Committee Frowns on Farm Plan

Senate Group, Wallace Disagree on Bill; Causes Delay

WASHINGTON, March 25 (AP)—The administration farm bill that rode so smoothly and speedily through the house skidded into a rut in the senate agriculture committee today and determined efforts by the youthful and dynamic Secretary Wallace to budge it loose drew little encouragement from committee members.

Assembly to Try Reducing Millage Levy

Herring Confident of 20 Per Cent Cut in State Taxes

DES MOINES, March 25 (AP)—A practically new measure providing for a 20 per cent reduction in the 1933-34 millage levies below the 1930 levels probably will be ready for legislative consideration early next week.

Ready Next Week

At the same time Gov. Clyde L. Herring said he expected the bill would be ready for consideration by the assembly next week, expressed confidence that it would pass and that it would be "one more step in tax reduction."

"This is a bill that definitely compels reduction in taxes," the governor said. "Through long hearings and constant work it has been put in shape to be entitled to the approval of this legislature and of the taxpayers."

In the revised bill the reductions will be graduated in such a way as to avoid crippling any taxing district, proponents believe, while requiring each district to take its share of the total reduction of about $8,000,000 from the 1933 tax collections.

Appeal to Budget Director: Provisions also will be made for appeal to the budget director by taxing districts and arrangements will be made to prevent the curbing of police and fire protection in cities and towns by similar appeal steps, members of the conference committee said.

The conference committee during the week neared an accord on the differences between the senate and house as to the extent of the mandatory cut to be required. In passing the original bill the senate provided for a 25 per cent slash while the house held out for a reduction of only 15 per cent.

The Beatty-Bennett bill is the major remains bill of the tax reduction program, the two houses having virtually cleared their slates of the week.

Donald Lucky Burns Hands Attempting to Rescue Cars in Fire

Donald D. Lucky, 331 S. Johnson street, suffered painful burns on his hands at 5 p.m. yesterday when the interior of Willenbrook Motor company, 301 S. Clinton street, caught fire from an explosion of an unknown origin.

Lucky was attempting to get some of the cars out of the flames. The tops of three cars, one of them a new one, were burned off and the paint on them damaged. Firemen extinguished the flames before they made any headway.

The Daily Iowan will be open all night tomorrow to service Iowa City voters who want to get all the latest city election returns.

He Came to Find a Region Engulfed in Revolution, Anarchy; He Stayed to Write of a People Who Kept Faith

By TOM YOSELOFF: Anthony Veiller, movie scenarist, came to Iowa City to write of revolution and anarchy, of farmers revolting against a government in which they no longer believed—and he stayed to write of a people who have kept faith in a time of great stress.

So certain was he that he would find the revolution which he expected that he made preparations for a series of articles on this dire situation. But what he found was far different from what he expected.

"I came here," he said, "confident that I would find the farmer ready to rise in arms in his attempt to throw off the things that were causing his troubles. But here there is none of the revolutionary feeling that one finds in the east."

For a while he was in a dilemma. For, though revolution means drama, emotion, conflict, peace and faith have no elements of these human emotions to the new comer.

So Mr. Veiller began to look around. He visited homes and farms; he went to social functions and he talked to farmers who had risen from generations of men who had tilled the soil. And he found new dramatic elements in Iowa life.

"I just came back from Shueyville," he said one day. "I talked to Clay Bowersox—and there's something in what he said."

Mr. Veiller found out what that "something" is; behind the commonplace lives of Iowa farmers, he saw apocalyptic events—generations of men, to whom the soil means life,

Tom Mooney Granted New Chance to Prove Innocence in Preparedness Day Bombing

BILLINGS WISHES Luck to Mooney: FOLSOM PRISON, Cal., March 25 (AP)—Warren K. Billings, serving a life sentence here on conviction of participating with Thomas Mooney in the 1916 preparedness day bombing in San Francisco, listened to the news that Mooney had been granted a new trial today with considerable interest and guarded comment.

"Naturally, I am wishing Mooney the best of luck," Billings said. "The outcome of his new trial may have considerable bearing on my fate. I am not prepared, however, to express any opinions. I prefer to reserve comment until after his case has been heard."

May Sell Beer: FT. LEAVENWORTH, Kans. (AP)—Permission for the sale of 3.2 per cent beer at Ft. Leavenworth was received today from Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood of Ft. Omaha, commander of the 7th army corps area.

Plans Quiet Week End: NEW YORK (AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt started late today for her home at Hyde Park, N. Y., where she plans to spend the week end quietly.

Right to Trial: Superior Judge Louis H. Ward, in granting a motion of defense attorneys, held there could be no abridgment of the right of a defendant to a jury trial for each indictment against him.

Defense attorneys demanded the additional trial on the theory that an acquittal now would strengthen Mooney's fight for a pardon. He has said repeatedly he would accept nothing less than a full pardon, declaring he is innocent and the victim of a "capitalistic frameup."

Swift Decision: Judge Ward's swift decision was followed by the equally quick withdrawal of District Attorney Brady from prosecution of the case and the designation by the court of the state attorney general's office as prosecutor.

Mooney, turning from his work in San Quentin prison to hear the news, said: "I am very happy. I felt there would be a revision on the part of the people against the injustice in my case and that they would insist that some way be found to right the wrong."

"This is the nearest expedient under the law. "I am quite confident there is no (Turn to page 7)

Fourteen Die in California Plane Crash

Three Homes Catch Fire Following Explosion

OAKLAND, Cal. March 25 (AP)—Fourteen persons were killed and one was injured critically when a transport plane crashed into a private residence between San Leandro and Hayward tonight, wiping out the entire family occupying it.

The first available death list: Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Avisa, occupants of the house. Michael, 4, son. Anna, 10, daughter. Joseph, Jr., 11, son. Juanita, infant daughter. Tony Serrano, 18, same address. Joe Serrano, 20, his brother. George Jeannot, 18, a neighbor.

Flora Fontes, 19, a neighbor. Tony Marino, 23, a neighbor. Jack Evans, Alameda, pilot of the plane.

Herman Brown and Lavelle Miller, both of Hollywood, passengers. In addition, Michael Recca of Vacaville was taken to a hospital in what doctors said was a dying condition.

The plane was a single motor ship of the type used by Varney Speed lines. The Varney plane due from Los Angeles at 8:15 p.m., piloted by a flyer named Evans, had not arrived at the airport at 9:40 p.m.

Reports to the Varney offices in San Francisco said the plane carried a pilot and two passengers. The plane tore a jagged hole in the side of the house, and the resultant explosion scattered flame like the bursting of a giant bomb.

Shingles and timbers hurtled hundreds of yards. Despite the rain, the whole neighborhood was aghast; the screams of the trapped victims were heard.

Adjoining houses caught fire. All available fire apparatus rushed to the scene, followed by ambulances and police cars.

The one living victim, Recca, crawled out of the flaming Avisa home and collapsed. Hospital surgeons said he would die.

An hour after the crash it had not been definitely established how many were killed, but Joseph Brandon, a neighbor, declared he had searched the wreckage and found nine bodies. Available reports agreed, however, that a pilot and two passengers had perished.

The Avisa home and two adjoining residences burned to the ground. The spread of the fire, witnesses said, was extraordinarily rapid. Firemen were able to extinguish only the embers of the houses. Authorities at once began a systematic investigation.

Named General Manager: FT. DODGE (AP)—Lloyd White, general superintendent of the Ft. Dodge Gas and Electric company, has been named general manager of the LaPorte Gas and Electric company of LaPorte, Ind. It was announced today. He formerly was connected with the People's Gas and Electric company at Mason City.

Chest Funds Gain Strength: The money still rolls in for the Community Chest! James L. Records, president of the board of trustees, yesterday reported receipt of three contributions.

One was a $1 bill, pinned to a coupon which appeared in The Daily Iowan a month ago. It was left at the bank for the chest fund. The donor had apparently saved the coupon for several weeks until he had enough money to contribute.

Another gift, a $5 bill, came from St. Paul, Minn., in an anonymous letter. The third contribution, Mr. Records said, came from an Iowa City merchant who had already paid a generous subscription in full. It was a check for $15. Questioned, he said, "I've been doing a little investigating of my own among the needy. You can use that extra money all right."

Nu Sigma Nu Takes Bridge Championship of University

Defeats Alpha Sigs in Closing Game of 6-Week Play

Nu Sigma Nu is Iowa's 1933 all-university bridge champion. This team, winner of seven out of eight matches in its league, won three straight victories in the inter-league play, then yesterday defeated Alpha Sigma Phi 2,525 to 2,256 in the climaxing game of six weeks of tournament play at Iowa Union.

Alpha Sigma Phi, tied for the lead with Nu Sigma Nu before the game was runner-up for the championship. A loving cup, symbolic of the championship, was presented to the victors after the deciding match yesterday afternoon.

Players making up Nu Sigma Nu's championship team were as follows: Guy McFarland, M4 of Ames; Paul Woodruff, M4 of Chautauque, Minn.; Lawrence Halpin, M4 of Cedar Rapids; and Leslie O'Toole, M2 of Eagle Grove.

Alpha Sigma Phi, runner-up to Nu Sigma Nu, was represented by: Charles Rossiter, C4 of Riverside, Ill.; Blythe Conn, L3 of Burlington; Charles Scholz, L3 of Alta Vista; and Jack Duval, A3 of Davenport.

