HOOVER CLIMAXES EASTERN DRIVE

Officials Deny Rumors of Spanish-Franco Treaty

Demo Leader Raps Tactics of Opposition

Accuses President of Misquoting His Statements

ARENA, Boston, Oct. 31 (AP)—Franklin D. Roosevelt said tonight that President Hoover in his speech at Indianapolis had abandoned argument for personalities and that the administration was seeking to undermine reason with fear.

Speaking from the same platform from which Alfred E. Smith addressed his appeal to Massachusetts voters a week ago to support the Democratic ticket, the presidential candidate outlined anew various of the policies he has put before the people during his campaign.

He said that "as the storm of approval for the Democratic policies has grown, several moods have come over the utterances of the president and his supporters."

"First," he said, "they were plaintively apologetic; then they were indignant at congress."

"Finally they have in desperation resorted to the breeding of fear."

"At first the president refused to recognize that he was in a contest. But as the people have responded to our program with enthusiasm he recognized that we were both candidates. And then dignity died."

"In the presence of a situation like this I am tempted to reply in kind. I shall not yield to the temptation to which the president yielded. On the contrary I reiterated my respect for his person and his office."

"But I shall not be deterred even by the president of the United States from the discussion of grave national issues and submitting to them (the people) the truth about their national affairs—however unpleasant that truth may be."

"The ballot is the indispensable instrument of a free people. It should be the true expression of their will. It is intolerable when that is coerced—whatever the form of coercion—political or economic."

"The autocratic will of no man—be he president or general or captain of industry—shall ever destroy the sacred right of the people themselves to determine for themselves who shall govern them."

"Descended to Threats"

The New York governor said men and women had been standing peacefully in the bread line.

"Their complaints are not mingled with threats," he said. "They are willing to listen to reason at all times."

"But," he continued, "the party that claims as its guiding tradition the patient and generous spirit of the immortal Lincoln when confronted by an opposition which has given the nation an orderly and constructive campaign has descended to an outpouring of misstatements, of threats and intimidation."

Legion Announces Emergency Fund Drive Committees

Charles Kennett, chairman of the American Legion Unemployment Relief association, announced today the committees in charge of the emergency fund drive which the association is sponsoring.

Attorney Richard Davis is head of the drive committee, assisted by Francis J. Boyle, J. E. Gatens, Harry Shulman, D. W. Crum, Mrs. Andrew Woods, Mrs. Wagner, and Sidney Miller.

Mayor J. J. Carroll is chairman of the unemployment committee, assisted by Allen Wallen, James McClelland, LeRoy Mercer, H. J. Hands, James Aldous, and Prof. G. R. Davies.

G. A. Kenderline and George Nagle are in charge of publicity for the drive.

Local G.O.P. Forces Stage Rally, Parade

Republicans young and old gathered last night at the American Legion community building to hear a speaking program and the radio address of President Herbert C. Hoover.

The meeting was called by the Young Republican league of Johnson county, including the league organization of university students. Paul Toomey, chairman of the league, was in charge and acted as toastmaster.

Students Parade

A torchlight parade of students and townspeople through the downtown district preceded the rally. Red flares illuminated placards and banners advertising the Republican cause, and a detachment of the university band led the parade.

Guest speakers of the league at the Legion building were Clyde Charlton of Des Moines, former end on the university football team and former Polk county representative, and Mrs. H. Foster Bain and Mrs. Samuel Dolbear, the "flying grandmothers" of New York. D. C. Nolan of Iowa City, state chairman of the league, and Mrs. W. B. Gipple, chairman of the women's organization in Johnson county, gave short talks.

Charlton Speaks

"Adversity, not prosperity, is the test of character," Mr. Charlton said. "Strong men and women think in an emergency, and are not blinded by adversity. People will think, use judgment, when they cast their ballots Nov. 8, and will vote for the things for which the Republican candidates stand."

Mr. Charlton reviewed the 60 year period of prosperity under Republican tariff laws which "supplied an American working-man-market for farm crops. The slump, he said, began with Democratic power and the Underwood tariff of 1914."

Reads Letter

Mr. Nolan read a personal letter of commendation of Young Republican leagues which he had received from President Hoover. Forty-seven of the 48 states of the union have organized leagues, and 95 of Iowa's 99 counties are organized, Mr. Nolan said. Meetings similar to the one here were held all over the United States, and the president's message was primarily for young voters.

Organize March

The parade, which was said to be the first Republican parade of its kind in the county, was organized on Dubuque street in front of the Sigma Nu fraternity house at 7 p.m. It then proceeded by a previously mapped route to the American Legion Community building, where the speaking program began at 7:30 p.m.

More than 400 persons attended the rally.

Herriot Visits Madrid; Law Students Riot

MADRID, Oct. 31 (AP)—Acclaimed by everyone excepting law students at the University of Madrid, who went on strike for the duration of his visit, Premier Edouard Herriot of France was welcomed and dined today by Spanish officials.

While M. Herriot was visiting the rich Prado Museum and lunching with Premier Azana, the law students broke forth in protest against what they described as "a mission of imperialism war." They decided not to return to their classes until the French premier had departed for home.

The students, taught by Professor Asua, member of the chamber of deputies, paraded the streets shouting against war and imperialism. They created such a stir police were forced to disperse them. Immediately afterward they met in a corridor of the university and voted a general strike.

Presumably the strike was brought on by reports that the premier's visit concerned a pact of mutual assistance between France and Spain. These rumors were denied by officials.

Reports of Treaty Persist in England

LONDON, Oct. 31 (AP)—Despite official denials in Paris and Madrid, reports persisted in certain diplomatic circles today that France and Spain have negotiated an entente cordiale agreement similar to that between France and England before the war.

Circulation of the report coincided with Premier Herriot's visit to the Spanish capital today, although he emphasized in conversations with the press there that his presence in Madrid was a gesture of friendship and nothing else.

The rumor said the Franco-Spanish arrangement was based on extension of trade advantages by France and agreement to provide protection for Spanish Morocco and the Balearic Islands in time of need.

Spain would grant a right of passage for French troops, in case of war between France and some other power, and other military rights such as establishment of an air and naval base in the Balearics.

ISSUES of 1932

1. Relief and Reconstruction [a] Unemployment

(Editor's note: This is the first of a series of seven articles dealing with current issues confronting the nation. The writer of today's article, T. Dale Yoder, associate professor in the college of commerce, gathered material for his Ph.D. dissertation on "Labor Attitudes" not from statistics and charts but from personal interviews with the men themselves. He now conducts a university course in labor economics. An explanation of the plan and purpose of this series may be found in Today's Topics on page 4.)

The close relationship that exists between the welfare and prosperity of workers and the welfare and prosperity of the rest of society has not always been recognized. Today, however, it is generally understood that the prosperity of workers is an essential characteristic of general prosperity, that workers' incomes are not merely measures of amounts paid to secure labor's services but are also the most important factor in consumers' demands for the products of industry. In such a period as this, when the immediate problem of society is not so much to produce more to distribute and consume than what it has produced and can produce, the economic welfare of workers thus becomes a consideration of major importance to all citizens.

Political issues involving the possible prosperity of workers are, therefore, matters of genuine interest to all voters. In the present campaign several such issues are involved, among which the most important relate to possible legislative action of political control affecting wages, employment stabilization, tariffs, and bonus payment.

Both Parties for High Wages

Both parties and candidates have indicated their belief in the desirability of high wages and their recognition of the close relationship between wages and the demand for products that is essential if industry is to be profitable. The Republican candidate, however, in referring with pride to his efforts to prevent the

"Pasturized"

At Least They Characterize Themselves That Way After Four Back-Lot Landings

"We're known as the 'pasturized grandmothers' now rather than the 'flying grandmothers,'" Mrs. Samuel Dolbear told the audience at the Republican rally last night concerning herself and Mrs. H. Foster Bain.

"So far on our trip we've been forced to land in four pastures. But we have a chance to do more for Hoover there, because you are all good Republicans, and there we meet a lot of Democrats," the natively attired grandmother laughed.

Mrs. Dolbear, 50, and Mrs. Bain, 53, are making an air tour of the country in behalf of President

Britain Needy Forward New Plan of Relief

LONDON, Oct. 31 (AP)—Communist agents directing a campaign for increased unemployment benefits announced today that they intend to march to the house of commons tomorrow night and demand a hearing of their case without presenting a petition.

W. A. L. Hannington, one of the leaders of the "hunger march" of unemployed into London last week, said he would take 50 men with him and present a demand with a million signatures for abolition of the means test from the dole system and restoration of cuts in government aid to the jobless.

John McGovern, left wing Labor member of parliament, was rebuffed when he offered to present a petition in the traditional manner and to assist in obtaining a hearing for the idle at the bar of the house of commons.

Tonight there had been no reply from the government to a letter from unemployed leaders asking that their case be heard in the house. Last week the house decided to begin discussion of the unemployment problem Friday, three days earlier than had been intended.

This was another day without disorder. This morning the magistrates courts heard testimony against several men arrested as a result of yesterday's rioting in Trafalgar Square. Most of the cases were adjourned.

As last week, after a riot in Hyde park, the courts discovered that all the defendants were residents of London, none of them from the ranks of the hunger marchers who came in from Scotland, Wales and outlying cities of England.

The police feared, however, that there would be a recurrence of the disorders tomorrow when the unemployed plan to march up to Parliament Square with their protests and demands. The regular force, however, has been strengthened by revival of the relief system used during the general strike of 1926.

It brings into service 12,000 special police for routine work, freeing the regular men for assignment to riot duty. About 2,000 special officers, serving without pay, worked yesterday on traffic duty.

See No Gain in Registration

Although registrations in the new permanent registration system have not yet been counted, City Clerk George J. Dohrer said yesterday that little increase is expected over last year's total of 7,700 voters.

More than 600 persons registered Saturday and because of the long line waiting at the time of the deadline, 5 p.m., Mr. Dohrer kept the office open until all persons in the line had registered.

Residents who did not register by last Saturday will not be able to vote at the general election. The city clerk is now filing registration cards in the proper precinct books in preparation for election day, November 8.

Engineer of Hoover Train Retired After 62 Years of Service

At 2:55 p.m. Sunday Thomas "Tom" Dunn opened the throttle on train No. 10 and rolled out of Iowa City for the final 55 miles of his last run to Rock Island.

