Kay Reveals $30,000 U.S. Grant for Topographical Surveys

Public Works Administration Appropriates Fund for Study of Iowa Resources, Projects

Mapping to Be Carried Out at Suggestion of Dean Kay

Appropriation of $30,000 by the federal public works administration for topographical surveys in Iowa was announced yesterday by Dean George F. Kay, Iowa state geologist. The money is part of a fund of $2,400,000 allocated to the United States geological survey by the public works administration last summer for similar work in all parts of the country.

Johnson County
The areas to be mapped in Iowa, at the suggestion of Dean Kay, will be a section of Johnson county, including Iowa City; a region in the vicinity of Melrose and Humeston, in south central Iowa; and an area in the southwestern corner of the state. Coal fields are located in the south central area to be mapped.

Work on the surveys is expected to start immediately, Dean Kay said. Federal engineers are expected to arrive in Iowa City very soon.

Two-Fold Purpose
The mapping of these districts throughout the United States has a two-fold purpose. The first is in connection with federal plans in reforestation, surveys of natural resources, and other national projects.

The other purpose, which is the main motive in the Iowa surveys, is to study the land with a view to minerals, oil, coal, and highway building projects, Dean Kay explained.

Show Topography
The maps show the topography of the land—its elevation and drainage. They form the basis for all geological studies, for engineering projects, soil study, and highway building.

Topographical maps of Iowa City have already been made, but the new survey will include a much larger district in the vicinity of Iowa City than has formerly been included in similar studies.

The money will be administered directly through the United States geological survey, rather than through the various state geological surveys.

Plan Tryouts for Debaters Against Bates

Dates for tryouts for a national broadcast debate with Bates college of Maine for the east-west championship, an international debate with Cambridge university, and the opening contest of the Western conference season were announced yesterday by Prof. A. Craig Baird, director of university debate.

The tryouts for the Bates debate will take place in the liberal arts auditorium next Wednesday at 4 p. m. The subject of this contest will be, "Resolved, that the American people should endorse the principle of guarantee of bank deposits as embodied in the national banking act of 1933."

Those trying out for the Cambridge debate, to be held on Nov. 22, will speak in the liberal arts auditorium next Thursday at 4 p. m. on some phase of the question, "Resolved, that the United States should adopt the principal features of the British system of radio control and operation."

Preliminary tryouts for the Western conference debates are to take place in the auditorium Oct. 6, at 4 p. m. The subject will be, "Resolved, that the powers of the president of the United States should be permanently strengthened."

Good Enrollment in Phys. Ed. Groups
The activities of instructors of the women's physical education department have been limited for the last week chiefly to the examination of all university women enrolled in the physical education course and to placement of girls in the various sports.

Because of the large enrollment in this department for the fall semester, the instructors were forced to enlarge the maximum number of students allowed to register in each course.

Regular class activities will begin next Monday.

France Balks at Rearmament

Won't Sponsor Move to Increase Germans' Military Force

GENEVA, Sept. 28 (AP)—France cannot sponsor any rearmament of Germany, Joseph Paul-Boncour, French foreign minister, made plain today a short time after a Reich official had told correspondents his country should be treated as an honest partner in the reconstruction of a peaceful Europe.

The French view was set out in a conference between M. Paul-Boncour and Konstantin Von Neurath, the German foreign minister. The latter will go to Berlin tomorrow to submit the French, British and Italian disarmament plan to Chancellor Hitler.

Germany's desire for peace was made known by Dr. Joseph Goebbels, Reich minister of public enlightenment and propaganda, who said: "To infer that Germany desires war is shortsighted and discouraging in view of the fact that everywhere there is no disarmament, but rearmament."

"We have by no means any intention," he said, "of converting national socialism into an article for world export. . . . We have neither the time nor any reason to assume a more or less mystical world mission beyond our frontier."

Jessup Named Member of National Education Group

Committee Will Study National Outlook on Education

President Walter A. Jessup of the University of Iowa yesterday received notification of his appointment as a member of a national committee on a national outlook on education.

The appointment was made by Paul C. Stetson, president of the department of superintendence of the National Education association, and superintendent of schools at Indianapolis, Ind.

One of Seven
This committee is one of seven appointed by President Stetson. These groups will consider problems of teacher training, a comprehensive program of public education, school finance, education for the new America, public education and public welfare, a national outlook on education, and the interpretation of schools to the public.

The committee of which President Jessup is a member will meet and report at a convention of the department of superintendence at Cleveland, Ohio, Feb. 24 to March 1, 1934.

Fundamental Change
The appointment of the committee is a part of a fundamental change in the convention plan followed by the teachers in their national professional group for many years.

It is hoped that this committee plan will extend a greater responsibility to individual members in the department's attempt to plan more effectively for methods of meeting the current crisis in education.

Chicagoan Believed to Have Broken Neck in Football Practice

CHICAGO, Sept. 28 (AP)—Everett Braun of Inglewood, Cal., a freshman at the University of Chicago, was believed to have suffered a broken neck in football practice today.

Unconscious, he was rushed to the Billings Memorial hospital, where an x-ray was taken to determine his injury.

Young Braun was playing on the freshman team in scrimmage against the varsity seconds when hurt. He dashed in to assist in a tackle and collided head on with a teammate.

Garage Man Identifies Groups Who Sought Auto Repairs

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 28 (AP)—Nebraska officers tonight were searching for a group of men whom they believed were escaped Indiana convicts and who drove within the shadows of the state penitentiary walls here.

Across From Prison
In quest of repairs for an automobile, the men drove to a garage across the street from the prison. The garage proprietor declined to work on the car as he had closed his shop for the day. The car later was found in a corn field 13 miles west of here where it had been abandoned.

The garageman, Jack Williams, formerly police chief at Havelock, a suburb, looked at photographs of James "Oklahoma Jack" Clark and Walter Dieterich today and said these were the men who brought the automobile to his place of business.

Revolver Shell
Police Chief W. C. Condit said an exploded revolver shell and two cartridges were found in the car, which was abandoned after six armed men forced the H. T. Folsom family from their large sedan and drove away in it.

Efforts of police to find finger prints on the abandoned car were unsuccessful. It carried no license plates but the car used by the gang which stopped the Folsoms had Illinois plates.

Condit believed the men were the Indiana fugitives and dispatched a warning to Nebraska officers and banks to be on guard.

Former President Hoover Drives Through Iowa City on Way to California Home

Makes Surprise Visit at Birthplace in West Branch

Private Citizen Herbert Hoover, former president of the United States, stopped for a short while yesterday morning at his West Branch birthplace, and drove through Iowa City en route to his Palo Alto, Cal., home.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoover, driving with Former Secretary of Agriculture Arthur H. Hyde, arrived in West Branch unexpectedly at 9 a. m. from Davenport, where they had spent the night.

No Reception Planned
The Hoovers, insisting on being just ordinary citizens, gave natives no opportunity to plan a reception.

Otho Yoder, postmaster of West Branch and a distant relative of the former president, barely had time to get out the holiday flags and plant them along the sidewalks. He had been notified of the visit a short time before.

A hastily recruited reception committee of university and city officials and prominent business men of Iowa City, informed by telephone that the party would stop here, were similarly disappointed when Mr. Hoover said his schedule would not allow the delay. The group passed through the city unrecognized.

Greets Old Friends
At West Branch, where the party arrived shortly after 9 a. m., Mr. Hoover greeted many of his old acquaintances before going to the home of Mrs. Mollie Brown Carran, a former school teacher. Refusing because of lack of time to accept a dinner invitation from Mrs. Carran, the former president promised to stop on his next trip east, which he said will be in about six weeks.

Cheerful concerning economic prospects, Mr. Hoover expressed confidence during his short talk with Mrs. Carran that improvement will be noted soon.

After the visit with Mrs. Carran, the party went together to the high school, where Mr. Hoover spoke. He recalled that it had been a long while since he last visited the old school, since rebuilt, at the same location.

In the old days as now, he recalled, the small children sat in the front row, and the assembly was graded according to size to the rear, where the older children sat.

He expressed a deep affection for the teachers of the West Branch schools and especially for Mrs. Carran. Mrs. Hoover also addressed the students briefly.

Later Mr. Hoover met Callie Mae Baumgardner, who was "tomato queen" of West Branch in 1930 and sent Mr. and Mrs. Hoover a basket of tomatoes at the White House. She is now editor of the high school paper.

Des Moines Next
The immediate destination of the Hoover party was Des Moines, where the former president had a luncheon engagement. From there they expected to drive to Trenton, Mo., where they planned to stay overnight at the Hyde home.

The Hoovers expected to visit their farm at Clinton, Mo., today. They purchased the farm in 1928. There they will board a train for the west coast.

Temperature Slides Between 49 and 72

Temperature yesterday was steady, varying from 49 degrees in the morning to a high of 72 degrees during the day with the mercury receding to the 49 degree mark by 7 p. m. according to Prof. John F. Reilly, official observer.

There was no frost Thursday night, the mercury barely reaching the 49 degree mark, which is well above freezing.

McKee Fails to Tell Plans for Mayoralty

New Yorkers Still Wondering as to Candidates

NEW YORK, Sept. 28 (AP)—New Yorkers went to bed again tonight without knowing whether they would have a choice of two or three candidates for mayor this November.

After a day of feverish conferences, young Joseph V. McKee, independent Democrat who had been expected to make known today whether he would enter the contest, announced late in the evening that he would not state his position until tomorrow.