The tournament which ended yesterday was the first at Iowa to be scored on the "matches won and lost" basis, a plan adopted by Union Board to prevent the "padding" of scores which marked the tournaments of other years.

The members of Union Board who were in charge of the tournament are as follows: Martha Fulmer, A4 of Dubuque; Robert Johnson, M2 of Alden; Kermit Morgan, A2 of Henderson; Evelyn Benda, J3 of Iowa City; Ted MacDougall, E3 of Conesville; Elmer Norgaard, P3 of Harlan; Frederick Beck, L1 of Mason City.

Child Conservation Club to Give Last of Bridge Parties

A Kensington and a bridge party, both to be held Thursday afternoon, will complete a series of three benefit parties given under the auspices of the Child Conservation club. The proceeds will be used in social service work in aiding needy families.

The Kensington will be held at 2:30 p.m. at the home of Mrs. H. R. Jenkinson, 510 Oakland avenue. Mrs. L. C. Burdick is in charge of arrangements.

Bridge will be played at the home of Mrs. W. J. Rodgers, 1022 Newton road. Mrs. E. L. Bright is chairman of the committee in charge.

The series began with a party of 16 tables of auction and contract bridge held Friday at the home of Mrs. Herman Smith, 1412 E. Court street. Prize winners were Mrs. Henry Matill, Mrs. J. C. Kessler, Mrs. T. Dell Kelley, Mrs. H. L. Urban and Mrs. George Marech. Mrs. Harry Hines and Mrs. Bradley Davis were co-chairmen of the committee in charge.

Mrs. Clay Burkhardt is general chairman in charge of the whole series.

other tax reduction bills to effect an estimated annual saving of $10,000, 000. Salary reduction bills affecting state, county and city officers are expected to be reported out by the senate sitting committee next week, however.

With legislative action virtually completed on the measure for calling of a constitutional convention on prohibition repeal, the interest which this issue has held has shifted to the possibility of legalizing the manufacture and sale of beer in Iowa in the near future.

Beer Bill

There is considerable sentiment in the house for bringing up the Ditto beer bill next week but it first probably will be rewritten to allow for various changes which have been suggested. In the senate sentiment is divided as to the advisability of considering the Cooney bill, a companion measure, or allowing it to go over until the special session in August.

The principal changes proposed for the Ditto-Cooney bills is the provision of a state tax of $1.00 or $1.25 a barrel instead of a municipal licensing fee. Limitation of sale of beer to hotels, clubs and restaurants of not less than 25 chairs, and to sale by grocery stores in not less than case lots also is advocated, it is understood.

Test of Strength

After having been deferred during the last week a test of strength on Committee: Margaret Wallen, Miss Swisher, Mrs. Edward Weber.

April 9, 6 p.m. Business dinner, informal ballot for club officers. Committee: Mrs. Cameron, Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Biggs.

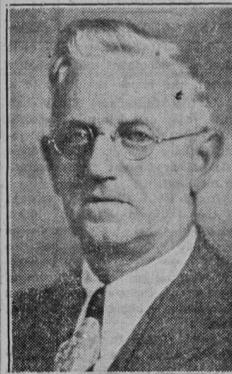

Contract bridge lessons will be continued on Saturday evenings, April 1, 22, and 29.

Alpha Delta Pi Meets Tomorrow

Alumni and active members of Alpha Delta Pi, social sorority, will hold a joint meeting at the chapter house tomorrow at 7 p.m. The meeting will be preceded by dinner at which the actives will entertain members of the alumni.

Naomi Thorson, A2 of Akron, president of the chapter, will preside at the meeting.

J. P. MEMLER

Candidate for Alderman Fourth Ward

I am a heavy taxpayer and I am asking your support at the polls March 27. I have been in business almost 40 years.

I was born and raised on a farm southwest of Iowa City and have lived in Johnson county all my life. I conducted a general merchandise business at Sharon Center for 13 years. In the spring of 1909 I came to Iowa City and entered the grocery business on Rochester avenue, continuing there for six years. I sold my business and worked for Jones & McLachlan Grocery Co., for one year. I re-entered the grocery business again with Everett Means and formed the partnership known as Memler & Means Grocery at 212 South Dubuque street. I sold my interest in the grocery business at the end of six years, re-entering the grocery business on Rochester avenue two years later. Six years later I sold my business to Ray Amrine, who now operates in my store building. I have been in the Dairy Business for about six years until just recently, when I placed the business with my two sons and retired.

Therefore, I am not tied to any particular business at the present time. My record shows that I have been successful. Economy is my watch word, as far as it is within my power. That has been my watch word in private business and it shall be in Public Affairs, if elected.

In regard to public utilities, I favor the full and complete reduction in rates that an investigation may justify with fairness to the public utility company, consumer and taxpayer of Iowa City. If elected, I shall try to curtail all unnecessary expense and eliminate unnecessary offices.

The franchise under which the Iowa City Light and Power Co. operates expires next year, and if elected, I shall endeavor to have a new franchise submitted to the people which will give the consumer the benefit of lower rates made possible by the lower costs in producing gas and electricity.

tax revision is expected on the Boardley triple-tax bill, on which discussion will be resumed on Monday in the senate. The house also has on its calendar the Cunningham one per cent general sales tax measure.

The general appropriations battle also probably will emerge into the open next week, with the house tackling the measure first. The house appropriations committee submitted its report this week while the senate group has not completed work.

Iowa Debaters Place Fourth in Wisconsin Invitation Tourney

University of Iowa debaters placed fourth in an intercollegiate debate tournament at Madison, Wis., last night, an affair sponsored by Delta Sigma Rho, honorary speech fraternity. Ahead of Iowa were the University of Wisconsin, Carleton college, and Lawrence college.

The university was represented by J. Harold Saks, L2 of Council Bluffs; C. LaVerne Kluss, C4 of Postville; John Hawkinston, A2 of Cedar Rapids; and John Harrison, A3 of Oakland.

Eleven schools representing six states debated on the question: "Resolved: that all banking functions should be regulated by the federal government with deposits guaranteed."

In a previous debate at Madison Friday night, Iowa's team suffered its only conference defeat of the year, at the hands of the University of Wisconsin. The debate closed Iowa's schedule of Western conference debates for this year.

Mabie Gives Cast List of "Hay Fever"

Next University Play Will Go on Stage April 19, 20

The cast of "Hay Fever," a farce comedy by Noel Coward, to be presented by University theater April 19 and 20, was announced yesterday by Prof. E. C. Mabie, director of University theater.

Ethel S. Hanley, U. of Muscatine, will play in the role of Judith Bliss, which Laura Hope Carewe brought to the American stage. Other characters in the play are: Beulah Sanders, A3 of Creston, as Sorel Bliss; Caspar Garrigues, Jr., U. of Iowa City, as Simon Bliss; Bertha L. Heetland, A3 of Sibley, as Clara.

John Price Hughes

John Price Hughes, A3 of Ottumwa, as David Bliss; George R. Guyan, A2 of Monticello, as Sandy Tyrell; Betty Behou, A3 of Burlington, as Myra Arundel; Lawrence McKune as Richard Westman; and Gabrielle Royal, A3 of West Liberty, as Jackie Coryton.

"Hay Fever" is written in a typical Noel Coward style; there is nothing that can be described as a plot—it is made up of a series of episodes.

The action centers around the Bliss family. Judith Bliss is an old actress who has seen her best days on the stage; her husband is a novelist; a son and daughter complete the group. The play is built around situations which arise when each member of the family brings a guest to the Bliss home.

Tomfoolery

From then on everything is in the Coward state of tomfoolery, with the guests and the family quarreling among themselves. As in "Private Lives," the play consists of farcical dialog.

Prof. Vance M. Morton, assistant director of University theater, will direct the production. Settings will be designed by Arnold Gillette of the theater staff.

MOONEY CASE HIGHLIGHTS

SAN FRANCISCO, March 25 (AP)—Six persons were killed, four fatally injured and 44 others wounded in the explosion of a bomb at Steuart and Market streets here during a preparedness day parade July 22, 1916.

Four days later Warren K. Billings, a machinist, was arrested, July 27, Thomas Mooney, a labor agitator, was arrested at Guerneville.

Oct. 7, 1916—Billings convicted of second degree murder and sentenced to life imprisonment.

Feb. 7, 1917—Mooney convicted of murder sentenced to hang.

March 27, 1918—President Wilson telegraphed Governor Stephens asking commutation of Mooney's sentence "in the interest of international affairs," after the president's mediation commission reported there was some doubt about his conviction.

Nov. 26, 1918—Governor Stephens commuted Mooney's sentence to life imprisonment after a second appeal from President Wilson.

Feb. 7, 1921—John McDonald, prosecution witness, signed an affidavit that his testimony, which located the convicted pair at the scene, had been false.

Sept. 24, 1926—Judge Franklin Griffin, who tried Mooney, expressed belief there had been a miscarriage of justice; recommended a pardon.

Dec. 18, 1927—Mooney asked Governor Young for a pardon.

July 2, 1930—Supreme court declined to recommend pardon for Billings and five days later pardon board recommended against a pardon for Mooney.

July 29, 1930—Mooney filed new pardon plea; Governor Young interviewed McDonald, the witness; state supreme court re-opened the case, sitting as advisory board and heard McDonald's testimony.

