that a vote is expected on the measure tomorrow—the first major test of the relief legislation in the senate.

The traditional questionnaire of the senior class at Columbia university resulted in some unusual answers. First on the list of those most likely to succeed was Reed Harris, recently ousted student editor of the Columbia Spectator. He also received first mention as "headwild and chivalrous assertionist," whatever that may mean, because of his attacks on athletic departments in general and Columbia's athletic situation in particular. Harris was second as "disputant" and second as having done the most for Columbia, as well as first for having done Columbia the most.

Columbia students proved themselves capable literati in selecting as favorite novel Willa Cather's "Shadows on the Rocks," and as favorite non-fiction "Autobiography of Lincoln Steffens." "Of Thee I Sing," first musical comedy ever to win the Pulitzer play prize, however, was rated only second best, while "The Band Wagon" took the highest honors.

Other selections: favorite dessert, ice cream, apple pie; favorite topic of conversation, sex (no second choice); favorite sport, (to play) tennis, (to watch) football; favorite card game, bridge (official system). It all just goes to show that Columbia is no breeding place of radicalism. The ice cream and apple pie, if nothing else, proves that the university is ultra-conservative. Just one other thing might have been included to clinch the point. If the questionnaire had asked: "What food do you dislike most?" and a majority had replied: "Spinach," the survey would have been complete and most convincing.

OFFICIAL DAILY BULLETIN

All notices for the official daily bulletin must be in the hands of the managing editor of The Daily Iowan by 4 p.m. Items for the university calendar must be reported at the president's office, Old Capitol, as far as possible in advance of the event. No notices will be accepted unless typed or legibly written. Notices will not be accepted by telephone.

EXAMINATION SCHEDULE

Second Semester, 1931-1932
 Wednesday, May 25, 8 a.m. to Thursday, June 2, 4 p.m.

The regular program of class work will be suspended, and the following semester-examination program substituted for it. Classes will meet for examination in the rooms in which they have been regularly meeting (except classes in SPECIAL GROUPS A, B, C, D and E, as shown in the form below; and Speech (2), (2), and (4) as shown at "N.B." below).

The Program Committee directs the attention of both students, and instructors and professors, to the regulation that there is to be no deviation, in the case of any examination, from this schedule,—except as authorized by the Committee on Admission and Classification, on the student's written petition, filed in ample time, supported by the recommendation of the department concerned,—to provide relief from an excessive number of examinations within a single day. Deviation for the purpose of getting through earlier will not be permitted.

In the case of conflicts (within the SPECIAL GROUPS A, B, C, D and E) the schedule itself, as presented below, provides a general method of making adjustments.

All classes whose first weekly meetings have occurred as indicated in the rectangles below, meet for examination during the periods noted at the tops of these three columns, and on the days noted in the rectangles directly opposite at the left of the double, vertical line.

Examination Period	8-10 A.M.	10-12 A.M.	2-4 P.M.
Wednesday, May 25	Monday at 8 (Except those in SPECIAL GROUPS A, B, C, D and E.)	All sections of: Aect. (3) Geol. (2) Sociol. (2) Math. (6) Bot. (2) Physics (2H) Chem. (2) Physics (2) (except pre-medicals (For rooms see Department Bulletin Boards))	Tuesday at 9 (Except those in SPECIAL GROUPS A, B, C, D and E.)
Thursday, May 26	Monday at 9 (Except those in SPECIAL GROUPS A, B, C, D and E.)	SPECIAL GROUP B—All sections of: English (2), (2) (For rooms see Department Bulletin Boards)	Tuesday at 8 (Except those in SPECIAL GROUPS A, B, C, D and E.)
Friday, May 27	Monday at 10 (Except those in SPECIAL GROUPS A, B, C, D and E.)	SPECIAL GROUP C—All sections of: Chem. (2) (Pre-medicals) Econ. (2) Phil. (2) Econ. (4) Pol. sci. (2) (For rooms see Department Bulletin Boards)	Tuesday at 11 (Except those in SPECIAL GROUPS A, B, C, D and E.)
Saturday, May 28	Monday at 11 (Except those in SPECIAL GROUPS A, B, C, D and E.)	SPECIAL GROUP D—All sections of: French (2), (2) French (4), (4) (For rooms see Department Bulletin Boards)	Tuesday at 10 (Except those in SPECIAL GROUPS A, B, C, D and E.)
Sunday, May 29	Monday at 1 (Except those in SPECIAL GROUPS A, B, C, D and E.)	SPECIAL GROUP E—All sections of: German (2) Spanish (2), (2) (For rooms see Department Bulletin Boards)	Tuesday at 2 (Except those in SPECIAL GROUPS A, B, C, D and E.)
Monday, June 1	Monday at 2 (Except those in SPECIAL GROUPS A, B, C, D and E.)	Tuesday at 3 (Except those in SPECIAL GROUPS A, B, C, D and E.)	Tuesday at 1 (Except those in SPECIAL GROUPS A, B, C, D and E.)
Tuesday, June 2	Monday at 3 (Except those in SPECIAL GROUPS A, B, C, D and E.)	Tuesday at 4 (Except those in SPECIAL GROUPS A, B, C, D and E.)

CONFLICTS: In case of conflicting examinations the student should report to the instructor in charge of the first of the two conflicting subjects as listed (Read by columns, and alphabetically) within the particular group, who will arrange a special examination. Report to him, or her, not later than regular class hour on May 9 and 10.

The first meeting of the class means the first lecture or recitation period in courses having both lectures and recitations, and laboratory periods or, in the case of courses involving only laboratory periods, the first clock-hour of the first weekly meeting. For example, chemistry 22 meets for lectures T Th S at 8. The first regular meeting is, consequently, Tuesday at 8,—and the class will meet for examination Thursday, May 26, 2 p.m., according to the tabular form above. Again, physics 126 meets twice each week, T F, for a three-hour laboratory exercise, 1-4. The period for the examination is, therefore, Wednesday, June 1, 2 p.m.

N.B. All sections of freshman speech (2), (2), and (4) will meet in the buildings and rooms and on the days and at the periods designated below:

"ODD" classes,—namely those whose first or only weekly meetings occur on Wednesdays, Thursdays, Fridays, or Saturdays, or which meet "as arranged," will be assigned for examination, as announced to each such class by the instructor in charge of the class, at one or another of the following periods:

1. From 4 to 6 on any day from May 25 to June 2, inclusive.
2. Any one of the examination periods assigned, as indicated above, for the examinations in the SPECIAL GROUPS, A, B, C, D and E, since for such "odd" classes, these five examination periods will be found quite available.

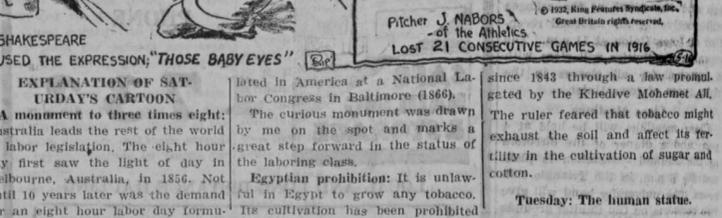

In connection with any such announcement it would doubtless be well for the instructor making the announcement to ascertain whether any member of his class is already under appointment for examination in some other class for the proposed period. To be sure, it is possible to have examinations in more than one class at any of these times,—if no student is a member of more than one of these classes.

According to one clause in the formal faculty action providing for a special semester-examination program, "the instructor may use the examination period as he sees fit provided he holds the class for the full period. He may have an oral or a written examination, or both, or neither. He may continue regular work or he may use the time for review, or for any phase of his work which may seem to him desirable at this time."

