

IOWA CITY WELCOMES PRESIDENT

Hoover Assails Demos, Proposes G.O.P. Aids to Agriculture

Life Aboard Hoover Special Far From Humdrum, Quiet, Daily Iowan Reporter Finds

Press Representatives Kept as Busy as President

By MARGARET HISE (Daily Iowan Staff Writer)

Aboard the Hoover Special, En route from West Liberty to Iowa City—"Bertie" Hoover came back to scenes of his childhood today, met a few of his old pals, helped one of his first teachers aboard his train, and remembered how he used to slide down the nearby hills on his tummy. And the 4,000 persons assembled at the West Liberty station, where the Special stopped for about eight minutes, seemed to remember, too, because they cheered as lustily and greeted him as boisterously as though he were returning to the old swimming hole "way back when."

It didn't take much more than a smile and a loyal Republican expression to board the Special but everybody was so busy yelling right back at the West Liberty throngs that no one seemed to care.

What of the Hoovers?

Well, what about the Hoovers? Were they enjoying the trip? Were they glad to be back "home"? Did they sleep well? Was everybody happy? No one seemed to know because all the occupants of at least three press cars were so busily engaged writing their daily stint of "copy" that they had no time to answer questions.

But when the Special was well on its way toward another rousing welcome at Iowa City, things began to happen in the Hoover reception car. While the president was chatting with his old schoolmarm, Mrs. Caran, the first lady was getting things tidied up for her afternoon party. And secretaries and porters scurried through the long train carrying flowers, packages, letters, telegrams, mimeographed sheets, and assortments of fruits and tea cups.

Mrs. Hoover Busy

Mrs. Hoover had a lot of rushing around to do this morning. She has been so busy knitting that she hasn't had much time to prepare for her reception. Just before the Special arrived at West Liberty, she ordered a clean tablecloth put on her luncheon in honor of Mrs. Caran.

The first lady is a domestic person; she drops her knitting to arrange flowers, and fusses around these private staterooms, just like any ordinary housewife. She ordered the screens removed from the windows so the party might have an unobstructed view of the welcoming crowds.

Throngs Greet Special

This wasn't such a bad idea either, as there was much to be seen when the train reached Iowa City. Students and town-people thronged about the station and some were perched on top of baggage wagons, telephone poles, and even on the roof of the watchman's shanty. The university band failed to drown out the cheers and shouts of the Hoover enthusiasts. From the train it looked as though the countryside had been deserted and everyone in the county had assembled about the station.

As Mrs. Hoover stepped to the rear platform with the president, she was presented with a bouquet of pink roses by Maxine Schlanbusch and Margaret Olsen, Iowa City girls, who were awarded Golden Eagle badges last spring. The first lady is honorary president of the Girl Scouts of America. Mrs. Walter A. Jessup presented flowers from the Republican Women's club of Iowa City.

Clad in Swagger Coat

Mrs. Hoover wore a swagger coat of wine-red tweed, with brown hat and accessories.

Occupants of the less important cars, such as the press car, the dining car, and the Iowa car, are all jolly and pleasant. Every thing is perfectly informal; groups are chatting over their lunch in the diner and one foursome is enjoying a hand of bridge. To all appearances they are as comfortable as if they were seated in some private home. The interiors of the cars are homey and beautifully furnished with upholstered furniture, deep rugs, and all the modern conveniences of a family residence.

Each correspondent in the press car has his own portable table and typewriter. At one end of the car are

Presented With Roses

Britain Moves for Conference

Would Discuss German Withdrawal From Arms Parley

LONDON, Oct. 4 (AP)—The British government tonight was seeking to arrange a conference among Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany to discuss Germany's withdrawal from the disarmament conference.

The British government initiated the idea in an effort to find out whether the difficulties arising from Germany's withdrawal could be smoothed out in an exchange of views.

If the conference course were generally approved, it was authoritatively indicated, Great Britain would be willing to arrange a meeting in London at a suitable date.

(Germany withdrew from the disarmament conference last month, charging that she had been denied equality in armaments, and insisted she would not return until her demand for equality was recognized.)

lounge chairs and smoking stands. Baskets of flowers and fruit are in all the compartments.

As the train started moving out of Iowa City, one military gentleman asked his companion if he had "chowed" yet. Matter of fact press men sat down to their typewriters, and Mr. President with his escort rolled on to Des Moines.

HIGHLIGHTS of Hoover Speech

DES MOINES, Oct. 4 (AP)—"Three of the great perils (of the depression) were invisible except to those who had the responsibility of dealing with the situation. The first... the steady strangulation of credit... Another, federal revenues fell by nearly one half. The third peril... that of being forced off the gold standard."

"I have been accorded the greatest honor which my country can bestow—that is to lead it amongst the nations of the world in the paths of peace and to serve in the stern duty of the battle against the invisible forces of a great world calamity."

"Thousands of our people in their bitter distress and losses are saying that 'things could not be worse.' No person who has any remote understanding... ever utters that remark. Had it not been for the immediate and unprecedented actions of our government, things would be infinitely worse today."

"Let no man tell you it could not be worse. It could be so much worse that these days, now, distressing as they are, would look like veritable prosperity."

"I was born in the midst of the terrible times of the seventies... and only in that period has our nation had to meet a situation in any degree comparable to that with which we now contend."

"I vividly recall a Christmas upon the farm when the sole resources of joy were popcorn balls, sorghum, and hickory nuts... no store toys... no store clothes."

"... an economic storm which embraces the whole world... is the result of a terrific eruption in civilization itself."

"... We have fought to... preserve the safety, the principles, and ideals of American life. We have built the foundations of recovery."

"... Many of these battles have had to be fought in silence... because the very disclosure of the forces opposed to us would have undermined the courage of the weak and induced panic in the timid, which would have destroyed the very basis of success. Hideous misrepresentation and unjustified complaint had to be accepted in silence."

Republican or Not—What Do You Think?

When the fireman on Hoover's special train was asked yesterday whether he was a Republican or not he just laughed and said, "Well, what do you think?"

A Negro porter hearing the question stuck his head out the window and bellowed, "Boy, you betta keep Hoover in there. You can't do no better."

Des Moines Crowds Hail Hoover Talk

President Says Great Economic Victory Achieved

DES MOINES, Oct. 4 (AP)—Before a cheering farm belt audience, President Hoover tonight declared "a great national victory has been achieved" against depressive economic forces and enunciated a series of 12 Republican "policies" in aid of agriculture.

Interrupted often by shouts and applause, the chief executive asserted directly that if the "program" sponsored by members of the Democratic party during the last session of congress had been enacted "it would have been the end of recovery."

Higher Tariffs

As items in his series of "policies," the president proposed among other things, higher farm tariffs where necessary to protect agriculture, revision of the agricultural marketing act and repeal of the stabilization clause, and the use of annual payments on the foreign debt to expand agricultural markets abroad.

The president's address, his first campaign speech since accepting the renomination, climaxed a day in which he greeted and was greeted by nearly a score of audiences. With Mrs. Hoover beside him, he appeared a dozen times upon the rear platform of his special train as it rolled across Illinois and into Iowa, his birth state. Police estimated his audiences as ranging from several scores to 12,000. In a nine mile drive through the streets of Des Moines he was accorded a white shower of torn paper and ticker tape.

Standing Room Only

In the Des Moines coliseum, where he delivered his address, there was standing room only in the 10,000 seat auditorium, and in the Shrine temple and on the capitol plaza, where he appeared later before overflow crowds, police estimated his listeners at several thousand. He spoke briefly at both places before attending a reception of Iowa editors at the Fort Des Moines hotel and departing for his train.

At the Shrine temple, when he said his reception had convinced him that Iowans were "loyal hard-working Republicans," a voice from the audience called out: "and Democrats, too."

"They too are welcome in our fold," the president replied.

In his first major campaign address since accepting the renomination, delivered from the stage of the Des Moines coliseum, the chief executive described in detail activities in what he called "the battles on a thousand fronts." At one time, he asserted, due to withdrawals of gold by foreign countries, hoarding by American citizens, and other forces, the secretary of the treasury informed him that the United States could remain on the gold standard "but two weeks longer" unless a remedy was found.

"Utter Chaos"

"Being forced off the gold standard in the United States," he said, "meant utter chaos. Never was our nation in greater peril, not alone in banks and financial systems, money and currency, but that forbode dangers, moral and social chaos, with years of conflict and derangement. In the midst of this hurricane the Republican administration kept a cool head and rejected every counsel of weakness and cowardice. Some of the reactionary economists urged that we should allow the liquidation to take its course until we had found bottom. 'Some people talked of vast issues of paper money, some talked of suspending payments of government issues, some talked of setting up a council of national defense, some talked foolishly of dictatorship—any of which would have produced panic itself. Some assured me that no man could propose increased taxes in the United States to balance the budget in the midst of a depression and survive an election.'"

Demo Rivals Make Peace at Convention

'Happy Warrior' Breaks Long Period of Silence

STATE ARMORY, Albany, N. Y., Oct. 4 (AP)—"Happy Warrior," and Governor Roosevelt, who gave him that sobriquet, met with handclaps and praise for each other on the platform of the Democratic state convention tonight, as their mutual choice, Herbert H. Lehman, was nominated for governor.

It was the first meeting of New York Democracy's two most celebrated figures since they fought for the presidential nomination at Chicago.

Greets Roosevelt

It was "Hello, Frank," and a big smile, as Smith rode across the platform under glaring floodlights and to the cheers of a frenzied crowd estimated by police at 10,000.

The din of the throng drowned out what they then said to each other, but the governor's secretary later said the first remarks were these:

Roosevelt: "Al, this comes from the heart."

Smith: "That goes for me, too."

