ARMY PILOT CRASHES ON MOUNTAIN

Huey's Spat Halts Senate

Caustic Debate With Clark Over 'Libels' Reaches Crescendo

WASHINGTON, April 5 (AP)—A quarrel between Huey Long and his Democratic colleagues of the senate, so bitterly worded that a move was afoot to expunge the debate from the record, tonight had arrested all routine business of that branch of congress.

It had its inception in mildly caustic exchanges in a senate committee hearing in the morning. It swelled by surges on the senate floor during the afternoon and reached a crescendo tonight in talks of fight, blood and dying.

Others Sharpshoot

In it was involved the tangle-haired Long, hoarse voiced from shouted debate; the tall fighter, Harrison of Mississippi; and stocky battler, Clark of Missouri. Others joined in the sideline sharpshooting from time to time.

The immediate incentive for Long's present fight was his objection to the administration's nomination of D. D. Moore as internal collector for Louisiana, Moore being an anti-Long organization man. Using this as a springboard, Long reopened his attack against the Roosevelt administration, both in the senate finance committee hearing and on the floor. Particularly Long's attack was directed at the Democratic leaders in the senate, still more specifically against Senator Harrison.

Salient Points

The salient point of the fight today included:

The advice to Long by Clark that "the easiest way to stop these libel suits is to quit lying about them (people)."

Clark's charge that Long "hid under the bed" when the World war was declared.

Long's charge that Harrison had ridden into office "on the back" of former Senator Vandam of Mississippi and then ran against him for the senate.

Said Long:

"There are two ways of being a friend. One is to get your friend in trouble, stick him in the back and drink his blood. The other is—" but Long was halted by the chair at this point on a demand to abide by the rules of senate debate.

"Infamous Falsehood"

A second near fistic combat occurred in the hearing, in which Edward Rightor, attorney for Moore, and Long clashed in an exchange. In it Long said "that's an infamous falsehood." Rightor retorted that "you wouldn't say that if there weren't a lot of policemen around," and Long replied:

"Well, if you'll just step outside—"

"It was while Long was locked in verbal battle with Clark that the matter of libel suits against the Louisiana came up.

"Why," said Long, swinging his arms in windmill fashion to take in the four corners of the compass, "I have practically wore out the railroad traveling from one place to another in this country on these suits."

"Stop Cussin' People Out"

"Why, a lady waited 24 days to file her suit," Long said, "on the very strange charges that in some office, somewhere I had told her to stop cussin' people out."

Here Clark gained the floor to say to Long:

Indians Save Sole Survivor Of Air Crash

Found Wandering In Dense Jungles In Colombia

CALI, Colombia, April 5 (AP)—Primitive Indians searching for treasure found Newton C. Marshall of Milwaukee, Wis., alive today, the sole survivor of an airplane accident March 10 in the Bolivar-Valle department which took a reported toll of five lives, an official announcement said.

Completely Exhausted

Weak and ill, Marshall had wandered for weeks through the dense jungles of that mountainous region. Escaping with his life from the wrecked plane, Marshall was saved just in time from a terrifying death in the "jungle hell" from which few white men have ever emerged alive.

Marshall was completely exhausted and found it almost impossible to talk when he was located by a tribe of Indians called the Guaqueros, famed for the use of poison arrows in years gone by.

Identification

The Scadta airline, which owned the plane, rushed a physician and nurse from Cali aboard a special plane, and two employees of the company were sent from Bogota to the region where Marshall was reported located.

Identification was officially made, the announcement stated, through papers and the passport which the man was carrying.

Word was immediately sent to the Choco-Pacific company, one of the largest platinum producers in the world, of which Marshall was manager, and a group of officials left at once for the Bolivar department to meet him.

Six Apply For Posts on Board

University Election To Fill 3 Vacancies On Publications Unit

Six petitions for nomination of students to the board of Student Publications, Inc., were turned in at the office of Prof. Frank L. Mott, president of the board yesterday.

Petitions received were those of: Richard C. Crayne, A2 of Fairfield; Edward L. Dolly, L1 of Rock Island, Ill.; Arthur M. Barnes, A2 of Eagle Grove; Earla A. Blaine, A2 of Hampton; Dwight H. Hoover, A2 of Iowa City; and Edward J. Kelly of Des Moines, who is taking a combined course in liberal arts and law.

Of this group, three will be selected at the all-university election to be held April 19 to fill vacancies on the board. They will serve for a period of two years. The election is to be conducted in conjunction with that of the Union Board and other campus organizations.

Eicher Enters Demo Race for Renomination

Congressman Edward C. Eicher of Washington, Ia., announced yesterday that he would be a candidate for renomination on the Democratic ticket at the primary vote in June, according to W. R. Hart, county Democratic chairman who was notified by Mr. Eicher's secretary.

When an attorney in Washington, Ia., Mr. Eicher was elected to represent the first Iowa district in the last election, and since then Congressman Eicher has been mentioned for appointment to the United States circuit court of appeal to fill the vacancy left by the death of Judge William S. Kenyon.

Dr. Hardy to Do Government Work

Dr. A. V. Hardy, of the hygiene and preventive medicine department, left last night for Chicago at the request of the United States public health service.

He will spend the next three months participating in a study of the amebic dysentery outbreak, which centered about Chicago last fall.

Insull's Lawyers Map Campaign to Keep U.S. Officials From Action

ISTANBUL, April 5 (AP)—Samuel Insull's lawyers mapped their campaign today for keeping the aged former utilities executive out of the hands of American authorities.

They indicated an intention of exercising all rights under the law in this direction; including representations to the council of state and even to the Turkish parliament in a hope of obtaining a cassation (annulment) court decision against the government's extradition order.

If these efforts fail, an appeal will be made to the British government on the 74 year old fugitive's behalf because he is a native of England.

Two Killed In Revolt Staged By Bolivians

Military Cadets Make Surprise Attack On Police Stations

LA PAZ, Bolivia, April 5 (AP)—Two women were killed in a short-lived revolution of a group of military cadets here today.

The cadets made a surprise attack on police stations, occupying them and firing at Carabineers from the windows of the buildings. For several hours a virtual battle raged in the streets.

Gen. Joe Lanza, appointed chief of the La Paz garrison, visited the headquarters of the revolutionists and talked them into a peaceful surrender.

The revolt started at dawn and appeared to be well-organized. Firing continued most of the morning, causing all business houses to close.

