Orientation Nears Close

Leaders of Freshman Women to Hold Meeting

Orientation work for freshman women will close for the year with a meeting of faculty advisers, group leaders and assistant group leaders in the woman's lounge at Iowa Union at 4 o'clock this afternoon. An evaluation of the work done this year will be made in order that plans for next year may be improved.

Special meetings in the form of teas or dinners have been held during the last week for individual groups of freshman women. No special programs have been presented at any of the gatherings and only a few held discussion afterwards. The concluding meetings have nearly all been given in the faculty advisers' homes merely as social gatherings to establish better acquaintances.

Advisers

The advisers are: Mrs. Fred Pownall, Mrs. C. J. Lapp, Mrs. Christina Ruckmick, Mrs. J. J. Runner, Mrs. Harry Bunker, Mrs. Harold Anderson, Mrs. E. P. Kuhl, Mrs. Ernest Horn, Mrs. H. A. Mattill, Mrs. Craig Baird, Mrs. W. H. Morgan, Mrs. A. V. Hardy, Mrs. R. B. Wylie, and Mrs. H. C. Harshbarger.

During the year, mass meetings have been held and addressed by Mrs. Adelaide Burge, dean of women, as in previous years. But in addition, the intimate group discussions have been added. At intervals other activities have been presented to enable the women to become better acquainted with each other, faculty members, and upperclassmen.

Tea, Review

The first of these activities was a tea given at the home of Mrs. Ernest Horn. Later a style review was planned to aid new students in the selection of clothes. From time to time other teas, dinners and social gatherings have been held, all under the auspices of University Woman's association, an association of which every woman automatic-

Guarding Student Health

THE WARNING issued Tuesday by Dr. Milford Barnes of the student health service on the spread of amoebic dysentery illustrates another phase of the invaluable service which this department renders to Iowa students daily.

Since its beginning here as a university unit several years ago, the department has handled thousands upon thousands of cases, and aided thousands of students.

Built on the idea that an ounce of prevention is worth many of cure, the department set-up is for prevention of disease. Water and milk inspection, investigation of housing conditions and swimming pools, conferences and room calls, and laboratory examinations are a few of the services of the department.

Of immeasurable importance is the work of the communicable disease division. It is impossible to know, or even attempt to estimate, what serious spread of diseases this division has succeeded in staving off through preventive investigation.

The October report of the health department, issued yesterday, indicates that more than 3,000 distinct cases of aid to students were handled during the month. About one-fourth of this number were examinations of water and milk supplies and swimming pools.

Several hundred inspections of sanitary and housing conditions were made. The communicable disease division investigated cases of chickenpox, amoebic dysentery, erysipelas, poliomyelitis, and whooping cough.

The greatest number of cases, 2,335, were handled by the student health and outpatient division. These consisted of physical examinations, room calls and consultations, office calls, and gymnasium supervision.

Every one of the 10,000 or so students who come to Iowa each year come under the eagle eye of this department. It guards students health directly through physical examinations and treatment, and what is more important, indirectly through investigation of diseases and nuisances, and examination of food supply and sanitary conditions.

The student health department is of prime necessity to the university.

One of the Larger Laughs

EVERY ONCE in a while the public at large is treated to a snicker at the expense of some public servant or other who uses his office to get off a special idiosyncratic quirk. This time it's Governor Talmadge of Georgia who has a bone to pick with the courts.

Governor Talmadge, before this, had a bone to pick with the Georgia public service commission. The commission needed to lower its rates. But the courts kept popping them up again. Now the governor threatens with political extinction all judges who foil the commission's good work.

Perhaps the threat will work. It did work in the case of the public service commission when that august body was threatened with having to go out and find another state for which to be public service commission.

All the arguments against popular election of judges fail to hold water with a governor like Talmadge. What good would it do the electorate to forego that sweet privilege only to have the judges fired by the governor, who would probably also do the hiring?

And while the judges on the Georgia benches might be men of high integrity and intense honesty, they are but pawns in the great game of politics, whichever way you look at it, or play it.

For Good Old Notre Dame

WHERE the falling fortunes of Notre Dame's football team will finally drag the good name of the institution is a matter for the future to reveal. In the meantime few football fans and followers of the Irish are not sympathetic toward the school. As each week brings word of another loss to athletic glory for the institution made famous by the late Knute Rockne more and more sympathizers spring up.

But what about the school? One hears so much of the Notre Dame football team that one would think there would be no school if there were no winning team. And how true is that statement? Perhaps the registrar of Notre Dame can supply figures to show that when the team wins, the enrollment increases, and vice versa. But how much does that mean?

If Notre Dame's educational facilities are of the best, she should have nothing to fear. For it is the general impression of most intelligent people that if a school cannot stand without winning football, it isn't worth standing at all.

And if the Notre Dame registrar sprouts gray hair over the failure of the 1933 team to win games, he might console himself in the fact that Knute Rockne gave the school enough publicity in his time to carry it on through many more years of adversity on the gridiron.

Pan-American, Limited

(From The New York Times)

On the eve of the sailing of Secretary Hull and the American delegation for the Pan-American Conference at Montevideo, the President cut down the possible agenda to a very small minimum. He announced that the United States would have to "forego" discussions of currency stabilization and also of tariffs. As these were the subjects of greatest prominence and importance, the conference is reduced almost to a nullity, so far as practical results are concerned, before it even begins. It may hear a lot of sentimental addresses, and then proceed to ask what can be done to promote aviation and build good roads. But what all those concerned had thought of as the most vital matters will be taboo. It is a little difficult to reconcile this with the "good neighbor" policy of Mr. Roosevelt. In this case the good neighbor warmly shakes hands but tells his guests and hosts that they must not talk about what most concerns them.