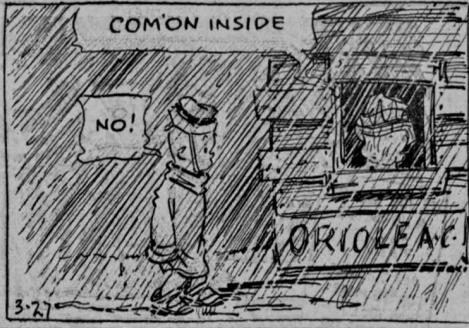

Dec. 1, 1930—State supreme court again denied Billings application.

Dec. 1, 1931—James J. Walker, mayor of New York; Aaron Sapiro, New York attorney; State Senator Hastings of New York; James R. Cromwell, New York broker; and Edward Nockels, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor, appeared before Governor Rolph in a plea for a pardon for Mooney.

April 21, 1932—Governor Rolph denied Mooney's application for a pardon.

March 25, 1933—Mooney trial on an old indictment still pending set for April 26.

The Good Earth, by Pearl S. Buck, John Day company, 1931, $2.50. Reviewed by FRANCIS W. PALMER, Sophomore.

China itself lives and breathes in this story of Wang Lung the farmer, who rises by dint of his own frugality and infinite patience from a state of lowly poverty to one of opulence and idleness.

Mrs. Buck, with rare insight and appreciation, has caught the essence of a vast, inarticulate peasantry and fixed it on paper with the calm, yet sympathetic aloofness of an artist spreading his colors on canvas.

In the interplay of character and environment in the life of Wang Lung, the earth is the dominant factor, pervading the story—not in the fatalistic manner of Hardy—but like a soothing influence.

Famine and flood, diversity and hardship come and are gone; the earth remains. That is the message the story holds.

But "The Good Earth" is more than a story of China; it embraces problems as universal as humanity itself—the acquisition of riches and the changes they work in the character of their possessor, the remorseless approach of age, the strife of the new and the old.

All these have been woven into the story in a simple, biblical language that enhances the oriental atmosphere.

COWARD'S COMPENSATION
 The Bulpington of Blup, by H. G. Wells. Macmillan, $2.50, 1933. Reviewed by TOM YOSELOFF.

After dabbling in history, science, and other subjects, H. G. Wells returns to the novel with "The Bulpington of Blup." And, as in his earlier novels, Mr. Wells does not disguise the fact that he is preaching about what he interprets as a great world wrong.

In a bitter mood he has turned the powerful force of his satire to the indictment of a generation—because that generation failed to fulfill the destiny which Mr. Wells set up for it.

This latest Wellesian outpouring is the study of a mind—the mind of Theodore Bulpington. Theodore is an ordinary boy who grew to manhood before the Great War, surrounded by sham and suppression and loneliness. But within his troubled mind, growing through childhood, adolescence, manhood, was a far greater figure—the Bulpington of Blup.

Children Present Two Plays in Studio Theater Yesterday

Brave and noble bandits and great green dragons ran rampant through the kingdom of Lang Mu yesterday afternoon as a Children's theater cast presented "The Stolen Prince" and "The Lost Princess," by Dan Totheroh before a capacity audience in Studio theater at Iowa Union.

To the Emperor Lang Mu, twins had been born, one a boy and one a girl. To save the little girl, Tee Wee (Betty Puckett), from a royal death under a royal decree, the know that his nephew's desire was to be thwarted; like himself was Peter, and circumstance would shape him to a destiny different from his dreams.

Shattered Convictions

Charleston, stirred to the depths by patriotic fervor, seized upon him; slowly at first, then with unrelenting swiftness, each of the dominant social forces plays upon him, seeking to uphold his own convictions against accession and war. Peter tries vainly to stem the tide.

In a beautifully wrought scene Heyward shows in striking clearness the remnants of Peter's individuality crashing against the bulwark of the elders in the assembly hall. Noble has been his act, yet it marks the turn in Peter Ashley's life. The strain too great, he is destined not to follow the individual path, but his fine thrusts of originality are coerced, not broken, to the demands of his friends.

Chosen Generation Fails

"The Bulpington of Blup" is more than the story of a man—it is the character study of a generation. Those blessed persons born near the close of Victoria's reign were destined by Mr. Wells to remake the world.

They were to throw off the sham of countless generations past; they were to fight a "war to end war," and create from wrecked nations and ruined lives an ideal state of peace and brotherhood.

But when the war was ended, Mr. Wells' phoenix failed to arise from the ashes of the insane conflagration. The chosen generation shrank from the complexities and proportions of the task which lay ahead.

Disillusioned Idealist

All the bitterness of a disappointed idealist finds its way into these pages. But Mr. Wells is undaunted; he concludes that the only solution is new revolution. His new youth says, "I believe the great revolution, the human revolution, has begun for good. Defeats won't matter. It's going on, you know. We're going on."

The book is a detailed study of the temperament of an age. It is Mr. Wells' outcry against the confusion and rationalization of a generation, and it is a noble one.

FRUSTRATED DESIRES
 Peter Ashley, by DuBose Heyward; Farrar and Rinehart, 1932. Reviewed by GEORGE SEIDL.

The Carolina Low Country—home of rich plantations, of Southern tradition with its hospitality, its horses, its pleasure-loving gentry, secession bound in the early sixties—is the setting of DuBose Heyward's tale of Peter Ashley.

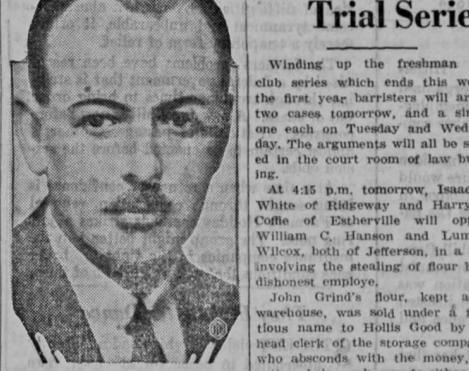

Pierre Chardon saw early in the life of Peter Ashley that there was no reproduction of the traditional Ashley line. Not that Peter lacked the inherent sense of hospitality, the love of fine horses, or the pleasures of the Low Country gentry, but in all this he showed a more quiet taste; he wished to live not so much of the field as of the pen.

Zealous Litterateur

Thoughtful, reserved, Peter was taken by Pierre, his uncle, into the big, quiet home in Charleston. Pierre sent the boy to Harvard and to Oxford and, at 23, Peter returned to his native Charleston—burning with the zeal to make his city the literary seat of America.

Freshmen to Wind Up Law Trial Series

Winding up the freshman law club series which ends this week, the first year barristers will argue two cases tomorrow, and a single one each on Tuesday and Wednesday. The arguments will all be started in the court room of law building.

At 4:15 p.m. tomorrow, Isaac O. White of Ridgeway and Harry E. Coffie of Estherville will oppose William C. Hanson and Lumund Wilcox, both of Jefferson, in a case involving the stealing of flour by a dishonest employee.

John Grind's flour, kept at a warehouse, was sold under a fictitious name to Hollis Good by the head clerk of the storage company, who absconds with the money, his actions being unknown to either party. Grind appeals for the flour with White and Coffie as his attorneys; Hanson and Wilcox represent Good.

Robert M. Flanagan of Chicago, Ill.; Ernest C. Cassell of Lenox, Lester E. Swanson of Wall Lake, and S. Howard Rudolph, Jr., of Atlantic, are the attorneys in the second trial tomorrow at 7:15. A stock certificate, used as security for a note by a broker who forges the owner's signature, is demanded by the owner.

The three seniors judging the afternoon trial are Sloan Hutchinson of Davenport, James B. Shiley of Iowa City, and Horace A. Smith of Davenport.

Herring Criticizes Republican Tactics in Special Election

DES MOINES, March 25 (AP)—Governor Herring today criticized Republican opponents to the election of D. Myron Tripp (D.) of Newton, state senator from Jasper county in a special election yesterday.

Herring said the election was a clear cut decision in a normally Republican county, in favor of his government reorganization plan, and his economy program.

Referring to an anonymous pamphlet circulated during the campaign, Herring said:

"This tirade, for which those who circulated it dared not take responsibility was filled with misstatements of facts."

Anclaux Funeral Held
 Brief funeral service for Ariene Ann Anclaux, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Anclaux of 909 Seventh avenue, was held at 2 p.m. yesterday in the McGovern funeral home. She died at the home of her parents at 8:15 p.m. Friday. Burial was in Oakland cemetery.

Harry A. Meier of Ottumwa, and William P. Ellwood of Cedar Rapids are the law seniors presiding at the evening case.

Sevier's Warning of Approaching Indians

John Sevier stands out as a prominent and picturesque figure in early Tennessee history. He was called "the greatest of Indian fighters" by his countrymen who were constantly being menaced by savage Indians. Sevier's bravery, and sterling character won for him the admiration of all the settlers throughout the territory.

There is a quiet charm about our services that comes from understanding and experience.

Labor Objects

WITH CRIES of "Fascism," "Hitlerism," and "Sovietism," organized labor attacked the president's unemployment relief bill before the senate labor committee Friday.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said the measure would provide for the "regimentation of labor in peace times" and would demoralize the nation's wage levels.

