HOUSE PASSES F.R.'S TARIFF BILL

Samuel Insull Held as Turkish Cabinet Debates His Fate

Government May Arrest Fugitive or Refuse Him Passage Into Black Sea

English Dispatch Says U. S. Has Asked For Arrest

ISTANBUL, Turkey, March 29 (AP)—While the Greek freighter Malotis rode impatiently at anchor in Istanbul harbor tonight, apparently stalemated in an effort to take Samuel Insull to a new refuge, the Turkish cabinet conducted an extraordinary meeting at Ankara, the capital.

Although no inkling was given as to the object of the special cabinet session, it was considered specially significant since it was called on the last day of a national holiday.

Not So Easy

Insull, fleeing to the very doors of Asia in his desperate efforts to evade American extradition demands, appeared to have found the modern portals of the mysterious east not so softly yielding as the old oriental romances picture them.

Officially there was no explanation of the Malotis' prolonged stay here, but statements of the ship's officers that she would leave for Rumania at 2 p.m. today contrasted sharply with the fact that the grimy tramp remained tied to her buoy shortly before midnight.

The possibility that Insull might abandon his search for a Black sea haven and return to his wanderings in the Mediterranean developed when the craft was apparently denied permission to proceed northward.

A Reuters news agency dispatch to London said it was understood that American authorities asked Turkey to arrest Insull and that this request accounted for the Malotis' delay.

The freighter on which the 74 year old fugitive fled from Greece March 18, remained outside the Bosphorus—the gateway to the Black sea—all day under a heavy police guard.

Board Will Pick S. U. I. Head Soon

A successor to President Walter A. Jessup to head the University of Iowa will be selected by the state board of education at a meeting April 10.

The date of the meeting was announced yesterday by George T. Baker of Davenport, president of the state board. Through the board may meet in either Cedar Falls or Iowa City, it is probable that Iowa City will be selected as the meeting site because the board action will so concern the university.

The last meeting of the board was held at Iowa State college in Ames, March 21. It was expected in some quarters that a president would be named at that time, and the appointment was considered. The selection was deferred until the April meeting, however, and the board gave no reason for postponing action.

President Jessup will leave the university May 1 to become president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching. He will return for a brief visit about June 1, and will attend the June Commencement program.

Plane Goes to Rescue NOME, Alaska (AP)—The big rescue plane carrying Prof. George Yushakoff, leader of the Soviet expedition headed for the camp of 89 Russians marooned a month and a half on the arctic ice pack, and his two aides, took off from here at noon today for Cape Van Karen, Siberia.

WEATHER

IOWA—Unsettled and colder, probably snow in southeast and extreme east portions Friday; Saturday fair, rising temperature.

Reveal Letters Of N. Y. Senator Asking Utility for Money

NEW YORK, March 29 (AP)—Disclosure by the federal power commission at Washington today of letters purporting to show that State Senator W. T. Thayer of Chateaugay, N. Y., had asked a power company for "expense money" threw into sharp focus the utility fight in the New York state legislature.

Thayer's letters, addressed to officers of the Associated Gas & Electric Co., and its subsidiary, the J. G. White Management corporation, included references to Thayer's service to the utility groups in the legislature "from the fact that many detrimental bills which were introduced were able to kill in my committee."

Senate Gives Approval To Crop Control

New Measure Would Tax All Excess Cotton

WASHINGTON, March 29 (AP)—The senate today approved the application of a 75 per cent tax upon the value of all cotton in excess of ten million bales that may be ginned from this year's crop.

Although the Bankhead bill, carrying these provisions, was so derogated by amendments when passed as to be called unenforceable by some of its advocates, Senator Bankhead (D. Ala.) a co-author, said the house and senate conference committee could straighten these out.

The measure would bring the first important taste of compulsory crop control the country has had. The senate vote for passage was 46 to 23, but several of those who voted for it said they did so with misgivings, despite the approval given by the proposal by President Roosevelt.

"I am voting for the measure with all my fingers and toes crossed," Barkley of Kentucky said.

"Great Need" Stephens of Mississippi said he voted for the bill with "misgivings" and "doubts as to its constitutionality" but that he had his fears assuaged in view of the "great need for relief in the cotton area and the strong desire of the south for this bill."

Only one senator from a state that produces any considerable amount of cotton opposed final passage. He was Bayne of North Carolina.

Paper Sales Not Taxable DES MOINES (AP)—Receipts from the sale of newspapers are not subject to Iowa's new retail sales tax law, the state board of assessment and review held today. The board also held that the tax attaches to the sale of magazines, journals and periodicals, while in the case of trade publications for free distributions the tax is against the printer.

Officials To Speed Action On Vet Law

Congressional Leaders Wondering Over Results

WASHINGTON, March 29 (AP)—The executive department set about carrying out the mandate of congress to make bigger payments to veterans today and left congressional leaders trying to figure out what the legislative defiance of President Roosevelt might presage for the remainder of his program for the session.

The veterans' administration and the treasury concentrated on the newly enacted law, the one with a view to making its provisions operative as quickly as possible and the other studying the effect of a $23,000,000 increase upon the budget.

Officials of the former said their study would continue several days before announcement could be made. First attention, they added, had been given to those veterans whose compensation was stopped by the economy bill and had now been restored.

Treasury officers were privately of the opinion that so far as this year and the next were concerned the financial implications of the measure were made less serious by the fact that emergency expenditures were running far below estimates.

Their concern was for the years that will follow, especially the fiscal year of 1936, by the end of which President Roosevelt has promised that the budget shall be balanced. Congressional leaders sought to gauge the effect of the week's carnival of insurgency upon important administration legislation that is soon to be considered.

While some Democratic leaders thought the overriding of the president's veto was without meaning as applied to other legislation, others were of the opinion it might tend to consolidate administration forces.

Jean Harlow Tells Of Her Own Novel

HOLLYWOOD, March 29 (AP)—Jean Harlow has written a novel. The actress appeared at her studio today after being away six months. Writing of the book, she said, explains her long absence from Hollywood's night life.

The book is going to be published, Jean said, and she "really believes" it will prove itself good enough to be made into a picture. In that event she may take the leading role. Her story, she said, is not about her own life. Its characters are "purely fictional." Its setting is in New York.

Former Air Mail Contract Holders Besiege Department

Companies Demanding Clarification Of New Ruling

WASHINGTON, March 29 (AP)—Former holders of air mail contracts besieged the post office department today for clarification of its ruling that they must reorganize to be eligible for bidding on new temporary routes.

Small independent companies joined representatives of big air lines in demanding full details, with the result that Harlee Branch, second assistant postmaster general, directed all questions be submitted in writing.

Specifications are now being printed and, meanwhile, it was indicated the private carriers which lost their old contracts would wait

Otto H. Kahn Dies Suddenly In N. Y. Office

Financier, Art Patron Dead From Clot On Heart

NEW YORK, March 29 (AP)—Otto H. Kahn, whose operations in the field of finance wielded a powerful influence, died unexpectedly today. He was 67 years old.

At 1:45 p.m., the banker and patron of art and music slumped in his chair, fell to the floor of his private office in the firm of Kahn, Loeb and company, of which he had been a dominating partner since leaving his native Germany for the United States years ago.

A clot on the heart caused death. Word that Kahn had died spread over Manhattan rapidly. But the banking firm made no statement of it until the stock market closed at 3 p.m. fearful of a possible influence on trading.

Though a bit weakened by age and recent ailments, Kahn yesterday and earlier today appeared in fair health. He occupied early this week his box in the "Golden Horseshoe" of the Metropolitan—an institution he helped to build to preeminence in the operator world, only to lose his grasp on its affairs several years ago.

His powerful voice in the direction of the "Met" was diminished with the return to prominence in the great lyric house by oldtime families, including the Astors, the Vanderbilts and Morgans.

Aside from his financial activities and his constant aid, both in time and money, to the Metropolitan, Kahn found opportunity to aid music activities in other cities.

He was instrumental in founding the Chicago Civic and Boston Grand Opera companies and annually, for many years, journeyed to Chicago to attend the outdoor performances at Ravinia Park, on the shores of Lake Michigan—a company maintained by his close friend, Louis Eckstein.

Arrest One In Election Investigation

KANSAS CITY, March 29 (AP)—John Gadwood, a former city employe, was charged with first degree murder today in connection with election day disorders which brought death to four persons and injuries to a dozen others.

Gadwood was accused of killing Lee Flacy, a deputy sheriff. He made inquiries for Flacy in the vicinity of the slaying a few minutes before the deputy was shot down, Sheriff Bash said.

The shooting resulted in death to Flacy, P. W. Oldham, 73 year old bystander, and Larry Caddo, a member of the gang alleged to have started the battle.

County and city authorities meanwhile questioned 13 other persons suspected of implication in the terrorism. Leaders of the Fusionist party, defeated by the T. J. Pendergast Democratic organization, conferred with lawyers, undecided whether to contest the election.

Stephens College Women to Visit Here This Week

Five students at Stephens college, Columbia, Mo., came last night or will arrive today to spend the Easter vacation with their parents in Iowa City.

Students are: Marjorie Beckman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Beckman, 406 Reno street; Gretchen Kuever, daughter of Prof. and Mrs. R. A. Kuever, 5 Melrose circle; Margaret Wolfe, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Wolfe, 430 Oakland avenue; Marjorie Bales, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vern W. Bales, 430 S. Dodge street; and Goldie Sexton, daughter of Mrs. Carrie M. Sexton, 724 Seventh avenue.