Hoover Makes Special Call on Former Tutor

(Special to The Daily Iowan)
WEST BRANCH, Sept. 28—The proudest person in Iowa today was Mrs. Mollie Carran, 80, Herbert Hoover's one time school teacher, on whom the former president paid a personal call during his brief stop at West Branch.

"He didn't go to the cemetery, or his birthplace, or to the homes of his third cousins," Mrs. Carran beamed. "He just came to see me."

Not First Time
It was not the first time that the famous mining engineer had shown preference for the gentle, gray-headed old lady, now lame from paralysis, who taught him letters as a boy of 10 in West Branch.

She was his chief hostess when he visited his birthplace during the presidential campaign of 1928, she visited him in Washington, and she accompanied him on his special train from West Liberty to Des Moines last year.

Seemed New
But the experience seemed new to her today as Mr. Hoover, freshened by seven months' relaxation, stepped on to the vine-covered porch and into the ancient frame house which is her home.

"He sat in that chair there," Mrs. Carran said, pointing to a worn, red-push rocker. "I remarked immediately on how well he looked, and he said 'I feel well, too.'"

The last few months, since the terrible disappointment of Hoover's defeat, have been filled with anxious days for Mrs. Carran, who cannot see "how we are going to make out" on the vast expenditures planned by President Roosevelt's administration.

Hoover reassured her. "Conditions are bad, but we are going to come out of it all right," he said.

Chief Concern
The former president's chief concern after he had inquired about Mrs. Carran's health was of her son, Charley, whom he appointed a rural mail carrier by executive order from the White House last December. His order made Charley Carran a mail carrier without taking the customary examinations.

"Did the Democrats kick him out?" she quoted Hoover as asking. She replied that they had not, that her son's period of probation was up Aug. 1, and that it appeared they would keep him indefinitely.

Government Aims Blow at Kidnapers

—A decisive blow at crime through conviction of all 10 defendants in the Charles F. Urschel kidnaping conspiracy trial was demanded of the jury today in the government's first attempt to involve the new "Lindbergh" law.

"Time Has Come"
Joseph B. Keenan, assistant U. S. attorney general, declared in a final argument to the jurors that "the time has come to decide whether we are to have a government of law and order or abdicate in favor of machine gun gangsters."

"If this government cannot protect its citizens, then we had better frankly turn it over to the Kellys, the Bateses, the Balleys and the others of the underworld and pay tribute to them through taxes," he said.

Exposes Case
Keenan swept rapidly into an exposition of the case against Albert Bates, Harvey Bailey and the three Shannons from Wise county, Tex. He touched only lightly upon the five defendants from Minneapolis and St. Paul, leaving them to be dealt with by D. E. Hodges, assistant district attorney, later.

"Kidnaping has become a modern art," Keenan declared. "The plotters say their vicious plans, bold, strong-armed men carry out the abduction, hirelings stand guard and later, when ransom has been paid, the money changers arrange for its dissemination through underworld channels."

Renewed Conferences
Although close associates said early in the day he had decided to make the race against Mayor John P. O'Brien and Fiorella La Guardia, the fusion choice, McKee held renewed conferences that some said might have caused him to change his mind.

The former president of the board of aldermen, who became acting mayor last year after the resignation of James J. Walker, said a statement would be given out during the afternoon but through his secretary he later sent word it would be delayed until evening.

Headquarters Empty
His temporary headquarters, however, were empty after dinner and McKee could not be located.

Louis M. Howe, secretary to President Roosevelt, has been here for the last two days.

Howe has been represented as opposed to McKee's participation in the mayoralty race, preferring that it be an out-and-out contest between Tammany and its opponents.

May Split Vote
The fusion forces have expressed the fear that McKee's entrance would split the anti-Tammany vote and that as a result Mayor O'Brien would be chosen.

Edward J. Flynn, Bronx Democratic leader and McKee's political sponsor, remained away from his borough's party headquarters.

The Liquor Problem—Angles Presented by Control Question

(Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of four daily articles explaining the problems that would have to be met throughout the country should federal prohibition be repealed.)

By RADER WINGET
NEW YORK, (AP)—With 31 states on record as favoring repeal and eight more preparing to vote in October and November, the many-sided problem of liquor control again becomes of paramount national importance.

And control means everything from what kind of liquor a man may drink—at what price—on down to how he shall drink it and where.

The drink might be imported Scotch whisky or Italian wine. It might be bonded American whiskey aged for years, which would be rare, or it might be "blended" spirits made by cutting the aged stuff with alcohol and other ingredients. At the same time it might be quite possible to purchase "green" whisky or that with the bootleg tang.

Many foreign countries are looking with eager eyes toward American markets which would be opened if the eighteenth amendment were repealed, while the federal government is increasing the amount of spirits which can be distilled in the present government-controlled distilleries.

Current laws provide internal revenue. (Turn to Page 10)

Labor Wars Paralyze Nation's Working Centers

(By The Associated Press)
Approximately 100,000 men were on strike yesterday, hampering work in the coal, steel, automobile, silk and leather industries.

Ten thousand steel workers were idle along the West Virginia "pan-handle" as the Clarksburg, and Weirton, W. Va., and the Steubenville, O., plants of the Weirton Steel company shut down as a result of a dispute between the company's union and the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel, and Tin Workers.

Violate Code
George Dunn, president of the Steubenville local of the association, said the company forced men to work more than 40 hours a week in violation of the NRA code.

Pittsburgh officers said they feared trouble if a third march of striking coal miners is directed against the Clairton, Pa., plant of the Carnegie Steel company. More than 70,000 miners were away from the shafts, many of them advocating a spread of the strike.

Two employees of the Shamrock Coal company were beaten by strikers in Fayette county, Pennsylvania. Other strikers, numbering 100, pummeled a mine foreman, the home of Edwin Martin, former mine deputy for the H. C. Frick Coke company, was dynamited.

Strikers of the Ford Motor company plant at Edgewater, N. J., demanded a five day week, seven hour day and a $5 daily minimum wage. Strikers from the company's closed Chester, Pa., plant urged the remainder of the 2,300 employees to walk out. The company claimed 100 men were idle, the strikers claiming 600.

Ford Company
At Detroit, officials of the Ford company declined comment of the Edgewater situation. In Washington, Senator Wagner (D., N.Y.), chairman of the national labor board, said he would seek to persuade Ford officials to reopen the Chester plant.

Striking tool and die makers of Detroit, Pontiac and Flint, Mich., demanded a 25 per cent increase in all wages and a 40 hour week. W. S. Knudsen, president of the Chevrolet and Pontiac Motor Car companies, said he would abide by the decision of the Detroit NRA compliance board, which is mediating the difficulty.

conversation, during which the ex-president talked in low but distinct tones which she could understand perfectly, was when he promised to pay her another and longer visit on his return trip east in six weeks.

Mrs. Carran is glad now, for her former pupil's sake, that he was not re-elected president.

"You know his health never would have stood it if he had been re-elected," she said. "There is no comparison between his appearance now and when I saw him a year ago."

Mrs. Carran "thought I would go down in a pile" when Hoover was defeated.

Her views are not sympathetic with the present administration.

"There isn't a family in West Branch, rich or poor, that wouldn't have been glad to have one of those pigs the government bought and destroyed," she said. "Why didn't they give them to someone?"

Old Capitol

By TOM YOSELOFF

A pertinent question in regard to division of power in our constitutional system of government was discussed by Dean Gilmore of the college of law, in an address before an inter-city Rotary club meeting in Waterloo last night.

This problem, familiar to persons who have watched the processes of government in the last few years, is the one of "passing the buck." This procedure is carried on by the legislature, and is directed toward the courts.

As the dean put it: "Although the constitution provides a method for orderly amendment, it is always exposed to constant danger of change, or even nullification, by illegal means. This is possible only when people become careless or indifferent about their constitution."

"Unfortunately the very fact that the constitution is written creates a false sense of security that it is secure from unwarranted change. Through ignorance or indifference people come to believe that a constitution can take care of itself, or that if any violation of it is attempted, the courts will protect it."

"It is true that through the courts a judicial check on unconstitutional actions exists, but this check is a very weak and postponed one, difficult to set in motion, and operative only long after the occasion arises."

"The people, however, must guard their own liberties. They and their representatives must be constitutionally moral and upright regardless of the restraining hand of the courts. Adherence to the constitution is as much the sacred obligation of legislators and executives as of judicial officers."

"Too often legislators have been willing to enact laws of doubtful constitutionality, and executives have been ever ready to carry out such laws, saying that if the law is unconstitutional, the courts will interfere. This attitude is an evasion of responsibility and a passing to the courts of a duty which rests upon the people themselves, and upon their representatives."

And what are the people to do about it? First of all, and basically important, Dean Gilmore believes, is an understanding of the constitution, and of its significance—an understanding of the fact that by it the founding fathers hoped to protect the rights of the people against any possible tyranny.

The constitution may be passing, and something new may be taking its place, the dean declared—perhaps something "based on more modern conceptions of human relations is necessary" for the future. But if we are going through a great change, Dean Gilmore said, "it is well to be conscious of the change and to have an appreciation of its significance. This requires that we know something of the genius and spirit of the existing constitutional system in order to decide whether we wish to make a change."

The 30 Hour Week Argument

THE FIRST portent of a coming congressional conflict on the controversial subject of a universal 30 hour week was seen the other day in demands of several organizations of union labor for shorter hours in codes yet to be approved under the recovery act.

Two meetings preparatory to the American Federation of Labor convention next week resulted in resolutions asking that the federation insist on a work week no longer than 30 hours in the building trades and other codes.