Clasp Hands

Then they stood with clasped hands and passed remarks back and forth which broadened their smiles. Flashlights boomed. They faced the cameras, hands still joined.

"Just one more, governor," a photographer said.

"Why not?" Smith shouted back. It took a full minute of gavel pounding to stop the band's "Sidewalks of New York" and "Happy Days" and to quiet the hat waving, noisy crowd.

Nominates Lehman

Smith, still in the glare of the bright lights, faced the sea of delegates and spectators to put Roosevelt's lieutenant governor in nomination.

He reviewed his political career. He launched vituperous criticism at the Republican administration. Then he came to prohibition. He praised the platform adopted at Chicago.

He said the prohibition "reforms" he advocated could be accomplished "by a Democratic victory — by the election of the Democratic candidates in the coming election."

Japan Refuses Policy Change in Manchuria

TOKYO, Oct. 4 (AP)—The cabinet decided today that the Lytton commission's report on Manchuria to the League of Nations did not constitute cause to alter its Manchurian policy.

A cardinal point of that policy is the separation of Manchuria from China and the maintenance of the independent state of Manchukuo, which the Japanese assisted in creating, to replace the old regime owing allegiance to Nanjing.

General Sadao Araki, the minister of war, led the criticism of the Lytton report at the cabinet meeting.

The report was merely "a diary of a fortnight's journey through Manchuria," the war minister said, and it showed an inability to grasp the fundamentals of the problem."

The cabinet meeting came after a foreign office spokesman had informed vernacular newspapers that Japan saw a close connection between the publication of the Lytton report, Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson's speech at Philadelphia last Saturday, and the concentration of the United States navy in the Pacific.

Daniel Frohman to Open Lectures

Daniel Frohman, one of the deans of New York play producers, will open the University of Iowa's lecture series when he appears here Oct. 20.

Other speakers during the first semester are Countess Margita Bethlen, wife of the Hungarian prime minister, Nov. 4; and E. Carlton Wilder, former United States consul in China, Dec. 2.

The Rest of Them Have Nothing Over Donald Deaton Now

The rest of the family has nothing on Donald now.

Donald Deaton, son of Mrs. Claire Hoover Deaton, yesterday pushed through the crowd to the train platform where President Hoover was standing. He drew Mrs. Hoover's attention and asked her if he might shake hands with the president.

Mrs. Hoover called the president over to the side, and Donald was rewarded with a hearty handshake. Donald was the only one in the family that had not shaken hands with Hoover, he said.

Indictments Involve Two Insull Heads

State Brings Charges of Fraud Against Brothers

CHICAGO, Oct. 4 (AP)—Samuel Insull, 72 year old public utility ruler until his realm crumbled during the depression, was indicted today with his brother, Martin, on charges of embezzlement and larceny. The collapse of the Insull holding companies caused losses of many millions of dollars.

The indictments were based on charges that funds were abstracted from two financing companies in the Insull utility system and used to support a marginal stock market account maintained by Martin Insull.

Allege Funds Divested

Samuel Insull was alleged in the indictments to have had knowledge of the withdrawals and to have endorsed a check for part of the abstraction. The total of funds allegedly diverted was $514,942.74.

A county grand jury returned the indictments in open court after deliberating less than an hour on evidence given them during the morning by six witnesses.

Caplauses were issued immediately for the arrest of the two brothers. Action was started to extradite Samuel Insull from Paris, where he has been since shortly after the financing machinery for his vast holdings collapsed, and Martin Insull from Canada.

Bond of $75,000 was set for Martin Insull and for Samuel, $50,000. The elder brother is named in only two of the indictments returned and Martin in all three.

"Only Scratched Surface"

"We have only scratched the surface," said State's Attorney John A. Swanson after the indictments were returned. "Our investigations so far have convinced me a much more serious case will be built up eventually against the Insulls."

Swanson immediately dispatched telegrams to Gov. L. L. Emmerson requesting him to ask Secretary of State Stimson to seek extradition of the Insull brothers. The prosecutor's abrupt action was a departure from the routine method of seeking extradition.

Each of the three indictments contain four counts: larceny, larceny by baillee, and two counts of embezzlement worded differently for legal reasons.

Children Reveal Deaths of Parents

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 4 (AP)—A double tragedy, which police have constructed as a murder and suicide, was revealed today by two young children who ran crying to the home of their grandparents.

Mrs. Josephine Kalls, 28, was found dead on her bed, apparently slain by her husband whose body was lying on the bathroom floor. He had inhaled gas. Three slashes on his wrist indicated that he might have bled to death. Police had not determined how Mrs. Kalls was killed.

Police Hold Stuart

WATERLOO (AP)—Police held Alvin A. Stuart, 28, of Kansas City, on a charge of passing counterfeit money.

Killed in Explosion

CEDAR RAPIDS (AP)—Otto Everettes, 55, farmer near Tipton, was killed when dynamite he was using in a quarry near his home suddenly exploded.

Cheering, Laughing Throngs Greet Hoover as Train Rolls Slowly Into Iowa City Station

Crowds Surge About Rear Coach in Hopes of Hearing President During Brief Appearance Here

By DON PRYOR (City Editor, The Daily Iowan)

Cheering and laughing, curious and expectant, strangely elated and calmly wondering, between six and seven thousand men and women and scurrying children surged and pushed around the rear of President Hoover's special train as it rolled slowly into the Rock Island station yesterday.

While the train crept past the station, thousands of eyes looked toward the rear coach. As the coach drew nearer the tension rose higher and higher and the crowd murmured. And suddenly, there was the president himself, almost like his pictures, smiling.

Smiles at Crowd

As the train passed the station and stopped at Clinton street, President Hoover, who in his boyhood was a frequent visitor to Iowa City, stood with Mrs. Hoover and a few friends on the back platform and beamed on the cheering crowd.

The excited throngs closed in around the rear of the train, cheering. Relentlessly, they pressed toward the president, anxious to shake the hand of the native son who became the nation's chief.

As Senator L. J. Dickinson raised his hand for silence and the cheers of the crowd ebbed to a deep murmur, President Hoover, with a warm smile, said:

Visited Iowa City

"Mrs. Hoover and I have returned to our native state. You know we were both born in Iowa. I feel I am a member of your university family since many members of my own family attended your university. I came to Iowa City many times when I was a boy at West Branch.

"I have lived in a university community most of my life and have always participated in the activities of the university, for when I am not in public life I live on the campus.

"This is not the occasion for a political speech. I hope tonight in Des Moines to say something of interest to all of you and trust that you will be able to listen in.

"Mrs. Hoover and I appreciate the interest all of you have shown in us in coming here to greet us. I take your welcome as an expression of your good will to a native son of Iowa."

Greeted by Committee

As soon as the train stopped, President and Mrs. Hoover were greeted by an official reception committee headed by President Walter A. Jessup of the University of Iowa. Both leaned far over the rail to shake hands.

Mrs. Hoover, standing near the south side of the platform, smiling and waving at the crowd, was greeted by Mrs. Jessup, who handed her a bouquet of red roses on behalf of the Iowa City Republican women's organization.

Girl Scouts and officials of the organization here also presented Mrs. Hoover, official national head of the Girl Scouts, with a bouquet.

Bares Head

The university band, in formation at the north side of the tracks, swung into the national anthem as soon as the train stopped. President Hoover stood with his head bared while the band played, a broad smile on his face.

The train was made up of 10 maroon steel coaches of the Pennsylvania railroad. Three of them were occupied by newspaper men and the rest by members of the president's party. The train was brought from Chicago by a locomotive of the Rock Island lines.

Looks Older

The president, according to members of the reception committee that greeted him when he visited Iowa City four years ago, looked much older. Deep lines grooved his face. He was dressed in a plain dark suit.

The crowd, swarming over the tracks and standing on the tops of baggage trucks and around the sides of the water tower, poured over beside the tracks on the nearby lawns.

Despite imprecations of railroad officials, the roof of the station was dotted with grimy urchins who "shinned" up a signal post outside the ticket office. Others clung precariously on telephone poles, straining for a view of the president. Still others were perched in tree tops.

Clears Crowd

As the train rolled slowly through the crowd, four officials of the Rock Island railroad stood on the front of the engine to see that no one was pushed against the coaches or the locomotives.

To control the thousands of persons, officers of the Iowa City police

More Than 150 Women of Southeastern Iowa Convene for Women's Club Meeting

Mrs. Popham Presides at Session of Morning

More than 150 women of southeastern Iowa convened in Iowa City yesterday for the opening session of the second district convention of the Iowa Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. R. G. Popham of Marengo, district director, presided at the morning session at the Presbyterian church, with Eleanor Parker serving as secretary pro tem in the absence of Mrs. S. C. Snider, convention secretary.

An address of welcome was given by Mrs. W. E. Spence, president of the Iowa City Federation of Women's Clubs. The response on behalf of the delegates was given by Mrs. F. H. Little of Muscatine.

Entertains Meeting
Mrs. L. G. Lawyer sang two numbers at the close of which Mrs. Thomas Reese, local chairman, made several announcements. Short reports on activities within the district, at morning and afternoon sessions, were given by the following women: Mrs. E. L. Hollis, Iowa; Mrs. A. W. Higgins, Clinton; Mrs. Clara Sockrider, Jackson; Mrs. O. G. Mars, Johnson; Mrs. F. H. Little, Muscatine; and Mrs. Frank Session, Scott.

Ina Tyler, of the extension division, gave a talk on "The need of social welfare work in Iowa." Miss Tyler stressed the fact that social welfare workers should not be interested exclusively in relief work but should give such individual service as would encourage independence.