U. S. Planning Increased Aid For Industry

New Course to Invest Idle Capital, Help Employment

WASHINGTON, March 29 (AP)—The government was surveying a new trail to recovery today, this time with private enterprise to carry the load and the government to point the way.

Basically, the plan was two fold, calling for the creation of new investment fields for idle private capital and the utilization of that invested money to increase employment. Although the primary role of the government would be that of coordinator and guide, it might also have some financing to do.

The plan, still vague in detail although already subjected to quiet scrutiny by several government agencies, found its origin in the round of public opinion at the NRA code revision conference last month.

At that conference, spokesmen for industry informed the government they believed the potentialities for reemployment of idle workers lay not primarily in shortening work hours and increasing the household goods industries, but in energizing the capital goods industries—the producers of material which go into the production of other goods.

Frank C. Walker, executive director of the national emergency council, said today his organization had studied the plan.

"The national emergency council," he said, "has been interested in this movement largely because it would provide an additional outlet for idle private capital and at the same time would energize the heavy and durable goods industries."

40,000 to Get 10 Per Cent Pay Increase

(By the Associated Press) A 10 per cent pay increase by April 1 was assured today to 40,000 odd more workers in the steel industry.

Announcements of better pay on Tuesday and Wednesday affected approximately 186,000 workers. Nearly a dozen more companies joined the chorus yesterday, bringing the total of affected workers to more than 235,000 in an industry employing between 300,000 and 400,000 men.

Leading off yesterday was American Steel & Wire company, a subsidiary of United States Steel. The wire company employs 15,000 to 18,000 workers in more than a score of plants.

Cleveland officials confirmed reports of approximately a 10 per cent increase April 1, and said it was their understanding all the company's plants would be similarly affected.

Carter Frees Youth After Long Hearing

Everett Fleming, 18, was released from a charge of robbery with aggravation after a preliminary hearing before Justice of the Peace B. F. Carter yesterday. Fleming had been accused of participating in the holdup of the Sinclair Oil station at Gilbert and College streets last week.

Justice Carter, after listening to testimony from 10 a.m. until 3:10 p.m., decided that there was not enough evidence to hold him. Roy Lewis, attendant at the station when the two men pulled the banditry, identified Fleming as one of the stick-up men. However, his identification was not positive.

Ted Fleming, father of the boy, said his son was in his garage at the time of the holdup and was there until about 9:30 p.m. County Attorney F. B. Olsen prosecuted for the state and Attorney Edward F. Rate defended Fleming.

Earthquakes Rock Rumania; 25 Hurt, Buildings Wrecked

BUCHAREST, Rumania, March 29 (AP)—At least 25 persons were hurt and eight houses were wrecked tonight at Iasi by two prolonged earthquake shocks that were felt throughout Rumania.

Many were hurt at Galati, where several houses also were damaged. One building fell in a Bucharest suburb and several others nearby were badly cracked.

Committee To Hear Charges Of Radicalism

Republicans Protest; Want to Question "Brain Trust"

WASHINGTON, March 29 (AP)—With the approval of its rules committee, the house prepared today to create a committee to hear the charges of Dr. William A. Wirt of Gary, Ind., that there is a tinge of communism to some of the president's advisers.

Republican members of the rules committee protested, however, that the resolution approved by the committee for an investigation was too narrow in scope. It calls only for Wirt's appearance and is not broad enough to summon administration professorial advisers, popularly known as the "brain trust," for questioning at will.

Consequently, all four Republican members of the rules committee voted against the resolution.

At first, the resolution was broad enough to allow the Republicans to call the professors and ask them about their political and economic theories, or any other theories they have.

The Democratic leaders decided, however, the question should be addressed only to the Gary teacher and the persons he may name.

Wants "Whole Story" Representative Byrns of Tennessee, Democratic leader, said he "understood that Dr. Wirt doesn't want to name anybody unless he has the consent of the individuals concerned."

"If he doesn't name the people he has in mind," Byrns said, "congress has the power to make him name them and I for one hope it will make him name them."

"He has made certain definite statements on which the congress and the people are entitled to further enlightenment; not let him make good and tell the whole story."

Judgment Asked By Insurance Company

Judgment of $8,901.33 is asked by the Equitable Life Insurance company of Iowa against Joseph H. and Irene Rummelhart and the Hills Savings bank in a foreclosure action filed in district court yesterday.

Foreclosure is asked on a Johnson county farm. Carl M. Adams of Des Moines is attorney for the insurance company.

Others Arrested; Air Of Mystery In Man Hunt

PARIS, March 29 (AP)—A mysterious American whose name was vaguely given as Johnson was sought tonight for questioning about the slaying on Feb. 21 of Judge Albert Prince, who "knew too much" about the $40,000,000 Stavisky pawnshop scandal.

It was learned police were on his trail after the arrest and grilling of two men who were charged later with the murder—the detention of a third suspect in Marseille, and the announcement that two Argentinians also were sought.

Measure Would Empower President to Make Tariff Pacts With Other Nations

Martin Insull Free on Bond Until Wanted

Faces Justice Alone As Brother Tries To Escape

CHICAGO, March 29 (AP)—A tall man who said he had fallen from millions to penury stood before the bar in criminal court of Cook county today and answered to the name of Martin Insull. Later he was released on bond to go anywhere he wanted in the United States until called for trial.

Branded an undesirable alien, pallid beneath the stigma of an accused embezzler, while head of a giant utility corporation, the lesser of the world's two famous truants from justice was "home" to face a jury alone after extradition from Canada.

Didn't Speak A judge asked him if he were Martin Insull. He asserted, The judge asked if he would plead guilty or not guilty to indictments alleging that he embezzled $344,000 and $20,000 from the treasury of Middle West Utilities company and Mississippi Valley Utilities Investment company. The defendant pressed his lips together, but did not speak.

His attorney, John E. Northup, spoke for him. There was a number of motions he would like to present, motions to quash the indictment—strong rumor has it there will be efforts to transfer this epochal trial far from the Chicago atmosphere in which the Insull millions grew and flourished only to wither and fall—and Northup preferred that formal arraignment and pleas be deferred until he can study the case.

Judge James F. Fardy, to whom the trial was assigned by Chief Justice Finnegan, agreed to hear preliminary motions April 6.

Dull Climax The brief courtroom hearings today seemed dull climaxes to the 17 months of international conversations that ensued upon his flight to Canada as the expose of Insull financing augured indictments late in 1932.

Here was Martin J. Insull, 64, assistant to the emperor of the old Maine-to-Texas utilities realm, standing mute and preoccupied with the scribbling of court stenographers and the shaping and reshaping of a brown felt hat in his lean hands while judges and attorneys decided what to do with this ex-multiplication accused of larceny; while, floating on the little strip of water that keeps Asia and Europe apart, the erstwhile emperor himself, elder brother Samuel Insull, confounded the American diplomats and agents from Istanbul to Washington by remaining a fugitive on a little Greek steamer.

Adopt Amendments After battering down Republican amendments designed to curtail the broad discretionary authority granted the president and several proposed by Democrats to prevent reduction duties on sugar, lumber and other products, the house adopted by a voice vote the ways and means committee amendments.

The first limited to three years the authority for negotiating trade agreements. Another provided that "nothing in this act shall be construed to give any authority to cancel or reduce, in any manner, any of the indebtedness of any foreign country to the United States."

Close Vote

The closest test came on an amendment to prevent the lowering of the sugar tariff, but the proposal was defeated 121 to 114 on a teller vote.

Amendments by Rep. Treadway of Massachusetts, leader of the Republican opposition, were bowled over rapidly.

Representatives Split On Party Lines In Ballot

WASHINGTON, March 29 (AP)—Rallying again to the presidential standard they deserted two days ago to override the veterans veto, house Democrats pushed the administration's reciprocal tariff bill through the house today over stubborn Republican opposition.

The measure was sent to the senate with two administration-sanctioned amendments limiting to three years the authority of the president to negotiate trade agreements and precluding any foreign debt reductions under its provisions.

A roll call vote on passage was forced by Republicans resulting in approval 273 to 111. The vote was on party lines. Only two Republicans—Peavy of Wisconsin and Welch of California, voted with the 27 Democrats and 3 Farmer-Laborists for the bill.

Eleven Democrats broke over to join 99 Republicans and one Farmer-Laborite—Lundeen of Minnesota—against Speaker Rainey voted for the bill.

Demos Against The Democrats voting against were Brown of Michigan, Burke of California, Carpenter of Nebraska, Conroy of Massachusetts, Duffey of Ohio, Gray of Indiana, Maloney of Connecticut, Montet of Louisiana, Moran of Maine, Scroggsham of Nevada, and Secret of Ohio.

Quick passage was foreseen in the senate by both Democratic and Republican leaders. Senator Robinson (D-Ark.), majority leader, said he did not "anticipate long delay" and Senator McNary of Oregon, minority chief, conceded it would pass the senate virtually as approved by the house.

Long Debate House action came after six days of debate and the defeat of about 40 amendments proposing to limit the authority for the president to lower or raise import duties on agricultural and industrial products.

The measure would empower the president to negotiate without congressional approval trade agreements with foreign nations for the export of American surpluses. It carries authority for the executive to lower or raise existing tariff rates 50 per cent in making the pacts.

Judge Evans Rules Amana Corporation Exempt From Tax

MARENGO, March 29 (AP)—District Judge Harold D. Evans today held that the $2,000,000 capital stock of the Amana corporation is exempt from taxation.

The ruling was made in a test case brought by Adolph Heineman, a member of the communistic-capitalistic society which includes seven villages near here.