But while Mr. Greene called the bill Communist, Herbert Benjamin, a Communist leader, reported that his organization was "unqualifiedly opposed to it." He insisted instead upon unemployment insurance and payment of the bonus to veterans.

It is the objection of organized labor that is hardest to understand. It is apparently based on the assumption that men to work in the labor camps provided by the bill would be conscripted against their will and that the United States still has a "wage level" that could be demoralized.

Neither assumption is justified. Although the bill provides for the enlistment of men from among the ranks of the unemployed, it does not provide for an involuntary draft. To make it even more clear that enlistment would be voluntary, the president has consented to a revision of the bill.

As for wage levels, how can Mr. Green prate about maintaining the standard of wages when millions of men and women have no work whatever and hundreds of thousands more are working for slim fractions of their former salaries?

The question of whether the men are paid $1 or $3 a day merely is a question of choice as to whether many men are to be offered one loaf of bread or a few men three.

It seems that if Mr. Green and his federation are opposed to Fascism, Hitlerism, and Sovietism, it would be well to support any measure intended to relieve the suffering of those who, because of their suffering, have the greatest incentive to embrace such schemes.

The World's Grain

OFFICIAL reports of the federal agriculture department indicate that the prairie farmer is going to give himself a little help to farm relief by planting less grain this year.

Taking corn as the typical grain of the list which will be curtailed, the figures show that only in two cases will states increase or equal last year's acreage. Iowa will drop 6 per cent from its bumper crop of 1932, with Michigan and Kansas the only states expecting to increase or maintain last year's mark.

That Iowa 6 per cent seems small, but it really represents a drop in corn acreage of 704,000 acres. Of course the idea is for better returns on smaller production. With most of the Mississippi valley states acting in accord, the idea ought to work.

What will happen to wheat is another question. The world was once incapable of producing enough of it to meet the demand for bread. Now it is assuming the proportions of a diplomatic problem, because, like other grains, there is too much of it.

President Roosevelt has made the problem solution one of his administrative objectives. It may even carry to the world economic conference next summer.

The world is increasing steadily in its use of wheat, but even so, production is still out of balance. In 1931-2, the last year in which figures are available, the world supply was estimated at 4,516,000,000 bushels; the consumption at 3,847,000,000.

From the previous year, a total of 656,000,000 bushels was held over, but instead of falling off this vast supply grew to another carry over of 669,000,000 bushels. And the wheat growers came back with even larger production.

The complication of the World war, and the wheat shortage due to the breakdown of trade, with the attendant factor of Russia, the biggest potential wheat growing region of the world, caused much of the concentration on increased production.

Now Russia is coming back as a wheat producing power, producing a billion bushels yearly. At the same time, wheat has withdrawn more and more from international commerce as the smaller nations have found varieties which they could produce.

These things help to create the situation of want in the midst of plenty. News reports indicate that Russia will cut down grain production, as the midwestern farmers plan. It seems to be the only solution.

No law can make such a retrenchment mandatory. It is up to the men who are most concerned, the farmers, to realize its necessity.

Resist or Cooperate?

THE Farmers Holiday association is up in arms again, this time in Shelby county. Friday night 400 farmers took possession of the court house at Harlan and held the county attorney and clerk of court prisoners. They were seeking adjustment of difficulties between an insurance company and a Shelby county farmer, who was ordered evicted from his home following a foreclosure sale. They forced the county attorney to sign and the clerk to file a lease returning the property to the evicted farmer under foreclosure. They made district court Judge Ernest Miller a virtual prisoner in his home when he refused to dissolve the eviction order.

Just how impassioned and unreasoning the outbreak was is shown by the fact that the mob mistook Judge O. D. Wheeler for Judge Miller, halted the former outside the court house, and with difficulty persuaded to release him.

That the farmers have legitimate complaint few have questioned since their "holiday" first took form. But blind resort to force never can furnish a satisfactory solution of difficulties. Even when abuses become tyrannical and unbearable, it offers merely a temporary form of relief.

The farmers' problems have been recognized by a federal government that is striving through troubled times to bring order out of chaos. A new farm bill is now before congress. If it fails of passage, another is almost certain to be enacted before the session ends.

At a time when a return of confidence is being sought through cooperation, renewal of Farmers Holiday methods strikes a jarring note. The group might better join the insurance companies in the fight to bring back conditions that will profit both of them.

They Had Better Dance

STUDENT violence, which had apparently hibernated in peace for at least two years, broke out Friday at a sectarian college in southern Iowa; it broke out with mob gusto, and caused the president of the college trustees to stand as target for a shower of eggs and oranges, accompanied by "booming" and the shooting of a few blank cartridges.

The president had begun a chapel talk in which he declared "it is better to close the doors of the institution than to have the rules violated and abrogated," as the vegetarian artillery opened up.

The college, a Methodist school founded more than half a century ago, includes in its student rules an injunction against dancing. In violation of this, two large groups of students attended two dances held recently. As a result, six students were suspended, when they refused to pledge themselves against further dancing.

Student sentiment, perhaps fostered by memories of the trustees' refusal to permit dancing of two years ago, rose up and boiled over, as it will on nearly any campus.

If it had been pacified before getting to the "boiling" stage, there would have not been a probability of the bombardment occurring. Such an exhibition is not conducive to gaining morale among the students, and is poor advertising for the college.

There is no law which should be maintained simply because it represents an ideal on which a foundation was laid. If time shows that a situation cannot be best handled under a ruling, modification is about the only course open.

We are a peace-loving people, seldom paying pensions for more than three wars at a time. —Atlanta Constitution

Talk Sense, Says Miss Perkins

(From The Davenport Democrat)

Miss Frances Perkins, President Roosevelt's new secretary of labor, can take care of herself.

Thursday she appeared before the joint house and senate committees on labor, to answer questions as to President Roosevelt's labor program, including his plan for recruiting the unemployed into a conservation army to be employed in the forests and on flood relief and other projects during the period of national distress.

Shelter, food and a dollar a day is under attack by union labor leaders as inadequate compensation for these men, and some congressmen who are indignantly proud of their "record of 100 per cent endorsement by union labor," are critical of the program. Representative Connery of the house labor committee has refused to introduce the administration bill in the house.

When Mr. Connery voiced the complaint that $1 a day compensation for the men in the unemployment camps would tend to lower all wage scales, Miss Perkins replied sharply:

"That doesn't make sense." If all common labor were reduced to $1 a day we would have a complete national collapse. Such labor provides the bulk of the purchasing power of the country, and I believe industrialists realize it. They know they cannot sell their output to a dried up consumption market, and that is what they would have under a dollar day wage."

So, Miss Perkins offered a better argument for fair wages for common labor than Congressman Connery could think of. But she also holds that $1 a day and clothes and food is better than nothing, for thousands who are now unemployed, and that it is much better for the man and society for him to be paid for work than to be subsisting on charity.

Miss Perkins stood as she testified, much as Secretary Mills of the treasury used to, and evidently knows so much more about what she is talking about than many of the congressmen that she is not apt to have a difficult time before the committees.

(From Chevrans, by Leonard Nason)

"I know what we're gonna get out of this fight. Six feet o' French real estate and a pat with a shovel. This here army promised us food, lodging, a medical attendance free. We ain't had neither for a week. I've a mind to write to the papers about it. The worst thing I've found about war is that there ain't no noon hour. They works double shift all night, too."

Engineers Construct Model Dam to Study Mississippi Project

Construction of a model for a proposed dam on the Mississippi river just below the mouth of the Illinois river near Alton, Ill., has begun at the hydraulics laboratory.

The objective of the model which is being built under the supervision of United States engineers is to determine the best site for a navigation dam at the desired point on the river.

The model will be made of concrete and sand, the portion of the river where the dam is to be located being of sand, to determine the effect of water upon the river bed.

The model is being constructed in the large second-floor flume of the new hydraulics laboratory addition, the first time this flume has been used since its completion.

Legion Relief Pays Out $16 for Work During Week End

Wet weather made work at the airport impossible most of last week and, as a result, the American Legion Unemployment Relief association paid out only $16.25 to workers, the report of Charles Kennett, chairman, showed yesterday.

The only other disbursement was $12 for the secretary's salary. Receipts from the Community Chest were $200, leaving a balance at the end of the week of $390.87, which includes an opening fund of $219.12.

BEHIND THE SCENES - IN HOLLYWOOD -

STUDIO GOSSIP By HARRISON CARROLL FILM SCANDAL SCREEN COMMENT

HOLLYWOOD.—In Hollywood, Premier Mussolini's "plump women" edict created a ripple of interest, but film style designers are of the belief that smart women, even in Italy, will be loathe to give up their slenderness.

They're chuckling out at Paramount over W. C. Field's retort to Ben Turpin. The former Sennett star showed up the other day to watch them do a scene for "International House." He said: "I just came out to give the set the double O."