Secretary Hull has been busily conducting negotiations with Argentina and other South American republics looking toward reciprocal trade agreements. Perhaps he will not be forbidden to pursue that work. Yet how can it be brought to fruition unless there is some way of getting around the President's refusal to have anything to do at present with "import prohibitions, permanent customs duties, and the like"? The Secretary hopes, in imitation of Mr. Root when he was secretary of state, to visit several South American capitals and establish, as the President hints, "personal relations with their statesmen." But he will find that they all speak a language containing the proverb: "Deeds prove love, not fine words." It is possible, however, that they will be disposed to thank President Roosevelt for emasculating the Montevideo Conference before it starts, instead of waiting, as he did with the London Economic Conference, to put it to death when half way through its work.

GOOD MORNING

Even in the gloomiest moments of world upheaval the determined optimist can find reasonable cause for rejoicing. This is as true now as ever, even though the cause of world peace seems black and though civilization appears to be reaching new heights of insanity.

But through the whole unintelligible mass, one movement of extreme importance is more or less clearly defined in the ever increasing "subordination of capital rights and property rights to human rights," as Secretary Wallace put it in his speech at Muncie, Ind., Tuesday night.

Wallace did not say that this object has been reached; he merely said that it would have to be if "the new deal means anything." But that it is a goal toward which a large portion of the world is striving somewhat consciously is evident after examination.

The movement was given its first great impetus in Russia, when a theoretical "dictatorship of the proletariat" was established after the revolution of 1917. Here, if conflicting advices are rightly interpreted, the object has been achieved and human rights are the very foundation of the social order.

Next came Italy. Here the movement took another form, with the enshrinement of the state as a sort of sub-diety and with the subordination of all rights, whether of capital, property or humanity, to it. But the state, even under a dictator such as Mussolini, is nothing but the people personified. The result in advantages to the Italian people is rather generally known.

The same development took a less radical form in England, but it nevertheless is apparent there. For years the socialist and labor parties have held positions of strength and influence in British politics and a great body of their doctrine, looking toward economic justice for the masses, has been embodied in British law. The extent to which these doctrines have been adopted explains, in part, the surprising strides made by England in recovering from the depression in recent months.

In one sense, this movement began in Germany only a short while ago with the formation of the totalitarian state fusing all classes into one. But actually, it began in Germany before it was evident on a large scale anywhere else in the world. The Kaiser himself founded the system of worker's insurance, old age pensions, and other progressive measures far in advance of other nations and developed a surprisingly progressive economic and social order.

The same thing, though on a less startling scale, has been apparent in France, where the socialist party under Leon Blum has gained increasing strength.

Whatever the form modern states are taking, they seem to have this one thing in common, with the exception of a few far eastern nations. All of them are bending their efforts to secure for the everyday human being some of the comforts and privileges which the modern industrial machine is able to provide and to establish some sensible system of planning for a rational society. However irrational some of the methods might be, the goal is there, and that is encouraging.

BEHIND THE SCENES - IN HOLLYWOOD -

STUDIO GOSSIP SCREEN COMMENT

By HARRISON CARROLL
HOLLYWOOD—If it isn't love, why is Gary Cooper bending every effort to leave Hollywood to join Sandra Shaw, who airplane it east, or at least was supposed to do?

The film colony's most talked about couple of the moment returned from their Arizona trip apparently minus a marriage license, but still very much engaged. And the fact that Sandra wore no ring didn't fool some of us. We happen to know that the square baguette diamond ring of awesome proportions had to go back to the jeweler for refitting.

Gary and his party didn't do any hunting, as they expected to when they left here. They played golf and loafed around. Then, deciding that the motor trip back was too arduous, they had Gary's chauffeur fly up to get the car and returned to Hollywood by train.

In all probability, the fall film star will take a several months' vacation from the screen. Don't be surprised if he and Sandra are married in New York and go on to Europe for a honeymoon.

A certain man-about-Hollywood is very amusing when in his cups. The other night, relates Allen Rivkin, he arrived at a party in a noisy state.

A friend took him aside. "What are you doing here like this?" he asked. "Were you even invited?" The drunk drew himself up in offended dignity. "Not only was I invited," he said, "but I declined."

Next to Marie Dressler, the happiest looking person at the big testimonial in her honor was George Hill, the director. He came to the party with Frances Marion, his estranged wife (Mary Pickford was with them, too) and from all indications the rumored reconciliation between the pair is near at hand, which won't make studio heads feel badly at all, for the pair make a great writer-director combination.

Though she made the grandest speech of her life, poor Marie was so nervous before all those 800 guests that she scarcely could eat a thing. Unbeknownst to her, she knocked a piece of chicken off her plate into the lap of Toastmaster Edgar Allen Woolf, who sat nearby. A few minutes later, Woolf urged her to try to eat something; Marie glanced nervously at her plate.

"There, my dear," she said, "see, I've eaten half of it already."

QUICK GLIMPSES

One of the most amusing sights of the week was Elbert Franklin arriving with his car loaded with white wicker furniture to put in Toby Wing's dressing-room. Thanks to skillful work by surgeons, the scar Lyle Talbot got in the auto crash is almost invisible. Lyle is making the rounds of the late spots again. He and a pretty brunette helped usher in the new show at the Club Ballyhoo Thursday night. . . . Kitty O'Dare, New York actress, who is so rich she works only for the fun of it, was another ringsider at this spot.

Too tragic the death of Hugh Trevor, who would be alive today if he hadn't been so impatient to resume his normal life after an appendicitis operation. Young Trevor was the nephew of Mrs. William Le Baron and a popular figure in Hollywood.