"The statutes provide that the capital stock of corporations engaged in manufacturing and merchandising shall be exempt from taxation in the hands of its owners," Judge Evans said.

He pointed out that the Amana society is engaged in both manufacturing and merchandising.

Mrs. John S. Nollen of Grinnell was named first vice president; Mrs. L. R. Elliott of Des Moines, second vice president; Mrs. Thomas Crocker of Ames, third vice president; Mrs. Rosa Cunningham of Des Moines, fourth vice president; and Mrs. Carl Mains of Des Moines was re-elected secretary.

A program of work and a budget was adopted at the morning meeting. Unfinished business was completed, and committee reports were adopted.

League study is to be divided into six groups for the coming year: international cooperation, efficiency in government, child welfare, education, government and economic welfare, and legal status of women, according to the study plan adopted.

Mrs. Chris Yetter Wins in First Of Card Parties Here

Mrs. Chris Yetter won high prize in contract bridge at a party given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Walter I. Pratt and Mrs. T. O. Loveland at the Loveland home, 135 Melrose avenue. The affair was the first of a series of three dessert-bridge parties.

Mrs. Charles Butt of White Plains, N. Y., who is a guest in the Robert B. Gibson home, was winner of second prize, and Mrs. J. L. Records and Mrs. Robert Yetter were awarded traveling prizes. Bridge was played at five tables.

Another out-of-town guest at the party was Mrs. Darwin S. Waterman of Barre, Vt., who is visiting her son and daughter-in-law, Prof. and Mrs. Earle L. Waterman.

This afternoon, 29 women will be entertained at a similar party at the Loveland home. Baskets of spring flowers will decorate the tables.

Mrs. Loveland and Mrs. Pratt will entertain in the third of the series of parties next Thursday at the Pratt home, 503 Melrose avenue.

Women Interested In Light Question, Roll Call Indicates

The controversy over municipal ownership of the light plant is a popular conversational topic in homes, at informal gatherings, and on street corners, and yesterday it broke into organized social life when it appeared as the paramount interest of members of the Iowa Women's club.

Roll call at the meeting, which took place at Hawk's Nest cafe, was to be answered with "Something I would like to know." An overwhelming majority of the 29 women present wanted to know both sides of the question, or wanted to know what the outcome of the April 17 election would be. General opinion of the group favored municipal ownership.

Following roll call, Emma Watkins, teacher at the University elementary school, gave six original readings, one of which was in Welsh dialect.

Light refreshments were served at the close of the meeting. Mrs. E. Roebuck was hostess at the meeting, and assisting her was Mrs. Lulu Stout.

Iowa Citizens May See Easter Plants

Easter lilies, carnations, sweet peas and snapdragons are in bloom and will be on inspection this week end at the Oakdale sanatorium green house. Dr. J. A. Edwards, superintendent, has extended an invitation to Iowa City persons to visit the green house.

Two hundred Easter lilies, carnations, sweet peas and snapdragons have already been distributed to bed patients at the sanatorium, and on Easter Sunday, 1,000 sweet peas, 15 dozen snapdragons, and 300 carnations in addition to Easter lilies will be given the patients.

George McNamara, sanatorium gardener, will conduct trips through the green house.

Seek for Treaty In New Effort To Limit Armaments

PARIS, March 29 (AP)—A Franco-Italian naval parity treaty, wrecked in 1931, by a misplaced comma, was sought again today in a new effort to limit armaments.

The French like the idea because it would save money. They want to strike a deal with Premier Mussolini of Italy to avoid building ship for ship against Germany's new pocket battleships and ease tension in the Mediterranean area, in view of a prospect that an arms limitation conference will replace the arms reduction parity.

The parity record of 1931 went to smash through the experts misunderstanding over its text, which was made ambiguous by a faultily placed comma.

Official Report On Investigation Of Death of Lysinger

CLARINDA, March 29 (AP)—A report on his investigation of the death of Smith Lysinger, 26, of Lamoni, was being prepared tonight by O. H. Michael of the state board of control.

Michael said he plans to place before Governor Herring the information he obtained in a day's conference with local officials and the superintendent and staff of the state insane hospital here.

The inquiry followed a report of a coroner's jury that Lysinger, a patient at the state hospital, died as a result of beatings allegedly administered by attendants or inmates.

China's Aviation Boom Aided by America

Nowhere in the world is aviation enjoying such a boom as it is in China today. The belief that Japan's successful invasion of Manchuria and Jehol was due to Nippon's command of the air awakened China to the value of the airplane, both as a military arm and as a means of transportation. General Chiang Kai-Shek, former President of the Republic, and Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, former war lord of Manchuria, are the moving spirits behind the aviation boom. America is the chief beneficiary. During the past year, millions of dollars worth of planes and equipment has been sold to China by U. S. manufacturers. American instructors are teaching young China to fly. Captain Frank Hawks, noted U. S. speed flyer, recently delivered a bombing plane to the National Government. If it is regarded as satisfactory, it will be the first of a fleet of such craft.

PEIPING, China (I.N.).—"Look to the air for salvation," is the watchword of a new China—a China that emerged from its "unofficial" war with Japan sadder and very much wiser.

That the grim lesson learned in Manchuria, Jehol and Shanghai was not lost is evident by the progress made by aviation in China during the last year. It will surprise many, who regard the land of tea and rickshaws as a "has-been," to learn that China is well on her way to ranking sixth among the nations of the earth in air power.

America Benefits
This amazing boom in aviation is due largely to the efforts of two of China's greatest military leaders, both young men with young ideas. They are General Chiang Kai-Shek, former president of the republic, and Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, former war lord of Manchuria.

Formerly content to lead hordes of badly-equipped foot soldiers into battle, these leaders learned from the Japanese invader that the days of man-power are gone. It is now generally agreed among military strategists that Japan's successful invasion of China was due to Nippon's command of the air.

The grim lesson is bearing fruit in China today. The sudden boom in aviation has no parallel in any other country in the world. During the last year aviation purchases by China increased more than 600 per cent. It is significant that 80 per cent of these purchases were planes for military use and included some of the most modern bombers.

Thanks to the superiority of American equipment and the flying skill of American demonstrators and instructors, the lion's share of these sales was made by U. S. firms. During the last six months nearly 100 American military planes, similar to those used by several fighting units of the U. S. army, were delivered to the Chinese government by one American company. And even now Captain Frank Hawks, noted American speed flyer, is here demonstrating a new-type bombing plane, which, if approved, will be the first of a fleet of such craft.

Although the actual strength of the Chinese air force is a closely guarded secret, it is expected that by the end of 1934 China will replace Soviet Russia as sixth ranking air power in the world. Not only that, but if she maintains her present program of aviation promotion she will be on a par with Japan by the end of 1935.

Take A Chance!
Where is the money to pay for all this air equipment coming from? Some of it comes from funds collected by various patriotic societies, such as the Peiping Patriotic association, but the major portion comes from the proceeds of aviation lotteries conducted by the National Government, for that specific purpose.

These lotteries are held three times a month. The first prize is half a million silver dollars. The world knows that the Chinese are the world's most inveterate gamblers. They will take a chance on anything. In this case, they win either way, for national security benefits all along the line.

Recently ten American planes were purchased with funds collected from employees of the various Chinese government railways. The planes are to be formally christened and named after the different branches which subscribed.

Banditry Doomed
With the growth of aviation, one old Chinese custom, banditry, seems doomed for the scrap-heap. Before the Chinese government became really air-minded roving bands of armed desperadoes could do very much as they pleased. It was difficult to catch up with them. Poor roads and poor means of transportation made their calling a pretty safe and profitable one. The new order has changed all that. By the end of 1935 banditry will be an exceedingly hazardous occupation.

Transportation has been vastly improved. The journey from Shanghai to Peiping which took 40 hours by train can now be covered in 8 hours by plane.

Austria Bans Publications, Nude Statues

VIENNA, March 29 (AP)—In surprise orders issued today, the Dollfus government banned 100 foreign publications, including several from the United States, and ordered the removal of nude statues from the streets of Austrian cities.

The order against the foreign publications marked the beginning of a drive against objectionable or immoral newspapers and magazines sold here, it was announced.

List of Journals
The list of those banned include the Saturday Evening Post, the American Magazine, Variety, True Story Magazine, Wide World, Pearson's Magazine, La Vie Parisienne, Paris Plaisirs, the Daily Sketch, and the News Chronicle, the latter two being British publications.

Officials did not say whether the American periodicals prohibited were considered offensive on political or moral grounds, nor did they give any other reason specifically applying to those particular publications.

Editors Chucked
(In Philadelphia, George Horace Lorimer, editor of the Saturday Evening Post, said: "I do not know any reason why they should do it." Magazine editors in New York chuckled over the order. Sid Silverman, editor of Variety, observed: "It's a gag." Sumner Blossom, editor of the American Magazine, asserted that the order was "silly." A spokesman for the McFadden publications said he believed the Austrians had confused their magazine, True Story, with one of a similar name published in Berlin.)

Government workers, after receiving the order that nude statues be eliminated from the streets, began tearing down a number regarded as coming within the scope of the new instructions.

China's Aviation Boom Aided by America

Nowhere in the world is aviation enjoying such a boom as it is in China today. The belief that Japan's successful invasion of Manchuria and Jehol was due to Nippon's command of the air awakened China to the value of the airplane, both as a military arm and as a means of transportation. General Chiang Kai-Shek, former President of the Republic, and Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, former war lord of Manchuria, are the moving spirits behind the aviation boom. America is the chief beneficiary. During the past year, millions of dollars worth of planes and equipment has been sold to China by U. S. manufacturers. American instructors are teaching young China to fly. Captain Frank Hawks, noted U. S. speed flyer, recently delivered a bombing plane to the National Government. If it is regarded as satisfactory, it will be the first of a fleet of such craft.

