Roosevelt Forges Billion Dollar Public Works Program as Aid to Employment

U. S. Roads Will Receive Half Billion

Rivers, Harbors, Naval Construction Plans Included

WASHINGTON, April 29 (AP)—President Roosevelt forged a one-year, billion or more dollars public works program to aid employment today to top off his broad domestic and international program.

A tentative draft of the measure, which would vest administration of the job-giving plan in a coordinator or national board, was taken to the White House by a special committee of the cabinet.

Methods of financing the employment project were undecided tonight with both a bond issue and new taxation under consideration. The committee considered a proposal for a tax on payrolls but it was indicated this was not favored.

Self Liquidating
Mr. Roosevelt insisted that the public works be devoted to self-liquidating projects and to proposals which provide the most jobs.

No decision was reached on the exact extent of the year's program but the White House advisers believed between one billion and two billion dollars would be required.

A three-year billion dollar road construction program was advanced by the cabinet committee. A half billion dollars for the roads in the next year is almost definitely a part of the Roosevelt plan.

Internal Developments
Rivers and harbors improvements, naval construction, public buildings and other internal developments are to be included.

Secretaries Dern, Ickes, Wallace and Perkins and Director Douglas of the budget went over the public works program with the president in a conference late today.

The legislation, which would put full authority for naming the projects and administration in the hands of the president and a special committee, will be sent to congress within 10 days.

In this step the confident president proposes to extend still further the management over national affairs which he announced on inauguration two months ago that he would assume.

New Powers
With full authority over the monetary system and agriculture within his grasp, the president intends to obtain power to supplement this control by instituting new work.

Worn but willing, congress was rallying by the president over the week end to speed through the remainder of his legislative program.

From a sick bed, Secretary Wood-ward asserted he was in full harmony with the president and denied reports he intended resigning.

Spokesmen for three powerful nations—Great Britain, France and Canada—were traveling homeward tonight from the White House carrying complete understandings with the United States on measures for a new world economic order and disarmament. Statesmen of the other world powers are on the high seas to complete the round of Roosevelt talks which are to have their fulfillment in the London and Geneva conferences.

The public works program was (Turn to page 7)

Tornado Damages Nebraska Farms

MADISON, Neb., April 29 (AP)—A tornado flattened barns and out-buildings on three farms northwest of here this afternoon and did much other damage.

Telephone wires were down but there were no reports of casualties to men or livestock.

The buildings were destroyed on the farms of Ira Lyons, Joseph Granger and Guy Bickley. The residences on these farms were not damaged but the loss was estimated at several thousand dollars.

The area through which the funnel shaped cloud twisted was judged to be a mile wide and five long. Heavy rain fell at the time of the wind as well as before and afterwards.

Davis Urges World Truce in Economics

Outlines American View for Recovery of Business

LONDON, April 29 (AP)—Proposing an all-embracing economic truce among the nations until the world economic conference can bring about world economic peace, Norman H. Davis, President Roosevelt's right hand man in Europe, today achieved his second objective of the week in proclaiming the American program of world recovery.

The Davis proposal, made immediately after the world economic conference organizing committee at a session at the foreign office had agreed upon June 12 for convening the world parley, was in effect an economic armistice which gave to the nations a broad outline of American economic policy.

Outline Policy
Similarly at Geneva Wednesday and yesterday, Dr. Davis outlined America's political policy on peace and disarmament.

Speeding from Geneva to Paris by train, the American ambassador at large flew to London this morning. A half hour later Mr. Davis sprang what was a big surprise on at least some of the delegates.

He announced to the representatives of the eight organizing nations a truce proposal of sweeping character which will be advanced formally by the United States delegation on the opening day of the world economic conference. Here is an authoritative summary of his proposal:

Would Support Agreement
He notified the delegates that the United States would suggest an agreement, to be carried out in good faith, providing that all governments should refrain during the period of the truce from making any upward modifications in tariff rates, and from enhancing existing restrictions which would give domestic producers an advantage over foreign producers.

The agreement will provide further, according to the authoritative summary, that the governments should introduce no direct or indirect subsidies to expand their export industries, or any measures to promote dumping.

At the conclusion of the meeting Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, and Mr. Davis left the old cabinet room of the foreign office arm in arm. Standing in the center of the Locarno room—where the Locarno pact was signed—they held further private discussions of the swift developing offensive against world depression.

Farmer Convicted of Killing in Milk Riot Will Seek New Trial

ELK POINT, S. Dak., April 29 (AP)—A notice of intention to move for a new trial for Nile Cochran, Merville, Ia., farmer, convicted of manslaughter for the fatal shooting of B. D. Markell in a milk riot last February, was served today on O. C. Donley, state's attorney for Union county.

In the notice Cochran's attorneys allege that the court erred in submitting the forms of verdict for manslaughter on which the defendant was convicted. The attorneys contend that the court should have instructed the jury and submitted two separate forms of verdict on manslaughter.

It was further alleged that the jury did not consider whether Cochran was the actual slayer or whether he had been aided in the slaying.

Cochran is now serving a three-year sentence in the state penitentiary at Sioux Falls.

Sparkling Performance by Metcalfe Climaxes Finals at 24th Drake Relay Carnival

Battles Rain, Wind, Slow Track to Lead Field for Easy Victory in 100 Yard Dash; Misses Try to Establish New World Record

By CHARLES DUNKLEY
DRAKE STADIUM, Des Moines, April 29 (AP)—Two smashing performances by Ralph Metcalfe, national collegiate sprint champion, climaxed the finals of the twenty-fourth annual Drake relay carnival today, in which seven records were broken.

Battling rain, wind, a heavy, slow track and a determined field of opponents, Metcalfe, Marquette university's famous Negro flyer, easily captured the 100 yard dash in 9.7 seconds. He broke the tape four feet ahead of Willis Ward, another Negro from the University of Michigan, to defend successfully his Drake century championship.

Breaks Indoor Records
The Marquette flyer ran the distance one-fifth of a second slower than last year, when, in the same event, he led the then recognized world's record of 9.5. Metcalfe, just finishing an indoor campaign in which he tied or broke all records for the short distances, competed with only three days of outdoor practice.

As a result, his showing was considered remarkable. He is determined, before the season ends, to reduce the world's record if possible to the amazing time of 9.2 seconds for the century.

Anchor in 880 Relay
After winning the 100, Metcalfe came back with a brilliant performance to triumph for Marquette in the 880-yard university relay. Running as anchor man for the Hilltoppers from Milwaukee, Metcalfe, coming from behind, drove his powerful legs into the rain-soaked track to pick up ten yards and beat out Heve Lambertus of Nebraska in a thrilling finish.

Today's events were run off between intermittent showers and other unfavorable weather conditions. It rained heavily during the morning, soaking the track and infield and ruined attendance prospects as well as chances for wholesale record breaking.

Four individual champions retained their titles in the relays. Bidding (Turn to page 6)

Joan Crawford Seeks Divorce

LOS ANGELES, April 29 (AP)—One of filmdom's most widely discussed romances, the marriage of Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Joan Crawford, reached the divorce courts today.

Charging "grievous mental cruelty," Miss Crawford started legal action to dissolve her marriage in 1929 to "young Doug," who was sued for $50,000 damages last month by Jorjen Dietz, a chemist, on the charge of alienating the affections of his wife, Mrs. Sotvelg Dietz.

Shortly after Dietz filed this suit Miss Crawford announced she and her husband were separating. She said the Dietz charges were groundless and she would do anything in her power to assist Fairbanks in court.

Today, however, screenland's portrayal of the "modern girl" told in the complaint of difficulties with her husband dating back to the year of their marriage. She said Fairbanks' cruelty and neglect was caused by his jealousy of her and her professional associations.

Herriot Leaves for Home After Parleys

NEW YORK, April 29 (AP)—Former Premier Herriot of France sailed for his homeland today, bearing President Roosevelt's proposals for the solution of world problems and declaring that "both sides are now in an excellent position."