According to another faculty regulation, which is on record as adopted by the faculty, a student absent from the final examination should be reported "Abs.," unless the instructor recognizes that his work up to this examination has been a failure, in which case the final report should be "Fd.,"—even though the student may have been absent from the final examination. No examination should be given, subsequently, to such a student until after the absence has been excused by the Committee on Admission and Classification, as shown by a partially filled special report card, signed by the Secretary of the Committee, as indicating that the absence has been excused and that the student is authorized, subject to the consent and at the convenience of the instructor concerned, to take the final examination.

Behind the Scenes in Hollywood

By HARRISON CABROLL

Despite dancing until dawn, Hollywood turned out en masse for Colleen Moore's tea Sunday afternoon. Colleen's home remains one of the most beautiful in the film colony. And she and Al Scott know how to give a party. You'd have been surprised to see Jean Harlow, a siren to you, spend most of the afternoon talking to a gentle-looking old lady. Even the stars stare at Lilyan Tashman's clothes. For the tea, Lilyan wore a dark blue tulle suit with long coat pinched in at the waist with brass clips in front and at the back. Her hat was dark blue crepe with a white straw brim that swoops over one eye and ear, permitting the entire right side of the hair to show. Culinary note: try potato chips dunked in a paste of cream cheese, cream, chives, and onion juice.

On to the Frolics to find still more stars. Helen Twelvetrees, Frank Woody, Helena's mother, were dancing with Lina Basquette. . . . In one party. . . . W. S. Van Dyke

Bert Wheeler stagging, but managing a dance now and then. . . . Home towards dawn and with a Monday to look forward to. Never again! . . . Oh yeah?

Bearing out their plans for George Raft, Paramount will team the former boxer, and dancer with Carole Lombard in the Vivia Delmar story "Pick-Up." This will be the pair's second picture together, work being done to start any day now on "Hot Saturday."

Raft is the actor who made such a hit as the gang chief's lieutenant in "Scarface." In "Pick-Up," he'll play a cab driver, who makes a fortune and assays the society racket.

YOUR DAILY GOSSIP

Will Mahoney, who makes a sensational hit in the prologue at the Chinese, turned down $5,000 a week at the Palace to come out here. . . . Hollywood is razzing Sid Grauman for the very flat joke of leading the audience to expect that Greta Garbo would appear, and then bringing out Wallie Beery dressed up in women's clothes. Incidentally, Wallie was a female impersonator at one time—played a Swedish washerwoman. . . . Jean Harlow, original platinum blonde, has a new hair-shade, dark molasses taffy. Or was it a wig? She was queried to the premiere by Paul ("Big Brother") Bern. . . . Marlene Dietrich came with her husband. . . . Met Heddah Hopper—standing in a doorway, while the crowd almost pushed her off her feet. "Isn't this swell?" says she. "I'm getting all my hips knocked off." . . . Even honest wags—disagree—tho' chaplain autograph seeker swore that Greta Garbo ran into the theater, hatless and wearing a red cape. Yet the fellow who takes pictures for the fan magazines insists she was wearing a dark overcoat and a best. Fact is she wasn't there at all. . . . Other tip to stargazers: after the Chinese premieres, many of the stars go to the Blossom Room at the Roosevelt hotel, Dropped in a minute and Joe Mann miraculously produced me a good table. Lewis Stone, who is seen but rarely in bright light places, was there. . . . Helen Twelvetrees had another party. Dolores Costello, a sweet person, stayed for a few minutes. . . . Jack Oakie was dancing with his ma. . . . Bert Wheeler, with his chin over a girl's shoulder, whistling as he danced. . . . Those two couples whom I recognized as dress extras, were having the best time. . . . Some meanie sent the radio officers to quiet down the car-caller at the Chinese.

SYNOPSIS

Pretty Mary Kennedy breaks her engagement to elderly Buck Landers, wealthy sports promoter, when she falls in love with his young ward, Steve Moore. Landers tries to force Mary to marry him by kidnapping Steve and threatening her, unless she does. He gives Mary twenty-four hours to decide. She enlists the aid of Carlotta, Landers' former sweetheart, who suggests that a flirtation with Bat, Landers' henchman, may reveal Steve's whereabouts. Carlotta and Mary go to see Landers and Carlotta warns him against the kidnapping. Landers orders her out. Later, Mary discovers she has Carlotta's bag by mistake. It contains an automatic. Mary encourages Bat, flattered by her attentions, to take Mary to lunch. She hopes the liquor will make him talk. She learns Steve's whereabouts and goes there alone. In a dingy flat, Mary is confronted by two thugs who deny all knowledge of Steve.

CHAPTER XXX.

MARY was silent. Gradually it was beginning to dawn upon her that she had projected herself into a situation that might prove too much for her resources. Something of her impetuosity began to fade and she realized tardily that she should have sought help. Any policeman would have aided her.

"I'll tell you what we'll do," said Maxie. "We'll telephone Buck and see what he says. You don't need to worry about anything, lady—we know you're aces with Buck, and we'll take awful good care of you."

The younger man, suddenly, seemed to regret his previous insolence. "That's right, don't mind our kidding. Buck himself understands it. It's all fun, see?"

Maxie protested, tried, now that it was too late, to leave the room, but Maxie would not allow the door to be unlocked. He took her by the arm and led her to another room which proved to be a kitchen. She realized the futility of struggling with him.

"You'll be all right here while we phone Buck," he said, with an effort at politeness. "Don't get worried—everything is going to be all right."

He went back into the other room and closed the door behind him. She examined the room but there was no way of escape, unless she chose to leap out of a third story window. Strangely, she was not as much alarmed as she felt she ought to be. Beneath the surface of her mind, hope continued to germinate. Buck Landers had made his big melodramatic gesture; common sense told her he had probably gone his limit. He was too shrewd, she reasoned, to allow these cheap toughs to put Steve out of the way—to kill him. Such a course would inevitably put Landers at the mercy of his mongrel hirelings. To kidnap Steve and hold him for a while did not have the seriousness of murder, and Landers' gambling nature permitted him to take this minor risk. It grew increasingly clear in Mary's mind that, from now on, Landers' words would be bluffing, no matter what he said. A steady tide of new encouragement began to run through her.

From the other room she heard the two men talking, but their voices were indistinct. She sat down and waited. Somewhere in the place, she was positive, Steve was present. The feeling grew until she imagined the whole place was laden with his personality. It was as though he was sending out mental radiations. She sat very quietly and tried to sense, to picture, him. He would be tied hand and foot, she imagined. The bonds must be irking him; his body would be sore and stiff. He had been knocked unconscious—but Bat had assured her he was not seriously injured.

With a determined effort she held her sympathy in check; it would be impossible for her to help him if she became hysterical with emotion. She would give him a million caresses to soothe his hurts—she would obliterate all of his suffering with her tenderness... but it was miraculous that she could thus hang onto her morale.

Like most women she had imagined herself a coward. The truth was she had been prepared by degrees for this crisis. She was like an athlete who had been trained to perform marvels—she had been through an emotional regime that had put her in top form, instead of breaking her down. And always, at the center of her being, was that warm glow which represented her love for Steve Moore. It was her talisman. Time after time it flooded her with new strength.

Maxie, thoroughly obsequious now, came into the room.

"The boss is here now—he wants to talk to you."

She came to face Buck Landers with a curious feeling that their positions were now reversed—that she could almost laugh at his stony faced grimace. Her heart held love, and his heart sheltered evil. His worst enemy was locked up inside his own breast.

"You can step outside and wait," Landers said to Maxie. When they were alone he looked at her with a cold eye. "Well, I see you've succeeded in making things more difficult for both of us," he said. "Too bad you were not smart enough to be sensible."

She was able to be calm and confident. "Doesn't it strike you, Mr. Landers, that it's a bit ridiculous the way you try to frighten me all the time? You try so hard to be dangerous—but I'm sure you'd quit it if you knew how silly it is."