"Tom" Dunn, who was at the throttle of President Hoover's special train between Rock Island and Des Moines Oct. 4, completed 62 years and two months of active service for the Rock Island railroad Sunday and went on the pension list.

For the last 15 years he has "pulled" train No. 7 (The Rocky Mountain Limited) and No. 10 on the Iowa division between Rock Island and Valley Junction.

Campaigners Tour County

Political Caravans Will Hold Meetings in 15 Towns

Campaign tours of Johnson county cities and towns will be made today by groups from both major political parties.

Republicans will be headed by an official "Hoover-Curtis" car on a national tour. More than 50 cars are expected to participate. Addresses are to be made at each stop, including two stops in Iowa City. Lloyd Harmon of the national Republican organization will be in charge.

Democrats will visit 11 towns in an all day motor trip. Speeches at the various stops will be made by Democratic candidates for office in the general election Nov. 8. The group will be preceded at each stop by the Moose band of Iowa City.

Towns to be visited by the Republican caravan are Hills, Iowa City, Solon, North Liberty, Tiffin, Williamsburg, and Marengo. The first stop will be made at Hills at 1 o'clock this afternoon, the last at Marengo at 8 o'clock tonight.

Democrats begin their tour at 8 o'clock this morning and will return at 6:15 this afternoon. They will stop at Lone Tree, Hills, Bay-ertown, Cosgrove, Oxford, Tiffin, Oakdale, North Liberty, Swisher, Solon, and Morse. Luncheon will be eaten at Oxford.

Indict Nine for Flogging

One Gang Responsible Florida Officers Believe

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 31 (AP)—Nine men identified as members of a gang that flogged a score of people here in recent months were indicted today by the Duval county grand jury.

Charges set forth included "unlawful assembly to premeditatedly effect death, aggravated assault, false and illegal imprisonment, and robbery."

All of the 24 indictments rendered were in connection with attacks on six of the persons. Whether indictments would be returned in the other cases could not be ascertained.

Those named in the bills are J. L. Nettles, W. A. Jackson, Oscar Bessant, J. C. Godwin, E. M. Rabb, C. C. Rabb, Hugh Laseter, L. C. Bowers, and Horace Starling.

The victims were named as Mrs. Sallie Geringer, Ola Belle Gilstrap, A. R. Berg, Smith Kelly, O. K. Mikell, and Stewart Burroughs.

Officers withheld the names of the other victims saying publicity would hinder their investigation.

Officers said they had information indicating a single band of 12 to 18 men, working on a set quota of one flogging a week, had made all the reported attacks. All of the persons beaten said they had been accused of various offenses to which members of the gang objected.

Says Demos Plan Radical, Basic Change

Attacks Governmental Philosophies of Roosevelt

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, NEW YORK, Oct. 31 (AP)—Launching an attack upon the "philosophies of government" of the Democratic leadership, President Hoover tonight told a Madison Square Garden throng that "to embark upon this inchoate new deal which has been propounded in this campaign would be to undermine and destroy our American system."

"Heckler"

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, NEW YORK, Oct. 31 (AP)—Just as President Hoover started to speak tonight a lone man in the gallery shouted repeatedly "You are a liar, Mr. Hoover" before he was pulled down and silenced by those nearby. The chief executive paused for many seconds with head bowed until the disturbance ceased.

Climaxing his bid for eastern electoral votes after a day of active campaigning along the Atlantic seaboard, the chief executive asserted that the Republican administration had "saved this nation from a quarter of a century of chaos and degeneration."

Hits Liberalism

"My countrymen," Mr. Hoover said, "the proposals of our opponents represent a profound change in American life—less in concrete proposal, but as that may be, than by implication and evasion. Dominantly in their spirit they represent a radical departure from the foundations of 150 years which have made this the greatest nation in the world."

"This election is not a mere shift from the ins to the outs. It means deciding the direction our nation will take over a century to come."

Names Leaders

Asking his audience to "look into the types of leaders who are campaigning for the Democratic ticket," the president named Senator Norris of Nebraska; Senator LaPollette of Wisconsin and Senator Cutting of New Mexico, all progressive Republicans; Senator Long of Louisiana and Senator Wheeler of Montana, both Democrats, and William Randolph Hearst, newspaper publisher.

"I can respect the sincerity of these men in their desire to change our form of government and our social and economic system," Mr. Hoover said, "though I shall do my best tonight to prove they are wrong."

Ask Support

"Unless these men feel assurance of support to their ideas they certainly would not be supporting these candidates and the Democratic party. The seal of these men indicates that they have sure confidence that they will have a voice in the administration of our government."

"I may say at once that the changes proposed from all these Democratic principals and allies are of the most profound and penetrating character. If they are brought about this will not be the America which we have known in the past."

Speaks of Roosevelt

Speaking directly of Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Democratic nominee, the chief executive asserted that the "philosophy" upon which he "proposes to conduct the presidency of the United States is the philosophy of stagnation, of despair."

"It is the end of hope," the president continued. "The destinies of this country should not be dominated by that spirit in action. It would be the end of the American system."

Prophesies Ruin

At another point in his address, while attacking Democratic proposals to reduce the Republican protective tariff and institute a competitive tariff for revenue, Mr. Hoover said:

"Whole towns, communities and forms of agriculture with their homes, schools and churches have been built up under this (Republican) system of protection. The grass will grow in streets of a hundred cities, a thousand towns; the weeds will overrun the fields of millions of farms if that protection be taken away. Their churches and school houses will decay."

University High School Makes Arrangements for Celebration of Homecoming

Plans are being made for the largest celebration for Homecoming ever held at the University high school.

The committees for the event are in charge of the following students: Billy Welt, badge sales; Margaret Miller, Friday afternoon's assembly; Herman Zimmerman, collecting boxes for bon-fire; Jervis Baldwin, parades; Van Phillips, bon-fire program; and Amanda McCloy, program at the game.

Announce Program

The program for this year's Homecoming is as follows: Tuesday, Homecoming badge sale opens; Wednesday, 4:10 to 6 p.m., collection of boxes; Thursday, 7:15 p.m., parade will start at school building; 8 p.m., bonfire, cheers, talks, and songs; Friday, 1:30 p.m., Homecoming assembly; 1:45, parade; 2:15 p.m., football game, West Branch high school and University high school.

The ninth grade girls have chosen Marjorie Smith and Gertrude Seising cheer leaders and they are devoting part of Thursday to practice on yells and songs. The seventh and eighth boys have been getting acquainted with fire drills, and have sent representatives to the fire chief for literature.

Eleventh Grade

Since the parties are over, the eleventh grade girls are getting down to more routine business and discussing some of the topics suggested for home rooms. They agree that a person's character is indicated by the way in which he spends his leisure time.

The tenth grade boys have been challenged by the twelfth grade boys to a football game in the near future. The dopsters, Wyjack and Barron, predict a score of 6 to 0 in favor of U-Hi this week end.

Seventh, Eighth Grades

Ruth Freichs, local Girl Scout executive, will speak to the seventh and eighth grade girls during their home-room period Wednesday. Home-rooms will meet Friday of this week as the assembly program has been moved to the afternoon. Dorothy Keyser and Dorothy Ward are acting as the bulletin board committee this year. Any notices that are to be placed on the bulletin board are to be left in the office.

U. High Poll Reveals One Communist; Hoover Leads

More work for Congressman Hamilton Fish of New York, Communist sleuth, was discovered Friday morning when the civics class at University high school conducted a poll of the student body in the morning assembly.

One student voted the Communist ticket straight, giving his vote to William Z. Foster for president, James W. Ford for vice president, Peter Hunter for senator, and to William H. Patton for governor. He was not the only one who voted a straight ticket, however. With the exception of the office of governor, 133 Republicans cast their ballots on strictly party lines.

Brookhart's effect as an independent candidate, among University high school students, at least, was not to split the Republican vote as was expected in some circles, but to split the Democratic strength. Henry Field received the solid 133 votes, while Murphy was left with a short 87 and Brookhart picked up 23. Every one of the eight tickets on the ballot had its supporters. The results of the poll follow:

For President and Vice President
Herbert Hoover and Charles Curtis (Rep.)	133
Franklin D. Roosevelt and John Garner (Dem.)	102
For United States Senator
Norman Thomas and James H. Maurer (Sec.)	14
William Z. Foster and James W. Ford (Com.)	1
For Governor
Henry Field (Rep.)	133
Louis Murphy (Dem.)	87
Dan W. Turner (Rep.)	105
Mrs. Laetitia Conard (Sec.)	10
J. W. Long (Ind.)	5
Norman Baker (Far-Lab.)	13
John B. Hammond (Prohibition)	3
William H. Patton (Com.)	1

"Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by the celebrated artist, Fred Madan... inspired by that wild, bloody scramble of covered wagons in the Colorado Gold Rush (1858), as described in the National Geographic Magazine, "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes.

No raw tobaccos in Luckies —that's why they're so mild

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

Students and Politics

THE MOST HEARTENING aspect of the current presidential campaign is the unusual amount of genuine interest evidenced by university students in things political. One of the most disheartening features is the sorry fact that this same interest, though thoroughly genuine now, will almost inevitably die a sudden death when the fervor of the election has chilled.

Editorial writers have a way of pointing to the conduct of other peoples as worthy of imitation. This tendency is to be deplored in some measure, but in the matter of politics the American student might well follow the lead of his English colleagues. It is a matter of general knowledge that the English student is almost invariably well versed in the operation of his government and has a store of well-grounded opinions on national principles and policies.

The undergraduate in this country who is equally well equipped is a rare spectacle. He is so rare that he is often treated with the kindly deference one ordinarily reserves for the biologist who wanders through the woods on warm spring days carrying a butterfly net.

This, though true, is manifestly not as it should be. Government by the people under such circumstances becomes something of a farce. Good government under such circumstances is merely an accident.

From the theoretical standpoint it could be urged that, in view of the fact that the state makes it possible for the student to obtain an education, it should not be unreasonable for the state to expect the student to put forth his best efforts to become a good citizen, to take an interest in government, and to uphold the welfare of the state in general.

But from the selfish standpoint of the student's own welfare one would expect him to take an active interest in politics and the problems of government. Besides bearing the most vital sort of relation to the welfare of every citizen, politics is a fascinating game worth the application of the best minds in the nation.

The most hopeful wish for the country today is that this election will inspire the students with a lasting interest in the affairs of their government.