Public safety as regards the safety of the nation was the text of a talk given by Mrs. H. E. Gratiot of Dubuque. She urged the women to consider the presidential candidates from a non-partisan view point and to use their vote for the acquisition of public safety in national political affairs.

Serve Luncheon
Luncheon was served to the convention delegates and guests in the church dining room at 12:15 p.m. Mrs. Galen Tilden of Ames, general federation director, spoke on the plans of the General Federation.

She spoke further on the care that should be taken to give out only that news which would be of interest to the public. The convention adjourned until 2:30 p.m. to allow the delegates to meet President and Mrs. Herbert C. Hoover.

Honor Mrs. Volland
The afternoon session of the convention was opened with a memorial for Mrs. R. H. Volland of Iowa City. Before her death, Mrs. Volland had held the office of treasurer of the Iowa Federation of Women's Clubs. Argue Politics at Iowa Union

Debate Features Meeting for New Students of University

Amid the cheers and hisses of Republicans and Democrats, Vergil Tracy, A3 of Council Bluffs, and LaVerne Kluss, C3 of Postville, argued for Hoover and Roosevelt, respectively, at the university debate mixer held last night in Iowa Union.

The debate was a feature of the program at which students new to the university were instructed in the plans for campus and intercollegiate forensics for the coming year. Representative debaters and speech department faculty members were introduced to those present, and refreshments were served at the close of the program.

J. Harold Saks, L2 of Council Bluffs, was in charge of the affair, which was sponsored by the debate board and Delta Sigma Rho, honorary forensic fraternity.

Parade Trails Hoover; 2,000 Boo President

Blame G. O. P. Heads for Drop in Farm Prosperity

DES MOINES, Oct. 4 (AP)—Greeted by cheers and applause of crowds lining the streets, sympathizers of the farmers holiday movement today paraded in protest against agricultural and economic conditions.

More than 2,000 men, women and children, dressed in overalls or working clothes, rode or marched through Des Moines streets, covering part of the route followed by a parade welcoming President Hoover later in the day.

Demand Relief
Their trucks and bare signs calling attention to current farm prices and economic conditions, demanding relief and fixing blame on President Hoover. At one point the paraders "booted" a large painting of the president, under which their trucks passed.

Many of the paraders were from distant counties, including parts of the state where the farm strike violence flared a few weeks ago. Woodbury, Plymouth and Cherokee counties in particular sent large delegations.

Signs on Trucks
"In Hoover we trusted; now we are busted."
"Cost of production only will save our homes."

"Mr. Curtis: We are not so damned dumb in 1932—signed, Mr. and Mrs. Iowa Farmer."

Several signs demanded cost of production prices for farm products, the objective of the farm holiday movement, and others demanded a special session of congress before the November election.

Cheer Parade
Streets along the route were decked with flags and bunting in greeting to President Hoover who arrived in Des Moines this afternoon to deliver the opening address of his campaign.

Crowds cheered and applauded as the parade moved through the business district. Men and women riding in the trucks shouted back or pointed to their signs.

While the demonstration was being staged reports were received that the farmers strike would be renewed in Emmet county, where the county holiday association voted to inaugurate a new crop holding campaign.

working would have been harmful, the president said. There were times when "hideous misrepresentation and unjustified complaint had to be accepted in silence." Describing efforts to keep the United States on the gold standard, he said, "Happily we have won this battle. There is no longer any danger from disclosure." At one point in this description of what he termed a hitherto undisclosed battle, he inserted the following paragraph.

"An amazing statement was made a few days ago in this state that the passage of the tariff act of 1930 started such a drain on the gold reserves of the principal commercial countries as to force practically all of them off the gold standard. 'The facts are that the tariff act was not passed until nearly one year after the depression began.' The president said the governments efforts 'turned the tide toward victory' by last July.

He said, "The foreigners drew out most of their money, but finding that the American dollar rank honest on every counter, in new confidence they are sending it back. Since June $275,000,000 of gold has flowed back to us from abroad. Hoarders in our own country, finding our institutions safeguarded, have returned $250,000,000 to the useful channels of business. If we calculate the values of this year's agricultural products compared with the low points, the farmers as a whole are, despite the heart-breaking distress which still exists, a billion dollars better off. Prices have a long way to go before the farmer has an adequate return, but at least the turn is toward recovery."

Known Death Toll Reaches Total of 15 in California

BAKERSFIELD, Cal., Oct. 4 (AP)—With the recovery today of three bodies from the debris-strewn washes near Tehachapi Pass, the list of known dead in the flood there last Friday night was increased to 15.

Officials still fixed a tentative death list at about 30, although they were unable to determine whether any of the three bodies might be one or more of six persons who disappeared but of whom no trace has been found.

Searchers have found no trace of a locomotive and a freight car which were washed away in the flood and in which two itinerants told authorities 15 men were trapped.

Real Fashion Art Taught in New Clinic

Novel Course Emphasizes Importance of Co-ordination Between Clothes, Figure, Hair and Make-Up for Milady Who Desires to Keep in Tune with the Vogue.

By ALICE DENHOFF

NEW YORK.—Fashion is becoming something more than just having a flair for clothes and a knowledge of what suits one.

For fifteen hundred buyers and stylists from all over the country have been going to school this last week. And they have learned that fashion is a science and an art as well as a business.

When Harper's Bazaar decided to hold a fashion clinic for buyers, lots of women were astounded. For surely a buyer knows all about clothes before she gets the job. But the buyers are more astounded than anybody since they have completed their course at the Bazaar clinic. Experts lectured. Experts on the figure, the face, the hair and the skin, as well as fashion experts. And now that the buyers are on the way to their respective homes, the latest fashion and beauty secrets, together with the important knowledge of the art of co-ordinating clothes, figure, hair and make-up are due to be imparted to women who live far from the style centers of Paris and New York.

No longer can we buy a hat and let it go at that. No longer is it sufficient if the hat becomes us. For now the hat is merely part of the picture, unless it is one with the hair. A certain line must be created by the hat together with the hair. It isn't easy to achieve, but the result is certainly worthwhile. It gives that look of elegance that is or should be the ultimate goal of every smart dresser. Miss Kathleen Howard, editor of the Harper's and presiding genius of the fashion clinic, brought the news that in Paris everyone is cutting her hair shorter. Clusters of curls have had to go to avoid a cluttered appearance that would have been brought about by the higher neckline and the built-up shoulder.

More than ever, the need for slenderness is emphasized. The woman who thought that curves were due for a showing is in for a surprise. The new frocks make a flat diaphragm more necessary than ever. Last year it was the hipline that came in for attention and subsequent punishment. Now it is the diaphragm. All costume lines give an upward lifted effect, and this necessitates an extremely good posture. But the result is beautiful, with a natural dignity that should inspire any woman with poise and grace.

Despite the quantities of precious furs and sumptuous fabrics that mark the new modes, simplicity is the keynote—but it is a simplicity carefully thought out and studied, achieved through much art and application. No matter how beautiful a dress is, how colorful and rich, it must first of all be essentially "wearable." And we all know that that is not always the case with important frocks.

Materials are of prime importance. In the exhibition rooms of the convention were amazing new materials, fabrics that show how silks are getting rougher by the season, and woollens more steek and smooth. Lots of jerseys for sports and general wear, crinkled, ribbed, open and close mesh, diagonal, heavy and very light. Patou uses an exquisite tricort for tailored jackets that made a sensation when shown at the recent Paris openings. Corduroy is being extensively used for all things, ranging from gala evening frocks to raincoats.

The story of velvet adds additional chapters each season, with new weaves attracting much attention. Flat crepes are still very important, said Miss Howard, but they have been dressed up to create new surfaces. The color story is an interesting one, so it means that the question of make-up is going to become more complicated than ever. The color of our face must be determined now by the color of our gown. But the result looks grand.

Stock Market Prices Show Little Change

Feeble Rally Serves to Bring Small Gains

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP)—Advances had their turn in the stock market today, but the rally was feeble pushed and closing prices were irregular.

Trading was just as listless as for almost a fortnight back, although turnover of 1,239,710 shares represented some improvement over Monday.

Move Up
At one time leading equities moved up one to two points, chiefly on the good showing made by cotton and firmness of wheat.

Net changes were almost entirely fractional, so evenly distributed that the Standard Statistics-Associated Press composite closed unchanged.

especially the latter—figured rather prominently in the late dealings, both closing fractionally off. U. S. Steel, Allied Chemical, National Biscuit, American Telephone, Coca Cola and Sears Roebuck showed fractional net gains, offsetting moderate declines by Du Pont, Woolworth, American Tobacco "B" and a few other favorites. United Aircraft was relatively active, finishing unchanged.

Rumors Inconclusive
To what extent improving freight traffic will encourage railroads to overhaul equipment or buy new rolling stock is rather conjectural. Pennsylvania, New York Central, Chicago Great Western and Baltimore & Ohio are among the roads which are taking steps toward such programs which, incidentally, contribute their bit toward helping the unemployment situation.

Buy your foods out of the high rent district. The next time you go to Chicago, note the practical absence of grocery stores in the downtown district. This store not only saves money on rent on account of its location, but it passes this saving on to you in the form of values not to be matched elsewhere. A private switch track eliminates drayage, which saving we pass on to you. Direct purchases in carload quantities spell lower costs passed on to you in lower prices. The largest volume, together with the lowest overhead of any complete food store in Iowa City enables you to meet present economic difficulties without sacrificing quality, cleanliness, or service.

On October 14, 1871, the late George Hummer, father of the present manager of the Hummer Grocer Company, opened his first food store in Iowa City. For sixty-one years this family has been identified with the purveying of foods. To commemorate these sixty-one years of service, this store will next week offer values which we believe will interest you in a week long sale.