When General Lanza decided to interview the leaders of the revolt, he went to their headquarters without an escort.

After discussing the situation with the leaders, Lanza induced them to surrender and he led them personally back to the military school. A few minutes later a group of cadets who had occupied the central police station surrendered and also marched back to the school.

The two women killed were walking along the street when the firing began and were unable to reach a point of safety.

After the revolt was put down shortly after noon stores and banks again opened for business.

The government said that the situation was completely normal tonight and that all the districts of the republic were quiet.

Tragedy Mars Floods' Wake

Waters Subsiding In South After Taking Score of Lives

By The Associated Press
Subsiding floodwaters left tragic spectacles last night in the stricken valleys of Texas and Oklahoma, where more than a score of lives were lost in the sudden swelling of river and creeks.

Searchers patrolled the turbid Washita river in Oklahoma, seeking the bodies of six or more still missing in the flood. Eleven dead had been recovered last night, and fear was expressed that the torrent had swept to death unknown inhabitants of tent camps and dugouts along the stream.

Property damage in the Elk City, Okla., region was estimated at $825,000 or more.

Texas counted four victims in surging Saline creek near Menard, where four to 10 inches of rain fell. Three of the bodies were recovered.

Gilmore, Johnson Win Decision Over Jacobson, Reynolds in 8th Iowa Supreme Court Day Trial

State's Highest Court Judges Announce Winners

John A. Gilmore of Iowa City and Merle H. Johnson of Marshalltown were awarded a decision over Arthur H. Jacobson of Waukon and Harold F. Reynolds of Dubuque, in the eighth annual Supreme Court day trial, in the house chamber of Old Capitol yesterday afternoon.

The decision was announced at a banquet in Iowa Union last night, the concluding event in the annual program.

Two Years of Elimination

These four men, seniors in the college of law, earned the right to participate in the trial through two years of elimination contests and through high scholastic standing.

The decision was reached by the nine justices of the Iowa supreme court who served as Judges. They are: Chief Justice George Clausen, Justice E. G. Albert, Justice J. W. Anderson, Justice M. F. Donegan, Justice W. D. Evans, Justice J. W. Kindig, Justice J. W. Kintzinger, Justice R. F. Mitchell, and Justice T. S. Stevens.

Question Presented

The case which was argued this year was appealed from the university court, presided over by Prof. Mason Ladd of the college of law. The question which the attorneys presented to the judges for their decision was: Will the court of equity compel the directors of the Foster Bicycle company to declare dividends in favor of the preferred stockholders from the surplus liquid assets of the company, or will they be allowed to use this sum for the readaptation of the factory in order to manufacture some additional product?

The house chamber of Old Capitol, the location of the "supreme court," was filled to capacity.

Coif Initiation

Supreme Court day opened with the induction of the seven new members of the Order of the Coif. The seven senior law students who were initiated were: John C. Butler of Des Moines, F. Arnold Daum of Buffalo Center, Mr. Gilmore, Mr. Jacobson, Mr. Johnson, Mr. Reynolds, and J. Harold Saks of Council Bluffs.

Each year one honorary member is elected to the Order of the Coif. Justice Kindig of the Iowa supreme court received the distinction this year.

Keys to New Members

Dean Eugene A. Gilmore of the college of law presented the traditional gold key to each of the new members, at the close of an impressive ceremony. He was assisted by Justice Stevens, Justice Albert, and Prof. Percy Bordwell of the college of law.

Following the induction, the cornerstone of the Law Commons, new law dormitory, was laid, with Stanley M. Corbett, L3 of Sioux City, acting as master of ceremonies.

Jessup Speaks

President Walter A. Jessup, who spread the first trowel of mortar, said that the law college of the University of Iowa was the oldest west of the Mississippi, and that it was only right that it should follow in the steps of Yale, Cornell, and Michigan in the new consciousness of law students living together, and be the pioneer in the new movement in the middle west and west.

Dean Gilmore, the second speaker, expressed his belief that the Law Commons would take care of the time spent by the student outside of the classroom, who is 80 per cent of his school life. He quoted Woodrow Wilson in saying, "The only time to get an idea into a student's head is from 6 p. m. to 6 a. m.—the rest of the time he is on his guard."

Baker Aids

Asserting that he was a workman rather than a scholar, George T. Baker, chairman of the state board of education, spread his trowel of mortar. He declared that this expansion of the Iowa campus was highly pleasing to him.

"The state board of education wishes to attract superior equipment to the University of Iowa," said Henry C. Schull, lawyer member of the board, "but more than that it wants to attract men and women of superior learning and high ideals to the teaching staff."

J. C. Mabry, president of the State Bar association, declared that institutions like the Law Commons "do not just happen, but represent the visions and ideals of farsighted men and women."

Chief Justice Clausen recommended that all law students wishing to be successful in their profession, should develop "wisdom, knowledge, and understanding" by thought, experience, and contact with others.

Documents in Cornerstone

After the short talks, C. Frederick Beck, L2 of Mason City, placed various documents, among which were a copy of the Law Review, a story of the Iowa law school, written by Prof. Rollin M. Perkins of the college of law, a bulletin of the summer session, the names of the students and members of the faculty, and copies of The Daily Iowan and Press-Citizen containing stories of Supreme Court day, in the cornerstone, which was then sealed.

After the ceremony, the group sang, "O The Laws!", and returned to the east side of the river for the Coif luncheon and the reception on the sun porch of Iowa Union.

Undermyer Vigorous In Defense of Stock Market Control Bill

WASHINGTON, April 5 (AP)—The stock market control bill is by no means perfect, Samuel Undermyer told the senate banking committee today, but nevertheless it would be "nothing short of a catastrophe if it should fail of enactment."

With the vigor characteristic of his direction of the Pujio money trust investigation in 1913, Undermyer urged amendments generally removing rigid restrictions and increasing the discretionary power of regulatory groups.

"We have gone on too many years with a great financial institution a law unto itself," he said.

City Action On Disposal Plant Likely Tonight

S. U. I. Committee Is Holding Up Report On Use of Plant

By DICK FAGAN
City Editor, The Daily Iowan

Action on the proposed sewage disposal plant may be taken tonight at the council meeting, it was indicated yesterday, although the university committee has not yet reported.

A member of the committee said last night that it probably would not report until next week. The university is expected to pay approximately 40 per cent of the cost of the proposed project through sewer rentals which would be paid monthly by the users of water and has not yet stated that it will agree to use the plant.