Hallowed Fun and Foolishness

LAST EVENING was Hallowe'en, and today is Hallowmas, but probably there are not many persons who have heard it referred to by that title. They may have heard of All-Saints day; the two are one and the same, and refer to the feast time of all saints.

While Hallowe'en has become of interest as the time for parties, and more especially for pranks, of younger persons, the original day for celebration has become nearly lost. Especially so has it become from the standpoint of a church celebration.

One of the chief amusements of the Hallowe'en of more than a few years ago was the divining of one's future husband, reserved of course for women. No other means was quite so effective in this as those connected with salt, silence, and candles.

The girl who ate a salt cake and went to bed without speaking or drinking water would see her husband in her dreams, it was said in the best of old tradition; or a salt herring might be substituted for the cake, with the proviso that it had to be eaten in three bites, bones and all.

A charm of two nuts, named for a woman and her sweetheart and placed side by side in glowing coals of an open fire, would indicate their marriage, if they burned together, or her sweetheart's infidelity if the heat pushed them apart.

Or suppose a woman went into the cellar backwards, carrying a candle, a mirror, and an apple. While she combed her hair and ate the apple, the face of her future husband would appear in the mirror, said the best of tradition.

So went many other traditions of the day; maybe they didn't run true to form, but anyway, they were enjoyable.

Professional Stigma

ATHLETES, athletics, and professional-ism have cropped up again as questions for debate, with the refusal of the Western conference to reinstate Willis Glasgow as an amateur, in order that he might serve as an assistant coach at the University of Iowa.

Because Glasgow played professional football so that he might earn enough to continue his study in law, he is automatically barred from any such position on any coaching staff in the Big Ten, and may never act as an official for any conference contest. The rule is automatic in its working, officials explain.

A special writer for a national news service asks the question in a recent article on the refusal of Glasgow's reinstatement as to whether the Western conference fears the professional game as a competitor from the standpoint of financial return, and therefore refuses permission for the professional athlete to work in the conference as official or coach; the refusal being a "discouraging" penalty to keep conference men from turning professional.

This question may have some basis in fact; it is true that the professional game is on the upgrade as far as interest and the ability of the participants is concerned. It seems equally true that the conference contests, not in the Big Ten alone, but generally, are going in the reverse direction, at least from the standard of gate receipts.

For a definition of terms, it would be logical to assume that a "professional" individual is one with certain ability and training, who receives remuneration from use of that ability and training. There would be few who would question such an interpretation; there would also be few coaches who would not be excluded under a ruling barring professional athletes!

In other words, because a man has an ability and can sell its use for his own remuneration, it seems he should be stigmatized and refused permission to exercise that ability in any other place but the one in which he received his first remuneration.

If a man writes short stories for pleasure, then happens to be asked to sell a few, under the Big Ten interpretation, he could never teach a class in short story writing. Silly, isn't it? So seems the ruling.

Jud Tunkins says even a selfish person ought to try to make others happier, so that those around him won't get so blue that they're poor company.

TODAY'S TOPICS

By FRANK JAFFE

On page 1 of today's issue of The Daily Iowan begins a series of articles written by faculty members of the University of Iowa about the issues and problems that confront the nation now for immediate solution and some that will confront the nation in post-election days for permanent solution. The authors were selected on the basis of their qualification to write on each particular subject.

Not all the "accepted" issues will be considered in the seven articles, nor will each article endeavor especially to present the political aspects of each issue. They will, however, cover the particular problem from the standpoint of the expert, a presentation of the whole problem as it appears to one who is adequately able to comprehend it from all its angles.

The maximum of from 500 to 700 words will hardly be sufficient, it is expected, to cover the background and trends of each; rather they will be confined to a condensed report, as complete as space permits. Non-partisan as far as possible, these articles are intended for the edification of conscientious voters; for the most part as opinions from no particular political viewpoint.

For the purposes of clarity and expediency, the main issues of the present campaigns, as well as those of all-time interest, have been separated into two groups: relief and future permanent problems.

Under the former come: 1) relief of industry and business, including reconstruction, credit, government and business, banking, insurance, transportation, manufacture; 2) relief of agriculture, including tariff, and credit as it affects the farm problem; 3) relief of labor, covering unemployment, the veterans' "bonus," and tariff as relating to the labor question; 4) relief of foreign nations, including war debts, credit, and tariff.

Under permanent issues are listed: 1) taxation and economy; 2) public utilities and the question of government in business; 3) peace, that discusses various angles of disarmament, League of Nations, world court, recognition of Soviet Russia, Manchuria, Philippines, Latin America.

It may be noted that no separate issue has been made of prohibition, the lame duck amendment, the bonus, the military as it is affected by foreign policy, or other matters that may have been designated as issues but which have been relegated to a back seat for the more important matters of reconstruction and general physical rehabilitation, as well as for permanent policies that are all-important in the bearing on present and future conditions.

Prohibition, for example, may at one time during the present campaign have been considered a major issue. Now it is comparatively forgotten. It has always been a moral issue, not a matter of immediate concern. There are, however, political factors based upon the prohibition question, factors that cannot be overlooked in discussing the campaign as a whole. For that reason, prohibition will be allotted to this column for presentation as a minor issue but a problem of considerable importance throughout the nation.

Book Bits

(From Pigskin, by Charles W. Ferguson)
Offers . . . began to flood the mails of his little New Mexico home. It was rumored that alumni from Arkansas had offered board, tuition, clothing, and, tactfully, a B.A. degree; that Georgia Tech had sent a clubman clear across the continent with the authority to double any offer he had already received; that Southern Methodist had offered a straight salary of such proportions that Fatty Harmon eyed the bald headed ambassador with grave suspicion in his boyish eyes; that Carnegie Tech and New York university had topped all others by proffering similar guarantees and by promising in addition to see that the mighty Harmon got 500 columns of newspaper space during his career. Another rumor was that Iowa, hearing of this overture, had sent an ambassador who had equalled it and brought a signed contract for the movies along to boot.

To All Students Who Expect to Graduate at the Close of the Present Semester, Tuesday, Jan. 31, 1933
Each student who expects to receive a degree or certificate at the university convocation to be held Tuesday, Jan. 31, 1933, must have made his formal application, on a card provided for the purpose in the registrar's office, in university hall, on or before Saturday, Nov. 19, 1932. Wylie Heads Party of Astronomers on Meteor Study Trip

Inspection of a supposed fallen meteor will be part of the work of a party of astronomers headed by Prof. C. C. Wylie, head of the astronomy department, on their trip into Arizona this month.

They will stop at Archie, Mo., for a day or two to analyze specimens of a rock thought to be fragments of a meteor which fell last August. The explosion was heard in Topeka, Kan., 100 miles from Archie.

Prof. Eli S. Haynes of the University of Missouri believes the rocks to be authentic meteor fragments. The Iowa scientists will make tests and interview spectators in an attempt to verify this.

Those accompanying Professor Wylie are Prof. Thomas C. Poulter and Prof. R. E. Criley of Iowa Wesleyan college and Ray Anderson of Cedar Rapids, photographer. From Missouri they will proceed to Arizona to observe the Leonid meteor shower.

STUDIO GOSSIP FILM SCANDAL SCREEN COMMENT

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—There will be exciting times on "Diamond Lil." I mean that obscure gag-man who always wears you out with stale jokes.

The other day he cornered Al Johnson in a group at United Artists. When he finally walked away, someone asked:

"Who is that pest?"

"Al shook his head and grinned. "That's just a guy who thinks the world owes him an audience."

At this writing, no one appears to know who will be Mae's leading man in her second Hollywood picture. Believe it or not, Gary Cooper was one considered. I have a hunch Gary Grant may finally land the job.

As in her stage portrayal, Mae will build up her natural height. Really 5 feet 4 inches tall, she'll be 5 feet 9 when the cameras start to grind.

And did I forget to say "Diamond Lil" will come to the screen as "Diamond Lady"? That's just in case somebody objected to the lurid legends about the original play.

As one of Hollywood's worst bored, he richly deserved it.

I mean that obscure gag-man who always wears you out with stale jokes.

Ann Harding's sister, Mrs. Edith Nash, is writing the star's life story for a magazine. . . Frank Lawton, the English actor, is very attentive these days to Janet Chandler, a Pine Bluff, Arkansas, girl. . . And Rochelle Hudson admits to me she is very fond of Walter Byron.

TOWN GOSSIP

There's a very amusing story about how Kathleen Burke, "The Panther Woman," showed her claws. Soon after the studio chose her for the role, a boy-friend showed up. He is Glen L. Raredin, Chicago commercial photographer. After traveling 2,000 miles, Mr. Raredin naturally wanted to see a good deal of his girl friend. He showed up regularly on the set and he and the intriguing Miss Burke took in the Hollywood sights. With a mind only for business, Paramount objected. Miss Burke was appealed to. But instead of giving in, she has firmly asserted herself. The studio has to grin and bear it. And to do them justice, they seem to relish the job.

Nero's famous instrument actually was a square box with strings across it. One twanged it with the fingers and called it a fiddle.

So, to put it accurately, Nero fiddled while Rome burned.

Boos, Cheers Greet Chicago Unemployed in Giant Parade

Red Flags, Placards Defy Police, Ask Additional Aid

CHICAGO, Oct. 31 (AP)—Chanting "We Want Bread," Chicago's unemployed surged through the loop today in a giant parade and joined in a demonstration at Grant park to protest diminished relief allowances, which had been halved in October for lack of funds.

Traffic was snarled and thousands lined sidewalks as marchers, flanked by 1,000 policemen, marched in a drizzle of rain.

Defying police orders against red flags, marchers held aloft crimson pennants, the hammer and sickle of communism, placards protesting against authorities, and signs demanding additional relief.

The number of marchers was estimated from 10,000 to 25,000. It was, undoubtedly, one of the largest parades the city has seen.

Old, Young Participate

There were old men, young men; old women, young women; university students, grade school students; white men, Negro men in the line of march—a cross-section of the city's unemployed.

Some of the banners read: "Less cops, more bread;" "The new deal, what is it?"; "We want work, not charity."

Boos mingled with cheers as spectators leaned from skyscrapers to view the parade.