PEIPING, China (I.N.).—"Look to the air for salvation," is the watchword of a new China—a China that emerged from its "unofficial" war with Japan sadder and very much wiser.

That the grim lesson learned in Manchuria, Jehol and Shanghai was not lost is evident by the progress made by aviation in China during the last year. It will surprise many, who regard the land of tea and rickshaws as a "has-been," to learn that China is well on her way to ranking sixth among the nations of the earth in air power.

No Beer?

Peculiar Keg Causes Freedom of Owner In English Case.

LONDON, Ont., March 29 (AP)—A keg of rather magical beer bewildered the court and the prosecution in a liquor control act violation case today, and the defendant won his release.

The keg was the evidence. Defense Attorney Hodgins asked that a glass of beer be drawn from it.

Court attaches turned the tap on, but nothing came out. An air pump was tried, but it broke. After it was repaired, the attaches still failed to get beer out of the keg.

Magistrate Scrandett then held that the keg was empty and the case was dismissed for lack of evidence.

Afterward, some officials examined the keg and decided to try the tap once more.

This time an amber liquid squirted out.

"Too late," said the judge.

Lemon Will Talk at Last Of Services

The last of the holy week services, which are sponsored by the Iowa City Ministerial association, will meet at noon today in the English theater. The Rev. W. P. Lemon, pastor of the Presbyterian church, will speak on the subject, "The cross of nationalism."

The Rev. Harry D. Henry, pastor of the Methodist church, presided at the service yesterday noon, and the Rev. W. S. Dysinger, pastor of the English Lutheran church, discussed "Commercialism in the light of Jesus Christ."

"The human relationships of man to man come first and where commerce violates them it is morally wrong," the speaker said, "Industry is but one phase of social life, of the relationship of man to man."

Many forms of business have become too highly commercialized, and, as a result, have lost any sense of social responsibility, the speaker explained, and offered the patent medicine business as an example. "They have exploited the field of human sickness," the Rev. Dysinger stated.

"But if a man runs his business with a sense of human relationship, he can say along with the churches and schools, 'I, too am serving my community,'" emphasized the local minister.

Members of the Iowa City Rotary club attended the service.

Officials Seek To Identify Fawcett As Farm Robber

Sheriff Don McComas of Iowa City, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Chase of near Iowa City, Sheriff George Gales of Wapello, and Mrs. Herman Harder of near Letts, were in Chicago yesterday seeking to identify James Fawcett of Chicago as one of several bandits who invaded two farms in the Whiskey Hollow neighborhood Dec. 17.

James White, a farmer, was shot in an attempted robbery by the gang. Fawcett was identified as one of them involved from about 100 pictures shown to Mrs. Harder. The bandit gang has been wanted by Muscatine, Johnson and Louisa county authorities.

Sheriff McComas is attempting to link them with the robbery of the Joe Krellik farm east of Iowa City on Dec. 3, 1933.

Body Heat Will Effect Rays Picked Up by New Mirror

CORNING, N. Y., (AP)—The 200-inch mirror just poured at the Corning glass works here will pick up star messages, radiations, so delicate that they must be shielded from the heat given off by the body of the astronomer studying them.

It is this ability to gather light, heat and invisible radiation from stars that man never before could intercept, which will make the 200-inch mirror the greatest scientific engine ever undertaken.

The mirror will gather four times as much light, and equally four times as much heat, infra-red and ultra-violet as the present largest telescope. And 55 feet above its surface, at the top of its 24-foot wide tube, the mirror will focus these radiations.

Only low magnifications Up there, at the rim of this huge tower, the astronomer will sit to "see" the images. But the "seeing" is largely metaphorical. Although the 200-inch is called the world's greatest eye, and will bring in pictures of things four times farther away than now seen, it will not be used to see these objects simply by magnifying them.

Only low magnifications will be used, seldom more than the sizes of

Pioneer Spirit

Filling Station Owner Swaps Gallons For What Have You.

SEATTLE, March 29 (AP)—The spirit of the pioneer traders still lives in the northwest, particularly in George E. Browne, who will swap you a quart of oil for a toy elephant, or five gallons of gas for a live black bear.

His automobile service station, in exchanging what have you for motor fuel, has acquired what probably is the wildest collection of material for pawnshops, zoos and junk piles in the northwest.

This swapping business started with the Indians when the northwest was still a territory, reached a peak during the bank moratorium a year ago and still continues.

In one year of business, Browne said today, he has acquired two black bears, two dogs, one small automobile, one empty birdcage, three pink toy elephants, one quart of whiskey, one ham, three boxes of groceries, a case of beer, a raincoat, a topcoat, a banjo-ukulele, two watches, a crosscut saw, a quart of wine, one entire vegetable garden, a collection of rakes, hoes, spades and crowbars, a quantity of flashlights, automobile tires, tools, musical instruments, fountain pens and pencils, clothing, vacuum bottles, groceries, IOU's and dubious checks.

Spain Calm After Riots

ZARAGOZA, Spain, March 29 (AP)—Syndicalists and Socialists used terrorist tactics during the second day of their revolutionary general strike here, but the government tonight had the situation so well under control some street cars and buses were operating and many stores reopened for business.

Extremist prisoners in the municipal jail assaulted Judge Claveria, the state attorney, Pedro Lafuente, and a court stenographer when the officials entered the prison to examine 200 persons arrested since the strike began.

The three officials were seriously injured by more than a score of the prisoners before guards could restore order.

Roving guards of syndicalists spread terror throughout the city for many hours. Troops late in the day restored order.

...here it is in a nutshell

THERE are just about three common-sense questions to ask about pipe tobacco:

"First, is it made to smoke in a pipe?"

"Is it cut in big enough flakes to smoke cool and mild?"

"Does it have a pleasing flavor that leaves you hankering for more?"

"I guess I've been smoking pipes for as many years as you've been born, and when it comes to pipe tobacco... here it is in a nutshell. Smoke Granger."

As the President Might Say It

Somewhere South
March 29, 1934

Mr. Herbert Hoover, Palo Alto, Cal., Dear Herb:

As you've probably heard by now, things are getting different in Washington. The boys in congress have been walking the straight and narrow for nearly three months now—not counting the stretch they did last spring—so they've decided to take a spree.

In a way, I don't blame them. Things were becoming very boring, what with the NRA settling down to work, the automobile strike out of the way, and the country in general looking up. It takes a bank holiday or a bonus army or something else of importance to keep the show really going strong for the boys.

As a matter of fact, I sort of figured they'd be wanting to play pretty soon, so I decided to take a little vacation myself. Wish you were here; fishing is fine and it's happy sailing out here in the southern American waters.

I can certainly understand now how you felt a couple of years ago, when Jack Garner and the boys put their fingers into everything you tried to do, and ruined it. When the house and the senate want to play, there's just no use trying to talk sensibly to them.

And then, we can't forget that elections are coming up next November, and the boys in congress have got to have something to show the folks back home. There's nothing like a veterans' bill to bring home the pork—unless it's a few well distributed post offices.

I'll tell you a little secret, Herbie, that I worked out myself. It doesn't do to let the boys think you're trying to put something over on them. The thing to do is to sort of sneak away every once in a while, and let them think that they're running the show. It sort of keeps them satisfied, and it doesn't do anyone very much harm.

As I see it, Herbie, your trouble was that you let them worry you. You even let them get you sore enough to try to fight them. I've found that doesn't do any good.

The thing to do is to come off here on a fishing trip, and be keeping the corner of your eye on them. Remember that, in case you ever take this job again.

Well, it's certainly a lazy day out here, and I'm going to get back on deck. I've had my vacation, and congress has had its; just watch things hum again when I get back.

Sympathetically yours,
Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Billions of New Worlds In the Offing

IT IS difficult—without actually seeing it—to conceive of the enormity of the new Corning 200 inch telescope, the mirror for which was recently cast. A room of comfortable size could be placed within the telescope, using the mirror as a floor; three automobiles could be placed side by side within it.

Entirely impossible for the mind of man to conceive is the scope of the work for which the telescope was built—the extent of the myriad worlds within a universe so great that the earth becomes not even a minute speck in comparison.

Even figures mean nothing. The fact that the telescope will peer into the distance that light would travel in 1,300,000,000 years, the fact that it may reveal 2,000,000,000,000 new stars, each of them as great as our sun or greater, with their own planetary systems, the fact that many astronomers believe the new telescope will see out to the very edge of space, beyond which there is nothing—all these things can convey nothing tangible to the human mind.

Little wonder then if the astronomer looks with disdain upon the petty affairs of this petty world. Human lives and loves, philosophies of man, economics and political intrigue, wars and international hatred all somehow seem to lose their ordinary significance as man contemplates the wonders of billions of worlds beyond our own.

In the last three centuries man has gone far from the borders of his own earth and learned of the greater wonders outside. The new telescope is a new step in the extension of the frontiers of human knowledge and philosophy.

Still Burlesque

THE new deal in burlesque has become a fact, according to the managers of New York city's shadier entertainment palaces. From now on burlesque will be cleaner and better.

The inference is that eventually these shows will be advertised as "the sort of show to bring your maiden aunt to" or "family entertainment." The guardian angels of smut and filth in the theater have announced that they will clean up their shows by eliminating the runway which brought half nude performers into the audience, by eliminating the "strip tease" act, and by "modifying" bedroom scenes.