"Ben," remarked Fields, "did you ever see a single O?" HOLLYWOOD PARADE The disappearance of Gary Cooper's famous canary-yellow car is explained. It is in Glendale having its motor put in perfect condition to try for a stock car speed record on the bed of Muroc Dry Lake. Gary hopes to make 135 miles an hour or more in the test. He'll have a professional driver but may ride himself. Incidentally, this star has been going out with another foreign actress, Heather Angel. They were at the Club Ballyho. Report says that Josef Von Sternberg will land in New York any day now and come directly to Hollywood. Presumably, Marlene Dietrich will make no plans until after his arrival. The German star created a mild sensation when she arrived at the El Mirador hotel in Palm Springs with her daughter Marin and three bodyguards. She wore masculine attire for all occasions at the desert resort. Greta Nissen's job in "Malden Voyage" came as good news to the blonde star. Both she and Weldon Heyburn had their accounts in the Harriman bank. That is Joan Negulesco, Sidney Fox's one-time squeeze, who has been going to the Gotham with Miriam Hopkins. And Junior Laemmle will have to console himself without Eleanor Holm for a while. She did not return on the Warner "42nd Street" train. Maybe she'll do some swimming in the east this spring. In the meanwhile, she's visiting her parents in Brooklyn.

Dramatic, Forensic Contests Will Take Place This Week

Three 1932 Champions Return to Defend Titles

Competition in dramatics and forensics will be the order of the day when 77 high school, junior college, and community groups gather here Thursday, Friday, and Saturday for annual contests in play production, debate, oratory, extempore speaking, and artistic reading.

Awards in the play production contests will be sought by 34 casts in six competition groups. High schools will compete in classes A, B, and C, depending on enrollment and organization; community groups will be divided into classes A and B, for regularly organized theaters, and those producing plays only occasionally; junior colleges will compete in one group.

Three 1932 champions will return to defend their titles in this year's contests. They are Burlington junior college, Sigourney in high school class B, and Mason City Women's club in community class B.

Entries
The complete list of entries to date is as follows: Community groups: Congregational Church Drama League, Burlington; Community players, Cedar Rapids; St. Paul's players, Cedar Rapids; Cornberg Women's club; People's Little Theater, Davenport; Downtown Studio players, Des Moines; Dubuque Women's club; Iowa City Women's club.

Manchester Tourist club; Community theater, Marshalltown; Drama Shop players, Mason City; Mason City Women's club; Community theater, Ottumwa; Spencer Women's club; Community players, Traer; Johnson County Farm Bureau Dramatic club, Tiffin.

High schools: Alden, Corning, Immaculate Conception academy of Davenport, Marengo, Mason City, Nevada, Sigourney, Springville, Traer, Vinton, Wilton, Garvin, Monticello.

Junior colleges: Burlington, Graceland college of Lamoni, Marshalltown, Mason City, and Muscatine.

Art trophies will be presented to the winners in each of the six divisions.

A program arranged for players and directors attending the contest provides for discussion conferences at which settings, lighting, costumes, rehearsing, and other problems of play production will be considered by members of University theater staff.

Forensics
Forensic contests will be held for high school and junior college groups. In the junior college division, competition will be in debate, oratory, extempore speaking, and artistic reading. Among the 15 entries already received are Elkader junior college, last year's winner in debate and extempore speaking, and Waldorf college of Forest City, last year's winner in oratory.

The complete list of entries is as follows: Elkader, Marquette, Ft. Dodge, Tipton, Sheldon, Independence, Waukon, Muscatine, Mason City, Graceland college of Lamoni, Washington, Waldorf college of Forest City, Burlington, Esterville, and Centerville.

Medals will be awarded to individual winners in each of the four competition groups. Debaters will argue the subject of cancellation of war debts, and extempore entrants will talk on some phase of taxation reform in state and local governments.

Debaters from 23 high schools will compete for the state championship in a tournament of the Iowa High School Debating League. Groups will be divided into classes A and B, according to enrollment.

The question of reduction of the general property tax in state and local governments will be argued. Among the entrants will be East high of Sioux City, last year's winner; Roosevelt high of Des Moines, winner of class A at a Drake university tournament; and Cedar Falls and Mason City, winners in a State Teachers college tournament.

Six debaters, representing the winning schools in both classes, will receive a four-year scholarship to the University of Iowa; winning schools will receive a plaque to be awarded by the extension division.

Schools to be represented here are: Class A—East high of Sioux City, Ft. Dodge, Mason City, Ames, Decorah, Cedar Falls, Thomas Jefferson high of Council Bluffs, Creston, Roosevelt high of Des Moines, Oskaloosa, Ottumwa, Davenport, Fairfield, and Spencer.
Class B—Northwestern academy of Orange City, St. Mary's academy of Cherokee, Storm Lake, Lake Mills, Maxwell, Waukon, Maquoketa, Avoca, Mt. Airy, Onawa, Ripley, Colfax, Cincinnati, and Brighton.

Representatives Announced

Representatives of the southeast and southwest districts for the Iowa high school extempore speaking contest to be held at the university Friday, were announced yesterday by Helen Williams, director of correspondence study in the extension division.

John Hendrick of Abraham Lincoln high school, Council Bluffs, won the right to represent the southwest district in a contest held Friday evening at Perry. Everett Lyon of Newton high school was the winner of the southeast district contest held at Oskaloosa.

These two, together with Paul Hendrick of Waukon high school, the northeast district representative, and Addison Hickman of East high school, Sioux City, winner of the northwest district contest, will compete for state honors Friday afternoon in the house chamber of Old Capitol.

Stanford Man Will Speak on Modern Brazil

Prof. Percy Alvin Martin, professor of history at Stanford university, who will present an illustrated lecture on "Past and present day Brazil" tomorrow at 4:30 p.m. in the senate chamber of Old Capitol, is well qualified to speak on this subject, according to Prof. Winfred T. Root, head of the history department.

Professor Martin has specialized in South American and diplomatic history, and has been a lecturer on these subjects at the University of Washington and Johns Hopkins university. He is a member of the editorial board of the "Hispanic-American Historical Review," and he has written several books, based on his study of South American countries, two of the more important being "Republics of Latin America" and "The Latin America of the Wars."

The slides which Professor Martin uses to depict conditions in the past and present history of Brazil are very unusual, according to Professor Root, but he adds that the lecture is "in no sense a travelogue."

DAVID EDSTROM

Sculptor Realizes Dream in Old Capitol Art Display

A dream of nearly 40 years ago has become a reality for David Edstrom.

It was in 1894 that Edstrom, as a Swedish-American youth of 21, about to launch into a career of art, dreamed of a block of granite and a gilded dome on the east side of a river.

It was in the summer of 1931 that Edstrom, as a Los Angeles sculptor who had skillfully carved many granite blocks and was then looking for a "gilded dome" under which his masterpieces might be preserved for future generations, met Prof. Dale Yoder of the college of commerce, who told him of the University of Iowa.

It was in the fall of 1931 that Edstrom, as a guest of the University of Iowa, came to Iowa City, saw Old Capitol of gilded dome, on the east bank of Iowa river, and decided upon the university as a permanent repository for his works.

And now in 1933, Edstrom, as a world-prominent sculptor, has realized his dream with the displaying of the first pieces of his collection in the senate chamber and upstairs lobby of Old Capitol.

Von Sternberg
Included in the exhibit of eight portrait busts is one of Joseph Von Sternberg, motion picture director and master photographer, the bust with which Edstrom is shown in the picture above. The original of the photograph from which this picture was made was taken by Von Sternberg.

It is of this bust that the Los Angeles Times said: "The Edstrom bust seems to sum up Von Sternberg best of all... It is what fine sculpturing ought to be—at once abstract and completely human."

Lincoln
Another in the collection is that of Abraham Lincoln, who, in Edstrom's mind, ranks "above all other men in those qualities which make for true glory."
Others included are those of Ludwig Loostrom, director of the National Gallery in Stockholm, Sweden; Frederic C. Van Erden; and Ernest Thiel, director of another Stockholm gallery.

At other times during his career, Edstrom has made busts of the crown prince and princess of Sweden, and of Princess Patricia of Connaught, he has two pieces in the Scottish Rite temple at Washington, D. C. and a war relief monument in Montreal; and he executed the M. H. Whittier memorial statue in Exposition park, Los Angeles.

Ottumwa Monument
From Iowans' standpoint, his best known work is a soldiers' monument at Ottumwa, a city in which he spent part of his youth.

Born in 1873, in Sweden, Edstrom came with his parents to America when he was a child. In this country, he went through hardships of rough work totally unreluctant to a world figure in art.

Finally, shortly after his dream of the gilded dome, he set out for Europe, and was able, by working his way, not only to cross the ocean, but to give himself training in art in Stockholm, Florence, and Paris.
Although Mr. Thiel, in Stockholm, early took a liking to Edstrom's work and arranged for several exhibitions in his gallery, it was some time before the sculptor found opportunity for carrying out his monumental dreams by creation on a large scale.

Now at Los Angeles
He now lives in Los Angeles, where he is regarded as "one of the finest living portrait painters," and where he is kept busy working in bronze, terra cotta, granite, and plaster of paris.
Although Edstrom's collection is

Competition Expected to Gain in Iowa's Photography Salon

Deadline for Entry of Exhibits Set at March 31

With the deadline on entries set for March 31, less than a week away, competition is expected to mount during the remainder of this week in Iowa's first annual salon of photography.

Seven persons had entered pictures by yesterday afternoon: Robert S. Anderson, G of Iowa City; Ruth Weller, J4 of Iowa City; Malvin Fastenow, C3 of Peterson; William McCulley, G of Omaha, Neb.; W. M. Weld, and Harold B. Vasey.
Held under the auspices of Iowa Union, with Ben. W. Robinson as director, the salon has as its aim the increasing of local interest in photography.