SEEN from Old Capitol

By TOM YOSELOFF

The dinner of Iowa alumni in New York last Friday night was quite an affair, if the line-up of well known names is an indication. Among the alumni and their friends were Vilhjalmur Stefansson, arctic explorer, accompanied by the novelist Fannie Hurst; Weare Holbrook, writer and co-author of the comic strip, "Clarence," in the New York Herald-Tribune; J. J. McConnell, national personnel secretary of Y.M.C.A.; Attorney Robert Swaine; George E. Roberts, vice president of the National City bank of New York; E. J. Cornish, chairman of the National Lead company; J. L. Kinmouth, editor of the Asbury Park (N.J.) Press; and Dr. Gertrude Van Wagenen of Yale university.

The feature of the evening was an address by President Walter A. Jessup before the 106 Iowans, their wives, husbands, and friends. The group exchanged telegrams with Detroit, Mich., alumni, who were also meeting that night, on the eve of the Michigan-Iowa game, and sent a wire of good wishes to Coach Ossie Solem, who was attending the Detroit meeting.

Hockey Teams Will Invade City Tomorrow for Women's Tourney

Six Teams to Play During Next 2 Days

Individuals Will Be Chosen for Midwest Hockey Team

Iowa City women's hockey field will be the scene tomorrow and Saturday of the midwest women's hockey tournament. Teams from Madison, St. Louis, Milwaukee, North Shore of Chicago, West Suburban of Chicago, and Iowa City will compete for the honor of having their individual members on the midwest hockey team.

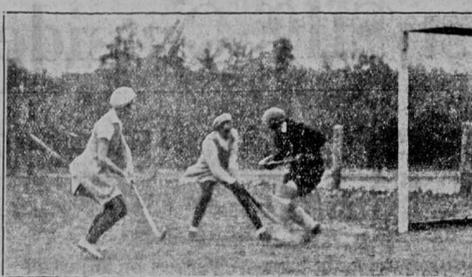

This midwest team, which will be chosen by a selection committee of the midwest association, will go to Chicago Thanksgiving week-end where it will compete with selected teams from each of the other four sections of the United States.

A feature of this tournament will be the operation of the United States Field Hockey association umpiring rating system, the aim of which is to secure the best possible officials throughout the United States. Persons who have been rated local B for two successive years and recommended by their local umpiring center for national rating may try out at the section tournaments for national A and B ratings.

Their tryouts consist of umpiring an actual game under the observation of a committee of three who are possessors of national A ratings.

Ratings
In order to secure a local C or B rating, it is necessary for the candidate to take a written test and a practical test at her local umpiring center where she will be judged by a committee of persons who have received local or national ratings.

This year two B ratings and three C ratings have been given by the Iowa City umpiring center which is in charge of Jane Shur-

Hawk Regulars Scrimmage in 1st Stiff Outside Drill of Week

All 1st String Players Back in Lineup Except Schammel as Iowa Prepares for Game

Schammel Continues Hospital Treatments for Infection; Purdue Battle Looms as "Toughest Yet"

Coach Ossie Solem took advantage of the cessation of bone-chilling north winds that have swept across old Iowa field all week, and hustled his Hawkeyes out onto the frozen turf of the practice field, yesterday, for their first and only hard drill of the week.

Slate-grey clouded grid skies, bruises, which have hovered over the Hawkeye camp ever since the Michigan conflict, spread apart and went the way of the north wind as all the Iowa regulars but one suited up for yesterday's practice session and showed definitely that they were ready to do battle against Purdue Saturday.

Only Znd Schammel, veteran giant guard, still remains on the cripples list. He is still receiving treatment at the University hospital for his glandular infection but will be ready to go again by Saturday.

The big Iowa guard, who injured his leg over a month ago before the Minnesota game, has had chronic recurrence of the infection and has been forced to have his leg treated regularly ever since.

Dick Crayne, chief ground gainer of the Hawkeye eleven, is still limping badly from a severe "charley horse," the result of the battering received last week end, but has responded to treatment and will start the game at the fullback post. Russ Fisher and Bernie Page, other Iowa cripples, are again occupying their positions in the regular lineup, though Page is still favoring his twisted knee.

Plenty of Worries With the assurance that all his first string men will be in condition to give their best against the strong Boilermakers, Coach Solem still has enough worries to turn his hair white. Each passing day finds Purdue stick rising in the minds of sports critics and rival coaches. Michigan, doped the season long as the best team in the Big Ten, has seen its place in the sun usurped by the Boilermakers, who, while starting slowly over an unimpressive 13 to 6 victory over Ohio U., followed by a tie with Minnesota after being badly outplayed, have improved so rapidly as to be an almost entirely different team.

Purdue players are savagely mourning their lack of a scheduled game with the Wolverine and will be bent upon trouncing Iowa to prove their superiority over the Michigan clan.

Tough Battle Looms The Hawkeyes, with no visions of a championship to be won at stake, will be fighting desperately for an upper berth in the conference standings. It will be a different Hawkeye team than the one which took a terrific beating and the short end of an 18 to 0 score at the hands of Purdue last year. But the memory of that beating still rankles and a victory Saturday would do much to write that memory off the books.

For the second week in a row, line play will be featured when Iowa takes the field against a Big Ten rival. Purdue's line, composed entirely of seniors, all of whom have three years of competition to their credit, has pulverized the attacks of such teams as Carnegie Tech and the Irish of Notre Dame.

Iowa's forward wall will slightly outweigh the Purdue line, and, though only including two seniors, will not be forced to bow in the smallest degree in aggressiveness. Michigan, famed throughout the conference as having a stonewall line that moved forward through all opposition, found itself tied down in the Iowa conflict, and battled to a standstill.

