Signaling A New Era

Critic Says World's Premiere Heralds the New Theater.

The following review of the world's premiere presentation of Paul Green's "Tread the Green Grass" produced in the University theater last night was written by Barrett H. Clark, New York drama critic and writer. The play will be presented again tonight, Monday and Tuesday.

By BARRETT H. CLARK
The performance last night of Paul Green's folk fantasy, "Tread the Green Grass" at the University theater by the dramatics and music departments was in every sense of the word an event. Though this play was written three years ago and has received distinguished critical attention in this country and abroad, it made demands upon the producer that until now no producer had had the courage and intelligence to fulfill, for Mr. Green's play is far from the ordinary stage piece.

Conceived fundamentally as poetic drama of a high imaginative order, it required a complicated system of technical devices to render clear and simple its dramatic unity. The play required not only acting and stage direction of a peculiar sort, but a consistent and thoroughly realized musical score.

Into Realm of Fantasy
The poet's vision of a harmonious presentation of the mind and soul of a young girl torn between two conflicting powers of life, is carried into the realm of fantasy by music based largely upon legendary material gathered from sources both literary and (geographically) local. Essentially, the story—if story it can be called—is a dramatization added by the grotesque traditions of medieval drama and folklore of fairy moods, and after one becomes accustomed to the rather strange idiom of the language plus the pantomime and music, it carries one into a magic realm in which the mind and the feelings are transported and fused to a point where it is no longer necessary to interpret or analyze the poet's symbolism.

As in certain productions of the Habima theater, music, words, movement, light, costumes, seem all to speak a common language, that goes straight to its goal and makes its effects more surely than words alone. Even a description of the effects created by the playwright and all who cooperated with

Loiterer Pays $30 Fine; Will Serve 20 Days in County Jail

Andrew Gaze, 24, of Joliet, Ill., who was arrested after entering the Sigma Chi fraternity house, 730 N. Dubuque street, early Thursday morning, was given his choice of a $300 fine or 50 days in the county jail on a charge of loitering when he appeared in the court of Police Judge Charles L. Zager yesterday.

Gaze paid $30 and went to jail to spend 20 days. He was arrested at 5 a. m. Thursday after he had entered the Sigma Chi house, waking a student who was sleeping downstairs.

Police are investigating his past record. He admitted that he had been in jail on various charges in the past.

Donor of Iowa Law Scholarships Retires From Active Business

John B. Laffey, LL.B. '88, who has been general counsel of the E. I. Du Pont de Nemours Co. at Wilmington, Del., for nearly 30 years, retired from active business yesterday, according to word received at the college of law.

Mr. Laffey has had an active interest in the college of law here since his graduation, having awarded annually two scholarships valued at $300 each.

He also established, in 1927, a $5,000 revolving loan fund for the use of students in the college of law.

Maybe Our Civic Guardians Could Start a Sideline

Iowa City police have returned strayed babies, helped old ladies across street crossings, and have silenced barking dogs, but delivering cigars is out of their line, Chief Frank L. Smith decided yesterday.

When a local woman called the station and asked Chief Smith to deliver some cigars in a hurry, he took the message and politely asked whether he should have Charles Boeck or Wesley Sedivec make the delivery.

"I'm not particular. What do you want to know for?" the woman answered.

"This is the chief of police," he said.

She hung up.

French Deny United Front Against U. S.

France led off yesterday in the current series of international statements about what happened at Lausanne with the assertion that there was no intention among European powers to form a united front against the United States on war debts.

This followed two days behind news dispatches considered semi-official and distributed by the Havas (French) news agency quoting Premier Herriot of France as declaring that Great Britain could not undertake to make war debt payments to the United States without first consulting France.

London Statement
Past on the heels of this Havas statement came statements from London to the effect that no agreements entered into at Lausanne could prevent Great Britain from settling the American debt as she wished.

Next, on Thursday, came a letter from President Hoover to Senator Borah of the senate foreign relations committee which said the United States would not be pressed into action by any combination of debtors, provided such a combination existed.

Deny United Front
The last of the series was the French denial of a united front, and it came with an explanation of M. Herriot's interpretation of the Lausanne agreements.

The foreign office said embarrassment was caused by "an apparently mistaken version" of what the premier reported to the finance committee of the chamber of deputies.

It was added officially that the Franco-British accord for mutual consultation initiated at Lausanne did not attempt to impose any restrictions on Great Britain or any other state.

Allow Interpretation
The official French attitude last night was that it was best to allow interpretation of the "gentlemen's agreement" also signed at Lausanne and the Franco-British accord to lie dormant.

No official denial of M. Herriot's statement before the finance committee was issued. As quoted in the London press, and as paraphrased in other capitals, the statement was:

"In the future no problem affecting the interests of France and Great Britain can be treated separately by either government. The American consequence of the new pact (the Franco-British pact) will be that Great Britain cannot as in 1923 make settlement of debts without previously consulting the French government. The certainty of a concerted attitude is henceforth an acquired fact which will facilitate success in negotiations with Washington."

Bunnies Triumph, 5-2
CEDAR RAPIDS (AP)—Cedar Rapids bunched hits off Schnelder to defeat Rock Island tonight, 5 to 2, before a ladies night crowd of 2,500. Corbell's single with two down in the fifth was the Bunnies' first hit. Bloebaum tripled to score two men in the sixth.

8 Engineers to Meet With City Fathers

Council Will Appoint 2 Members of Board Monday Night

Appraisers to evaluate the Iowa City waterworks will be voted upon at a special city council meeting Monday evening, Edward W. Sybil, chairman of the water committee, said last night after the regular weekly meeting of the council.

Eight engineers will meet with the water committee and the city council Monday afternoon. Two of these will be selected to act as appraisers for the city. The appraisal board will be composed of these two, two selected by the water company, and one chosen by the four.

Hayek Reports on Plans
Given power to act by the council at its last meeting, Will J. Hayek, city solicitor, and the members of the water committee have been making preparations for the appraisal of the water works in view of its possible purchase by the city, and reported at the regular council meeting last night.

The city solicitor reported that he had asked the receivers of the water company to get the court to make some offer on the sale of the plant. He said that he had written to several engineers and could get men to make the appraisal at reasonable rates.

Suggest Appraisers
In a letter to the water committee, Frank S. Pierce of Marshalltown, secretary of the League of Iowa Municipalities, recommended several men for the appraisers' positions.

Those recommended were Dr. R. S. McNutt of Muscatine, former mayor of that city; A. C. Meuller of Davenport, a former mayor; P. F. Hopkins, city manager of Mason City; G. J. Long, city manager of Webster City; and C. H. Streeter, manager of utilities at Cedar Falls.

Discuss Parking Downtown
Much discussion marked the offering of an ordinance changing the parking regulations to allow the fire truck to maneuver safely in the business district. The council voted to stop all parking in front of the post office for 122 feet on the east side of Linn street north of Washington street. The new ordinance, prepared by a special committee, will permit the fire truck to turn north on Linn street.

Another ordinance, offered by the council committee and the city solicitor, asked for the abolition of center parking and the changing of the 10 minute parking zones to 90 minute zones.

Smith Gives Report
This ordinance was met by a minority report by Police Chief Frank L. Smith, who asked that no parking should be allowed along curbs on Washington and Clinton streets, but that cars be allowed to stop there to let off or receive passengers, or to deliver or receive packages.

Chief Smith, speaking from the floor, said that although appointed at the last meeting to act on the committee to draw up the new parking ordinances, he was not informed of their meeting nor was he consulted.

Present Plan Unsatisfactory
He asked that the interstate bus, now allowed 30 minutes parking in front of the Jefferson hotel on Washington street, be forced to park in a 90 minute zone. He stated that the present parking arrangements are not effective, but that center parking should be retained, as more cars can be accommodated on the center zones than along the curbs.

Because of his arguments the council voted to table the matter until the next meeting in order to get the opinion of the public.

Name Registration Board
Members of the voters' permanent registration board, recommended by George J. Dohrer, commissioner of registration, and approved by the council, are as follows: first ward, Mrs. Louise Lawyer and Alice F. Billik; second ward, L. H. Hess and Mrs. Albert Vogt; third ward, Ella Shimek and Mrs. Anna White; fourth ward, Etta S. Hoopes and Nell Murphy; fifth ward, Mabel H. Davis and Regina C. Hogan.

Registration dates were set for Aug. 9-12 of this year, from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m.

NEW BONUS PLEA FOR CONGRESS

Undismayed by previous rebuffs, war veterans in the capital are still trying to make congress see eye to eye with them in regard to payment of the soldiers' bonus certificates. Here is the latest delegation to present a petition for payment. Left to right are: Urbain Ledoux of New York, more popularly known as "Mr. Zero," noted welfare worker; Rep. Keller of Illinois, R. W. Robertson, commander of the California bonus marchers, and Rep. Patman, sponsor of the bill advocating payment of the bonus.

Mercury Hits Three Figures

Baking Sun Beats on Iowa Prairies for Fifth Day

DES MOINES, July 15 (AP)—Temperatures soared into three figures in parts of Iowa again today as the unrelenting sun beat down on the baking prairies for the fifth straight day. The mercury touched the 100 degree mark at Boone at 2:45 p. m., and many other spots reported mid-afternoon temperatures in the high nineties.

Not satisfied with Thursday's paltry mark of 96, the mercury vaulted up two more degrees yesterday to break its own record for the season.

A cluster of wispy clouds chased across the southern sky rather tentatively in the late afternoon, but impotently faded away. Sweating pedestrians glanced at them hopefully, then turned to mopping their foreheads with already soaked handkerchiefs.

A light breeze stole over the city late in the day and brought the temperature down to 85 degrees at 7 p. m., two degrees lower than at the same time Thursday. Weather prophets last night were promising, with some misgivings, that today would be a little cooler.

At Cedar Rapids the temperature reached 99. Ottumwa reported an unofficial reading of 98, Des Moines 97, Marshalltown 96 and Ft. Dodge 94.

Ernest Hepecke, a carpenter, was prostrated by the heat at Ottumwa. Alfonso Dreberer, 25, of Chelsea was drowned in the Iowa river while seeking relief.

Cooling breezes during the early morning hours provided the only relief during the day. At Des Moines the temperature dropped to 76 at 5 a. m. and did not reach the top mark until 10 a. m.

De Prue Woesteman, 17, of Dyersville, was drowned in the Maquoketa river near Manchester while swimming at the beach here. His mother, Mrs. Harry Woesteman, and a sister, Esther, survive.

Edgar Earnest, young farmer living near Tama, was in a serious condition following a sunstroke suffered at noon today. He was working in a hay field when stricken.

Killed in Accident
ALBIA (AP)—Stella Bartlett, 30, Des Moines, was killed when an auto overturned nine miles north of here. Mrs. John Watters, 28, and Bernice Bartlett, 28, both of Des Moines, were injured.

Robbed of $85
CLARINDA (AP)—Delbert Davidson, oil station attendant, was held up and robbed of $85 in cash by two bandits.

WEATHER
IOWA—Generally fair Saturday and Sunday, except possible some scattered thunderstorms; continued warm.

Saling Will Compete in Final Today

George Saling, crack University of Iowa hurdler, advanced to the finals of the United States Olympic track tryouts yesterday at Palo Alto, Cal. He will compete in the final heat today against Jack Keller, Ohio State; Percy Beard, New York A. C.; and Johnny Morriss, Southwestern A. C. The first three place-winners in today's race will represent the United States in the coming games.

Saling opened the afternoon by winning his preliminary heat in 14.6 seconds, bettering the accepted American record, and equalling the Olympic mark. In his second race, the semi-finals, he was nosed out by Morriss, in 14.7. Keller defeated Beard in 14.6 in the other semi-final race.

Mercy Hospital's New Chapel Opens With Mass Today

Sisters at Mercy hospital will attend their first mass in the new chapel on the east wing of the hospital addition at 8 o'clock this morning.