While the march was trekking to Grant park, a committee representing the jobless presented to Mayor Cermak demands for an allowance of $7.50 weekly for each family of two; $5.50 for each single man, free car fare for unemployed and school children; free gas, water and electricity; release of unemployed under arrest; a public works program to build homes for the idle, and no distinction between white and Negro workers.

Mayor Issues Assurances

The mayor assured the representatives he would do all in his power to improve the status of the unemployed. He said if taxes were forthcoming much aid could be extended.

At Grant park the various leaders addressed the crowd and reiterated their demands. Speakers asserted the idle would be massed from over the nation for a "hunger march" on Washington in December.

MENACED HEIR, FAMILY

Fourteen year old John McGuire (arrow), whose family received letters threatening to kidnap him unless $10,000 is paid. The boy, the son of Dr. Walter G. McGuire, noted Chicago physician, is studying for the priesthood at Quigley Preparatory Seminary of Chicago, where church dignitaries are exerting their influence to safeguard him. With him are his sisters and brothers, left to right, Mary, seated; Frances, Josephine, Julia, Patricia and Walter George, Jr.

Swisher Reviews Career of Pioneer Iowa Merchant

A review of the career of Col. Cyrus Bussey, a pioneer Iowa merchant and an officer in the Union army during the Civil war is given in the forthcoming issue of the Iowa Journal of History and Politics. The author of the sketch of Bussey's life is Jacob A. Swisher, research associate in the State Historical society.

Colonel Bussey was a native Ohioan who came to Bloomfield in the early fifties to establish a store. Shortly after he arrived in Bloomfield he was elected to the state senate as a Democrat.

War Colonel

When the Civil war broke out Bussey volunteered, and soon became a colonel. He was instrumental in urging all Iowa Democrats to back Lincoln. So convinced was he that the Republican partly offered the only solution toward reconstruction after the war, that he became affiliated with that party.

Colonel Bussey later moved to New York city, where he became prominent in Republican party circles, at one time serving as assistant secretary of war.

He died at Washington, D. C., in 1915, and is buried in Arlington cemetery.

Publish List

In addition to Mr. Swisher's article, there is an autobiographical sketch of Cyrus Bussey in the current issue of the journal. A list of late publications concerning Iowa history, and comments on historical activities also are in the publication. Earle D. Ross of Iowa State college has contributed an article on sectionalism in the north during the Civil war.

Month's Business Figures Continue Upward Movement

The faltering forward movement in the state's economic conditions definitely is under way, with the current business statistics giving tenuous but reliable support to last month's contention of gradual improvement.

That belief is set forth in the summary issued yesterday by the University of Iowa's business research bureau. Prof. George R. Davies of the college of commerce is compiler of the monthly digest of business conditions.

New Activity Encouraging

Activity in basic industries is an encouraging feature. Marked gains in railroad carloadings, 15.1 per cent over the August mark, and in building contracts, a gain of 57.8 per cent, reflect this increased activity, Professor Davies points out.

In farm products' prices, the early fall figures show a recession from the definite gains of July and August, but the September index nevertheless is eight points above the June low.

Public building gains are responsible for the notable increases in building contracts during September. This branch showed a 139.9 gain over the August mark, whereas the residential contracts registered a 7.3 loss and business building only a boost of 1.3 per cent.

Employment Gains Slightly

Although employment during September gained 2.7 per cent over the mark for the previous month, the general situation continues at a point about 24 per cent below normal. Professor Davies declares that there is great need of effective organization of private as well as public charity, although Iowa's unemployment conditions in general are superior to those of the rest of the nation.

A short business meeting was held following the Rev. Mr. Lemon's address.

Russians Revere Sovietism, Lemon Tells Philo Club

Sovietism is looked upon with love and reverence by the people of Russia, the Rev. W. P. Lemon of the Iowa City Presbyterian church said before a meeting of the Philo club in the river room of Iowa Union Sunday night. Relating his experiences in a tour through the Soviet Union, the speaker stressed the tireless efforts of the people, and their pride in the achievements of the government.

He described the propaganda with which the country has been flooded, illustrating his address with posters which he brought out of Russia. This propaganda is directed largely against the church and liquor, and attempts to build up a class consciousness among the proletariat.

Sheriff Nabs Ross Suspect

Hold Man Resembling Killer Wanted in Iowa

WELLINGTON, Kan., Oct. 31 (AP)—A man said by Sheriff J. B. Favor to resemble a picture of Harry Ross, wanted in Denver, Colo., in connection with the slaying of Erwin C. Thompson of Grand Junction, Ia., was held in jail here today.

The prisoner, who gave his name as Fred Smith, was arrested near here last Thursday when found in an intoxicated condition and suffering from exposure.

Taken to Hospital

He was taken to a hospital. After the man had been shaved, Sheriff Favor said he noted resemblance between the prisoner and a picture of Ross.

The prisoner was removed to jail. The sheriff said today he had not heard from Colorado authorities and had not attempted to question the man about the Thompson case.

Found Buried

Thompson's body was found buried under a house in Denver, Oct. 15. Ross and his wife had lived in the house. Mrs. Ross is in jail in Denver. She was returned from Caldwell, Ida., after she told authorities there of the mysterious disappearance of Thompson and Ross. Police believe Thompson, an electrical engineer, met Ross while camping on the Platte river near the Ross house, and was lured inside where he was slain and robbed. Mrs. Ross was driving Thompson's car when arrested.

Murphy Detained on Car Stealing Charge

Robert Murphy is being held at the county jail following his arrest by Deputy Sheriff Preston Koser after he was found Sunday night in a stolen car west of West Branch. The car, a Ford roadster belonging to Carl Schwaigert, 943 Malden Lane, had been wrecked in a ditch. It was stolen earlier in the evening from in front of the Strand theater.

REAL WINTER IN OCTOBER

It isn't often that the kiddies get an opportunity of making a snow man in October, but these North Dakota boys are enjoying that rare experience. The recent snow storm in the state, which was so heavy as to force the closing of several schools, was a welcome interlude for the scholars. The above scene was made at Killdeer, where the fall was exceptionally heavy. Many towns were without heat, light or telephone communication for 60 hours, owing to the collapse of power lines.

Nurses Hold Convention of State League

Seventy-three nurses from over the state registered yesterday morning at the University hospital for the one-day convention of the Iowa State League of Nursing education.

Lucile Petry, assistant director of nursing at the University of Minnesota, spoke to the group on "Some essentials of supervision." Three other lectures were scheduled for the morning program, which was followed by a business meeting.

college of medicine, delivered an address before the convention on "Problems of nursing in the Orient." A round table discussion, case studies, and a tour of university hospitals completed the afternoon program.

The convention culminated with a 6:30 banquet at Iowa Union, and a musical program following the dinner.

The State Association of Registered Nurses is meeting today and Wednesday at the Hotel Roosevelt in Cedar Rapids. A large representation from Iowa City is attending, including Lois B. Corder, director of the school of nursing.

Following institution of courses looking toward degrees, enrollment in the Washington university department of journalism doubled this fall.

FOUR SCHOOLS FAVOR HOOVER

Wisconsin

MADISON, Wis.—John P. Wingergreen, the Gershwin-Kaufman-Ryskin candidate for president in the current musical comedy, "Of Thee I Sing," won a landslide victory over all other farce contestants in the "Daily Cardinal" presidential poll conducted last week at the University of Wisconsin.

Eddie Cantor, due to revive his campaign on the air this week, was left out in the cold with nary a vote.

"Wintergreen" received a grand total of five votes. Guy Lombardo came in for a lone vote, as did Jack Robinson, William D. Upright, and "Beer."

Those more seriously considered in the poll, in which faculty votes and student ballots were recorded separately, were Herbert Hoover, 1,739; Norman Thomas, 1,148; Franklin D. Roosevelt, 1,086; William Z. Foster, 80; and William D. Upshaw, 28.

The faculty ballots included one vote each for Glenn Frank, president of the university, and Alfred E. Smith. Students gave two votes to Frank and one to Will Rogers.

Ohio State

COLUMBUS, Ohio.—President Hoover was a victor over his political opponents in the "Lantern" presidential poll, receiving 2,449 of 4,492 votes cast.

Franklin D. Roosevelt received 1,

025 votes; Norman Thomas, 1,005; and William Z. Foster, 2. The "Lantern" poll was conducted as part of the nation-wide canvass of colleges, under the auspices of "The Daily Princetonian" at Princeton university, to determine to some degree an expression of student opinion in the coming presidential election.

Purdue University

LAFAYETTE, Ind.—An apathetic attitude on the part of the student body at Purdue university characterized the voting in a straw ballot sponsored by "The Purdue Exponent" recently, in which Herbert Hoover led the balloting by a convincing margin. Only 349 votes, coming from less than 10 per cent of the student body, deposited during the two days of balloting, were distributed with 221 votes for Hoover, 89 for Roosevelt, 36 for Thomas, 2 for Foster, and 1 for Upshaw. In every school of the university Hoover led the balloting, with his greatest margin of victory in the school of chemical engineering, where he received 67 ballots to Roosevelt's mere 9.

Michigan

ANN ARBOR, Mich.—Ann Arbor's more than 150 persons listed in "Who's Who in America," the great majority of them members of the University of Michigan faculty, expressed a decided preference for Herbert Hoover in last week's presidential poll conducted by "The Michigan Daily." The vote on the presidency balloted 86 for Hoover as against 19 for Franklin D. Roosevelt and 11 for Norman Thomas.

Wilbur M. Brucker, present governor of Michigan, a strongly Republican state, polled nearly twice as many votes for re-election as did his Democratic opponent, William A. Comstock.

The closest race in the poll developed on the question of the repeal of the eighteenth amendment. Repeal was finally defeated, 60 to 58. The city's elite were very definite in their decision upon the final question, that of immediate cash payment of the soldiers' bonus, casting a vote of 117 to 1 against the measure.

Rietz to Speak at Teachers Meeting

Prof. H. L. Rietz, head of the mathematics department, will read a paper Friday before the Iowa State Teachers association, meeting in Des Moines the last three days of this week. The subject is "Statistics in the high school curriculum."

Other instructors in the mathematics department who will go to Des Moines for the meeting Friday are Prof. J. F. Reilly, Prof. E. W. Chittenden, Prof. Roscoe Woods, and Prof. L. E. Ward.