Iowa will spot the Boilermakers several more years of experience in the backfield selection comparisons.

tinged with the purple of bad

Two of the Boilermaker backs are seniors and the other two are juniors. Iowa will start its usual quartet of three sophomores and one senior.

The Hawkeyes long session yesterday, was devoted to a drill on both offense and defense. Coach Solem fears the long bullet-like passes of Purvis who slings them over the goal line from as far back as mid-field. But Purvis isn't the only passing threat in the Purdue backfield as the entire quartet has been rightfully dubbed the "twelve threat" backfield, each member being able to run, pass, or kick.

Iowa will further experiment with a passing attack of their own developed in the Wolverine game when the Hawks collected 113 yards through the air.

A light drill today will conclude the home workouts for the Purdue game as the Hawks enroute at midnight tonight for the long trek to Lafayette. The trip will be broken up with a stop-over in Chicago where the Hawkeyes will work out on Stag field tomorrow. The team will arrive at Lafayette about 4 o'clock in the afternoon and rest up until game time.

Purdue Determined to Win 'Title' Contest

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Nov. 15 (AP)—Safely over the Notre Dame hurdle with a resounding 19 to 0 triumph, Purdue's undefeated gridiron combination will make its final home appearance of the season here Saturday when it tackles the husky Hawkeye eleven in one of the two games over the week end that are expected to determine the Big Ten title question. While the Boilermakers are meeting the Hawkeyes in the "Dad's Day" feature here, Michigan will meet Minnesota at Ann Arbor, and a defeat for either team would be fatal to title hopes.

Iowa will invade the Ross-Ade stadium with one of the best balanced offenses in the middle west, an offense that has not failed to score in any game this season and held the Wolverines even in the matter of touchdowns. Purdue's scouts have reported that the Hawkeyes are capable of upsetting any team in the conference, and will present a forward wall as tough as any defensive combination the rambling Boilermaker backs have stacked up against all season.

Dick Crayne and Joe Laws, the mainstays of the Hawkeye power attack, are expected to provide a severe test of the courageous Boilermaker line that turned in a brilliant performance in effectively squelching all of Notre Dame's touchdown threats with an impenetrable defense.

Although the Notre Dame struggle was a grueling affair, the Boilermaker squad came through the battle in good physical condition, and Coach Noble Kizer expects to be able to start his colorful "dozen-threat" backfield intact, with Duane Purvis and Jim Carter at halfbacks; Fred Hecker at fullback, and Paul Pardonner, at quarterback.

He also expects to maintain the same forward wall alignment that reached the heights against Notre Dame, with Lowery and Duggins at ends; Capt. Fehring and Ungers at tackles; Febel and Huggins at guards, and Skoronski at center.

Iowa Gymnasts to Meet Catholic Sokol Team, Dec. 9th

Little Hawks Show Revival of Old Form

The indomitable Little Hawks of Iowa City high, apparently unsubdued even after their University high debacle last week, clicked up and down frozen Shrader field yesterday in one of their most spirited workouts of the season.

The entire squad joined in the spirit as they raced through their cheering session. The regulars played yesterday as they haven't since the Grant high game, slashing through the reserves for long gains that rolled up four touchdowns in the half hour of scrimmage meted out by Coach Wells.

Stiff Opposition And it wasn't a dispirited second eleven that they faced. James Snyder, Miller, and H. Williams, all with experience on the first eleven led their second team fellows but were unable to withstand the effective blocking and driving of the first team.

Ballard at Full Big Fred Ballard, the outstanding star of the game last Friday at end, was back at his fullback post yesterday and was one of the big reasons why the team clicked. He and Bill Kittridge, who has apparently found himself in the last few weeks, teamed up in line-crashing drives that left a line of strewn tacklers in their wakes. George Marech, who stood out during the short time he was used last Friday, was at the center position with McGreevey moving to guard.

Marech who broke his nose badly about a month ago, plays with this member in a guard. Coach Wells indicated that barring injury, Marech will be favored to start at the pivot position in the final game of the year.

Hopes for a victory over Grinnell are hardly within the realm of possibility, but if the Red and White can be keyed to the pitch they were yesterday, they will make a terrific battle of their last game.

Crack Troupe of Performers to Appear Here

Woman's Team Will Put on Exhibition Also

Saturday evening, Dec. 9, is the date set for the gym team's exhibition match at the field house with the crack Catholic Sokol squad of Cedar Rapids, Coach Albert Baumgartner announced yesterday. "That the program will be one of the most ambitious ever undertaken by Hawkeye gymnasts is indicated by the extensive preparation which the university squad is undergoing. Coach Baumgartner has had his group working away in faithful fashion pushing up their routines and learning new stunts for the last six weeks in an effort to have their tumblers appear favorably in competition with their more experienced guests of the evening.

The Cedar Rapids Sokols will bring with them to Iowa City, a versatile and talented group of gymnasts who as a unit have been rated highly in National Catholic Sokol circles, and also, the women's squad of their organization who together with several special acts arranged by Coach Baumgartner, will perform between the events scheduled for the male gymnasts.

Gym team officials feel that the exhibition will be one of the choice events of the winter indoor season, and are making arrangements to handle a capacity audience.

Spears Revises Defense MADISON, Wis., Nov. 15 (AP)—Coach Spears revised the Wisconsin defense today and it produced marked results when pitted against the Frosh eleven in scrimmage. The yearlings, using Ohio State plays, were stopped effectively in both their running and aerial game.

Big Ten Iron Man

Pug Lund of Minnesota Thrives on Injury as Rival Teams Can Testify Fully

By PAUL MICKELSON (Associated Press Sports Writer)

CHICAGO, Nov. 15 (AP)—Bones may be cracked and stretchers called in the overtime service when the Minnesota-Michigan steamrollers of football collide at Ann Arbor Saturday, but you can count on "Pug" Lund to stick in the battle. He's the iron man and "Spartan" of the Big Ten football wars this season. A break here and there can't stop him.