It was a positive relief, as though some pressure had been loosened, to be able to talk this way to him. Mary was conscious of a lifting sensation in her breast. His outer shell seemed to crack a little; ever so slightly, his eyes wavered.

"Let's talk this over," he said. "I think I can convince you—"

Her head raised a little and the soft lips curved with a fine scorn. Triumphant youth within her was ascending.

"Oh, don't let's start up that old argument again! Honestly, I'm sick of hearing it, Mr. Landers. And you have no idea how tired I am of seeing you look stern, like Bill Hart. You're wasting your time and making a fool of yourself, besides."

Color crept into his cheeks. "Yes?" he asked, with somewhat labored nonchalance.

"I shouldn't think it would be much fun," she said, with deliberate cruelty, "for a man of your age to try to force himself on a girl young enough to be his daughter—or may-de, his granddaughter. I should think it would make him feel so terribly cheap."

She had, at last, reached him with a barbed arrow. The color leaped to his face like a dye. She could see a small vein in his temple throbbing. For an instant she held her breath, apprehensive that she had goaded him to fury. If the glacier should turn into a volcano.

But the searing flame within him was not anger.

"I'm not old—I'm strong as oak!" he cried—but there was something baited and wounded in his voice. "I'm better today than I ever was in my life. If you think I am a worn out blank cartridge—"

He stopped and looked at her with burning eyes. This was new—this loss of self-possession.

Mary moved around until a chair was between them. Her fingers twisted the clasp of Carlotta Guido's hand bag; her own hand crept inside and closed smoothly over the automatic. Now, if ever, she would have to hold her nerves like steel.

"You won't do anything to harm me, and you won't do anything more than can harm Steve, because you can't," she said. She was tense, yet flexible. Anybody could shoot a gun if they had to. "I think you're at the end of your string, Mr. Landers."

Landers began to lose his flush. "What do you mean by that wise-crack?"

"I mean there's only two of us in this room," Mary said, a strange note in her voice. "You're standing near the door. If you don't open it and walk out, I'm going to shoot you."

A faint smile of disbelief showed on his lips.

"I wouldn't believe it if you did!" he said.

She disengaged the automatic from the hand bag and pointed it at him.

"You had better go!" she warned, her voice sounding strange above the beating of her heart. "I'm going to get Steve out of this place, no matter what happens."

Landers took a step toward her, "Nobody ever shot me yet."

He reached to take the gun from Mary's hand, and at that instant she pressed the trigger.

The roar filled the room, and a bit of cloth sprang from the shoulder of Landers' coat. He took two steps backward, and stared at her. There was smoke between them; Mary suddenly was unnerved; tears ran down her cheeks. She was still pointing the weapon at his breast. "I'll—I'll—"

But no other words could come from her tightened throat.

Still staring at her, Buck Landers took another backward step, pulled open the door. At the sound of the weapon, his two henchmen in the hall fled. And now Landers himself was breaking. Mary had never seen his face so white.

Swiftly, without dignity, he sprang out of the room—slammed the door shut. The key had been left in the lock when Maxie had admitted Landers. Mary turned it and took it out. She put the gun on the table and stood there trembling—yes, she inevitably would have fired again... There was another locked door in the room. She tried the key in this one, and it worked.

Candidates in June Primary Drive Active

Entrants Stump State in Vigorous Push for Votes

DES MOINES, May 14 (AP)—The campaign for ballots in the Iowa June primary continued vigorously this week, with candidates active in stumping tours in all parts of the state.

Entrants for party nominations to the United States senate filled the heaviest engagements, while the Republican contest for the lieutenant governorship designation took on new life.

Brookhart Attacked
Senator Smith W. Brookhart was the target for attacks of several of his rivals for the Republican senatorial nomination. Henry Field of Shenandoah took the senator to task for filling Chautauqua engagements while congress was in session.

Field also charged that members of the Brookhart family did not obtain federal positions through civil service, as he said Brookhart implied.

Des Moines Man Speaks
George Coston of Des Moines contended the senator had confessed defeat and sent out an S-O-S call for help, referring to the recent announcement that Representative La Guardia of New York had other congressional progressives have vounteered to speak in Brookhart's behalf.

Glen Haynes of Des Moines asked Brookhart to state his stand on the Republican party, demanding to know if Brookhart "will follow his friend, Senator Norris of Nebraska, into the Democratic party if nominated June 6."

Senator Speaks at Ottumwa
Senator Brookhart, meanwhile, called the campaign "the easiest fight I have had" and wound up his drive for the time being with a speech at Ottumwa, tonight, planning to return to Washington.

His Ottumwa address dealt with the Reconstruction Finance corporation. Brookhart reiterated his charge that the law apparently is being administered as to defeat the intent of congress to make loans to closed banks.

In the Democratic senatorial field, C. F. Lytle of Sioux City and Fred P. Hagemann of Waverly were the most active in speaking tours.

The Republican lieutenant governorship contest between O. P. Bennett of Mapleton and C. F. Clark of Cedar Rapids gained its renewed fire over remarks that Clark had been designated by a conference in Des Moines to receive the support of tax revision forces.

Bennett and State Senator Ed Hicklin of Wapello both commented in addresses on the "entry of Senator George W. Patterson into the campaign," referring to remarks attributed to Patterson in support of Clark.

Women Hold Play Festival

Department Welcomes 100 Girls From 3 Schools

Approximately 100 girls of the fifth and sixth grades of Henry Sahlin, Longfellow, and Horace Mann schools attended the play day sponsored by the recreational leadership class of the women's physical education department yesterday afternoon on the women's athletic field.

Prof. Elizabeth Halsey, head of the women's physical education department, welcomed the girls after they were registered and placed on color teams. Then came a grand march, led by Margaret Bell, G. of Mt. Pleasant, and Gertrude Grisler, G of Jefferson.

Circle dodge ball, crows and cranes, flying Dutchman, and odds and evens were games played by the various groups. Individual activities included hop scotch, rope jumping, and O'Leary. A treasure hunt at 3:30 p.m. concluded the program.

Users were: Cathryn Johnson, A3 of Keokuk, fifth grade; and Margaret Kelsor, A3 of Keokuk, sixth grade.

Fire Department Adds New Member

H. T. McNabb, 2211 H street, has been added to the fire fighting force of Iowa City, according to an announcement by Fire Chief Herman Amish yesterday. He will start work Monday.

Mr. McNabb was formerly employed by Braverman and Worlan as an automobile mechanic. The buying of a new and larger fire truck has necessitated this addition to the force.

State Board Changes Name of Lake to Black Hawk in Honor of Sac Indian Chief

LAKE VIEW, May 14 (AP)—Historical interest attaches to the action of the state board of conservation this week in changing the name of Wall Lake, near here, to Black Hawk lake.

The new name honors Chief Blackhawk, famous Sac warrior whose tribe once ruled over the prairies of western Iowa. Its adoption at this time gains added significance in the fact that the 100th anniversary of the Blackhawk war and the signing of the treaty of 1832 was the theme of Iowa history week this year.

Known as Lake Boyer
The body of water known as Wall Lake was first shown on maps made shortly after the Louisiana purchase in 1804, local researchers found. It was then known as Lake Boyer.

In seeking to trace the history of the lake's first name, Dr. Everett E. Speaker, local park commissioner and leader of a delegation which appeared before the state board this week to request the change, enlisted the aid of Dr. Raoul Blondel-

Paris, secretary of the French National Medical society.

Historical Background
Government records in Paris were consulted but the origin of the lake's name could not be determined definitely and Dr. Blondel said it probably had been named for some fur trapper or trader of the early 19th century.

Rep. Cyrenus Cole also took an interest in the historical background of the lake's name, but a search of congressional files failed to uncover additional information.