Ripley Explanations

EXPLANATION OF SUN-DAY'S CARTOON

A festival of 500 centuries: Hallowe'en is humanity's oldest and most universally celebrated festival. Its age, conservatively estimated, is about 5,000 years. Then ancient Peruvians, the Druids, the Romans, the Persians, the Hindus, the Egyptians, all celebrated it at one and the same time as their Feast of the Dead for three days. In historical times the Celts celebrated it under the name of Samhain, still preserved in the Irish name of Shamhna. Hallowe'en was also the Celtic New Year's eve.

At the present day such widely scattered parts as Europe, India, China, Japan, Tonga and the South Sea Islands, still celebrate the festival on Oct. 31, spite the wide disparity of their calendars. The reason for this uniformity is the fact that the celebration is based not on their calendars but on the position of the constellation of the Pleiades, which is uniform throughout the world.

Tomorrow: "A hiccoughing record."

Announce Plan to Aid City Schools' Needs

Under the direction of Mrs. William Parizek, and J. Lloyd Rogers, principal of Horace Mann school, the welfare and finance committee of the Parent-Teacher association will work together to devise some means of raising money for welfare work among students of the public schools, it was announced at the P.T.A. board meeting last night. It was also decided that each local association will look after the milk in its own school. The new constitution was read and will be voted upon at the next meeting of the board Dec. 12 in the junior high school auditorium.

AS REGULARLY as the football season rolls around, tales are told proving that the players are of marked intelligence, and about the same number that indicate they are really just big masses of muscle that extends up to the bottom of the hair roots embedded in their scalps. Which only goes to prove that the boys are a human lot, some smart, some dumb, and plenty of them just average fellows. Anyone who denies that good football players are capable of lightning fast thinking, however, know nothing of the game.

Herb Dana, one of the outstanding referees on the Pacific coast cited one of the best examples of quick thinking I've read. The content of his yarn, as it appeared in the San Francisco Examiner, was something as follows: In the U. S. C. Stanford game, Sims, Stanford half, went back to punt. The ball, however, went high, and over his head. He pursued the oval down the field, with the Southern California line hot on his trail. Finally, on his own 25 yard line, Sim recovered the ball, and without pausing, booted it back over his shoulder into the Trojan territory. In addition to fast thinking, that was a physical feat. If you doubt the statement, try it some time.

OUR friendly enemies, the Minnesota Gophers, seem quite perturbed over the fact that Northwestern was using a telephone system from the press box to the bench during their game Saturday to keep the coaches informed as to the weaknesses of the Minnesota team. Just why such a fuss should be raised, I don't know. There was nothing underhanded nor secret about it. The Wildcats obtained permission from the officials to get the wire, but of course, the Gopher coaching staff didn't know it. Both teams may have their wires if they wish. No doubt there was some one in the press box who reported to Coach Bierman between halves. Anyway, Minnesota did a nice job of upsetting, so why worry.

Carl Kauffman, boxing instructor at Iowa, is back again this year, as determined as ever to put the sport over on the local campus. Last year about 35 men worked out most of the winter, and Coach Kauffman took a five man team in to Chicago to the collegiate championships which showed to good advantage against tough opposition. This year, with Capt. Dave Elderkin as his assistant, he hopes to build a much stronger team. The sport is gaining favor in schools throughout the middle west, and is very popular in eastern colleges and universities. Many Big Ten schools are offering boxing on their physical education programs, and attracting hundreds of men. Workouts here will start Friday, but will not replace other physical education work until later.

PROF. D. T. JITTERS, our football prognosticator, is having quite a bit of trouble keeping his chest inside his vest since his percentage of winners began to pick up. He claims all the minor adjustments necessary to make his machine next to perfect have been made, and he doesn't want it any better for fear people will think he is fixing the games. His standing after last week, with all its ups and downs, was 225 right, 61 wrong, and 23 ties, for a percentage of .787.

Coach Solem Gives Hawks Light Workout; Seeks Scoring Punch

Juggles First String Lineup During Drill

Puts Laws at Quarter; Tries Schammel, Hass at Full

Continuing his search for scoring punch, Coach Oesie Solem juggled his first string lineup considerably yesterday afternoon as the Hawks began preparations for their game with the Nebraska Cornhuskers here Saturday.

The Iowa mentor devoted most of the period to correcting errors in the execution of plays, and concluded practice with a skull session to acquaint the squad with the tricky Husker attack, and methods of stopping the Nebraska power attack.

Regulars Let Off
Considerably bruised after their defeat at the hands of the George Washington Colonials last Friday night, the regulars were let off without a great deal of contact work. Herman Schneidman, halfback, Zud Schammel, tackle, and George Teyro, quarterback, were hampered by minor injuries yesterday, but took part in the drill.

In an effort to find a more driving backfield combination, Coach Solem tried Schammel, and Wilmon Hass, sophomore guard, at the fullback position. Lawrence Parsons and Byron Bury, a first year end, were at the halfbacks, with Joe Laws, erstwhile halfback, at quarter. Laws has shown the most drive of any of the backs to date, and produced Iowa's lone touchdown against the Colonials with a 75 yard return of a punt.

Hard Drill Today
John Miller and Veris Dickerson were at ends, Fred Radloff and Don Dorsey took over the tackle positions, Tom Moore and Lurie Kosha were at guards, and Ed Dolly at center.
A hard workout is scheduled for this afternoon, with more work on offense.
Coach Bill Boelter, who scouted the Nebraska-Kansas game Saturday, drilled his freshman squad on Husker plays yesterday, and will use them against the varsity either today or tomorrow.
The entire squad will be in readiness for the game Saturday, Coach Solem said last night.

In Big Ten GRID CAMPS

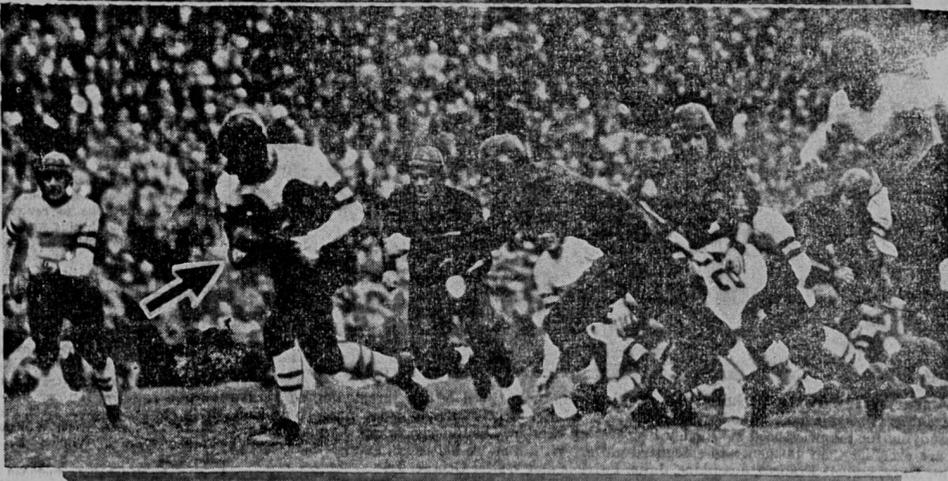

(By The Associated Press)
MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 31 — The Gophers spent their time in the lecture room instead of on the practice field listening to Coach Bernie Bierman's chalk talk on the Northwestern game of last Saturday. Bierman, while preparing the team for an invasion by Mississippi this week is looking particularly toward the Wisconsin contest a week later.

Wildcats Rest
EVANSTON — Coach Hanley excused the Northwestern regulars from practice today, but said the rest of the week would be devoted to improving the Wildcat forward game. George Potter, regular halfback, probably will not be used against Ohio State Saturday due to recurrence of a shoulder injury.

Spears Satisfied
MADISON — The regulars took a rest today, but the reserves went through a hard workout as Wisconsin began preparing for the Illinois game Saturday. Coach "Doc" Spears said he was satisfied with the showing of a light line against Ohio's heavy forward wall, and pleased with the work of some reserves.

ILLINI BEAT MAROONS

Illinois turned in another of its surprise games when it beat the Maroons, 13 to 7, Saturday at Stagg field in Chicago. Photo shows Vin Sahlin, star quarterback for the Maroons, cranking through the Illini line for a touchdown from the 22-yard line in the first quarter.

Hawks Point for November Grid Contests

October's football fortunes are being driven from the minds of University of Iowa football players by thoughts of November's three successive opponents.

First up is Nebraska, to be played Saturday at Iowa stadium, so the Huskers with their fast running and accurate passing attack now are subjects of Coach Oesie Solem's lectures and demonstrations.

Purdue follows a week later, also at Iowa City, and then the 1932 season ends Nov. 19 against Northwestern at Evanston, but the Hawkeyes will consider them after this business with the Huskers is terminated.

For the fifth successive game, serious injuries were avoided by the Hawkeyes, a record unequalled by an Iowa team in many seasons. Leo Samuelson, senior tackle, had some teeth damaged in the George Washington game, and Ray Fisher hurt a leg, but both will be ready for play this week.

Practice now is centering about ways to make the line outcharge opponents, or at least hold even, to develop an offense which will not falter when deep in opponent's territory. Against George Washington, the team made a respectable number of yards from scrimmage but something always happened to dissipate the scoring threat, usually incomplete or intercepted passes.

Opponents this season have crossed Iowa's goal line 13 times. Successful passes, varying from 20 to 45 yards, have figured in about 10 of those touchdowns, either taking the ball over or within the 10 yard mark.
Nebraska has an efficient passing combination, too, with big George Sauer, the fullback, throwing to Bernie Masterson, quarterback, or one of the ends. Sauer, slightly injured, was kept out of the Kansas Aggie game.

Gophers Seek Explanation by Wildcats

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 31 (AP) — Objections of Frank McCormick, Minnesota university athletic director, to Northwestern's telephonic observation system at football games, moved tonight from the broad field of gridiron ethics to a specific question of administrative authority.
McCormick announced earlier in the day that he would file a complaint with Northwestern's athletic department. After finding that no rule prohibits the system, McCormick said he was more concerned with Northwestern's failure to notify his department that the system would be used than with the ethics of the practice.
When McCormick was notified that the system was being used Saturday, he ordered the wire disconnected in the fourth quarter just before Minnesota scored its touchdown to win from the Wildcats 7 to 0.
While Hanley said a coach stationed in the press box used the telephone to keep the bench informed of the physical fitness of his players, information supplied McCormick was that the observer furnished a running analysis of the play of both teams.