The committee was appointed at the request of the city council to investigate and report on the advisability of the university using the plant.

No Action on Loan

City Clerk George J. Dohrer has received word from the PWA at Washington, D. C., advising the city that no further action in the matter of changing loan agreements with the city will be taken until there is a definite commitment from the city as to the loan it desires and the amount and type of bonds it is willing to offer. The loan and grant was originally approved for $516,000, calling for general obligation bonds.

The last action taken by the council was the sending of the loan agreement back to the PWA and asking for revenue bond agreements.

Letter from PWA

The letter, dated March 23, 1934, from Charlie C. McCall, chief counsel, public bodies section of legal division for the administrator, and addressed to City Clerk George J. Dohrer, is as follows:

"This is to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 20, 1934, and of the five copies of the loan agreement previously transmitted to you.

"The loan agreement plainly provides for the purchase of bonds in the amount of $421,000, and not in the amount, as you state, of $516,000. The amount of the grant payable in cash during construction, of $95,000, is arrived at by taking five-sixths of the amount of the grant estimated by our engineering division. The balance of the grant, which may not exceed 30 per cent of the cost of the labor and material expended on the project, is used to cancel, upon completion of the project, a proportionate amount of the bonds purchased by the government.

"We note what you say with reference to the passage of the revenue bond act, but in view of the statement in the letter of Harry D. Breene, mayor of Iowa City, received this date, that there is a well-defined opposition to your present program and that efforts are being extended to reconcile this situation, we will take no further action in the above matter until we have a definite commitment from the applicant as to the loan it desires and the amount and type of bonds it is willing to offer."

During the early part of the year it was thought by councilmen to be advisable to wait until after April 17, when it was learned whether or not the city would erect a municipal plant, to make any definite commitment on the sewage disposal plant.

Mercury At High Of 61 Yesterday

Rising steadily from near freezing temperature the mercury climbed to a high yesterday of 61 degrees, according to Prof. John F. Reilly, official observer.

Rumanian Cabinet May Quit

BUCHAREST, Rumania (AP)—Premier Tatarsescu and his cabinet may resign as a result of an apparent Fascist victory in the verdict by the court which tried a group of iron guards for the murder of former Premier Ian Duce. It was rumored tonight.

Flyer Dies Leaping From Cockpit Just Before Plane Hurtles Into Rugged Peak

WARREN, Ohio, April 5 (AP)—An army mail plane piloted by Lieut. T. Anderson, was slightly damaged late today when it was forced down by poor visibility at the department of commerce emergency field five miles north of here. It was en route from Newark, N. J., to Cleveland.

Local Group Asks U. S. To Probe Rates

Wires Government For Inquiry Soon Into Electricity Cost

An immediate federal investigation of electric rates in Iowa City has been asked in a telegram sent to the federal trade commission at Washington, D. C., by the Iowa City Consumers Protective association.

Congress authorized the trade commission to make an investigation into electric rates throughout the country in a bill passed Wednesday.

Reasonable Rates

The following telegram was sent to the commission:

Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D. C.

Our association is organized to obtain reasonable rates for water, gas, electric and telephone service. We would welcome a study of local rate situation here at your earliest convenience and will be glad to cooperate with you in any way.

Iowa City Consumers Protective association, Herman Smith, president.

Mr. Smith, in commenting on the telegram, said:

"We welcome an investigation by the federal authorities into the local electric rate situation. Such an investigation would give us the lowest rates to which we are entitled, and would make utterly unnecessary the risking of a million dollars or more in a municipal plant which might not prove successful."

"Municipal Plant Dangerous"

"The construction of a municipal plant has always been considered by thinking citizens as a very dangerous experiment. If we can get the same results without costing the taxpayers money we will be much better off. It seems to me, and to the hundreds of members of the Consumers Protective association, that we should not approve of the proposed million dollar expenditure until every other resource is exhausted. The federal investigation into electric rates gives us a chance to get an unbiased view of our local rate situation which should be satisfactory to all concerned."

No answer had been received late last night.

Three Judges Appointed To Hear Charges

Disbarment proceedings against Vernon L. Sharp will be heard by three district court judges appointed yesterday by Chief Justice George Clausen of the Iowa supreme court, according to word received from Des Moines.

District Judges D. W. Hamilton of Grinnell, George A. Johnston of Creston, and D. E. Maguire of Dubuque were appointed to hear the proceedings.

No date for the local hearing has been set.

Wirt Asked To Reveal Names Next Tuesday

WASHINGTON, April 5 (AP)—Dr. William A. Wirt, Gary, Ind., superintendent of schools, was asked today to appear before a house committee next Tuesday and name the administration officials who told him President Roosevelt's counsel were planning to overthrow the government.

In an exchange of telegrams, Wirt asked for additional time in which to prepare his testimony, but Chairman Bulwinkle (D-N. C.) of the special committee indicated this would not be granted.

Second Plane Damaged In Forced Landing Near Warren, Ohio

WARREN, Ohio, April 5 (AP)—An army mail plane piloted by Lieut. T. Anderson, was slightly damaged late today when it was forced down by poor visibility at the department of commerce emergency field five miles north of here. It was en route from Newark, N. J., to Cleveland.

ALTOONA, Pa., April 5 (AP)—

Second Lieut. John Leland McAllister of Lansley Field, Va., leaped to his death today a few seconds before his army ship crashed into the side of Healy's mountain, one of the rugged peaks that stud the area known as the "graveyard of aviators."

Three farmers in a field about five miles west of the Duncansville (Altoona) airport saw the reserve officer suddenly rise in the plane as it roared toward the rocky mountain-side and leap from the cockpit, less than 200 feet in the air.

Slashing their way through the dense underbrush, the farmers found the body resting against a tree, 80 feet from wreckage of the plane, which had rolled 100 feet down the mountain side.

Airmen said the pilot might have been trying to fly between Healy's mountain and Pomeroy mountains, realized something had happened to his controls and decided to risk an almost certain death by such a short leap rather than dash against the bare mountain side.

The atmosphere was hazy, but visibility fairly good. McAllister's chart showed the mountain to be 2,800 feet high and the ship struck about half way up.

The pilot's log stated he left his home port, Lansley Field, this morning and made stops at Bolling Field and Middletown, Pa. The last entry was 3 p. m. on leaving Middletown. It is believed he was ferrying the empty ship to Cleveland for use in the mail service.