The degree to which the NRA has been able to reduce unemployment to date has been disappointing. William Green, head of the federation, estimated last week that more than 11,000,000 men still are without work and must be cared for this winter.

The proposal for a 30 hour week is not new. It was suggested in the form of a bill before the last congress, but was shunted aside by the wave of the National Recovery act. The same proposal was considered last spring by the international labor commission of the League of Nations in Geneva and received wide publicity and support.

The scheme looks plausible at first sight. Eleven million men are out of work. The way to put them to work is to make more jobs. The way to make more jobs is to cut the hours of those now working. Then what?

This assumes more expenditure by employers in payrolls. Already employers in this state are not over-anxious to emphasize reemployment, as evidenced by their opposition to the employment seal campaign instituted by the state NRA committee. If more demands were made upon them they could be expected to emphasize it even less.

Until some more basic solution is adopted—whatever it might be—for increasing business and correcting faults in the present distribution system, it seems hardly worth while to argue the case of the 30 hour week.

Making Atoms

(From the New York Herald-Tribune)

The news from Los Angeles that atomic particles apparently have been manufactured out of radiation, thus accomplishing the age-old philosophical quest for something to create matter, will be more surprising to those whose physics teachers 10 or 20 years ago still talked of the indestructibility of matter and energy than to the newer crop of post-Einstein physicists who tend to regard both these former sacred entities as no more than tenuous and changing aspects of some deeper reality still undefined. The present accomplishment, if it be an accomplishment, has been anticipated for several years.

What the new experiments are is simple. Rays like light rays and particles like atoms of matter or like electrons of electricity may be made to collide. Sometimes the collision changes one or both of them. After some of these changes the total quantity of matter seems, on not unpalatable assumptions, to be increased while the total quantity of energy or of radiation seems to be decreased. Not all of the assumptions have been tested and not every physicist accepts the conclusions, but no one will be much disturbed about the firmness of the foundations of science if new facts make this acceptance inescapable. Matter already is known, or at least firmly believed, to be changing into energy inside stars such as the sun. There is no reason to be surprised if energy changes into matter in some other places or under some other conditions.

There is, indeed, one welcome escape to philosophers in such a conclusion. Two things seem to be happening in the universe which philosophers do not like. One is the apparent expansion of all star clouds and galaxies, as though the whole universe were exploding. The other is the apparent continual change of matter into energy inside the stars, as though the material part of the universe were frittering itself away forever. Either conclusion means that the universe cannot be endless, but must be approaching, slowly but surely, a clearly visualized doom.

Fortunately, universal optimists who do not like to believe this are not compelled to. As appeared clearly in the discussion at the recent meetings of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, the facts cited to indicate the universe's explosion may be interpreted otherwise. Now come the facts suggesting that radiation may be converted into matter, thus reversing the loss of matter in the stars and giving even the material universe a possibility of rebirth. Meanwhile, no distress is necessary about tomorrow even by the pessimists, for the shortest time assigned by anybody either for the catastrophe of universal explosion or for the complete exhaustion of matter is, we believe, some two billion additional years.

GOOD MORNING

Printing presses have been strained during the last several years streaming out ream after ream of comment about the railroads. We had been in the habit for so long of taking them for granted that the sudden realization that iron horses might not be as stable as we had come to assume made the roads and their problems an issue of national interest.

All this comment has been of many different varieties and degrees of value. There have been those who thought the railroads had reached the end of their period of usefulness and would soon give way to trucks, automobiles, airplanes, and other forms of competition.

There have been others who held that railroads are still the backbone of the nation's commerce and had figures to prove it. These commentators usually conceded that the business of the roads would have to undergo a radical revision as other forms of transportation came into their own and took away a larger percentage of the faster moving tonnage.

There have been still others who were convinced that the roads were being imposed upon and really were entirely sound. These writers blamed most of the trouble upon the government and upon unenlightened public regulation in general. The principal argument on this score has been that competing services have been largely supported by the gullible taxpayers who furnished them rights of way for little or no return, while the railroads not only were forced to pay heavy taxes upon roadways they had built themselves, but were discriminated against by government regulating agencies.

A fourth attitude has been that the railroads themselves are largely responsible for their own predicament. Those who entertain this view feel that railroad managements have demonstrated a pitiable lack of the sort of initiative and progressive energy without which no great business enterprise can continue to prosper. Many contend also that railroad men have been more interested in financial manipulation than in the operation of transport systems. These men hold that, had the railroads been sufficiently awake to the needs of modern transportation and to the revolutionary developments which had been staring them in the face for years they could have averted the crisis in which they find themselves today.

As in almost every controversy, much truth can be found in all of these various contentions. It is generally agreed that the competition of busses and trucks, not to mention pipe lines and government-supported water carriers, is not only unfair, but seriously destructive.

Few persons would fail to agree, however, that the roads themselves are largely to blame. Had the operators been endowed with the vision one would naturally expect of an expert in transportation, they certainly would have seen the advent of the truck, the bus, and the airplane as serious factors to be considered. Instead, they made no motion until really serious inroads had been felt in their revenue.

What is it all about?
What is it the public wants in transportation? Comfort, convenience, economy, and speed. Surely these are factors which would draw passengers. For freight, the last three are essentials. What have the roads done to provide these needs?

There are few models of transportation less comfortable than the standard American railroad coach. This is not reasonable, because of all forms of transport the railroad has unexcelled opportunities to provide comfortable facilities. Yet a railroad coach, for all its spaciousness, is invariably dirty, stiff, and tiring. They are luxurious, but the American public wants comfort.

Railroads are comparatively convenient. Yet even here the uneconomical and Topsy-like development of terminal facilities—even in recent years—has given little evidence of a real appreciation for the desirability of the factor.

The factor of economy can be laid in large part at the door of government regulation. Yet here, also, the roads have demonstrated surprisingly little initiative. The fact that representatives of most roads are now near an agreement on a uniform reduction of passenger fares from the traditional standard of 3.6 cent a mile to two cents is evidence that something can be done.

In the category of speed railroad accomplishment until recently has been practically nil. Freight and express mileage per day has been stepped up remarkably during the last few years, but passenger travel still is unreasonably slow. The roads have begun to realize this handicap and some of them have instituted plans for more rapid service. The logical trend is away from the cumbersome, heavy, lumbering caravans lined with hard green plush to smaller, lighter, shorter, and more comfortable trains capable of getting passengers to their destination within a reasonable length of time.

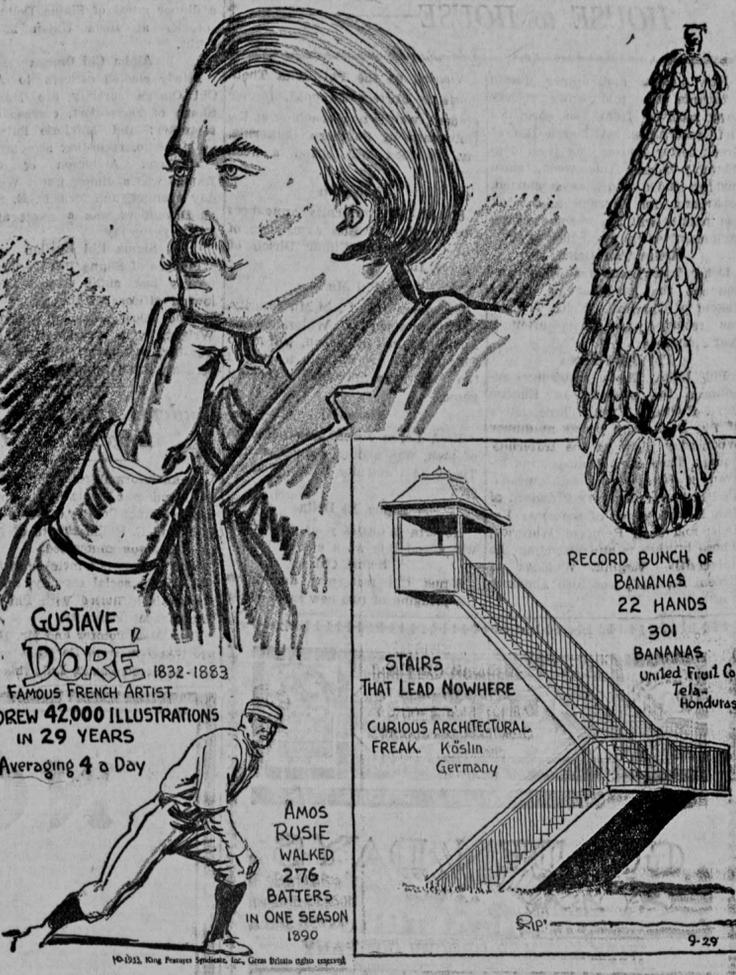

Tentative improvements along these lines already have met with enthusiastic public approval. More improvement of the same kind might settle the railroad problem in favor of the railroads.

Book Bits—
(From Laughing Boy, by Oliver La Farge)
It was a fine spectacle, the many dancing figures in the firelight, their strange masks and the dull earth colors, blue, red, white, yellow, black—a broad white zigzag across a dark chested figure in blue, standing out in the half light of the fire. The dancers were never more intent, the chanting more ecstatic. These were her people, putting themselves in touch with eternal forces by means of voice, strength, rhythm, color, design—everything they had to use. They were creating something strong and barbaric and suitable and still beautiful.

