Britain Proposes Partial Payment as Other Nations Urge U.S. to 'Show Hand'

World Parley Awaits Debts Agreements

Hull Causes Alarm by Absence at First Sessions

LONDON, June 13 (AP)—Great Britain has sent to Washington a proposal for settlement of the June 15 debt installment which it believes acceptable to President Roosevelt. Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, told the house of commons tonight, arousing hope that the issue which has hitherto disturbed the world economic conference would soon be amicably adjusted.

Full Statement

Declaring that a full statement would be submitted late tomorrow night after the expected favorable reply from President Roosevelt, Mr. Chamberlain said he was not in a position to disclose at present the terms of the proposals.

In Well Informed Quarters

It was asserted that the proposed basis of settlement was by paying 10 per cent, with the understanding insisted upon by President Roosevelt that this ratio should not constitute a precedent for a final settlement of the whole problem.

British Note

(A British note offering a partial payment on the $75,000,000 war debt installment due Thursday was submitted to the state department at Washington today. An informal proposal somewhat to the same effect on the part of Italy was also presented.)

There has been a lengthy exchange of views between the British government and the United States government.

Mr. Chamberlain told an acutely interested house, "and as a result the British ambassador at Washington today handed to the state department a note setting forth the British proposals concerning the June installment."

"We expect to receive the president's reply tomorrow."

"We have no reason to suppose that it will be other than satisfactory to us but as it has not yet reached us I am not in a position to state its terms."

Local Couple Live Happily in Sod House

A life which combines the elements of pioneer existence and those of more advanced civilization is lived by Alva J. Parcel, 57, and his wife, Florence, in a cave-hut just west of the old Iowa City hall park.

Humble Abode

In this humble abode, a room 15 by 20 feet with a 10-foot ceiling, Mr. and Mrs. Parcel have lived comfortably since last September. The heavy sod which forms the bulk of the walls, combined with the fact that the hut is set into the ground like a cave, kept winter winds from chilling the aging couple.

Sold Home

Mr. and Mrs. Parcel, residents of Iowa City for the last eight years and prior to that operators of a farm north of town, sold their home in east Iowa City last fall. Time dealt harshly with the elder Parcel. His finances were at low ebb. He was forced to improvise a method of providing warmth and shelter for his wife.

Employed in Market

Parcel is employed by W. A. Gay, meat market proprietor here. His wages buy the simple foods which Mrs. Parcel prepares on a tiny cook stove, also their only source of heat, in the sod house.

What others would believe a drab life, although Mrs. Parcel finds it altogether pleasant, has not killed her sense of beauty, which she expresses in her own way.

A flamboyant cup-doll lamp, for which there is no electrical attachment, sits on the worn dresser. Carefully tended flowers struggle with the clay in front of the hut and pictures are hung on the walls.

Mrs. Parcel was wearing a bright red and green Mexican sun hat as she did her washing yesterday.

Massachusetts Eleventh State to Favor Wets

BOSTON, June 13 (AP)—Massachusetts today joined the column of 10 states committed to repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

Delegates pledged to repeal won a smashing victory in the contest for seats in a constitutional convention to act on ratification of an amendment to repeal prohibition.

In each of the 15 congressional districts, from which three delegates were chosen, the wets rolled up huge majorities.

All but a few towns voted on the question of local license and in scores of small towns where in 1924 license was voted down, the vote today was in favor of it.

With slightly less than half of the precincts in the state tabulated, exclusive of the Boston vote which was expected to be overwhelming, the repeal forces had a combined district high vote which gave them a 4 to 1 lead.

There was no state-wide vote.

London Dispatches

While London dispatches strongly indicated the British had decided to propose a 10 per cent payment, a messenger from the embassy delivered the British note to the state department.

Acceptance

Acceptance of the British and Italian offers was contingent upon the conditions attached to them. President Roosevelt, insisting that the debtor nations pay and mindful that congress is still in session, proceeded with the utmost caution.

Baker Tells of Money Deals

NEW YORK, June 13 (AP)—Hugh B. Baker, former president of the National City company, said today that like Charles E. Followed in Steps of Mitchell in Tax Returns

'I Won't Tell You' Listed in Early House Directory

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—"Washington, George, 190, High Street" has its alphabetical place in one of Philadelphia's earliest directories, but "Anne, gentlewoman, Ann street" is under "A" because the publisher did not know her surname.

First President
America's first president was honored by having his name printed in capital letters, a distinction not given other notables of his day. The directory was published in 1797.

Philadelphia's first directory, printed in 1785, rarely has been surpassed for originality.

Individuals who refused to give their names to canvassers found their exact remarks preceding their addresses. In the "I" section "I won't tell you" appears three times, together with "I won't have it numbered," "I won't tell it" and "I won't tell."

"What You Please"
"What you please" appears twice near the end of the book. One householder apparently refused to say anything, for under "C" is listed "Cross Woman, 93, South Street."

Captain John McPherson, who made a fortune as a privateer but lost an arm in one of his sea battles, was the editor. Houses not being numbered, he devised his own system to facilitate finding residences, but it is beyond comprehension.

Academic Gown Has Six Inch Hem—To Serve Mother, Son

NEW YORK, June 13 (AP)—There's a six inch hem in the academic gown Mrs. Esther Chertoff, mother of three children, will wear tomorrow when she receives her B.A. degree at Hunter college's commencement.

She had it made that way so her 18 year old son, Gerhson, a sophomore at City college, can wear it two Junes hence.

Next fall, Mrs. Chertoff will start working for her master of arts degree and after that she hopes for a Ph.D.

"Ever since I was four," she said today, "I wanted to get a degree from college. My father thought higher education—and that included high school—was for boys only. So I didn't have the opportunity to start until after I was married."

Her husband, Rabbi Paul Chertoff, is a professor at the Jewish Theological seminary.

Heart Beats "Brought to Life" After Heart Had Failed.

MILWAUKEE, June 13 (AP)—A strange story of a man literally "rained from the sea" and kept alive 4 hours after his heart had failed a that he might tell his son a confidential matter of great importance was told today at the American Medical association meeting.

He was brought back to life and his heart kept beating artificially by a machine known as the "artificial pacemaker" developed last year for re-starting heart beats in persons whose hearts had been stopped by shock or other means.

The man who was kept alive 4 hours by the pacemaker knew he was dying and urged his doctors to keep him alive until arrival of his son, who had been summoned from San Francisco, and was hurrying to New York. A few minutes afterward he died, said Dr. E. Fritze of Beth David hospital, New York, who told the story. The pacemaker, which works by a needle inserted into the right auricle of the heart through the chest, was brought into play and he was brought back to life.

The pacemaker was kept in operation for two days, until the son arrived, and the sick man was enabled to give him the information he desired. Then the heart, which had been already beyond recovery, no longer could be kept operating even by the pacemaker, and the man died.

Arson Case of Hotel Owner in Omaha to Go to Jury Thursday

OMAHA, Neb., June 13 (AP)—The case of Harry Weiner, operator of the Millard hotel, destroyed by fire on Feb. 8 with a death toll of seven firemen, is expected to go to the jury on Thursday, attorneys said tonight after Weiner had occupied the stand most of the day in district court here.

Weiner, charged with arson and murder through arson, was under cross examination by the state today. The state failed to shake his story.