The chapel is the only part of the addition which will be open for use during the summer months. The remainder of the building, with hospital wards, sisters' quarters, and demonstration rooms, will be completed before the end of the summer.

Dedication in Fall
Dedication of the entire addition will be sometime in the fall, after the construction work has been finished.

The chapel is complete except for a few finishing touches and the receipt of 14 miniature statues and three life sized ones being carved out of wood by workmen in Germany.

The smaller figures will be placed in the 14 niches, or "stations," around the walls of the chapel. Each one will depict an event in the life of Christ.

Large Statues in Grotto
The large statues will be placed in a deep recess in the grotto, a small room at the rear of the chapel. The grotto is completely paneled in sand-blasted red oak.

The walls of the chapel are all of Travertine (Italian) marble. The woodwork, including a large overhanging balcony, is of red oak, sand-blasted and worked in rich designs.

Between Officer Dolezal's speed and Officer Boeck's memory, a criminal just hasn't any chance in Iowa City.

E. H. Smith, or maybe James Ables, or maybe Ernest Hale, was seen by Ernest Cassill, A of Lenox, draining gasoline out of a Ford two-door sedan on Clinton street in front of the alley between Iowa avenue and Jefferson street at 10 p. m. yesterday. Like a model citizen, he notified police immediately. Officer Joe Dolezal and Chief Frank L. Smith sped to the scene.

When Smith, or Ables, or Hale saw the police, he carefully put down a gallon can full of gasoline and took off across the university campus like an antelope, or kangaroo, or rabbit.

As though he had the Olympic finals in mind, Dolezal gave chase. He hurled the iron fence only a few paces behind the fleeing Smith, or Ables, or Hale. Every few strides Dolezal reached out, but all he could get was pieces of shirt. But the fugitive, weakened by the pace, gave out by the time he reached the law building and Dolezal nabbed him.

And in steps Boeck's memory. At the station, the prisoner said his name was E. H. Smith, that he lived in Virginia, and had been in Iowa City for only two days.

With a quizzical look, Boeck said, "What were you doing at the Fourth of July celebration?"

"Oh," said Smith, "just working there."

Then, with an even more quizzical expression, Boeck said, "And weren't you a porter at the Jefferson hotel about 10 years ago?"

"Yeh," said the prisoner, "in 1921."

He is being held in the city jail for further investigation.

Last Moment Filibuster Seen as Only Bar to End of Session

WASHINGTON, July 15 (AP)—By pushing the relief bill to within one step of completion, congress tonight had cleared the decks for final adjournment some time late tomorrow.

Barring only a filibuster at the last moment, Republican and Democratic leaders on both sides were certain they would ring down the curtain on this eventful and long drawn out session within another day.

The relief bill, assured of President Hoover's signature despite presence in it of a clause requiring publicity on all loans to be made by the Reconstruction corporation, even to banks, lacked only final approval of the senate.

Deadlock Breaks Up
A deadlock in the conference between the two houses broke up early in the day—as soon, in fact, as assurance came that the president would sign the bill. The senators then yielded to the insistent house demand for the publicity clause.

The house then approved the conference report, 286 to 48, and sent the measure to the senate chamber. There it was permitted to lie without action until tomorrow.

Senate Prepares for Adjournment
The senate was busy with preparations for the adjournment. Long speeches, mostly political in character, were made. Authority was given for inquiries during the summer, and then Senator Watson of Indiana, the Republican leader, brought in a resolution for adjournment at close of business tomorrow. It went over for last-moment action.

Leslie Delano Victim; Police Search for Kidnapers

BULLETIN
MINNEAPOLIS, July 15 (AP)—A coroner's jury late tonight returned a verdict of accidental death in the case of Leslie Delano, 20 months old, whose body was found in a cesspool near his home in Columbia Heights, a suburb, yesterday.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 15 (AP)—The 20 months old boy whose body was found in a sewage catch basin yesterday was slain, the coroner and an investigating pathologist announced today.

As a result officers tonight pressed a search for some one who might have kidnaped Leslie Delano, who disappeared last Friday. One believed the child possibly was kept in a trunk.

"We see no other alternative than murder," said Coroner W. C. Thurston after Dr. James McCartney, University of Minnesota pathologist, examined the body.

"The cause of death probably was suffocation. He probably was dead or dying when his body entered the cesspool."

Deputy Sheriff Mike Auspos believed some one living near the Delano home in suburban Columbia Heights was responsible "very likely" some one who participated in the hunt, for who ever it was knew that cesspool had been searched before and that it was the safest place in which to dispose of the child.

Banking Department Promotes Bunce to Position of Examiner

Ralph L. Bunce, former Burlington banker, who for the last few months has managed the affairs of the closed Iowa City Savings bank, was promoted Thursday by the state banking department and has left for Vinton, where he will take over the position of examiner in charge for that territory.

Mr. Bunce's position here as assistant examiner in charge of the Iowa City Savings bank will be filled by A. A. Bennett, who came here Monday from Sioux City. Mr. Bennett has been associated with the state banking department in Sioux City.

More Iowa Couples "Fan" Before Pitching of Cupid

University Alums Step Up to Marital "Plate" as Announcements of Engagements, Marriages Continue

With Dan Cupid in the pitcher's box, University of Iowa alums have "fanned" in rapid succession, and more and more are being called to the marital plate. Following is a list of the most recent announcements of engagements and marriages:

The wedding of Ferne Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Miller of Sloan, to William G. Jepson, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Jepson of Sioux City, will take place July 30 at Sloan.

The bride-elect, a former student of the University of South Dakota, graduated in 1930 from the University of Iowa. She is a member of Alpha Xi Delta, social sorority, and Mortar Board, honorary scholastic society.

Mr. Jepson received his B.A. degree from the University of Iowa, and graduated from the college of law at the University of South Dakota in 1931. He is an assistant county attorney at Sioux City. He is a member of Phi Gamma Delta, social fraternity, and Phi Delta Phi, honorary law fraternity.

King-Orcutt

Mr. and Mrs. George Henry Orcutt of Monroe have announced the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Helen, to Dr. Walter Wellman King, son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto U. King of Huntington, Ind. The ceremony will take place in Des Moines, Aug. 1.

Miss Orcutt is a graduate of the University of Iowa and a member of Delta Gamma sorority. For the last six years she has been a member of the advertising department of Marshall Fields at Chicago, Ill.

Dr. King received his B.A. and M.D. degrees at Northwestern university. He is with St. Luke's hospital, Chicago.

Downie-Hertz

The marriage of Maurine Hertz, daughter of Benjamin Hertz of Kan-kakee, Ill., and Dr. Gerald Downie, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Downie of Mt. Airy, took place June 30 at Kan-kakee.

Mrs. Downie is a graduate of the University of Illinois. She is a member of Sigma Alpha Iota, national music sorority. Dr. Downie received his B.S. degree at Simpson college, Indianola, and attended the University of Iowa for two years. He received his M.D. degree at Northwestern university. He is a member of Epsilon Sigma, honorary scholastic fraternity, and Phi Tau Theta, Methodist men student organization.

The couple will sail from Seattle, Wash., for Yon Ping, Aug. 20, where Dr. Downie will have charge for five years of the hospital conducted there by the Methodist Episcopal church.

Stanton-Galligan

Ruth Clare Galligan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Galligan of Caldwell, Idaho, became the bride of Dr. James Theodore Stanton, son of Mrs. Helen M. Stanton of Chariton, June 18 at Caldwell.

The bride graduated from the University of Idaho in 1927 where she was a member of Delta Gamma sorority. She took graduate work in 1928 at Bryn Mawr.

Dr. Stanton graduated from the college of medicine at the University of Iowa, where he was affiliated with Delta Tau Delta and Nu Sigma Nu fraternities.

Mabies Entertain 40 at Dinner Party

Prof. and Mrs. Edward C. Mable, 122 Grand avenue court, entertained 40 guests at a dinner party last night on the sunporch of Iowa Union. The dinner preceded the world premiere of "Tread the Green Grass," and honored its author, Paul E. Green, and Lamar Stringfield, who wrote the musical score.

Mr. Green and Mr. Stringfield are faculty members of the University of North Carolina and have been in Iowa City for the last several weeks assisting with the production.

14 Participate in Ladies' Day Golf at Country Club

Fourteen women played in the golf tournament at the Iowa City Country Club yesterday morning during the Ladies' day activities. The players went out in twosomes and a prize was awarded to Mrs. N. W. Embley and Mrs. Joseph Munkhoff for the pair having the lowest score.

Mrs. J. Hubert Scott, who held the lowest single score of the day, received an award for having taken the fewest strokes on hole No. 3. Luncheon was served at noon at the clubhouse.

Lutheran Group to Hold Picnic

The members of the Lutheran Student association of the First English Lutheran church will have a picnic tomorrow instead of the regular luncheon and devotional hour at the church. Transportation will be furnished from the church, and those who are interested are requested to meet at the church at 4 p.m.

Mrs. Hayek Wins High Score in Elks Bridge Tournament

Mrs. Will J. Hayek, 714 E. Brown street, received high score at the second series of the Elks Ladies bridge tournament Thursday afternoon at the club room.

Winning high score in the first series of games, Mrs. Edward M. Hogan, 435 Oakland avenue, is still high in the two series played.

The last series will be played next Thursday. Twenty women are entered in the tournament.

The committee in charge is Mrs. Leo Carmody, chairman; Mrs. W. R. Graf; and Mrs. Martha Nicking.

Iowa Editor Dies in Clinton

CLINTON, July 15 (AP)—Funeral service was being arranged today for Will V. Tufford, 74, veteran newspaperman and a pioneer in the early development of the state of Colorado.

He was secretary and treasurer of the Inland Press association for 27 years and a leader in the Iowa and national Odd Fellows lodge activities. He died last night after several weeks of illness.

A native of Morrison, Ill., where he learned the printer's trade, Tufford went west in the early days to drive a freighting team near Leadville and Gunnison, Colo. He hauled the first load of silver out of the Elk mountain region to a railroad 140 miles away. He also worked on several pioneer Colorado papers.

He turned to Illinois and Iowa in 1882, serving as foreman, city editor, circulation manager and advertising manager of the Clinton Herald. Later he published the Clinton Morning News and then the Clinton Morning Age.

Organizes Company After organizing the Mason City Times-Herald company, in 1904 he returned here and organized the Iowa Printing company, of which he was president and general manager until his death.

He was a grand officer of the Odd Fellow lodge for 13 years and served for two years as state grand-master.

Prof. Hawley to Speak Prof. Charles A. Hawley of the school of religion will speak on "The unrecognized miracle" at the morning service of the Congregational church Sunday. The sacrament of baptism will be administered at the service and new members will be received into the church.

Will Confer Here J. D. Scoville, hydraulic engineer with the S. Morgan Smith company of York, Pa., will arrive in Iowa City today to confer with Prof. Floyd A. Nagler of the college of engineering, concerning a project at Grand Junction, Colo.

Mrs. Ristine Hostess to 150 Serves Tea at Iowa Union in Honor of Two of Two

Mrs. Leonard Ristine was hostess to 150 persons at a tea yesterday afternoon at Iowa Union, in honor of Mrs. Burton A. Ingwersen, who leaves soon to reside in Baton Rouge, La., and Mrs. George Donohoe of Cherokee, who will establish her home in Iowa City.

Garden flowers decked the fountain room where the party was held. Out of town guests were Mrs. Donohoe's daughter, Louise, of Cherokee; Mrs. Paul Rubincam of Albuquerque, N. Mex., and Mrs. R. L. Brown of Lafayette, La.

Assistant hostesses were Mrs. Harlan Amen, Mrs. William Byington, Mrs. Allen C. Tester, Mrs. Glen Evers, Mrs. George Frohwein, Mrs. Robert Gibson, Mrs. Clyde Hart, Mrs. R. P. Williams, and Mrs. Ernest Horn.

The Ristines leave this morning to establish their home in Cherokee.