The flashy Minnesota back has played 340 out of a possible 360 minutes, going the full route against Indiana, Purdue, Pittsburgh and Northwestern, and all but 10 minutes in each of the South Dakota, and Iowa games after a Gopher victory was assured, but that performance isn't half the story. The other part is his courage.

Dislocated Finger "Pug," his real name is Francis Lund, gave one of his greatest displays of courage in the Pittsburgh game. In catching a punt, he dislocated the little finger on his right hand.

Banged up ankles, bruised ribs and tackles that would make the average type of player fold up for the day have seemed to add only that much more impetus to his drives for Minnesota points.

Beta Theta Pi in Fast Speedball Win Over Sigma Nu's

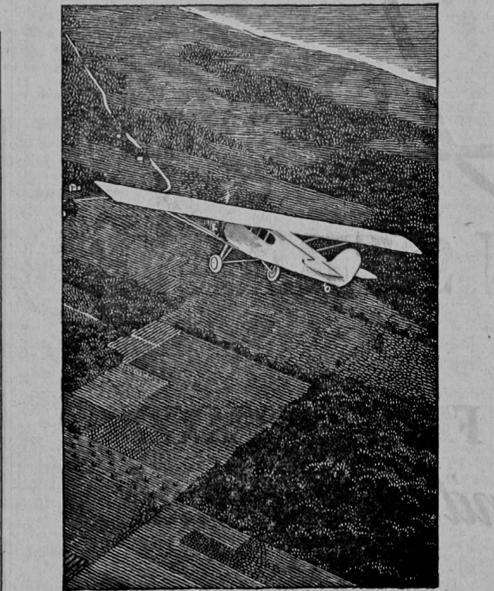

Beta Theta Pi maintained first place in section II of the interfraternity speedball league when they trounced Sigma Nu 7 to 4 yesterday afternoon in a game played on the athletic field west of the field house.

The Betas have now won three games and lost none, while the defeat shoved Sigma Nu down into third place in the standings. This afternoon Alpha Sigma Phi encounters Alpha Tau Omega in a battle for last place in section I. Neither team has yet won a game.

Frosh Gridders Work With Varsity Eleven With only a few practices remaining Coach Bill Boelter's team spent most of their time at last night's practice preparing the varsity for the Purdue game.

A short time was spent in smoothing out the Purdue plays and then two frosh teams galloped down the field to take on the varsity. The remaining members of the squad were divided up and scrimmaged under Coach Green.

Hawkeye Basketeers Demonstrate Sharp-Shooting Eyes in Early Season Drills

BY PERCY CROSBY

Grim, Selzer Prove Best in Offensive Drill

Pops Harrison Uses Two Combinations in Scrimmage

Demonstrating that they have already found the range of the basket, the Hawkeye basketeers were hitting from all angles in last night's lengthy drill which consisted entirely of offensive work.

Assistant Coach Pops Harrison first sent the varsity men through the drill in groups of three to work the ball down to the goal, then followed up with a long scrimmage on offense against a Greenie team.

Two combinations were used in the drill. The first saw Bastian at center, Moffitt and Barko at forwards, and Grim and Selzer at the guard positions. The other quintet consisted of Blackmer at center, Schwartz and Rosenthal at forward, and Bobby alternating with Grim and Selzer at guard.

The players were handling the ball very cleanly and worked well together. The work of Schwartz and Rosenthal, sophomores, was particularly impressive. Both are clever floormen and have good basket eyes. Grim and Selzer were the hottest men on the floor, dropping them in with regularity from long and short distances.

Practices will continue on the gymnasium floor until the new varsity court is completed, which will probably not be for 10 days yet.

15 Millikin Cagers Report

DECATUR, Ill., Nov. 15.—Fifteen men answered the first call for the 1933-34 Millikin basketball team here Monday with only two lettermen in the ranks. Melvin Goldman of Taylorville and Walter Spillman of Centralia were the last year emblem winners to start workouts under Assistant Coach Wayne "Hank" Gill. Two other lettermen, Joe Rollinatis of Nokomis and Dan Hallahan of Decatur, are still out for football.

Snow, Cold Keeps Minnesota Inside

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 15 (AP)—Another little Brown Jug crusade, involving a Minnesota defiance of Michigan's reputation, takes 23 Gophers away from home Thursday for apparently the best Macon and Gold chance to snare the Wolverines since 1927.

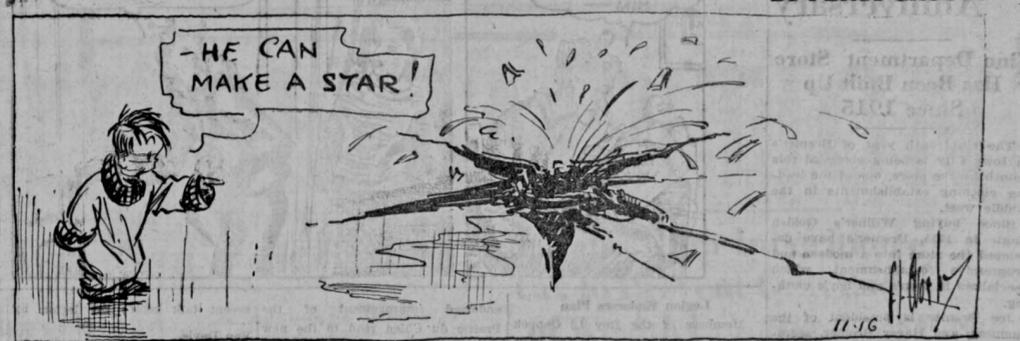

A snow storm and cold weather kept Bernie Bierman's eleven inside again today and secret drill continued. It was made known, however, that Bob Tenner, casualty of the Northwestern game, exchanged left end today with John Roning on the regular team.