It will take more than this, however, to make anything even approaching respectable out of present day burlesque. Through their very basis—an appeal to the lowest human elements—they must remain smutty to exist.

The New York Times gives a fair appraisal of the "new deal" and the resultant burlesque: "It was the opinion of some of the reporters that despite Mr. Herk's pruning, the new deal burlesque is still somewhat remote from Sunday school entertainment."

What Others Think

Hot Dog!

(From the New York Herald-Tribune)

The proposal at Albany to erect at state expense a stone memorial tower 130 feet high surmounted by a powerful eternal light on the crest of Mount Whiteface, in the Adirondacks, is another of those whims of man which serve to defeat the scenic endowments of nature and transform them into tourist meccas to enhance the sale of "hot dogs."

Neither utility nor common sense, aside from commercialism, will be served in marring the summit of this noble mountain, one of the lofliest in the Adirondacks. Moreover, thousands of patients of the numerous sanatoria in the district who seek its natural calm and beauty will not find restful sleep in the flashing rays of light so powerful as to be seen seventy-five miles away.

If the constituents of Assemblyman Frederick Porter, sponsor of the memorial tower bill, want more tourists, and hence more "hot dog" stands, let them find some other way. We have no quarrel with a memorial to the war dead, but let there be some better excuse than an effacement of nature in favor of "hot dogs."

GOOD MORNING

Now that the congress has made its pre-election bow to the veterans so obsequiously, it would hardly be too much to expect it to treat the pending tariff legislation with more sagacity and less politics.

One feels doubly confident of the outcome for the reason that, even from a political point of view, the necessity for some such measure as the one submitted by the administration is necessary.

Of course one could not expect unanimous agreement on the subject of tariffs, even in principle, and the last six days of heated debate in the house have indicated that the vote (which possibly will have been taken before this goes to press) will be far from a landslide.

But it is significant that opposition to the measure is no longer based on the ancient political disagreements over the merits of high or low tariffs, as such. Only an occasional voice out of some obscure corner of the chamber has been like an echo out of the past, crying out in parrot phrases the sanctity of high duties. For the most part these echoes have gone unnoticed.

Instead, the most potent objections are those which follow the usual line of anti-New Deal philosophy by complaining against any further increase in the power of the executive.

Most Republicans and some Democrats (it is significant that these reservations of "most" and "some" have to be made) have been earnestly concerned ever since the bank holiday over the growing power of the president and the apparent dimming of the legislative authority. They have learned by now to complain almost as a matter of habit and to cry "dictator," "fascism," and "communism" at each new request from the White House.

Thus they have been able to work themselves into a bubbling patriotic frenzy over the tariff bill, which seeks to give the president wide discretion in entering reciprocal trade pacts with foreign countries and authority to lower tariff rates as much as 50 per cent.

Representative Hamilton Fish, who has been chased for many years by hobgoblins and other shadowy creatures of fertile imagination, says the bill is another "brain trust proposal" and asks other congressmen if they, too, cannot see the ghost of Lenin lurking in the shadows behind his back.

Others, equally frightened but less superstitious, deliver fervent orations about the constitution and wonder with somewhat bitter wistfulness whether congress plans to give away its birthright and abdicate in favor of the president. These men recall that "congress has fixed tariff rates before" and insist that it still is competent in that respect.

They cannot see that this is a confusion of logic. The fact that congress has fixed tariff rates in the past does not mean that it was, is, or ever shall be, competent to do so. Nor does it mean that the stipulation of details is, or was meant to be, the province of congress. The facts and commonsense prove the opposite.

Happily, indications are that a comfortable majority of congressmen will see the light and will disregard the figments of Mr. Fish's imagination. And when the vote has been taken it will not be long before congress discovers that it has decided upon probably the most important single piece of legislation since March, 1933.

Behind The Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By Harrison Carroll

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—Just saw a preview of "Rip Tide" and here's the first description of Norma Shearer's gowns—the most carefully guarded style secret of the movie year.

Every one of Adrian's designs is sensational, but the four outstanding creations are the "King of Hearts" hat, the tailcoat evening dress, the Fragonard negligee and the Napoleonic evening gown.

Here they are, described in detail by Adrian himself:

The "King of Hearts" hat: A square box, made of brown velvet, with no brim. Worn square on head and far to the front.

The tailcoat evening dress: A silver lame coat, with wide black velvet lapels on a silver lame's bodice—has split tails (like a man's flat dress coat) that hang to the knees—worn with a black velvet skirt, of floor length and split to the knee in front.

The Fragonard negligee: White velvet princess frock with large period sleeves of crimson velvet—the high neckline circled with flat braided white band—the girdle of the same material that ties at the waist. Over this is worn a sleeveless coat that comes to the floor, swinging back from the neckline in folds that cover the train of the frock.

The Napoleonic evening gown: The pale blue crepe formal gown, moulded silhouette with train—Napoleonic coat of blue velvet in slightly darker shade. Coat comes only to the waistline.

There you are, a fashion scoop. And read it carefully, ladies, for these are Adrian designs—and styles follow him.

Everybody will be curious, too, to hear the verdict on "Rip Tide." It's Irving Thalberg's first picture since he came back to the studio and Norma Shearer's first screen appearance in a long time. Well, write it down as a brilliant bit of sophistication—short on action but long on wit, smartness and heart appeal—especially for women. And Norma is every fan's idea of the impetuous, gallant lady.

Want to try a new betting game? Alice Joyce and Clarence Brown started it around Hollywood, and now everybody has taken it up. You are driving to the theater or to the fights in the evening. You wager on the one-eyed cars you meet. Whether the left or the right light will be out. And don't go betting $5 a car. Motorists are too careless. On the way from a Hollywood restaurant to the Olympic stadium, Alice won $15 from Clarence—and at $1 a blinker. A tip for you—the odds seem to be in favor of the fellow betting on the outside lights.

Newest hobby in Hollywood is the tiny, non-commercial theater. Ramon Novarro started it with the intimate show-house in his home. Joan Crawford has plans already to build one in her back yard. And now Pert Kelton is fitting up a small play-shop in the second-floor of the building next to her Hollywood hotel.

Pert will use it to rehearse and to keep up with her dancing. Also to stage plays for herself and her friends.

A lover of vaudeville and its people, she plans to lend the theater to one-time acquaintances in the two-day who need a place to rehearse their acts.

To All Students Who Expect to Graduate at the Close of the Second Semester of the Year 1933-34, June 4, 1934

Every student who expects to receive a degree or certificate at the University Convocation to be held Monday, June 4, 1934, should make formal application on a card provided for the purpose, at the registrar's office on or before Saturday, March 31, 1934. It is of the utmost importance that each student concerned comply with this request immediately, for otherwise it is very likely that a student who may be in other respects qualified will not be recommended for graduation at the close of the present semester. Making application for the degree or certificate involves the payment of the graduation fee ($15.00) at the time the application is made—the payment of this fee being a necessary part of the application. Call at the registrar's office for the card. H. C. DORCAS, registrar.

It's No Easy Life Posing For Art Classes, Say N.Y. Models

(Editor's note—Posing for artists is the most difficult job in the modeling business. It means long minutes of absolute rigidity, few rest periods, small salaries. Some of the subjects for paintings and drawing tell about their jobs today in the third of a series of four features on models. The final story will appear in The Daily Iowan tomorrow.)

NEW YORK, March 29 (AP)—Young venuses who pose for artists are both heavier and more serious minded than other types of models.

Many of them are earning their way while studying art. One is a medical student and one wants to become a stenographer.

Hard-working young women, who must stand motionless for 24 minutes at a time, they are lucky in earning as much as $25 weekly.

"One young man complained because the model was flirting with the class," said Anna Clarke, executive secretary of the Art Students' league, "and he was the sort of young man who ordinarily would like flirting with a pretty girl. They're all serious minded here."

"Hard Work"

Miss Clarke led the way through underground regions of the league's building to a studio where Pauline Page of San Francisco was posing for a sculpture class. Miss Page, tall and dark-haired, was glad to limber up her cramped muscles and comment that "prancing in clothes would be a pleasure compared with this—it's hard work."

"I study painting in the morning and pose afterwards to earn money," she said. "Most models I know are studying sculpture or art."

"Some Truth"

"There's some truth in the popular idea about the glamorous life of a model, but it's not nearly so romantic as most people picture it. The same is true of the stage or dancing.

$20 to $25

"But I earn $20 to $25 a week as a model, and I only get $15 in an office as a beginner," she said.

There is one girl model who might pose on the dais, but she doesn't because the advertising field pays her better. She is Grace Moore, frequently called to pose for bathing suit and "intimate" apparel photographs. The modern idea of Venus is the description given her by the head of a large studio.

The art school rate is 50 cents an hour for portrait work, and 75 cents in life classes, although the league is now starting a system of giving models a flat $20 weekly.

"Don't let anyone tell you they pose for head and shoulders only," warned Miss Clarke. "Those shoulders go all the way to the toes."

Expect Many Visitors Here For Engineering Conference

Hydraulic, Mechanical Laboratories To Open Doors

A conference and open house at the University of Iowa hydraulics and mechanical engineering laboratories for a group of engineering professors from neighboring universities will be held April 13 and 14.

Visitors from the University of Illinois, the University of Minnesota, Iowa State college, the University of Wisconsin, the University of Missouri, and the University of Nebraska are expected.

A program bringing outstanding engineers to the campus is planned. The meeting will open Friday night with a dinner at Iowa Union. At this time Dean Clement C. Williams of the college of engineering will preside.