The serious men the French statesman had worn while the groundwork of the world economic conference was being laid in Washington vanished as he stepped aboard the Ile de France.

With a green handkerchief in his breast pocket, a cigar in his mouth and large red rose in his buttonhole, M. Herriot presided at a champagne luncheon given on the liner just before sailing time for a group of friends.

Nebraska's Hopes for 3.2 Beer Lie in Bryan's Hands

LINCOLN, Neb., April 29 (AP)—The sphinx-like silence of Governor Charles W. Bryan tonight masked the fate of Nebraska's 3.2 per cent beer bill.

The legislature finally approved the measure today when the house accepted senate amendments. The bill will be delivered to the governor Monday.

Always considered a prohibitionist, Bryan will decide in the room where he has been ill nearly six months what to do with the bill. If he signs it or permits it to become a law without his signature, as some of his friends and advisers predict, beer would be legalized 90 days after the end of the present legislature or about August 1.

The governor's veto would put a halt to any hopes for legal beer until after the 1934 general election.

HAVANA (AP)—Seven rebels, two soldiers and the chief of police of the town of San Luis were killed as army forces quickly suppressed a revolutionary outbreak in Oriente province today, said a government announcement tonight.

DES MOINES (AP)—Iowa school administrators today were told by Leo Wegman, state treasurer, that he expected to release school funds tied up in closed banks within the next 60 days, through loans to the state sinking funds from the R.F.C.

MacDONALDS HOMEWARD BOUND

His mission to the United States completed, Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain, is pictured with his daughter, Ishbel, as they boarded the liner Berengaria at New York for the return trip to London. New Yorker Will Speak at University Vespers Tonight

Rev. F. Ernest Johnson to Give Address Tonight

"The individual in the coming society" will be discussed by the Rev. F. Ernest Johnson of Columbia university, New York city, at the university vesper service this evening at 8 o'clock in Iowa Union.

In his talk the speaker will endeavor to explain what the student may look forward to as the result of the present social and economic upheaval, especially in his vocational plans.

Editor
The Rev. Mr. Johnson will probably be best known on the campus, believes Prof. William H. Morgan of the school of religion, through his editing of "Information Service," published weekly by the Federal Council of Churches. His talk will be the main feature of the Vocational Emphasis program now being sponsored by the school of religion.

Considered to be an authority in the field of social science, he was characterized yesterday by Professor Morgan as being, "Primarily a research type. He has a rare combination of research and popular presentation of his subject."

Graduate of Albion
A graduate of Albion college, Albion, Mich., and the Union Theological seminary, he later became assistant pastor of St. Paul's church, New York city, and pastor of the Janes church there.

Research and educational work then became his major interest, and since 1924 he has been executive secretary of the department of research and education of the Federal Council of Churches.

Young people's problems have always interested the New Yorker, and three years ago he was named chief consultant in the international survey being conducted by the Y.W.C.A. and Y.M.C.A. He is a member of the national child welfare committee.

Writes Books
Both alone and in collaboration with others, the Rev. Mr. Johnson is the author of three books on problems of social and economic interest in industry, and of other brochures and articles on religious and social subjects. He is professor of education at Teachers college, Columbia university.

Following the vesper service the speaker will answer questions of students. Tomorrow from 11 to 12 a.m. he will be at the campus religious organizations office in Iowa Union for open discussion with students. He will address commerce students at 10 a.m. in chemistry auditorium on "Religion and economics."

The university chorus and orchestra will present a musical program at the vespers service.

Special Judges, Prosecutors Ordered to Expedite Hearing of Men Facing Prosecution

National Guard Troops Supervise Continued Sale of Household Goods While Rioters Stay in Custody at Le Mars, Denison

LE MARS, April 29 (AP)—Ten northwest Iowa farmers tonight were under military arrest facing prosecution, possibly on charges of criminal syndicalism, for their alleged participation in farm riots which brought national guard troops and martial law to Plymouth and Crawford counties.

The troops, with fixed bayonets and machine guns, today supervised the sale of goods at the J. F. Shields farm near Denison. It was the attempt to complete the sale yesterday which precipitated the battle between farmers and officers, which resulted in the declaration of martial law in Crawford county.

Arrested by Militiamen
The men held in custody, five here and five at Denison, were arrested by militiamen and state agents and awaited the assembling of special judges and prosecutors appointed by state authorities to expedite their hearings and trials.

Those arrested at Le Mars were: John Kunkel, 52; T. J. Ernst, 45; John Sokolovskie, 18; Henry Reinte, 33; and Lawrence Shuman, 23. At Denison were: Frank North, 46, and W. H. Meyer, 53, both of Vall; Herman Blume, 33, and Fritz Blume, 31, brothers living near Denison, and Walter Bandow, 19.

Second Sale
A second sale, held under the supervision of Sheriff Ralph E. Rippey of Plymouth county and his deputies, was held without incident today. Deputy Sheriff T. C. Parker disposed of the 155-acre property of Katie Durband for $14,500. The farm is located near the Ed Durband farm, where an attempted sale a few weeks ago resulted in threats to hang the attorney for an insurance company.

The Federal Land bank of Omaha, holder of the mortgage on the property, bought the farm through an Orange City attorney. Only five farmers assembled for the sale.

Continue Search
National guard authorities at both Le Mars and Denison continued their search for additional men named in lists of ringleaders of the Denison fight and the assault on Judge C. C. Bradley here Thursday in which the judge was carried from his court room to a crossroads, beaten, covered with grease and dirt, and rendered unconscious by being jerked off his feet with a noose around his neck.

The latter violence brought the first call for state troops and the invasion of the county by them early yesterday.

Bradley Recuperates
Judge Bradley was recuperating from his injuries today. He will be replaced on the district court bench for the duration of the trials of the farm leaders by Judge Earl Peters of Clarinda, who was appointed by Chief Justice James W. Kindig of the Iowa supreme court. Leon Powers, assistant state attorney general, will act as special prosecutor.

At Denison Frank B. Halligan of Des Moines, judge advocate of the Iowa national guard, will act as special prosecutor in the trials of the Crawford county men.

Meanwhile at Des Moines Governor Clyde Herring declared in a speech that a repetition of the disturbances in any part of the state will result in the declaration of martial law and invasion by national guardsmen of the offending counties.

Iowa Farmer Held on Attack Charge

CRESTON, April 29 (AP)—Chas. C. Bullock, 32, Union county farmer, was in jail here today, accused by Reva Swain, 20, of being the man who attacked her the night of April 23, after forcing her car off the road near Hopeville, and driving away her two young escorts with a gun.

Miss Swain was accompanied by Beryl and Earl Lewis, brothers. She charges Bullock forced her into his car after the other auto went into a ditch, and an hour later attacked her after threatening death.

counts for their apparent numerical strength. Incidents of the last few days are bringing these deluded good citizens to their senses, and in my opinion when this present situation is finally cleared up, which will be within a very few days, we will find that however regrettable the experience in the courtroom in Le Mars may be, the net result will be to the benefit of the state.

Selfish Individuals
Iowa, like other states, has individuals whose patriotic impulses are replaced by a selfish desire to live upon his fellow citizens' misfortunes. In times such as these, these professional agitators sponsor first one organization and then another ostensibly for the purpose of helping those in trouble, but whose real purpose is to collect an organization to serve their own personal interests.

We have suffered much in the last few years from the activities of these parasites. Partly through persuasion, and oftentimes through fear, they have induced good citizens to join with them and this ac-

Child Study Club Members Hear Talks on World Fair

Cedar Rapids Women Tell of Plans Reincarnating Past Days, Explaining Wonders of Present, Predicting Complex Future

A fairyland, reincarnating past days, explaining wonders of the present, and predicting the complex future, was unrolled before the eyes of 50 members of the Child Study club yesterday as Grace Boston and Mrs. M. S. Hallman, both of Cedar Rapids, described the World's Fair, which is to open in Chicago, June 1.