Several "Wall Lakes"
In maps of about 1850 the name was shown as Wall Lake, a title believed to have been given it by pioneers because of the glacial formation of the shores, much of which were lined with rock which provided foundation stone for many of the first homes built in Sac county.

Destruction of this natural wall of rock and the fact that there are several other lakes in Iowa known under the same name led the Lake View council to petition the state board to change the name.

Group Leads at Ames for Tenth Time

AMES, May 14 (AP)—For the tenth successive college quarter, Farm House, a national social fraternity at Iowa State college, has topped the list for organized groups here in scholarship rating.

Farm House members made an average for the winter quarter this year of 87.74 per cent. Theta Nu Epsilon, a national fraternity, ranked second with an average of 88.35. A sorority, Gamma Phi Beta, was third in scholarship with 87.73. Iowa State college women placed higher in scholarship than men, averaging 84.99 per cent to the men's 83.30. The general average for the quarter of all students was 83.74.

By classes the averages were: freshman, 81.17; sophomore, 83.10; junior, 84.75; and senior, 87.05. Non-fraternity men and women had an average of 83.72, as compared to 83.78 for Greek letter men and women.

A Petrified Park

LEMMON, S. D., May 14 (AP)—A park with no live trees but with petrified grass said to be 20,000,000 years old will be officially dedicated here June 7. Known as "Lemmon's Petrified Wood Park," the only modern equipment is an electric light.

Wheat Values Slip Swiftly Downward

CHICAGO, May 14 (AP) — Disturbed by proposed financial enactments at Washington and by instability of the New York stock market, wheat values underwent abrupt tumbles today.

Falling to more than 8 cents a bushel under April top prices, wheat showed almost complete absence of any aggressive buying. Pressure to sell was general, and in addition one of the largest professional traders here was reported to be letting go of a big line of wheat holdings recently estimated to total 6,000,000 bushels.

Wheat closed nervous, 3-4 to 1 under yesterday's finish, with corn varying from 1-2 off to 1-4 up, oats 3-8 to 1-2 down, and provisions under and oats sympathized with changed to a setback of 15 cents, wheat weakness, but on the declines corn demand improved. There was buying of July corn credited to cash houses.

Provisions gave way under new low for the season and since 1897.

Fourteen New Cars Sold in County by Dealers Last Week

Engaged Girl

By Elizabeth Walker

JOAN stood in the midst of the hubbub on the station platform and tapped a foot sharply. She was annoyed—and no one paid the slightest attention to her. A long streak of black soot on her tilted nose gave her a belligerent air and her deep blue eyes were snapping. She was uncomfortably aware that her smart blue traveling suit was crumpling as she grew hotter and hotter under the burning Montana sun.

Lines of huge yellow buses were rapidly filled by the milling crowd of people and moved away up the mountain, but still Joan waited. An officer in a ranger's uniform shouted through a megaphone that all lodge and hotel employes should ride in the yellow buses. Joan understood that by this time, and she also understood that she was to stand here in the hot sun and wait until the buses for the curio shop employes should arrive.

Suddenly a shout went up from the other side of the station, "Curio employes on this side, please!" Joan grabbed her bags and hurried around, but the buses weren't there—only three trucks loaded with trunks.

Joan approached an official-looking man superintending the truck loading and said, "Can you tell me where the buses for the curio employes are?" in a tone which she hoped commanded respect and attention.

"Right here. Where do you go? Old Faithful? Take the first truck. And turned away. Joan opened her mouth—and closed it again. What was the use? She surveyed the truck which was to take her 50 miles to her destination. Six or seven young people were gaily piling into it, sitting on the trunks, wherever there was an available spot. They actually seemed to be enjoying it.

Well, a Cameron never backs out, Joan thought to herself grimly and marched over to the truck and started to climb upon it, when two strong arms seized her from behind and tossed her lightly aboard. Gaining her equilibrium, Joan turned to see a tall, blonde boy jump up on the truck after her.

"Thought you needed a little help," he grinned down, displaying excellent teeth and an amazing dimple in a brown cheek.

"Thank you," Joan found herself smiling back, "for helping a lady in distress."

"Not at all." He tossed a tennis racket off a trunk and with a sweeping gesture invited Joan to sit down. "Helping fair damsels is my specialty, particularly—" he regarded her for a moment, "when they have blue eyes and black curly hair."

"Oh, don't tell me," laughed Joan, "that young Lochinvar has come out of the west?" as she sat down on the trunk.

"All the way from Los Angeles."

"Jerry Trent," came a drawling southern voice from the front of the truck, "don't tell me you're back and startin' your old tricks again—you old roue—come here and see me this instant!"

"Peg! Light of my life! Are you really here, you red-headed Louisiana viper!" And the boy called Jerry Trent scrambled over feet and trunks and soundly kissed the girl called Peg, amid much shouting and laughter.

"You devil," Peg rolled wide brown eyes at him. "And who is the little girl whom you tossed on our equipage a moment ago?"

"She's okay, Peg—don't know who she is, but hurdle a pile of the debris and we'll find out."

Joan, watching the pair since Jerry had so suddenly left her, was laughing despite herself at this tall, bronzed youth with the amazing self-assurance and at the little red-head called Peg. They climbed over boxes and trunks toward her.

"Fair damsel," began Jerry with a bow, "may I present to you, Peg Carter, the fightin'est, best-hearted red-headed wench that ever came out of Louisiana!"

"How do you do," laughed Joan. "It's always been my ambition to meet a real red-headed wench."

"And this," said Jerry, who in a moment of inspiration had looked at the over-night bag Joan held in her lap, "is Miss Joan Cameron of Tuscony, Ohio."

"Oh, Lochinvar has turned detective," said Joan.

"Beware of that man," cautioned Peg. "He'll be tellin' you in a minute that he's been waitin' all his life to meet a girl from Tuscony."

"All aboard," came a shout from the driver's seat and the huge truck snorted and roared and was off with such a lurch that Peg and Jerry sat down abruptly on the floor.

"Lord, Charley must be driving," said Jerry. "I'm beginning to gather that you two have been here before," said Joan. "Where are you going to work?"

"Peg's an old-timer—been coming for four years. This is my second," answered Jerry. "We both work in the lodge curio shop. Where are you going?"

"Same place, I think. At least that's what the letter said that I received from Mrs. Holloway."

"That's great," said Peg. "You know, I think I'm going to like you, fair damsel." She looked at Joan squarely and grinned, wrinkling her diminutive nose like a small puppy. "Oh look, Jerry, we're coming to the big pass."

Joan saw the mountains rising on either side of them—walls of rough gold and crimson. They climbed higher and higher, the big truck a huge, roaring monster as it crawled to the top of the pass, where the mountains spread away into a distant haze of pine-covered hills. Joan broke the silence. "Oh, it is beautiful," she whispered.

"Like it?" asked Jerry softly.

Joan had never been west before and the great mountains and gorgeous coloring took her breath away. "I love it," she answered.

The truck barged ahead to an ever-changing scene. They passed steaming pools of emerald green water, and angry geysers spouting steam high into the air.

camp came into view. It was larger than Joan had expected—almost a little town. The great long hotel and the rustic lodge were built of logs and fitted perfectly into the mountain atmosphere.

The truck drew up in front of the lodge where they were greeted by a crowd who had already arrived.

"Hello, Peg! You back again! Hi, Louisiana!"

"Hi, Jerry! Jack, you old—"

Jerry and Peg were instantly drawn into the center of the group. They seemed to know everyone and everyone knew them. Joan hung back for a moment, and then Peg pulled her over to her.

"Gang, I want you all to know Joan Cameron from Tuscony, Ohio. This is her first season and I want you all to be 'specially nice to her."