Yesterday Weiner, answering direct questions by his counsel, denied setting fire to the hotel or causing any one else to do so. Today three defense witnesses took the stand to substantiate his story that on the night of the fire he went home to change into dry clothes about an hour after the fire was discovered and did not return until more than two hours later.

Expect Large Attendance at Church School

Ten Day Instruction to Begin Here Next Week

A large enrollment is expected at the Ten Day Daily Vacation Church school from June 19 to 30, according to its sponsors, because of the rich curriculum and the supervision by trained workers.

Julia Barber, director of the school, has an M. A. in religious education from Chicago university and has been director of student activities in the Congregational church for the last five months. Mrs. Mildred I. Morgan will assist Miss Barber.

Mrs. Hutton
Mrs. Walter Hutton of Des Moines will be here from June 25 to 30 to assist with the teaching of the 'teen age group. According to the Council of Religious Education, "the coming of Mrs. Hutton is considered a big event for the young church leaders of Iowa City."

"Mrs. Hutton is experienced in teaching worship through some of its best forms—music, art, symbolism, literature, and drama. Those acquainted with Mrs. Hutton say she inspires one with a confidence and joy in living. She is a tireless worker well qualified to lead youth. She is also in close touch with advanced religious educational movements as wife of the late secretary of the International Council of Religious Education."

Credit Given
Credit will be given by the International Council for work completed in Mrs. Hutton's course. There will be no tuition for the church school. Kathryn Letts of Iowa City will teach the 'teen age group the second week giving a course in the dramatics of worship.

BRITAIN Offers Partial Payment

can debt issue was regarded in American delegation quarters tonight as of extreme importance for the success of the conference and American contribution to it.

Cordell Hull, secretary of state, who excited astonishment and anxiety by failing to appear at the plenary session today where he was scheduled to be the first speaker, expected tonight to make his opening declaration of American policy to the conference tomorrow. It was believed that his central subject will be tariff reduction.

European Blocs

The apparent formation of European blocs designed to force the United States to settle the war debts problem immediately and to stabilize the dollar price before other questions were taken up by the conference caused some concern among the American delegates.

France was seen as the leader of the group which desires to induce the United States to hasten currency stabilization, while Great Britain appeared to be principally interested in bringing about an adjustment of the debt matter.

"Going Home"

Allusions to "going home" as a result of the unexpected nature of the opening speeches were heard around American headquarters. Members of some other national groups feared that the absence of Secretary Hull and most of his colleagues from the morning and afternoon discussions might have an unhappy significance.

It was made clear by American authorities, however, that there was no question of quitting the conference and that their empty chairs in the assembly were not intended as a warning gesture.

Cabinet Meets

Driven by the necessity for an immediate decision upon debt policy, the British cabinet convened in a special session at 9 o'clock this morning, the second emergency meeting of government leaders within 10 hours.

As in the case of the extraordinary session last midnight, ministers at the close of today's cabinet deliberations declined to reveal their results.

Secretary Hull

Secretary Hull, attempting at a meeting of the bureau of the economic conference, to obtain the post of chairman of the monetary commission for a member of his delegation, James M. Cox, was blocked by Premier Daladier of France and supporting groups.

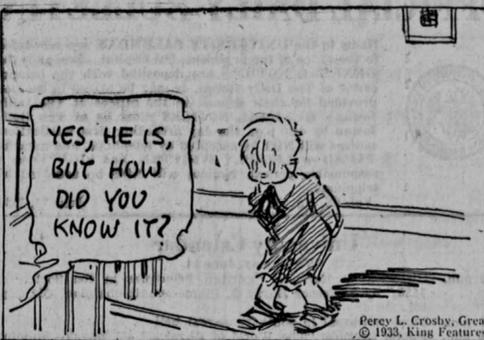

M. Daladier demanded that this post go to the representatives of a country which still maintains the gold standard—presumably France itself—and joined in urging the American secretary of state to accept the chairmanship of the economic commission, the other major post which will determine the course of the parity.

Declines Office

Mr. Hull declined the economic chairmanship for his delegation and the question of direction of the two committees was postponed until tomorrow.

The German demand for early solution of credit and financial problems, keenly distressing the government of the Reich, was brought before the world gathering say of Great Britain called upon Acting Secretary Phillips at the state department. He was understood to have presented an informal offer which was summed up later in the official note.

Soon afterward, the envoys from Belgium, owing $6,325,000 and Rumania, owing $1,000,000, visited the department for news of debt developments.

It was indicated that Italy has been waiting for Great Britain to act, with evidence that she would follow a course similar to that of the British government.

However, it was made clear that the terms of the two proposals differed at least with regard to the proportion of the installment due which they were offering to pay.

Congressman Still Seeks to Oust Pyle From Receivership

WASHINGTON, June 13 (AP)—Congressman A. C. Willford (D) of Iowa, continued his attempt to oust Receiver W. C. Pyle of the Commercial National and Pioneer National banks at Waterloo today with the assertion that "Pyle is a Republican and I want a Democrat on the job."

Willford refused to elucidate further any details of his ouster proceedings. It was learned, however, that he had forwarded to the comptroller of the currency a letter protesting Pyle's work. The letter was signed by an unidentified Waterloo resident, it was learned.

"I want Democrats in every appointive office in my district," Willford said. "All a man needs to be a Republican and I'm in favor of his removal. That goes for Pyle."

Propose Shift in Population

Doctor Says Country's People Need Better Medical Care

MILWAUKEE, June 13 (AP)—The doctors are so poorly distributed in the United States that it might be desirable to shift parts of the population to insure them good medical care, Dr. Dean Lewis of Baltimore said today in his presidential address before the American Medical association.

This would not be for the purpose of bringing the people to the doctors but to bring the doctors to people now inadequately served by making conditions for practices among them more desirable.

Dr. Lewis was installed as president, succeeding Dr. Edward H. Cary of Dallas, Tex., at the opening general meeting of the association.

The medical association's house of delegates, central group which governs economic and ethical policies of the organization, today took an emphatic stand against practice of medicine by corporations. The legislative committee was directed to urge state associations to strive for legislation forbidding corporations to enter the medical field.

The delegates approved a suggestion of the Indiana State Medical association, that medical schools devote some time to preparing students in "basic business procedures to conduct a medical practice successfully."

The last case is that of Electa Kennedy against Charles Bocek. Mrs. Kennedy accused the former police officer, Charles Bocek, of being the father of her daughter. The trial will not be open to the public as the code of Iowa says that it shall be the duty of the judge to exclude spectators in such proceedings unless the parties object.

U. S. in Conference

THE United States has taken another step in the modern day process of cooperation with foreign nations. An American delegation is sitting in for the first time at the International Labor conference of the League of Nations at Geneva.

Although the American delegation was appointed by the state department and sits with the other delegates, it can act only as official observers since the United States is not a member of the International Labor organization.

Forty-nine countries are represented at the conference, which is considering such subjects as the 40-hour week, unemployment, old age, widows and orphans insurance, and abolition of fee-charging employment agencies.

Chairman of the conference is Signor Giuseppe deMichelis, delegate of the Italian government, who has been active in promoting international acceptance of the 40-hour week. The American delegation includes Mary Anderson, director of the Women's Bureau of the department of labor; Edwin S. Smith, commissioner of labor and industries, Massachusetts; William H. Stead, Minnesota university; and Hugh Frayne, American Federation of Labor.