"There's nothing placid about this fair. It's vivid, and full of light, speed and color," said Miss Boston, who has spent several weeks on the fair grounds in Chicago, during the last few months.

The Enchanted Island, a five acre tract of land on which $1,000,000 has been expended to make the greatest playground in the world for children, was described by Miss Boston as a place you can "check your child in at 10 a. m. and out at 10 p. m." It centers about a magical mountain topped with a fairy castle, and includes a children's theater, seating 540 children for puppet shows and all the greatest children's plays, a miniature railway, a toy shop, a wading pool, a model farm with performing animals, an island full of chattering monkeys, and a children's bazaar exhibiting articles made by children from all over the globe. The tallest man in the world greets the kiddies at the gate of the Enchanted Island, and a giant umbrella spreads over the children's domain.

Explains Existence Miss Boston explained as the reason for the fair's existence the fact that every 30 or 40 years we stop to take a look at ourselves, and in the present fair we are not only taking stock of ourselves during the last 100 years, but are also guessing what our lives will be like 50 years from now. Because of this wide scope, the mammoth exhibit offers an unlimited education to both the child and the adult.

"I learned more about anatomy standing before an artificial transparent man and punching various buttons to watch the action of the nervous system, the path of a thought, and the course of the blood stream than I ever learned in a classroom," asserted Miss Boston.

Cans of food conveniently piled on shelves are contrasted with the sight of a farmer hard at work in the fields to show the ease with which modern civilization supplies the needs of man in the Social Science exhibit described by Mrs. Hallman. Here man's development from the primitive to the complex civilization of today is illustrated by natural looking groups of Indians, Colonial Americans, and on up to the present day apartment-dwelling family of 1933.

Story of Past "One exhibit shows how the story of the past can be read in a section of a city dump," Mrs. Hallman explained. "This age throws away electric lights, the one before junked its carriages, and so on to the crude wooden tools of savage man."

The widespread sources that supply the average man's dinner table, his clothes supply, and his dwellings are shown by means of electric lights on a huge map in another exhibit explained by Mrs. Hallman. The growth of a big city, the growth of the present educational system with its emphasis on the training of the individual child and its encouragement of self expression are also contained in the Social Science exhibit.

Talking Knowledge "The fair gives one a talking knowledge about everything people of today want to talk about," said Miss Boston. It doesn't do any guessing. Actual facts and actual machines are exhibited to let people see for themselves the workings of things. The fair presents a resume of everything existing in the world today, and it has the power to inspire in us the germ of a successful life," she maintained.

Proceeding the talks, questionnaires to secure factual and observational data on the effects of radio programs on children were distributed to the mothers of children between the ages of four and 12. They were supplied by the Child Welfare Research station which is cooperating with the State Board of the Iowa Congress of Parents and Teachers in discovering the part radio plays in the life of the child.

ROAST TURKEY DINNER 50c No. 2 Dinners, 45c Sunday Suppers, 30c-45c TOWN and GOWN

Dr. Zella White Stewart Honors University Women

Entertains Association at April Luncheon Yesterday

Dr. Zella White Stewart, 1010 Woodlawn, was both hostess and speaker at the April luncheon of the American Association of University Women held at her home yesterday afternoon. Forty-five members and guests of the university's branch were present.

After the luncheon, at a brief business meeting, the program and plans for the association's national convention to be held at Minneapolis, Minn., May 17, 18, and 19 were discussed. Mrs. C. E. Seashore explained the manner of voting on the question of ratifying a new amendment to repeal the eighteenth amendment.

Opening her address with the remark, "One would never guess that clothes, furniture, food, pets, and flowers may cause ill health," Dr. Stewart recounted to her guests the development of modern ideas in medicine relative to certain afflictions which are not caused by germs, but by a sensitivity to proteins.

Not Only Germs "Modern developments show unmistakably that not all diseases are caused by germs. During the last 20 years the field of allergy has developed rapidly. It has proved that clothes, food, furniture and flowers may be causes. This is because many individuals are sensitive to proteins that are either inhaled or eaten. A case of strawberry rash after eating strawberries is an illustration."

Allergists test sensitive persons for several hundred proteins and by knowledge gained through experience are able to determine the cause of many illnesses. Up to the present, the progress is allergy has been effective in locating the causes and thereby making prevention possible in hay fever, asthma, urticaria or hives, migraine headaches, eczema, cases of sinus trouble which are not bacterial, some cases of epilepsy, and numerous cases of gastro intestinal disturbances.

Gains Importance The speaker explained, "As investigation continues it is found that the field of allergy increases in importance and benefit. Protein sensitivity extends not only to pollens which are the cause of seasonal hay fever, but also to emanations from feathers, from animal hair found in clothing and furniture, and from even the most common foods such as eggs and wheat."

Dr. Stewart showed how the allergist makes the tests to find individual sensitiveness and how what seemed to be mysterious afflictions become controllable.

Lantern slides were used to illustrate the talk.

Kwapil Speaks Tomorrow at School of Journalism

Librarian for Philadelphia Ledger Visits University

Joseph F. Kwapil, librarian of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, will speak on the newspaper reference department at 4 p.m. tomorrow in room 205 journalism building. His talk will be illustrated with slides and movie films taken in the great newspaper libraries of the country. He will speak at 9 a.m. before the reporting class on "The reporter and the newspaper library."

JOSEPH F. KWAPIL
—Librarian of the Ledger.

Mr. Kwapil graduated from high school in Cedar Rapids and will visit his mother there before coming to Iowa City. After his Iowa City engagement he will go to the University of Missouri to lecture there on the journalism week program of that institution.

Reorganization of newspaper departments is the field of Mr. Kwapil's specialization. He has been librarian of the Minneapolis Tribune, the Chicago Tribune, the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, the Washington Times, the Pittsburgh Post and Sun, and, since 1914, the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

He is a member of the Special Libraries council of Philadelphia, the Pennsylvania Library club, and the Special Libraries association. He organized the Newspaper Group of Special Libraries association and served as chairman in 1925.

Says Classics May Give Aid

That the classics may contribute much to the solution of the depression is the opinion of Prof. Roy C. Flickinger, head of the classical languages department, in his editorial for the May issue of the Classical Journal which is now being distributed.

The editorial is the presidential message Professor Flickinger recently presented at the meeting of the Classical Association of the Middle West and South at Williamsburg, Va.

Discussing his reasons for believing classicists may help relieve economic strife, he writes, "This is not the first depression in the world's history and lessons may be learned from the simpler problems of a smaller world such as the ancients knew."

He remarks that the present depression differs from most others in that it is world wide, but notes that many of the problems are the same. As an example he tells of a debtor city of ancient times asking its creditor city to remit their debt on account of financial conditions.

The creditor state replied that its own finances were in a serious condition but that concessions would be made if the debtor city behaved itself and kept the peace. Commenting on this Professor Flickinger writes, "This sounds strangely like the American contention that Europe should reduce its armaments and so be enabled to pay its debts."

Professor Franklin H. Potter of the classical languages department is a contributor of one of the book reviews of the issues, discussing "A Cretomathy of Vulgar Latin," written by Henri F. Muller and Pauline Taylor.

Blames "Political Enemies"
CEDAR RAPIDS (AP)—Dan Kruidenier, commissioner of public safety, blamed "disgruntled members of the police force" and "political enemies" for a petition presented to Attorney General Ed O'Connor asking him to investigate Kruidenier's conduct in office. The commissioner said he would be glad to aid in any investigation.

BOOK REVIEWS

Amama Interpreter

Is, by Bertha M. H. Shambaugh. Iowa City: State Historical Society of Iowa, 1933. Reviewed by FRANK LUTHER MOTT.