Firm Files Counter Suit

Iowa Concern Sues New York Assurance Company

FOREST CITY, July 15 (AP)—H. W. Hayner, former attorney general of Iowa, today filed suit on behalf of the Collins Mortgage company of Cedar Rapids against the Equitable Life Assurance company of the United States seeking $1,500,000 as commissions for dealings handled by the Iowa concern.

The suit, filed in Winnebago county district court, was a counter action to one started by the Equitable company, a New York concern, seeking to foreclose a $10,000 mortgage against L. J. Busely and also claims of several thousand dollars against the Collins company.

The petition today claimed that the Collins company had handled farm loans in Iowa, Oklahoma, Kansas and Missouri for the Equitable for nearly 20 years and that in October, 1931, the firm's loans in those states approximated $125,000,000. It further claimed that a contract between the Equitable and the Collins companies provided for payment of a commission for the life of each loan, and that in addition the Iowa company had at various times advanced money for payment of taxes and court costs for the Equitable.

National Prohibition Board Urges Support to Candidates Acting in Favor of Dry Law

WASHINGTON, July 15 (AP)—

The national prohibition board of strategy today urged its member organizations to support "those candidates who believe that prohibition ought to be the law."

This advice was contained in a summation of campaign policy drafted by a sub-committee and approved by the board.

Appended was a resume of the record of the Republican and Democratic nominees for the presidency and vice presidency with quoted utterances from them on the prohibition question.

No Specific Candidate

It refrained from endorsing specifically any candidates. Behind this lay an effort on the part of one group within the board to have it declare at once for the re-election of President Hoover. This proposal was rejected by vote of the board when offered as an amendment to the subcommittee's statement.

The policy declaration set forth a belief that the question of retaining, modifying or repealing the prohibition amendment should be settled by the votes of the people, "in senatorial, congressional and legislative elections."

Resigns From Board

Asserting the resume of President Hoover's record made him out to be drier than was warranted, D. Leigh Colvin, national chairman of the prohibition party, resigned from the board of strategy. He is pushing actively plans to put a strong, nationally known bone-dry third party ticket into the field.

Discussion which preceded adoption of the statement, revealed three divergent views. One group held for the policy, finally approved. A second, led by Oliver W. Stewart of the flying squadron, urged immediate endorsement of President Hoover.

Next Summer Term Will Offer Classes in 32 Departments

When University of Iowa students for the second term of summer session launch into formal registration next Friday and Saturday, they will choose their subjects from a list of 363 courses in 32 departments.

Education, in which 38 courses are offered, has the greatest number of subjects since hundreds of the university's summer students are school administrators and teachers seeking advanced degrees.

All of the second term's work will be concentrated into a period of five weeks, beginning July 25 and ending Aug. 25.

Hoover. A third, including Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, and Dr. Clarence True Wilson, secretary of the Methodist board of temperance prohibition and public morals, held that a declaration for Mr. Hoover should be deferred until he utters his personal views on repeal.

Submitted to Conference The text was submitted this afternoon to the national conference of organizations supporting the eighteenth amendment, for which the board serves as an executive committee. No action by the larger group was intended, however, as the board acts for it.

The statement was adopted largely as formulated by a special policy subcommittee appointed late yesterday after a day's discussion.

Stock Market Continues on Rising Trend

Average Gain Finishes Somewhat Short of Wednesday

NEW YORK, July 15 (AP)—Operations for the advance were resumed in today's stock market and found traders willing to participate in a moderate mark-up.

Some hesitation was evident in the early dealings, but with activity getting progressively duller on the reaction efforts to turn the trend encountered little resistance. Tobacco shares started the rally which was joined in turn by rails, oils and other classifications. At the close several leaders were 1 to 3 points higher, but the average gain fell somewhat short of Wednesday's. Transactions totaled $16,940 shares.

Commodity-Consious
With the market commodity-conscious, it was apparent that renewed strength in cotton and steadiness of wheat after yesterday's sharp decline were factors. Also, Washington advices expressed assurance that congress was soon to adjourn, bond quotations had an upward trend despite some easiness in foreign, and the weekly banking figures reflected improvement.

American Tobacco "B" gained 2 points and Liggett & Myers "B" 3 points in active trading. The rise in rails, carrying New York Central, Santa Fe, and others up 1 to 2 points, was perhaps traceable to speculative interest in possible developments at the forthcoming meeting of railway executives who are to discuss further means of economizing.

Industrials Show Strength
Industrials showed fair strength, steel common being up nearly a point, while gains of virtually the same extent were made by American Can, Westinghouse, Case and Standard Oil of California.

Marley Gives Last Sermon

Fosdick's Modernism Subject of Visitor's Lecture Sunday

"The quasi-modernism of Harry Emerson Fosdick" will be discussed by the Rev. Harold P. Marley in a sermon Sunday morning at the Unitarian church. The Rev. Mr. Marley's subject matter was taken for the most part from actual experience while studying under the Rev. Mr. Fosdick, minister of the Riverside church in New York city.

In discussing the religion of the New York preacher, the Rev. Mr. Marley will trace the three main controversies that have shaken religion since the war.

This talk will conclude the series of sermons being given by the Rev. Mr. Marley, who will join his family in Kansas City, Mo., after doing the summer preaching here for the Rev. Evans A. Worthley, pastor of the Unitarian church. He received his education at the Union Seminary from 1921 to 1924 and is now a minister of the Fellowship of Liberal Religion at Ann Arbor, Mich.

Prof. Z. Clark Dickinson of Ann Arbor, Mich., will be visiting speaker for the seminar in religion in the church fellowship rooms Sunday evening. He is a professor of economics and the brother of the Rev. Mr. Worthley.

Funke Speaks on 'Faust' Character in Letters Lecture

Centering on the character of Mephistopheles of Goethe's Faust, Prof. Erich Funke of the German department gave the last school of letters lecture of the first summer session last night at Old Capitol on "Goethe's art of characterization in Faust."

In defense of Goethe as a dramatist, Professor Funke set forth the principle that judgment must be made from an author's art of characterization. Then, using Mephistopheles as the example, he showed that Goethe has created "the only really organic figure for some ages."

A reading of one scene was given, in German and in English translation, which partly illustrated the many side-edges of the character. He also read other passages to show that an empirical figure had been created.

Companion Identifies Dead Advertising Man

DUBUQUE, July 15 (AP)—Frank R. Ing of Boston, associate and traveling companion of Charles Marcus of Brookline, Mass., who died of a heart attack yesterday in Clinton, said today they were representing the Stanwood-Hillson corporation, an advertising novelties firm of Brookline, and were on a business trip to the west coast.

According to Ing, Clinton Masons took charge of the body pending arrangement of funeral service in Chicago. Marcus was a member of the Masons, Elks, I.O.O.F., and Advertisers' association.

Lakes, Resorts, Hold Interest On This Trip

Passes Through Site of Reformatory

This tour takes the motorist through four northwestern Iowa counties, Buena Vista, Sac, Calhoun and Pocahontas, in the southern edge of the Iowa lake region.

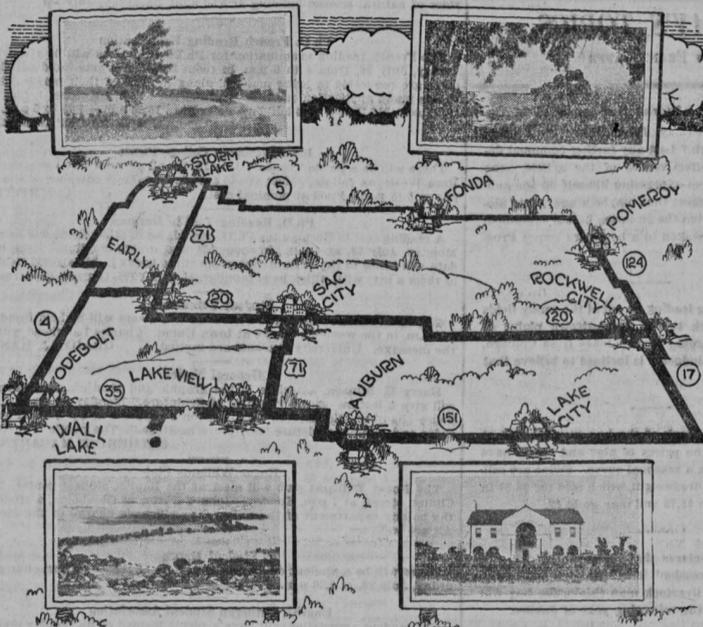

Leaving Storm Lake the route leads south to Schaller; south to Odebolt; then east to Lake View, or one may turn south just west of Lake View and visit Wall Lake.

Resort at Storm Lake
From Lake View one can travel to Ulmer and Auburn; east to Lake City; north through Rockwell City and Pomeroy to state highway No. 5, then west through Fondra, Newell and Sulphur Springs.

Cross trips may be taken on Highway No. 71 from Storm Lake to Early and on Highway No. 20 through Sac City and Lytton.

Storm Lake, the county seat of Buena Vista county, is one of Iowa's more widely known summer resorts. The lake, south of the town, has a shore line of several miles.

Water Sports
Lake View, another of Iowa's summer playgrounds, is on Wall lake, and also offers water sports. The highway from Rockwell City to Pomeroy passes between Twin

Bought for $800
Land was cheap when compared to prices Iowa farms were later to bring, and the 160-acre tract on which Rockwell City was platted was bought by the Rockwells for $800.

A few years later, F. M. Hubbell and J. S. Polk of Des Moines, built a narrow gauge railroad from the capital city to Fondra, which is 17 miles northwest of Rockwell City.

Reformatory Seat
The railroad was named the Des Moines and Northwestern and has since become a part of a present day railroad.

Lake City was the first county seat of Calhoun county, but Rockwell City being at the geographical center, a change was later voted. Here also is located the women's Reformatory.

End the Parking Squabble

THE NEW Seagrave fire truck looms as an important factor in proposed changes in Iowa City's car parking system with announcements that some revision will be necessary to permit easy passage of the truck through the downtown section.

There are as many arguments, it seems, for center and curb parking as against, but there is one way to please the majority of merchants and car owning shoppers.

A commission, appointed by the council to investigate the suggestions of those who have made the parking problem a chronic issue, and to consider the experiences of other cities in the matter, may be able to arrive at that happy medium that will write finis to the eternal squabbling over the question.

Elimination of center parking and a 90 minute time limit on curb parking is not acceptable to the merchants. Tagging cars for overtime parking has not eliminated the problem. Elimination of center parking and no time limit on curb parking seems to be the best suggestion thus far advanced.

Some plan must be worked out in the near future, before an emergency arises that will result in a hasty decision, based on sad experience. A committee of experts is more likely to arrive at the best solution.

Dividends for Care

THE STORY has been told of the man who traveled his way 'round the world, meeting all sorts of terrible dangers, and emerging from them unscathed. Then, after his arrival home, he fell down his cellar stairs and broke his neck.

In some instances true cases have similarly been cited. The monthly report of Iowa's state labor commissioner, A. L. Ulrich, if expanded, might show several congruous instances. That report does show that for the month of June, falls were the chief cause of injury in industrial accidents.

The second largest number of injuries was also due to falls, not of persons, but of objects which fell on them. Perhaps humorous references to danger from monkey wrenches falling from airplanes might find a real counterpart in fact.

In any case, the central idea in combat against the cause of injury is carefulness. Not only in industries, which are covered by the report, but in the home, which offers a similar or greater opportunity for such injuries.

The habit of being careful is easily formed, and just as easily kept in successful operation. A few repetitions of an act bring it into easy remembrance.

Teaching young Johnny to pick up his roller skates, using a flashlight when descending dark stairways, remembering not to perch the hammer precariously on top of the stepladder, and scores of other little acts of carefulness pay dividends in safety.

The Czech "Henry Ford"

PERUSERS of news dispatches relating the death by airplane of Thomas Bata, monickered by epithaphers the "Henry Ford of Czechoslovakia," might be surprised to learn the why of the nickname.