Recitation of these facts merely makes more obvious the truth that America's traditional aloofness from foreign nations has its roots in purely political soil. The League of Nations is for the most part the child of American genius and even today receives not inconsiderable support from American citizens. The United States is represented at all its important sessions. The World Court, too, has benefited by the talent of American judges. Yet in none of the important decisions of either the court or the league does America have a vote.

It is beginning to appear that the new administration has a more enlightened view of the modern world's interdependence. It is to be hoped that the political hurdle can be crossed.

Not Yet

SUGGESTION that a world coin is being discussed in international monetary circles as a possible means of stabilizing trade brings to mind several possibilities for greater sanity in world commerce.

It has been proposed, according to dispatches from Washington, that a brand new coin, or token, with a fixed weight of gold, be adopted as a basis for carrying on existing world trade. The currency could be issued by the Bank for International Settlements. Pegged to gold, it would serve to reduce the possibility of fluctuation which now exists between the dollar, pound, and other unpegged currencies.

Looking into the future, when the dollar and other currencies have returned to gold, the scheme provides that the new world coin would be redeemable in the other pegged currencies weight for weight, in gold.

The scheme sounds like a good one. It would be even better if all national currencies could be replaced by one world currency pegged on gold or silver or both. If this were possible the problem of trade advantages and disadvantages caused by constant fluctuations in currency would be forever solved. Commercial supremacy would then be dependent solely upon the genius and resources of each nation, as it should be.

Another very real problem that could conceivably be solved in the same manner is that of ocean shipping. This industry, subsidized and pampered by each individual nation, has overrun the seas with so many ships that it has nearly strangled itself. Reason would dictate the adoption of an international shipping code or the centralization under one international agency of all the world's shipping.

Neither of these suggestions, however, will be feasible until problems of disarmament can be settled with some degree of finality and until there is a general world recognition of the fact that nations have outgrown themselves as independent units.

Australia, strange as it may seem, is teaching its young people that money grows on trees. Under adult guidance, state school children of Victoria have set out 4,000 acres of saplings that will be worth $3,000,000 on maturity. Profits from the sale of bark and timber will be used to provide scholarships, libraries, radio, and sports materials.

GOOD MORNING

Walter B. Pitkin, professor of Journalism at Columbia university, recently expressed the opinion that most college graduates labor under the delusion that the diplomas they receive in June mark them as men and women who have completed the process of education. Most graduates, he believes, consequently close their minds to further learning and start a steady march to ultimate failure or mediocrity in their careers.

"The colleges themselves," he says, "are largely to blame for this attitude upon the part of their graduates, for not insisting on teaching and practice that a four year course is but the first installment in the life-long process of education."

"The value of college years would be increased tremendously if students left college impressed with the idea that they have learned how to study, and no more. As it is, graduation is a signal for students to throw away their books or sell them for a pittance to second-hand book dealers who look forward to June as a bonanza month for replenishing their stock at sacrifice prices.

"Having disposed of their books and attended commencement exercises the students then frame their diplomas with the fond hope and mistaken belief that life, in their own language, will be henceforth 'a bowl of cherries.' It would be more profitable if they sold their diplomas and kept their books."

There is undoubtedly a great deal of truth in all of that. The tendency is all too evident among college students to approach their studying as a job to be undertaken with determination, but one that should be gingerly dropped as soon as the assigned task is completed. But that is only half of the problem.

The most serious difficulty with modern collegians and collegiennes is that they are for the most part incapable of fitting their little pieces of knowledge into the whole of the pattern. This is the reason why a certain young man recently spent several months making an exhaustive study of the Tennessee Muscle Shoals project, and was unpleasantly surprised when someone suggested that the whole plan was strongly tinged with Socialism. Other examples could be mentioned, endlessly.

As vital as the matter of learning how to study might be, that in itself is useless unless one has learned how to think. And as necessary as it is to think, to think is dangerous unless one has a reasonably accurate perspective. There in, it seems to me, lies the most important mission of education.

Today, when the world is full of such profound changes, when the footing beneath society is shifting ceaselessly, when one can be absolutely sure of nothing but change, this mission is more important than ever before.

The day when it was sufficient for one to be simply an engineer or a lawyer or an economist or a surgeon is a day of the past. October, 1929, marked the end of the era when one could afford to lock himself in his own little cocoon and let the parade go by.

Now it is not sufficient to be a member of the parade. It is necessary to stand on a housetop and be able to see that this parade is only a passing show, that there have been others before and there are more to come.

Such a perspective does not come from a mere routine attendance at classes and a dismal cataloging of facts and figures. It is the joint product of two habits: the habit of inquisitiveness and the habit of interpretation. These must be acquired by the students themselves; they cannot be taught by the colleges.

BEHIND THE SCENES — IN HOLLYWOOD —

By HARRISON CARROLL
STUDIO GOSSIP FILM SCANDAL SCREEN COMMENT

HOLLYWOOD — Lovely Loretta Young can sail away to Europe now with no concern about the future. She put her name yesterday to a long term contract with Twentieth Century Productions, the Baryl Zanuck-Joseph M. Schenck combine that is elbowing itself into the movie spotlight.

Under her new contract, Loretta reports for work about Oct. 1. Her first picture will be "Blood Money," a Rowland Brown original which Zanuck bought only yesterday. It's all about the political racket.

With a picture yet to do at Fox, it will be Aug. 1 before Loretta can join her sister, Sally Blane, in London. Meanwhile, Sally is having a grand time. She writes of taking an apartment and of having it done over from purple to white corduroy. And she's driving around in a car with footman and chauffeur.

London, all the Hollywood people write back, is the new gay spot of Europe.

Perhaps it's all in fun but Eleanor Holm and Art Jarrett are seeing a lot of each other these days. The Junior Laemmle angle seems to pass. . . Ted Florio, who'll be bringing his band to a local film theater on the twenty-second, also will make a short for R-K-O during his stay in Los Angeles.

Physics, History Department Lectures Today Will Inaugurate Summer Series

Plum, Lapp to Speak Today at University

Public Invited to Hear Address by S.U.I. Faculty

Two addresses today, under the auspices of the physics department and the history department, will open a varied program of lectures scheduled for the summer session. Both lectures will be open to the general public.

The first lecture will initiate a series of historical conferences. Prof. Harry G. Plum of the history department will speak on the subject, "Puritan principles in the society of 1688," at 4:10 this afternoon in the senate chamber of Old Capitol.

Social Make-Up
Professor Plum will consider the social make-up in England during the latter part of the seventeenth century. His lecture will be one of a series of ten, to be given by members of the University of Iowa staff, and visiting lecturers.

Professor Plum was a speaker on the historical series at the summer session last year. He spoke on "Lenin, fanatic, revolutionary, and saviour of Russia."

Prof. C. J. Lapp of the physics department will give the opening lecture in a series on "This physical world," this evening at 7:30 in physics auditorium. His subject will be "The rise of the robot."

Experiments
Professor Lapp will discuss the fundamental experiments in connection with the development of power from electricity, steam, air, and water, and the application of this to the growth of modern industry.

The lectures on physics, to be given each Wednesday evening at the same time, will be limited to 50 minutes, and will be of general interest, rather than technical, an announcement from the physics department said.