BEHIND THE SCENES - IN HOLLYWOOD -

STUDIO GOSSIP SCREEN COMMENT

HOLLYWOOD—The same picture which almost carried Jean Harlow's bridegroom away to Mexico now threatens the honeymoon that Hollywood confidently expects Lupe Velez and Johnny Weissmuller to take as soon as he gets his final decree of divorce from Bobbe Arns on Oct. 11.

Unless plans are changed, Lupe will have to be in Mexico City with the "Viva Villa" troupe on the date that Johnny is legally free to marry her. Nor is there much hope that Louis B. Mayer will intervene as he did by taking Hal Rosson off the camera of the Villa picture. Of course, neither Lupe nor Johnny will admit that they plan to take any immediate matrimonial plunge. The swimming champ tells me: "I have every intention of marrying Lupe, if she is willing, but we won't know the date and had rather not talk about it until my divorce is final."

In an event, there can be no extended honeymoon, for Lupe has picture assignments and Johnny will be working on the new "Tarzan" film for weeks to come.

Pomp and ceremony are Will Rogers' pet target. The comedian proved it again the other day when he was invited aboard a warship to enjoy a new flying thrill—being in a navy plane as it is catapulted out over the water.

The navy made it a big day for Will. The admiral was present with his staff, and the deck was lined with rows of sailors standing at rigid attention with arms stiffened in salute. Will eyed the sailor boys for a moment, then walked over to them. Suddenly, he grinned. "Won't anybody speak to you?" he asked.

On the evening after a Nevada court granted her a divorce from wrestler Gus Sonnenburg, Judith Allen celebrated her freedom by making a tour of all the late spots with Lyle Talbot and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henderson.

What a cocktail party Bert Wheeler gave after the football game Saturday! In an expansive moment the other evening, Bert invited everybody at the Colony Club to be his guests. Then he had to go to San Francisco to make a personal appearance, so girl-friend Patsy Parker and her mother had to make all the preparations. Bert's apartment was packed—he and Harry James sang and Pat O'Brien gave an imitation of Bert Williams. So many people showed up, they almost had to take down the pictures and hang them on the walls.

QUICK GLIMPSES

The wandering Harry Bannister has arrived in New York and will be coming to Hollywood in a few days to buy a plane and possibly to settle down in Hollywood where he can see more of his little daughter Jane. Harry has been to China, y'remember, also to the Philippine Islands. He's a great pal of Gov. General Murphy, former mayor of Detroit. Harry's from Orion, Mich. Has anybody reported that Junior Laemmle gave Eleanor Holm some handsome silver service for a wedding present? . . . The world's meanest man, for sure, was the practical joker who emptied a paper sack full of ants in the suit of armor Slim Summerville has to wear in his new picture. . . Jeanette Loff and Frank Orsatti have been going to the Club Ballyhoo and other places together. . .

London News

Causes Grain Price Slump

CHICAGO, Sept. 28 (AP)—Stops selling led to a maximum setback of 2 1-2 cents a bushel in wheat today but better buying support then appeared and moderate rallies ensued.
Reports were current after the close that the United States government would announce within 48 hours a plan to help wheat similar to the cotton plan through which loans are being made against cotton at 19 cents a pound.
Today's downturns of wheat prices followed news that conferences at London to fix a quota for Russian wheat exports had proved unsuccessful.
Wheat closed nervous, 3-4-1 1-2 cents under yesterday's finish, corn 1-1 3-8 down, oats 1-2-3-4 off, and provisions varying from 17 cents decline to 20 cents advance.
Notwithstanding that lowest prices for wheat came in the last hour, and that temporarily numerous owners were liquidating their lines, a rather pronounced tendency was shown in some quarters to pay more attention to supply and demand factors.
Corn and oats prices today were responsive to wheat weakness and to enlarged rural offerings of corn. Provisions averaged lower with hog values and with grain, but bacon material was in unusually good demand.

Work on New State Park to Begin Wednesday Morning

Conservation Board's Officials Inspect Local Project

Work on the 800 acre state park in Big Grove township, northeast of North Liberty, will begin Wednesday morning, it was indicated yesterday. C. P. Lechner of Ames, engineer working with the state board of conservation, has been here the last two days making arrangements for machinery to be at the park site by Wednesday morning.

Official hearing on the state park proposal will be held Tuesday in Des Moines by the state board of conservation. Arthur E. Rapp of Council Bluffs, secretary of the board of conservation, was here yesterday looking over the park site.

Another Civilian Conservation corps camp for Iowa City, to work on the 200 acre artificial lake has been requested from the federal government by state officials.

Valuation of City's Utility Companies Reduced by Board

Valuation of public utility property within corporate limits in Iowa has been set at $52,411,813, the state board of assessment and review announced yesterday, according to an Associated Press dispatch. This is a reduction of $309,202 from the valuation of last year when the figure set by the board was $52,721,015.

Iowa City's two public utility companies also came in for a reduction. The Iowa City Light & Power company had its valuation lowered to $770,162, while the Iowa Water Service company had its property assessed at $306,066.

New Officers for Boy Scouts

Kidder, Kelly Will Be Scout Masters of Local Troops

R. J. Kidder has accepted the scout mastership of troop 7, which meets at the Henry Sabin school, and Thomas Kelly will be the new scout master for troop 10, which meets at St. Patrick's school, Boy Scout Director Glen G. Fordyce announced yesterday.

Mr. Kidder will be assisted in the leadership of troop 7 by Don Paden who has long been interested in scout work in Iowa City.

Mr. Kidder has had experience in scouting activities in other cities. Formerly he was superintendent of schools at Lisbon. Mr. Paden has been on the local council camp staff for the last two years.

Troop 7 will hereafter meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays at the Henry Sabin school.

Mr. Kelly has had considerable experience with boys' work at St. Patrick's, having served as track coach for the last three years. Mr. Kelly, who graduated from the University of Iowa in 1931, was a member of both the cross-country and track teams.

The selection of the leaders for these two troops places scouting in the best condition that it has been for the last several years, Director Fordyce said. This makes six active troops in Iowa City, all manned by successful leaders. Boys who have been members of any troop or boys who have never been scouts are welcome to join any troop in town.

Gaffney Speaks

"Think you that centuries will look down upon what you do today," Napoleon once proclaimed to his men," said Judge Gaffney. "Similarly, the Iowa alumni and citizenry will look down upon what you do Saturday with great joy and favor. I am convinced that you will not only hold but whip Northwestern!"

Mayor Breene, speaking for the people of Iowa City, voiced interest, enthusiasm and 100 per cent support.

"You are fortunate in having a coaching staff that merits the respect and admiration of Iowa City and the Rotary club," Mr. Martin, a long time acquaintance of Solem, reminded the team.

Worthley, chairman of the committee, said that application had been made for an office for the work in the post office here and as soon as the application is answered the committee will establish an office and enrollment will begin. It is expected that registration will begin the first of next week.

Phone Company Gives Out New Directories

New telephone directories were being delivered to local patrons yesterday by the Northwestern Bell Telephone company. The entire distribution of approximately 7,000 directories is expected to be completed by this evening.

All Married
It is expected that all the members of the Iowa football squad will be married before spring. District Judge James P. Gaffney promised the football squad yesterday at the Rotary club he would turn on the high lights at the court house and tie the marital knot for them if they so desired. Furthermore, he said, any donations to the judge would be given to the bride.

On His Toes
Mayor Breene, who performed his first marriage ceremony last week, upon hearing Judge Gaffney's promise, began to feel his new business slipping almost before it started and duplicated the offer of Judge Gaffney but added that he would give an additional two dollars to each of the participants.

No Receptions
Private Citizen Herbert Hoover went through Iowa City unhalloed yesterday, while the university aristocracy awaited him on the steps of Old Capitol, while two Iowa City business men awaited his arrival on the road to West Branch, and while an airplane carrying a newspaper photographer sped to the former president's birthplace.

At the Game
"See you in Chicago at the game" was heard all over town yesterday as Iowa Citizens prepared to follow the football squad to Chicago to the Iowa-Northwestern game. The Rock Island special student train leaves at 11 o'clock tonight and the team leaves this morning.

State Park
Work on the state park northeast of North Liberty will probably start Wednesday morning, according to indications yesterday. Machinery is being moved to the site for the building of the dam.

Solem Names 31 Men for Northwestern Trip

Ash, Haltom Included But Will Not Play

Light Workout Ends Pre-Game Drills Yesterday

Coach Ossie Solem named 31 men for the Northwestern trip yesterday and will add one more to the list before the squad leaves for Evanston at 9:30 this morning. He also named Skeets Haltom and Bill Ash for the trip although neither will play because of injuries. The choice for the remaining berth lies between Charles Mau, sophomore end, and Angelus Tertipes, junior guard.

In the last light drill before moving out for the Big Ten opener, the Hawkeyes flashed what will probably be the starting lineup against

Contrary to the usual custom, tickets sent to Iowa by Northwestern will be available as late as 5 o'clock tonight. The price for the ducks, in the west side 50 yard line section is $1.65.

In other years the tickets were taken back as the team left, usually Thursday afternoon. This year, however, they will be on sale at the field house during the regular business hours.

In line with this added help to Iowa fans is the railroad's policy of reduced rates. With this additional cooperation many Iowans will be able to attend the game, guaranteeing the Hawkeyes one of the greatest away from home crowds in Iowa athletic history.

Five Stations to Broadcast Game

Five stations will send the Iowa-Northwestern game over the air tomorrow, with the kickoff scheduled for 2 o'clock. All are Chicago stations. WGN, KYW, WBBM, WMAQ, and WLS-WENR are the stations which will carry the game.