At the outset it must be said that this is a remarkable book. Never has an institution had a more sympathetic and adequate historian and commentator than the Community of True Inspiration has found in Mrs. Shambaugh. An outsider, with good backgrounds in the study of other communistic experiments and with an objective view impossible to a member of the Amama society, Mrs. Shambaugh has studied this important Iowa phenomenon intimately over a long term of years. She has come to know it better than anyone else—better than the elders themselves in many respects—and she has come to love its quietism, its quaint old-world setting, its ideals, and the teachings of its Werkzeuge.

Used-to-Be

Authoress Bertha M. H. Shambaugh in costume of old Amama.

This conjunction of historian and institution is very fortunate for both Amama and the general reader. Too many social commentators in these days display a superficial cynicism in dealing with phenomena which seem strange to their crass modernism. After all, it is possible to interpret an undertaking to which many lives have contributed really noble elements through a long term of years without bringing to the task an understanding attitude? I doubt if it is. It is not that Mrs. Shambaugh is uncritical; she sees the weaknesses of the Colony and insists on them, not shrilly, but gently, as is her wont.

Poetic Lives Poetically Interpreted
Another thing that makes this a remarkable work is the lyric thread that runs through it. This would be unsuitable doubtless in a historical study of other materials; but here we have the story of mystics, guided in high empire by Werkzeuge who are the vessels of divine inspiration. These men and women were working the actual subject matter of poetry into social and economic life; their very absurdities are the absurdities of poetry. This is the idea which Mrs. Shambaugh has caught with her admirable sensitiveness, and worked out in her book. She has caught it even in her prose style, which often has a kind of quiet beauty that suits her materials perfectly.

The Challenge of Europe

The Challenge of Europe by Sherwood Eddy, Farrar and Rinehart, $2.50. Reviewed by DONALD J. PRYOR
France is the Big Bertha of Europe, loaded and aimed. Poland is the trigger finger, nervous. The Polish Corridor is the trigger. And Germany is the writhing target. This is the stage set for another of many possible wars. Thus does the safety and peace of the world rest upon the doubtful steadiness of a trigger finger. When Norman Angell read "The Challenge of Europe" he must have numbed "I told you so." For here Sherwood Eddy draws a graphic, though disjointed, picture of a Europe driving itself toward seemingly inevitable war by a mad pursuit of the policies so convincingly discredited 25 years ago in "The Great Illusion."

man front, and maintains the status quo. Italy, with the iron bit of Duce in her mouth and with an abiding fear of France in her heart, strains to regain a flaming nationalism that will out-shine the Caesars.

Russia, intent upon her Five Year Plans, seeks peace at nearly any price and concludes pacts of non-aggression which in the end may fan the flame of war.

England, anxious for peace and trade, blunders awkwardly in her peace-making struggles under staggering economic burdens.

But to America, the richest nation in the world, they all present a serious challenge. For all their nationalism, the nations of Europe have progressed immeasurably farther toward social and economic justice than the United States.

Unemployment and bank failures are comparatively non-existent. Slums are being swiftly eradicated; even in Soviet Russia plans are drawn for workers' housing.

America must sooner or later tear down her concepts of blind individualism and follow in the path of Europe.

"The question is: Will this advance be resisted by reactionary force or retarded until Communism becomes inevitable? Socialization without violence is possible only if it comes in time. It is a question of socialization without delay by parliamentary means, or socialization by revolution. This is the challenge of Europe."

Character Sketch

The Forbidden Tree, by Elizabeth Moorhead, Bobbs-Merrill, 1933, $2. Reviewed by EDMUND J. LINEHAN.

"The Forbidden Tree" is the story of one Charles Maynard, an instructor in a middle-western university, who cherishes high ideals and sensible ambitions for a life of scholarship. The inevitable shackles of flesh, however, retain a considerable grip on him; further, he discovers that he is keenly interested in the acquisition of easy money via the stock market.

By the time these phases in his nature have been suppressed, his spirit is pretty well shaken. It is still able, though, to hold before his bedouled eyes the lamp of his old ambition, and we leave him with reasonable assurance that he will do its bidding.

It is an excellent character study of a young man and his fancy. It indicates the hand of a serious author, sincere in her purpose. The theme is interesting, the plot nicely developed, the tone admirably restrained. Weaknesses may be pointed out in the dialogue and in the language employed in some descriptive passages. In other places spontaneity seems to be lacking. But these are minor faults, overbalanced by the good points.

"The Forbidden Tree" may be honestly recommended.

Commencement May Mean Just Five More Days of Degree Presentations. But It's Work to Professor Higbee

Commencement to many collegians may mean just five days of degree presentations, reunions, and banquets, but to Prof. Frederic G. Higbee, commencement week director, it marks the culmination of a continuous stream of preparation year in and out—endless.

Few people realize, he said in an interview yesterday, that even as the last scholar is receiving his degree, plans are going forward for the next year's commencement program.

"We have to check over all the events and see to what extent they worked out satisfactorily, and if and how they can be improved. During the summer we work out a program to follow for the coming year," he said.

From the first of April until after commencement practically all the work of the alumni office, which Professor Higbee directs, is devoted to commencement planning.

When Professor Higbee took over the directing of commencement in 1926 there were fewer events, fewer candidates for degrees, and it soon became evident that a system would have to be worked out so that details would be looked after properly. Such a system is now in operation.

Including complete plans and instructions for each of the commencement events, the professor and his staff each year work out a mimeographed 40-page guide book, which is distributed to committee heads and others.

"Our greatest difficulty," he said, "is to get seniors and faculty members to realize that all these events have to be planned in advance to get the necessary preliminaries settled."

"Of instance, few realize that at last June's commencement alone there were 32 printing orders to be planned in advance. These were for programs, tickets, instructions, and so on."

Great Amount of Planning
One of the most unwieldy events, and the one requiring the greatest amount of planning is the academic procession. Since no rehearsal is held, details must be worked out so well that no rehearsal is needed to smoothly accomplish the awarding individually of degrees to the thousand or more candidates.

Many minor questions come to mind, he said. Who will be the marshals, what will they do, when? Who will distribute programs? When will the graduates sit, stand, march? And then there is the ever-present danger of rain.

This year the commencement exercises will be held in the field house, this being the only place large enough to receive the thousand and more candidates, the hundreds of their parents and friends, and the 4,200 potential alumni due to return for reunions. At present the number of chairs owned by the university is not enough to seat this group.

Monday, May 1st is our BIRTHDAY

On May 1st, 1876 Emil L. Boerner opened the doors of Boerner's Pharmacy to the public. During the 57 years that have followed this store has enjoyed the patronage of a large number of discriminating customers—people who have preferred the best in drugs and prescription service, realizing that when it comes to medicine their health is at stake.

During these 57 years we have developed more than fifty of our own preparations which have won the favor of hundreds of Iowa City people and many away from here.

In appreciation of the patronage afforded us by so many and as an introduction to those who are not familiar with our products we are making a little BIRTHDAY GIFT of a liberal trial-size bottle of Boerner's Vanilla Flavoring Extract to each lady customer during this week.

This is not merely good, pure Bourbon Vanilla. It is a perfect blend of the finest Bourbon and finest Mexican beans and is what we consider the finest Vanilla Extract made.

Boerner's has a delicacy of flavor not found in most extracts and it does not bake out. Incidentally, it costs no more than many inferior brands.

If the trial bottle does not convince you, we have nothing more to say.

Tribute to a Mother

THE DINNER at Iowa Union Friday night which commemorated the founding of the Iowa Child Welfare Research station was above all else a tribute to the memory of an Iowa mother, Mrs. Cora Bussey Hillis.

The foundation of the research station 16 years ago was the realization of a dream for which Mrs. Hillis labored unceasingly and often alone for many years.

She was among the first to realize that scientific knowledge was as essential in the raising of children as in the raising of pigs and sheep. She saw millions being spent in the study of cattle and corn, while the business of raising children was left to guess-work.