Program
The complete program of physics lectures is as follows:

June 14—"The rise of the robot," by Professor Lapp.

June 21—"The theory of relativity," to be accompanied by motion pictures, in chemistry auditorium.

June 28—"Jiggles," an experimental lecture, by Professor Lapp.

July 5—"Smashing atoms," by Prof. John A. Eldridge of the physics department.

July 12—"We are discovering," by Prof. George W. Stewart, head of the physics department.

State College Employee Slain

Found Dead in Auto; Police Seeking Motive

AMES, June 13 (AP)—Fred M. Hollingsworth, 38, Iowa State college employe, was found slain in his automobile four miles east of here today.

Apparently Hollingsworth's assailant drove up from behind, forced the victim's car to stop with a shot that shattered the rear window glass and killed him through the open window of the door on the driver's side of the car.

Police tonight said they were working to determine a possible motive for the slaying, but declined to make any statement as to possible evidence they might have obtained.

Hollingsworth was a store room assistant in the chemistry department at the college. He also was adjutant of Story county post of Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Apparently he was slain late last night while returning from a meeting at Nevada.

The Standard Power of a Horse—When Watt and Boulton were making observations to aid them in the indication of the power of their steam engines, they found that the strong dray horses, employed by the London breweries, were able to work eight hours a day, lifting 22,000 pounds, 1 foot high per minute. To this quantity the two inventors arbitrarily added another half, or 11,000 pounds, creating the standard horsepower unit of 33,000 foot pounds a minute. Thus the actual power of Watt's horses was in truth two thirds of a horsepower. The record lifting power is held by a team of Iowa horses each of which proved capable of 13 horsepower in a minute.

Thrones Go Begging as Cupid Triumphs

SENORITA SAMPEDRO and PRINCE ALFONSO

LAUSANNE, Switzerland—While European royalty and ex-royalty is still gasping over the sensation aroused by the marriage of Prince Wilhelm of Prussia to his commoner sweetheart, Dorothea von Salviati, at Bonn, recently, the publication of a notice announcing that Prince Alfonso of the Asturias, son of ex-King Alfonso of Spain and heir-claimant to the Spanish throne, is soon to follow Prince Wilhelm's example makes it appear that royalty has gone democratic with a vengeance.

The notice, posted in the City hall here, informed all whom it may concern that Prince Alfonso intends to marry Senorita Elizarda Sampedro Y Robato, of Cuba, now resident in Lausanne, and that any objections to the union must be made in writing within 10 days. In the publication of what amounts to marriage banns, Prince Alfonso does not use his royal title, merely stating that he is a bachelor resident of Lausanne, born in Madrid in 1907.

Fiction-Like Romance
The wedding, which the prince says will take place soon, will climax a story book romance which began last year when he met the Cuban beauty in a sanitarium where he was undergoing treatment for hemophilia, the disease with which his family has suffered for many generations.

At the first the senorita and her mother protested against the match on the ground that it might cause difficulties for the prince. But the royal lover was insistent and was quoted as saying: "Let my brother Juan have the throne, I'd like to have a little happiness in my life."

Ex-King Displeased
Although Prince Alfonso has made no formal renunciation of his royal rights, court circles aver that such a declaration is unnecessary, as the prince's marriage to a commoner automatically voids his claim to the Spanish throne—if and when the monarchy is restored.

From Venice, where the prince's father, ex-king Alfonso, is visiting, came word from a spokesman of the former ruler that the king is not happy about the marriage and will not attend the wedding. What looked the exiled monarch more than the announcement of his heir's engagement to a commoner was the news that Prince Alfonso had applied to the Republican government of Spain for the necessary papers that will make him a "simple citizen." It is said.

Throne for a Wife
The marriage of Prince Wilhelm of Prussia, eldest son of the German crown prince and favorite candidate to pick up the sceptre dropped by his grandfather, the former Kaiser, met with similar opposition from his family. It was pointed out that it was an unheard of thing for a member of the house of Hohenzollern to unite in matrimony with a commoner. Furthermore, it was emphasized that Dorothea von Salviati was not even a German, her forebears having come from Italy to settle in Prussia.

But despite the displeasure of the ex-Kaiser, who forbade any member of the German royal family to attend the wedding, the young prince and his sweetheart were married at Bonn, the prince thereby renouncing all claim to the throne of Germany in event his family is ever restored to power.

Prince Alfonso probably will be married in Lausanne, and plans to make a permanent home there for his bride, who is one year his senior (the prince is 26). Senorita Sampedro Y Robato is a native of Sagua La Grande, Cuba, but has lived in Switzerland for many years.

Latest Trends in Physical Education to be Discussed

New trends in physical education will be presented and discussed by men and women from several mid-western states during the University of Iowa's annual conference June 29 and 30.

Announcement of the affair was made yesterday from the office of Prof. Edward H. Lauer, director of the physical education division.

Several speakers who are authorities on the subject will be engaged to deliver formal lectures and to lead round table discussions. The first appointee is Floyd Rowe, directing supervisor of the physical education department of Cleveland, Ohio, public schools.

Ruth Gallaher and Jacob A. Swisher of the society are now in Des Moines gathering material and confining data for the volume, a regular undertaking of the historical group, to be published in the Iowa Monograph series.

Lillian E. Spalla, a graduate of the University of Iowa, will conduct researches in Europe for the International Institute of Columbia university. Miss Spalla sailed recently, and will soon begin her work in Czechoslovakia and several other countries. one time, when police were troubled with juvenile criminals, many of the shacks were burned, but now they harbor few "bad boys" and are left under observation.

Water, when not associated with the boys, is invariably attractive to boys, young and old. Popular with Iowa youths is a sickly stream just east of Grant street. All summer they follow the leader on its banks, and dams, throw mud, and splash sand.

Adventurers
Every day during the summer, many adventurers will be found on a trail along the Iowa river bank near Park road. The trail starts about 200 yards northeast of the elementary school on N. Capitol street, and leads through the timber near the river to a steep rock cliff that provides a natural fortress for the "war." Secret paths and ivy underbrush add to the romance of the place.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin"
Close to the river is a small, rudely-constructed shelter called "Uncle Tom's cabin." But Uncle Tom does not live there. It is merely a retreat for boys.

To the east, lads sometimes assemble in a pasture at the end of Gilbert street, though the place isn't what it used to be. According to one of the boys living nearby, the neighborhood once could boast of the best shacks in town. Too many of the boys have grown up, however, and most of the shacks are deserted and are falling down.

While boys tear through the town, they, by custom, must be restrained. They play with their dolls on front porches, skip rope, and climb trees.

Girls' Play House
At 1123 E. College street is a real play house for girls of that neighborhood. It is a large structure of rough cardboard, and inside there is a room for a dozen children.

Outside, there is a balcony where the girls give "dramas." Costumes are gleaned from all old wardrobes in the district and hang on the walls in a disorderly fashion when not in use.

But, though usually they are "just AP," sometimes even the girls slip for a tramp in the woods or along Fowler.

There is something of Tom Sawyer and Becky Thatcher in every girl and every boy.