"Joan, this is the gang—you'll know 'em all soon enough. This strong silent man over here is Jack Page. That cute little gal next to him is Mary Ann Moore. And down here is Sally, Brown and her big moment, Dan Gray. I'm warnin' you, don't use those big blue eyes of yours on Danny, 'cause he's marked 'reserved.' You've got an open field, though, on Bill Evans and Tom Baxter, I reckon—those two handsome fellows standin' over there just yearnin' to meet you."

"Hey, just a minute, Peg. Who discovered Joan, anyway?" Jerry was tired of being background. "How about it, Joan?"

Joan surveyed him for a moment. "Your face is familiar—have we met some place before?" she answered coolly.

"Come on, Joan—let's go down to the dorm" called Peg and pulled Joan away from Jerry. "See you later people."

THE dormitory was a big, frame building behind the lodge. Joan and Peg were assigned to the same small, bare room. They unpacked their bags and trunks quickly, scrupulously dividing the meager closet space. At last, Joan, changed to scarlet lounging pajamas, sank down on her bed.

"You know, Peg, this is the funniest place I've ever been."

"Why are you so amused, honey?" asked Peg, extended horizontally from the dresser as she nailed a snapshot to the wall.

"I was just thinking about how perfectly furious I was down at the station. I was ready to take the next train home because nobody paid the slightest attention to me, and I didn't know what to do or where to go. Then, about five minutes after I met you and Jerry I felt as though I had known you all my life and was having a perfectly grand time."

"That's Yellowstone for you, darling. The place gets you, Joan—I swear it does."

"And, oh, by the way," Peg turning, surveyed her roommate with hammer suspended in the air. "Speaking of Jerry, did I see you wearing a Delta Alpha?"

"Yes, why do you ask?"

"Oh, nothing much—only I don't reckon Jerry's noticed it yet—and you might have more fun if you didn't wear it. You know how people are about fraternity pins in a place like this."

"I've heard how they are—but I think I'll

AMERICA HISPANA, by WALDO FRANK; Scribner's $3.50. Reviewed by ROLAND WHITE.

Waldo Frank has the unorthodox idea—for a historian—that history is concerned primarily not with balance of trade and balance of power, not with treaties and statutes and economic "laws," but with humanity. For him humanity is not recorded in scientifically determined census bureau percentages and totals of native and foreign born, male and female, urban and rural, gainfully employed, less than five and more than 55 years old. His humanity lives and sings and dances; it has not yet been interred in the catacombs of historical sources or else is resurrected by the creative talents of a sympathetic interpreter.

"Like its predecessors in that division of my writings which I call History," explains the author, "this book must be taken as a work of art. The subject is a people, rather than—as in that division which I call Story—a person or group of persons."

Nor does "Story" mean biography. Frank would not focus his spotlight on the heroes or big men of historical legend; he finds them less important in the life of a people than worshipping biographers make them out to be. Public leaders express something in a people; they are dramatic symbols of more subtle forces in history.

Trying with peoples, as in fiction he would with persons, to get at the less tangible factors that lodge affiliations and public offices, alliances and diplomacy do no reveal, Frank regards geographical facts like pampas and jungle as more than sources of wheat and cattle and rubber and coffee. They are the homes of peoples, and many are the sentiments and customs rooted in soil productive of more than crops to eat and wares to export.

Thus the difference between fiction and biography is about that between the work of Waldo Frank and that of according-to-Hoyle historians. His bibliography is not a scholarly compendium of sources but rather a "personal list" of men of letters in whose work he has glimpsed something of the spirit of Latin America. He seldom uses footnotes, and then never to assure readers that this opinion came from some one else and that he is trying his best keep any preventable opinions of his own from disturbing historical accuracy.

Waldo Frank is no competitor of the World Almanac; he makes no laborious survey of laws and export-import tables and charts and graphs. But then moles are conscientious, and the light of day seldom breaks in upon their activities. The prime virtue of Waldo Frank is that he does throw much light upon neglected aspects of Latin America.

This light sometimes kindles fire, so akin are attitudes toward history and convictions about present civilization; Frank's challenge to historical interpretation becomes also a challenge to the way history is being made in "America Hispana" by these United States. He thinks the Latin American republics are, or of right ought to be, free and independent from the throttling clutches of commercial exploitation. He is concerned not so much with their control of native resources so much as with the self-expression to which these are incidental.

Whether he believes in practicing what he preaches or whether he is at heart an agitator, Mr. Frank proposes definite action for Latin America, notably a division into confederations based on geographical unities—partly as a defense against encroachment from without. Translation of "America Hispana" into Spanish will speed his message.

The unfriendly will recall that Waldo Frank emerged from recent volunteer interference in Kentucky mine disputes with a bruised skull, the friendly that he sincerely believes nations have souls, that he hoped in "The Rediscovery of America" to reveal hers to a nation whose soulless trends he so heartily condemns.

Waldo Frank is no professional historian, and could learn much from the profession. But so could the professional learn from him, among other things how to gear his message a bit more closely to the world in which men live.

LATIN AMERICAN PROBLEMS; THEIR RELATION TO OUR INVESTORS' BILLIONS, by THOMAS F. LEE; Brewer Warren and Putnam, $2.50.

Mr. Lee has produced a comprehensive work in attempting to bring to light a number of facts concerning the continent to the south and its relationships to American capital. Not only has the author approached the subject from the purely economic and financial aspects, but he has interpreted the social and moral tendencies of the South Americans, pointing out clearly their vital relation to the investors' dollars.

Drawing from a wealth of experience in South America as an engineer and financial adviser, the author is inclined to criticize the North American attitude of paternalism and indifference toward the Latin American countries. The great untouched wealth as well as the golden opportunities for development that lie to the south, should, Mr. Lee points out, demand an ever increasing interest from North American capital. However, he is quick to warn that of the billions already invested in Latin America only a very small percentage has been placed wisely and understandingly. The Wall street banker is inclined to judge a South American client in much the same way as he sizes up his North American or European customers. This is a vital error, because the Latin Americans are not the products of the same civilization, nor are they surrounded by like environments of government, climate, and custom.

The book is exceptionally adequate in its discussion of the vital economic problems of Latin America, pointing out that lack of sufficient transportation facilities is without doubt the greatest economic handicap of the region.

The political status of many of the countries approaches feudalism with a small governing class absorbing the wealth produced by the low masses. In this connection it is shown that many loans to Latin American countries have been in the nature of consumption loans to those aristocratic governing classes. Subsequent regimes have not felt the moral necessity of repaying funds consumed by preceding dynasties.

The high light of the book is Mr. Lee's discussion of the innumerable bond issues floated in this country by New York underwriting syndicates and presented to the investor with sales literature showing the country seeking the loan to be a good investment in view of the country's favorable balance of trade. The author shows this to be an unsound principle for investment. Many Latin American countries showing a large favorable balance of trade, have, due to invisible items not included in the tables, very small favorable balances if not unfavorable ones.

Mr. Lee believes that no loans should be made in South America without thorough investigation, and that the spending of these loans should be supplemented by close and expert North American guidance.

IF economists are looking for hopeful signs in the present financial situation, market reports from Iowa State Teachers college should encourage them. A scholarship, quoted at $96 has been offered for some time, but no one has yet even applied for it. Students just can't be bothered with money these days.

In Wake of the Sophomore Exams

To the Editor:

In the wake of the sophomore achievement examinations:

A respite from compulsory class attendance was enjoyed by sophomore students in the colleges of liberal arts, engineering and pharmacy on May 3 and 4 the dates on which a nation-wide testing program was administered to college second year students. Knowing that the test scores would not affect their final grades in any way, a good portion of the class members took the examinations in a nonchalant manner, few of them applying the highest levels of their various abilities to the work. It seemed evident that the advice "to do oneself and the college justice on these tests" was by no means rigidly adhered to, students finding it more worthwhile to write down their responses to the questions in the least possible time and without racking brains already replete with thoughts of a two day vacation.

