Washington Bishop Stresses Present Crisis

America is facing the greatest crisis in history, said Bishop James E. Freeman of Washington, D. C., in his address at the fourth university vesper service Sunday evening at Iowa Union.

More than a fifth of the nation's population lives in the six states that are voting on repeal—Pennsylvania, Ohio, South Carolina, North Carolina, Kentucky and Utah.

Almost Certain

They viewed Pennsylvania, South Carolina and Kentucky as virtually certain to add their votes to the 33 states which have already voted for repeal and said there was little doubt that Ohio and North Carolina would do likewise.

Led by Morrison

In North Carolina, the anti-repeal fight has been led by Cameron Morrison, former governor and former senator; Federal Judge E. Yates Webb, co-author of the Webb-Kenyon act which prohibited shipment of whiskey into dry states; Bishop E. D. Mounson of the Methodist Episcopal church, south; and Clyde R. Hery, one of the state's foremost lawyers and orators.

The wet fight has been led by Senator Reynolds, who was elected by 100,000 majority on a wet ticket two years ago and W. L. Murphy of Salisbury, Senator Bailey, a longtime dry, has advocated repeal and return of the question to the states, with a referendum for North Carolina to determine whether it shall allow the sale of whiskey.

The governor said he conferred this afternoon with four Sioux City business men, and that he had talked by telephone earlier with the mayor and sheriff at Sioux City and felt that the local officers could cope with the situation.

The mayor and sheriff suggested troops, but no formal request was made for them. Governor Herring said, "I would require a request in writing from an authorized peace officer."

Only 19 head of cattle, from farms just outside the city limits, reached the market here today, although holdovers swelled the official receipts beyond that number.

SEEN from Old Capitol

By TOM YOSELOFF

The rise of a new profession, made by the joining of two older professions, is recognized in a new manual issued by Prof. Edward F. Mason of the school of Journalism and Vernon Pope, Sunday editor of the Des Moines Register and Tribune. The manual, a pioneering effort, will serve as the first textbook for a class in newspaper photography.

The work of news photographer is covered in 114 mimeographed pages, and 20 chapters. The work is comprehensive in scope, covering all the processes of the news picture, from camera exposure to delivery of the printed paper. The book contains 79 exercises for class use in preparation and procedure.

News photography combines qualities of two professions—journalism and photography. The cameraman who must present the day's news in pictures must have a reporter's "nose for news" as well as a photographer's artistic sense. Though it is a relatively new field, news photography is claiming attention in schools of journalism throughout the country. The class at the University of Iowa was begun four years ago by Professor Mason.

Elery Walter, who will give the second graduate college lecture here Friday, will be forced to cut short his appearance here. He will not arrive until Friday afternoon, it was learned yesterday. A luncheon Friday in his honor, planned by University club, will have to be eliminated from the speaker's brief schedule.

The author of numerous books on family life and parent education, Professor Groves is considered an authority on the subject. His lecture is being given under the auspices of the Iowa Child Welfare Research station.