Des Moines Golfer Leads 16 Survivor

Takes 1st Round Match 7-6, One Under Par

DES MOINES, June 13 (AP)—Pounding out the 13 holes needed to win her match in one under par, Lucille Robinson of Des Moines led the 16 survivors into the second round of the women's trans-Mississippi golf tournament today.

Reaching the turn in 41, one over par, Miss Robinson conquered Mr. Elfred Beck of Tulsa, 6 and 5, scoring two birdies on the four holes needed on the incoming nine.

Moving into the second round were all the other favorites of the tournament, including Mrs. Charl Newbold of Wichita, the defending champion; the three Denver sharpshooters, Mrs. Jack Scott, Phyl Buchanan, and Adele Wells; Miss Leon Solomon of Memphis, the Tennessee state champion, and Miss Lillian Zech of Chicago.

Scott vs. Robinson
Tomorrow Mrs. Scott, who eliminated Mrs. Givin Chase of Des Moines, 3 and 2, will face Miss Robinson, while the defending champion will tackle Mrs. R. C. Coffey of Newton. Mrs. Newbold today disposed of Frances Darbyshire of Ottumwa, 7 and 6. Winners of the Robinson-Scott and Newbold-Coffey matches will oppose each other in the quarterfinals.

Scores today indicated that Miss Buchanan is a likely semi-final competitor against probably either the champion or Miss Robinson. The long driving Denver girl routed Mr. F. C. Byers of Cedar Rapids, 8 and 6, scoring a 43, three over par, for the first nine. Tomorrow she will oppose Mrs. Victor Shewbert, St. Joseph, Mo., city champion, now living in Des Moines. Mrs. Shewbert defeated Mrs. H. G. Liebhard of Des Moines, 2 and 1.

Bonella vs. Walter
The other upper bracket pair will bring together Mrs. J. A. Walter of Kansas City, a 3 and 1 winner over Mrs. J. W. Hubbell of Des Moines, and Mrs. D. A. Bonella of Ottumwa, who downed Mrs. C. McCubbin of Kansas City, 6 and 4.

The lower bracket semi-final prospects appeared to be Mrs. Robinson, who trimmed Mrs. R. L. Holz of Des Moines, 5 and 4, Miss Wells, a 4 and 3 winner over Kay Palmer of Des Moines.

Tomorrow Mrs. Solomon of Memphis, who eliminated Mrs. C. Whitmer, another Des Moines try, 4 and 3. The winner of the second round match will meet Mrs. Lillian Zech of Chicago, who won 4 and 2 from Mrs. R. Blaine of Omaha, or Mrs. Blaine of Evans of Des Moines two up.

Miss Wells Wins
Miss Wells will oppose Mrs. Bangh, blond Omaha girl who edged back Mrs. E. A. Taylor of Des Moines, 6 and 4. In the other lower bracket match, Mrs. D. W. Snyder of Kansas City, will oppose Mrs. Dean Stacy, tiny Oklahoma City player, who won 7 and 6 from Lindy Morton of Fairmont, Minn.

The first round matches played havoc with Des Moines' qualifying list of nine, only two of them surviving. Three of the four Denver qualifiers remained in the running as did three of the five Kansas City entrants. Both of the Omaha players who got by the qualifying test were successful in their opening matches.

Second Round Pairings Tomorrow:
Lucille Robinson (Des Moines) vs. Mrs. Jack Scott (Denver).

Mrs. Charles Newbold (Wichita) vs. Mrs. R. C. Coffey (Newton).

Mrs. D. A. Bonella (Ottumwa) vs. Mrs. J. A. Walter (Kansas City).

Mrs. Victor Shewbert (Des Moines) vs. Phyllis Buchanan (Denver).

Mrs. Leon Solomon (Memphis) vs. Mrs. H. H. Silverford (Kansas City).

Mrs. Lillian Zech (Chicago) vs. Mrs. Blaine Young (Omaha).

Adele Wells (Denver) vs. Mrs. C. R. Bangh (Omaha).

Mrs. D. W. Snyder (Kansas City) vs. Mrs. Dean Stacy (Oklahoma City).

Hawk Athletes in Exhibition Tonight
Five University of Iowa athletes, on their way to the national collegiate in Chicago tomorrow, will participate in exhibition events at Clinton, tonight. The exhibitions are in conjunction with a track meet being held there.

9th Inning Hit Cheats Wyatt of No-Hit Tilt

Sox Crack 3 St. Louis Hurlers for 14 Bingles

CHICAGO, June 13 (AP)—A clean single over second base by Ted Gulec after two were out in the ninth inning today cheated John Whitlow Wyatt, 24 year old righthander, out of a no-hit game, as the Chicago White Sox defeated St. Louis, 6 to 1.

Wyatt, who was obtained from Detroit recently in a straight trade which sent Vic Frasier to the Tigers, had yielded a run in the third, chiefly due to his own wildness. There was nothing like a hit until the Prowline third baseman, with the count one ball and one strike, laced one just too far away from Luke Appling to knock down, over second.

The White Sox, meanwhile, cracked Hank McDonald, Sam Gray and Roland Stiles for 14 hits.

The only run off Wyatt was scored on passes to Mervyn Shea and Muddy Ruel, who batted for McDonald, followed by Art Scharen's sacrifice and an infield out. McDonald was forced to retire due to recurrence of an injury to his side.

It was Wyatt's second straight victory since joining the Sox, who went back into third place in the American league when Washington defeated Philadelphia.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
St. Louis 001 000 000—1 1 1
Chicago 014 000 10—6 14 0

Batteries: McDonald, Gray, Stiles and Shea; Wyatt and Grube.

Senators Down A's to Gain on Yanks
WASHINGTON, June 13 (AP)—Some prodigious ball pounding by a trio of Nationals against a pair of Philadelphia pitchers today gave Washington its second straight victory over the Athletics, 10 to 6, pushing the Senators a game nearer the league leading Yankees.

The famous Mose Grove came in as a third Philadelphia hurler to put on one of his relief acts, limiting the Nationals to one hit in the inning he worked, but by that time the game was lost.

Heinie Manush, "Goose" Goslin and Manager Joe Cronin stole the show. Manush enjoyed a perfect day, with five hits in as many attempts, two of his blows being doubles. Goslin hit a homer and two doubles in four tries, while Cronin had a double and a single.

Manush opened the "stretch" frame with his fourth straight hit, a double that was accounted a single when a spectator snared the ball by leaning out from a left field wall. Goslin then zoomed his sixth home run of the year, the ball, flying high over the right field wall, bringing in Manush ahead. Schulte walked, stole second and came home on Bluge's single, with the latter himself scoring on Sewell's double.

Cooke Paces Red Sox to Win Over Yanks
BOSTON, June 13 (AP)—Allen "Dusty" Cooke, who was once a member of the Yankees, paced the Boston Red Sox to a 6 to 5 victory over the New Yorkers today.

Cooke drove in four runs, including the winning tallies, as Lefty Lloyd Brown bested Danny MacFayden on the hill.

Lou Gehrig walloped his fourteenth home run of the season with Babe Ruth on base in the first inning to gain a tie with Ruth and Jimmie Foxx of the Athletics for the major league lead.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
New York 200 200 001—5 7 0
Boston 001 030 200—6 11 2

Batteries: MacFayden, Vanatta and Dickey; Brown and Ferrell.