That such a state of affairs is not so much in evidence in the freshman qualifying examinations is significant. The neophytes, believing that their status in the university will be largely determined by their test scores, are characteristically prone to appear for the ordeal considerably before the scheduled beginning hours, to bring "two well-sharpened pencils" along with them, and to grapple diligently with the test-questions. Most of the freshman's probationary fancies become exploded during his first semester on the campus, however, and he veers into the beaten path which persons who preceded him have found it most convenient to follow. His growth, to be sure, does not follow the course which the traditional and omnipresent disciplinarian would map out for him. Reaching the sophomore level, epicureanism becomes his guiding principle, and he declines to exert efforts for which he is not immediately recompensed.

Viewing the situations surrounding the sophomore achievement examinations in a matter-of-fact light, some insight into the involved problems may be acquired and methods of coping them are likely to suggest themselves. Compulsion has repeatedly been demonstrated to be ineffective and impossible of enforcement; an only alternative is found in stimulating the interest of the student. We notice, in this connection, that a policy of the registrar's office denies students the privilege of learning their ratings after the objective qualifying examinations have been scored and graded.

The student who is interested in learning his own status with respect to that of the entire class must resort to subterfuge in order to gain the information which he seeks. The student body is relatively uninformed concerning the use to which the test results are put, and its disinterested attitude is largely a lack of concern born of the university's disinclination to publish, for popular circulation, the objective information which the test-scores afford.

The individual student is the entity with which the university has to deal, and guidance, to be effective, cannot be given en masse. In so far as each student may be singled out and made the object of advisory concern, the tests have incalculable worth (if conscientiously taken) in providing an index of the potentialities of each individual. Their efficacy is limited as long as their chief functions consists in providing a means for comparing groups and as a medium for compiling isolated data.

The modern university, encouraging an inquisitive attitude, is generally sympathetic with policies that are calculated to foster enlightenment of its undergraduates; it minimizes the adverse consequences that accompany the acquisition of knowledge. Every university student deserves to be informed concerning the data gained from every objective test which he takes, his own scores, and the interpretations thereof. Since a minority of individuals will deliberately seek out such erudition, it should be supplied on the initiative of the university. If the university will condescend to provide the student with a comprehensive estimate of the personal information which its files hold concerning him, then an aggressive interest in academic affairs is likely to ensue on the part of the latter.

Furthermore, if the tests have the scientific worth which their sponsors claim for them and are sufficiently worthwhile to justify a two-day suspension of classes, they should bear weight in the determination of a student's grades.

leave the pin on. It happens to mean something to me." Joan smiled a little.

"College romance? I never could manage to fall in love in any of mine. Nice while they lasted, though. You know, I think it would be very good for Jerry if you were to break his heart this summer—he needs it badly," Peg continued philosophically as she jumped off the dresser and flopped beside Joan.

"Why—because of his colossal conceit?" asked Joan.

"Hmm, so you've noticed it already. He's even worse than I thought. In some ways, you can't blame Jerry for being conceited—he's undoubtedly the most attractive man in camp and he's an awful big shot out at California. Football hero—president of Beta Omega—socially prominent—runs campus politics—you know, the kind you read about in college magazines but never exist. And he's simply deadly with women—it's his casualness, I guess."

"Sounds interesting," said Joan softly, as she gazed out the window at the sun setting in a rose and violet sky.

Peg cocked a quizzical eyebrow, but said nothing.

IN A week, Joan had been initiated into all the mysteries of camp. She learned that she was a savage as were all the other camp employees, that the tourists were dudes, and she became intimate with packrats, heavers, pillow-punchers—titles of rank distinguishing bell-hops, waitresses, and maids. She worked long hours every day and became more painfully conscious of her feet than she had thought possible, and still she liked it. When working hours were over, she joined the gang in romping gaily over the mountainside on a hike or a pow-wow. On free afternoons, they rode and swam. Joan had been more tired than she had realized after three years at an Ohio university and this vacation offered a delightful change.

Jack and Peg and Jerry and Joan made a gay foursome and they found inexhaustible diversions. On the night of the first full moon, they hiked far up the mountain beside the river.

Jerry was stretched out before the blaze of the leaping fire, addressing the unresponsive weiner which he was tenderly affixing to the end of a stick.

The individual student is the entity with which the university has to deal, and guidance, to be effective, cannot be given en masse. In so far as each student may be singled out and made the object of advisory concern, the tests have incalculable worth (if conscientiously taken) in providing an index of the potentialities of each individual. Their efficacy is limited as long as their chief functions consists in providing a means for comparing groups and as a medium for compiling isolated data.

The modern university, encouraging an inquisitive attitude, is generally sympathetic with policies that are calculated to foster enlightenment of its undergraduates; it minimizes the adverse consequences that accompany the acquisition of knowledge. Every university student deserves to be informed concerning the data gained from every objective test which he takes, his own scores, and the interpretations thereof. Since a minority of individuals will deliberately seek out such erudition, it should be supplied on the initiative of the university. If the university will condescend to provide the student with a comprehensive estimate of the personal information which its files hold concerning him, then an aggressive interest in academic affairs is likely to ensue on the part of the latter.

Furthermore, if the tests have the scientific worth which their sponsors claim for them and are sufficiently worthwhile to justify a two-day suspension of classes, they should bear weight in the determination of a student's grades.

leave the pin on. It happens to mean something to me." Joan smiled a little.

"College romance? I never could manage to fall in love in any of mine. Nice while they lasted, though. You know, I think it would be very good for Jerry if you were to break his heart this summer—he needs it badly," Peg continued philosophically as she jumped off the dresser and flopped beside Joan.

"Why — because of his colossal conceit?" asked Joan.

"Hmm, so you've noticed it already. He's even worse than I thought. In some ways, you can't blame Jerry for being conceited — he's undoubtedly the most attractive man in camp and he's an awful big shot out at California. Football hero—president of Beta Omega —socially prominent — runs campus politics—you know, the kind you read about in college magazines but never exist. And he's simply deadly with women — it's his casualness, I guess."

"Sounds interesting," said Joan softly, as she gazed out the window at the sun setting in a rose and violet sky.

Peg cocked a quizzical eyebrow, but said nothing.

IN A week, Joan had been initiated into all the mysteries of camp. She learned that she was a savage as were all the other camp employes, that the tourists were dudes, and she became intimate with packrats, heavers, pillow-punchers—titles of rank distinguishing bell-hops, waitresses, and maids. She worked long hours every day and became more painfully conscious of her feet than she had thought possible, and still she liked it. When working hours were over, she joined the gang in romping gaily over the mountainside on a hike or a pow-wow. On free afternoons, they rode and swam. Joan had been more tired than she had realized after three years at an Ohio university and this vacation offered a delightful change.

Jack and Peg and Jerry and Joan made a gay foursome and they found inexhaustible diversions. On the night of the first full moon, they hiked far up the mountain beside the river.

Jerry was stretched out before the blaze of the leaping fire, addressing the unresponsive weiner which he was tenderly affixing to the end of a stick.

"Any girl who wears a fraternity pin out in this park is crazy," he stated in no uncertain terms.

Joan smiled a little as she watched his gaze wander to the Greek letter badge chained to her sorority pin. "You mean I'm crazy to wear a pin with a man like you around, don't you, Jerry?" she laughed.

"Yeah, think what you're missin', Joan darlin' —it makes me weep," drawled Peg from the other side of the fire as she carefully pulled a blackened weiner from the stick held out to her by Jack, busy roasting frankfurters.

"Hey, you — give a man a chance," shouted Jerry and hurled a bun at Peggy.