Thomas Bata was a shoe manufacturer who saw far beyond the meagre markets of his native land. He learned his trade in Europe, came to Lynn, Massachusetts, U. S. A., to get the scientific angle on the shoe industry, then returned to his central Europe republic to build factories and find a new outlet for the increased production.

He didn't have to look far. India, with its teeming millions of barefoot natives caught his eye and set his fertile brain to planning 30 cent shoes in million lots.

A far-seeing man of business, and of the world, Bata planned to set up a permanent argument against Indian shoe sales resistance. No fly by night scheme was his, no temporary market were the shoeless natives. He would popularize footwear at "flivver" prices, hence his appellation.

Like Henry Ford, Bata sought a new field, one that had never been exploited, and one that would never overflow with his products. And he realized, with astute business sense, that the poorer classes were far in the majority and adapted his trade to them.

The world, for many hundreds of years to come, will still provide for those who see beyond their own little field, and for the businessman, is far from overrun with clever enterprisers. Even local markets are not overdeveloped—but it remains for men like Bata and Ford to determine in what respects that's true.

Nuances of Nudism

(From The Boston Herald)

The course of true nudism never runs smooth. Even in Highland, N. Y., where a little band of earnest thinkers have been dispensing with the formality of clothes for more than six weeks, mishaps and misunderstandings persist. Nothing suggesting moral turpitude, you know, for the nudists are strict teetotalers and genuine ascetics in their way. But the annoyance from visitors, both casual and deliberate, continues. Seven uninvited guests, who didn't quite catch the spirit of the place, were asked recently to leave the chaste precincts of Camp Olympia. They didn't do anything terrible, but their attitude was suspiciously inquisitive instead of being openly sympathetic. A nudist, it seems, is very sensitive to such subtle differences.

Miss Elenore Kellogg of the New York Herald Tribune, apparently the camp's ambassador to the outside world, says that nudists "feel the same way towards any one in clothes that intoxicated persons do for sober ones, or vice versa." For that reason guests hereafter will be expected to dress, or undress, in a style "consistent with the camp's activities." In other words, the nudists feel actually nude only when other people aren't nude, and therefore—but it all becomes very embarrassing.

It looks as if oldsters will have to learn a whole new series of social conventions if the cult is ever widely practiced. We can already hear Emily Post beginning a new chapter in some such fashion: "When visiting nudist friends, it is customary to arrive with as little on as possible. Later, if your teeth begin to chatter, your hostess will probably suggest that you put on a light kimono, but until then—" Really, you know!

Forcing super-sound waves through milk is found to kill 99 per cent of the bacteria present. Some suggest applying a keynote speech to make this unanimous.

What remains to be decided is whether this is the place where Jimmy Walker gets off.

TODAY'S TOPICS

By FRANK JAFFE

Following is an editorial that appeared in the New York Times Friday, July 8, under the caption "Grunting Through." Let any further comment detract from the effectiveness of the article, the writer refrains from expressing himself on the subject, except to suggest that maybe a new party slogan might arise from the situation herein explained: "Hit your bandwagon to a hog; here comes Prosperity."

"Is the Iowa hog leading us out of the sandy fields of depression back to the acorn-strewn plains of prosperity? According to dispatches from Chicago, the meat-packing industry is inclined to believe that this is so.

"Ever since the peak of the hog crop receded at the end of May the prices of pigs and cattle have risen in more than a seasonal curve. Swine are selling at $5.35 a hundredweight which sold for $3.30 in May. Cattle fetch $8.75 and may go to $9.

"One packer declares that "if anything can pull us out of the depression" it will be hogs and cattle. Another Chicago livestock man thinks the hog will be the symbol of the returning year of Jubilee.

"Economists agree that periods of low prices, fallen business and unemployment often mark their end in odd ways. Sometimes it is carloadings; sometimes it is an upsurge in steel orders. This time it might fittingly be hogs, for inordinate appetite was chargeable to the American people during the boom times.

"The news from Chicago contradicts flatly the report of conditions in the hog and cattle areas brought to that city during the two political conventions. Except for the Republican keynoter, Senator Dickinson of Iowa, there was hardly an orator from the Middle West and Southwest who did not tell stories of deep depression and forsaken farms.

"One Iowa Democrat, indignant at Mr. Dickinson's claims for President Hoover, said that intermingled with the senator's tones over the radio was the sound of crashing country banks in the Hawkeye state.

"He alleged that the Iowa farmer listened to the speech with one ear and with the other to the knock of the Sheriff at his door.

"Perhaps the rise in hog and cattle prices is merely the usual seasonal phenomenon and its promise will pass when the next shipments are marketed in September. But if it should prove the signal of better times the whole political outlook may change.

"Regardless of that, Wall Street should do something for the hog if he is showing us the way back to higher prices. In Central park there is a statue to Balto, the gallant mauler who took the serum to Nome. In the middle of the stock exchange there might be set a golden image of the Iowa hog with this legend: 'He led us back to the trough.'"

Book Bits—

(From The High Place, by James Branch Cabell) "Undoubtedly," said the Duke, "we live in an age of invention and of such material luxury as the world has never known. All wonders of science have been made our servants. War, yesterday our normal arbiter, has become irrational, even to the most unreflective, since one army simply annihilates the other with these modern cannons that shoot for hundreds of feet. To cross the trackless Atlantic is now but the affair of a month or two in our swift sailing ships. And we trap and slaughter even the huge whale to the end that we, ignoring the sun's whims, may loan to nights of feverish disipation the brilliancy of afternoon, with our oil-lamps. We have perhaps exhausted the secrets of material nature."

Economic Conditions Bring Poor Health, Says Speaker

Present economic conditions are already causing noticeable impairments of health. T. J. Edmonds of Des Moines, executive secretary of the Iowa State Tuberculosis association, made this comment yesterday from his observations of the increase in attendance at the health centers throughout the state. He spoke yesterday afternoon to students of the social administration division on "Publicity for the social worker." He was also the guest of a noon luncheon at Iowa Union yesterday. Mr. Edmonds is a member of the governor's committee on unemployment and president of the state conference of social workers. "In Des Moines," Mr. Edmonds said, "there has been a 50 per cent increase in attendance at the tuberculosis clinic and a corresponding increase at the other health centers." Same Condition Elsewhere The same situation in tuberculosis clinics was noticed in Sioux City, Davenport and other cities throughout the state. Unemployment causes greater numbers of illness, he believes, because it lowers the individual's resistance since he has less money for doctors, less for proper food and care, and more time to worry about his condition. "Our situation is like that of the man who goes in swimming with his clothes on and keeps them on until he catches pneumonia," he explained. "When we could have prevented the situation, we let it drag on until we created an emergency, and now we must do all we can for relief." Tuberculosis Gaining It will be three years before present unemployment begins to affect the death rate from tuberculosis because it is a slow disease, said Mr. Edmonds. But the larger number enrolled in clinics definitely show what will be the result. Incidentally, Mr. Edmonds pointed out that the increased distress has created a larger field for the social case worker, who must have actual contact with the families needing relief. Social administration is the big field right now, he said. "What Can We Do?" "What can we do now?" he was asked. "Nothing, but try to cure our ills through what relief we can give. In the future, though, we can prevent the recurrence of such problems by the adjustment of living conditions, working hours, wages paid, installment buying, high pressure salesmanship and many other things which have contributed to the present situation," Mr. Edmonds answered.

BEHIND THE SCENES - IN HOLLYWOOD -

STUDIO GOSSIP By HARRISON CARROLL FILM SCANDAL SCREEN COMMENT

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., July 15—Most talked of subject in Hollywood today is the forging of another link in that curious chain of coincidence which seems to connect the destinies of Gloria Swanson and Constance Bennett.

Now married to Gloria's former husband, the Marquis Henri de la Falaise, the glamorous Bennett shortly will fall heir to "Rockabye," the story Gloria bought with her own money and has steadfastly cherished as a future motion picture vehicle for herself.

For some reason—details are scarce as yet—Gloria has finally consented to the sale of this story and David Selznick has laid R-K-O's money on the line. If you can believe reports, however, what Gloria did not know was that "Rockabye" would be given to Connie Bennett.

Unless some unexpected hitch develops, the picture will go into production immediately. This, of course, means that the Adela Rogers Hyland story for Connie will be postponed. Radio was having a little trouble with the finish of it, and, rather than spend more time in preparation, decided to make the switch.

There also is a last minute rush for a new leading man. Joel McCrea, who was to have played opposite Connie, will not fit in the new picture. Attempts were made to borrow George Brent to replace him, but the deal fell through. Director George Fitzmaurice is now scouring the film colony for a suitable leading man.

"Rockabye" lest you forget, is an unproduced play by Lucia Bronder. The heroine, as in Connie's last picture, is an actress.

For honest criticism they'll cite you Groucho Marx's reply to a friend, who asked his opinion of a new show.

"It's rotten," began Groucho. "Well," parried the friend, "it really should be seen in a small house."

"Yeah," flipped Groucho, "well, tomorrow night will take care of that."

Noah Berry, Jr., will carry the family name on in the talkies. The young actor, he's only 19, has just been signed by Universal to star in a series of western pictures. While he was a student at Hollywood high school, young Berry played football and engaged in other athletics. Raised on his father's ranch, he also has become an expert horse man. So far, he has appeared in two Universal serials, "Heroes of the West" and "Jungle Mystery."

BOULEVARD TALK: Once an all-American, always an all-American. Ask the U.C.L.A. football team, which is playing intact in "70,000 Witnesses," and which hatched a little plot to stop Johnny Mack Brown when the former Alabama ace was assigned to carry the ball against them in the long shot. The payoff is that Johnny, with mostly actors for interference, went through the whole team for a touchdown.

Fox is wishing Will Rogers would speed his return to Hollywood. The comedian, meanwhile, is taking his time... Janet MacLeod was out to the trolleys again the other evening with Cary Grant. This is getting to be a regular twosome. Most faithful frequenters of the nightlife places here are Maureen O'Sullivan and James Dunn, Shirley Mason and Sidney Lanfield and, when he's here, Bert Wheeler... Saw Ginger Rogers at the "Hullabaloo" premier with Stanley Smith...

University to Have Exhibit at State Fair

Colleges Will Display Work Program at Des Moines

A composite picture of the general program of work carried on at the University of Iowa will be presented at the Iowa State fair this year by 14 different colleges and departments of the university, it was announced yesterday.

The university's display, which will include the latest discoveries in modern science and illustrations of modern courses offered in higher education, will be one of the most comprehensive features in the $500,000 educational building.

Interesting Features
Some of the most interesting features will include examples of corrective work being done in the children's hospital, hydraulic, mechanical and electrical engineering devices from the college of engineering; latest pharmaceutical products manufactured by the college of pharmacy; a display of modern x-ray pictures and an orthodontia display from the bureau of dental hygiene.

Free Moving Pictures
Free moving pictures will be presented each day showing views of the state high school music festival, highlights of the leading athletic events at Iowa, the state academic contest, university convocation and commencement exercises and educational talking pictures made under the direction of the extension division.

Bruce E. Mahan, director of the extension division, and his assistant, Lee Cochran, will have charge of planning the exhibit and will be in personal supervision during the fair.

New Record Seen for July Convocation

267 File Applications for Awards From University

Largest of all July convocations in number of degrees awarded is the prospect for the University of Iowa's affair of next Thursday which closes the first term of summer session.

Applications for awards have been filed by 267 men and women, 205 of whom are seeking advanced degrees.

This semi-final list will not be as large by the time of the ceremony, July 21, due to failure of some students to complete all requirements for a degree.

But even with the inevitable shrinkage, the final total will be well above the record of 216 established a year ago, officials believe.

The 205 candidates for higher awards include 129 master of arts candidates, 39 master of science, and 37 doctor of philosophy. Forty-four applicants for liberal arts degrees top the list of those who wish to receive first diplomas.

Ceremonies on Campus
Ceremonies, to be broadcast by station WSUI beginning at 8 p.m., will be held on the campus facing Old Capitol's west portico. The convocation will be preceded by a dinner given to all degree-winners by the university.