University Theater Pioneers

HOPE FOR THE American drama lies not on Broadway, writes Alexander Bakshy, well-known critic, in an article in the October Current History, but in the "Little," "Community" or "College" theater such as is found at the University of Iowa. Of them he says: "The more enterprising have indeed already in many instances proved that they lack neither the vision nor the courage to translate their ideals into reality. The formation of small circuits for the exchange of companies of actors is one such boldly conceived and ably executed venture. Another which has been started on the initiative and with the assistance of Barrett H. Clark promises to develop into a major factor in the progress of American drama. The scheme proposes a network of theaters which will provide special facilities for the production of new plays. The University Theater at Iowa, for example, which only this summer distinguished itself by an ambitious production of Paul Green's Tread the Green Grass, a play that failed to find a Broadway producer, has now engaged Lynn Riggs to be what might be called its court dramatist during the next season. Such personal engagements, however, are rare."

Broadway, Mr. Bakshy believes, caters too much to what it calls the "popular" or "box-office" play as against what it derisively dubs "highbrow."

This is not the first favorable mention of the University of Iowa theater that has been made in a popular periodical. Burns Mantle, drama critic for the Chicago Tribune prophesied a similar future for the drama in a Tribune article last summer. He commented especially upon work accomplished by Director E. C. Mabie in bringing to Iowa the two premieres, Owen Davis's "The Harbor Light," and Paul Green's "Tread the Green Grass."

Such articles jar us, rather, into the realization that we tend to take our University theater entirely too casually. The performances we applaud politely, yes. Yet quite unintentionally we fail to appreciate the effort, the ingenuity, the careful planning and maneuvering which has gone into the productions. We still look to Broadway for our theater thrills.

Theater history is being made today. Drama is passing into a new era. Its pioneering work is being done under our very noses.

It's a Business

HELEN VARICK BOSWELL, director of women speakers for the women's division of the Republican National committee, created a job recently. The job is probably the only one of its kind in the world, and is held by Mrs. Laurent Oppenheim, assistant to Miss Boswell.

It calls for official "listening in" and criticism of women campaign speakers; along with it has come a set of rules to be observed by the female spellbinders. They might apply to men, too.

They are: Do not talk too long; leave something unsaid so that people will want to hear you again.

Do not attempt to cover too many issues; know two or three well and stick to them.

Speak simply and feelingly to whatever kind of audience you are addressing.

Lighten your speech with human interest stories and humor.

When speaking through an amplifier remember to lower your voice.

And with the rules of the game, there has also come a rating in popularity of women speakers in the G.O.P. ranks. The coveted post of most popular speaker goes without question to Mrs. Dolly Gann, sister of Vice President Charles Curtis, says Miss Boswell.

Primary interest along the eastern seaboard has been centered this year in economics; but in the question of selecting a speaker, the audience has to be considered, the directness stated.

Tariff, industry, legislation, all have their best exponents, and audiences are carefully checked for their interests before the address is made, or the speaker selected. Politics for women seems to become less of a privilege and more of a business.

Shadows

NOT FAR FROM the smokestacks that spend their days in the arduous task of belching forth huge black clouds of fine spraying soot, a thin, grayish-white line of gravel threads its uncertain way through fields of darkening heather. Brown patches of freshly turned earth intermingle with spotted patches of green, and swaying fields of dulled cornstalks wave a threatening farewell to the twilight that bridges early autumn cheer to wintry chillness.

Gold-tinted cottonwoods nod in assent and yellowing elms join the red-brown maples in the grand finale to a glorious summer. Purpling hills beyond the city will soon be glistening white, and even the upturned leaves of the willow seem to join in signaling an early winter.

Far above them all, a deep blue haze edged with billowy white spray spreads mantle-like over the countryside, ready to gather a harassed world into its sheltering folds.

Thoughts come of hickory nuts bursting and oak logs crackling indoors, while the first of the mournful winds begin their hushed whispering in chimneys to tell of another season that is passing through.

The Banks Are Stronger

One of the most heartening evidences of recovery is the marked improvement in the country's banking situation as compared with a year ago and through the troubled period of last winter, when there was widespread uneasiness and when banks were closing in increasingly large numbers. A sign of pronounced betterment is the drop of nearly 60 per cent in bank loan applications to the Reconstruction Finance corporation in the five weeks ending September 3 over the preceding five weeks. In addition, there have been recurring reports of the reopening of banks and the organization of new institutions.

The number closed this month is 83 per cent below that for last September and reopened banks so far this year total nearly 300, a slight gain over the number for the corresponding period of 1931. Pressure on the institutions has been greatly relieved. A threatened major crisis has passed. It means that credit should be available as it is needed for sound, constructive purposes.

TODAY'S TOPICS

By FRANK JAFFE

Some vigilant student of English literature should jot down, as he comes across them in his reading, errors made by the great and the revered among writers.

It would not be heresy to spot "fragments misused as sentences" in the novels of Ruth Suckow or "general awkwardness" "mixed imagery" and "colloquial expression" in those of Theodore Dreiser—critical experts without his gift for fiction writing have said, with some justice, that the ponderous author of "An American Tragedy" could not pass a freshman English course.

It would be permissible, presumably, to notice dangling participles in the work of Francis Parkman and incorrect spelling in that of Thomas Jefferson—after all, their work belongs to history and not to English (1).

Faulty diction in Hugh Walpole's novels and bad grammar in the verse of almost any modern poet would not really count, either; they would be too recent to be considered seriously.

And then there is capitalization. The rules laid down by professors of English are torn to shreds at the hands of almost any newspaper and many magazines—but that is journalism, of course, not literature. (Careful sleuthing might even disclose an editorial writer or columnist who used a preposition to end a sentence with).

The quest would be a little harder back among the old masters whose work really counts, whose classics are not picked up avidly by the uninitiated solely because they are interesting. Is it a mistake or merely a quaint old Elizabethan custom that Shakespeare dramas should be cluttered with so much that is merely language gone to seed, serving no purpose but that of flourish? Is it greatness or a fault that the great dramatist should be so often obscure, and so in need of footnotes that do not merely bridge over the passage of the centuries? And Chaucer—but that is getting into a foreign language.

There is a point to all this. Correct grammar is on an equal plane in a business letter and in a great work of literature. So with diction and the rest. Some are devices of art; but most are rules concerning which the great masters do not very much bother, for they collectively make rules of grammar and all else that constitutes style via what goes under the name of good usage.

A notebook on the mistakes of great authors would be handy for the fly-specker who likes to know in what line of which drama Shakespeare committed the awful blunder, or just which one of the world's best 10 novels has in it that comma splice which the routinized English professor held up by the tall, his other hand on his nose.

But a change has been in process at the University of Iowa since the coming of Norman Foerster. With the shift from grammar to literature has come an emphasis on the great writing of the past for the merits which make it transcendent, not on the points of grammar in which an obscure freshman can excel. Some insight into the power of literary creation which transcends all the Lilliputian bonds of rule books is more to be desired than complete freedom from split infinitives.

Book Bits

(From Vivandiere! by Phoebe Fenwick Gaye)

"You may laugh," said the Emperor's horse, "it's new to you; you forget I have to do this six days out of seven, and it gets on my nerves." She panted daintily with her foot, and arched her neck so that the creases in it showed like neatly folded snowy linen. The Emperor (Napoleon) patted her absent-mindedly. The map fluttered in the breeze, and again the strawberry mare started nervously. "It's this pesky bit of paper they keep crackling over my head," she complained. "It sounds like gun-shots."

"Well, what of it?" said the Emperor's horse. "Anything's better than this inaction. The whole thing's meaningless, of course, but—"

"You mean it's meaningless to us," interrupted the horse behind, "but surely they have some reason for coming all this long way, and leaving their comfortable homes, and getting killed, and not having enough to eat? I couldn't go on unless I thought they knew what they were about, even if we don't."

STUDIO GOSSIP FILM SCANDAL SCREEN COMMENT

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—The young piano-playing hero of "The Giant Swing" is almost sure to be Norman Foster, who did such a swell job in M-G-M's "Skyscraper Souls." When he first came out here, Foster stood a little in the shadow of his beautiful wife, Claudette Colbert, but the film people took to him and now he is advancing rapidly in a professional way.

The Fox deal hangs on the straightening out of a few details, and is pretty sure to go through. If it does, Norman will share honors with Ricardo Cortez, who has been signed to portray the virile "Spanish" of the story. Offering, as it does, the colorful background of an amusement park, "The Giant Swing" is looked on as good movie material. W. R. Burnett (you remember his "Little Caesar," of course) has come to Hollywood and is helping Garrett Fort write the adaptation of his new novel.

The picture will be supervised by Rufus Lemaire, new producer at Fox. A certain much-sued actor is said to have a cheerier outlook these days. Harry Brand met him on the street. "How are things going?" he asked. "Great," said the actor, "I'm down to one sheriff."

BOULEVARD CHATTER The feud between two Hollywood actresses took a new spurt the other day. One of them was invited to that famous gay nineties costume party. "Whom are you going as?" she was asked. Smiling sweetly, she gave the name of her rival. Virginia Cherrill has lunched 5 times with George Raft at the Brown Derby—that almost constitutes a Hollywood engagement. . . . Though Austrian by birth, Zita Johann is mad about Russian cooking. She has her Russian chef come to Universal to prepare her luncheon. . . . Director Clarence Brown has taken a house near that of Jack Gilbert. . . . Looks as if things are still going strong between Estelle Taylor and John Warburton. She dropped over to R-K-O to visit him the other day. . . . Kitty Curtis, daughter of Director Michael Curtis, was in a Los Angeles radio playlet last evening. . . . What Al Jolson would rather do than anything else in the world is to play in a musical version of "Porgy." Author Dubose Heyward has asked him to come to New York next month for a conference. . . . Cary Grant is distributing cards advertising his new men's shop on Wilshire Boulevard. He's operated one in New York for some time. . . . "Cavalcade" starts at Fox today. . . . Sally Blane and Polly Ann Young were guests at that ritzy dinner party given at the Cocomat Grove by Stephen Raphael, a young man with good looks and a big bank account.