Frosh Given Short Drill by Swenson

Cutting short his cross country practice yesterday, Coach Bresnahan spent most of his time assisting Coach Swenson in getting the track in shape. Although somewhat slowed up by the recent rain Bresnahan hopes to have it in tip top shape for all of the fall track men who will report the first of next week.

Assistant Coach Swenson explained the form of baton passing used in varsity competition to the freshmen, and, after going through the usual routine of exercises, called it an evening. Swenson also explained the marks to be attained by freshmen in order to receive the gold medal offered by the athletic department. Any first year competitor is eligible at any time throughout the year for this award providing he is in good scholastic standing on the freshman team.

Injuries to Warren, Justice Weakens Forward Wall

Minus the services of two regulars, University high journeys to Kalona this afternoon for their opening football game of the season. One of the strongest Blue and White outfits of recent years will begin another season against traditional rivals before swinging into the Eastern Iowa Eight conference battle.

The veteran forward wall couple lost for the game are Harold Justice, left guard, who was injured during practice last Tuesday, and Martin Warren, end, who suffered a shoulder injury Wednesday night.

Outside the two casualties, the University high squad is in good shape after a week of hard driving by Coach Joy Kistler, who will again put his open passing and running game on the field with the hope of stopping the Kalona boys who already this season have a 13 to 7 victory over Keota tucked away in their win column.

Coach Kistler had little trouble picking his backfield starter, having on hand four experienced ball toters to carry the attack. Lorence Fuhrmeister, full back will capably fill the shoes he wore last year until forced out because of an injury. Bob Schnoebelen, veteran half, is speedier this year than last, which should help considerably with his added weight. Bob Meyers will again call signals. Leo Mentzer, reserve half last year, will hold a regular berth at the other back position.

The line problem is a little complicated with the injuries of Warren and Justice, but strong reserves will fill in. Either Goss or Mathas will hold down right end. Miltner, big tackle, occupies his regular position, and another last year's reserve, Brender, will play right guard. Robinson, veteran center, will play that position.

Red Sox Whip Athletics, 4-3

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 28 (AP)—The Boston Red Sox bunched hits in two big innings today to defeat the Athletics 4 to 3 in the first game of a three contest series.

Trailing at the end of the fifth, the Sox tallied twice in the sixth to knot the score and then went out in front in the seventh with another pair of runs.

A threatened Athletic uprising in the eighth was downed after one run was pushed across. Jimmy Foxx brought his season's total of base hits to 200 by cracking a pair of doubles in four trips to the plate.

Tomorrow's scheduled game between the Sox and A's has been moved up to Saturday to be played as a double header.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 28 (AP)—Improvement in Minnesota's passing attack was sought again today by Coach Bernie Bierman in the last drill of account before the opener here Saturday with South Dakota State. It was another quiet afternoon for the Gophers, who are undergoing more or less of a rest cure now after recent heavy work.

Farnsworth, Beers Win, Peer Draws

Promoter Bob Craddock met with internal disturbances in trying to produce his weekly wrestling show last night, but he surmounted all difficulties and brought forth an array of talent, that, though not nationally known, was well matched, and gave the fans real action.

Red Beers, local mat artist who was booked to meet Young Zybysko of Buffalo, was forced to take on Red Niffeneger of Kalona when Zybysko refused to appear. Zybysko arrived but refused to go into the ring unless given his own terms of a one fall, 30 minute time limit match. Niffeneger answered Promoter Bob's emergency call and, though clearly outmatched in ring science, showed his willingness to mix. The Kalona ace had his operator in a tough spot several times though finally succumbing in two straight falls.

In the opening mat attraction Claude Peer, Iowa City and Louis Loria, also Iowa City, grappled to a draw in 20 minutes. Peer was out-drew but had the better of Loria in ring experience and knowledge.

Lee Farnsworth made short work of Shorty Coffee nee Kindle of Iowa City tossing his shoulders flat in nine and one half minutes, in the go before the main attraction.

A surprise awaited customers last night, the show opening with a three round boxing exhibition between Mickey Moore and Johnny Ryan. Ryan won the decision on aggressiveness. Between the semi-wind-up and the main go, Young Sam Langford of Little Rock, Ark., battled Casey Jones of Clinton for two rounds. Langford had the edge on his larger opponent.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28 (AP)—T. J. Harrison of Waterloo, Ia., was elected president of the American association of personal finance companies at the close of its convention today.

While the San Francisco Mission club of the Pacific Coast league has never won a pennant its record for number of managers is unrivalled. In the seven years of its existence it has had seven pilots.

Urge to Win in Open Fray Predominates

Facing Team of Own Weight a Rare Chance

Confident of at least an even chance for victory, Iowa City high invades Washington to try for its second win of the season, against Washington high under the lights tonight starting at 7:30.

Faced with the rare opportunity of meeting a team their own weight, the locals are conceding their opponents nothing and are out to avenge the 12 to 0 defeat at the hands of Washington here last year.

Coach Wells will be able to throw his full strength into the battle with the exception of Olin Zager, who has been out since the Davenport game with a complicated charley horse. Waldo Thomas at guard, who returned to school so late that he got into only part of the Davenport game, will somewhat make up for the loss of Zager, but Coach Wells expects to miss his hard running back.

Outside of these changes the starting lineup against Washington tonight is expected to be nearly the same as the one used against Davenport.

Alvin Miller and Dale Williams will likely start at the wing positions. Jim Roberts and Art Nelson have been slated for the tackle posts. Thomas and Herb Williams will flank Jim McGreevy at center. Dale Marshall, Fred Ballard, Paul Mutchler and George Eakes will likely comprise the backfield.

City high's scoring hopes have been pinned mostly on Marshall and Ballard run hard and are dangerous in a broken field.

In addition, Marshall will do the passing and punting. However, he is in for tough competition in the latter tonight, as Washington averaged 43 yards in six punts against Ottumwa last week.

Libe, flashy half back, appears to be the big scoring threat for Washington.

Florida's "twin" tackles, Starbuck and Stark, have been nicknamed "Hulk" and "Bulk," respectively.

Sauer, Masterson Flip Passes in Pleasing Regularity

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 28 (AP)—Cornhusker forward passes clicked with pleasing regularity in today's scrimmage of varsity versus freshmen. Sauer and Masterson, veterans, and Skewes and La Noue, up from last year's B and freshman squads, did most of the flipping.

Bishop, one of Coach D. X. Bible's "watch charm" guards, was back in suit after a layoff because of an infected tooth, and O'Brien, veteran tackle, said he would be free from a shoulder injury in time for the annual varsity-frosh game Saturday, thus erasing the first injury threat.

St. Pat's Gridders Will Meet St. Mary's of Waterloo Under Lights Tonight

Game Moved Up One Week on Schedule

Lighter St. Pat's Team Will Rely on Speed to Bring Win

Due to a last minute change in the schedule St. Pat's high will tackle the St. Mary's eleven at Waterloo tonight. The game previously scheduled for Oct. 8.

Tapering off this week's practice with a light workout Coach Rev. Ryan ran his squad through their plays, placing much emphasis on a passing attack. Due to lack of weight the Irish will base their attack on speed and deception.

Reports are that St. Mary's has its usual strong team built around many veterans and should give the inexperienced Irish a hard scrap. After the tough break at West Branch when McNamara and Williams were put on the injured list, St. Pat's entitled to a little Irish luck. The one weak point in the Irish squad is the lack of reliable substitutes.

The probable lineup will be ends, Gough and Maher; tackles, Neuhauer and Newark; guards, Williams and Carrigg, Captain Emanuel will hold down the center position. In the backfield Hogan will be at quarter, Healy at right half, Duane at left half, and Toomey at full.

Boxing Has New Coach

Bob Rush Takes Over Varsity Mitt Team

A new, but thoroughly experienced man takes charge of Hawkeye boxing activities this fall as soon as final plans for that branch of the University of Iowa's athletic program are completed. His name is Bob Rush—one that may not mean much in the way of prestige to those familiar with the ring, but who, fighting under the name of Tommy Thompson, has cut a wide swath in welterweight circles of the Midwest.

Experienced
Rush comes to Iowa as the successor to Carl Kaufman, who performed so competently as boxing coach in the last several years. However, the former will be working under no handicap in his attempt to fill the shoes of his predecessor, for he has undergone a thorough apprenticeship at Coe college, where he held a similar position.

No Plans Yet
The new coach has as yet no plans in regard to his method of procedure. However, a formal announcement will be ready shortly. If the ability of Iowa boxers warrant the move, representatives may be sent to the Big Ten tournament at Chicago, and it is with this event in mind that Coach Rush will institute an extensive intra-mural program. No stone will be left unturned in the coach's effort to create an outstanding success in his first venture as a member of the Hawkeye coaching staff.

Braves Win, Tie to Gain on Cardinals

BROOKLYN, Sept. 28 (AP)—Although out hit 14-7, the Boston Braves defeated the Dodgers 5 to 4 in the first game of a double-header today and drew up to within a game of the fourth place St. Louis Cardinals. But the best they could get in the second clash was a 2-2 tie, the game will be replayed tomorrow, which was an open date for both clubs.

Ray Bengue and Huck Betts, the opposing pitchers in the nightcap, flipped shutout ball for nine innings, Bengue giving only four hits. In the tenth Boston scored twice, Betts' aid, let Ralph Boyle single to a single. Chick Outen opened the last half of the frame with a homer, Dan Taylor, batting for Bengue, tripled in the duck and Fred Frankhouse, called hurriedly to Betts' aid, let Ralph Boyle single to drive in the tying run. It was too dark to continue after the tenth.