Prof. George W. Stewart, for 23 years head of the physics department, will give the convocation address and President Walter A. Jessup personally will confer the degrees.

Professor Stewart to Lecture at Ames
Prof. George W. Stewart, head of the physics department, left yesterday for Ames where he will deliver two lectures in the physics department of Iowa State college Friday and Saturday.

His topic will be "The nature of the liquid state." He will report mainly on his own research in this field which he has been conducting for several years.

Laws to Get New Course

Dean Gilmore Institutes Study of Utility Regulation

Equalling the heaviest schedule ever drawn for the second term of summer session in the college of law, eight courses, of which one is unusual, will be given between July 25 and Aug. 25.

Dean Eugene A. Gilmore has announced that the new course is on public utility regulation in Iowa. It will be presented by Prof. Clarence M. Updegraff, author of a new book which will be used by students in the work.

The university's faculty will be augmented by two visiting professors from law schools of adjacent states—William L. Prosser of the University of Minnesota and James L. Parks of the University of Missouri.

Borah Denies Third Party Nomination

WASHINGTON, July 15, (AP)—Senator William E. Borah of Idaho stated definitely today that he is not and never had been a candidate for a third party presidential nomination, but those wishing him to lead the Prohibition party refused to accept this as ending their hopes.

In fact, D. Leish Colvin, chairman of the Prohibition party, said a movement was under way to create a greater party with Borah for president at the head of its ticket and a platform giving equal prominence to economic issues and the liquor question.

Colvin has been trying for weeks without success to persuade Borah to accept the Prohibition party's nomination.

The senator made his statement today after a conference with Colvin and other prohibition leaders here for the meeting of the national prohibition board of strategy.

Fourth Grade Pupils Visit Observatory

Fourth grade pupils of the University elementary school were shown the moon and some of the other planets through the telescope at the observatory Thursday evening.

Prof. C. C. Wylie of the astronomy department, and Mabel E. Cummings, fourth grade teacher, were in charge. Twenty-eight children and about 30 parents attended.

Miss Cummings pointed out and described the constellations of the group, and Professor Wylie showed them the moon; Beta-Cygni, the double star, and Saturn through the telescope.

Will Young Chaplins Outshine Famous Dad?

Signed for Movies, Two Children of Screen's Ace Clown Will Make Camera Debut With Mother. Charlie Said to Be Displeased.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN CHARLES JR. and SYDNEY CHAPLIN LITA GREY CHAPLIN

NEW YORK, July 15—It has long been a controversial subject as to whether genius, like lightning, ever strikes twice in the same place, that is, in the same family. With the exercise of a little patience, we are likely to have the matter settled in the very near future when the children of Charlie Chaplin, the world's most famous screen clown, make their debut before the movie camera.

The boys, Charles, Jr., 7, and Sidney Earle, 6, recently returned from Europe to start work on a two-year contract calling for five pictures, in which they will play with their mother, Lita Grey Chaplin, former wife of the comedian, who has been appearing on vaudeville stages for several years.

Papa Not Pleased
It is said that Papa Charlie is not any too well pleased at the idea of his progeny following in his splayed footsteps and it has been hinted in some quarters that the funny man may attempt to place a legal obstacle in the way of his children's film career. This sudden interest in his children would be rather inconsistent with Charlie's previous attitude towards them. For, according to their mother, the comedian has not paid the slightest attention to the boys since the court placed them in her custody and assessed Charlie $850,000 for their upkeep.

Film to Accompany Talk on Sculpture by Harry Stinson
The technique of modeling and stone carving will be the subject of a lecture by Harry E. Stinson of the graphic and plastic arts department Monday at 4 p.m. in the house chamber of Old Capitol. His topic is "The technique of sculpture."

Mr. Stinson's lecture will be illustrated with slides and a movie reel, "Sculpture in stone," which shows the creation in York marble of a crouching jaguar by Anna Hyatt Huntington, one of the best known women sculptors in America.

The reel, filmed by the Boston museum, lasts about 15 minutes and shows all phases of the process of modeling.

This lecture was given last February at Iowa Union and attracted a great deal of interest, according to Catherine Macarney of the graphic and plastic arts department.

Mr. Stinson's talk will be prefatory to the slides and films shown. He will give an explanation of the methods depicted.

150 Students Conducted on Hospital Tour

Approximately 150 persons made the hospital excursions for summer session students Thursday and Friday. The tours were conducted by Erwin C. Pohlman and V. A. Pangborn of the hospital administration staff.

Mr. Pohlman described the organization of the hospital and told of its founding. He said the new hospital was erected by a $2,250,000 gift from the Rockefellers and the appropriation of a like amount by the state. About $1,000,000 per year is spent for operating expenses.

More than 80,000 patients receive treatment each year, and at present there are about 4,000 on the waiting list. Admittance of the state patients is gained through the county officials and the hospital authorities do not handle applications. They check the waiting lists to see that the more serious cases are handled first.

After Mr. Pohlman had described the hospital administration, the groups visited some of the wards, an operating room, the kitchens, the X-ray department, and the outpatient department.

Geologists Conduct Study of Formations in Iowa Coal Fields

Part of a general program under the Iowa geological survey, under the supervision of Prof. A. C. Tester of the geology department, field work in the Pennsylvanian coal bearing formations of southern Iowa, is being carried out today by Professor Tester, Donald W. Stooker, and M. L. Thompson.

The purpose of the field work is to obtain a general knowledge of the characteristics of Iowa coal beds, and to secure the utility of their development.

Similarity between the coal fields of southern Iowa and Illinois has been recognized, especially at a joint conference recently held with the Illinois geological survey.

Ohio G.O.P. Will Stick to Party Plank

COLUMBUS, O., July 15, (AP)—Ohio Republicans today smothered a "dripping wet" delegation from Cincinnati and decided to stick to the party's national stand on prohibition.

Although its candidates for governor and senator campaigned as opponents of the 18th amendment in winning their nominations, the party's state convention overwhelmingly approved the national Republican platform which calls for resubmission of the liquor question.

A minority report demanding the party pledge itself to prohibition repeal and substitution of local option lost by a vote of 708 to 130 after a battle on the floor. The demand for repeal was supported principally by the Cincinnati delegation.

Political observers say the hand of the national administration in the adoption of the prohibition plank and the selection of former Lieutenant Governor Charles Lewis as campaign manager, Secretary of War Hurley, Postmaster General Brown and Senator Fess were among national leaders present.

Elementary School Children Make Train Trip to West Liberty

Bernice Stormes, instructor in the University elementary school, and her assistant, Mrs. Mary Sprout, accompanied 12 pupils on the train to West Liberty Wednesday.

The students inspected the station, cross roads, electric signals, cross-overs, and switches as object lessons to supplement their class work.

The train ride was the first for several of the children, who averaged five years in age. They were met in West Liberty by their mothers, who took them home in automobiles.

Three World Record Performances, Six Upsets Feature Olympic Tryouts

George Saling Qualifies for Finals Today

Upset by Morriss After Tying Record in Prelims

By ALAN GOULD (Associated Press Sports Editor)
STANFORD STADIUM, Palo Alto, Cal., July 15 (AP) — The pick of Uncle Sam's track and field stars waged a terrific intersectional battle today in the opening stages of the final American Olympic tryouts, featured by three world record performances and poor exhibitions by several favorites.

While two eastern stalwarts, Leo Sexton and John Anderson of the New York Athletic club, set the pace in the field events with record-shattering performances in the shot put and discus, respectively, Eddie Tolan contributed the outstanding flash of speed on the track by stepping his 100-meter dash trial, against a headwind, in the world-record equalling time of 10.4 seconds.

Wykoff Upset

Tolan, the Negro veteran who shares possession of this record with Charley Paddock, beat Frank Wykoff in the 100, with the result that the Southern California boy subsequently withdrew from the 200 meters.

Tolan then topped off his day by running an easy second to Hector Dyer of Los Angeles A. C. in the 200-meter trials in the fastest heat, 21.6 seconds, which tied the Olympic mark.

Anderson Tops Discus

Anderson, former Cornell weight man, led the discus qualifiers with a throw of 146.54 feet. He was aided, however, by the wind in surpassing the latest world's record of 163 feet, 8.34 inches, set by Eric Krenz of Stanford in 1929.

Anderson's throw was more than nine feet beyond that of his nearest rival, Paul Jessup of the Washington A. C., whose American record of 149 feet, 8.73 inches made in 1929 has not yet been passed upon as a world mark.

Olympic records were equaled in three other events.

Besides Her Dyer's record-equalling sprint in the last heat of the 200-meter trials, the 410-meter high hurdles record was tied twice, first by George Saling of Iowa and then by Jack Keller of Ohio State, in 14.6 seconds.

Carr Favorite

Bill Carr, the Pennsylvania express, galloped to victory in his 400-meter trial in 47.6 seconds, tying the Olympic record. Ben Eastman of Stanford was hard-pressed in the second trial to nose out James Gordon of the Los Angeles A. C. in the comparatively slow time of 48.8 seconds.

Experts freely predicted Carr would repeat his triumph over the east coast, scored two weeks ago, in the final tomorrow.

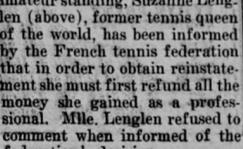

Chief among the shocks to the 15,000 fans were the elimination of Dick Barber of Southern California, intercollegiate broad jump champion; Kenneth Churchhill of San Francisco, intercollegiate record-holder, and James de Mers of Los Angeles, American record-holder, in the javelin throw; and Bob Jones, Stanford star, in the discus.

Extend Qualifying Limit

Onlookers were startled by a succession of disappointing performances by California's stars in the field events, which reached such proportions that the American Olympic track and field committee was persuaded, after it was all over, to give

Desirous of being restored to amateur standing, Suzanne Lenglen (above), former tennis queen of the world, has been informed by the French tennis federation that in order to obtain reinstatement she must first refund all the money she gained as a professional. Sportively Speaking

By Gene Thorne

Upsets of every kind and description occurred in the final tryouts for places on the United States Olympic team yesterday at Palo Alto. Many of the favorites, most of them California men, failed to come any where near their best performances, and did not qualify. Outstanding among those who failed to come through were Ken Churchill, University of California javelin thrower, who has a record of better than 212 feet, and Dick Barber, U. S. C. broad jumper who has consistently bettered 25 feet.

The reversals failed to prove so disastrous, however, when Olympic officials decided after the day's trials, to increase the number of qualifiers in each field event from five to eight. This could hardly be called giving the lads who have lost out along the way a fair break, but it may aid considerably to the strength of the team. With the performances back of the additional men, it is logical to expect them to return to form, and gain places on the squad. Looks sort of bad, though.

Bert Belding, who used to twirl for the Hawkeyes some years ago, is still going strong with the Waucoma club in the Little Eight league, a Sunday circuit in Fayette county. Belding, who is the leading hurler as well as one of the outstanding hitters in the loop besides practicing dentistry, turned in one for the books last Sunday.

Belding, pitching against Westgate, won a 15 inning game, 1 to 0. He retired the first 26 men that faced him without allowing a man to reach first, and did not allow a single hit until the tenth frame when he gave up one hit. Two more hits were garnered off his offerings in the eleventh. He struck out 21 men, and did not give a base on balls. A total of 48 batters faced him over the full route.

Ordinarily Belding would have had a no-hit, no-run game to his credit, as he pitched for nine innings without allowing neither a hit nor a run. His rival on the mound didn't do so badly either, allowing but six hits in the 15 innings. For those who like their pitching duels, that was one. Can anyone turn in a more remarkable record?

Two Texans in S. D. Title Tennis Meet

SIoux FALLS, S. Dak., July 15 (AP) — Two Texas stars will match strokes on the clay courts here Sunday for the South Dakota open tennis title in the men's singles, Sterling Williams and Karl Kamrath, both of Austin, Tex., having won through to the finals.

Williams went into the finals late today by defeating Dr. W. F. Wilden, Minneapolis surgeon, who made a valiant but unsuccessful bid in the second set, but was a rather easy victim in the other two. The score was 6-1, 10-8, 6-2.