Indians Take Pitching Dual From Detroit
DETROIT, June 13 (AP)—A fine pitching duel between Oral Hildebrand and Tommy Bridges which saw but four men reach third base in the entire game, ended in a 1 to 0 victory for the Cleveland Indians in a series opener with Detroit today.

The winning score came in the ninth inning when Vosmik tripled and scored on Pytlak's single. Hildebrand set the Detroit batters down with two hits, both of them singles.

In five trips to the plate yesterday, Joe failed to connect safely but lived once on an error and later scored one of Boston's three runs. In the field he turned in another errorless game, handling three chances without a bobbie.

Iowa U. Tests Prove of Aid

By DON DURIAN (Associated Press Sports Writer)

The contention of track coaches and officials that sprinters using starting blocks have an advantage over those starting from holes in the track is substantiated by research conducted at the University of Iowa.

Tests made in the physical education laboratories here revealed that blocks gave a definite advantage in every case.

When it is assumed that a sprinter can travel 100 yards in 10 seconds, and hence one yard every tenth second, the starting blocks gave an advantage varying from 2.7 inches to 2 feet.

Not every start from the blocks was faster than from holes, however. Some of the men had 93 per cent of their starts faster from blocks, but this decreased to as low as 61 per cent for one man.

The 28 men used as subjects for the experiment included major letter track athletes and those with no running experience. Only part of the group had ever used starting blocks prior to the experiment.

Thomas Hayden, director of physical education at Coe college, and George Walker, University of Iowa graduate student who collaborated in the test, have defined starting time as the time between the firing of the gun and when the runner's back foot leaves the mark.

The apparatus used for timing the start was a chronoscope connected with the starting blocks or holes, and a sound key.

The gunshot started the chronoscope and contact with the starting blocks or holes made by wiring was broken when the runner's foot left the mark, stopping it. The chronoscope reading showed the exact starting time.

Golden Glow Team Downs Iowa Supply in Slug Fest, 19-5

A wild slugfest gave Golden Glow a 19 to 5 victory over Iowa Supply last night in the only open league game scheduled. The losers, badly crippled by the non-appearance of several of their regular players, were behind by 18 runs until the last inning when they collected four scores.

Sidwell's defeated Knights of Columbus, 4 to 3 in a game played at Women's field, and Swaner's won over Knights of Pythias, 10 to 1, at the City park. These were the only closed league games scheduled.

Six Conference Foes to Play Home-Home Schedule

A schedule of 18 games, including a dozen Western conference championship contests, will be played by the University of Iowa's 1933-34 basketball team.

Stock Market Shows Signs of Weariness

Closing Prices Lower After Period of Heavy Selling

NEW YORK, June 13 (AP)—Financial markets showed signs of weariness today, and closing prices in many directions were lower.

There was a long list of 1 to 4 point net losses in all stock groups. Sales totaled 6,304,540 shares.

Fast movers on Tuesday's market slid back appreciably. American Telephone, Case, American Sugar and National Distillers dropped about 4 net.

U. S., Foreign Bonds Rally

Other Issues Turn to Lower Trend With Heavy Trading

NEW YORK, June 13 (AP)—United States government securities and foreign obligations rallied in the bond market today, but elsewhere prices developed an irregularly lower trend.

Heavy trading in some of the secondary divisions put the sales volume up to $16,132,000, par value. The average for 60 domestic corporate bonds lost two-tenths of a point.

German loans recovered 1 to 4 or more points. Other foreign maturities up 1 to around 3 included some of Australia, Brazil, Chile, Denmark, France and Uruguay.

Losses of fractions to around 2 points were suffered by some rails, including issues of Allegheny Corp., Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake Corp., St. Paul, Illinois Central, Missouri Pacific, Southern and Union Pacific.

While bonds of Postal Telegraph and International Telephone sagged 1 to 3 1-2 points, resistance was shown by loans of Bethlehem Steel, California Packing, General Cable, Goodrich, Loew's, Otis Steel and North American. United Drug 5s slumped 4 points.

Grain Market Drops Despite Transient Rise

CHICAGO, June 13 (AP)—Despite transient upturns to fresh high price records for wheat and rye, all grain values averaged lower today.

Augmented selling developed on every advance, and proved to be a handicap impossible to overcome except during brief intervals. The selling was largely due to profit-taking on the part of eastern speculative holders, but in some quarters was partly ascribed to complaints credited to the secretary of agriculture that recent price advances had interfered with plans to effect acreage reduction in wheat, corn and cotton.

Wheat closed nervous, 3-8-3-4 under yesterday's finish, corn also 3-8-3-4 down, oats 3-8-5-8 off, and provisions varying from 5 cents decline to a rise of 15 cents.

Stock market rallies helped the temporary gains scored by wheat and other cereals. There were also numerous unfavorable crop reports, notably from South Dakota, where the rye crop was described as almost a failure in the east half of the state.

Corn prices were inclined to sag owing to continued liberal receipts, with the corn visible supply the largest since 1928. Oats sagged with wheat and corn.

Provisions were easy as a result of scattered selling. Closing indimites: Wheat—July 75, 77 3-4-7-8; September 77 3-8-1-2, 80 1-4-3-5; December 80-80 1-2, 83 1-2-5-8; Corn—July 44 1-2-45 5-8-3-4; September 47 3-8-1-2, 48 3-4-7-8; December 50 1-4-3-8, 51 5-8-3-4.

Miss Abel with her friend, Ruby Kemp, went to the door of the apartment when Black called. He drew a revolver, Miss Kemp said, shot Miss Abel in the arm and side and then fired again. The second shot barely missed Miss Kemp.

As she fled from the doorway Black turned the revolver on himself. He was taken to the City hospital where he died from a bullet wound in the head. Miss Abel suffered only a flesh wound and her condition was believed not serious.

CHAPTER XIII UNGENTLEMANLY BEHAVIOR

"You are too much of a man to take Joan with you in the circumstances," Captain Toler continued. "You think I don't understand you, that I don't appreciate your situation—and Joan's. You think that I haven't a heart because I don't wear it on my sleeve. Don't you think I do, have my daughter's happiness at heart?"

"No one would ever suspect it. If I thought she would find happiness with you, I'd be the first to tell her to run off with you," said Toler, with a sincerity that Knowlton could not ignore. "I'd bid God speed to you both. But she'll never find happiness that way. She is part of my flesh and blood, Knowlton, and she can never forget her duty."

"To her husband, you mean?" "Regret will overtake her whenever she goes. She'll never be happy and you will never be happy with her so long as she is haunted by regret."

"I'll take our chance," said Knowlton, shortly. "You're both looking for an escape," continued Toler. "I've lived long to know that there is no escape from duty."

"More lines out of the book!" jeered Knowlton. "Save them for somebody else. Our minds are made up."

"Maybe I'm wrong," said Toler, helplessly, after a moment's pause. "Maybe you two can run away like this, casting aside your obligations to the life of an English country gentleman. But it's pretty—the old place. You'll be lady of the Manor, with the farmers' wives curtsying as you drive by. Lots to do. There'll be hell to pay after this way—unemployment, poverty, misery; new ideas, new ways, reconstruction. Perhaps I'll stand for Parliament—stand sitting down! Thank fortune, my head still works! You'll help me write my speeches, won't you? Do you think you'd find in such a life enough to compensate for what's been taken from us?"