Dean A. C. Willard, head of the department of mechanical engineering and president-elect of the University of Illinois, will speak. Prof. G. C. Priestler, engineering instructor at the University of Minnesota, and Prof. M. P. Gheghon, professor of mechanical engineering at Iowa State college, will lead discussions.

Saturday morning Prof. F. M. Dawson of the University of Wisconsin college of engineering, Prof. L. G. Straub, engineering instructor at the University of Minnesota, and Prof. F. Theodore Mavis, of the University of Iowa, are to read papers at a meeting.

At this time an inspection trip will be made to the Iowa hydraulics laboratories. Prof. S. M. Woodward, head of the department of mechanics and hydraulics at the University of Iowa, will preside at the meeting.

Prof. R. W. Selvidge, head of the department of mechanical engineering at the University of Missouri, will be the presiding officer at the Saturday afternoon meeting. This session will be held in the hydraulics laboratories and an inspection trip of that building will be part of the program.

Prof. G. L. Larson, head of the department of mechanical engineering at the University of Wisconsin, Prof. Huber O. Croft, head of the department of mechanical engineering at the University of Iowa, and Prof. Ralph M. Barnes of the University of Iowa, are to be speakers at this time.

The two-day session will be the first time such a meeting has been held at the University of Iowa. Many visitors are expected to attend.

55,000 Will Take Part In Contest Here

University Plans Sixth Annual Academic Tourney

Some 55,000 pupils from 273 schools will undergo the inquisitions of the every-pupil testing program May 8 as the first event of the University of Iowa's sixth annual academic contest.

Prof. E. F. Lindquist, director of the affair for the college of education, in making that announcement yesterday also said that the enrollment represents a gain of 10 per cent over the mark of a year ago. Of the 273 schools, 200 are listed as competitors in the contest, while the others will administer the tests to their pupils on a non-competitive basis in order to evaluate the results of instruction, efficiency of teachers, and curriculum content.

Class C schools, those with pupil enrollment of 66 to 125, contributed most heavily to the 1934 list. There are 89 in this group, followed by 77 class B, 126 to 400; 76 class D, 65 and below; and 31 class A, above 400 students.

A total of about 155,000 test copies for the 17 subjects will be ready for distribution, and Professor Lindquist expects the majority of them to be requested by the schools. The number of test copies prepared is one of the largest totals in the contest's history.

The every-pupil contest is strictly between schools, with awards being made to schools in each class ranking from first to fifth on the basis of composite measure of performance. Grand awards will go to the 10 schools showing the highest composite achievement in the state as a whole.

By their performances in the event, May 8, more than 1,100 pupils will qualify for the state individual scholarship contest at the university June 4 and 5, with each school assured of at least two competitors.

held at the University of Iowa. Many visitors are expected to attend.

Romance, hidden in the garb of glass bottles, often lurks on the shelves of the ordinary drug store! Students of pharmacy learn this in the study of crude drugs taught by Dean Wilber J. Teeters of the college of pharmacy. Lectures are supplemented with displays of actual crude drug plants.

A single prescription may involve drugs which have traveled from all parts of the world and have seen strange customs and various levels of civilizations.

Crude drugs, shipped from all parts of the world, are displayed for study in the pharmacognosy classroom of the college of pharmacy. China, Japan, Africa, South America, and the East Indies are some of the portions of the world represented by barks, plants, leaves, and many other crude forms of pharmaceutical products.

A part of a turpentine tree and several instruments used in leeching the liquid from the tree are in the museum-like classroom. Containers which show strange methods of shipping are in the collection. A monkey skin containing a product of the aloe plant from South Africa is displayed in the classroom. The drug must be purified before using as the container; skin is turned with the hair on the inside.

Valuable Oils

Italy sends valuable oils of rose and lemon in large tin containers that resemble water canteens. Quinine coming back from the eastern slope of the Andes mountains in South America is shipped in bark form in large cowhide containers, called "ceroons."

Tea and opium come from China in large baskets that resemble laundry baskets.

Conditions in which the crude drugs are received at the college of pharmacy sometimes betray the level of civilization attained by the persons who gather the drugs in their natural habitat. Some drugs come in their original dirt-covered conditions, while others are spotlessly clean.

Rocks, bolts, screws, and old automobile parts often add to the weight and consequently the value of the shipments. Bits of iron and rock have put grinding machines out of order in the University of Iowa college of pharmacy. The X-ray can be used to find foreign material concealed in opium from China.

SEEN from Old Capitol By TOM YOSELOFF

The boys in the college of medicine—to whom things of the flesh are an open book—got together last Tuesday for their annual medical mixer. As a souvenir of the event they distributed to those attending the 1934 edition of The Biopsy, a newspaper whose soul aim in life is to expose the shadier side of life among medical students and interns. The Biopsy is indeed frank—as a matter of fact, so frank that even this department dares not quote it . . .

But that isn't the story I started to tell. It seems that two students who had attended the mixer started home—or elsewhere. They started out across the narrow footbridge which bridges the ravine near the Phi Beta Pi house. This bridge is not only narrow, but it is wobbly, has no side supports or braces, and makes motions like an ocean wave when anyone walks over it. On that particular evening the students, as well as the bridge, were wobbly; they got about halfway across when they fell into the ravine, a height of about 25 feet. Though they injured themselves little physically, I dare say they injured their medical pride greatly.

Television broadcasts from the University of Iowa's station W9XX are being heard far and wide, according to letters which are received by Prof. E. B. Kurtz. Last spring an audience at Cornell College Mt. Vernon, a distance of 22 miles, failed to receive the Iowa broadcast.

Now, with better equipment and conditions, Professor Kurtz has received letters from listeners in Somerset, Ky., a distance of 600 miles; Ft. Smith, Ark., 550 miles away; Rock Port, Mo., and many other places, praising the clarity of reception of Iowa's broadcasts.

At least one New Yorker, a student in Iowa City, finds a reminder of home in the view of the west campus. Looking from the sunporch of Iowa Union one night, he wrote me his reflections:

"There is something of a big-city atmosphere about the scene southwest of Iowa Union on a misty night. To the student from a large city, sitting on the sunporch of the Union and reflecting over a late cup of coffee, the scene is likely to bring on a bad case of homesickness.

"The impression seems to be created by the fantastic, metropolitan effect of hundreds of lights glowing hazily through the fog. The lights on the Iowa avenue bridge with their reflections in the water, the lighter winding hill leading to the hospital, and the illuminated windows of the Quadrangle, West-lawn and the hospital add to the pattern.

"The lighted tower of the hospital also lends to the general impression, glowing through the mist, it has a striking resemblance to the Squibb tower in New York city as viewed from across the East river in lower Brooklyn.

"The final touch to the entire picture is added by the headlights of cars crawling along the river road, the interurban crossing the river, and the stop light on the west side of Iowa avenue bridge."

Chicago University Awards Degree To Graduate of S.U.I.

Frances Ellen Baker, 829 Kirkwood avenue, was the only woman to receive a doctor of philosophy degree in the physical sciences division in a recent convocation at the University of Chicago.

Miss Baker is a graduate of the University of Iowa, having been awarded an A.B. degree in 1923 and an S.M. degree in 1925.

Her doctoral thesis was on "A contribution to the Waring problem for Ciboc functions." The doctor's degree was awarded her by the mathematics department.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The woman, clear tones to the president: "Representative and Mrs. Norton."

Senator Borah of Idaho is a frequent visitor at the National Zoo. He likes the bears best.

His assistants grin and call it "Honest Harold's one piece of graft."

Representative Tinkham of Massachusetts is still grumbling because he flew 12,000 miles last summer and gained neither of his two objectives.

He wanted to bring home a Bengal tiger. And he wanted to ride along with a company of Japanese soldiers on a campaign.

The tigers kept to cover when Tinkham hit the jungle. And the Japanese government frowned on permitting a 64 year old American congressman to amble about in a fighting zone.

Heavy Snow Hits Dakotas

SIoux FALLS, S. D., March 29 (AP)—Snow, in at least one instance the heaviest of the winter, fell at various points in South Dakota today.

It was the second general snowfall within a week and brought much needed moisture to parched fields, effectively settling dust clouds which blew over parts of the state yesterday.

At Pierre, the snow reached a depth of nearly six inches late this afternoon, with the fall continuing. It was the heaviest fall since the 1923-1924 winter.

Snow was also reported at Aberdeen, Rapid City, Yankton and Sioux Falls, while Watertown had a mixture of rain and sleet.

Several Minnesota and North Dakota points reported light snow.

Woman Kills Her Husband With Axe

BARADA, Neb., March 29 (AP)—Dr. R. Nie Williamson, 46, a Barada veterinarian, was killed by his wife with an axe in the yard of their home today.

County Attorney J. H. Falloon questioned Mrs. Williamson, who was hysterical, but did not place her under arrest. She protested she did not mean to slay her husband but struck in self defense. The sharp edge of the axe hit him on the left side of the head, opening a deep gash and fracturing the skull. He died almost instantly.

Witnesses said the veterinary was killed as he moved toward his wife to "beat her brains out" with a stick of fire wood. Glenn Williamson, 20, a son, and George Davis, who lives across the street, witnessed the tragedy.

An Open Letter [No. 6]

To Professor Van der Zee:

Your program, calling for the substitution of a municipal electric plant for the electric department of Iowa City Light & Power Company, is absolutely unnecessary—not only unnecessary but injurious to the city and its citizens.

If municipal plants are so beneficial, why have so many of them been abandoned? Iowa City may well heed and profit from the experience of those Iowa towns which have already made the test and given it up as a bad job—Emmetsburg and over 150 others.