"Oh, I'll give you a chance whenever you want it, Romeo. Come over most any night and we'll do the balcony scene from Fitzsimmons' front window. Here, Joan, have a weiner." Peg tossed another of the dusky dogs across the fire to Joan.

"Thanks, Peg. Gorgeous night, isn't it?"

Joan looked up at the deep velvet canopy of the sky pinned in place with millions of tiny diamond stars. The shadowy, pine-covered mountains rose on either side of them like protecting walls. Joan threw back her head and eagerly drank in the deep, pungent perfume of the pine needles. She loved the mountains and the trees — delightfully different from the flat Ohio prairies where she had grown up.

"The moon'll be up in a few minutes," Jack said as he finally sat down and bit into a well-filled bun.

"And a hell of a lot of good it'll do me," sighed Jerry. "Joan's probably thinking of her Delta Alpha back in Ohio."

"As a matter of fact," Joan answered dreamily, "I was wondering why the stars always look as though you could reach up and pull them down out here. Get that little one of the northwest corner of the big dipper for me, will you, Jerry?"

"Anything your heart desires, my lady, if you'll take off that D. A. pin." Jerry looked at her challengingly.

"Oh, lay off that, homewrecker, and thank God that there's one girl in this place who's got the intestinal fortitude to be honestly in love with a fellow," Jack moaned wearily.

***

"LOOK!" Peggy cried and pointed to the eastern horizon where the moon had risen suddenly, a living pendant hung above the mountains.

"Oh, see the lovely lady in the moon!" cried Joan. "Isn't she beautiful tonight?"

"Beautiful," breathed Jerry, never taking his eyes from Joan's face, radiant above the rough collar of her leather jacket.

Joan met his eyes for a moment, then let hers fall to her wrist-watch. "Oh, it's a quarter to eleven—we've got to run. The matron is on the war-path because we were five minutes late Saturday night."

"This damn place is worse than a sorority house," growled Jack as he helped Peggy to her feet and began stamping out the fire.

"Put out every spark of that fire," called Peg, " 'cause the rangers'll get you if you don't watch out!"

"Yeah, I'd like to see one of those 90 day wonders tell me anything. I'm just dying to take a bust at one of 'em," said Jack.

"You're just jealous, Jack," laughed Joan, "because you can't wear a uniform and have all the girls crazy about you."

"Well, don't worry, darlin'," drawled Jerry, "I think you're simply magnificent in overalls."

"Come on, woman," commanded Jack, and clutching Peg's curly red mane in one hand and armed with blankets and flash light on the other, they started their homeward march.

Joan and Jerry followed close behind them—Joan quiet and thoughtful, Jerry restless and impatient.

"Joan," he began.

"What is it, Jerry?" answered Joan quietly.

"Would it interest you to know that you are the sweetest, most adorable little girl in camp and that I'm crazy about you? I—" His arm slid around Joan's waist, but she deftly twisted away from him.

"You're much too obvious, Jerry." Joan faced him squarely. "I thought you were more clever."

"Don't be like that, honey," he begged. The arm slid out again, more firmly this time. "I think you're a darling — why can't you be nice to me?"

"Oh, you're awfully attractive, I know, and girls have a habit of falling for you whenever you raise your finger. And you're terribly annoyed because my falling mechanism isn't working as far as you're concerned. That's really what's bothering you,—the fact that you can't have me. Well, you might just as well save your breath and your personality-plus attack, because I simply refuse to represent another feather in your cap!"

They had walked quickly without noticing and had caught up with Peg and Jack at the steps of the dormitory. Before Jerry, quite overcome by this sudden tirade, could stop her, Joan had run up the steps and darted through the door, casually tossing a "Good night, Jerry," over her shoulder. Jerry stood for a moment at the foot of the dormitory steps, surprise and anger mingled on his face. Then suddenly he muttered, "Well, I'll be damned!" and without a word to anyone turned and walked rapidly away.

PEG followed Joan a few minutes later. The grim-faced Fitzsimmons met her on the stairs, and could scarcely conceal her surprise at finding the harum-scarum of the dormitory in on time. After a breathless "Good night, Miss Fitzsimmons," Peg dashed into the room and exploded:

"Joan Cameron, whatever did you do to Jerry? The boy looked like a veritable thundercloud when you came in and he stormed off without even waiting for Jack."

"Oh, just giving him the well-known piece of the well-known mind," said Joan coolly.

"Well," said Peg, dropping on her bed, "I would say, just as an innocent bystander, that our big handsome heartbreaker is getting a good-sized dose of his own medicine."

"Perhaps," laughed Joan. "Anyway, I think maybe it will do him some good. I've told him before that his old 'crazy-about-you — can't-live-without-you line won't go over with me."

"Well, let's go to bed, precious, before Miss Fitzsimmons catches us with the light on," she advised.

Joan undressed quickly in the dark and climbed into bed. The moon had risen high in the sky now and bathed the mountainside in a glorious light. Joan's blue eyes shone in the dim light and her hair was a deep mist around her face. She smiled a little as she thought of Jerry's bewildered face. She wondered what Bob would think of it all—dear old Bob—in Europe now, his letters full of the wonderful things he was seeing. He trusted her implicitly and Joan loved him more than anyone else in the world. She giggled suddenly and snuggling down under the blankets, was asleep in three minutes.

An uncompromising gong woke Joan at six-thirty the next morning. She sat up in bed sleepily, yawned, looked over at Peggy who slept serenely on until a well-aimed pillow from Joan's bed awakened her rudely. "Wake up, monkey, the Great American Public is calling us," cried Joan and jumped out of bed.

JERRY was busily polishing the soda fountain when they arrived at the curio shop and greeted them with a cool nod. The boy had had a bad night. Joan's little speech had been the first directed to him in precisely that line of thought, and it had proved disconcerting, to say the least. Joan presented a new problem to Jerry, and he liked problems—had been rather good at them in school, and never doubted his ability to solve this one.

Jerry looked at Joan, who was regarding him with righteous disgust, and a shamefaced grin crept slowly over his face. "Okay, Joan, you win—I can't keep this up—how about going horseback riding this afternoon? I—I want to talk to you—"

"Has Don Juan gotten over his mad?" questioned Peg softly, a little later, her eyes screwed up into tight little knots as she poured ammonia into her dust cloth.

"Uh-huh," answered Joan, straightening a pile of leather pillows, hideously marked "Yellowstone Park," in sprawling letters.

"Say, Peg—let's take these 'Made in China' tags off the Indian beads. I'm tired of sneaking them off when the public asks me if they are really made by the Indians."

"The poor public," laughed Peg. "What is more gullible than the American tourist?"

"Two American tourists," answered Joan, calmly continuing her task.

Days went on, but Jerry found Joan as indomitable as ever. They saw lots of each other, but Joan still wore her Delta Alpha pin over her heart. Jack and the other boys in camp illy concealed their disgust at Jerry's apparent devotion to the beloved of another. They had all tried their luck with Joan and met with even less success than Jerry.

Joan, however, was enjoying herself immensely. Jerry was attractive and amusing and perfectly sweet to her. They hiked, rode, swam, laughed and talked together—they were inseparable companions and Jerry never again referred to their conversation of the night of the pow-wow. Jerry had a gnawing curiosity to learn more about the man whose pin Joan wore and finally asked her a few carefully casual questions as they were resting from a ride one afternoon. They were stretched out under a big tree nibbling blades of grass when Jerry asked carelessly, "What's your Delta Alpha's name, Joan?"

"Bob," answered Joan quietly.

"Live in your home town?"

"Oh yes—I've known him all my life. He's in Europe now." Joan made her answers as elaborately casual as Jerry's questions.

"Oh—must be a rich devil."