Joan completely astonished him by bursting into tears. "Joan!" "Oh, don't talk to me now, please!"

"Why, dearest, what is it? Why have I made you cry? I know—I'm a damned nuisance; I've got on your nerves. But we've got to go on; got to live, I want to make you happy—do something in return for your loyalty and devotion."

"Oh, Herbert, don't be so kind to me!" "Kind! It's you who are kind. Life puts the burden on those who are able to bear it. We must think of those less fortunate than we—"

"Is your pillow comfortable?" asked Joan, anxious to do something for him. "Full of lumps, the damn thing! He raised up with her help while she shook up and smoothed the pillows. "Ah, that's better. Your hands are so cool. You're trembling!" He kissed her hair. "Good darling! War was never meant for women."

Joan moved restlessly. "Shall I get you a cool drink?" "No. Just sit here a while. I can rest, now that you have come." "I'll put the flowers in the hall, shall I?" "I don't mind them. I hate to see them wither—since you picked them. But she took the vase into the hall to get it out of his sight to hide her emotion of desperation and indecision, torn between that age-old conflict of duty and desire. When, after a time, he spoke her name with some impatience, she braced herself, went back into the bedroom and held his hand until he fell asleep. She stood looking at him, tears brimming over her eyelids, then stooped, kissed him gently, and backed out of the room.

Leaving Herbert—deserting him—was going to be harder than she had imagined. She felt the need of strength, guidance. She could not go to her father. She made her way into the hospital chapel. Soon she was kneeling at the altar before a lighted candle on the tiny shrine. Emotion grasped her; tears choked her. Soon she was praying sobbingly for help, her hands clasped convulsively together, her tortured figure a snatches of her prayer came to him.

A man's figure appeared at the door of the little chapel. It was Knowlton, come to the hospital to be near her—perhaps to catch, unseen, a glimpse of her. He stared, almost unbelievably, at the kneeling figure as snatches of her prayer came to him.

His face went gray as he realized that she, the daughter of her father, was struggling with her sense of duty to her husband—an emotion that neither her bravery nor her determination could overcome. He realized now that unless Joan could come to him without a vestige of regret, there would be no happiness together for them.

Sick in mind, stricken at heart, he left the chapel, unseen by the woman agonizing at the altar.

In her apartment the following morning, Joan, in traveling costume, was packing her clothes in a bag, stopping every now and then to wipe away the tears that fell at recollection of her husband, his utter dependence upon her. Shaken by her farewell scene with him, not at all sure of the step she was about to take, it required all the force of character she possessed to go on with her packing, to keep from bursting into sobs.

At a knock on the door she hastily dried her eyes, went to the door and opened it upon Knowlton in civilian clothes—uncertain of step—evidently a little drunk. Knowlton entered the room. "Tears? At a time like this?" "Please forgive me, Tommy. Everything's all right now that you are with me."

"Well, this is a fine way to begin an elopement, I must say." Joan threw herself into his arms, clinging convulsively to him. "Don't say that! I'll be all right!"

"I know what it is!" Knowlton's lips curled scornfully. "That half-dazed husband of yours." Joan pulled away from his arms, her face showing the shock his words had caused her. "You've been drinking!" "Sure! I've been celebrating my divorce from the Navy! No more days and nights in a stinking submarine. No more taking orders from that sharp-faced father of yours."

"Tommy, please!" she pleaded. "He just paid me a charming little visit. He burst out laughing immediately as Joan regarded him amazed. "The old boy is always good for a laugh."

"For laughs?" Joan could not believe her ears. "Sure. When he starts those old wheezes out of the book. Honor—discipline—duty. He wanted me to Durazzo with him."

"You refused?" Joan was incredulous. "He'll have to win this war himself. I've got to catch up on my love-making."

Joan turned away from him, deeply hurt. His eyes followed her guardedly, gauging her reaction to words his jeering talk, to see how she took his carefully planned calculations to arouse her loyalty to her father.

"Tommy, you're not yourself," she said, seeking an excuse for him. "Oh, yes, I am. Thanks to old Toler, I'm no longer an officer and a gentleman."

Joan took him up quickly. "But you are still a gentleman." "I'm still a man if that's what you mean. Man enough to take the girl I love in spite of hell or high water—or a crippled husband, or a meddlesome father."

Joan strove to conceal how his words hurt her. "This isn't like you at all, Tommy." "You giving me the needle, too?" Knowlton asked belligerently. "You aren't trying to hurt me, are you, Tommy?" Her eyes blazed with him.

"Hurt you? Hell, I only want to make love to you! That's all I've got to do now." He placed his arms about her and pulled her down on the sofa, and began clumsily to make love to her. She was forced to plead with him, "I wish you wouldn't—"

"Don't be so coy! Remember, I've seen you with your hair down." "Tommy! Tommy!" she struggled to free herself. "Want to be coaxed, huh?" He crushed her to him, and she was struggling frantically to free herself when Captain Toler, hearing her, "Let go! Let me go!" opened the door.

"Take your hands off her!" he commanded, harshly, his eyes blazing. "Why, if it isn't old fish-face himself!" cried Knowlton, releasing Joan as Toler advanced quickly. "Always arriving at the crucial moment!" "Get out!" Toler's lips were white with anger.

"Sorry, Commander!" jeered Knowlton. "I said 'Get out!'" repeated Toler, his face frozen with rage. "I heard you," said Knowlton, and sat calmly down on theavenport. Toler reached down suddenly, seized the lapels of his coat and pulled his former lieutenant to his feet.

"You're a rat, Knowlton—treating my daughter like a woman of the streets!" "Well, they're all sisters under the skin, you know, Toler." Toler drew back his right fist and landed a blow on Knowlton's jaw that sent him reeling back upon the sofa, grabbed him again, jerked him to his feet, pushed him towards the door, opened it, and shoved him out. Neither Toler nor Joan noticed that Knowlton made no attempt whatever at resistance, or to shield himself. Captain Toler closed the door, went to the sidewalk, his hands shaking, and poured himself a stiff drink. He tossed it off at a gulp.

"I'm sorry, little girl." "I'm not," said Joan, decisively. "Oh, hell! I've made a terrible mistake! I'm going to the hospital." (TO BE CONTINUED)

Hard Work, Health, Sun Tans Mingle at City Airport Reforestation Camp

179 Workers Put Camp in 'Ship-Shape'

Actual Projects Will Get Under Way Next Week

There's hard work, health, and sun tans at the reforestation camp at the city airport camp.

One hundred and seventy-nine boys under the direction of Major Edwin Patrick, are getting the camp in shape so that work on the reforestation projects can begin in earnest next week.

Sleep in Tents

The boys sleep in tents which accommodate 20 boys each. The complete camp consists of nine bunk tents, orderly tent, officers' mess tent, medical tent, supply tent, officers' bunk tents, wooden supply house, office for camp superintendent, F. S. Yetter, showers, and latrines.

Major Patrick is awaiting further information from Col. C. E. Stodter, commandant of Ft. Des Moines before building any frame structures. At present a mess hall and recreation building are being planned.

Hardened Gradually

The boys, most of whom are from eastern Iowa, are being hardened into the work gradually as most of them are between the ages of 19 and 21 and have not done any manual labor for the last two years. An eight hour day is maintained and the boys are under army discipline.