You are high in the councils of the Iowa Public Ownership League, which now co-operates so actively with certain machinery and engineering interests to promote municipal ownership throughout the entire state of Iowa—you have personally gone to other towns in the state to attack the public utilities. In these activities have you ever considered that you cannot destroy capital in one field without frightening it in all others? Is it your aim to upset the whole financial order of things?

A reputation for being unfriendly to private business is the worst advertising any community can have. Iowa City cannot afford to have such a reputation. We cannot afford to lose any of our existing businesses; we cannot afford to have new industries shun our city. Yet what new capital can be attracted, what new business enterprise will venture to locate here, if it sees existing industries destroyed?

You do not hesitate to revile the United Light Company and the people of this community who are stockholders. You attempt to arouse suspicion and destroy confidence. Wrecking does not make for progress, but for stagnation; it does not make for recovery, but for more depression.

We have been getting the interest on our stock regularly the first of the month. Don't you and your friends elsewhere in Iowa and in Chicago believe that we have suffered enough through the closing of the banks and the depression generally without destroying our investment in utility securities?

We are not aware of your special qualifications as financial advisor to the investors of Iowa City. Your past free advice and propaganda has cost the people of Iowa City over $50,000. Why should the taxpayers and consumers pay for personal grudges and ambitions?

Your present program is unnecessary and injurious to Iowa City, its business, and its individual citizens. Are there not plenty of worthwhile projects—projects which would be directly beneficial to Iowa City—on which you could expend your energy?

Barton Mumaw Will Solo On Shawn's Dance Program Here

Only one man, besides Ted Shawn himself, will appear in a solo dance when the Shawn dancers present a program at the University of Iowa field house April 10.

This man is Barton Mumaw, veteran of the Shawn troupe of male dancers. He will appear in two solo pieces, "Fetish," a dance inspired by primitive African sculpture, and "The French sailor," a humorous dance.

In addition to his work in the solo dances, Mumaw will also appear in nearly every one of the ensemble dances performed by the six man troupe of American dancers.

Now on Tour The Shawn group, now on tour for the first time with a troupe of dancers all male, will present a program in Iowa City for the first time in about 10 years. Their appearance here will be the feature of a conference on the dance, the first of its kind ever held at the University of Iowa.

In the afternoon, the dancers will present a demonstration program for the students and teachers of physical education from Iowa's high schools, colleges, and junior colleges who are expected to attend the conference. A public performance has been scheduled for the evening of April 10.

Two Solos Shawn, who will dance in two solo numbers at the evening performance—"John Brown sees the glory" and "The invocation to the thunderbolt"—has held a place in the field of American dancing for more than two decades.

In 1912 he organized his first school of the dance in Los Angeles. Since that time he and his companies have trained more than 5,000 dancers.

Shawn has been responsible for the creation of many types of dances on native American themes, and his company has performed a Christian church service entirely in dance.

All Men Together with Ruth St. Denis he formed the Denishawn dancers, a company which toured America several seasons. This year, for the first time, the Shawn company is composed entirely of men.

The conference and the dance program are under the auspices of the Iowa chapter of Orchesis, national women's society of the dance, and Phi Epsilon Kappa, men's physical education society.

Examination Cancelled The examination for district supervisor, bureau of industrial alcohol, application for which was closed April 12, has been cancelled by the civil service commission. No reason has been given for this move.

Revision of "Three Quarter Round" Expected to Lower Bowling Scores in Future

Ten Million Pinners to Feel Effect of New Alley Ruling

PEORIA, Ill., March 29 (AP)—The litigation over "the three quarter round" in bowling is all settled.

During a lull in the 34th American Bowling Congress today, when there were only two changes among the 10 leaders of the four events, Elmer H. Baumgarten, secretary of the A. B. C., was drawn into a fanatical argument over the subject.

Affecting some 10,000,000 bowlers throughout the country, the revision of the "three quarter round" (a step of mounding in the gutters alongside the pins) regulation which goes into effect Aug. 31, 1935, will lower the scores of all bowlers approximately 11 pins per game, according to Baumgarten.

The agitation to change the size of the mounding has been on the fire for some time. It was contended by a majority of bowlers that the high scores of recent years were hurting the game, discouraging the average bowler.

"We are trying to bring about the same effect that golfing did when the U. S. G. A. changed the size and weight of the golf ball," Baumgarten said. "I believe, as when I first suggested it in 1930, the necessity of cutting down the figures being bowled, that it will take a big step forward." It will not affect the comparative scores; the good bowlers will always be the best. It will put a bigger value on the spare as there will be more to shoot at.

Alley owners fought the amendment.

Lee Pfum and Otto Peters, Springfield, Ill., today annexed fourth place in this two-man event with 1269 pins while Virgil Shroyer, Troy, Ohio, hit eighth place in the all events with an 1821 total. He collected 670 pins in the singles, the highest of the day, 623, in the doubles and 578 with his team last night.

Picard Wins Golf Tourney

Leads Field in North, South Open Play With 283

PINEHURST, N. C., March 29 (AP)—Henry Picard, young Charleston (S.C.) professional, finally overcame his Pinehurst flinch today and won the thirty-second north and south open golf tournament with a 73-hole total of 283.

Twice before the slender south-easterner had been out in front in this annual fixture, only to falter in the closing rounds but today he met the challenge and beat out Horton Smith, Harry Cooper and George T. Dunlap, Jr., in a hot battle down at 286.

This was the first major victory for the 27 year old Carolinian who has been playing tournament golf for only a few years. Picard shot a 69 in the first round and came back with a brilliant 68 in the second. He jumped to 74 this morning but still managed to hold a stroke advantage, and covered the last round in 72.

Smith and Dunlap, national amateur champion, drew to within a stroke of Picard after the third round but both had 74's this afternoon. Six shots away after 54 holes, Cooper shot a 69, the best score of the last round, to pull into a three way tie.

Bill Melborn, who led after the first round with a 67, built a closing 72 today for a total of 288, while Tommy Armour, Willy Cox, Johnny Kinder and Mortie Dutra were together at 289.

A 73-75 for today's rounds threw Armour out of the fight for first place. Cox, who slipped to a 78 this morning, came home with a 69 to equal Cooper's mark, while Dutra could do no better than a pair of 75's.

Phil Perkins, who shot a 70, one under par on the last round, and John Revolta, who used 76 blows, were together at 290, Mike Turnesa and Al Watrous had 291, Willie MacFarlane and Tom Creavy had 293, while Paul Runyan, Jimmy Hines and Denny Shute, were grouped at 294. Bill Burke was back at 295, Walter Hagen had 296, and MacDonald Smith 297.

Picard's victory brought him $1,000.

Explanation Of "Strange As It Seems"

The story of Astoria, Ore., from prehistoric times before the white men first saw it, to the time the first railroad was built through that country, is written in pictures and etched on the face of a giant concrete monolith which stands on a hill near Astoria. The monolith itself is 125 feet high and was erected in 1926 at a cost of $125,000.

The pictures form a frieze 534 feet long and seven feet high. This is wrapped spiral-wise around the monolith beginning at the bottom with a scene before the white men arrived, and ending at the top with the arrival of the first railroad train.

The pictured history shows the discovery of the Columbia river in 1792 by Capt. Robert Gray, also the river's early explorations. The arrival of the Lewis & Clark expedition at what is now Astoria, the building of Fort Clatsop in 1805, the meeting of the two parties sent out by Astor to trade with Indians, the building of Fort Astor, the blowing up of the trading ship Tonquin when hostile Indians overran it, killing most of the crew, the arrival of covered wagons from the east, and other landmarks in the history of Astoria are shown on the walls of the column.

Inside the monolith is a spiral stairway by which one may reach an observation platform at the top. From this point, 700 feet above the Columbia river, a panorama of the surrounding country for miles may be seen.

SYNOPSIS
Stanley Paige, beautiful, young society girl, is left penniless when her lawyer speculates with her money and loses. Stanley, however, cares little for the money, feeling that she has everything in the love of fascinating Drew Arnitage. But when Drew breaks their engagement saying it would be impossible to marry on his income, she is heartbroken. Rather than accept aid from her wealthy friends, Stanley rents an inexpensive furnished room and disappears from her exclusive circle to try and make her own way. Her friends agree that a better way would have been to marry handsome Perry Deverest, but Stanley cannot forget Drew. Then, one day, she meets John Harmon Northrup, struggling young author. A strong friendship ensues and they become very necessary to one another. John Harmon is in love with Stanley but refrains from telling her because of Drew. As time passes his kindness and consideration win Stanley's affection and they are married. Knowing that she does not love him as she does Drew, he says to her, "That you can give me anything at all, however little, is more happiness than I ever expected to know." They celebrate at their favorite restaurant.

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT
"It's going to be fun living with you, Stanley. What shall desert be, Mrs. Northrup—ice cream or Gruyere cheese?"

"Neither," Stanley decided at once. "Let's have waffles and those little pots of honey and some more coffee. Do you think I'll ever learn to make coffee as good as this, John Harmon? I've an idea it's a very important part of a successful marriage."

"Everything about marriage is important, I guess. He looked deep into her eyes, his own intently compelling. "It's about the most important thing in the world, I expect."

"I know. And we're just beginning—and so much can happen to spoil everything."

"Listen, Stanley," John Harmon continued to hold her eyes with the intensity of his own brown ones. "Let's not spoil anything. Let's promise to stop before that happens. Do you see what I mean? We've got something for each other—something big and wonderful. It's companionship, understanding, tenderness, a sweet need of each other. If the time ever comes when we can no longer give these things, let's not try to make any second-best sort of relationship do. Let's not spoil what we've had by giving anything less. Let's just not give anything at all—but go quickly before we destroy what we've already had."