DID YOU KNOW— That Clark Gable once got an extra job in a Pola Negri picture and was dismissed by Ernest Lubitsch when he developed a bad case of camera consciousness?

Visitors Speak at Conference

Mathematics Teachers to Hear Three Main Addresses

Principal addresses at the University of Iowa's conference for mathematics teachers of the state's schools will be made by three visiting speakers.

In announcing plans for the seventh annual affair here Oct. 14 and 15, Prof. H. L. Rietz, head of the mathematics department, said that the experts would be Mary A. Potter of Racine, Wis. schools; Jessie F. Brakensiek of Quincy, Ill. high school; and Prof. E. R. Breslich of the University of Chicago.

Each of the visitors will appear twice. Miss Brakensiek will talk on algebra and geometry, while Professor Breslich will discuss organizing a unit for teaching purposes and articulation of junior and senior high school mathematics.

Upwards of 150 teachers are expected to attend, coming both from Iowa schools and from institutions in western Illinois, southern Minnesota and Wisconsin, and northern Missouri. It is the first of the 1932-33 series of teacher's conferences to be held at the university.

Midwest Schools Will Debate Here

A tournament involving debate teams from midwestern universities and colleges will be sponsored by the University of Iowa next March, according to preliminary plans announced by the speech department.

First affair of its kind ever scheduled by the state university, the tournament will occur March 3, 4, and 5. Prof. A. Craig Baird, director of debate, expects leading institutions in Iowa and neighboring states to be represented.

Medical Society to Hold First Meeting

The first meeting of the Johnson County Medical society, of which 132 doctors are members, will be held at the American Legion Community building tonight at 8 o'clock.

Principal items on the evening's program will be reports by Dr. J. H. Schenken and Dr. Andrew H. Woods. Discussions on the reports will be opened by Dr. George H. Hansmann and Dr. C. E. Van Epps.

An Ear of Corn, Bearing Separate Varieties on Opposite Ends, was Found on his Farm by Walter Glenn of Hackett, Ark.

HOOVER

Welcomed by Cheering, Laughing Throngs

Just inside the door of the observation platform sat Mrs. Mollie Carran, one of Hoover's early school teachers of West Branch, who boarded the president's train at West Liberty.

On the platform with President and Mrs. Hoover were Senator Dickinson, Governor and Mrs. Turner, and Harrison E. Spangler of Cedar Rapids, Iowa national committeeman.

Members of the reception committee who greeted the president yesterday are: Kenneth M. Dunlop, Charles M. Dutcher, Merritt C. Spidel, President and Mrs. Walter A. Jessup, Dean Eugene A. Gilmore, Mayor J. J. Carroll, Postmaster Charles A. Bowman.

F. P. Rogers, Herman Smith, Mrs. W. J. Weber, I. A. Opstad, Harry Newburn, Col. Converse R. Lewis, Mrs. W. E. Spence, Mrs. James C. Kessler, Mrs. F. A. Stromsten, Mrs. Ray Karnes, Mrs. Lloyd Howell, Mrs. C. C. Williams, Mrs. H. C. Parsons, Mrs. E. A. Putnam, Mrs. W. F. Bolter, Mrs. Mabel Evans, and Mrs. Homer Cherrington.

Shortly after the president's train left for Des Moines, the 11 car West Branch special, decorated with posters and pictures, steamed into the station. A hundred or more Iowa City Republicans boarded it and proceeded to Des Moines with the delegation from the president's home town. As the train left, small white pennants fluttered from the windows and hilarious passengers cheered.

President Hoover's train, which was scheduled to arrive in Des Moines at 4 p.m. yesterday, will not return through Iowa City. The return will be made to Chicago over the Milwaukee line.

Ten minutes before the special arrived in Iowa City, a pilot train, consisting of an engine and one coach, passed through the station, presumably to make sure that the

History Week Will Honor Settlers' Coming to Iowa

"The White Tide Breaks"—the wholesale invasion of the Iowa country by white settlers—is the theme of Iowa History week for 1933.

This has been announced by Prof. Benj. F. Shambaugh of the University of Iowa faculty. He is also superintendent of the State Historical society.

Commemorating the centennial of the initial transfer of Indian land in Iowa to the public domain of the United States, history week will occur between April 17 and 22.

Professor Shambaugh said that a series of broadcasts from station WSUI each Thursday at 8:40 p.m. will serve as the prelude to the spring affair.

These broadcasts, beginning tomorrow night, will be given by William J. Petersen, and will include talks on Iowa geology, Indians, exploration and discovery, international rivalry between Spain, France, England, and the ultimate acquisition of the Iowa region by the United States.

DES MOINES, Oct. 4 (AP)—Handling of Iowa's milk supply will occupy an important place on the program of the Iowa Public Health association meeting here Oct. 6 and 7.

Milk supplies in cities of less than 2,000 population will be discussed by A. R. Mandary of Cedar Rapids, while C. R. Christman will tell of the milk survey now being conducted in the state. Carl N. Kennedy, assistant state secretary of agriculture, will preside over an open forum discussion.

Other subjects considered in the two-day conference will include public health activities, nursing, school health work, and various health problems.

J. W. Trask, medical director of the United States Marine hospital, will deliver the principal address of the meeting. He will speak on "Public health problems, present and future," following a banquet on the evening of Oct. 6.

Gov. Dan Turner is on the program for the address of welcome at the opening session and Esther Wick of Manchester will deliver the president's address.

Intramural Sports Directors Arrange Tournament Dates

The first intramural managers meeting was held in the women's gymnasium yesterday afternoon. Plans for the year and rules for the fall sports were given out.

Tentative dates for tournaments were also announced. The tennis doubles tourney will begin today under the direction of Ruth Crew, A3 of Marion, Volleyball, with Vera Huen, A4 of Eldora, as its leader will begin today and various tournaments will be carried on until Nov. 11. Golf driving contests will be completed by Oct. 13 and archery will continue until Oct. 25. Arjorie Keiser, A4 of Keokuk, is head of this sport.

The initial volleyball practice on Monday brought out 18 physical education students. Miriam Taylor, instructor of volleyball, announced that practices would be held every day at 4 p.m., urging players to try out for class teams.

Shambaugh Speaks to English Classes

Prof. Benj. F. Shambaugh, head of the political science department, lectured last night in natural science auditorium to members of freshman English classes. His subject was Abraham Lincoln.

His purpose of the lecture was to aid students in observing points of organization, style and coherence. In the near future, the students will be asked to write a reproduction of the lecture for their respective classes.

Bryan, Smith Will Speak to Dentists

Dr. Alvin W. Bryan, dean of the college of dentistry, and Dr. E. S. Smith, also of that college, left yesterday for Shenandoah, where they will take part in a meeting of the Southwestern District dental society.

Dr. Bryan will present a paper on focal infection, and Dr. Smith will give a paper and clinic on dentures.

Prince Eddie's Swedish Visit Revives Rumors of Romance

England Expectantly Awaits Outcome of Heir's Sojourn with Princess Ingrid's Family—But Matchmakers Have Been Wrong Before.

LONDON—After a silence of nearly two years, Dame Rumor is once more busy, enacting the role of matchmaker between the world's most eligible bachelor, Edward, Prince of Wales, and his cousin the Princess Ingrid, beautiful golden-haired granddaughter of King Gustav of Sweden.

The whisperings of royal romance started with the Prince's flight to Stockholm and his reception there by members of the Swedish royal family. Ostensibly, the British heir is in the Swedish capital for the opening of the big trade exhibition, but reports are persistent that at last he is about to succumb to the charms of his lovely cousin and forsake his bachelorhood.

It will be recalled that two years ago the whole world was agog over the news that the Prince was about to announce his engagement to Ingrid, who was then in London visiting her grandfather, on her mother's side, the Duke of Connaught.

But that rumor was only one of the hundreds that grew up about the fish throne had put a ring on the finger of every pretty girl to whom Danie Gossip has pointed as his future wife, he would now be in possession of a harem that would make a Bedouin sheik green with envy.

When only 18, Wales was reported engaged to Princess Victoria Louise, only daughter of the then Kaiser. But the war wrote finis to that romance, if there ever was a romance. English newspapers quoted the Prince at the time as saying "thank heaven I won't have to marry a German princess" when he heard that war had been declared. The ill-fated Grand Duchess Tatiana of Russia, who, with her entire family was murdered by Bolsheviks at Ekaterinburg in 1917, was credited by Dame Rumor with being the next candidate for the title of Princess of Wales. There may have been something in that report, for Tatiana had the support of her aunt, Queen Alexandra, widow of King Edward, Prince Eddie's grandfather. But the Russian tragedy put an end to that possibility.

Then the European matchmakers got busy with the name of Princess Ileana of Roumania. For a time romantic rumors flew thick and fast about the court of Europe, but gradually it became apparent that Prince Eddie wasn't interested in Ileana as a wife. As a good pal and an excellent dancing partner, yes, but as Mrs. Wales, no. Princess Ileana is now the happy wife of Archduke Anton of Hapsburg and the mother of a bouncing boy.

Time after time, too, Princess Beatrice of Spain was reported to be Prince Eddie's weakness. But nothing ever came of it. It is believed that the fact of her being a Catholic had a lot to do with this romance dying in the bud. The poor little Princess is now an exile with her parents from republican Spain.