A letter revealed he had made a forced landing in a bombing ship at Marion, Ohio, about two weeks ago.

C & D Loses Blue Eagle

Curl Says Compliance Would Force Firm To Bankruptcy

"I cannot comply with the NRA code without being forced into bankruptcy," James E. Curl, owner of the C & D Cleaners, said last night, after he had been ordered by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, yesterday to turn in his Blue Eagle.

"I will not have my business taken away from me except by an order of a judge of a United States district court.

High Wages

"I pay my men twice the wages specified by the NRA and comply with the ruling on hours of labor," Mr. Curl declared, "but, running a strictly cash business, I cannot expect to charge as high a price for my work as do my competitors, who work on a credit basis, without losing my patronage."

The code price set for this district is 75 cents for men's suits. The C & D Cleaners have been doing the work, since they turned in their Blue Eagle two months ago, for 65 cents.

No Quarrel With NRA

"I have no quarrel with the NRA or its administrators," Mr. Curl stated, "but I demand that there be some differentiation made between the cleaners who work for cash and those who work for credit."

Mr. Curl charges that the code was dictated by the National Cleaners and Dyers association and that he was not asked to join the organization and that neither he nor any other independent cleaner had any voice in the making of the code. The association has about 54 per cent of all cleaners in the country, he said, thus making it practically monopolistic in character.

WEATHER

Junior Prom to Head List Of Week End Spring Dances

Post-Vacation Social Activities to Begin Tonight When Hal Kemp's Orchestra Ushers Forth Hawkeye Beauties

Spring society will flourish on the campus this week end, with the Junior Prom heading the list of attractions and fraternity and sorority parties augmenting the post-vacation activities. Music, furnished by Hal Kemp and his orchestra, will add its share of splendor to the colorful presentation of Hawkeye beauties tonight as they appear on a balcony in Iowa Union lounge.

Black and silver form the color scheme at the Prom tonight. The balcony will be behind the orchestra platform, and will be terraced. A doorway draped with silk, semi-transparent curtain will furnish the entrance for the beauties and the words "Junior Prom" will glitter from above. The lighting effect will change from soft to bright as each girl steps through the doorway onto the balcony where she will stand on a pedestal during her presentation.

Colored spots of rose and blue will play on dancing couples throughout the evening.

The dance programs are white suede with "Junior Prom" in blue lettering on the cover. They are tied with blue silk cord.

Chaperons at the Prom will be: Prof. and Mrs. Fred M. Pownall, Prof. and Mrs. Arthur C. Crowbridge, Prof. and Mrs. R. A. Kuever, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus H. Fitzgerald, and Prof. and Mrs. F. G. Knight.

The committee in charge of the dance is as follows: Claude Hogan, A3 of Iowa City, general chairman; John Greene, J3 of Fremont, Ohio, programs; Ruth Garrigues, C3 of Iowa City, budget; Catherine Smith, A3 of Hazelton, chaperons; Philip McClintock, E3 of Iowa City, decorations; and Margaret Farris, A3 of Wisconsin, tickets.

Kelly Dinner
Honoring Jane Klockhohn of Le Mars, James P. Kelly, L3 of Le Mars, will entertain 40 persons at a formal dinner this evening at Iowa Union preceding the Junior Prom.

Orientation Program For Freshman Women Planned

Faculty Members Will Contact Students Personally

A tentative freshman orientation program was planned Wednesday and yesterday by leaders, assistants, and advisers in the project, who met in the women's lounge of Iowa Union.

According to the program first contacts will be made Thursday, the day after rushing. The leader and assistant will phone or see freshmen personally. Faculty women may devote either Thursday or Friday afternoon to acquainting freshmen with the campus.

Group Meeting
The following Sunday will be the first group meeting. Two or three groups will combine to plan picnics, Wiener roasts, teas, buffet suppers, light luncheons, and swimming parties. Next the leader, assistant, and advisers will make personal contacts with the women whose names have been received after registration.

Two weeks after the first group meeting another will take place at which all women will be present. Personal contacts will be continued from the time of this meeting until the middle of November. At the November meeting women who are having difficulties in getting better adjusted will be helped. This meeting will be followed up with more personal contacts. The last group meeting will take place the last of February or the first of March.

Summer Correspondence
Letters will also be sent to freshmen women planning to enter the university. Summer correspondence will be under the direction of an Iowa City committee. The cooperation in carrying out this whole program. The next meeting of the freshmen orientation leaders, their assistants, and advisers will take place at Iowa Union Wednesday and Thursday, April 11 and 12. Genevieve Chase, assistant dean of women, will have charge of the program and will speak on "The campus as a whole."

At the meetings April 18 and 19, Mrs. W. H. Morgan will speak on "The freshman girl herself." At the last meetings, April 25 and 26, Miss Chase will speak on "How we can best help the freshmen."

Two Fires Call Out Trucks Yesterday

Two trips were made by the fire truck yesterday in answer to alarms which came in at approximately 10:30 a.m. and at 9:15 p.m.

The first fire was the result of a grease flame which filled the kitchen and cafeteria of the Quadrangle with a dense smoke, but which was easily extinguished, causing little damage.

400 Attend Law Banquet Last Night

Students, Faculty Join Court Day Guests In Festivities

"Parties of the first part," "plaintiffs," and law text books were forgotten last night as students and faculty of the college of law and their friends and guests gathered at Iowa Union for their annual Supreme Court day banquet.

The dinner and program closed a day of activity which included the eighth annual Supreme Court day trial before justices of the Iowa supreme court, the laying of the cornerstone for a new law dormitory, and induction ceremonies for the Order of the Coif.

Nearly 400 persons were present in the main lounge of the Union. Tables were decorated with bowls of fresh flowers and tall candles.

Rapids, presided over the program, which included the awarding of honors to junior and senior law students. Dean Eugene A. Gilmore of the college of law introduced guest jurists, who made the awards.

Justice J. M. Grimm of Cedar Rapids, presented certificates to the seven seniors who were made new members of the Order of the Coif, and to Justice J. W. Kindig, who became an honorary member.

A musical program carried out a radio theme. Several students and all the members of the faculty were "featured artists" of the program.

In addition to justices of the Iowa supreme court, other honored guests included President Walter A. Jessup, four members of the state board of education, several district judges, and members of the bar and alumni of the college of law.