Competition is open to all students and faculty and staff members of the university. Prints on paper, made by any photographic process except blue printing, are acceptable, providing they be turned in at Iowa Union desk by next Friday.

The exposure must have been made by the contestant himself, but the developing, printing, or enlarging may have been done by another. In judging, only the pictorial character of the works will be considered. As many as six prints may be entered by each contestant.

Following the closing date for the entries, work submitted will be judged, and those showing "distinct evidence of personal artistic feeling and execution" will be displayed in Iowa Union from April 18 to 30.
All amateur photographers are urged by Mr. Robinson to make entries this week.

Davis, Milwaukee, 5 months.

now set up in Old Capitol, it will eventually be placed in a unit of the proposed fine arts group—a unit which an anonymous donor made possible recently through a gift to the university specifically for that purpose.

Egyptian Students to Receive Relief From Heat During Exams

When Egyptian collegians take their final examinations in May, plans are made to alleviate at least the physical suffering of the students, writes W. G. Waddell, a University of Durham, England, professor, in his article in the April issue of the Classical Journal, just off the press.

The weather being very hot, he writes, a large tent is erected for maximum coolness, and large jars of drinking water are available. Students have liberty to smoke, to ask for a glass of iced water, or if they fear a headache, to get aspirin or smelling salts from the paternal authorities.

In "A teacher of the classics in Egypt," he tells how with Arabic, French, and English already spoken at the Egyptian university, the students have a good excuse for getting mixed up in their Latin and Greek.
As a visiting professor he was struck by the friendliness and politeness of the Egyptian students, and he appreciates how grateful they are for help and encouragement.

The only high school classical museum in existence, the one at Bloomfield, N. J., high school, is portrayed by Maude C. Gay, the founder, in her article, "A classical museum in a high school."

Two book reviews are contributed by faculty members of the University of Iowa. Prof. Forest C. Ensign of the college of education and Prof. Dorrance S. White of the classical languages department are the authors.

Fairfield Upsets Dope to Win Little Six Track, Field Title

Strong Relay Teams Plus Dabner Brothers Enable Trojans to Regain Crown

Schmidt, Ottumwa Distance Star, Establishes Two Records as Does McElhinney; Bill Dabner High Scorer

By HARRY BURELL
Fairfield led with a pair of "black aces" yesterday afternoon to top all hands in the Little Six and regain the indoor track title which they lost to Ottumwa last year.

With Bill and Roy Dabner furnishing the spark, the Trojans showed surprising power in upsetting the highly favored Bulldog team. These two colored handy men teamed up to collect 18 points, which together with a strong showing in all three relays, enabled the Fairfield team to clinch the title with a second in the mile relay, the final event on the program.

Little Six Champs

- 50-yard dash—Bill Dabner, Fairfield.
- 60-yard low hurdles—Olson, Muscatine.
- 60-yard high hurdles—Roy Dabner, Fairfield.
- 440-yard dash—McGuire, Muscatine.
- 880-yard run—Schmidt, Ottumwa.
- Mile run—Schmidt, Ottumwa.
- Pole vault—Morrill, Fairfield, and McElhinney, Washington.
- High jump—McElhinney, Washington.
- Broad jump—Watson, Muscatine.
- Shot put—Koenig, Burlington.
- One-third mile relay—Fairfield.
- Mile relay—Ottumwa.

one-third mile relays and then placed second in the mile event to count 26 points. Yet even here the brothers had a hand for Bill ran the first leg of the sprint relay and Roy brought the victory home with a great spurt in the last lap. Bill was high point in the meet with two seconds and a first for 11 points. The two entered a total of eight events and placed in all but the shot.

Through much praise is due these Fairfield boys, they failed to equal the stirring performances of John Schmidt as he attempted to pile up enough points to overcome Fairfield leads. In a meet that was so close that at the conclusion of eight events only six points separated first and fourth, the Ottumwa distance star came through with two clear firsts, both record breaking races.

Schmidt Eclipses Two

Schmidt clipped four seconds off the mile mark and then came back to knock four and three-tenths off the half mile record. He finished more than 50 yards ahead of the field in the shorter race and led his teammates Beebe by about 20 yards in the mile. His 10 points gave him second in the scoring race.

Tom McElhinney was the only other double winner and record breaker but he was forced to share his pole vault mark with Morrill of Fairfield as they added more than six inches to the old mark. In the high jump however, the Washington lad wiped out the old mark by a margin of a quarter of an inch. McElhinney scored nine of his teams 13 points with Leeper's fourth in the 50-yard dash and second in the 440-yard run giving the Demons but a two man representation.

McCarthy Set But Can't Use So Many Men

Yankees' One Worry is to Find Place for Extra Players

(By The Associated Press)
Joe McCarthy, manager of the world champion New York Yankees, finds but one problem weighing down his squat shoulders as he grooms the greatest club in baseball for another all conquering drive. He can put only nine men on the ball field at one time.

GOOD OUTFIELD

No one could ask more than an outfield that boasts Ben Chapman in left field, Earle Combs in center, and the slow but still fabulous Ruth in right.

YET WAITING A CHANCE, PINING ON THE BENCH, IS ANOTHER MAJOR LEAGUE OUTFIELDER IN SAMMY BYRD.

Ruth's right field understudy, Myril Hoas, a 370 hitter in 46 games last season; Dusty Cooke, back in the form he showed two years ago; and Fred Walker.

AS THOUGH THIS SUPERFLUITY OF TALENT WERE NOT PERPLEXING ENOUGH, MCCARTHY HAS ENOUGH OUTSTANDING PITCHERS AND PROMISING YOUNGSTERS TO STAFF A COUPLE OF CLUBS.

FINE PITCHERS

The regulars of course, are easy to name—Gomez, Ruffing, Pipgras, Penneck and Johnny Allen, last year's sensation, now suffering a sore arm.

THERE ARE THREE OF THE GREATEST PITCHERS IN MINOR LEAGUES LAST YEAR—SOUTHPAW RUSSELL VAN ATTA, WHO WON 23 AND LOST 15 WITH ST. PAUL; DON BRENNAN, WHO TOSSED 26 VICTORIES AND LOST EIGHT FOR NEWARK; AND MARVIN DUKE, ANOTHER SOUTHPAW WHO WON 23 AND LOST 4 WITH ERIE.

MORE WORRY

Gehrig, an even greater hitter today than Ruth, stands unchallenged at first base. At second Tony Lazzeri has to contend with Eddie Farrell, and Lynn Lary, showing his form of 1931, has about ousted Crossett from shortstop. Joe Sewell is pressed hard by clouting Bill Werber, from Albany.

Financial interest now centers almost exclusively in Washington where congress faces a calendar of legislation embodying the administration's anti-depression program.

Brokers assume that security markets have been affected to some extent by liquidation of assets of closed banks, though the extent of such selling at this time is regarded as problematical.

Rails moved narrowly, freight loadings for the week ended March 18 were 11,899 cars above the previous total, which was for banking holiday week.

Foreign exchanges tended lower in quiet dealings.

While United States government securities were quiet and a bit steadier than in recent sessions, the most active were off from 1.32 to 1.37 of a point.

German obligations were again a prominent factor in the market, several of them showing losses ranging from fractions to around 4 points.

In granting the motion Judge Ward said: "There is no doubt in my mind that this man is entitled to his day in court."

Gallagher said he already had ordered 100 subpoenas for the defense. He expressed the hope that the attorney general would appoint Matt I. Sullivan, Charles Flickert and Edwin Cunha as prosecutors.

Sullivan is a former justice of the state supreme court and now advisor to Governor Rolph. He played a prominent part in reviewing the case for the governor last year.

French army officer convicted of treason and finally cleared after the years of efforts by some of that country's most brilliant citizens.

In his statement to the court, District Attorney Brady said: "We can anticipate, with accuracy, what would happen at this proposed trial. The testimony of the witnesses in the former trial, the subsequent affidavits and retractions and impeachments, are matters of common knowledge. They are contained in records, reports, opinions and articles."

"Books have been written about them. The condition of the evidence at this time is known to everyone who cares to read it. By this trial we would not even add to that knowledge."

Wheat closed strong at almost the day's top figures, 3-8-1 1-8 above yesterday's finish, corn 1-2-7 3 up, oats 3-8-1-2 advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 7 cents.

Grain price advances followed early setbacks which accompanied unsettledness of securities, and were also influenced by the fact that Liverpool wheat quotations had failed to respond to yesterday's gains here.

Wheat bulls put much stress on statements from trade leaders that independence of commodities was becoming more pronounced daily, and that the trend of securities was less of a factor than formerly.

question about the outcome, I will be acquitted. The evidence we will be able to produce will be overwhelming.

District Attorney Brady told the court he was out of sympathy with "such a make-believe trial" and that it could be of no benefit to Mooney.

Brady asserted even an acquittal would leave the prisoner's status unchanged.

Because many of the characters in the original case have died or have gone beyond the reach of the state courts, the status of the prosecution necessarily was left in a somewhat confused state.

Frank McDonald, another important one, has told varying stories since. Brady informed the court it would be impossible for the state to go to trial "because of the absence of evidence for prosecution."