Dr. Wilden was unable to match the powerful shots of his 19 year old opponent who frequently passed the Minnesota man with hard drives. The latter's best opportunity came in the second set when Williams weakened momentarily, but the Texan rallied in the fourth.

Kamrath conquered Charles Britzius, Minneapolis, earlier in the afternoon to become the other finalist, winning 6-3, 6-2, 6-1, without being forced to extend himself. He was favored to defeat his fellow townsman for the title.

Semi-finals in the doubles will be played tomorrow with the singles final going over until Sunday. Charles Heacock and Art Brunstedt, Rapid City, will represent South Dakota in the doubles against Scherer and Scherer of Minneapolis. Dr. Wilden and Charles Britzius will play in the other semi-final against Kamrath and Williams.

By RON TALLMAN

George Foor, Sidwell's mound ace, turned in his sixth pitching victory of the Twilight league season at Iowa field last night, but the most credit for the win goes to Lee Seemuth who turned in a slug-ging performance that netted him four hits in four times at bat off the slants of Manager Shern Greene who did the hurling for Iowa Supply.

But Seemuth, who contributed a home run among his blows and drove in four runs, was not the only hitter of note during the evening's long proceedings which finally ended when darkness called a halt at the end of the sixth with the tally standing 10 to 6.

Ebert Homers, Too

There was a home run by John Ebert in the second, two well timed singles by "Windy" Brown, a double by the pitching Mr. Foor in the fifth and important one base knocks by Paul Hogan and Walt Foor. For the book store boys, who poled out seven safe blows, the hitting honors go to Dale Flitsch who got a triple in the second to account for the first of the losers' runs.

The dairy nine set to the task of winning in the first frame when they pushed across two runs on Messner's error, Treptow's sacrifice and successive singles by Hogan, Brown, Seemuth and Walt Foor. In the second Ewaldt opened a four run spree when he went to first as Miller dropped his third strike, continued to second on George Foor's sacrifice, and scored as Ebert raced around the bases for his home run on a drive to the bank in deep center. After Treptow rolled out, Hogan walked, Brown singled and Seemuth drove the pair home.

George Foor Doubles

The next two Sidwell counters were the result of Seemuth's four base blow, a long fly that Davidson let go over his head, in the fourth with Hogan on. The final runs for the winners came in the next frame when George Foor doubled to right, Ebert walked and a passed ball sent the runners around another notch. Foor came in as Treptow was tossed out and Ebert followed him when Erbe threw wide to the plate.

The losers counted a pair of runs in each of the second, third and fourth innings. A walk to Al Vestermark, Landrum's triple to left center, an infield out and hits by Redman and Greene brought in the runs in the second. Hits by Flitsch and Miller and an infield out and an error did the third frame damage, while an error, Erbe's scratch hit, a passed ball and an infield out tallied the final Supply runs in the fourth.

Sixty 'T' Men Return in Fall

Football, Track Heads List in Number of Veterans

The pleasant and profitable task of building a team around a nucleus of veterans awaits University of Iowa coaches in most of the 10 sports during 1932-33.

For 60 major letter men of last season's teams have not yet completed their three years of competition, and, unless eliminated by ineffectuality, injury, or failure to return to the university, they will strengthen Hawkeye aggregations.

Six Coaches Cheerful

Most fortunate coaches are Ossie Solem, who expects 16 football players, and George Breenahan, with 11 track and field men scheduled to return. Coach Rollie Williams looks forward to choosing from nine veterans for his basketball team, as does Otto Vogel, coach of baseball.

Charles Kennett is happy because he can put a veteran former golf team on the links and Mike Howard is rejoicing with half a wrestling octet of major letter winners. But swimming and gymnastics each will have only three experienced athletes, tennis one, and no major "T" cross country runners will be present.

These Are the Vets

This is the list compiled in the mid-summer check-up:
Football—Magnussen, Dolly, Moore, Della Vedova, Samuelson, Meltzer, Stutsman, Clearman, Fisher, Trickey, Loufek, Swaney, Thurle, Kriz, Laws, Moffitt.
Track—Adams, Barker, Campisi, Cornog, Dean, Hoskinson, Hutton, Jackson, Moore, Nugnis, Okerlin.
Basketball—Bennett, Eshleman, Filkins, Kotlow, Krumbholz, Moffitt, Riegert, Selzer, Swaney.
Baseball—Captain Riegert, Baker, Christiansen, Drager, Laws, Rieke, Schuttheinrich, Stempel, Schmidt, O'Leary, Pannentor.
Golf—Loufek, Schlanger, Van Epps, Beck.
Gymnastics—Captain Kringle, Bolte, Cassell.
Swimming—Captain Nielsen, Janss, McCloy.

Warneke Gets 6th Straight; Wins by 8-3

Charlie Grimm's Four Bagger Ends Early Dodger Lead

CHICAGO, July 15 (AP)—Lonnie Warneke got off to a shaky start today, Brooklyn rapping him for two runs in the first inning, but from there on the big fellow from Arkansas was at his best and sailed through to his sixth straight victory, 8 to 3, and his thirteenth win of the season.

Charlie Grimm's home run with Barton on base put the Cubs ahead in the second inning and they were never headed, hitting Cy Moore, Phelps and Mungo impartially.

Giants Trim Cards Behind Fitzsimmons

ST. LOUIS, July 15 (AP)—Three big innings, two of which were eliminated by home runs with men on the bases, gave the New York Giants their second straight over the Cardinals today, 12 to 4.

The Giants jumped on Hallahan early, scoring five runs in the second inning, and Freddie Lindstrom disposed of the southpaw for good when he hit one out of the lot with the bases full in the fifth. Mel Ott provided three more runs in the sixth with a homer off Stout.

Jim Bottomley hit two homers and Jim Collins anther to account for three of the losers' runs of Fitzsimmons.

Kremer Bests Pruett, 1-0, as Bucs Win

PITTSBURGH, July 15 (AP)—A brilliant bit of pitching by the veteran Remy Kremer allowed the Pittsburgh Pirates to even their series with the Boston Braves today, 1 to 0.

The Frenchman, displaying his best form of the season, led Boston down with three hits, Hub Pruett hurled masterful ball for the Braves, giving the Pirates but five hits. Both pitchers were given errorless support.

Pittsburgh scored the game's only run in the fourth inning. Vaughan dumped a single behind short and tramped all the way home on Barbee's double on the score board.

Smart Fielding Gives Phillies Win

CINCINNATI, July 15 (AP)—Outright and outpitched, the Phillies nevertheless made smart fielding count for all it was worth to defeat the Cincinnati Reds today 4 to 3 in 12 innings.

In the first inning a double play nipped off a pending run. In the sixth the garden work intimidated Grantham so that he threw away a chance to score and stopped at third. Despite Herman's homer in the third and a bunch of doubles, the Reds had 15 left on the bags to outweigh having no strikeouts chalked against them in favor of Philadelphia pitchers.

Mid-West Net Meet Reaches Final Match

OMAHA, Neb., July 15 (AP)—Paul Halpine of Omaha, and Jack Taylor of Austin, Tex., advanced into the final match of the mid-west tennis tourney by winning their semi-final matches today. They meet in the title match tomorrow.

Halpine today defeated Jack Ringwalt, Omaha, 6-4, 6-3, 6-3, and Taylor trounced Wilbur Fullaway, Omaha, 5-7, 6-4, 6-4, 6-2.

Other semi-final results included: Mixed doubles—Jack Ringwalt, Omaha, and Dorothy Day, Des Moines, defeated Herb Melle, Omaha, and Anita Currey, Omaha, 4-6, 6-0, 6-2.

EMBERS OF LOVE

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON
COPYRIGHT 1931 BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

CHAPTER THIRTY-EIGHT
The truth was that Lily Lou, who had been unused to change, had had so much of it in the last six months that she was beginning to accept it as a perfectly natural part of life.

There was the landing at Liverpool, a sort of spotless town, all laid out in orderly buildings, all as much alike as possible, and lunch in a big and rather cheerless hotel with Madame Nahman inclined to press the floor and buttonhole clerks and managers because there was no mail for her, and someone who was supposed to have met her had failed to arrive.

Grumbling, she decided to go back to the station. There was a short ride through green English country, in one of those queer European trains with seats for six in a compartment, and a corridor along one side. Then London. A London of immense, stone station, decorative British policemen methodically ordering a very British traffic, a cold, damp rain, and then two nights in a rather chilly hotel.

During that time she saw Madame Nahman, whose room was on another floor, just once. At that time she kissed Lily Lou, called her her own darling little companion, and told her that she couldn't have borne two days in this frightful, depressing place without her. Then she disappeared, not to appear again until it was time to take the train for Southampton, and then a night boat to Le Havre where a certain Mademoiselle Susanne Coin, maid and companion, was to be picked up.

Then she appeared only long enough to tell Lily Lou to go on alone, she had decided to make the Polkstone-Boulogne crossing after all, and would meet her in Paris at the Ritz, day after tomorrow, "and here's 10 pounds, dear; this should be you, and don't forget to look for Susanne when the boat docks at Le Havre. She's tall, fair, rather English type. You can't miss her—she speaks English."

A little bewildered, a little thrilled to be traveling alone, Lily Lou started, somewhat hampered by all of Nahman's luggage, as well as her own.

At the boat there was some misunderstanding about her reservation. Madame Nahman had cancelled. . . . there was nothing for Miss Lansing. Sorry, but the staterooms were all engaged. However, she could have a berth in the women's cabin.

After a look at the women's cabin, a stuffy, dismal looking place, overcrowded already, she climbed up on deck, and sat there wrapped in blankets until the boat started. Then, seasick again, she groped her way back to the cabin she had despised before, and cast herself down on top of one of the vacant berths.

In the morning the ship was anchored at the pier on the French side, and the channel looked calm as a millpond. The air was fresh and clean, the sky was blue. The night was just a bad dream. Bustle of leaving. Customs, Officials. But no Susanne Coin. Lily Lou missed the Paris train, waiting and looking for her. An English-speaking gentleman, who turned out to be awaiting a party of tourists whom he was going to guide through Paris and on to Versailles, where someone else would whisk them on to Algiers, advised Lily Lou to go over to a hotel within walking distance of the boat, and have some breakfast.

In the lobby an immense wooden bowl, covered with wire netting, attracted her eye. It proved to contain a quantity of lettuce leaves, and hundreds of small black snails, contentedly nibbling. She decided against breakfast. Went out and stood on the street in front of the hotel. Two French sailors, their red-pompadour blue caps set on at a rakish angle, paused in their promenade to eye her with interest.

She went back into the hotel. She was hungry, anyway. In the dining room, sipping chocolate and reading a newspaper, she saw a pleasant faced blonde young woman who might answer to her description of Susanne Coin.

It was Susanne, and she was delighted to learn that she would have company to Paris, and agitated to think that she had not met the boat, but she had not known that Miss Lansing would be on it! Lily Lou didn't argue the point. She was getting used to people making a fuss over you one minute and forgetting you the next.

So Susanne had another cup of chocolate with Lily Lou. "Never try to drink French coffee, it's vile," she advised her, countermarching Lily Lou's request for coffee. Acquiescent as usual, Lily Lou drank the chocolate and let her new friend take charge of the luggage. On the train they had a compartment all to themselves and Susanne took off her hat and her blue coat, and slipped out of her frivolous high-heeled shoes, gratefully twisting her toes—an action which Lily Lou was to associate forever with France. French travelers, it seemed, removed their shoes as naturally and quickly as they did their hats.

"I am Swiss. And you?" "American. I came from the States with Madame Nahman, to study." "Ah, yes, from New York. I have a sister there. She is married. . . . Susanne was off on a long, detailed history of her sister, her sister's health, and her husband.