Law, Medicine— And Justice

NO CONSIDERATION of the tremendous problem of reform of America's judiciary can be complete without a consideration of the relations between the medical and the legal professions, as they affect the course of justice.

Dr. Andrew H. Woods of the University of Iowa college of medicine defined the problem well in his recent report to the board of control of state institutions. In three situations, Dr. Woods pointed out, there is need for improvement of relations: In penology, in the coroner's realm of activity, and in the legal use of psychiatry.

It is only within recent years that the study of penal methods has advanced along scientific lines. Lawyers and judges, as well as sociologists and physicians, today recognize the need for improvement in punitive institutions.

One thing has stood in the way of more rapid development of scientific penal methods—the lack of an efficient means of cooperation between the medical profession and those who make and enforce the laws of the nation.

Many states have already taken steps to remedy abuse in the activities of their coroners. Laws which left the work of death investigations to the haphazard discretion of inefficient local officers have been supplanted by laws which make careful investigation of unnatural deaths mandatory, and performed by carefully selected state officials.

The greatest abuse of the medico-legal situation is in the use of psychiatry by unscrupulous attorneys and equally unscrupulous physicians. The court system of America in criminal cases has become a testing ground of insanity, with "experts" testifying.

Psychiatrists are convinced that mental maladjustment is the greatest cause of crime, and a careful study of this subject might lead to judicial and penal procedure of true scientific worth. However, the situation which exists today is conducive to anything but scientific accuracy in the courts.

So-called "experts" are called in by both sides, and are paid to prove to the court a conclusion which they set up before the investigation. The judges, lawyers, and jury, untrained in medicine and psychology, are at a loss on the whole problem.

These questions and many others are the factors in what constitutes today an obstacle in the path of administration of justice. Abuses of the system are to be seen in any city, where "ambulance chasers," unscrupulous lawyers, offer their services to victims of accidents, in attempts to "bleed" insurance companies or wealthy individuals. And for each ambulance chaser there is a doctor working to defeat the ends of true justice.

The solution is not to be found by either profession alone. The whole thing must be a matter of sound cooperation between physicians and the legal profession.

Dr. Woods suggests a medico-legal institute, such as has been created in European countries. This may be the best means of administering the problem. The immediate need is for recognition of the problem by both professions, and for cooperative action.

What Others Think

The Lagging Housing Program

(From the New York Herald-Tribune)

The idea of developing a great national low-cost housing program as one means of attack upon the depression was first seriously agitated in the Hoover administration. Housing presented one of the most obvious examples of the "paradox of want in the midst of plenty," and government-encouraged housing programs seemed for many reasons as hopeful a method as any of solving the paradox without "doing away with the plenty." It is very nearly two years now since the Wagner bill, passed with President Hoover's indorsement, authorized the advance of R.F.C. funds to limited dividend housing corporations, and so appeared to open the way to a large-scale attack upon the problem. But though some projects were actually undertaken, the results so far have been small and the paradox is still being solved, so far as housing is concerned, in the good old-fashioned way of continuing the want.

The R.F.C. loans to limited dividend corporations were followed by the vaster plans of the Roosevelt administration, by the P.W.A. millions and the Federal Emergency Housing corporation. The latter, it is now stated from Washington, has so far spent just $1,930; all of it upon its own incorporation. Work has begun on P.W.A. housing projects which will involve the expenditure of about $12,000,000, but that is scarcely more than a drop in the bucket. New York city has established her Housing Authority, but no plans have as yet appeared from it. The truth is that next to nothing has actually been accomplished. Washington blames it upon the "speculators." It would probably be more correct to blame it upon the magnitude and intricacy of the problems involved and upon the fact that the study, the organization, the public support which would be required to solve them in any large way were—and still are—almost non-existent in the United States.

When the Wagner bill was passed a year ago last June, New York was almost the only state in the Union which had given any serious consideration to publicly supported housing, and the New York State Housing board, itself a very tentative and cautious experiment, was almost the only public agency capable of even dealing with the problem. Among architects, would-be builders of mass or standardized housing, public authorities and welfare groups there has been plenty of discussion since the passage of the Wagner act, but there has been little in the way of preparation for translating discussion into practice. Of the P.W.A. work now under way, three-quarters is accounted for by two large New York city projects, while even New York is only slowly discovering how multitudinous are the interests vitally concerned in any public housing project and how much preparation is necessary before there is even a possibility of doing anything important in this way.

Propaganda is a great thing. It is one of the most potent forces of our times. It reaches everywhere, warping every mind whose attention it can command, subtly, quietly, falsely.

Its presence is seldom felt. It works always beneath clever camouflage, shrinking from the daylight, hiding in the dark. But it is powerful, often invincible.

Its name is generally in disrepute. The public knows what its effects have been in the past, how millions have been duped time after time. But rebellion against it is useless, because it cannot be recognized.

In polite business language, propaganda falls under the euphonious name of "public relations." And the field marshal of propaganda works in an office marked "public relations counsel."

There are many arguments in favor of propaganda. For instance the distinction is made between "good propaganda" and "bad propaganda." Good propaganda, so we are told, gives the public information that is in all ways legitimate, information that should have. And the mere fact that there is incidental profit to the propagandizing agency, goes the argument, makes the news no less valuable.

That, at any rate, is the plausible basis upon which almost every large business, political, and what not organization maintains a public relations, or propaganda, department. And the volume of material which arrives in the mail at newspaper offices every day from these agencies would be astounding to the average man who thinks of propaganda as something remote and not of very much importance.

Recently there has been an avalanche of material from the Committee for the Nation, quoting long statements from Dr. Wirt about communists in the national government, and long dissertations by presidents of this and that on the disintegrating constitution.

Once a week there appears a large "clip sheet" from the "Committee on public relations of the eastern railroads," offering a stack of gratis information in the form of already prepared newspaper stories relating the sad plight of the railroads. And almost as regularly there is a batch of similarly edited material telling of the glories of waterways and the greed of railroads.

Now and then there is something comic, like the stories which come periodically from some company or other giving the housewife breezy little hints about how to use beer in cooking, or stories telling the history of candles.

Of course this stuff is sent through the mails with the idea that at least some newspapers will use it. And undoubtedly many of them do, or the practice would not long be continued.