Apart from princesses, the number of girls to whom the Prince has been reported attached at various times is legion. Parliament, which has the job of worrying about the line of succession to the throne, has apparently despaired of bending the Prince to its way of thinking. Bride after bride has been suggested, but Wales is determined that no one is going to decide the vital question of his marriage but himself.

For the past year or so the bachelor Prince has sedulously avoided parties, dances and other functions he is obliged to attend, if he must have a partner he invariably chooses a young married woman. Quite a neat way of making Dame Rumor hold her tongue.

However, optimism prevails in England that the Prince's present visit to Sweden may be the long-sought answer to a nation's prayer. It is known he is fond of Ingrid, and she thinks he's swell, so if statesmen and matchmakers mind their own business—who knows?

THE idea that colleges have been taking football too seriously is spreading now to the coaches, and as a result, better teams may appear on the gridirons in the future. At least, Coach Ossie Solem uses a psychology of that sort with his teams. During the week, his men get very little scrimmage, for, points out Ossie, they are ready and anxious on week ends to play the game with everything they have. They are not battered and weary before the game begins.

Many other successful coaches are turning to this system. One of them is Howard Jones, former Iowa mentor, and present head coach of Southern California's Thundering Herd, winners of the national championship last year, and one of the foremost contenders year in and year out for the mythical title. Jones used to have the reputation of being a "slave driver," but he has evidently changed his tactics. He now sends the boys to the showers just before they have had enough.

IOWA will be truly represented at Wisconsin Saturday, for none other than Rex, the Hawkeye mascot will make the trip with the numerous fans. Arrangements have just been completed to send the great Dane to the Big Ten opener. Col. C. R. Lewis was the man responsible for making the Iowa representation complete.

With the return of the local baseball fans who attended the world series games between the Yankees and Cubs in Chicago came tales of the awful power in the Yankee lineup. Even the most rabid Bruin fan admits that the Cubs were completely outclassed. Roland Smith, who bravely picked the Chicago club before the series started declares that "you just have to see the Yankees play one game and you are pulling for them to win." "Smitty" also is pointing with pride to his statement before the first game that "the Yankees are potent."

BENNY LEONARD, former lightweight champion, faces the acid test of his come-back attempt Friday night when he meets Jimmy McLarnin, one of the toughest welterweights in the ring today. Reputed to be the greatest boxer to ever don the gloves, Leonard is banking his hopes on his years of experience to carry him to the top again. McLarnin is not a boxer, but a slugger. The bout should prove interesting.

When he was still a lightweight, McLarnin met the man who then held the championship, Sammy Mandell, and took a whipping. Mandell, a cool clever boxer, gave him a real boxing lesson, hardly letting Jimmy lay a glove on him. But the Vancouver battler is strong. He may be able to get in close and wrestle Leonard around enough to wear him out. Leonard's legs can't be too strong. It looks like everything favors McLarnin.

IOWA CITY will have a football classic of its own Saturday when Iowa City high and University high teams in their annual battle. Both teams have shown flashes of real power, and have failed to click at others, but you can be sure that both outfits will be keyed up to the highest pitch for this game. The winning of this one game will make the season a success for either team.

Fall Tourneys Open Oct. 10; Leaders Meet

With the posting of entry blanks today for interfraternity golf, tennis, and speedball to start Oct. 16, the fall intramural athletic program is well under way. In addition there will be a meeting of athletic managers this afternoon in the office of the field house at 4:15. Discussion of rules, contests, entry fees, trophies, and eligibility is the purpose of the confab along with the regular opening business of the year.

The first events of the season's program will be open to all fraternity members and pledges with the exception of varsity candidates. Coach Kennett, university golf head, will act as final arbiter in the Scotch pastime, play to be governed by official rules.

In the other two sports, last year's eligibility rules will apply, any disputes to be handled by the eligibility committee, to be appointed this afternoon.

A team trophy will be given for the fraternity winners in golf, with gold and silver medals to the participants and runners-up. Entries close Oct. 8. Blanks may be mailed to E. G. Schroeder, field house.

Work on Defense for Passes; Clearman, Kuhn Return

With the appearance of real football weather, the Iowa football squad dashed through a long session of intensive drill yesterday afternoon as they prepared an attack with which they hope to down the Wisconsin Badgers Saturday.

Coach Ossie Solem indicated that he will depend upon speed to combat the husky Wisconsin eleven, and sought to get more drive into his backfield as they worked on new plays.

The remainder of the workout was devoted to pass defense, a weakness that showed up several times in the opening game with Bradley Tech last week end.

Only Short Scrimmage With the exception of a short scrimmage between the first and second string lines, the mentor allowed no contact work, in an effort to keep his squad intact for the bruising game that is expected at Madison. Barring injuries that may turn up before the team leaves tomorrow, every man will be ready to go Saturday.

Two men, Dutch Schmidt, hard-driving halfback, and Zud Schammel, powerful sophomore tackle, were out of the lineup yesterday. Schmidt was ill with a slight touch of grippe, and Schammel was nursing a badly bruised knee, but both are expected to be back in shape for the Big Ten opener. Howard Masden held down Schmidt's halfback job yesterday, and John Stutsman labored at Schammel's tackle.

Kuhn Replaces Ash Marvin Kuhn, who was withheld from the Tech game because of a sprained ankle, replaced Bill Ash, high-scoring fullback, in the first string lineup. Gene Clearman, end, reported again, his shoulder healed, to go after John Miller's post on the left side of the line.

Ed Dolly, the only other casualty on the squad, was back as strong as ever, and may replace Wilmon Hass at guard, although the former appeared to almost clinch his job in the Bradley game.

Wildcats Drill on Wolverine Formations

(By The Associated Press) EVANSTON, Ill. — Northwestern's freshmen got nowhere at all today using Michigan forward passes in a dummy scrimmage against the veteran Wildcat backfield. With Potter, Rentner, Sullivan and Olson on the defensive, the yearling passers acted as much like Harry Newman, Michigan's ace, as possible, but no important gains were made. The drill was held in the rain and no rough work was permitted to avoid chances of injury.

Finish Plans for Wrestling Show, Oct. 11

Plans for the first wrestling show of the local indoor season are completed, according to Promoter Mike Howard, and the principals will be in top condition for Oct. 11.

Reports from LaFayette, Ind., are that Leslie "Red" Beers is fast rounding into shape, and will be ready to force H. Glenn Croy, claimant of the light heavyweight championship of the world, all the way.

Beers is down to 152 pounds, 12 pounds lighter than when he began training for the match three weeks ago, and expects to weigh in the day of the match at about 173 pounds.

Croy, who has just returned from a successful tour of the west, is working around Des Moines, and is in the pink of condition. He tips the scales now at 174, and expects to weigh about that much for the Beers match. The feature clash is scheduled as a one hour time limit decision match, or to a one fall finish. Two judges will give a decision at the end of an hour if neither man has won a fall. The system of scoring points is under the new professional rules, and much the same as that used by the A.A.U.

The semi-windup will see Foxy Timm, Muscatine, tangle with Swede Jarvensin of Minneapolis in a half hour time limit affair. Timm is well known in local circles. His outstanding achievement being a win over Clair Grooms, former Iowa State ace.

A pair of fast four round boxing matches will open the show. This is Howard's first sally into the promoting field although his University of Iowa mat teams, and his own wrestling feats are well known.

Entries close Oct. 8. Blanks may be mailed to E. G. Schroeder, field house.

Little Hawks in Long Drill

Face Loss of Two More Veteran Players by Injuries

Iowa City high school's confident but not too confident football team was dealt out a long practice on new plays again last night as it prepared for the first intra-city game with University high Saturday afternoon.

The Little Hawks showed plenty of strength and fight in last night's practice in spite of the reporting of injuries to two more veterans. Soucek, star backfield man, and Glaspek, 200 pound tackle, are both nursing leg injuries that will keep them out of practice this week and possibly out of the game Saturday.

Coach George Wells did not give up hope of beating the city rivals when he called on the last of his backfield reserve material to fill the vacancies of the injured veterans. Ward worked well in Soucek's position last night. Ayers, although a little light, is developing into a fast and shifty backfield man in Mutchler's position.

The Little Hawk coach's biggest problem will be finding a tackle to fill Glaspek's position. The Red and White line was very light when the big tackle was in it but without his services it will find difficulty in stopping the fast University high backs. Kirkpatrick who worked at tackle last night is a little light but is very outstanding as a tackler and will cause his opponents plenty of trouble in their so-called "Roman holiday" Saturday.

Hill and Dale Men to Hear Olympic Star

Old Gold veteran, rookie and yearling hill and dalers will be entertained tonight at 7:30 in the river room of Iowa Union as the cross country club officially inaugurates the new season with the first mixer of the year.

Men new to the campus will have an opportunity to see Iowa's crack Olympic high hurdles winner, George Salling, who will give a short talk concerning his experiences. Ed Gordon, Hawkeye Olympic broad jump winner was to have spoken but will be out of town.

Coach George Bresnahan will also give a talk after which moving pictures of the national meet last year will be shown. Coach Bresnahan invites all new men interested or active in cross country to attend.

Bill Dickey has never failed to bat over .300 since he became a Yankee regular in 1929. The big receiver came to the club the year before from Little Rock.

Babe Ruth this year watched his batting average more than his homer mark. He hoped before his touch of appendicitis to beat out Jimmie Foxx of the A's for the American league batting championship.

Spears Grooms Regular Guard for Center Position

(By The Associated Press) MADISON, Wis. — For the first time in many days Coach Clarence Spears today failed to make any significant changes in the Wisconsin first string lineup. Harvey Krahnold, 195 pound guard, who is being groomed to play center against Magnusen of Iowa, remained at the pivot position, with Kabat and Mario Pacetti at guards, Molinaro and Goldenberg at tackles, and Schneller and Haworth at ends.