Solem Thinks Practice Common

Commenting on the University of Minnesota's protest of the telephone communication system between the press box and dugout used by Northwestern at Minneapolis, Coach Oesie Solem said tonight he believed it was common practice.

Tracksters in Final Events

All-University Meet Will Terminate Fall Activities

University fall tracksters will take time out today as they hold in readiness for the final intramural competition of the year tomorrow and Thursday when the all-university championships get under way over at the field house and the west side track.

About 60 men who have been competing in the previous two interclass struggles will engage in the meet tomorrow and the next day that will decide once and for all the superiority in the various 14 events. Ribbons will be given for the first four places, while freshmen will also battle for numerals.

Javelin Throw Event

The Rotary club javelin throw will be held in conjunction with the other events and will hold out a traveling cup as the reward for the winner.
Two events have been added to the list contested last week. They are the half mile and the mile which were withheld before because the men had had too little conditioning. The other events scheduled to begin tomorrow are the 100, 220, and 300 yard dashes, the 60 yard high hurdles, the 110 yard low hurdles, the discus, hammer, javelin, and shot put, and the broad jump, high jump, and pole vault.

Cretzmeyer Stands Out

Several favorites stand out to cop honors in a number of the events. The versatile Frank Cretzmeyer is favored to win the 220, the high and low hurdles, and the high jump. Mark Panther is practically a sure winner in the javelin and a sure Davis seems an equally sure bet in the shot put and discus.
The broad jump should go to Bob Hemmingway, the pole vault to John Barko, and the hammer to Bob Cornog.

The 100, 300, half, and mile seem to be the only disputable events and no notable marks have been made in any of them.
Jephtha Rixey, Cincinnati Reds' hurler, has been in the major leagues 20 years and has never been in a minor league.

Huskers, Hawkeyes Engage in 'Rubber' Tilt of Late Series

The Iowa-Nebraska football game here Saturday not only will be the "rubber" contest for the Husker teams of Coach Dana X. Bible in the series against the Hawkeyes, but the same sort of a game for Coach Oesie Solem.

Nebraska is no stranger to Solem, for as Drake coach, he sent his teams against the Huskers in 1925 and 1926. The result was an even break. Those games, however, occurred prior to Coach Bible's appearance as Husker mentor.

Bible will be anxious to have his 1932 team win so as to break the deadlock between the two universities in the current set of games. Iowa upset Nebraska, 12 to 7, in 1930, and the westerners won, 7 to 0, last fall.

Irish Eleven Seeks Initial St. Joe Win

Coach Emmett Wilkinson's Irishers will attempt something this week end which a St. Pat's football team has never been able to accomplish. And that something is to defeat St. Joseph of Rock Island.
The Shatronics will invade the Illinois city for a floodlight game Friday night, weather allowing. If the day turns out too cold, the game will be played in the afternoon.

The locals all survived the Kalona game in good shape, and went through a peppy scrimmage yesterday afternoon. Wilkinson was especially pleased with the work of the backs in the Kalona victory. However, the line did not show up so well until the latter part of the game. This week may see some changes in the line, especially at center, where the Kalonians made their best gains.

An electric score board for boxing was introduced in Chicago at the Baer-Griffiths bout. A member of the boxing commission flashed a light indicating the winner of each round.

Purdue Tops Frosh League

Michigan Eleven Still Trails; 1st Elevens to Scrimmage

Despite two victories during the last week, Michigan, the yearling varsity, was unable to land at the top of the freshman football league. With wins over Indiana and Minnesota, it is still tied with the Hoosiers for second place.

Purdue, rated second in the pre-season forecast, hung onto the league leadership, despite a tie with Minnesota last Wednesday. The leaders have to their credit, decisions over Michigan and Indiana, and ties with Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Opportunity to Tie

Michigan will have an opportunity to tie Purdue this Thursday when it meets Wisconsin, while the Boilermakers remain idle. The varsity should have little difficulty in defeating the Badgers, who are tied for last place.
Indiana may make it a triple tie for first place by winning from Minnesota, but the Gophers, inspired by holding Michigan to a lone touchdown, should give the Hoosiers an unexpected fight for the game.

Prepare for Scrimmages

Coach Bill Boelter put the first and second string freshman squads through an intensive drill in the Nebraska plays yesterday in preparation for scrimmage with the varsity today. The three remaining freshman squads were given a light drill under the direction of Earl Greene, supervisor of practice teaching. The squads worked out

LLOYD HOFFMAN, 270 POUND TACKLE ON FROSH ELEVEN

By T. E. K.

Lloyd Hoffman, of Sibley, is the biggest man on the freshman team, if not the largest playing football this year. His 6 feet 2 inch, 270 pound frame is enough to mark him dangerous in any man's sport.

In spite of his huge bulk, Hoffman is pretty shifty on his feet, and manages to get about with considerable alacrity on the field.

Four Sport Man

Hoffman is a product of Sibley high, where he played varsity football for six years, in addition to doubling in three other sports. This four letter man jumped at center for the basketball team, played center field on the diamond, and hurled the discus for the track outfit.

Playing alongside of Casey Jones and White team rang up the only win when they rallied for a fourth quarter touchdown to beat Kalona 8 to 6. They counted a safety in the first period and led until the middle of the second quarter when Grady passed to Jirsa for a touchdown. The Irish then put on the big parade in the final period and edged out the down state team.

L.A. Student

With his build, Lloyd should do a great deal towards solving Oesie Solem's problem of providing a line to measure up with the tremendously heavy forward walls of Minnesota, Wisconsin, and other Big Ten elevens.

It is Lloyd's ambition to become one of the big men of comeliness, and he is taking liberal arts courses to aid him in it.

Schools Enter Meet Saturday

State Interscholastic Cross Country Race Gets Big Field

With 13 high schools, including the defending champion, already enrolled, the entry of about 15 more was expected for the state interscholastic championship cross country race.

The run, an annual event over a two mile course, will occur under the auspices of the University of Iowa athletic department Saturday morning. It is conducted at the request of the Iowa High School Athletic association.

Ottumwa, the 1931 winner, and Muscatine, the 1930 champion and last fall's runner-up, are expected to send strong teams. Other schools which have entered include Lyons, Clinton, Grafton, West Chester, Andrew, Klemme, Birmingham, Vinton, Lamont, Roosevelt of Des Moines, and Grand Mound.

Closing date for the reception of entries is tomorrow, Coach George T. Bresnahan said. The young athletes will compete for both the team and the individual title and in the afternoon will attend the Nebraska-Iowa football game.

Blue Eleven Continues Loop Play; St. Pat's Plays at Night

University high will provide the only local gridiron game this week end as St. Pat's travels to Rock Island to meet St. Joseph in a night game and City high enjoys an open date.

The city teams failed to get better than a .333 break out of three games Friday but every game was a thriller, the last half providing the big dynamite in all games.

Coach Emmett Wilkinson's Green and White team rang up the only win when they rallied for a fourth quarter touchdown to beat Kalona 8 to 6. They counted a safety in the first period and led until the middle of the second quarter when Grady passed to Jirsa for a touchdown. The Irish then put on the big parade in the final period and edged out the down state team.

St. Joe's Strong
St. Joseph will make the local team play to its limit to stay in the game as they boast a great record this year. One ray of hope came Saturday when they could do no better than a 6 to 0 win over St. Mary's of Clinton, a team that the Irish beat by the same score at the first of the season.

University high lost a tough game to Mt. Vernon and with it went the conference lead. Unnerved in the first half by the loss of Fuhrmeister, they let the winners score and their great fourth quarter onslaught was not good enough to win.

They will meet West Branch Friday with a chance to regain the lead if Mt. Vernon loses to Monticello. The Hoover-town boys are tough, having won two and lost one in the league. It should be a tough battle all the way.

City High Rests

City high will get a chance to rest its cleat ridden bruises and to mold the new men into a more formidable machine. Its next game will be with Washington high of Cedar Rapids Nov. 11 at Shradler field.

Injuries and disciplinary measures have hurt the Red and White this year and as a result they have lost all but two games.

After College 'WHAT?'

Engineering?
Harry D. Watts, V. P. of James Stewart & Co., Inc., builders of the Grand Central Terminal in New York City, says: "World progress depends upon engineering. No wonder eager college men look toward this profession. But to succeed you must have a technical background, ability to take the knocks, and alertness to take advantage of the breaks."

"ABILITY to take the knocks." And a yet brains count above all. That's why in engineering, as in college, a pipe is the favorite smoke. A pipeful of good old Edgeworth Smoking Tobacco clears the brain for those intensive problems that confront the engineer... or the college man.
Of course most college men know Edgeworth.* They like its distinctive flavor that comes only from this blend of fine old burleys. Perhaps you'd like to try before you buy. Then just write to Latus & Bro. Co., 105 S. 22d St., Richmond, Va., and you'll get a free sample packet of Edgeworth.

HEART STRINGS

SYNOPSIS

Young and pretty Patricia Braithwait becomes engaged to wealthy, middle-aged Harvey Blaine to relieve her father's financial situation. She hopes in vain that handsome Jack Lawrence, whom she met once—and the only man she ever wanted to kiss her—will rescue her from Blaine. In despair, she turns to Jimmie Warren, her Aunt Pamela's husband. They become infatuated. Aunt Pamela blames herself for leading Pat to believe she no longer loved her husband. The fear of losing him makes Pamela realize how much she really cares. Finally, Jack arrives. Pat learns he is the son of wealthy Senator Lawrence, who was kidnapped a few years ago when he went to Mexico to investigate his father's property. Pat tells him he is too late as she loves Jimmie but Jack refuses to acknowledge defeat and a bitter rivalry develops between the two men. For days Jimmie avoids Pat. Unable to stand the strain, she determines to have an understanding with him and asks him to dance with her. Overcome with emotion, Pat faints in Jimmie's arms. He is conscious of everyone's attitude. When Pat comes to, Jimmie reproaches her for making fools of herself and him.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

"Please, Jimmie, I've got to talk with you."

"No," he said sharply.

"She lifted her head, blue eyes flashing. 'I will, or you'll carry me out.'"