F. S. Yetter, camp superintendent, said that work would begin on the projects either Monday or Tuesday. The first work, he said, would probably be that of soil erosion on the farms as soon as an arrangement is made with the owners through S. Lysle Duncan, Farm Bureau agent.

Projects

University, reforestation, and other projects will be submitted to Professor McDonald, state forester, who will either approve or disapprove them. Work will begin on those projects upon Professor McDonald's orders, Camp Superintendent Yetter said.

Present plans call for the cutting of all weeds in the airport park.

When the earliest sound films were brought to Siam by an American exhibitor, a special performance was given at the summer palace, and the king immediately became a "fan."

Shoestring Railroad Empire Built by Van Sweringens

By ROY WILLIS (Special Correspondent)

WASHINGTON—The method whereby the Van Sweringens brothers, O. P., and M. J., Cleveland railroad czars rocketed from comparative obscurity to the lofty peak they occupy in the industrial world, makes the do-or-die heroes of Horatio Alger look like so many lackadaisical numskulls, and gave the distinguished solons of the senate banking and currency committee a valuable lesson in high finance, when it was explained, somewhat reluctantly, at a recent session of the Morgan hearing.

Steps to Success

Under the skillful scalpel of Ferdinand Pecora, counsel for the senate committee, the skeleton that in habits the fat carcass of the Van Sweringens railroad empire was revealed in all its pristine whiteness while committee members gasped, not so much with the heat as at the cupidity.

To begin with, Pecora drew an admission from O. P., the elder of the Van Sweringens brothers, that they had begun the building of their railroad empire with nothing—plus a $2,100,000 loan from the house of Morgan. From that first step onward, the Morgan firm guided the brothers, who formerly were real estate operators, through an amazing labyrinth of financial transactions, by which they acquired railroad after railroad, including the Chesapeake and Ohio, Pere Marquette, Nickel Plate, Missouri Pacific, Chicago and Eastern Illinois and the Erie. Control of this vast network was acquired with small, or no, cash investment by the Van Sweringens. Huge loans from the house of Morgan and a switching back and forth of various stocks, plus millions from the investing public, did the job.

Morgan Loans

A few of the gigantic loans to the Van Sweringens by the house of Morgan read like figures from a national budget report. For instance, in 1930, Morgan & Co., loaned the railroad building brothers a total of $39,500,000, of which sum $19,000,000 went to pay off brokerage borrowings. Strangely enough, O. P. Van Sweringens, who could reel off those figures just as easily as you or I can say "a dollar ninety-eight," had the greatest difficulty in remembering whether any of his own or his brother's funds were used in the purchase of control of the various railroads they dominate.

Financial "Double-Play"

Here, if you are not a financier, you may ask in puzzlement if Morgan and company were ever repaid what they loaned to the Van Sweringens. If so, you may ask: "who supplied the cash?"

The answer to this is something of an object lesson in financial genius. For according to facts established by Counsel Pecora, the house of Morgan suggested to the Van Sweringens that the brothers go to the United States government and get the money to pay off their millions in debts. As an excuse for the suggestion, it was implied that failure to repay the loans would necessitate the Missouri Pacific railroad into receivership. Pecora questions the sincerity of that threat.

However, the Van Sweringens acted upon the Morgan suggestion and when the reconstruction finance corporation was created, they were first in line to borrow public money. It is a matter of history how $11,700,000 came out of the U. S. treasury into the Van Sweringens cash register and thence to the Morgan vaults—a double play with John Q. Public out at first base holding the well-known sack.

What amazed everyone who listened to Counsel Pecora draw out the facts, was the ease and simplicity with which the entire operations were carried out. Not only was the Morgan firm eager, apparently, to lend its resources to the Van Sweringens for their empire building, but Uncle Sam's pet philanthropist, the R.F.C., was also a willing helper. It's all very puzzling—but it's high finance.

How the Industrial Recovery Act Will Affect Trusts

By J. R. BRACKETT (Associated Press Business Writer)

NEW YORK (AP)—One of the arguments advanced by advocates of the national industrial recovery act is that while it seems to foster "monopolistic" practices, it is likely rather to strengthen, or at least maintain, the smaller enterprise.

Opinion is by no means unanimous on this point, but many observers agree that business giantism has not been stopped by the anti-trust laws, the restrictions of which the new bill suspends in part.

The anti-trust laws prohibit any business organization in restraint of trade. They were designed to prevent the formation of large business units which could dominate an industry. The old-time monopolies cut prices, employed secret rebates, and otherwise attempted to eliminate competitors.

Not Eliminated

Such practices were modified but not entirely eliminated by the anti-trust laws. In attempting to preserve the enterprise of the small industrialist from the encroachments of the business giant, the anti-trust laws laid down regulations which affected small enterprises as well as their large competitors.

The small fellow was protected from the more or less direct punitive efforts of the big fellow, but he was not protected from ordinary competition or price wars.

Further, the anti-trust laws did not prevent the formation of business giants. Many corporations today are larger than was the largest trust, statistics show.

The industrial recovery bill is directed partly at what its advocates call the inequity of the old laws. While the new bill is not designed to fix prices, it does permit fixing of certain basic costs within an industry, such as wage rates, and it permits publication of costs, together with other statistics that will enable competitors better to determine prices.

It may further allow certain industries to fix minimum costs, or at least to provide that no member of an industry may sell below cost.

Both big and little industrialists in a particular trade association thus are given the same advantages and disadvantages, friends of the bill say.

The argument continues that in exchange for complete business freedom they are given opportunities for co-operation, and may be, in effect, forced to co-operate by federal edict. The new bill proposes that co-operation is at least as important as competition.

Domination Feared

Opponents of this theory fear that the larger units of business within a trade association will dominate all the members, that the little fellow will give up not only his freedom, but, in being forced to subscribe to the business practices of the big fellow, lose his comparatively smaller business power.

Verdict Expected on Des Moines Test Suit Soon

DES MOINES, June 13 (AP)—Decision in the friendly injunction suit brought by F. C. and J. W. Hubbell to test the authority of the state to borrow $20,000,000 is expected tomorrow or Thursday. An immediate appeal to the state supreme court is planned.

Testimony in the case was concluded before Judge Loy Ladd today when State Treasurer Leo J. Wegman appeared on the witness stand.

He said he did not believe it would be necessary to make the proposed one mill tax levy for more than two years, explaining that the income from the sinking fund after that period would be sufficient to pay off the principal and interest on the bonds.

He said that the one mill property tax levy should yield $3,587,000, annually.

operation depends upon the equitable administration of the bill and that such administration will strengthen the lesser units.

Plan Funeral Rites Tomorrow at 2 P.M. for John Rennholz

Mr. Rennholz, who was born in Johnson county June 24, 1863, had been in ill health for a number of years. He is survived by his widow, two daughters, Mrs. Hester Hopp of near Iowa City, and Mrs. Molly Taylor of Iowa City; two brothers, Benjamin of Grand Junction, and George of San Francisco, Cal.; and five grandchildren.

DES MOINES (AP)—Opposing forces in the prohibition repeal election renewed their activities. The women's organization on national prohibition reform took their caravan into Monticello, Marion, Cascade and Dubuque while the all-Iowa prohibition emergency committee announced that prohibition rallies will be held Saturday throughout the state.