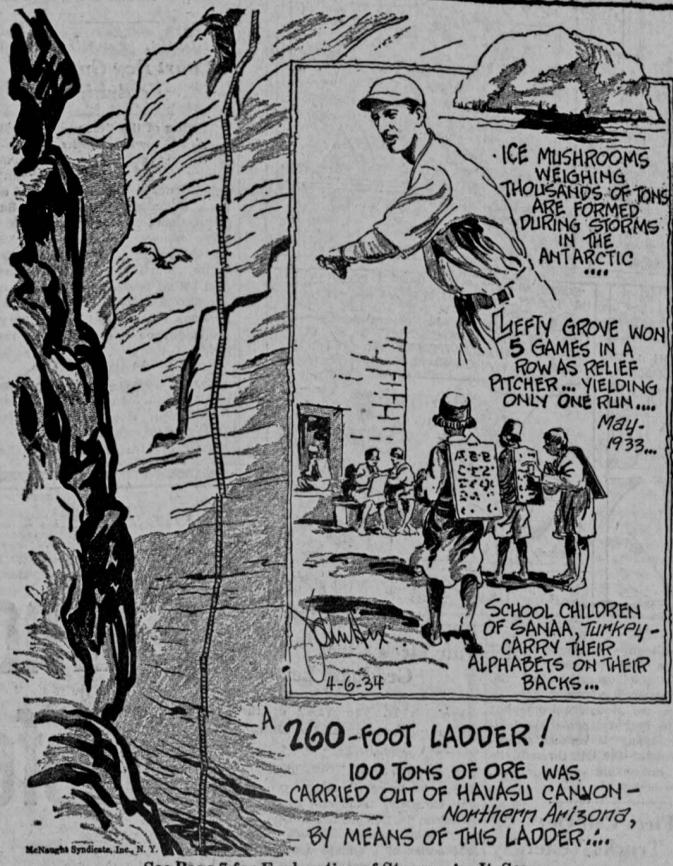

Some of it makes interesting reading and is more or less harmless. But its insidiousness—and in many cases even viciousness—is due to the fact that the two fundamental considerations in its preparation are that its source must be kept secret and that it should be so designed as to favorably influence the reader.

In other words, propaganda by its very nature is nothing but anonymous advertising. Its purpose is the same as that of advertising, either to influence the public to buy goods or to develop the "right" attitude toward the institution that is advertising.

But advertising that masquerades under the guise of news is dishonest advertising, and no arguments can make it otherwise. —Don Fryer

Behind The Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By Harrison Carroll

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., April 5—A Hollywood is hoping that Pat Wing, former starlet and bride of three months, will emerge unscathed from a nasty automobile accident that occurred on the Ridge Route Saturday night.

Pat, who recently gave up the screen to become Mrs. Bill Perry, was motoring with her new husband from Bakersfield to visit her parents and her sister, Toby, in the film colony. As the car rounded a curve another machine skidded and crashed into it.

Young Perry was unhurt, but Pat received an eight-inch laceration across her forehead, several scalp cuts and a dislocated knee. After receiving emergency treatment she was rushed to the family home, where she is now recovering from the injuries and the shock of the experience.

From what Toby was telling yesterday at the Paramount studio, a skin-grafting operation will be performed to save Pat from going through life with an ugly scar.

There is $50 in it for the person who attended the Agua Caliente Handicap and happened to pick up a little jade shamrock. The triquet has little actual value but Isabel Jewell will give half a century note to get it back. It's the only way she can square herself with her colored maid, Hattie May.

You see the shamrock was Hattie's lucky piece, and it was more valuable to her than all the rabbit-feet in the world.

Hearing that Isabel was going to bet on the race, Hattie produced the shamrock from her spacious bosom and begged the star to carry it for good luck. Now that it is lost, she is inconsolable. Isabel has offered to buy her another trinket 100 times its value, but Hattie sorrowfully shakes her head.

One of the most amusing sights in Hollywood is to watch Nils Asther's valet and chauffeur standing in for him on the set.

Y'see the star's man-of-all-work is almost a head and shoulders shorter than Nils.

It was Max Morin, Universal director, who solved the problem. He had a pair of wooden shoes built similar to the "gita" worn by the Japanese in stormy weather. Now the chauffeur-valet-stand-in simply mounts his "gitas" and Nils takes it easy between shots.

Over at R-K-O there is another instance where necessity was the mother of invention. Leslie Howard is suffering from toxic poisoning and his doctor has ordered the star's tonsils out at the earliest opportunity. But how to do it when Leslie is in the middle of the picture, "Of Human Bondage."

Director John Cromwell offers this ingenious plan:

The star is due to appear in six more important sequences, all of them in small sets. So Cromwell is having all the sets erected on a revolving stage, which once was used for a musical. The cameras and lights are put up in front and above the stage and the sets are rolled into position as soon as they are needed. This eliminates the tedious business of changing lights and cameras and moving them about the lot.

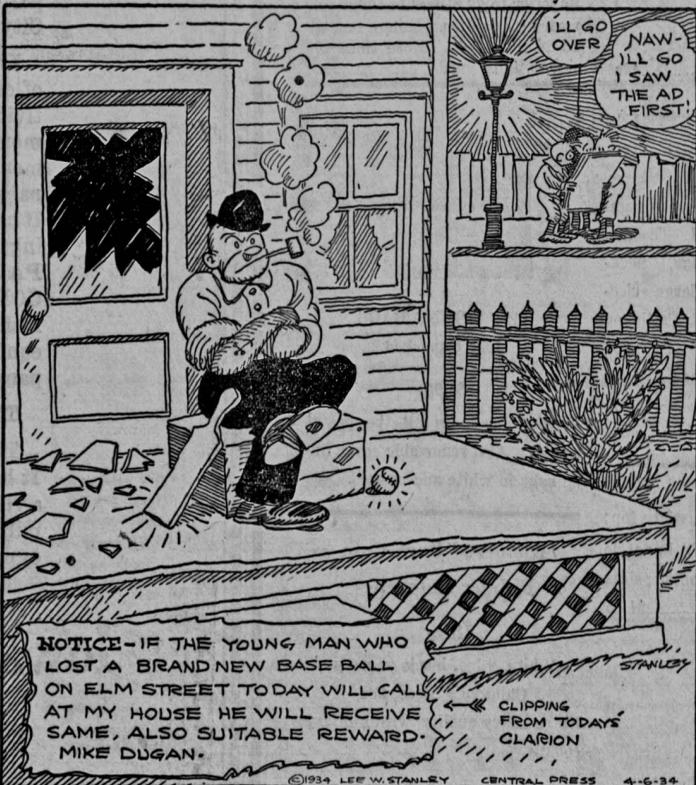

Cromwell figures the experiment will save money and nearly a week's work on the picture.