Lily Lou let her talk. She thought about London, and the few things she had managed to see. St. Paul's, Westminster, Bond Street, the Parliament buildings. And that was about all. And now she was in France, on a French train, on her way to Paris. Susanne had stopped talking about her sister. She was saying that since Madame would not arrive until Friday, she thought she'd go on to visit another sister at Passy, and she'd be at the Ritz in time to unpack for Madame.

"And should I go on to the Ritz? Or would it be better if I went somewhere less expensive?" Susanne Coin eyed her companion speculatively. The black coat that did not fit very well, the ringless hands, the inexpensive hat. "There are cheaper places. You might go to the Grand Hotel Grivy—that's cheap," she said. "I knew an English woman who stayed there once."

times, the house insistence upon the language of the publicity provision was absolute. General Outline of Original As finally agreed upon the bill bears the general outline of the measure drawn up by senate Democrats weeks ago and approved by the senate at that time. It provides an emergency fund of $300,000,000 for immediate relief loans to states and municipalities upon the basis of need; a $322,000,000 public construction program and an expansion of $1,500,000,000 in the Reconstruction corporation's capital to make loans encouraging employment.

Of the public works program, $190,000,000 could be postponed upon certification of the secretary of the treasury that the funds were not available and could not be secured on reasonable terms. The break in the relief deadlock came suddenly today when President Hoover called the five senators who have been negotiating differences with the house to the White House and told them his decision.

He expressed opposition to the house provision in the bill for publicity on all future loans by the Reconstruction corporation, but said if the house would not yield he would sign the measure and let congress take the responsibility. Later in the day the Reconstruction corporation sent a letter to the conferees stating: "Such a provision is against the public interest and may result in irreparable damage. No one can contend that the publication of the names of the 3,000 banks that have borrowed from this corporation will tend to strengthen their position."

In the opinion of the board, this provision, if enacted into law, would undo much that has been accomplished by this corporation in preserving the credit structure of the nation and, in a large measure, restricting its usefulness in the future." They recommended, but to no avail, that a congressional committee be set up to investigate its books at all and special pleading for the beauty and dignity of American folk-music have attracted considerable attention to his work. The orchestra, conducted by Mr. Stringfield, was furnished through the cooperation of Prof. Philip Greeley Clapp, head of the music department, and consisted of faculty and student players.

Cooperative Demands
The production of "Tread the Green Grass" represented far more than the usual cooperative venture between playwright and producer; this musical fantasy depended for its success upon an immensely difficult scheme demanding cooperative management on the part of the director, Vance M. Morton, the lighting director, Huxton D. Sellman, the designer and maker of costumes, Mildred Sutherland, and the designer of the sets, Arnold Gillette. The entire production was under the general supervision of Prof. E. C. Mabie and Professor Clapp.

Carry Acting Burden
Surely the heaviest burden among the actors fell upon Priscilla J. Morrison, who played the part of Tina, and Marth Coutant, who played the part of Young Davie. I have seen far more amateur productions than are good for any one person to see, but in all sincerity I must say that I forgot last evening that I was seeing players who were not professionals. I don't mean by this that the acting was distinctly better than first class professional acting; it was different, which is exactly what this play demanded.

It was different, above all, in that it was spontaneous and joyful. True, another performance or two will give the actors greater ease and enable them to harmonize somewhat more effectively with the music and lighting cues. I look upon the production of "Tread the Green Grass" at Iowa City as marking the beginning of an epoch in our theater in which this country outside New York will have at last declared its independence of the routine professional stage.

Score by Stringfield
The musical score is the work of Lamar Stringfield, like Mr. Green, a North Carolinian, whose accomplishments as composer, conductor,

They shook hands. She was just the acquaintance of a few hours, but Lily Lou felt very much alone when she went off, with a light-hearted wave of a yellow gloved hand. "Grand Hotel Grivy," she told the whiskered and taciturn taxi-driver into whose ramshackle vehicle her luggage was being placed.

He stared at her for several moments, then motioned for her to get in. The motor started. They lurched off in the dusk of the cold, wintry evening. There was a time, much later, when Lily Lou was to love Paris. A Paris of lights, and laughter, and gaiety and beauty. The horse-drawn cabriolets in the Bois, the great French dressmakers, with their exotic manikins, their breath-taking display of wealth and beauty, the little perfume and jewelry shops on the Rue de Rivoli, the magazines where linen and lace were displayed in liveliness. A Paris of cafes and parties, of theaters and fashion and gay camaraderie on the left bank of the Seine.

But she did not love it now. The cold of a wet November chilled her to the bone. The Grand Hotel Grivy was an ancient vault of a place back of the Opera, with sagging floors, damp smelling velvet hangings, and vast, unclean beds. "With bath?" she read on the letterheads. But she never found the bath. Nobody could tell her where it was, or how to make the necessary reservations for hot water. On the second day, determined to track down that bathroom, she wandered from door to door and from floor to floor, and finally on the top floor she found a door with no number. Boldly she opened it. A bearded gentleman of large proportions, sitting on the edge of a bed, eating bread and cheese.

He looked up sleepily, and slowly showed his teeth in a broad, welcoming smile. Lily Lou banged the door shut without even stopping to beg his pardon, and fled down three flights of winding, narrow stairs to her own room. At the table d'hote that evening she hardly dared look up from her plate. She was afraid of seeing the bearded man.

When Madame Nahman arrived, not on Friday, but on Monday, at the Ritz, Lily Lou moved over there, and had a cot in the dressing room adjoining Nahman's boudoir. At least it was warm there, and there was a bath. Susanne Coin, the maid, bobbed in and out, silent and efficient. She was more company than Nahman. Nahman was always dressing to go out somewhere, and someone was always calling to see her. Men mostly. Men who wore striped trousers and longtailed coats, and handed stick and gloves to Susanne as they came in the door. But a few of the callers were women. Tall, angular women, mostly. Women with black gowns, a great many pearls and diamonds, and immense fur coats.

Cliff Carle, Jay Fink to Meet in City Finals

Title Matches Scheduled for Today's Card

Women's Singles, Men's Doubles Finals on Varsity Courts

By BILL PITZER
Three final and one semi-final match will be played today in the Iowa City tennis championship tournament on the university courts. When Cliff Carle meets Jay Fink in the men's singles at 2 p.m.; Eve Gilbert plays Mary Sampson at 1 o'clock in the women's singles; and the Sullivan-Kambly doubles combination tackles at 10 a.m. the winners of the Chapman-Fink vs. Fitzgerald-Boyles semi-final contest to be held at 9 a.m.

Gilbert downed Woods yesterday in the women's singles semi-finals 7-9, 7-5, 6-2 to become eligible to play Sampson who defeated Dunton Thursday by a close margin. Fink decisively overcame Chapman in the men's singles to the tune of 6-4, 6-4, and will meet Carle in the finals today. Carle won from Beckett 6-0, 6-4 yesterday to put himself in the list of the single finalists today.

Sullivan and Kambly defeated Boyles and Redman yesterday 6-3, 10-8, and will meet the winners of the Fitzgerald-Boyles vs. Chapman-Fink match in the men's doubles finals.

OLYMPIC TRIALS

Saling One of Three in Hurdle Finals

the fallen favorites another chance. This was done by a decision, announced by Chairman Joseph T. England tonight, to extend the qualifying limit in all field events from the original five to eight, for tomorrow's finals. The effect of this offered comeback chances to Dick Barber of Southern California, intercollegiate broad-jump champion, who is seventh today; Kenneth Churchill of San Francisco, intercollegiate record-holder, and James Deniers of Los Angeles, American record-holder, who were sixth and eighth in the javelin; and Bob Jones of Stanford, intercollegiate champion, sixth in the discus.

Munn Benefited
The belated ruling, based on the closeness of performances in competition for the last few qualifying positions, also benefited Clarence Munn, Minnesota football star, who was seventh in the shotput, but shutout Hugh Rhea of Nebraska, who wound up ninth in this event.

The east was handed a trio of surprises when Laurence Johnson of Boston fouled all three of his attempts in the hammer throw; "Red" Record of Harvard, intercollegiate champion failed to qualify in either hurdle race; and Victor Burke of the New York A. C. national 440-yard hurdles champion, was eliminated in the 400-meter race over the timbers.

West Leads
Nevertheless the qualifying trials developed the keenest sort of an intercollegiate tussle in which the far-west emerged on top with the aid of the official ruling, adding three more qualifiers to each of the field events. After the smoke cleared away from the battle for the expanded total of 96 places in 13 different events, the standing showed the far-west in front with 23 places, including two from the Rocky Mountain area; the mid-west next with 30, the east with 26, and south displaying strength with seven.

The middle distance races produced no particular surprises, although Leo Lermond of the New York A. C. had in front a brisk sprint to set home in track of Carl Coon of Pennsylvania and thereby gain the last qualifying place in the 1,500 meter run.

Brooksmith Leads
Glen Cunningham of Kansas and Henry Brooksmith of Indiana showed the way in the two heats of the 1,500. The favorite, Gene Venzke of the New York A. C., took matters easily and finished third, trailing Brooksmith as well as "Pea" Halliwell of Harvard.

In the 800, Eddie Gönung of the Washington A. C. national half-mile champion, flashed finishing speed to win his trial in 1:53.5 from Turner of Michigan, and Bullwinkle of New York. Charles Hornbostel of Indiana took the other trial in 1:54 to beat Otto Rosner of the New York A. C., Howard Dawson of Princeton and Dale Letts of the Illinois A. C. Frank Conner of the New York A. C. topped the hammer throwers easily with 170.39 feet. Clem Friedman of the Olympic club, San Francisco, paced the javelin tossers with 212.05 feet.

Redd Best Broadjumper
Lambert Redd of Bradley Tech., Illinois, easily beat the broad jump field with 25 feet, 2-1/8 inches and finished eighth to qualify in his hop, step and jump. The triple jumping honors went to Signed Bowman, who achieved 48 feet, 11 1/4 inches and led a delegation of three Louisiana qualifiers.

Outstanding among the come-back heroes was the veteran F. Morgan Taylor of the Illinois A. C. 1924 Olympic champion and world record-holder in the 400-meter hurdles. Taylor landed among the four survivors in this event, by winning his first trial as well as semi-final heat, and stood a good chance to make the Olympic team for the third straight time.

Plows Trip Bees

MOLINE (AP)—Claude Passeur, former Decatur Three-I player, made his debut with Moline, tonight, by striking out 14 and holding the Bees to six hits; but some walks, errors and timely batting by Burlington made the Plows put on an eight-inning rally of three runs to nose out the visitors, 6 to 5.

Helene Madison of Seattle won as expected in the 100 meter free style event while Margaret Hoffman of Kingston, Pa., came back to her championship form of 1930 to win the 200 meter breaststroke, the other event on today's program.

Florida Girl Upsets U. S. Diving Champ

JONES BEACH, STATE PARK, NEW YORK, July 15 (AP)—A mile of a girl from Florida, Katherine Rawls of Miami Beach, came to this Long Island beach resort today to dethrone the great Georgia Coleman as America's finest woman diver and give the outstanding performance of the first day of Olympic swimming and diving trials for women.

Defeated in the 200 meter breast-stroke final, where she is national champion, even edged out for third place and membership on the American swimming team, she calmly rowed out to the spring board platform and gave such an example of poise and skill as to pile up 78.64 points and edge out Miss Coleman for first place. Jane Fauntz of Chicago won the third place on the springboard Olympic team.

Miss Rawls' performance was all the more remarkable when it is noted she is only 14 years old and was competing in only her second national diving championship against a field of veterans.

Helene Madison of Seattle won as expected in the 100 meter free style event while Margaret Hoffman of Kingston, Pa., came back to her championship form of 1930 to win the 200 meter breaststroke, the other event on today's program.

Miss Hoffman, in winning her event, shattered the American record Miss Rawls set last summer in the championships. Pushing her way through the water in three minutes, 12 and three-fifths seconds, a full second under Katherine's standard, The world record is 3:11 2/5. Anne Govenick of Chisholm, Minn., was second, right on Miss Hoffman's heels, and Jane Cadwell of Detroit just edged out Miss Rawls for third place. About 50,000 persons watched the events.