She did something about it. For 16 years she gave her time and ability to the mobilization of women and educators in the cause of her dream until the legislature approved the establishment of the research station, April 21, 1917.

Under the guidance of the late Prof. Bird T. Baldwin and Prof. George D. Stoddard the station has won international eminence as the pioneer in the field of child research. Enrollment has increased from 14 in 1917 to 142 last year.

The far reaching effect of the work conducted by the institution cannot be reckoned. It will pay untold dividends during countless years in better bodies and better minds.

And it all will be a monument to the memory of the woman who brought it into being. Mrs. Hillis was killed Aug. 12, 1924, in an automobile accident at St. Cloud, Minn. But her dream is still living fruitfully.

Stamp Money

THE FIRST ISSUE of stamp money will go into circulation in Iowa City this week with the threefold objective of providing work for the unemployed, of stimulating trade, and of achieving definite civic improvements.

That the objectives of the plan are worthy cannot be questioned. The unemployment problem in Iowa City, though not as acute as in many less fortunate cities, has not been solved by ordinary means.

Commendable work has been done by the Social Service league in providing sustenance to dozens of families, and the American Legion, through its unemployment bureau, has done much good in giving limited employment to a small number of men. But the funds of the Community Chest, which support the work of the legion group and partly of the Social Service league, are wholly inadequate.

Self-redeeming scrip, enthusiastically supported by the community, will make it possible to employ a large proportion of the unemployed men on projects for the good of the entire city.

The first task of the scrip-hired men will probably be the improvement of the airport acreage east of the highway along the river. It has been the purpose of the city for many years to transform this sordid waste into an attractive and useful park. Now is the time to do it.

But that is not the only place where the money can be spent to advantage. The river front both north and south of town can be beautified with little cost, streets can be cleaned, trees can be planted effectively along many avenues, and the highways leading into Iowa City can all be greatly beautified.

All this and more can be done. The only requirement is that all Iowa City grasp the worthiness of the project and willingly submit to the minor inconvenience of the two per cent sales tax.

When offered a stamp money bill, accept it gladly! And when you have it, spend it immediately!

Captain—Not Dictator

SECRETARY Henry A. Wallace of the federal agriculture department is not a dictator for agriculture under the provision of the task assigned him by the emergency farm bill.

He feels, on the other hand, that his job is aiding the farmer toward getting a larger proportion of the national income; under flexible authority delegated to him in the new bill he can work out any one of several lines toward a program which will accomplish his purpose.

Looking after the interests of the farmer, he must also safeguard the consumer, and see that industry suffers no handicap.

Rather like a ship's captain than a dictator, Wallace knows where he is to go, and has authority of guidance rather than compulsion; under the same simile, his course will necessarily be formed as he goes along, making allowances for changing conditions and experience.

Suggested as one portion of a program to assure a better return for agricultural investment is a processing tax on pork; the plan might be worked out by placing a nominal processing tax on slaughter of hogs, with an accompanying agreement between packer and farmer; the packer to pay the processing tax, if the farmer will market his animals at lighter weights than have been common.

No policy has yet been worked out by the secretary, and none will be until he has time to consult with representatives of producers, packers, and distributors of pork and pork products.

There seems to be little hope that production plans will be altered this year; there may be a reduction in acreages, corn acreage reduction being possible by collection of a nominal tax.

The course for farm aid will be sketched soon; there ought to be confidence in it, and in the secretary, as it gets into action. It is obvious that his power is not dictatorial; elements over which no human being has control preclude that. Weather, economics, trade, will not be subject to dictation.

Much confidence has already come through the apparent grasp of knowledge of the Iowa secretary in regard to the farm problem, and his own confidence that something can be done about it.

TODAY'S TOPICS

BY FRANK JAFFE

SUNDAY IS AS GOOD A time as any to stop and take a good look and a listen at what has happened during the week just passed. It is a good habit to get into because in these times there is so much happening during each week that if you let them pile up you'll never get to the bottom. The following recapitulation covers the principal events:

MONDAY—President Roosevelt and Premier MacDonald, after considering the "world price level, central bank policies, monetary standards, exchange restrictions, improvement in the status of silver," decide to reserve their agreements for the world monetary and economic conference.

At Paris, the French cabinet, on the eve of the meeting between Roosevelt and former Premier Herriot, declares that it is opposed to devaluing the franc until the U. S. and Great Britain have moved for stabilization.

TUESDAY—Roosevelt, MacDonald, Herriot agree on June 12 as the opening date for the London conference on world economic problems.

The American and British executives report a "clear understanding" with regard to Great Britain's war debt to the U. S.

Republicans and Democrats take sides on the Roosevelt inflation amendment to the farm relief bill, the former declaring it "an inevitable shock to confidence," and the latter "a conservative measure with no wild inflation in it."

Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain, at London, submits the government's 1933-34 budget to parliament, omitting all reference to war debts.

The U. S. house of representatives passes, 306 to 91, the administration's Muscle Shoals-Tennessee valley development bill, and sends it to the senate.

WEDNESDAY—A report from the White House declares that the president is about to send to congress a resolution on war debts asking authority to grant a moratorium on war debt payments until after the London economic conference.

The French government, at Paris, moves toward a three-way financial agreement between the U. S., Great Britain, and France, by which France will pay the U. S. its defaulted debt instalment of 19 million, and the portion of the British equalization fund which is in francs will be loaned to the French treasury.

Norman H. Davis, U. S. special delegate to the Geneva arms conference, tells the parley that the U. S. is considering entering into a consultative pact, depending on the measure of success achieved at Geneva.

THURSDAY—A mob of farmers at Le Mars, Iowa, abducts a judge, mistreats him, threatens lynching, and leaves him half-conscious in a roadway. They fail to force him to agree not to sign further foreclosure actions.

The dispute in the senate over the resolution to add payment of the soldiers' bonus to the farm bill delays passage of the measure. The senate approves the amendment giving the president authority to devalue the gold content of the dollar by as much as 50 per cent, and further empowers the president to accept $200,000,000 in war debt payments in silver.

The nine Negro defendants in the Scottsboro trial in jail at Birmingham, Ala., mutiny in protest to mistreatment at the hands of prison guards.

Roosevelt and Herriot end their discussions with indications of agreement on a tariff truce and the principles of disarmament and security, at the same time postponing any effort to arrive at a final understanding on war debts.

FRIDAY—The senate passes, 64-20, the administration farm relief bill, already passed by the house but in vastly different form. It allows President Roosevelt to inflate credit and currency, gives Secretary Wallace authority to raise farm prices, includes free and unlimited coinage of silver at the president's discretion.

Martial law in two Iowa counties is the aftermath of riots at Le Mars and other points where foreclosure sales are attempted. Governor Herring orders out troops to quell the rioters.

The house of representatives approves, 383 to 4, the administration's $2,300,000,000 home mortgage refinancing bill.

SATURDAY—(Please turn to page 1).

FILM SCANDAL

SCREEN COMMENT

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—A new type of comedian is making himself felt on the screen. He is Herbert Mundin, who played the serio-comic servant to Clive Brook in "Cavalcade."

English actor Mundin has been assigned two more important roles by Fox. He will do the role once intended for Will Rogers in "From Arizona to Broadway" and another featured part in "The Devil in Love."

Comedian Rogers is supposed to have turned down his chance to do "From Arizona to Broadway" when he learned it was not based on his life story. In it, you'll recall, are Warner Baxter, Joan Bennett and James Dunn.

Mundin's second assignment, "The Devil in Love," has for its romantic pair Warner Baxter and Miriam Jordan.

The cockney humor of Herbert Mundin has registered pleasantly with the fans in a lucky series of films. In addition to these films, you will see him in "It's Great to Be Alive," now shooting.