The Braves won the opener by smacking Emil Leonard for all their runs and six of their hits in the first two frames.

Iowa State Squad Leaves for Denver

AMES, Sept. 28 (AP)—A squad of 23 players left by train tonight for Denver to uphold Iowa State in an intersectional grid battle with Denver university Friday night.

In an hour's practice this afternoon the Cyclones made final preparations. Coach Veenker gave individual coaching on the offensive attack and then ordered a pass drill and final signal review.

Rex II Bows as Hawkeye Grid Mascot

With the opening whistle of the Iowa-Northwestern football game to be played tomorrow at Soldiers field in Chicago, Rex II, huge Great Dane mascot to Iowa athletic teams, will officially assume his duties. Alterations on the uniform once worn by his predecessor and arrangements for his transportation have been completed due to the efforts of Col. Converse R. Lewis of the military department.

The pup, although only a little over 5 months old, weighs 100 pounds and promises to exceed his grandfather in size when he attains his full growth. He has been cared for during the summer by members of Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity who obtained him last spring following the death of Rex I. The trip will be made by Ernest Zimmerman, C4 of Davenport; Alvin Jorgensen, A4 of Elk Horn, and Roderick Van Scoy, C3 of Atlantic. Rex will stay on the Chicago campus while there because of his great dislike for "wildcats."

Cronin, Terry Agree on This Expect Winner to Go Full Route of Seven Games.

By EDWARD J. NEIL (Associated Press Sports Writer) NEW YORK, Sept. 28 (AP)—There aren't many convictions about this coming world series battle between the Senators and the Giants that Manager Bill Terry and Joe Cronin hold in common. But upon this one point they do agree. The total absence of a genuine ball game busting wallop of the Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Al Simmons, Jimmy Foss breed in either outfield levels the two teams off to such an extent that six games and possibly the full seven will be needed to decide this championship.

Terry Says:
"For the first time in many years," says Terry, "we don't have to worry about guys like Ruth and Gehrig who win series all alone. All we've got to beat is a good ball team, not a couple of super men. I expect it will take seven of the most exciting games in the history of the series."

Regretfully, though with full confidence in the pounding power of Heinie Manush, Fred Schulte, "Goose" Goslin and Sheriff Harris, Cronin agrees that there will be no need for dwellers in the streets beyond Coogan's bluff to nail on the storm windows to save the property when the firing starts Tuesday in the polo grounds.

"Hit Anything"
"But we'll hit any kind of pitching the Giants throw at us for all the distance we'll need," he says, "though it won't surprise me if the series goes six or seven games. Only the 'breaks' and lots of them can bring off four straight this year."

Joe may be presenting his outfield case a trifle modestly. Manush, hitting around .330, is a long driving 200-pounder who should find the short polo ground stands to his liking. There's Goslin, faded off to a .290 hitter now, but a veteran who is very liable to sniff the familiar air of the world series and promptly go wild as he did in 1924, when he hit three home runs against John McGraw's last champions, drove in seven runs and batted a tidy .334 for the series. He was just as good against the Pirates in 1925.

Maybe Schulte
Fred Schulte, who led the American league through the early stages of this season with a belting surge, has cooled off to a point around .300 but there's no telling when the uprising will break out again.

These three will carry the Senators' outfield defense burden against both left and right hand pitching. Harris, another big right hand clouter with an average of around .280, alternates in right sometimes with Goslin, but his weakness against right hand curve balling, which also figures to make him a mark for Carl Hubbell's screw ball, probably will keep him on the sidelines waiting pinch duty.

Ott Bangs Them
Of the three men Terry plans to use in the outfield against both left and right handers, only one, Mel Ott, compares with any of the Senators as a distance driver. The youngster from Louisiana, a defensive star in right field where balls bounding off the wall present a tricky problem, has slid off to .285 in his hitting as compared with a life time average of .321 but he still is conking the ball in the pinches. He ranks second only to Chuck Klein in his league in driving in runs.

Fielding Advantage
What scant advantage the Giants can claim in any part of the outfield situation lies strictly in fielding. Both George Davis in center field and Joe Moore in right are its return bow in the east tomorrow night in a struggle between the "Old Fox's" Temple eleven and Coach Billy Laval's South Carolina team.

The Southerners present an aggregation tried and not found wanting in their opening contest last week. Temple opens its season with an inexperienced line, for the most part, and a backfield that has been juggled about considerably since Warner took over the reins in the fall practice.

Neither coach would say "aye," or "no" on the possible outcome of tomorrow's encounter, although both point to strong elevens carrying their hopes on the gridiron.

Fall Baseball Underway as Squad Reports

Four Veterans Form Background of Candidates

Four returning veterans as a unit, Acting Coach Homer Musgrove is handling the squad. Freshmen and sophomores are the picture at the present time. Coach Vogel, who is taking over the team, is being occupied with other duties.

Not Much Yet
Although not much work has been done as yet, Musgrove is getting in a good many practice sessions before cold weather sets in. The squad is being handled by Coach Vogel, who is taking over the team, is being occupied with other duties.

Several freshmen with wide reputations are also working out and giving a good account of themselves. Outstanding among the freshmen are: Lowell Gosser, who last spring pitched his high school team, Manson, to a state championship; Reese, promising freshman from New Providence; Knupp, another pitcher, who hails from Anamosa; and Earl Hahn and Tom Franey, two promising youngsters from St. Louis. Other candidates include: Brown, Peterson, and Underwood, sophomores; and Erickson, Kendrick, and Taylor, freshmen. It is reported that Forrest Twogood, former Iowa U. basketball and baseball star, will work out with the squad tonight. Twogood has been flinging for Toledo, of the American association, this summer.

Yanks Tumble Senators, 11-9

Giants See Runnersup Take Leaders in Wild Game

NEW YORK, Sept. 28 (AP)—While Washington's rivals in the coming world series looked on, the Yankees tumbled the new American league champions to an 11 to 9 defeat today in a wild and woolly game that opened their three game series.

The Giants, in the stands to "scout" the Senators, got an eyelid or two as Washington first let the Yanks score seven runs in the first inning, came back to take the lead twice at 8-7 and 9-7 and finally lost out in the eighth, when three hits and two walks off "General" Al Crowder gave the Yankees two runs and the ball game.

Homer for Ruth
Babe Ruth played a large part in the Yankee victory. He walloped his 32nd home run of the season in the fourth to tie the score and incidentally the Lou Gehrig in their private duel, drove in two more runs and scored two more. The Babe played first base in Gehrig's usual post after the first three innings and contributed an error to Washington's three run rally in the fourth.

Both of Washington's pitcher's, Wally Stewart and Crow were wild at the wrong moments. Stewart gave three passes in the painful first inning and Crowder forced in the last Yankee run with a walk.

Byrd Evens Count
After Washington scored one run in the first, Byrd squared things up by opening the Yankee half with a homer. Then Ruth singled and passed to Gehrig and Ben Chapman loaded the bases. Ruth scored after Lynn Lary's fly and Goose Goslin muffed Joe Glenn's hoist to let Gehrig in. Crosetti walked, filling the bases again and Russ Van Atta, the Yankee starting hurler, cleared them with a double. Byrd up for the second time, brought Van Atta home with a double to wind up the rally.

Nats Come Back
Washington came right back, smacking Van Atta for three hits and getting the benefit of three walks to score four runs. Wilcy Moore relieved the young right hander in the third and the Senators found him for three runs and the lead in the fourth on two hits, a walk and Ruth's error. After Ruth tied the count with his homer, Washington got its final run in the fifth on Luke Sewell's double, Stewart's single and Buddy Myers' fly.

Gymnasts Look Good

Strong Squad Returns for Early Fall Work-outs.

Although they do not perform before record crowds, nor do they receive paens of praise for their endeavors, there probably isn't a grittier crew of athletes on the campus than Coach Baumgartner's little band of sturdy, supple gymnasts. A few moments of watching the boys go through their paces will convert any skeptic.

No Skeptics
But there aren't any skeptics among those who take their gymnastics seriously, for indications point to the most successful year in that branch of athletic endeavor since Coach Albert Baumgartner assumed command, for with Capt. Rudolph Bolte and four other lettermen returning to form the backbone of the squad, a most successful season is in store for the Hawk-eyes.

Plenty of Veterans
The Iowans will be especially strong in the events involving the parallel-bars, rings, high-bar, horse, and tumbling-mats. A wealth of veteran material comprising Bolte, Kringie, Cassell, Rockwood, and Houser is available, and in addition to these men, Coach Baumgartner is counting heavily on the promising performances of Ross Frasher of Colfax, a capable sophomore, and Peterson and Wilson, veterans who have as yet not reported. The most promising of a splendid group of freshmen to date appear to be Nissen of Cedar Rapids, De Hart of Tulsa, Okla., and Waststein of New Jersey.

Though the schedule will not begin in earnest until the second semester, Coach Baumgartner is desirous of having all men interested in gymnastics report at once. More complete plans will be issued at a later date.

NO MORE RUNNING OUT OF INK

—due to this Vacuumatic Filler Pen Invention Holds 102% more Ink—Shows when to refill!