Iowa State college has inaugurated a "football field meet," with punting and passing for accuracy and distance and ball-carrying against time as feature events.

U. High to Open Cage Practice on Monday Afternoon

University high basketball squad will be called for its first scheduled practice next Monday afternoon said Coach Joy Kistler last night.

Allowing a weeks layoff for those boys who finished the football season last week against City High, the river school mentor hopes that a weeks rest will do the boys good.

A veteran squad of nine members, left from the Blue squad of last year, will take up the indoor sport. Of last year's squad only one regular will be missing, Zimmerman graduating.

Postponement Necessary for Swim Events

Armbruster Urges All Splashers to Sign for Pentathlon

Coach Dave Armbruster has been forced to postpone until Friday the first event of the intramural swimming pentathlon because only three men have signed up for the competition.

"Every man who passed his freshman swimming test is eligible for the pentathlon and has a real opportunity to distinguish himself," said Coach Armbruster.

"I should like to see the names of several hundred boys on the entry blank posted on the bulletin board in the field house pool. The freshman swimming team used this same type of pentathlon last year and found it to be the best kind of sport," Armbruster concluded.

The five events included in the pentathlon are: 50 yard free style, 50 yard breast stroke, 50 yard back stroke, 120 yard individual medley, and 100 yard freestyle.

Each man competes in every event and is timed for the distance. Each contestant will score no matter where he places. One hundred points will be given to the man who turns in the best time in each event and all other competitors will be awarded points corresponding to their slower times.

At the end of the five weeks period the man having the highest number of points will receive a small swimming statue and the next nine ranking men will be awarded medals.

Events must be completed by Friday of each week, but the time trial may be swam at any time before that day. A running score will be kept on the bulletin board in the pool so each man will know where he stands.

The balanced competition of the pentathlon allows the average swimmer as good a chance as the specialist in one event. The pentathlon serves the purpose of developing all around swimmers for a man would almost have to place in all five events to be among the final winners.

Irish Start Cage Drills

Declaring in no uncertain terms that "for once they must really be fighting Irish!" Coach Dick Connors formally opened St. Pat's basketball practice at the Shamrock gym last night. A group of exacting 29 candidates reported for trial.

Of the score of aspirants only Emanuel, guard, and Boyd, forward, were lettermen and it is around these two veterans that Coach Connors will build his team. However, it is likely that Emanuel may be shifted to center in order to utilize his height in the event that no other suitable man is found among the men who reported last night.

Connors realizes the difficulty of the task awaiting him in replacing men lost through graduation last June and rejuvenating the winning spirit of the Irish, and it is for this reason that the coach of the Green is demanding sincere cooperation from his players in the approaching campaign. He is expecting no miracles in the early part of the schedule, but is confident that as the season progresses, the St. Pat's will provide stiff opposition for opponents.

The men who reported last night were Emanuel, Boyd, McNamara, Toomey, Hanlon, Fitzpatrick, Burger, Gordon, Love, O'Neill, Neuberger, Leuz, Carrigg, O'Leary, Alberts, Duane, Newkirk, Maher, McPartland, and Hogan.

Practice will continue apace each night at the Irish gym, with a brief interlude Friday, when school ceremonies will interfere with the regularly scheduled workout.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 15 (AP)—Hereafter Buster Crabbe, Olympic swimming champion, will be known on the screen as Larry Crabbe. His studio believed "Buster" wasn't quite dignified enough and that his real given name Clarence, was too much, so hence the compromise.

Minor League Baseball Heads Hold Meeting

Player Trades Made by Both Minor, Majors

GALVESTON, Texas, Nov. 15 (AP)—Minor league baseball magnates today heard William G. Bramham, president of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, assail the Shaughnessy pennant playoff plan and "shoot-string operators," discussed important player trades and then waited for a report from an executive committee.

The St. Louis Cardinals and the Philadelphia National league club were involved in the principal trade announced.

Branch Rickey, vice president of the Cards, traded Jimmy Wilson, veteran catcher, to the Phillies for Virgil Davis, ace backstop, and Ed Delker, infielder. No announcement of a cash consideration was made.

It also was announced that the Phillies had purchased Henry Prince Oana, Hawaiian outfielder, from the Portland club of the Coast league, for players and an unnamed amount of cash. Portland traded John Moore, second baseman, to Albany of the International league for Frank Packard, infielder.

Atlanta of the Southern association bought Art Jacobs, a left handed twirler from Portland. "Buzz" Arlett, outfielder, and John Erdudhomme, pitcher, went from Baltimore to the Birmingham club of the Southern association, in exchange for Woodley Abernathy, outfielder, and Bill Atwood, catcher.

The executive committee retired to consider an appeal from Art Shires, Jim Lindsey, Gordon Slade and Charles Wilson, formerly members of the Columbus club of the American association, who were fined and banned from the circuit last summer for allegedly making false reports concerning salaries.

Shires and Lindsey were personally to present their cases. John D. Martin, president of the Southern association, was named to replace Warren C. Giles of Rochester at the hearing on the American association players. Giles was ineligible because of his connections with the Rochester club, the team with which Shires and Lindsey are now playing.

The executive committee is composed of Giles, J. Alvin Gardner, president of the Texas league, and Dale Gear, president of the Western league. It had before it cases against Harold Meyer, vice president of the Wilkesbarre club of the New York-Pennsylvania league, accused of a salary violation, and against members of the Pine Bluff team of the Dixie league who disbanded when they asserted, they were not paid for their services.