They are laughing still down at Palm Springs over the amazing result of a doctor's prescription. One of our continental directors, famous for sophistication, asked the doctor down there to do something about his gripe. The medico prescribed a hot bath, hot lemonade, plenty of blankets and a good sleep with the windows closed to sweat out the fever.

The patient added three fingers to the hot lemonade for comfort, lit his usual cigar and relaxed. Feeling sleepy, he tossed the cigar into the fireplace and dropped off to wait for the big perspiration.

It came, but not as prescribed. His cigar ignited a pile of kintling, the kintling melted the gadget on the ceiling fire-sprinklers and he woke in a heavy shower.

Professor Righter Explains New Music Rating Methods

Plan to See Use at State High School Festival This Week

The group rating plan of judging music contests, which will be employed here for the first time in the state music festival next week, was yesterday explained by its originator, Prof. Charles B. Righter.

Replacing the old system whereby contestants were ranked according to relation with their competitors, Professor Righter's plan puts the participants in each event into four groups according to their merit. Thus each contestant vies for a place in a group rather than to eliminate some other competitor. The rating is absolute rather than relative.

Former System
Until the adoption of the Iowa group rating plan, judging systems depended upon the use of a single judge or a conference of judges. The Iowa plan permits of independent decisions by each of three judges. Their composite rating of a contestant puts him into one of four groups: superior, excellent, good, or average or below.

"Thus," Professor Righter explained, "in a particularly good event several contestants may be rated superior; in another, a majority may be rated only good, or average."

"Incentive Changed"
The incentive of the contest is changed under this plan," he continued. "The students pace each other on the road to excellence. Under the former system the principal object of each contestant was to defeat a rival."

The Iowa plan has been adopted this year by Nebraska, Illinois, and Indiana, as well as by the national band and orchestra contests. It is admittedly still in its experimental stage, but most contestants and supervisors of music consider it an improvement over the old ranking plan.

Students Will Try Tentative Radio Series

Plan Special Blackhawk Broadcast Over WSUI

University students from Blackhawk county will be featured in a half-hour program over station WSUI at 7:30 p.m. May 10. This Blackhawk county program, built from university talent from that county, has been worked out by students in the radio broadcasting class under the direction of Prof. H. C. Harshbarger, with the cooperation of several departments of the university.

A talent survey of the county was conducted as the first step in organizing the program. Through the cooperation of the directors and heads of the various schools and departments in the university, who indicated the talents of students of their acquaintance, about 15 students, outstanding in scholarship and activities, were selected to make up the program's personnel.

Jessup to Talk
President Walter A. Jessup will give a brief talk to Blackhawk county parents, alumni, and friends of the university.

The university band under the direction of Dr. O. E. Van Doren, will give a collegiate tone as it introduces some of the speakers with Iowa songs.

If the project proves successful, a similar plan will be followed next year in selecting talent from students of a particular district, building a program about them, and dedicating the program to that district.

Selections
Among the 82 Blackhawk county students attending the university the following have been selected to present the program: Tom Moore, A3 of Waterloo, captain of next year's football team; Ray Latham, A1 of Cedar Falls, freshman track man; Lorraine Gibson, A3 of Waterloo, dramatic art student; Tom Haldiman, of Dunkerton, basketball player; Dorothy Ellsworth, N1 of Waterloo, pianist; Craig Ellyson, M4 of Waterloo, vocal soloist; Zoe Harmon Wright, children's hospital librarian; Dale Morgan, G of Waterloo; Neil L. Maurer, J4 of Dunkerton; Theodore Paige, G of La Porte City; Arvilo Simonsen, A3 of Hudson; John Bennisson, of Cedar Falls; Lawrence H. Phillips, A1 of Jessup, and Will Rogers, A1 of Dunkerton.

Grain Prices Shoot Higher With Buying

CHICAGO, April 29 (AP)—Wild-fire speculative buying swept wheat 6 1/4 cents a bushel higher today, with all other grains whirling upward on account of decisive measures for inflation.

Although senate passage of the Roosevelt farm bill, including extraordinary inflation clauses, had been regarded by most grain traders as a foregone conclusion, the event itself came with such unexpected swiftness that market results proved little short of those at critical juncture of the World War. Inflation was about the only subject of which notice was taken in the son were apprehended at the Sbleida farm after the sale of the property was concluded. The troops pushed the crowd out of the area, into which they had been admitted only after a thorough search for weapons, and the quartet was singled out of the crowd by state agents who had participated in yesterday's battle.

The Blume brothers are sons of Theodore Blume, a former state representative. They, together with Meyers, denied they had participated in the fight, although admitting their presence on the scene. North, however, was defiant. "You can kill me, but you can't scare me," he told the troopers. "I am glad you fellows are here though. It accomplishes our purpose. Maybe this will bring things to a head if it helps speed an investigation of present farm conditions."

Democratic leaders announced they would force a house vote on the inflation amendment Monday.

The bill gives the president power to lower the gold content of the dollar and this will be used soon in the establishment of a new world monetary standard. A fresh declaration of intention to take this step came today in a joint statement by Mr. Roosevelt and Prime Minister Bennett of Canada.

Rain Stops Iowa-Minnesota Game in Fifth With Score at 2-all

Relief Hurling Sa... has yet been worked out by the

SPORT
Potshots
by EUGENE THORNE

THERE is a thrill to watching a man break a record that can not be duplicated. A race may be close and hard-fought all the way, and the spectators may be standing on their feet cheering at the finish, but if it is then announced that a new record has been made, there is a hum of satisfaction that always arises. Track meets are doubly entertaining for that reason. The fans had the thrill of watching a few records fall at the Drake relays yesterday, but not nearly as many as was expected because of a wet track.

That is always the gamble with the outdoor meets. They come at the season of the year when showers are most likely. Sometimes the week end of the Drake carnival goes by with two perfect days, but it seems like about two out of three times, it rains either on that Friday or Saturday. Of course, both fans and athletes would prefer the rain on Friday, if rain it must. The fastest times are made in the finals, as a rule.

THERE is quite a bit of rivalry between the east and middle west on the track. The Penn relays and the Drake games fall on the same week end, and the followers of the thin-clads study the summaries of the two meets to see just how they compare. As a rule, the two meets are just about balance each other. One will have a few marks far better than the other. But there will be a few on the other side of the ledger to even things up. It was the same this year.

From the looks of things, the Iowa baseball team was showing a complete reversal of form at Minneapolis when rain broke up the game yesterday. The Hawkeyes have still time to win some ball games, and they may come through in good shape. Unable to get in their usual amount of spring training, they started the season considerably under their usual form. Errors at critical moments have proven costly. But we are still backing Ott Vogel to bring his club through to win some good ball games.

Metcalfe Tops Off 1933 Drake Relay Carnival With Two Sparkling Performances

of Indiana repeated his triumph in the hammer throw, Metcalfe captured his second straight broad jumping championship with a leap of 24 feet 3 inches, while White of Kansas State Teachers of Pittsburg was the title winner for the second consecutive year in the discus throw.

When the meet opened a drizzling rain was falling and it continued at intervals throughout the afternoon. As a result of the dreary day, the attendance was cut down to 6,000. The spectators attired themselves in raincoats and braved the drizzle to cheer their athletic heroes on to victory.

New records were established in four major events and in three high school relay races.
Noble Biddinger of Indiana, champion hammer thrower of the Big Ten, smashed the Drake record for this event by heaving the weight 161 feet, 4.9 inches. This eclipsed by nearly four feet the previous record of 157 feet 7 inches hung up by Ketz of Michigan in 1929.

Three records were smashed in the major relays, with the two Kansas State Teachers college teams, one from Pittsburg and the other from Emporia, providing the big thrill by finishing in a dead heat in the two-mile college relay.

Illinois' speedy 440-yard relay team of Carroll, Christianson, Kennicott and Hellmich, clipped a tenth of a second off the record of 41.7 hung up by the Illini quartet of 1930.