The new Bill Powell house is next door to that of Dick Bartlesheim, and now the pair are trying to get Ronald Colman to buy the adjoining lot. "Then, if worst comes to worst," says Bill, "Ronald can give tennis lessons, I can teach swimming and Dick can be our business manager."

Incidentally, there's a reason for Bill's swimming pool to be narrow in width but 60 feet long. His 12 year old son wants to be a sprint swimmer, and Bill is giving him the place to practice.

SEEN

Old Capitol
By TOM YOSELOFF

Students of law are said to study harder than any other group in the university. So perhaps it is not surprising that when they lay aside their books, their play is a bit more extreme than might otherwise be expected. At least, it's different.

It took only a few minutes to discover that the banquet which closed the activities of Supreme Court day last night was going to be different. In the midst of the dinner, when things were running smoothly, the men at one table not to mention Marguerite Uhlenhopp, the queen of the college of law broke into "Hall Hail! The Gang's All Here." That started things going. From that time on, it was an evening of music—and embryo lawyers sing with the same force which they display in arguing cases!

Then the same seemed to be to make various ones among the diners stand up and take a bow. This was accomplished by repeating a chant: "Stand up, stand up, stand up, stand up," until the person named was forced to stand up in self defense. The boys started with Dean Gilmore, and continued through the college of law staff.

That much was fine, and this department considered it a display of an "I love my teacher" attitude. But when the students called upon the supreme court justices and various members of the legal profession on hand. Even that was all right. But things reached a peak when the men at one table started chanting, "We want John Dillinger." That was too much!

Iowa's supreme court justices proved their efficiency, and at the same time put the chanters in their place. After various of the members of Iowa's highest tribunal had been called upon to "stand up" several times, they evidently mapped out a concrete course of action. So the next time one was called for, they all stood up with one accord.

The program, which was said to have been broadcast over "the Iowa law school of the air," featured the music of "Chuck Crawley and his legal lads," and had such well known figures as "Slicker Gilmore, Popeye Updegraff, Philo Mechem, Big Bad Ladd, Suppose Perkins, Windmill Sayre, Bull Patton, Shorty Leff, and Batboy Bordwell." George Davis assumed the role of a hula hula dancer, Robert H. Walker became J. Wellington Wimpy, Meredith Jelsma was the terrible goon, and Walter Johnson was exposed as "Stupen-Catchit."

The music seemed to have a sort of infectious appeal. Or at least, that's one way of explaining the fact that before the evening was over, the faculty stood up on the platform and sang melodious songs reminiscent of another day.

But when all is said and done, it is Justice J. W. Kindig of the Iowa supreme court, one of the presiding justices at yesterday afternoon's trial, who takes the prize. The jurist was initiated as an honorary member of the Order of Cof in the morning. Following his initiation, he addressed the group, advising the young lawyers to serve the bar, the court, and the public at the same time—to be "ministers of law, truth, and justice. He concluded with: "My only regret is that they have discontinued the old custom of giving a purse of gold to each new member of the Order of the Cof" . . .

Crack Squad To Perform At Waterloo

The crack squad of Pershing Rifles, national honorary military society, will present its special drill at a reserve officers' ball to be held in Waterloo tomorrow by the Blackhawk County Reserve Officers association.

On April 13 the squad will travel to Kansas City, Mo., where it will take part in the annual military circus given by the junior R.O.T.C. of the Kansas City high schools. Wearing Old Gold trousers, white cross belts, and white pompoms on their hats, the members of the squad execute their fancy drill with old style Springfield rifles.

Members of the squad are: J. Richard Jadnick, E3 of Cedar Rapids, captain; Raymond C. Buckner, A2 of Tipton; Homer L. Calkin, A2 of Clearfield; Floyd Hamilton; Carrol G. Henneberg, A1 of Sioux Rapids; Arthur D. Jenkins, P1 of Madrid; Everett R. Maresh, A2 of Cedar Rapids; James F. Morris, E2 of Cedar Rapids; M. Byrne Muggell, A1 of Chicago, Ill.

C. B. Meyers, Francis D. Person, E2 of Norwalk; Connie Pickering, E2 of Iowa City; Felix W. Pickworth, E2 of Iowa City; Ronald A. Shumway, P1 of Arlington; Robert W. Wiley, P1 of Des Moines, and Luther A. Worley, A1 of Cedar Rapids. Capt. William G. Murphy, instructor in the military department, is the faculty officer in charge of the organization.

Professors Leave For Press Meeting

"IT'S TOASTED"

These are the Center Leaves—the Mildest Leaves—the heart of Lucky Strike

As you can see from this picture—Luckies' fine, smooth quality doesn't just happen—for we use only the center leaves! Not the top leaves because those are under-developed—not ripe. Not the bottom leaves because those are inferior in quality—they grow close to the ground and are dirt-covered, coarse, sandy. We select only the center leaves—for which farmers are paid higher prices—for the center leaves are the mildest leaves—they taste better—then—"It's toasted"—for throat protection. And every Lucky is fully packed with these choice tobaccos—made round and firm—free from loose ends—that's why Luckies do not dry out. Luckies are all-ways kind to your throat.

Hit No. 2 In Our Spring Parade of Perfect Pictures!

By Ron Tallman

BASEBALL has long been recog- nized as the fruitful source for some of the most picturesque and colorful bits of slang which we Americans have infused into our own peculiar version of the English language.

But strangely enough, very few of our diamond expletives are nationally accepted, for each section of the country insists on its own particular version.

However, the term "Texas leaguer" is one of the few which have gained wide recognition. Yet, one still encounters colloquial expressions which not so long ago were used by diamond fans in various parts of the land to describe that familiar hit which soars over the amoebic dysentery outbreak, outfielders.

TAKE YOUR PICK

In the International league, it has been variously referred to as the "Sheeny Mike" and the "banjo hit." Eastern leaguers, when the loop was still functioning, called it the "special"; Southern leaguers, the "hump-back liner"; Texas leaguers, the "plunker"; Pacific Coast leaguers, the "Japanese liner"; Western leaguers, the "drooper," and American association men, the "looper."

And at other times, it has gone by the names of "pooper," "sinker," "percentage hit," "small hit," and even the "Leaping Lena."