Parker's Revolutionary Pen—Laminated Pearl, ultra-smart and exclusive
PARKER now presents an utterly revolutionary pen—invented by a scientist at the University of Wisconsin. A pen that gets rid of the customary rubber ink sac,—but more, the first sacless pen to abolish piston pumps and valves. It contains no device that will render it useless later. It holds 102% more ink, with no increase in size! And its ultra-smart and exclusive barrel—fully patented—is built up ring upon ring of laminated Pearl and Jet, as shimmering as velvet, or Pearl and transparent Amber that looks like jet till held to the light. Then you can see the quantity of ink within—see when to refill. This eliminates running out of ink at some critical moment during lectures or exams.
This "miracle pen" obsoletes all other types. It is guaranteed mechanically perfect. Go to any nearby counter. Try it today. The Parker Pen Co., Janesville, Wisconsin.

Stocks Show Slight Upturn; Market Quiet

Mining, Alcohol Shares Lead Field in Climb

NEW YORK, Sept. 28 (AP)—Stocks felt better today, notwithstanding a heavy closing for wheat. Final prices for shares showed a goodly assortment of 1 to 2 point gains, though trading was very quiet.

The market's action suggested that it had become a bit overbought yesterday. There were no striking developments along the inflation front. President Roosevelt did not issue the "sound money" proclamation which Wall Street had anticipated on Wednesday. Traders were disposed to move cautiously.

Mining company equities shared with alcohol the most prominent part in the price improvement. U. S. Smelting rose four and McIntire, American Smelting, National Distillers, American Commercial Alcohol and Dome one to three or more.

Alaska Juneau moved up more than a point on news of a 15 cent extra dividend. Celanese was strong. Homestake hopped up 29 points on a couple of late transactions.

For U. S. Steel, American Telephone, Allied Chemical, American Can, Chrysler, New York Central, Baltimore and Ohio, Southern Pacific, Consolidated Gas, Western Union, Du Pont, Santa Fe, Bethlehem Steel, General Motors and other favorites the rise was leisurely but well sustained.

Seaboard Oil again found favor, up about 2. New York city traction and municipal bonds brightened measurably on the new plan to bolster the city's credit. Stock sales totaled 1,442,770 shares.

Call for Bids on Road Work

AMES, Sept. 28 (AP)—Renewing its efforts to put more men back to work on highways, the state highway commission today called for bids on another long schedule of road projects to be considered at the Oct. 13 meeting. Funds made available under the federal emergency highway program will be used to aid in paying for the projects.

The Oct. 13 letting schedule calls for 32.44 miles of paving in Lyon, Taylor, Boone, Calhoun, Madison, Marshall, Pocahontas and Sac counties. Other work is as follows:

Bridges and culverts—Lyon, Calhoun, Madison and Sac counties. Second course gravel, total of 179.74 miles—Pottawattamie, Page, Fremont, Mills, Shelby, Jackson, Keokuk, Van Buren, Washington, Dubuque, and Clinton counties.

Maintenance gravel—Allamakee, Buena Vista, Pocahontas, and Sac counties.

Bond Market Sags Lower

Investors Cautious; Sale Falls Off as Prices Decline

NEW YORK, Sept. 28 (AP)—The bond market drifted listlessly to lower levels today as both traders and investors moved cautiously in the face of existing monetary uncertainties.

Sales lagged notably, the volume totalling only $8,650,000, par value. The average for 60 domestic corporate issues sagged three tenths of a point.

While a number of secondary railway liens transformed early losses into small net gains, the carriers as a whole were somewhat irregular. Gainers of fractions to around a point in this division included some issues of Allegheny corporation, Baltimore and Ohio, Chesapeake corporation, St. Paul, Chicago and Western Indiana, Erie, K. C. Southern, Louisville and Nashville, Nickel Plate and Washaw.

Most of the higher grade utilities and industrials were fairly steady. Moderate advances in these classes were recorded by some of American I. G. Chemical, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Dodge Brothers, Hudson Coal, International Telephone, National Dairy, St. Joseph Lead, United Drug, U. S. Rubber and

Washington Close-Up

The 'Good Neighbor' Policy of F. D. R. Faces Test.

By KIRKE SIMPSON
WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt's "good neighbor" international doctrine has encountered rough sledding at its first important test in Cuba. No man knows what tomorrow may witness there.

Yet there is a bulldog set to the Roosevelt lower jaw. It eludes the casual eye often, due to the president's amiable and frequent smile. It is not the Roosevelt habit to pound a desk or glare his fixed purpose at his conferences. He can be just as unyielding smilingly as another might be who used face and fists to emphasize his resolve.

The president is determined on carrying that good neighbor doctrine through, come what may in Cuba. Those who urged upon him quick resort to the big stick of his celebrated kinsman soon found that out. It may prove a vital factor in the final outcome of the Cuban turmoil.

The World Watches
From the hour of the army-student coup in Havana that overthrew the de Cespedes government almost before it was in at all, the president himself was none too optimistic.

Nor was he lacking in realization that all Latin-America, even the world, was watching, eager to see in practical application just what that good neighbor doctrine meant in the mind of the man who coined the phrase.

Later, even without very encouraging advices from Havana, Mr. Warner Brothers. Loans of Western Union were rather heavy.

There was some profit taking in U. S. government securities, most of the treasuries losing 4-32nd to 7-32nd of a point.

French government obligations were up 2-3-8 to 3-1-2 points, and advances of 1 to 2 or more were registered by those of Australia, Austria, Germany, Italy, Norway and Japan.

Roosevelt began to be more hopeful. "He has a hunch it will come out all right with patience here," was the way an administration aide expressed it to the bystander. While the navy continued to shuttle ships about on stand-by missions, the tension about the White House itself seemed relaxed. Not since he voiced the good neighbor doctrine in his inaugural has President Roosevelt found time or occasion to amplify his thoughts publicly. Yet there is evidence that Latin-America read into his handling of the Cuban situation, even before it had crystallized, a significance to its liking. The extraordinary parade made by the Argentine government in welcoming Ambassador Waddell to his post had its meaning. It so happens that Waddell elected to speak out on the good neighbor theme on his way to his post. He went direct from conferences at the White House and state department to make that speech. He said the Roosevelt doctrine meant a United States foreign service "not wholly concerned with the development of our own interests," a "new ideal in the relations between states." Samuel Brenan Bossard, 21, student from Media, Pa., was beaten by four Nazi brown shirts recently because he failed to salute the German flag as it passed in a parade in Berlin.

Iowa Dealers Will Consider Code for Milk

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28 (AP)—Secretary Wallace today approved a milk marketing agreement covering the Des Moines milk shed and it was forwarded to Iowa City for signature by representatives of producers, processors and distributors there. After the agreement has been signed by those concerned in the Des Moines area, it will be returned here for Wallace's formal signature after which it will go into effect. The agreement provides an important change in the policy by the farm administration. It specifies that distributors may not charge more than the wholesale price maximum of 8-1-2 cents a quart for milk used by relief agencies. The maximum to be charged consumers will be 10 cents and the minimum 9 cents. The price to be paid farmers will be $1.95 a hundred pounds compared with $1.55 which has been the general price paid for their product. While the maximum to be charged consumers and relief agencies and the minimum to be paid farmers are fixed in the agreement, the schedule of prices covering retailers and other distributors remains subject to a final determination 30 days after the agreement goes into effect. During that time a cost study will be made by the administration. The effective date for the agreement will be determined after it has been signed by the industry. To Issue Bonds

DES MOINES (AP)—Issuance of $62,000 in refunding bonds by the Black Hawk county supervisors to take up outstanding debt against the poor relief fund was approved by State Comptroller C. B. Murtagh.

CHAPTER FORTY-ONE

Cavanaugh was now on the way to join her. His youthful recuperation made him feel strong, elastic and full of energy. The star of his luck was riding high. At his own apartment he stopped for a shower and a change of clothes. His irresistible energy had given a whirlwind finish to the business with Mulrooney. The detective had not been friendly but he had been square. Poletski was in a cell and his brief confession of the Amette Santos murder in Mulrooney's hands. Twilight had fallen definitely when Cavanaugh reached Leni's home. She had not known when to expect him because he had not phoned. Nevertheless, she had ordered dinner prepared for two against the chance of his coming. Letters, telegrams, phone calls and visitors were all shunted aside. All were annoyances and nuisances. She went into the dining room. The table with its glistening silver-ware and linen was big enough to seat a dozen. With the aid of Celeste and the butler, Leni removed the middle section and reduced the size by half. She went into the kitchen and prowled into everything. Never before had she wanted to put on an apron and cook. For years she had been so lonely and wretched—and now she was craving a pittance of the simple warmth of ordinary life. And here, tonight, in this unfamiliar kitchen of her own, she felt herself glow and change into a new kind of woman. The love which she had enacted upon the screen—that artificial and unconvincing pretense—had miraculously awakened into reality and flooded her through with a new and golden form of life. Cavanaugh's arrival was touched with a curious note of formality. The butler met him at the door, took his name, admitted him as though he were a casual visitor and went to announce his presence to Leni. The dazed anguish of her remote and recent past had become an ecstasy of very youthful excitement and gratitude. The years the locust had eaten were restored. The secret misery of her hidden self was all melted away. She was as fresh, as delighted, as a girl of seventeen, with her first real beau. In the living room after dinner they stood together, eager for the tenderness and intimacy that had not been possible before the servants. Cavanaugh had told her his story as best he could in fragments between courses. Leni stretched out her hands to him and he looked deep into her eyes from which the tense look of suffering had utterly vanished.