The trials continue tomorrow with heats, semi-finals and finals in the 400 meter free style, 100 meter back stroke and the platform dive.

CITY COUNCIL To Appoint Engineers for Appraisal

to 9 a.m. The registration material will be here about Aug. 1.

Receive Sidewalk Bids
Bids for the construction of sidewalks on Fourth avenue, Governor, E, and Ronalds streets were heard and the city clerk was ordered to let the contract to Fresley and Keppeler for $793. Dimity Brothers got the contract for the Fourth avenue sewer, with a low bid of $560.

William T. Goodwin was granted permission to build tourist cabins, a general store, a filling station and garage, and other buildings at the southwest corner of the intersection of U. S. highways 1 and 161.

The council ordered the city clerk to give notice that on Aug. 5 the council will meet to issue bonds totaling $5,500 for the payment of the new fire truck, and $11,210 in five per cent bonds for sewer improvements.

The city engineer and the street commissioner were given permission to correct drainage difficulties in the vicinity of Bayard street, Lexington avenue, and Lusk avenue.

Permission to erect a neon sign was granted the Iowans Luncheonette. The city clerk was asked to publish a warning reminding people not to throw leaves or grass in the gutters. The council adjourned until July 25.

RELIEF BILL Action on Measure to Bring Adjournment

at the Republican administration on the relief question and the long dispute over private loans it engendered between President Hoover and the Democratic Speaker Garner.

Robinson Issues Advice
"When the three mucketeers (Secretaries Mills, Hurley and Hyde, campaign speakers for the administration), go forth to proclaim the policies and wisdom of the administration and criticize the speaker," said Robinson, "let them remember that he advocated equality of treatment and that they insist upon parity of treatment."

Opposes House Provision
He expressed opposition to the house provision in the bill for publicity on all future loans by the Reconstruction corporation, but said if the house would not yield he would sign the measure and let congress take the responsibility.

Later in the day the Reconstruction corporation sent a letter to the conferees stating: "Such a provision is against the public interest and may result in irreparable damage. No one can contend that the publication of the names of the 3,000 banks that have borrowed from this corporation will tend to strengthen their position."

Undo Accomplishments
"In the opinion of the board, this provision, if enacted into law, would undo much that has been accomplished by this corporation in preserving the credit structure of the nation and, in a large measure, restricting its usefulness in the future."

PLAY REVIEW "Tread the Green Grass" Praised by Clark

him, sounds much more subtle than the effects themselves. "Mother Goose" Tale

In Mr. Green's short and gracious curtain speech he doubtless exaggerated when he called his play a tale from Mother Goose, but underlying these words is a truth and a criticism of the play that must be borne in mind by all who witness it.

Essentially, his aim was to lay bare the innermost longings, desires, the spiritual torture and exultation of an adolescent child at war with the forces of life as exemplified by religion in the narrow and worn-out sense on the one hand, and by the spirit pagan joy on the other.

Score by Stringfield
The musical score is the work of Lamar Stringfield, like Mr. Green, a North Carolinian, whose accomplishments as composer, conductor, and special pleading for the beauty and dignity of American folk-music have attracted considerable attention to his work. The orchestra, conducted by Mr. Stringfield, was furnished through the cooperation of Prof. Philip Greeley Clapp, head of the music department, and consisted of faculty and student players.

Cooperative Demands
The production of "Tread the Green Grass" represented far more than the usual cooperative venture between playwright and producer; this musical fantasy depended for its success upon an immensely difficult scheme demanding cooperative management on the part of the director, Vance M. Morton, the lighting director, Huxton D. Sellman, the designer and maker of costumes, Mildred Sutherland, and the designer of the sets, Arnold Gillette. The entire production was under the general supervision of Prof. E. C. Mabie and Professor Clapp.

Carry Acting Burden
Surely the heaviest burden among the actors fell upon Priscilla J. Morrison, who played the part of Tina, and Marth Coutant, who played the part of Young Davie. I have seen far more amateur productions than are good for any one person to see, but in all sincerity I must say that I forgot last evening that I was seeing players who were not professionals. I don't mean by this that the acting was distinctly better than first class professional acting; it was different, which is exactly what this play demanded.

It was different, above all, in that it was spontaneous and joyful. True, another performance or two will give the actors greater ease and enable them to harmonize somewhat more effectively with the music and lighting cues.

I look upon the production of "Tread the Green Grass" at Iowa City as marking the beginning of an epoch in our theater in which this country outside New York will have at last declared its independence of the routine professional stage.

State, Federal Employment Service Lists Position Placements

Total of 1,120 Applicants Get Offers of Work

Requests for Common Labor Tops List of Inquiries

DES MOINES, July 15 (AP)—The state and federal employment service today announced that in June it had 7,645 applicants for positions, of whom 1,120 were placed.

Jobs were offered 1,153 persons, of whom 658 were men and boys. Those for whom employment was obtained included 658 males and 462 females.

By far the largest number of applicants asked for common labor, this number totaling 4,156, but only 192 of them were given work. In the "casual workers" class, the largest number, 659, including 317 men and 342 women, were placed, with farm work ranking third, with 92 men and 12 women being given positions.

Of the 433 females applying for domestic and personal service jobs, 75 were offered positions, but only 50 accepted.

The report is for both the Des Moines and Sioux City offices of the service.

The following table shows the total number of applicants at both offices, the number of jobs offered, and the number, both males and females, placed:

Agriculture, 553, 105, 104; casual workers, 1,267, 659, 659; common labor, 4,156, 192, 192; clerical, professional, 263, 10, 10; hotel, restaurant, 743, 56, 52; domestic, personal, 433, 75, 50; all others, 225, 56, 53. Totals, 7,640, 1,153, 1,120; males 5,329, 658; females, 2,311, 495, 462.

In the Des Moines office, applications were received from 1,691 men and 780 women. Jobs were offered 388 men, all of whom accepted, and 212 women, all of whom also were placed. The Sioux City office placed 520 persons, there being 5,169 applicants.

Bovine T. B. Expense Less in Shelby County

HARLAN, July 15 (AP)—Shelby county's financial report showed that $2,520 was spent for bovine tuberculosis eradication in 1931 in comparison to $5,168 in 1930.

An increase of $1,326.59 over 1930 was shown in the report in expenditures for the county's poor. In 1931, $24,199.45 was spent while the 1930 total was $22,872.86.

National Park Heads Survey Mound Areas

Group Considers Indian Relics as Sites for Monuments

MCGREGOR, July 15 (AP)—The age-old Indian mounds in northeast Iowa, famed as being nearly perfect relics of another civilization, today were being surveyed as possible sites for national monuments.

V. E. Chatelain, chief historian of the national park service, a representative of Horace M. Albright, director of the service, was accompanied on the tour of the mound areas in Allamakee and Clayton counties by members of the state board of conservation, archaeologists, and other interested persons.

Walter H. Beall
Among them were Walter H. Beall of West Union, president of the Northeastern Iowa National Park association; Mrs. Henry Frankel of Des Moines and Mrs. Grace Gilbert King, of the state board; Dr. Charles R. Keyes of Mount Vernon, Iowa, archaeologist; Ellison Orr of Waukon, and W. H. C. Elwell of McGregor.

There was little doubt that one or more of the areas would be designated for preservation by the government as a national monument. It was recalled that Albright in February, when deciding against the project of forming a national park in the region, said he would be glad to set aside some portion of the mound area as a monument.

"Baby National Parks"
If Chatelain reports favorably, the government will simply set aside an area and protect it to preserve the mounds, which are considered to be of historical value. Perhaps the nickname applied to these monuments, "baby national parks" most aptly defines them.

This afternoon the group visited the area at the mouth of the Turkey river near here. After a night spent here, the party will go to some mounds several miles north of Lansing.

Council Bluffs Boys Reclaim Lake Region

COUNCIL BLUFFS, July 15 (AP)—Local boys who have assumed the responsibility of reclaiming Lake Manawa near here, report "steady and worthwhile" progress.

A dike on the south and west banks and the widening of a road are among the improvements made. A dike 60 feet wide is also to be built on the east end of the lake. Hundreds of elms, other saplings, and shrubs have been planted.

4-H Clubs to Conduct Achievement Show

84 Year Old Farmer Starts on Long Tour

HUMBOLDT, July 15 (AP)—John L. Spayde, 84, of Rapid City, S. Dak., was too busy farming in his youth to take any trips, so now he is making up for lost time.

He left his home June 9 in his automobile for a leisurely trip across the continent. He was a guest at the home of his brother, J. C. Spayde, here, and then he drove to Dysart, where he was the postmaster from 1880 to 1885. Spayde, who has also lived in Council Bluffs and Omaha, expects to travel most of the year and to visit all parts of the United States and, possibly, Canada.

Corn Bolsters Market After Wheat Slump

CHICAGO, July 15 (AP)—Sudden bulges in corn values rallied the grain markets today after wheat had collapsed to within 3-8 of the all-time bottom price record.

Reports that the Kansas corn crop was being hurt by dry hot weather were largely responsible for the action of corn. Wheat was bearishly influenced by domestic primary receipts much larger than a week ago, with foreigners persistently minimizing purchases from North America, and by advices from both sides of the Canadian border that danger of black rust damage was daily becoming more remote.

Corn closed unsettled 1-2-7-8 above yesterday's finish, wheat unchanged to 1-2 higher, oats 1-8 off to 1-8 up, and provisions unchanged to 5 cents down.

Adding impetus to the upward trend of the corn market was an improved shipping demand, with vessel-room chartered for 400,000 bushels to go to Buffalo. Fresh strength displayed by hog values acted also as a stimulus to speculative purchases of corn. Besides, receipts of corn at primary points today totaled but 223,000 bushels, against 414,000 a year ago. Except in Kansas, advances at hand indicating field conditions were ideal, but reports current were that in central and northwest Kansas the crop had been badly injured.

Wheat weakness developed in the face of comparative strength shown by quotations at Liverpool, a circumstance ascribed to scantiness of

Some buying of corn against simultaneous selling of wheat was apparent. Oats weakened with wheat, and both made a new low price record for the season. Oats end rye harvesting was said to be achieving rapid progress.

Provisions sagged owing to correct anticipation that Chicago stocks of lard would exhibit a large decrease for the last fortnight.

Closing indemnities: Wheat—July 45, 46 1-8; September 47 3-8—1-2, 48 5-8—3-4; December 50 5-8—3-4, 51 3-4—7-8. Corn—September 32 5-8, 33 5-8; December 32 3-8, 33 3-8.

Crawford County 'Hoppers Increase

DENISON, July 15 (AP)—Grasshoppers are increasing in numbers in Crawford county, but they have so much food along field borders that they are not doing much damage to crops.

The pests are of the differential variety. They are now small, but soon they will develop into big yellow-black locusts that last year did so much damage in Iowa, Nebraska, and the Dakotas.

YOUR NEW DIAL TELEPHONE

How It Works

WHEN you make a call from a telephone of the kind now used in Iowa City, you give a number to the operator who connects you with the desired line. In the near future, after completion of the extensive improvement program now in progress, you will use a dial telephone and your regular local calls will be completed by means of electrical and mechanical apparatus in the telephone building.

When you lift the receiver of a dial telephone a steady flow of electrical current is set up between your telephone and the central office equipment just as in the other or "manual" telephone. When you dial the number "3," for example, the steady flow of electrical current is broken three times. This makes a series of three electrical "pulses." Similar electrical "pulses" are created corresponding to each number dialed. The apparatus in the central office recognizes these pulses as part of the called number. A small governor on the rear of the dial allows the pulses to be sent at just the proper speed.

With dial service in Iowa City, you will dial in succession the digits of the telephone number wanted. After the last digit has been dialed, the bell at the telephone you have called starts to ring or you hear a signal informing you that the line you have called is busy. When the telephone is being rung, you hear a burr-burr-ring sound. When the line is busy you hear a "buzz-buzz-buzz" sound at regular intervals.