The victory on the new trial motion was won by Leo A. Gallagher of Los Angeles, defense attorney. Previously Charles E. E. Wood, noted attorney, had joined the defense but announced his withdrawal before the legal argument started.

Wood said he had asked by the Mooney defense to enter the case in the absence of Frank P. Walsh, Kansas City and New York attorney, but had withdrawn at Mooney's request.

THE CHALLENGE OF LOVE by WARWICK DEEPIG

CHAPTER FORTY-SEVEN

"Pity! There's a great deal of pity wasted on the poor. Bless my soul, they don't feel things as you think they feel them. If you let yourself be persuaded by all this sentimental nonsense, it may cost you thousands of pounds."

Thus old Crump warning his coat-tails before a roaring fire at "Pardons," radiating a fatherly slyness, and talking to cheat John Wolfe of the compassion he had stirred in the heart of Ursula Brandon. Young Aubrey, his leg in plaster-of-Paris, was able to hobble about with two sticks. He had developed a curious liking for Wolfe. Crump, the cynic, suspected that the mother had followed the example of the son.

"I can't confess to much love for the poor."

"You are quite right, madam; they are not lovable. Leave them alone. Whatever you do, they'll grumble."

"But one has responsibilities. And we fulfil them. Suppose you tell me that it is Mr. Wolfe's opinion that Navestock should be turned upside down, I answer you, 'My dear madam, it is Mr. Wolfe's business to have such opinions. Every man's profession, including the profession of religion, is his business. Never take a so-called expert too seriously.'"

She looked past the lawyer into the heart of the fire.

"Do you suggest that the man is not sincere?"

"I suggest nothing of the kind. On the contrary, he is a thing that I abominate—a fanatic. This sort of man rides his hobby to death. And he is ready to fight for it—as young Turrell discovered."

"Was there anything in that piece of gossip?"

"Hector Turrell went out to thrash and got thrashed. That much is certain. I for one did not grieve."

It was Crump who did more than any other man to consolidate the opposition in Navestock against Wolfe's reforms. He had a reassuring and cynical shrewdness that smiled all extravagant opinions out of court. He even purged Rev. Flemming, temporarily, of the doubts that had afflicted him.

"An enthusiast always overstates his case, sir. Let things lie quiet for a year, let the mud settle. Then we may see the bottom of the pond. I abominate hurry. It is preposterous to think of our being hustled into some wild scheme by old Crabbe and a pair of fanatics like Wolfe and Boxall. No. Let us take any useful hints, but let us make our reforms at our own time and in our own way. It doesn't do to let passion into these things."

"But supposing an epidemic should arise?"

"That is one of their platform words, Mr. Flemming. It's a ghost made of a sheet and a broomstick. I know that kind of ghost."

Consciously, or unconsciously, Navestock adopted Crump's attitude of stolid, sensible cynicism. The Tory paper, extraordinarily wise for once in its career, ignored the whole business. Boxall, of "The Clarion," kept up an absurd trumpeting, but the walls of Jericho did not totter. Hardly a head appeared above the battlements to see what was happening in the plain below.

The watcher on the walls saw nothing but palm trees, and a riddleously lean and leaping dervish blowing at a trumpet and waving a red flag.

Then winter came, and with it phenomenal December floods that washed all theoretical squabbles into temporary oblivion. The Wraith overflowed its banks and swamped the river meadows and the low-lying parts of the town.

The floods had Biblical leanings, in that it lasted seven days. It left Navestock sodden and depressed. The raw, stagnant air was smitten through and through with frost. The floors and foundations of many of the cottages were so much pulp. Wolfe, with Turpin splashing through the black flood-water, had prophesied a bad winter for Navestock in the way of sickness. He was right.

By the middle of December Wolfe found himself up to the throat in work. It was forced upon him, despite his unpopularity, by the fact that he had become necessary to the town. Thredgold's new assistant was an amiable and blustering fool. Wolfe ran up against him now and then, a thin youth with puzzled spectacles, a huge forehead, and a weak, conciliatory smile. The man was a muf, and the people would have none of him. He could not even gossip to the old women. The children called him "Old Ba-lamb" to his face. Thredgold was run off his little pattering legs.

Squabbles about theories gave way before the importunities of facts. "The Clarion" turned aside to attack the riparian owners who were responsible for the waters of the Wraith. "Pardons" was empty, its mistress flown southwards, where grey olive trees and a blue sea made the white walls of the South gleam more whittly. Robert Flemming was spending hours beside sick-beds. A new wing was being built at Turrell's brewery, and the Turrells were taken up with bricks and mortar. Josiah Crabbe had gone to bed with his first attack of bronchitis. Navestock was too busy for the moment to spend itself in quarrels. The combatants went into winter quarters, and waited for warmer and more litigious weather in the spring.

It turned out that on Christmas morning Wolfe had to walk to Josiah Crabbe's through three inches of snow. The Lombardy poplars by Josiah Crabbe's were huge, white-bearded Druids. The clouds had broken, and a blue sky covered the world.

Quite early, before the church bells had begun ringing and muffled folk went plodding through the snow, Wolfe had to collar a boy and offer him a shilling to take a letter up to Moor Farm. "I can't get through with my work by noon," he wrote. "More messages and too much snow. You must dine alone. I will try to be with you by tea time."

The boy had his shilling, and a couple of mince-pies at the farm. Jess was grieved.

"Why couldn't they let him have just this one day?" Her mother acted while Jess deplored.

"Sally, keep the beef out of the oven. Dr. Wolfe can't get here by noon. We'll dine at six instead." The sparkle was soon back in Jess's eyes.

"Shall I do it, Mother?" "If you like, child. You had better let me."

"No, I want to try for myself. I wonder whether he will be surprised."

It was a complex business—this first piling up of rebellious hair, with stray tendrils escaping, and the whole mass threatening to tumble down like a cataract. Jess had her own conception as to how her hair should be done. She was prejudiced against nets, remembering how Miss Edith Wilks's hair looked like a sandy-coloured ferret stuffed into a rabbit-net. Ribbons, pins, and combs were scattered over Jess's dressing-table. She had borrowed her mother's hand-glass, and between it and her own little Georgian mirror, swinging in its mahogany frame, decision faltered hypercritically.

A long black skirt lay on the bed. Jess put it on, and, holding her head a little on one side, looked at herself in a long pier-glass. What a transfiguration! She went nearer and gazed at herself almost ruefully as though she were taking leave of an old friend. A solemn mood seized her. She drew a chair before the fire, sat down, and stared at the flames. Something was happening! She had changed suddenly. Life, too, had changed. For a moment she felt a passionate desire to throw herself back into the arms of the past.

"Jess, Jess, are you coming, child?" She was on the last step but one before she saw John Wolfe. He had been hanging his ulster on one of the pegs under the stairs. Jess paused with one hand on the rail, for Wolfe was standing and looking up at her with an expression that she did not understand.

Mercy Hospital Dedicates New Chapel in Services Held Yesterday Morning

Quietly, impressively, solemnly, the new chapel at Mercy hospital for the Sisters of Mercy was dedicated yesterday morning.

In the solemnity of the sanctuary before an altar of old ivory and gold the Rt. Rev. Henry P. Rohlfman, bishop of the Davenport diocese, celebrated pontifical high mass assisted by Iowa City priests.

Praising the work of the Sisters of Mercy the Rev. H. G. Takkenberg of St. Ambrose college at Davenport in the dedication sermon congratulated the Sisters upon the completion of the new chapel.

Beautiful in the dignified simplicity of travertine marble and dull, sandstone wood, the chapel is not large but impressive. The walls and ceiling are all of marble except for a large cross carved of wood running the full length of the ceiling.

The altar behind the ever-burning sanctuary lamp is illuminated by rows of lights situated on square, grooved pillars of travertine on either side of the altar.

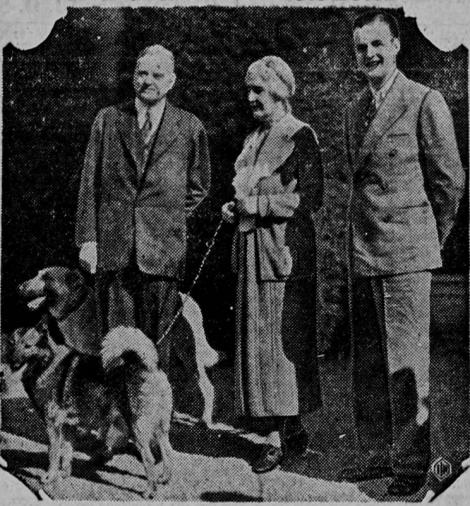

The side altars, as well as the central altar, are of the same old ivory and gold. The 14 stations depicting the steps of the Via Crucis of the Lord are all handcarved by Italian masters of their craft. The stations are placed at intervals on the east and west walls of the chapel, the sanded natural wood matching with the warm gray of the walls.

Above the entrance to the chapel and the distinctive doors to the confessionals on the west extends a balcony which has direct access to the second floor of the hospital, allowing wheel chair patients the privilege of being present at the sacrifice of the Mass with a minimum of difficulty.

Just outside the chapel doors is a stone grotto built in a recess. Inside is a representation of an angel of God offering the chalice to Our Blessed Saviour as He kneels in Gethsemane at prayer just before His passion and death.