Joan smiled. "No—not awfully — he's in business, you see. He's been supporting his mother for several years."

Jerry sighed. This Bob must be a damnably efficient fellow. Joan assured him that he was, and then called Jerry's attention to the horses which were wandering away in search of grass, and remarked that they must be starting back to get home in time for dinner.

The ride down the mountain path was a silent one as far as Jerry was concerned, but Joan chatted brightly, stealing little glances at Jerry's averted face.

The summer flew and before anyone realized it, the last week in camp was upon them. Joan and Jerry were still on the basis of friendly comradeship. However, Jerry's deep blue eyes looked into Joan's every night when she stood by her window and Jerry's curly blond head and broad shoulders hovered over her in her dreams. He was frankly and miserably in love with her. He had long ago forgotten his plan of making her fall for him — and he stubbornly refused to allow Joan to know how he felt toward her until she should make some sign that her attitude had changed.

THE DAY before camp broke up, Joan decided it would be necessary to write to Bob and explain the situation. She labored long and hard over the letter, but when she had finished it, read it over with some satisfaction:

Dearest Old Bob,

Darling, your excellent plan has worked remarkably well. That is, all the boys (young nincompoops as you prefer to call them) have steered clear of me and your Delta Alpha pin except one—and it apparently has given him an added incentive, for he has been my most constant and devoted swain for nigh onto a month. You see, the fallacy in your arguments, was that while 99 per cent of the young men leave me severely alone, that leaves all my time for the one per cent, who is, by the way, the most attractive and quite the nicest fraction that I have ever known.

Anyway, darling — murder and truth will out — I'm in love with the one per cent — terribly in love. He doesn't know it yet — in fact, he thinks that I am madly in love with a man named Bob, which I am, of course.

Have a gorgeous time looking at all the statues and things, dearest. I'll take excellent care of your Delta Alpha pin, but I won't need it any more. The one per cent is a Beta Omega.

Your loving and in-love daughter,

Joan

Their last night together, Jerry and Joan hiked to their favorite spot up the river where they had picnicked with Peg and Jack a month before. Jerry built a fire which sent flames skyward as the pine boughs crackled merrily in the blaze. He flopped down beside Joan and, stretched out on their stomachs, they stared into the flames together.

"It's been a grand summer, hasn't it, Jerry?" Joan asked, because she felt she must say something to loosen the tight feeling in her throat.

"Has it? I don't know. Now that it's all over, I'm not so sure." Joan was so lovely in the firelight he knew he was going to tell her he loved her.

"Joan, remember the night when you read me the riot act and all you said about my wanting you because I couldn't have you? Well, it was all true—every bit of it. When I discovered that you wouldn't fall like the others, I couldn't understand it. It bothered me—but my pride, I guess, so I made up my mind that if the old tricks wouldn't work, I'd try some new ones. But before I knew it, I was so much in love with you that I spent the summer making a damned idiot of myself—crazy about a girl who's in love with another man — and I'm just as far as I was when I started, except that I've forgotten all about lines and this is just the honest truth."

JOAN looked hard at him. He was staring straight into the fire, his blue eyes strangely deep and serious, and she thought suddenly that she had never noticed before how handsome his profile was nor how strong his chin, and quite without reason, her heart skipped a beat and turned over in a most disconcerting manner.

Jerry went on without looking up. "I know you're in love with somebody else and I've learned I can't change your mind about that. You mean more to me than anything in the world, Joan. Every time I look at you, I think I've got to tell you and then I see that D. A. pin—" Jerry turned to Joan as he said this with a bitter look toward her pin, then he gasped, "Joan—you've—"

"Yes, Jerry, I've taken it off. I have a confession to make—I've been deceiving you." Joan smiled at him in a manner which made deepening her greatest charm.

"You see, Jerry, my father's name is Bob—and he's very jealous of me. I'm all the family he has, and he's in constant fear that I'll fall in love with some 'nincompoop.' He's a darling and I love him awfully much, so to please him, I wore his D. A. pin as a sort of protecting armor—but I'm afraid it didn't work, Jerry. Do you mind?" Joan smiled at him out of the blue depths that were her eyes.

Jerry looked disturbed for a moment, then he laughed, "Joan, you little devil, I ought to beat you—but I think I'll kiss you instead."

Several minutes later, the stars were shining with unbelievable brilliance and the lady in the moon was lovelier than ever.

"Jerry darling, I know we can touch the stars tonight," said Joan softly. "Get that little one on the northwest corner of the big dipper for me, sweetheart."

"Anything your heart desires, my lady—but not until you kiss me again."

And Joan charmingly complied.

Will Compete for 9 National Grand Prizes

Two Professors Listed Among Best Local Contributors

If Mrs. Bigger had a baby, which would be bigger? And the answer, ladies and gentlemen, is: the baby, because it would be a little bigger!

Seven hours and 38 minutes after reading that contribution to The Daily Iowan Believe-It-Or-Not contest that ended last night, the contest editors decided it would hardly do, in the face of strong competition.

Bows in Mustache

For instance, there was the man whose mustache was so long he tied the ends in bows at each corner of his mouth or else tucked it behind his ears.

And then there's the contributor who wrote: "You can get blood out of a turnip," and proved it.

And the girl whose father and mother are also her uncle and aunt, because her mother's mother married her father's father.

Pep Fraternity Will Hold Open Meeting for University Men

Hawkeye sports fans will get a chance to hear just how activities are at Iowa from the coach's angle and then air their own opinions tonight at a meeting of Iowa men in the main lounge of Iowa Union. It is sponsored by Pi Epsilon Pi, national pep fraternity, and will start at 7:30.

Coaches Oesle Solem, Rollie Williams, Dave Armbruster, and George Bresnahan, speakers of the evening, will talk on the activities at the university and on Iowa's prospects for next year.

The remainder of the time will be devoted to an open forum in which anyone may state his ideas of Iowa's problems.

Pledges of Pi Epsilon Pi will be initiated into the fraternity after the meeting.

Alfred Smith Takes Stand for Sales Tax

Owen D. Young "Likely Candidate" Out of Running

NEW YORK, May 16 (AP)—Alfred E. Smith, candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination tonight advocated passage of the proposed manufacturers sales tax.

Owen D. Young, who has been pointed to frequently in recent weeks as a likely Democratic candidate for the presidency, a few hours earlier stated in unequivocal terms he would not accept the nomination "if made."

Takes Position

Smith, who has 46 convention votes pledged to him, took a positive stand on many other governmental matters in an address in which he outlined a 10 point "financial program for the present crisis."

He attacked opponents of the sales tax for a slogan he said had been attributed to them by the press—"in order to make up the deficit, soak the rich."

"Soak capital and you soak labor," Smith said in rebuttal, adding, "the demagogue won't agree to that, but it's true just the same."

Program Outlined

The congressional program Smith outlined was:

Pass the sales tax.

Slash to "the extreme limit" all unnecessary appropriation of public money.

Empower the president to make "an immediate consolidation of governmental activities and bureaus, and in other ways to reduce the cost of government."

Halt the passage of more veteran legislation.

Modify the Volstead act and tax beer and light wines.

Bond Issue

Authorize a federal bond issue to make possible: an expanded program of federal improvements; additional highways aid to the states and purchase by the federal government of state and municipal bonds issued to finance local public works of long life and permanent value.

Defeat President Hoover's three point federal relief program.

Give the president a "free hand to provide aid for productive public works of states and municipalities, as well as for additional federal projects which will bring about the early employment of the largest number of men."

Prolong Moratorium

Empower the president to prolong, if necessary, the moratorium extended to debtor nations "until a real solution can be reached."

Discourage and avoid "in every possible way all blocs, cabals, intrigues and mugwump tactics which increase the depression, unsettle business, and endanger our credit at home and abroad."