It was the most beautiful moment of her life. Now was the time he should ask her to marry him. "How about your contract at the studio?" he said. "It doesn't matter. I'll see Wingate tomorrow. There won't be too much trouble. It's not as though I were going to another company." There was, she thought, a faint cloud on his smooth brow. Silence. A motor car passing softly out in the street. The ticking of his wrist watch. The faint exhalation of cigarettes and soap. "I want to marry you right away," he said. "Intuition told her he was going to add to the statement. She waited silently. "The devil of it is," he continued reluctantly, "I am up against something I didn't expect. I—you—it's one of those things I don't like to talk about. It looks like we might have to wait... maybe for a long time..." Just for an instant Cavanaugh avoided Leni's eye. In the somber depths of his averted gaze she saw something like shame. That which had been masterful and masculine seemed to drop away from him in ever so slight a degree. "Why must he wait so long? What is wrong?" Leni said at last. A dim tide of color crept into his cheeks. "I—I can't afford to get married. I am broke. I'll have to make a killing first." "Money—I have enough!" Leni said rapidly, as though she were dismissing a trifle. "You can have it all." "I don't get it that way," Cavanaugh answered instantly. She looked at him uncomprehendingly. In the depth of her generous heart this seemed a very silly business. After all, her background was European and the touchiness of American men about money was a mystery. Money to Leni Luneska was, in fact, a mystery. One either had it, or one didn't. One lived in a palace—or starved. She was familiar with both extremes. The motion pictures in the last year had been a golden flood of money. The cash flowed in and it flowed out. The fact was that Leni actually had less in the bank and in bonds than she thought. The ice was thin but she had forgotten the cold water beneath. "I had plenty myself until today," Cavanaugh said, his voice a little off balance. "I've got old-fashioned ideas. When I marry I expect to support my wife." Leni knew, suddenly, that this was what she wanted. A sustaining quality of which money was the symbol. It had to come from the man! A vigorous impulse, automatic and over-mastering, hurled them into each other's arms and locked them tightly together. It was a positive intervention of a force stronger than human arguments. At this moment Celeste was inspired to enter the room with the after dinner coffee. The sight she witnessed caused the cups and paraphernalia on the tray to clatter with her nervousness. There was no embarrassment in Leni's jubilant embrace. She loosened an out-flung arm and indicated a little table between two comfortable chairs. "There, please!" It was immeasurable, this sensation of security and authenticity. "Darling," she said to Cavanaugh, "I feel so established!" Being a woman she already felt it more than Cavanaugh. There was a sensation of contentment all through her body, her house, her clothes, her affairs. She whispered things to him which he could not understand in the language of Mittel-Europa—terms of endearment, that were sweet, sharp, pungent and aromatic. "You see how idiotic it is about money?" she cried happily. But Cavanaugh knew the lack of money was not a trifle to be brushed aside. He was a gambler, accustomed to the crest of the wave and, occasionally, the trough as well. With an ordinary woman the lack would have been not quite so important. It was different to take the responsibility for Leni Luneska—to drag her out of the most lucrative career a woman can know and take her money besides. He made her sit down and listen to him. "I'm not afraid that I can't take care of you," he said, "but this comes at the very time when I couldn't even give you a decent honeymoon. Yesterday I had fifty thousand dollars in the bank. I made a deal with Poletski that I'd get him the best lawyers to be had. They happen to be Littlefield, Meyers, Yates, and O'Bannon. In the old days they all took criminal practice but they're corporation men now. The full battery cost fifty thousand dollars—in advance." A small man who had struggled for his pennies would have carried the check in a stout wallet, but it was characteristic of Cavanaugh that it was no more than a folded piece of paper in his vest pocket. He took it out and showed it to Leni. "There it is—that's what we would have started on. I'm sending it to the law sharks in the morning."

There was a significance in this that Leni did not fail to understand. Although the details were not clear to her, the check was tangled up in that intangible quality that a man like Cavanaugh chose to consider his honor. (To Be Continued)

New Ideas in Economics

Closed Banks, New Currency; Planning for Inflation.

By J. R. BRACKETT
(Associated Press Business Writer)

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inflation problems grow more complicated as the nation's monetary experts seek to avoid new machinery which might hamper that already set up for economic purposes.

The possible methods of inflation range from plans to provide a large inflation which would look like a small one, to plans for a small inflation which would look large, depending on the monetary philosophy of the planner.

Thus, some monetary experts do not like inflation but they believe the appearance of it has a valuable psychological effect — the expectation of inflation accomplishes, in their minds, almost as much as actual inflation.

Want to Avoid Fear

The directly opposite view sees inflation as economically sound but wishes, by making an economic change that appears to the uninitiated to be only moderate, to avoid exciting undue fears.

There is disagreement, too, between those who advocate a direct method which speedily would increase the amount of money and credit and the rate at which it is spent, and those favoring an indirect method which would seek the distribution of a new money or credit in a slow but decisive fashion. Usually the latter method seems to be only moderately inflationary.

For example, plans to free the deposits in closed or partially closed banks might proceed slowly and without sudden effect. The government might arrange for the payment of closed bank depositors by simply relaxing restrictions on openings so that securities held by closed banks could be turned into cash through the use of government credit. This would release hundreds of millions of dollars, a large part of which probably would be spent quickly.

Issuing New Currency

A more direct method involves the use of the government's power to issue $3,000,000,000 in new cur-

Cedar Rapids Men Freed of Charges

CEDAR RAPIDS, Sept. 28 (AP) — Federal officers today dismissed their action against six Cedar Rapids men charged with liquor conspiracy after Roy Pugh, expected star witness for the prosecution, refused to answer questions.

Pugh said his answers might incriminate himself. The defendants were John, Jr., William and Wendell Prochaska, Ed and Lloyd Maish, and Frank Spina.

rency for the retirement of its bonds. This would mean not only an immediate addition to the monetary supply but also an increase in the government's borrowing power insofar as it reduced the government's debt.

Nearly all inflation methods involve the use of government credit in some way, since the government is about the only agency that can borrow on its word only, without offering specific security.

Even issuing new currency is government borrowing. A dollar bill is a promise to pay by the government, and it would replace without interest a bond on which interest has been paid.

Hard Winter Ahead, Say Dixie Prophets

COURTLAND, Miss., Sept. 28 (AP) — Already the "old timers" are predicting a hard winter ahead, with cold weather coming early.

How do they know?

The farmers say the husks of corn are unusually thick and coarse this year.

The woodsmen are saying the barks on certain trees are thicker. One prognosticator says several big fogs in August presaged many big snows.

Another claims that since there were very few cools spells this summer there will be very few warm spells during the winter.

NEWEST HOLLYWOOD AIR ELOPERS

While Hollywood gossips were linking her name to that of Jimmy Dunn, her film lover, Sally Eilers, screen star, upset all the "inside" dope by eloping by plane to Yuma, Ariz., and marrying Harry Joe Brown (inset), film director. Miss Eilers won a secret divorce from Hoot Gibson in Mexico last month.

THE PUZZLE

Put Before U. S. by Liquor

and tariff imposts of $6.10 a gallon for imported whisky, cordials and liqueurs. Of the total, $1.10 a gallon is for internal revenue. That probably would make the cost of imported whisky much higher than domestic brands.

Definite Shortage

But if the amendment were repealed and Americans consumed spirits as they did before prohibition, there would be a definite shortage. In 1917 there were 167,000,000 gallons of whisky consumed.

Today, it is estimated by the bureau of industrial alcohol, there are about 5,000,000 gallons aged over four years and about 10,000,000 aged less than that time.

Increased by Blending

Through proper blending and cutting, this stock could be changed into about 50,000,000 gallons. With the protection of a high tariff, domestic manufacturers are increasing production, with the present run about 1,500,000 proof gallons a month, says the bureau.

Whisky for medicinal use must be aged four years under federal law.

Price

With foreign and domestic brands

competing, price would play a large part. Even in the last few months the quoted price for recognized brands of whisky, in the warehouse, has been increased.

But how and where a person could drink his hard stuff forms the most complex problem for the man in the street. There are almost as many different laws as there are states, and many states have almost as many county laws as there are counties. And many cities are given local option privileges.

Complex Problems

From a national angle federal officials face such questions as proper legislation to control manufacture and sale of liquor in wet states and at the same time adequately protect dry states against invasion of their state rights in regard to transportation of illegal liquor across their borders.

Taxation of spirits also presents a federal as well as a state and local problem. Various administrations throughout the country are approaching these problems now. It is the obvious desire of these administrations to raise sufficient tax monies to meet many pressing obligations, but it is believed by some that too high taxes would encourage smuggling and bootlegging.

Requests Study

President Roosevelt has asked that a study of the federal situation be made, and at least 10 states now have liquor control commissions in the field with orders to arrive at some conclusion for control in their own state. In other states there are independent and unofficial organizations surveying control plans to be submitted to authorities for possible action.

Old Laws in Force

Department of justice attorneys in informal rulings hold that laws based on the eighteenth amendment should be unconstitutional if repealed, and laws in force before the amendment was passed would remain in force.

State Laws

In addition to these federal laws, there are laws in many states that would be revived if national or state prohibition restrictions were repealed. At least four states would revert to old laws, and at least 10 states would have new laws if national prohibition were repealed.

There also would be problems in states that will remain dry even should repeal be voted nationally.

Files Suit

KNOXVILLE (AP) — Suit for $25,000 for defamation of character was filed by Dr. R. V. Mater against Dr. F. M. Roberts, coroner, and Dr. C. J. Cornell as the result of the exhumation of the body of Iell Carson of Melcher and a subsequent inquest. Carson died at Mater's hospital following an appendectomy. A verdict giving the cause of death as unknown was returned by a coroner's jury.