"All right," he said grimly, and began moving toward the door. So absorbed had he been in his passion that he had not before realized that he and Pat were objects of gossip and wonder. Those secretively smiling eyes had revealed the truth to him. With a sense of shock it came to him that without doubt the whole colony was whispering. And if he left the pavilion with her in the midst of the first dance—it simply wouldn't do. And yet, he had heard the determination in Pat's voice. He knew she was quite capable of pretending to faint. What was Pat thinking? They had reached the door. "Pat," he began, "I simply can't—"

"Hello Pat," Jack's cheerful voice greeted her.

He had come in while they were dancing, and arrested by the sight of their faces, feeling sure they would make a break, hoped to distract attention from their exit by going out with them, if possible.

To his surprise Patricia returned his greeting with enthusiasm. "Hello Jack, I've been looking for you. Come on take me out in the air. It's heavenly hot in here. Thanks Jimmie, Jack will take me out."

Warren relinquished her with mingled relief and rage. She gave him a look of anger and triumph as if to say: "Well, there are other men who are glad to take me out."

Warren made his way back to their table to wait for Pam who was still dancing. From beneath lowered lids her somnolent eyes had taken in the scene at the pavilion door and she breathed a prayer of gratitude for the watchful tenderness of Jack Lawrence. He was always on hand at the right moment.

"What am I to do," she thought. The horrible pounding within her bosom that gave her no rest, and which she sometimes thought must soon wear her heart out by sheer overwork, was making her breathless, so that she talked with difficulty. She dreaded the impending scene when she must return to the waiting man at her table. She feared the watching eyes of the pavilion. How can she shame her soul!

But years had taught her to smile while the heart broke, to talk of gay, inconsequential things, every nerve in her body pulling to the strain of it.

Angry blood darkened Arthur's pale face. "My God! Mrs. Warren, how can you talk like that. Even if you don't care for him, you're a woman. Don't you care at all? Why don't you stop it? Everybody's talking."

Oddly, she was not angry at him. Rather, it relieved the strain she'd been putting on herself. "What can I do?" she said in a low voice. "Pack Pat off to her father and set the whole colony laughing at me for getting jealous of a flapper? Besides I couldn't do it. Her father left her amply provided with money. She has as much right here as I have."

"No, don't send her home," he said hastily. "Just tell them both where they get off. They know that in the end the whole thing is up to you. He can't divorce you just because he's lost his head over another woman. All you've got to do is to give him hell and tell both of 'em where they get off."

"She laughed without mirth. 'Pat's not used to being told where she gets off, as you put it. She'd simply tell me to go to the devil. And Jimmie can't be handled in that fashion.'"

"I wish to God we lived in the days when men kidnapped women and married them out of hand," he stormed.

"That night Pamela wrote Mr. Braithwait that she thought urgently he should come and get Pat. She didn't explain, but made it clear that he was needed at once."

On their way back to the hotel Jack suggested a picnic breakfast on the beach where they had first met. He bought a whole chicken, having the man joint it, fruit, rolls, a big thermos of coffee and hardboiled eggs. Hungry "as bears" by the time they reached their rendezvous, they proceeded at once to set the table on newspapers also brought on route. After breakfast they took off their shoes and waded into the ocean to wash their hands.

"I had a wire from Dadums last night," Patricia said when they sat on the sand to rest. "He's coming back—any day now. He has decided to come here for me instead of having me meet him in New York." That change of plan troubled her.

"Will you live in New York?" "I don't know. Dadums wants to take me to Paris to study art."

"You'll like that, won't you?" "I don't know. I did want to go terribly."

She looked into Jack's eyes, a hard steady light coming into her own, and said calmly, "This is the first time in my whole life that I ever dreaded to see my Dadums. He's the kindest, sweetest, dearest—"

"She broke off, her eyes holding him in unblinking regard.

"Then why—?" he began.

She flung her arm over her face and dropped into the sand, weeping bitterly. He sat staring down at her a moment, then reached out and drew her up into his arms. She did not resist him, but rested her head on his breast, sobbing and sobbing.

He was not surprised by her break. He had seen how near she was to it for days. And his heart throbbed in painful joy that she had turned to him in her agony of confusion and despair.

He held her close, making no effort to soothe her, nor questioning. When she was ready she would have it all out. Now, tears were best. Just tears. He a very, bitter little-girl tears.

He steeled himself to meet what he knew was to be the hardest moment he could ever have. After a time she began talking, every nerve in her body pulling to the strain of it.

"My Dadums taught me never to look for ugly things that might fasten themselves onto me if I even so much as looked at them. At school I never talked with the other girls about—nasty things—I always got out. I wouldn't read nasty books like—some of them did—I didn't want nasty things to fasten onto me—"

"Then Aunt Pam told me all about what a nasty world it is. People getting married and not loving each other any more. Even her and Jimmie. And I'd always thought they were both so beautiful. And about girls marrying nasty old men for money. And it was the only way nice girls could get money if they were poor—and everybody thought it was a nice way to get money. She told me Dadums had kept things from me. Made me think he'd deceived me about everything and had brought me to Palm Beach to get money for us that way. Oh, I was just all to pieces, and I've been all to pieces ever since. She didn't mean it, I know. She meant to help me. But, think of being married to that old vermin of a man. Old and ugly and beastly. She told me to take him—to keep my Dadums from starving. You see why I fell in love with Jimmie, don't you?" she began weeping anew.

"Yes, dear, I see all too clearly." His throat was so dry that the words rasped harshly.

"I know Aunt Pam doesn't care. She's as good as told me she was so bored with him she half wanted to die. It isn't her that worries me. It's Dadums. He's so—well, you know what I told you about our plantation—and how Aunt Pam's father got a man who would have paid fabulous money for it—and what he did—"

"Yes, dear."

"Don't think I tell everybody about that," she went on, "I don't. But—you didn't get to meet him and—I'm so proud of him. So vain of him. I wanted you to know what kind of a father I have. And it seems to me that one thing tells everything about him."

"It does."

"I could tell you a thousand things. All through our lives."

"That one is enough."

"Well—I'm—so afraid he'll be upset about my loving Jimmie. Oh, I do love him. Jack, I love him so much that it's eating me up in here." She drew herself out of his arms and beat her breast with a small clenched fist. "I didn't want to love him. Or any other man. But—"

She stopped, her throat working, and with a stony face finished, "but my Dadums."

It seemed to Jack that every drop of his blood was pounding against the walls of his skull. The agony ached. He had known all along, of course, but to have her put it into words—to witness her suffering was, he felt, more than man should be called on to endure. His years of slavery, monotony, 23rd, filth, starvation with every bone and muscle crying out in agony, the loss even of hope as time went on, had been a child's troubles as compared with this.

There must be a way, though, he reflected grimly. If I could get him in a card game, and let him catch me cheating—he would blurt it out—it would form an obvious reason for my killing him.

Intramural Games for Women Start Off With Three Victories

Kappa Kappa Gamma, Gamma Theta Phi, and the Independents were yesterday's victors in the intramural volleyball games being played under the supervision of the women's physical education department.

The Kappas defeated Alpha Chi Omega, 28-14; Delta Delta Delta was defeated by Gamma Theta Phi, 23-10; and the Independents conquered Currier hall's team, 44-11.

Today's games, to be played at 5 o'clock this afternoon, are Phi Omega Pi vs. Kappa Kappa Gamma, and Currier hall vs. Gamma Theta Phi.

Local Bus Service Suffers Second Cut Within Two Weeks

The second drastic cut in local bus service in the last two weeks becomes effective this morning with the discontinuance of one of the three daily round trips of the Interstate Transit lines between Des Moines and Chicago.

The eastbound bus which formerly left Iowa City for Chicago at 11:50 a.m. and the westbound bus, due through here at 1:50 a.m. will no longer operate, according to R. J. McComas, local ticket agent for the company.

About a week ago all bus service between Iowa City and Muscatine was discontinued by the Cranfield lines.

Northwestern Dean Gives Play Recital for Large Audience

An audience of several hundred heard a recital of "Death Takes a Holiday" given by Dean Ralph Denes of the Northwestern university school of speech, in the main lounge of Iowa Union Sunday afternoon. The reading was the first of a series sponsored by the speech department, with Eugene Bahn, instructor in dramatic art, in charge.

Dean Dennis interpreted the characters in the play, which is a translation of the original Italian play by Alberto Cassella, in which Death appears upon the earth as a mortal for three days. During that time he falls in love with a girl, and when the three days are over, she chooses to go with Death.

The aim of this series, according to Mr. Bahn, is to present at least four nationally known interpreters of literature. All of the readings will be open to the public.

Mechanical Engineers Don Overalls to Perform Test

Seniors Experiment to Determine Boiler Efficiency

Garbed in overalls, senior mechanical engineering students yesterday got a taste of practical experience as they performed a 12 hour test of a steam boiler at the university heating plant. The test was conducted under rules prescribed by the American Society of Mechanical Engineers for commercial boiler testing.

The boiler, installed last summer, is a 605 horsepower type, with water walls and an underfeed stoker. It is the first unit installed in the state employing that type of stoker for Iowa coal.

The unit was tested when installed last June and the present experiment was to determine its efficiency and heat balance as compared with that at the time of installation.

Coal Tested, Weighed

The coal used is tested for its heating value and weighed before being fed into the boiler. Water entering, and steam leaving the boiler are likewise measured. The efficiency of the boiler is the amount of heat in the steam generated as compared to the amount of heat in the coal fired.

The experiment is being performed as class work by students in the power laboratory class under the supervision of Prof. George J. Keller, Theodore R. Thoren, and Leonard P. Meade, all of the mechanical engineering department.

The first shift went on duty at 1:30 p.m. yesterday, with the shifts being changed every four hours until completion of the test at 1:30 this morning.

Wickham Foreman

Senior engineers engaged in the experiment are: first shift—Harold E. Wickham of Iowa City, foreman; Curtis M. Shew of Centerville, Edward A. Cerny of Cedar Rapids, Gordon H. Houck of Carbon, George W. Kennedy of Montrose, and Robert J. Benda of Reinbeck.

Second shift—Walter L. Schump

26 Candidates Visit C. of C.'s at Luncheon

McMillan Gives Talk About Football, Politics

Introductions were in order yesterday noon as 26 candidates for local, county, and state offices assembled as guests of the Chamber of Commerce at luncheon in the American Legion Community building.

The party, open to all district candidates, was held in accordance with a custom established several years ago. Kenneth M. Dunlop as county Republican chairman introduced the candidates for that party. Dr. W. L. Bywater officiated in the same capacity for the Democrats.