BUCKEYES MAKE SHIFTS

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Ohio State university gridiron coaches today stepped up the preparation for Indiana Saturday with a strenuous drill that saw several changes in the lineup. Keefe spent considerable time at halfback position with Captain Hinchman and Carroll alternating at the other. Pete Beltek was switched over from guard to center and Ted Rosequist replaced Monohan at tackle.

ILLINOIS VARSITY LOSES

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — The Illinois varsity was unable to cope with the second team's forward passing today and was defeated, 13 to 7, in a regulation game. Coach Bob Zuppke made frequent alterations in his line, but failed to find a satisfactory combination. The Illini meet Bradley college Saturday.

PURDUE STARS OUT

LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Coach Noble Kizer announced tonight that neither Dixie Moore, halfback, nor Dutch Fehring, tackle, injured Purdue regulars, would play in the Boltermakers' opening Big Ten game against Minnesota Saturday. Kizer said Moore will be out of uniform for two more weeks, but that Fehring should be ready for the Wisconsin game. Duane Purvis, halfback, and John Husar, tackle, are filling the positions.

CHANGE HOOSIER BACKS

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — A shift was made in the Indiana varsity backfield today with Opask at quarter, Sawicki and Fuqua at halves, and Edmonds at fullback. Whether this group will start against Ohio State Saturday was not indicated. Freshmen attempting to execute Ohio plays failed to gain ground against the varsity in scrimmage.

KIPKE RESTS REGULARS

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Michigan's second stringers scrimmaged against freshmen using Northwestern plays this afternoon, but Coach Harry Kipke decided his regulars had better avoid hard work for at least another day. Francis (Whitey) Wister, giant tackle, still is on the sidelines with an injured leg, but hopes to be ready to start against the Wildcats Saturday.

Inclement Weather Forces Track Men Indoors for Training

Fall track has turned into indoor track temporarily because of the inclement weather and the dozen or so men who have turned out so far have been working out in the field house. Since all of fall track work, which consists of distances under the half mile and field events, will be held adjacent to the field house this year anyway, the practice of training alternately indoors and outdoors will continue according to Coach George Bresnahan.

Assistant Coach W. T. Swenson urges all men planning to tryout in the spring to report to him at the field house at once for light drill on bottom work and form. Coach Bresnahan attributes much of George Salling's perfection of hurdling form to fall work.

FIGURES IN YALE-CHICAGO CLASH

One of the first big inter-sectional games of the 1932 football season will be the meeting of Yale and University of Chicago at New Haven Saturday. Mal Stevens, Eli coach, and his captain, Johnny Wilbur are confident Yale will repeat its last year 27-0 victory over Coach Stagg's gridgers. The Chicago warriors, captained by Don Birney, are out for revenge. Vin Sahlin, Chicago's veteran halfback is in excellent shape and should be an outstanding figure in the clash. He is noted as an open field runner.

Ed Dolly, Thirty Pounds Lighter Since High School Days, All-State in Illinois

Edward L. Dolly's experiences on the gridiron have been different to say the least—what with having been a veritable man mountain of 230 pounds in high school and now a muscular lineman some 25 or 30 pounds lighter during his varsity experience on University of Iowa elevens.

This 6 foot, 200 pound, 20 year old senior guard candidate on Ossie Solem's initial Hawkeye team, who looks so odd to those who are not so well acquainted with him because of his big, powerful shoulders which contrast with his "Babe Ruth" less, gained a good deal of experience in spite of his comparative youth.

All-State Man

He was born in Rock Island, Ill., where he has always lived. When in the ninth grade he competed in none of the high school sports because the high school there is limited to the last three years. But once in the sophomore class, Ed wasted no time making himself known to Rock Island opponents for he rounded out three complete seasons of competition in each of football, basketball and track.

As the mammoth high school boy, he played three years as football first team center, capping his competition with recognition in both junior and senior years on the first honor team of Illinois high schools, bringing honor to his coach, Harry Beneman, as well.

SYNOPSIS

"Marriage is like reading a novel without suspense. No matter how charmed you may be at first with the words, a sustained effort demands little surprises, little moments of not knowing what's going to happen," Pamela Warren informed her lovely, young niece, Patricia Brathwait, as they basked in the Palm Beach sunshine. Eight years before the wealthy Pamela had married handsome Jimmie Warren, and, in spite of an overwhelming love, their marriage had failed. Pat is shocked to learn that her father has lost his fortune. Aunt Pam suggests that Pat insure her father's and her own future by marrying the wealthy, middle-aged Harvey Blaine, warning that the glamour of love wears off. Pat goes to an isolated spot, alone, to solve her problem, where she meets a handsome young man.

CHAPTER THREE

As he rose it came to her sharply that whatever happened she must not let him go until she discovered his identity. The matter seemed of high importance. "What's your name, boy?" she demanded looking up at him with a sly smile.

"He dropped back on the sand, his dark face broken up in delighted twinklings. "Jack. What's yours, girl?"

"Patricia. Mostly Pat."

"Mostly Pat is best." He seemed to turn the name over in a secretive inner joyousness which lay close behind the gravity of his eyes. A submerged excitement swept her. Does he know me? Why didn't he tell me his full name?

She studied him minutely. A sensitive face, strongly marked. A wide beautiful mouth and shining black hair. Grey eyes twinkling at her out of dark face. . . . She felt herself melting toward him, reaching out to the warmth of his bitter-sweet smile, greeting it as one greets a familiar flower from the garden of childhood. It was as if some essential revelation trembled on the translucent air.

They talked of round-robin tennis, of polo, both of which he played; of plays each had seen in New York. He knew so much about opera that she finally asked him if he were a musician.

"I've studied piano."

"Good Heavens! Surely those were not the hands of a musician. And yet, they were, if one didn't know about those amazing palms."

"But I'm not really a musician," he added, "in the professional sense. I love it and studied for my own pleasure. I'm an architect by profession."

Well, an architect doesn't labor with his hands, she thought.

"Were you in the war?" she asked, searching for a clue to his familiar identity.

His merry smile. "Mostly Pat, I'm but twenty-six. I was an infant when the great explosion occurred."

She was disappointed. She had hoped he might have been a war hero. A famous and featured Ace. The thought that he might be a movie actor had already been exploded by some subtle probing which brought out that he had not seen a movie in over two years. Had never cared for them. And an actor would certainly care to see his own pictures. . . . Her mind raced this way and that. It was no use. She gave up to the charm of him. After all, what did it matter who he was?

Nothing memorable was said between them, yet all was freighted with a pulsing significance. She told him about her home as happily as if it were still waiting. Indeed she had forgotten for the moment that it wasn't.

He told her of his boyhood on a big cotton plantation in Virginia. "We call 'Eagle's Nest,'" he said, "and some day when I've found—" He broke off, adding

They waded into the ocean to wash the pots, shouting, laughing, rushing after a recalcitrant pot as it sailed off on the tide.

after a slight pause, "when the right girl is ready to go with me, there waits the Eagle's Nest for us—the top of the world, you know."

A silence fell after that. Something in his eyes sent a throbbing ecstasy along her nerve centers. She was aware of a sense of new life before which all her troubles melted into formlessness, a dream shrouded in mist; trivial and unimportant.

A gull flying low over the beach cawed loudly. Noting its shadow she picked up her hat and drew it reluctantly over her hair. "It's way past twelve. Are you staying—in Palm Beach?" she asked, brushing the sand from her skirt.

"There's my mansion," He indicated the tent.

They fell into step, her wonder returning. Not only his face, his every gesture and expression, but the very swing of his lean body was well known to her. . . . If I had known him as a child—but no; it's as a man that I've seen him—Surely he won't let me go without telling me who he is. . . . If he does—and doesn't ask to see me again—after all that's happened, I'll never believe it happened. . . . But what had happened? Nothing, really. . . . Only it doesn't seem as if it could end like this.

"Please stay for lunch," He looked very boyish and eager.

"It would be fun," she replied hesitantly. "But my father will wonder where I am."

"Doesn't anybody know where you are?"

"My cousin knows I came for a drive."

"She'll tell him. Lady, your excuses are vain. Sit down while I prepare the feast."

After all, there was nothing to get back for. Nothing in all the glorious sun-drenched world to worry over. She dropped on the sand, indolent and content, watching him make a fire of mangrove roots.

He brought some newspapers from the tent. "You spread the table with these table cloths, lady. You must do something for your dinner."

"I'm a guest," she protested. "I'm not supposed to work."

"You don't know how."

"I do. I learned everything a lady should know under the domination of a scolding black angel."

"So did I," he grinned. "Much more than a gentleman should know. My father and I were her family and her kingdom, and she set me many humiliating and girlish tasks."

Now absorbed in the art of producing an omelet, he opened a can of peas and a can of tomatoes, strained off the juice and stirred the two together, adding seasoning, while she spread the papers.

"I was the first, last, and only child," he explained, "so our colored housekeeper felt it her duty to teach me to cook omelets."

"So was I an only child," she cried, feeling that the fact somehow brought them very close together. He, too, seemed to feel this, and gave her an intimate smile.

"I've often envied tramps by the side of the road," she said, dreamily when they sat down to a spread of ham, roasted potatoes, omelet and coffee.

He smiled at her across the "table." "Now you are a tramp by the side of the road. And—listen! The sea is tuning up for full moon tonight. Have you ever attended the grand opera of the sea? It's like Wagner, you have to listen closely to hear the grand harmony of half-tones and undertones."

She laughed, and a little shaken by the strangeness of his speech. "You remind me in some ways of my father," she said. "He's full of lovely nonsense—too."