Stanley met his eyes gravely in the wavering candlelight. She wished suddenly that she might make him understand in that little moment how clearly he had shown her that he understood. But there was no way except to answer: "I think I know what you mean, John Harmon. You're trying to tell me that if the time ever comes when I'm not completely happy with you and want something else more—I am free to go."

"Yes, that's it. Free to go, owing me nothing."

"And you, John Harmon?"

"It applies to me too, Stanley."

"But you'll never go," said Stanley softly.

"No, I shall never go," repeated John Harmon quietly.

Then a waitress in a quaint peasant costume brought them crisply golden waffles and delicious honey in little stone pots and they became gay and laughed and said silly little inconsequential things to each other, and only in the back of John Harmon's eyes and in the wistful little twist to Stanley's smile did the seriousness remain. They went out soon after that and walked through the deserted square and two blocks north to John Harmon's house.

He had left a fire burning slowly in the grate, and in its mercifully concealing glow the old room lay serene and touched with a sort of beauty; warm shadows danced faintly on the shabby walls, pewter candlesticks shone softly against the black mantel, a gentle light picked out the faded colors of the old rug, fell tenderly on the dull maple desk, the rubbed cherry of the drop-leaf table. At the high windows the gay chintz lost something of its defiance, blended gently into the warm shadows; before the hearth stood their chief extravagance, a wing chair, deeply inviting.

Stanley stopped just inside the door, flung out her hands in a little embracing gesture. "It's a lovely room, John Harmon!"

"It's a lovely person who's come to live in it," he stood just behind her and now his arms went about her, held her fast. But he did not kiss her. Not then nor in the hours that followed. In that moment John Harmon denied passion to his marriage. What it cost him even he did not know. What he did know was that the sort of love she had felt for that other man he felt for her. But he had promised himself that she should never know it; that he would give her only what she could give him in return. And just how little that was, compared with what he could give her, he knew only too well.

So now he did not kiss her, because any kiss he could have given her then would have betrayed him utterly. He only held her for a brief, exquisite second in his arms. Then he let her go and they moved together toward the waiting fire.

"Valerie's going to make a go of it, but I know she thinks we'll starve," Stanley, curled up in the wing chair, smiled at John Harmon where he had flung himself familiarly on the hearth at her feet. His knees were propped up beneath his chin, his hair was rumpled into its natural state of confusion.

"Valerie's seen too much of starving—emotional, mental starving. She's hard-boiled and suspicious. You can't blame her much. Life doesn't hold any illusions for Valerie. It's always been too full of hard, cold facts. She may not get a lot of romance out of life but neither is she going to get a lot of grief—not if she can help it! But we won't starve, Stanley. I haven't told you before but I have a surprise for you. Wedding present, sort of!" He smiled up at her in the firelight. "Your husband has a real job—some regular work with a publishing house. Maynard arranged it for me."

Stanley sat upright, frowned at him. "But, John Harmon, you'll hate that! And your book—what about your book?"

"I won't hate it at all and the book will come on better than ever. It's proof reading that I can do right here and it means a certain income—small but regular. With what stories I'll sell and the fifty a month I can depend on from the farm, it will carry us along until the book is finished."

"You're counting a lot on the book, aren't you, John Harmon?"

"I expect I am." His eyes left the fire and sought hers, smiled at her quickly. "More now than ever. You see I didn't use to think of it in terms of money, it didn't use to matter so much about that. It meant something—different—to me. But now," his eyes went back to the fire, "now, there is so much I want to do for you, Stanley. Money has suddenly become very important to me, dear."

An oddly frightened look flickered for a moment in Stanley's eyes, was gone almost before it was there. She laughed softly, reassuringly. "Not more important than—love."

"No, but perhaps more important than—dreams."

They were both to remember this on another and less happy night.

They talked of many things after that, as two people will who are much together and yet never without thoughts which must be exchanged; they talked against time and a look in each other's eyes, and a moment that must eventually be faced.

Rochester Mayor Advocates, Explains City Ownership

Reiter Urges Control Of Local Power Facilities

"Wake up on the utility situation—"

"Promote the city with a municipally owned electric plant instead of gradually selling it out to eastern holding companies by paying excessive rates," Mayor Julius J. Reiter of Rochester, Minn., who has headed the city government there for 10 years, urged Iowa Citizens last night.

Explaining the Rochester municipal plant to approximately 400 persons at a meeting at the American Legion Community building, Mayor Reiter said his city's plant was making $150,000 a year on rates which are approximately 50 per cent lower than those being paid in Iowa City now.

"No Football"
The Rochester plant was constructed, he said, in 1893 and has consistently paid out and has helped to decrease taxes. Asked if the Rochester plant was a "political football" as it is claimed the proposed Iowa City plant would be, Mayor Reiter said there had been no trouble.

He said there had been only five managers of the plant in the last 40 years, that practically all the employees now in the plant had been there 13 years ago and that some of the members of the light commission had served for 15 years.

"Only Corruption"
"The only corruption we have in our cities is the corruption furnished by the utility companies," he said. "Don't be afraid of politics because through good political campaigns you'll keep the right kind of men in the city government. The only danger is the voters being careless and lax in regard to government and politics."

Mayor Reiter compared the residential electric rates of Rochester, which has a population of 20,000, and Iowa City rates as follows: 30 KWH: Rochester, $1.52; Iowa City, $2.10. 50 KWH: Rochester, $1.98; Iowa City, $3.10. 100 KWH: Rochester, $2.88; Iowa City, $4.80 and $4.50. He also quoted commercial lighting rates, which ran approximately the same.

Alderman Speaks
Mayor Reiter was introduced by Alderman Jacob Van der Zee, leader of the municipal light forces here. Alderman Van der Zee explained that the proposed municipal plant cannot raise taxes because it is to be paid for out of the earnings of the plant in accordance with the Slinger-Hicklin law.

He said that according to the U. S. census bureau there are 1,802 municipal light plants and pointed out that from these figures the Iowa City proposal was not something speculative, and not unusual and unfair.

Warning against propaganda he said, "Don't swallow everything the light company puts out—they tell just part of the story."

Officials Plan Old Age Tax Pension List

Although they have recently completed regular assessment work for this year, Johnson county, township, and city assessors will start soon to list the names of every man and woman over 21 years of age in their districts, for the old age pension tax list.

County Auditor Ed Sulek received materials and books for this census and the assessors are expected to start their work as soon as these supplies are obtained.

A tax of $1 on every person over 21 years of age has been levied to provide funds for the old age pension, and this amount is payable on or before July 1. A tax of $2 is to be collected after this year.

County treasurers will collect payments after a properly certified list is made up by the county auditor.

Twenty Local Men To Get C.C.C. Jobs

Twenty more men from Iowa City will be sent to the recruiting office of C.C.C. camp No. 782 at Solon Monday morning. This authorization was received at the Social Service league office yesterday. Candidates will be received only on that date.

A man must be between 18 and 25 years old and his family must be in need in order to be eligible. All those who have applied or are interested are asked to report at once to the Social Service league office at the city hall to make formal application.

Seeking Balloon
DENVER (AP)—A $25 reward was offered Thursday for a runaway balloon. Filled with 900 cubic feet of hydrogen gas and measuring over 12 feet in diameter, the bag was used by Denver insurance men recently as a publicity stunt. Wind loosed it from its mooring place. The owners said the balloon cost $500.

A statue of steel and concrete, 118 feet high standing on a 10-foot foundation, is being erected to the "Goddess of Mercy" at Ofuna, Japan.

AROUND THE TOWN with DICK FAGAN

Aggressive

Mayor Julius J. Reiter of Rochester, Minn., had no doubts as to the advisability of municipal ownership in Iowa City in a talk last night. However, the mayor, who waved his cane vigorously as he talked (which resulted in the rubber tip flying off and missing this reporter's ear by millimeters) had other things on his mind besides municipal ownership and proceeded to unload them. Chain banks, Secretary Wallace's plan for crop and hog reduction and Insull all came in for a vigorous raking by the outspoken mayor.

Entertainment Plus

Four hours of dancing to Dusty Keaton and his orchestra and Fisher's concertina orchestra, two floor shows, one at 10 p.m. and one at 11:30 p.m., is only a part of the entertainment planned for those who attend the Policemen's and Firemen's ball on April 10. Tickets are now on sale at $1 a couple. Proceeds from the show go to the benefit of firemen and policemen retirement and widows' relief funds.

Sales Tax

Iowa City grocers and butchers will meet at 7:30 tonight in the Chamber of Commerce rooms to discuss the state sales tax. Restaurant owners are also meeting to discuss the sales tax tonight at Mad Hatter's Tea room.

Checking Loads

Maj. E. A. Conley, state auto inspector, has been in and around Iowa City this week checking on delinquent licenses and loads carried by trucks.

Enter Judgment In Case of Alice Sibel

Judgment was entered in the case of Alice Sibel against Emma Sibel yesterday by District Judge James P. Gaffney, who appointed William Holland as permanent guardian of the property of Emma Sibel. The bond was fixed at $1,000. Attorney F. M. Fairchild represented the plaintiff and Popham and Hayek the defendant.

Bids Called For Grading of Road

Bids on the grading of the secondary road west of Iowa City over the Rock Island railroad multiple span overhead crossing were called for yesterday by the state highway commission, meeting at Ames. Bids will be opened April 10, according to the Associated Press.