Abilene Christian college of Abilene, Texas, accounted for the other major record in the sprint medley clipping off the distance in 3:29.8.

The three high school records were broken during the morning preliminaries before the track became soaked. Clinton high set new marks in the 440 and 880 yard relays while Greenville, Miss., high hung up a new mile record. Greenville, however, was beaten in the finals by Oak Park, Ill., and the same Chicago school knocked off Clinton in the quarter mile event.

U. High Loses Fast Dual to St. Ambrose

DAVENPORT, April 29 — University high lost its first dual meet in 16 starts this morning when the Blue and White went down to defeat before St. Ambrose in a close battle, 68 to 63. Although the Iowa Citizens were favorites to repeat last year's victory, the St. Ambrose veterans put up a great battle to nose out a win.

Phillips won the 50, 100, and 220 yard dashes, and the javelin throw, placed second in the broad jump, and took a third in the discus. His time of 30 in the 100 established a new school record.

Ed McCollister experienced hard luck in the 120 yard high hurdles when he knocked over three hurdles and was disqualified after taking first place. St. Ambrose got the first two places with Fuhrmeister third. McCollister later took second in the 220 lows.

Hawks Show New Spirit in Halted Game

Iowa Squad Leaves for Home After Rain Halts Contest
By RON TALLMAN
MINNEAPOLIS, April 29—Coming from behind in the first half of the fifth inning here today, the Iowa baseball team held the hard hitting Minnesota nine to a 2 to 2 tie when the game was called in the fifth inning due to the heavy downpour with the visitors still at bat.

The Hawks tied up the score on Ken Blackman's three bagger, Gordon Benn's perfect bunt and following squeeze play which tied up the score. Gene Ford, husky young sophomore, looked much better on the mound than his Gopher pitching opponent, Sheldo, who was beginning to weaken.

The Hawkeyes showed a complete reversal of form from yesterday's stampede, and the game was well played.

Bonds Stage Strong Climb

Move in Accordance With Steps in Congress

NEW YORK, April 29 (AP)—Corporation and foreign bonds, apparently sharing with stocks the stimulation of congressional developments, staged a vigorous recovery today with gains ranging from 1 to 4 or more points.
United States government securities refused to join the upward swing, as did various other "gilt edge" securities, but declines were generally limited to unimportant fractions.

Westinghouse, Union Pacific, Corn Products, General Electric, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, American Smelting, American Sugar, Sears Roebuck and National Biscuit rose 2 to more than 4. American Can held 5 1/2 points of its advance, while Allied Chemical's gain was 5 1/2. Utilities were less exuberant, though American Telephone got back to par for a rise of 4 1/2. American Tobacco "B" climbed 6 1/2. Ralls generally were up 1 to 3.
"Constructive" News
Foreign exchanges appreciated sharply in terms of the dollar, their early strength appeared to have an emphatic cue for other markets.

Wall street heard reports of renewed bear selling abroad after the recent covering.
Inflated primarily by inflation talk, stocks nevertheless had the advantage of "constructive" trade news. Much of this came from the steel and automobile industries which are enjoying larger operating schedules and, in the case of the former, better prices.

MARY FAITH by Beatrice Burton

SYNOPSIS
Mary Faith and Kimberley Farrell have been engaged for some time. Mary Faith, beautiful young orphan, gives up her position as secretary to Mark Nesbit when Kim sets their wedding date. His attitude changes brusquely when his mother objects. The latter treats Mary Faith coldly. Heartbroken, Mary Faith returns to her office and breaks the news to her co-workers. Mark, taken ill, has Mary Faith driven to his country home, daily, for two weeks. He tells her of his love for her. She halts him, saying she will never love anyone as she did Kim. While in a jewelry store with Mark, selecting a Christmas ring for his sister, Mary Faith meets Kim with a girl. Next morning, Kim calls at Mary Faith's boarding house. He assures her of his love and proposes immediate marriage. Mary Faith melts in his arms. Mary Faith tells Mark she is leaving to marry Kim. After a hasty marriage, Mary Faith and Kim drive to his aunt's house in a neighboring town. For two weeks they live their honeymoon in ecstasy. They return to town and find Kim's mother ill. Kim's aunt is present. Mary Faith is called a "Puritan" by Kim's friends, Claire and Jack Maldon, at a Sunday night party when she refuses to play cards or dance. Kim dances with Claire. Mary Faith renounces the Farrell apartment during Mrs. Farrell's absence.

CHAPTER XIX
When Kim came home the table would be set and an appetizing odor of broiling steak or other meat would come drifting out of the kitchen whenever the door swung open.
His house slippers would be standing on the floor beside his chair and the evening paper would be neatly folded on his little smoking table.
"I'm afraid you've married a very full sort of woman, Kim," Mary Faith told him one night when they were walking home from the movies. "I'm more interested in you and in taking care of your house than I am in anybody or anything else under the sun. I'm just a plain garden-variety housewife, I guess."
"Over the loveliest wife that a man ever had," Kim answered her, and he stopped in the darkness of Wilton Street to kiss her.
That was on Thursday. On Friday night the Maldons came over to spend the evening.
Mary Faith brought out a card table and the four of them played bridge, but not for money. At eleven o'clock Mary Faith went into the kitchen and came back with cheese sandwiches and coffee on a tray. She was very proud of her hand-embroidered table cover and the dainty, pink-sprigged china dishes.
"Did you have a good time, didn't we?" she asked Kim as the door closed upon Claire and Jack. "And we didn't have to gamble or drink to enjoy ourselves, either, did we?"
He looked at her and his eyes were full of disgust and anger. "What are you talking about?" he said. "You don't imagine they had a good time sitting around here without a thing to drink but coffee, do you?—We didn't even have a new dance record to pep things up. No, they had a rotten time; and if you had any sense about such things you'd know it."
On Sunday night Claire Maldon called Kim up.
"Mary Faith heard him answer the telephone when it rang. She heard him say, 'Wait a minute, Claire. I'll ask her.'"
And then he came into the sitting room, where she sat reading the woman's section of the Sunday paper.
"Claire wants us to go over there and play some poker," he said. "She says they have a crowd of people in the supper. . . . Let's go, Mary Faith. Everybody plays cards on Sunday; and we've done nothing but sit around this flat, dying of dry-rot, for a month or more."
Mary Faith looked up at him with troubled eyes.
"Kim, you and I never have played cards on Sunday," she answered. "Why should we start to do it now?—Besides, the Maldons play for money, and I wouldn't gamble even on a week-day. I don't want to go, Kim."
He stood staring into space for a minute or two. Then he shrugged his shoulders.
"Suit yourself," he said. "But I hope you won't mind if I go. I'd like to get out of this place for a couple of hours. After all, Sunday is the only day in the week that I have to myself. . . . I like to see people once in a while. You never ask anybody here."
"Anybody here?" he asked. "You hop into bed and I'll get you something hot to drink."
In the kitchen she heated some milk and filled a hot water bottle. When she came back into the bedroom he was sound asleep, and his mother was tucking an extra blanket around his shoulders. She looked at Mary Faith, and spoke to her in a whisper.
"His name's drinking," she said. "He's just like his father before him—too fond of a good time. How many times his father came home to me just like this! I got tired of it after a while and so I left him."
She started out of the room. "You'll get tired of it, too." She threw the words over her shoulder as she went.
Kim slept until eleven o'clock the next morning although Mary Faith went into his room three times and did her best to wake him up. When he finally did get up he showed no ill effects of the night before. His eyes were clear and his skin was fresh and ruddy.
He sang "I've Been Working on the Railroad" as he took his shower, and he ate his usual large breakfast, taking his own good time about it.
"Is it almost noon, Kim," Mary Faith said to him when he had finished and was opening the morning paper. "Don't you think I ought to call up the office and tell them that you're on your way? They'll be wondering where you are, won't they?"
Kim glanced at her over the top of the paper, his eyes narrowed. "What are you trying to do? Nag me out of the house?" he asked. "No, you don't have to call up the office and tell them anything. I'm still capable of running my own business even if I am married!"
Mary Faith did not answer him. She left him and went back into the bedroom and began to put it into order. . . . Kim was just like a spoiled child sometimes, she reflected later, when he was gone and she was washing his breakfast dishes.
For instance he was always sulky if anyone looked at the morning paper before he did. He didn't like to see it when it had been opened and "rumbled up," so he said.
Then there was the matter of the bathroom. He let it be clearly understood that he wanted to have the use of it at any time between half past seven and half past eight. And when he walked out of it, the walls and floor would be running with water because he always forgot to draw the shower curtain, and his pajamas would be lying in a corner along with the wad of wet bath towels that he had used.
But that sort of thing did not worry Mary Faith in the least. To pick up after Kim was part of her job as a good wife and she did it cheerfully.
Every Monday morning she and Mrs. Farrell did the washing, and every Tuesday Mary Faith did the ironing alone.
"I like to iron," she told her mother-in-law. "I like the nice warm smell of the iron and the way it leaves a nice smooth trail behind it as it goes—and besides, think of the money we're saving!"
Mrs. Farrell had been sending the bureau of criminal investigation, declared the recent riots, together with other disturbances in north-west Iowa during the last year, were the result of communism activity in the vicinity.