After lunch he placed the leftovers on a newspaper somewhat removed from the tent for the gulls, and buried their paper plates in the sand to avoid flies, as he explained. Now, taking off his shoes, he commanded her to do likewise, and they waded into the ocean to wash the pots, shouting, laughing, rushing after a recalcitrant pot as it sailed off on the tide.

At last, tired of this game they came out. She sank on the sand and rolled over on her face, pillowing her head on folded arms. He stretched at her side, dark head propped high, a compelling yet tender light in his eyes, a light that rayed out, enveloping her, blinding her, drawing her into the circle of his own inner radiance.

FRUIT MARKET

CHICAGO, Oct. 4 (AP)—Corn took the lead today in a grain price advance that hoisted corn and wheat each more than a cent a bushel.

Persistent buying in small lots was associated with talk that traders generally were hopeful President Hoover's Des Moines address tonight would prove a constructive market influence. Renewal of export prospects for corn led to more active speculative interest in that cereal than has been the rule of late.

Corn closed firm, 1/4 above yesterday's finish, wheat 1-1/2 up, oats at 1-1/2 gain and provisions varying from 5 cents decline to a rise of 2 cents.

Corn traders attached significance to confirmation by Chicago handlers that a moderate amount of corn had been taken late yesterday for shipment overseas, and that prices for large quantities were almost in line.

In addition to likelihood that enlarged export dealings in corn were imminent, unfavorable weather conditions prevailing over the corn belt tended to put briskness into the corn market. Heavy frosts were predicted for tonight in much corn territory. A sharp falling off in the volume of rural offerings of corn was also a bracing factor.

Wheat gave evidence of having been at least temporarily oversold. There was a noticeable lull up in spread trading between Chicago and Winnipeg.

Oats moved up with corn and wheat.

Provisions were steadied by firmness of grains.

Closing indemnities: wheat—Dec. 52 1/2, 55-55 1/2; May 57 1/2, 60. Corn—Dec. 27 1/2, 28 1/2; May 82 1/2, 83.

Bonds Show Little Change

Flounder Uncertainly to End Day With Slight Losses

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP)—The bond market floundered in a bog of uncertainties today and price changes generally were unimportant.

Trading was slightly more active than that of yesterday. Sales totaled $2,648,000, par value, and the average of 60 corporate bonds lost one-tenth of a point.

Issues of the Nickel Plate company recovered portions of their recent losses.

While gains were recorded by some loans of Baltimore & Ohio, Canadian National, Chesapeake corporation, Erie, Santa Fe, Illinois Central and a few others, heaviness was registered by issues of Illinois Central, New York Central, Chicago & Northwestern, Great Northern, Missouri Pacific and Union Pacific.

Best quality utilities and industrials were fairly firm or unchanged. Consolidated Gas 5 1-2s advanced to a new high for the year and then realized. American Telephone was steady and International Telephone eased. Armour & company 4 1-2s and 5 1-2s gained a point.

Australian commonwealth 4 1-2s and 5s reacted a point or more, but Queensland State 6s gained 7 1-2 points for a new 1932 high.

United States governments eased.

AROUND THE TOWN with DON PRYOR

Brown Leaves
From the window in the office of Sheriff Don McConas in the court house yesterday we could see the fall splashing over the hills south of the city.

And Winter
With the coming of the president yesterday morning, winter came also to Iowa City. An overcast sky, falling leaves, and chill winds brought out overcoats and shivers.

Just A Sign
Somebody, weaving over much, crashed into the street sign on the corner of Market and Harrison streets yesterday, pushing it over.

Another Winyr Sign
At noon yesterday hands pointed to the Jefferson hotel, from the roof of which was pouring a dense cloud of black smoke. It was only the furnace fire, but it looked menacing for awhile.

The Board Meets
Glen G. Fordyce, local Boy Scout executive, announced yesterday that the Iowa City district executive board of the organization will attend a quarterly meeting at Washington, Ia., next Thursday evening. They will meet in conjunction with the Washington district group.

Drillings
The Iowa City units of the Iowa National guard met last night for their weekly drill at the American Legion Community building. Capt. George Maresh announced that the men received their pay at the meeting.

Comes the Jury
Pending the beginning of jury trials next Monday, activity at the court house is at a lower ebb than usual.

Free Cloth
Red Cross workers gave out cloth yesterday to the families of unemployed Iowa City men. A certain number of yards of cloth is given away each week. Mrs. Martin Pederson, Red Cross head, said yesterday. More will be given out Friday.

Money Again
As a result of the golf match last Sunday, the American Legion Unemployment Relief association has $63.55 in the treasury. Five hundred and eight men are enrolled with the association.

Independent India in Decade Prediction of Gandhi Envoy

Says British Submission on Electoral Plan Saved Gandhi's Life, Prevented Bloody Revolution and Signifies Long Stride Towards Freedom.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—That India will have shaken free of the fetters that bind her to the British empire, and within the next 10 years, is the confident prediction of Vithalbhaj J. Patel, former lord mayor of Bombay and president of the Indian legislative assembly, made during a recent interview.

Not only that, but Mr. Patel asserted that if Mahatma Gandhi had continued his hunger strike until he died, there would have been a revolution in India such as the world has never seen before. The Indian statesman, said to be the closest friend of the Mahatma, pointed out that Gandhi's influence in enforcing his policy of non-violence is the only thing that stands between the Indian people and revolt. Without that frail little man not one Englishman in the country would be safe.

Therefore, Gandhi's victory is not only one that India should congratulate itself upon, but Britain, too, has cause to be thankful that the "fast unto death" turned out the way it did. Gandhi's triumph has strengthened the cause of non-violence as his death would have weakened it, and on top of that he has prevented the British from driving another wedge between the Hindu castes. In short, the Mahatma's gamble with death has done more to unite the conflicting factions of his country than years of speeches and propaganda would have done.

Mr. Patel, like Gandhi, whose personal ambassador he is, impresses his hearers with his air of quiet confidence when he points out that India's quarrel with Great Britain affects more than his country's 350,000,000 souls. It is of the greatest importance to the entire world, he says, and goes on to prove his point. "Upon the liberty of India," says the Indian statesman, "hangs the salvation of the world. World trade and world economic structure cannot thrive or improve as long as vast regions are held and exploited to the exclusive benefit of one nation, and while vast populations are compelled to work for six or eight cents a day.

people's land. What's the use of pacts and conferences in such conditions?"

One of Mr. Patel's first acts on reaching the United States was to journey to Washington, pay his respects to the memory of George Washington, whom he credited with being the inspiration of India's struggle for liberty and independence. He visited scenes that have a close association with American history and laid a wreath before the tomb of the first president at Mt. Vernon.

The main object of the Indian statesman's visit here is to enlist sympathy for the cause of his country. He believes that the problem should come up at the world economic conference and voices the hope that the American participants in the parley will use their influence to have the question of India threshed out, asserting that if problems like that of his country are not permitted an airing before the international conference it is foredoomed to failure.

But regardless of world conferences, Mr. Patel is confident that India will go on fighting until she attains her place among the independent nations of the earth. He says the fight will not be easy. Britain will also fight to the last ditch, but in 10 years from now he is confident that his country will be free. Unlike Gandhi, Mr. Patel does not affect the loin cloth which is the Mahatma's sole garment. The visiting statesman wears the white cotton cap that has become the symbol of India's fight against the British, but he is usually attired in robes reminiscent of biblical times. This raiment, coupled to his snowy hair and beard, gives the disciple of the Mahatma the appearance of a prophet. It remains to be seen if his prophecy of liberty in 10 years shall be fulfilled.

Telephone Company to Hold Open House Period Next Week

Iowa City's new telephone building with its dial equipment will be shown to the public during an "open house" period Oct. 10-14 inclusive, Carl Cone, manager for the Northwestern Bell company, said yesterday.

During open house week, the telephone building and all of its equipment will be open for inspection from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Guides will be furnished to conduct visitors through the building and explain the equipment, all of which may be seen in actual operation, with protecting covers removed.

"We are always glad to have visitors," said Mr. Cone, "but are particularly anxious that now near the start of dial service in Iowa City, we have an opportunity to show our building and its new equipment to a large number of our customers. Every effort will be extended to make this trip behind the scenes an interesting and enjoyable one for our visitors."

Salary Cuts What Of It? Your Clothes Dollar Goes Farther Now than in 1929

Has your salary been reduced? How much? 5 per cent, 10 per cent, 20 per cent? Even the man who is earning today one-third less than he did in 1929 (and there are very few after all) has no reason to sacrifice the quality and workmanship in clothing to which he was accustomed then.

Clothes Prices are LOWER by a full third than they were in 1929. Your clothes dollar GOES FARTHER than it did then. Check up!

- Were you buying $50 Suits in 1929? We sell them now for $27.50
- Or was your price $35 in 1929? We sell them now for $21.50
- Or did $25 hit you about right in 1929? We sell better suits now for $16.50

Go right on down the list. Quality for quality, here's the way 1929 and 1932 prices compare:

- $30 Topcoats in 1929, Now $21.50
- $27.50 Topcoats in 1929, Now $18.00
- $3.50 Shirts in 1929, Now $1.85
- $2.50 Shirts in 1929, Now $1.45
- $1.95 Shirts in 1929, Now 94c
- $1.50 Ties in 1929, Now 94c
- $7.00 Hats in 1929, Now $4.70
- $5.00 Hats in 1929, Now $3.45

You've had a reduction in salary? Not when it comes to clothes you haven't. You've had a RAISE. In times like these, a man needs to be careful of his appearance.

If you spend as much for clothes in proportion to your earning capacity as you did in 1929, you can dress BETTER than you did then... and thoughtful men are getting the jump on their competitors by doing it.