Priests who attended the dedication ceremonies are: Bishop Rohlfman, Msgr. C. J. Donohoe of Davenport, Msgr. A. J. Schulte of Iowa City, the Rev. P. J. O'Reilly of Iowa City, the Rev. A. L. Panoch of Iowa City, the Rev. T. V. Lawlor of Oxford, Father Takkenberg of Davenport, the Rev. L. C. Sterek of Davenport, the Rev. George A. Voltz of West Burlington, the Rev. Gerald A. Lillis of Davenport, the Rev. W. F. Boeckmann, the Rev. C. F. Clemens, the Rev. William F. Lynch, and the Rev. M. J. Diamon, all of Iowa City.

Laud Martin's Charity Work

Appreciation for the services of Thomas E. Martin, director of the Community Chest campaign, was expressed in a statement issued yesterday by James L. Records, chairman of the Community Chest trustees.

"Never in my experience have I known a man to devote himself more wholeheartedly to a public service," declared Mr. Records. "Mr. Martin organized the Chest campaign in a scientific way, chose his staff of workers wisely, and inspired them with his own enthusiasm and thoroughness.

"The result has been that more than twice as many individuals are now subscribers to the Chest than ever before. An organization has been set up, and a foundation laid which should make it far easier to conduct similar campaigns in the future."

Emil Smykil Buys Interest in Mortuary

Emil Smykil, formerly of Solon, has bought an interest in the Schneider Brothers funeral home of Iowa City and becomes its new manager immediately. It was announced yesterday.

Smykil, son of Frank and Hattie Smykil, now living in Cedar Rapids, was born in Johnson county. He graduated from Shueville high school in 1908 and later attended Coe college. He is a graduate of the Cedar Rapids Business college.

For a number of years he was cashier of the Farmers State bank at Solon. After the bank closed Smykil headed a community group which organized a new bank.

Recently Smykil passed the state board examinations and is now a licensed embalmer. In December, 1932, he graduated from the Hohenschul-Carpenter college of embalming in St. Louis, Mo.

Smykil will make his home in Iowa City, and intends to move his family here in the near future. Mrs. Smykil and three sons will remain in Solon until the end of the present school session.

Germans Let Writers Talk to Prisoners

BERLIN, March 25 (AP)—Capt. Hermann Goering, cabinet minister without portfolio, redeemed his pledge today to permit foreign correspondents to see and talk to prominent arrested communists and other members of the left in order that they might satisfy themselves that the prisoners were neither dead nor injured.

The imprisoned men displayed by the police showed no evidence of having been hurt nor did they make any serious complaints.

In their visits to arrested communists the foreign correspondents were escorted by Rudolf Diehls, chief of the criminal police. They were taken first before the cell of Ernst Thaelmann, communist member of the Reichstag and a presidential candidate last year.

"You will observe that Thaelmann looks physically fit," the police chief said. "That he is not spiritually comfortable need not surprise you, for Thaelmann does not like it that he who regards himself as a political prisoner is in the same jail with criminals.

"However, as he has been the leader of the party accused of inciting the Reichstag fire, that cannot be helped. Thaelmann further complains that he does not like the reading matter given to him."

Muscatine Minister to Speak at Baptist Church Here Today

"Paths to Power" is the subject of an address to be given by the Rev. Vernon L. Shontz, pastor of the First Baptist church of Muscatine, today at 4:30 in the First Baptist church in Iowa City.

The Rev. Mr. Shontz has been prominent in the work of the Iowa Baptist convention. As chairman this year of the convention commission of Evangelism, he has just completed a series of conferences covering the entire state.

The male quartet of the Muscatine church will sing two selections: "Wonderful Peace" and "The Riches of Love." The members of the quartet are Leonard Plessey, Y. L. Shontz, Arthur Nicholson, and E. C. Schoemaker. Leonard Plessey will sing a solo.

Van der Zee's Reply to Carroll

TO THE 8,600 VOTERS IN IOWA CITY—

As Monday's election approaches, the campaign waxing warmer. Of course, just now is the time to spring false statements to confuse and poison the public mind.

The mayor's ad pretended to expose to you the spending spree which featured my aldermanic career four years ago. The mayor's description of "democratic economy" sounds like an old-time melodrama, in which Van der Zee is the villain and King Carroll plays the noble hero, who repeatedly rescues Taxpaying Iowa City from an awful fate.

Now, I like fun as well as anybody and can stand a lot of abuse; I can take it on the chin but not—below the belt. Must the mayor stoop to such political tactics to achieve success for himself, the democratic ticket, and the sacred principle of "economy"?

My Record As Alderman, 1929-31

The Carroll indictment accuses me of "waste and extravagance" during the years 1929-31. If there was waste (and I deny that there was), it was democratic waste, since the council was democratic, 5 to 2.

It must surprise and amuse those democrats to have the mayor advertise the fact that I, a mere republican, "led them." Needless to say, they were quite capable of supplying the leadership which the mayor lacked.

The Mayor's Garbled Charges

1. Van der Zee bought the street sweeper in 1930? Ridiculous. The council, including all the democrats, unanimously favored the purchase of this machine and unanimously overrode the mayor's veto, not in 1930, but on July 6, 1929—Van der Zee being absent.

In a veto message written by the power behind his throne, the King demanded a street flusher. Would the flusher have been a "God-send to a large number of respectable and long-time residents of Iowa City" who needed work? Or to the Water Company? The reader can answer.

2. Van der Zee aided in purchasing the airport in 1930. That charge must have a hollow ring to those citizens who voted a $70,000 bond issue to buy the airport. Never a word of warning from the King or the power behind his throne when the bond election was held in the spring of 1929.

3. Van der Zee's City-County Health Unit would have cost the taxpayers $27,000 but for the King's veto. That is false. Had the Board of Supervisors been willing to pool its resources with those of the United States, the State of Iowa, the school district, the city, the university, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, and several private agencies, the mayor's veto would surely have been overridden; the public health would have gained; taxes would not have increased one cent; the city nurse would have come under competent direction and her political activity on behalf of Mayor Carroll would have ceased forever; and the Visiting Nurses' Association would not have been wrecked by the mayor. See yesterday's Iowan on the council's action on the office of city nurse. The mayor is for "economy," but only when it affects the other fellow.

4. Van der Zee introduced the resolution to cancel $30,000 of paving assessments against the Street Railway Company; and when that measure passed, all the taxpayers became liable for West Side paving in Van der Zee's ward. That charge is grossly and outrageously false in every single particular. What has become of the mayor's widely advertised honesty? Where is his conscience?

On June 6, 1929, Dr. Bywater's finance committee fathered the resolution: all the paving in question was on the East Side and very little of it, if any, in the second ward; the city council voted unanimously for cancellation; and the city collected $3,000 in cash from a dying company that was and still is in the hands of a receiver.

The mayor never even peeped about it until just now, "when Van der Zee is to be voted on by the entire city!" Not only that but the record will show that the mayor signed the resolution!

Dr. Bywater will gladly verify the above statement.

CONCLUSION

If the mayor in his desperation has to resort to shameless falsification in order to win this election, the sooner Iowa City gets a NEW DEAL, the better for those people who demand the truth and fair play.

The mayor's friends should save him from the regrettable course he has taken. Why did he not quote my record directly from the city council's minute-book, which is right at his elbow? Facts, not myths or falsehoods, are needed by the voters.

Decency in politics, now more than ever, requires that every citizen of voting age do his duty in Monday's election.

Yours for the Breene Ticket,

J. VAN DER ZEE.

PUBLIC SENTIMENT IN IOWA CITY FAVORS A CHANGE OF CITY ADMINISTRATION

Mayor Carroll is asking the voters to place him in office again—for the FIFTH TERM. Why?

In the interest of reducing the tremendous load the already over-burdened taxpayers are carrying, why hasn't Mayor Carroll shown activity in reducing the heavy expenses of his administration?

Why hasn't Mayor Carroll shown vigorous leadership in reducing the cost to the taxpayers of Water Rates, Gas and Electricity, as mayors in other Iowa cities have done in the interest of the taxpayers of their cities?

Reducing these burdens of the taxpayers would have been far more praiseworthy than spending $7,000 of taxpayers' money for an appraisal that accomplished what?

Iowa City needs vigorous leadership in vital matters for the benefit of the city, which has been too long missing in the City Hall.

Harry D. Breene as mayor, and the candidates on his ticket, will supply that leadership to the credit of our city and to the benefit of the pocketbook of every taxpayer.

All candidates on the Breene ticket have stated their positions on the vital issues in this campaign, fairly, squarely and sincerely.

If you want a NEW DEAL and a more effective and efficient administration of the affairs of Iowa City, vote for the candidates named below at the City Election next Monday.

They will appreciate your support and confidence.

For Mayor— HARRY D. BREENE	For Alderman, First Ward— I. N. ROWLAND
For Treasurer— E. B. RAYMOND	For Alderman, Second Ward— S. M. WOODWARD
For Police Judge— HAROLD W. VESTERMARK	For Alderman, Third Ward— GEORGE O'HARRA
For Park Commissioner— DR. W. M. ROHRBACHER	For Alderman, Fourth Ward— D. TOM DAVIS
For Aldermen-at-Large— JAMES E. STRONKS J. VAN DER ZEE	For Alderman, Fifth Ward— ROSCOE B. AYERS