City Cleaner as Campaign Nears Finish

Amish Warns Against Neglected Fire Hazards

Iowa City is cleaner today but there's still much to be done, Fire Chief Herman Amish said yesterday after checking on the results of clean-up week.

More than 500 loads of rubbish were removed from houses and lots in Iowa City during the last week. The city hauled 150 loads and it was estimated that individuals removed about 350 truck loads from the city.

Play With Matches
Questionnaires filled in by 1,095 school children indicate that there is still much to be accomplished in the way of fire prevention. There are still 106 homes in the city that have rubbish piled either in basements or in their back yards. Four parents let their children play with matches and 172 families do not know the telephone number for fire—4141.

The one thing that was condemned most severely by Fire Chief Amish was the use of gasoline for the cleaning of clothes and the starting of fires with kerosene. Ninety-five families as indicated by the questionnaires clean clothes with gas in the house.

Carelessness Greatest Cause
Showing the danger of such carelessness Chief Amish pointed out that a number of persons equal to the population of Iowa City are burned to death each year. More than 65 per cent of the victims are women and children, killed by fires starting because of carelessness in homes and schools.

During the last two weeks the fire department has inspected 546 buildings, including business, apartments, fraternity, and sorority houses and gasoline stations. Electric wiring, rubbish, stove pipes, chimneys, ashes, and gasoline supplies were the most dangerous fire hazards according to Chief Amish who urges that everyone continue the good work and eliminate all fire hazards.

Children Pledge Cooperation
School children have pledged themselves to help eliminate all fire traps and places where fire could easily be started by reporting them to their parents and to the fire department.

"We have had very good cooperation from the public during the last week in eliminating fire hazards," said Chief Amish, "but I want to urge the citizens of Iowa City to continue that work and not forget that fires are just as serious two months from now. Carelessness is the biggest fire hazard."

Open Season for Fishing Will Get Start Tomorrow

The fishing season opens tomorrow!

River banks are drying off, the fish should be biting hungrily, and the state law says to go right ahead—with some restrictions of course.

Fishermen will again be angling for that big fellow of battleship proportions that always manages to get away, albia will be dusted off, and probably more than one angler will be stopping in at the fish market on his way home.

The season in the southern zone which includes Johnson, Cedar, and Iowa counties opens tomorrow on game fish with the exception of black bass, bluegill, and sunfish. Licenses can be obtained at the county recorder's office.

Lord Hope's Unlucky Diamond Goes Back on the Auction Block

Trail of Misfortune Left by Jinxed Gem, Now Offered for Sale by Mrs. Evalyn McLean, Led from Central Asia to America.

Mrs. Edward McLean and May Yohe

WASHINGTON, April 29—The announcement that Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean has placed the famous Hope diamond on the auction block in an endeavor to raise enough money to secure control of the Washington Post, now in receivership, recalls the legends that have grown around the magnificent blue gem, the chill glitter of which is said by superstitious persons to spread an aura of disaster about its possessor.

Death and misfortune are particularly believed to have marked the trail of the diamond since it was carried by a caravan out of central Asia in the seventeenth century. It first came into prominence when Louis XIV of France purchased it in 1669 as a sop for his neglected queen, Louis, at the time, was engaged with Madame Du Barry and the gift of the huge gem to his wife was in the nature of a consolation. It was then, say the superstitious, that the curse of the stone first asserted itself, for France was forced to sign the humiliating Peace of Paris, which deprived the empire of India and Canada.

After that the diamond vanished from human ken for almost two centuries before it suddenly reappeared in England. It came into the possession of Lord Francis Hope, who gave it to his American actress bride, May Yohe, for a wedding present. For a time Lady Hope dazzled her contemporaries of the British nobility with the gem, but the curse was still working. When last heard of the one-time beauty was a scrub woman, divorced by her noble husband, deserted by her friends and her beauty, her one asset, gone. She is believed to have died in Chicago.

After divorcing his wife, Lord Hope sold the gem to Habib Bey, an Oriental nobleman. But he did not long enjoy his magnificent possession. He was drowned, and the gem became the property of Prince Kantivski, who scoffed at the aura of evil said to emanate from it. But

Police Chief Bender Spends Spare Time by Molding Cement Into Objects

By Jane Kirk

In his office decorated with a case of shot guns, notices of men wanted or missing, and a motto reading, "Courtesy, Conduct, Appearance," Police Chief W. H. Bender talked about his hobby of working with cement between telephone calls and the coming and going of policemen and private citizens.

"I don't have much time to spend on my hobby with my new position," he remarked. "I did more with it when I worked in the engineering department."

"What do I make? Well, I've made a shrine, a lighthouse, a windmill, and then I make concrete benches, sun-dials, flagstones and stepping stones, urns, bird baths, toadstools, and turtles."

"There's almost no end to what you can do in cement work."

"Yes, I sell some of the things I make. Mostly the bird baths and urns. I did a big business in bird baths last spring."

The telephone rings. "Excuse me," he says, and then his voice snaps out officially, "Police station—Right!" A conversation with an attorney follows. Then he hangs up.

"Yes, I make more bird baths than anything else. I was going to get a mold to make frogs with, but I just haven't had time."

"No, I buy only a few molds ready-made. Most of them I make myself out of galvanized sheet iron. I also make some of my hand tools."

"I use two kinds of concrete coloring; one that has to be mixed with the cement, and the other that is painted on after the article is finished."

A policeman saunters in, sits down, and takes up a newspaper. "Yes, making the things is a good deal of work, but I like it. First the molds have to be rubbed inside with a paraffin oil so that the cement will slip out easily. Then I pour in the concrete and tamp it down well so that it fills in every corner of the mold and is packed smooth and hard. Whatever rein-

Chief Justice Signs Certiorari Writ for Shelby County Man

SILOUX CITY, April 29 (AP)—Chief Justice J. W. Kindig of the Iowa supreme court signed a writ of certiorari today on behalf of Clifford Potter, Harlan farmer, who had been cited for contempt of court by Judge E. W. Miller for failing to vacate a farm.

The writ is the outgrowth of foreclosure proceedings in Shelby county brought against Potter by W. Tobias, the mortgagor.

Judge Miller appointed F. H. Kruse receiver and Kruse rented the farm to B. Kilpatrick. Under Iowa's new debtor relief law, however, Potter claims the right to stay on the farm during the period of redemption. Justice Kindig ordered Judge Miller to certify a record in the case to the supreme court.