Bramham lashed out against violation of rules of the National association and took a mild slap at chain store operations in the minors. He said that more than 100 transfers of contracts of players from one club to another had been made without execution of option or assignment papers.

Swimming Mixer Open to Students

The swimming mixer tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the river room of Iowa Union is open to every student interested in varsity or freshman swimming.

Prof. Lee Travis of the speech pathology department will head a program of short speeches. Moving pictures of Olympic champions in action will be thrown on the screen as an aid to the men in revamping their strokes. Light refreshments will close the evening's entertainment.

The mixer is part of the drive launched by Coach David Armbruster to have 100 men report Friday night at the beginning of the season of daily swimming practice.

Creighton university and Rice institute have continued their home-and-home football relations for the 1934 and 1935 seasons. Fifty-seven deer were legally killed during Missouri's three-day 1933 season, tags returned to the fish and game department indicated.

CHAPTER FORTY

Now graduation was coming on and there would be more expense to get herself and Pop ready to go over for it as well as for him. Tommy's graduation was going to be the crowning event of Mom's life and then, when she saw him in his glory with her own eyes, she would be satisfied that she had done her best for him and that he, anyhow, was going to have his chance to go out in the world and have things. She knew he would take care of them after that, no matter whom he married; but even if he didn't he would have his chance to be great and that was all Mom wanted if she had to keep on working hard all her life.

Anyhow, and Mom felt very strong about this, he would marry some fine girl and if she had to give him up so soon she'd have the satisfaction of knowing it was to a nice girl and not to some strumpet like Florrie Johnson who was just like an alley cat even if she did have a good heart. A girl like that would drag any man down to the gutter with her although you couldn't really blame her at that because she just didn't seem to know any better or care.

Mom looked at the clock on the chair beside the bed; it was ten minutes after five and that Florrie Johnson hadn't come in yet; how did she stand it and work every day on the lears at the factory? Mom shut off the alarm so it wouldn't wake Pop; and after another few minutes she got up and started to get breakfast; and after she had popped the fire in the grate, she set Pop's shoes and pants and shirt there to get warm and went to the kitchen and put the coffee on and put on some rolled oats and warmed up the skillet. Then she called Pop. He had slept like a log all night; that was why Mom was glad he could get things off his mind by talking because when a man worked hard all day he needed his sleep at night.

Pop was always grumpy and didn't say much in the morning; but he noticed that Mom hadn't had much sleep.

"No use worrying about that boy," he said. "You better get back to bed for a rest after Pete goes out."

Mom did that and was so dead tired she dropped off until dinner time; she wouldn't have got up till then except that Uncle Louie would be coming in for something. He handed her a paper, the Smithville morning paper. It had Tommy's picture again and under it it said: THORNDYKE STAR DENIES ENGAGEMENT.

Mom felt relieved. The piece went on to say that the rumor had just been a press agent statement. "Somebody," said Randolph, as the home of Grover Jones, Pyramid Film mogul, today, "was just after publicity. I don't even know the girl."

Mom put down the paper. "That's just what he should have said," she declared.

Uncle Louie was more interested in his baked beans.

That afternoon, when the Athens News came, Mom read it eagerly. There was more news of her boy—big news, reports of this and that; of what he was going to do when he left college.

He was going to West Point; he was going to play football; he was going to coach; he was going into business with the firm of Cornelius Winthrop, famous capitalist and the father of Elaine Winthrop, Park Avenue artist whose wedding to the football star was reported to be an event of the spring. Tommy refused to comment on these rumors except to say that he would not play professional football or go into coaching.

Pop read the paper with great satisfaction that evening. Uncle Louie was very quiet. Pop said to Mom: "See—you did all our worrying for nothing. I guess we don't need to worry about that boy being any jiga-loo."

Uncle Louie kept his eyes on his plate and saved away at the steak with his knife and fork. It was a good piece of loin steak. Butcher Brown knew Mom was particular about meat and hard to please and he always saved her a good piece or cut it special.

Pop looked at Uncle Louie and winked at Mom. He said to Uncle Louie, just to break the ice: "Still sore, Bryan?"

Uncle Louie didn't look up. "You was the one that was sore; but didn't I say that hunky was no good?"

"You said Tom was a jiga-loo, didn't you?"

Mom was afraid they'd start again; but Uncle Louie said: "I didn't; I just said he would be if he married her."

"All right," Pop said, "pass the punk."

Pop had a way of calling things by name that way. Uncle Louie passed the bread. "And she ain't no nobility, either—I found that out."

"What did you do—call up Hollywood?" Pete said.

"I read it in a movie magazine down at the barber shop. A drummer in there said it was publicity, too—her old man's a coal miner and her name's Ostrowski."

"What's the matter with that?" Pop demanded. "It's no disgrace to work for a living, is it?"

"No—but that proves she's a hunky!"

Nobody answered him. Uncle Louie took the last piece of steak from the platter and answered himself: "When I say they're a hunky, they're a hunky."

"All right, shoot me the beans," Pop said.

Mom smiled to herself. Things were peaceful again; but it was a good thing Pop had a big heart; she felt so proud of him then that she couldn't say anything when he sneaked a bone down to Nippy under the table. Nippy was a nice little dog and had very good manners except when Pop did things like that to spoil him. He had been that way with the boys, too.

Mom began getting ready for Tommy's graduation as early as March. The first thing was her clothes. Mom hadn't bought a good dress since Tommy graduated from high school when she had got the blue flat crepe. It was still good and would do plenty well enough for second best, but she really needed a new one so Tommy wouldn't be ashamed of his mother among all the millionaires' wives.