G.O.P. Candidates

Candidates present were: Republicans: Thomas E. Martin, candidate for railroad commissioner; Dr. Frederick C. Schadt, candidate for state senator; A. C. Harmon, candidate for state representative; Dr. George Maresh, candidate for county coroner; R. J. Jones, candidate for county recorder; Will E. Smith, county treasurer; R. M. Work and J. A. Colony, candidates for the 1933 term on the county board of supervisors; Will Meardon, candidate for the 1934 term on the county board of supervisors; and B. F. Carter and Elias J. Hughes, candidates for justices of the peace.

Democrat Candidates

Democrats: Edward L. O'Connor, candidate for attorney general; Paul Schmidt, candidate for state senator; LeRoy Mercer, candidate for state representative; James P. Gaffney, candidate for judge of the district court; F. E. Olsen, candidate for office of county attorney; Edward Sulek, candidate for county auditor; Walter J. Barrow, candidate for county clerk; Frank Bush, candidate for county coroner; Charles Berry, candidate for county treasurer; C. W. Lacina and George Hanshaw, candidates for the 1933 term on the county board of supervisors; Frank J. Krall, candidate for the 1934 term on the county board of supervisors; W. R. Bonham and Cora L. Unash, candidates for justices of the peace, and John W. Suetzel, candidate for constable.

McMillan Talks

Thomas McMillan, Democratic representative from South Carolina, spoke briefly at the close of the meeting. Stressing the fact that, for the time at least, he wished to speak on other topics besides those of politics, he told of seeing the Iowa-George Washington football game in Washington, D. C. last Friday night.

He commended the fighting spirit and the sportsmanlike qualities of the Hawkeyes. He told too of this year's baseball game between the Democratic and Republican members of congress. The Democratic defeat was attributed to the fact that after pitching hitless ball for six innings, the Demo pitcher became over-heated, and consequently was unable to withstand the Republican onslaught. Red flannel underwear was blamed for the overheating.

Wheat Price Rallies After Early Slump

CHICAGO, Oct. 31 (AP)—Overwhelmed by a stop loss selling rush in a market swept empty of buyers, wheat and rye today outdid the world's history of low prices.

Before the day ended, however, the new record breaking of values, the third within four days, had been practically conquered by rallies. A substantial decrease of almost 2,000,000 bushels shown in the United States visible supply served as a streak of daylight for believers in better prices ahead.

Wheat closed nervous at precisely the same as Saturday's finish to 3-8 of a cent decline, after having fallen as low today as 43 1-8 cents for December contracts with every future delivery pulled down to 50 cents or less, slashing in twain the old time standard of a dollar a bushel. Corn closed at a shade decline to 5-8 advance, oats unchanged to 1-8 higher, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 2 cents.

Tumbling of breadstuff prices came fast as soon as business began. The onset of selling quickly subsided, and during the rest of the day the course of the market was regularly upgrade, climbing at the last 1-4 cent higher than Saturday's close but falling back somewhat again at the final gong.

Corn and oats were steadied by possibilities of action to bring about emergency rail rates for the export of corn.

Provisions were eased a little by cheapness of corn and other feeds. Closing indemics: Wheat—December 43 1-4—3-8, 44 1-2—5-8; May 48 5-8—3-4, 49 7-8—5-0; July 49 3-4.

Meier Ends Art Research in California

Prof. Norman C. Meier of the psychology department has just returned from a two week trip to the Pacific coast made in the interest of art research. He also delivered lectures on the psychology of art at Stanford university, the University of Southern California, Mills college, and the University of Denver.

While in California, Professor Meier was a guest of the marine painter, William Ritchel, in his Carmel Highlands studio. Meier also visited with Paul Daugherty, Armin Hauser, and John Hubbard Rich, all western artists. Professor Meier also visited the Laguna Beach artists colony.

Many of the western artists, according to Professor Meier, expressed admiration and interest in the work done by Grant Wood of Cedar Rapids in his paintings of Iowa scenes.

Professor Meier said that because of the depression he found many commonplace themes being eliminated by artists. It is his belief that artists will soon strike a medium between the conservative and the radical in art.

Polis and Polls

Political opinion is the only commodity we have found in the last few days which is perfectly free. One can get it from anyone, and in generous measure. Even the high school students are fervent in their convictions and are willing to express them freely. University high students held a straw vote in their assembly Friday and another is being planned at Iowa City high.

Partnership

Clerk of Court Walter J. Barrow issued a marriage license yesterday to E. Marshall Thomas of Marshalltown and Marjorie I. Bolon of Iowa City.

The Carnivals

The last week of the campaign race sees both parties staging an exhilarating race for honors as the best carnival managers. Last night the Republicans put on a show for the local citizens with a torch light parade, speeches, and a band. Today the Democrats swing through the county by auto caravan, preceded by a band and boomed on their way by speeches and applause.

The Box Offices

Democratic and Republican headquarters were busy yesterday making ready for the final big shows. The Republican office on the third floor of the Johnson County Savings bank building was crowded with workers nailing pictures of the candidates to sticks for the parade and talking about this and that. The Democratic office was equally rushed preparing for the caravan for this morning.

The Bills

The Johnson county board of supervisors met yesterday to consider the routine variety of bills.

Those Geese

A flock of wild geese must have lost its sense of direction Sunday night. Hundreds of them circled the city from midnight until after dawn yesterday morning. And accounts from Burlington, Davenport, and Cedar Rapids indicate that the local flock was not the only one that went haywire.

He will be a luncheon guest at the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity house tomorrow noon, and a dinner guest at the Theta Xi house tomorrow evening.

1932 ISSUES Relief, Reconstruction Heads Problems

be said with equal frankness that the Democratic program, involving no specific proposals on this point, is so indefinite as to be meaningless.

Party Viewpoints Differ

The two parties appear to have rather different viewpoints as to what measures should be utilized to stabilize employment. President Hoover has made no direct statement regarding the use of unemployment insurance for this purpose and appears to believe that the best way to improve employment conditions is to assist industries to weather the period of panic and to allow them, as confidence returns, to expand production and employment in response to the resulting spontaneous increase in the demand for products. Meantime, he has emphasized the desirability of a rugged individualism on the part of workers and of localities that will provide, so far as possible, relief funds from private charities. For the present winter, the bi-partisan Reconstruction Finance corporation has been empowered to loan federal funds to localities and states to supplement private and local resources in this function.

The Democratic candidate, on the other hand, has indicated his approval of unemployment insurance, both as a preventive of unemployment and as a means of organizing and systematizing relief. He is careful to distinguish his proposal from a dole, favoring, as do a larger share of American economists and numerous industrial leaders, a system in which insurance funds are provided by workers and their employers. By stabilizing workers' incomes, assuring them of unemployment benefits when wages cease, it is believed that the demand for the products of industry would be stabilized and fluctuation of the business cycle would be appreciably reduced, with an accompanying reduction in cyclical unemployment.

Tariffs Significant to Workers

Workers have long been told that tariffs were of great significance to them. Republican arguments insist that it is a means of protecting workers against the lower wage scales of foreign labor. Democrats insist that workers lose more than they gain, because high tariffs raise the cost of living more than they raise the general level of wages. In general, economists, since the time of the classical writers, have agreed with the latter position, holding however, that adjustments downward must, of course, be slow and spread over a considerable period.

In the present immediate situation, however, there are extenuating circumstances. Unemployment is a serious problem in all important nations excepting Russia. Under such circumstances, wages have fallen and nations have allowed their currencies to depreciate so that a sudden revision of our tariffs downward might have serious effects upon American industry. On the other hand, it is probable that no long forward step toward general international recovery can be taken until tariffs of all nations are revised downward. Republicans appear to believe that the time for such a beginning is not in sight. Democrats, in suggesting the desirability of international agreements to that end, have taken the opposite position.

Bonus Effects Uncertain

The question of the bonus is a complicated one. No one can be sure what the effects of its immediate payment might be. It would provide a temporarily increased demand for products and would unquestionably stimulate business momentarily. It might force the nation off the gold standard, and the possible results of this change are numerous. American currency would tend to depreciate, and domestic prices would, under these circumstances, probably rise somewhat, thus stimulating business. Similarly, with a depreciated dollar, American products would be placed in a more favorable position in foreign trade, and we might experience a considerable increase in the demand for our goods from that source. Both of these factors would tend to increase employment and wages. The change would advantage debtors, excepting those who were bound to pay in gold, and disadvantage creditors. Workers would probably benefit from this condition, unless it became sufficiently serious to force numerous corporations with large bonded debts into bankruptcy. Each of these effects, and several others, are possible. None is absolutely certain. Historically, however, abandonment of the gold standard has, with few exceptions, proved disastrous. The question as to whether or not it would be of benefit to workers and to the majority of American citizens to leave the gold standard is one which no one can answer with certainty.

It is for this reason that the question of the bonus payment appears to be a complicated one. There is, however, no great issue here, for there is no striking difference between the positions taken by the two candidates on this subject. The Republican candidate has indicated that he is opposed to immediate payment. The Democratic candidate has said that it is clearly impossible under present circumstances.

United States Better Off Than Most European Nations Believes Steindler; Future of Germany, Austria Doubtful

The financial and economic landslide which engulfed the United States following the World war is only a taste of the bitter fruit which the people of many European nations were made to relish, is the opinion of Dr. Arthur Steindler, head of orthopedic surgery at Children's hospital. Dr. Steindler attended the German Orthopedic congress at Mannheim, Germany, as a United States delegate in September.

In his three month's visit abroad Dr. Steindler found the political and economic organization of Germany and Austria shattered, and the future of these countries doubtful in the hearts of their citizens. "This is especially true of Germany, where the extremist parties are constantly swelling, and the moderate liberal parties of the middle classes have almost completely disappeared," said Dr. Steindler.

No one has yet brought an adequate solution to the problem confronting these nations. Dr. Steindler reports a marked change in the cities, which have lost much of their glamor and have become shabby. Few people have sufficient wealth to enable them to indulge in any kind of entertainment, and theaters are not common as they once were. Beggars are invading the streets of Vienna, he said.

"Six per cent of the Austrian population is unemployed," relates Dr. Steindler. "This percentage cannot be fairly contrasted with the percentage of American unemploy-

Mr. Crane resided in Iowa City for a number of years at 218 N. Lucas street.