A black satin would be richer looking but, then again, black was for old people and Mom had always wanted a gray crepe de chine and thought it would be very dressy and make her look younger as Tommy wouldn't want people to think his mother was an old woman. She took her time making up her mind and, in the meantime, kept right on looking through the pattern books to find the style which suited her. Mom was going to make it herself as she could do real well except when it came to fitting. Having no women around the house was hard at times like that and Pop was no help at all; but Cousin Emmy was just about Mom's height and she was real good about coming over any time at all.

Shoes would be no job at all. Mom hadn't had a new pair since goodness-knows-when and when she did get a new pair they would have to last so they would have to be black; but they'd be the new stylish black patent leather ties she had seen down in Kerry's window; and being black they'd go with her dress whether it was black or gray and with the blue crepe, too.

And she had made up her mind pretty well about a hat. She'd like a black straw because she had had one faced with pink when she was married that she'd looked real good in; but she had an idea Tommy wouldn't approve of her in colors so much so she'd ask Miss Tuttle to face it in gray, instead.

A body got older; still, when she had a boy graduating from college she couldn't very well expect to dress as young as she did when she was married. Sometimes Pop told her she never looked a day older and Mom really didn't think she really looked her age; and Pete told her once she and Steve looked like sisters; but, just the same, she knew she wasn't a spring chicken anymore.

There were her hands; they showed it most. Mom was worried more about her hands than anything else. Her fabric gloves wouldn't be stylish but since she had her crooked finger she couldn't get her hands into kid gloves very well; and the nice ladies all wore gloves when they were dressed up because she saw them in the pictures in the Sunday papers.

And Mom wanted to wear gloves anyhow because her hands were not white and pretty like the hands of the other boys' mothers would be, because Mom had always had to work and she had had to use her hands for scrubbing and washing and cleaning and hanging up clothes in the raw wind and all that, and they were red and swelled and even cracked. It wasn't that Mom didn't know how to take care of them—she had remembered as a little girl how old lady Whitney even used to wear gloves to bed. Mom just didn't have time; she had started out all right, rubbing them with lemon rinds and cucumber peels but there had been too many other things to do with her hands.

She did the best she could from the beauty hints on the radio. There was a Nellie Binney on WTAQ at ten o'clock every morning who seemed real good; but this was hard, too. Mom didn't have money to spare to buy the things but she did the next best; and the men folks were always coming in at the wrong time. Once she used the bottle for a face bath and Uncle Louie came in and went to the ice again to get it because his stomach was bothering him; and he saw what Mom had used it for and he was real miffed and said he had heard of people takin' champagne baths but buttermilk baths were something new on him and why didn't she try water for a change. Mom got mad herself then and said if he wasn't always in the ice box like a pig with his nose in the mud, he wouldn't have stomach trouble. Sometimes she thought he put most of it on, anyhow.

Bremer's to Observe 18th Anniversary

Fine Department Store Has Been Built Up Since 1915

The eighteenth year of Bremer's in Iowa City is being observed this month by the store, one of the leading clothing establishments in the middle west.

Since buying Willner's Golden Eagle in 1915, Bremer's have developed the store into a modern and progressive establishment which specializes in men's and boy's clothing.

Joe Bremer is president of the business, and Harry Bremer, secretary.

Enlarged
The store building has been enlarged several times and modernized since the Bremer brothers began in 1915. A new front, installed in 1921, provided fixtures for the display of clothing and furnishings. Two floors of the building are used, the basement being used as a stockroom, and the first floor housing the many departments of the store.

Bremer's window display and the interior dress of the store are the work of Ed Urbans, window decorator and display manager.

Departments
The store's departments include clothing, shoes, furnishings, luggage, and children's apparel.

Harold Reedquist, who directs the store's advertising, is head of the clothing department. He is aided by Tom Reese. In charge of furnishings is Ray Slavata. Roy Winders is in control of the hat department. Ed Miltner is in charge of shoes. Mrs. C. Kendall has charge of the children's department. Margaret Romaine is head bookkeeper. Lois Godlove is cashier and stenographer, and Robert Tomlin has charge of the alterations department.

Quality
Harry Bremer, in speaking of the store's eighteenth anniversary, explained that Bremer's have always handled quality merchandise.

Bremer's, known for years as one of the most devoted followers of Iowa athletics, has had marked success in catering to city, college and rural trade.

Mr. Houser had been ill but a short while, death being caused by pneumonia. He was born in Iowa City and had spent his life here. For several years he was a traveling salesman, later investing in Iowa City real estate which included an interest in the Boone Coal company, and ownership of the Strand theater building. He was affiliated with the local Elks club.

Mr. Houser is survived by his wife; one son, Paul, of Des Moines; two daughters, Mrs. Fred Lewis of Waterloo, and Genevieve of Iowa City; four brothers and one sister.

Lions' Club Hears Talking Pictures

Talking pictures, sponsored by the Plymouth Motor corporation, were shown at the Lion's club luncheon in the Pine room of Reich's cafe, yesterday noon. "Three A Minute," showing a trip through the factories and assembling plants of the company was first shown, followed by "Hell Drivers," with Barney Oldfield and Billy Arnold, well known auto racers, in test drives. J. G. Gartner was in charge of the program.

Judge Orders Sale
District Judge James P. Gaffney ruled yesterday that a Ford coupe, recently used in the transportation of liquor in violation of law, be sold by County Sheriff Don McComas.

AROUND THE TOWN with DICK FAGAN

Second
Another piece of scrip was turned into the Chamber of Commerce for redemption yesterday, after having completed its fiftieth exchange.

First
Iowa City got its first real precipitation in crystal form last night, making everyone begin to wonder where the ice skates, skis and toboggans were put last spring.

Finances
Iver A. Opstad, superintendent of Iowa City schools, will speak on "School finances" at the Rotary club luncheon today at the Jefferson hotel.