Armbruster Selected for Rules Group

One of Trio Named to Revise Instructions For Diving

Coach David A. Armbruster, Iowa swimming mentor, is one of the three members of a committee which has been selected to rearrange and revise the instructions for diving in the official intercollegiate swimming guide.

The other two members of the committee are Fred Cady of the University of Southern California and Ernie Brandsten of Stanford university, both of whom were formerly Olympic team diving coaches. The appointment of the committee was made at the meeting of swimming coaches which was held in conjunction with the National Intercollegiate A. A. swimming meet at Columbus, Ohio, last month.

There has been a long felt need among coaches and divers for more complete information as to how certain dives should be fundamentally executed. The present edition of the swimming guide has only a very inadequate treatment on this subject.

Appointment to this committee is an honor for Coach Armbruster who developed a team this year which won all but one of its dual meets and placed second in the Big Ten championship meet. Several of his swimmers ranked well up in the national intercollegiate meet.

2 New Marks Set at Nat'l. A.A.U. Swim

COLUMBUS, O., April 5 (AP)—A new American record in the 300 yard medley swim and a new meet mark in the 100 yard free style were set today in the first qualifying round of the National A.A.U. swimming championships.

Taylor Drysdale of the University of Michigan, clipped a full second off Buster Crabbe's old mark for the 300 yard medley swim when he won the final heat of the afternoon in the remarkable time of 3 minutes, 35.4 seconds. Crabbe's mark was made in the Olympic tryouts at New Haven, Conn., in 1932.

The meet record was cracked in the 100 yard free style by Walter Spence, wearing the colors of the New York Athletic club. Spence turned in a time of 51.1 seconds, one tenth of a second slower than Johnny Weismuller's world record. The old meet mark of 51.8 seconds was made several years ago by Walter Lanffer.

The New York A. C. and the University of Michigan, winner and runnerup respectively in last year's championship, gave evidence they again would fight it out for the title.

Indians Take 2nd Straight From Giants; Vosmik's Hit Again Provides Win Margin

4 to 2 Victory Puts Tribe in 4 to 2 Series Lead

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 5 (AP)—The Cleveland Indians made it two in a row over the New York Giants today, the American Leaguers defeating the world champions 4 to 2. The victory gives the Indians the edge in the series, four wins to two. Joe Vosmik again provided the hit today that beat the Giants as he did yesterday in Cleveland's shut out victory. With Joe Bowman pitching in the eighth, a single by Vosmik drove Sam Rice over the plate with a run that broke the tie and put the Indians in the lead and a moment later he scored on a double by Strosky.

Pirates Nip Chisox, 4 to 3

TUCSON, Ariz., April 5 (AP)—Adjudged by four double plays that nipped as many Chicago rallies, Larry French, Pittsburgh's southpaw star, pitched the Pirates to a 4 to 3 victory over the White Sox in an exhibition game today. French was in complete control until the sixth, when the White Sox bunched three hits and aided by an error, scored three runs. The rally tied the score but the Pirates came back in the last half of the inning to score the winning run on Suh's triple and Lavagetto's single.

Yankees Wallop Birmingham, 7 to 3

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 5 (AP)—The New York Yankees scored their twelfth victory in 17 spring exhibition games by defeating the Birmingham Barons of the Southern association today, 7 to 3.

Lefty Gomez pitched eight innings for the Yankees and allowed but five hits. The Barons shook Lefty for two hits and three runs in the fourth inning to tie the score but the Yankees moved into the lead again in the sixth. Babe Ruth got a single and a double in four trips to the plate.

Carnera Postpones Training Campaign In Maine Forests

NEW YORK, April 5 (AP)—Primo Carnera changed his plans today for the training campaign that will fit him for his 15 round heavyweight defense against Max Baer here June 14.

He postponed until April 15 the start of a trip to Bangor, Me., for a month of tree chopping and roughing at the Hines estate outside the city. In the meantime Carnera will work lightly at Pompton Lakes, N. J., and will return there to finish training after his jaunt to the Maine woods. Baer started his preliminary training in California two weeks ago.

GERHIG RIVAL OF FOXX, NOT OLD BAMBINO

Athletic's Ace Holds Slight Margin

By ALAN GOULD

NEW YORK, April 5 (AP)—Jimmie Foxx's challenge to Babe Ruth for a side bet in the 1934 home run derby may be quite all right for purposes of baseball ballyhoo but the man the Maryland Mauler will have to beat for the long distance hitting honors is Lou Gehrig, the silent partner of the Yankee clouting company.

It's a trifle too late now for the 26 year old first baseman of the Athletics to toss defiance at the 40 year old Bambino. Their paths have crossed and separated, with Foxx on the way up and Ruth on the way out. The Babe, despite any and all enthusiasm aroused by his spring antics, will be lucky to play 100 complete games.

Foxx has had a substantial edge on Gehrig in home run hitting for the last two years. Jimmie collected 58, his high mark in 1932, to Lou's 34 and led both leagues again last year with 48 to Gehrig's 32. Over the stretch of the last five years, however, they are fairly close together, Foxx with 206 and Gehrig with 188.

Columbia Lou, picked as Ruth's clouting successor as far back as 1927, when he collected his high total of 447 homers, looks to be ready now for one of his biggest years. He has been connecting for some tremendous shots along the exhibition route, including two home runs in one inning among his exploits. He feels sure himself he is ready for a home run spurge because he is getting more "pull" into his drives. (Turn to page 7)

Relay Teams May Restore Iowa Prestige

Bresnahan Preparing Men for Kansas Relays

Relay teams to restore the University of Iowa to its former place among the champions at the Kansas games now are in the process of construction.

Coach George T. Bresnahan, especially famous for his mile teams and newly-appointed referee of the Lawrence carnival April 21, hopes to send strong half, mile, and shuttle hurdles quartets to the marks.

Iowans have won the Kansas mile more often than any other university—four times in 11 years. The record set by the 1926 team was broken only last year by Indiana. The half mile relay last was won by Iowa in 1932, and in that same meet the shuttle hurdles quartet tied the record, but seven seasons have passed since the last mile triumph.

Personnel of the half and mile teams probably will be chosen from Ed Becker of Des Moines, Robert Cook of Spencer, Russell Henry of Tingley, Bernard Page of Newton, and Capt. Sidney Dean of Traer. Becker, Henry, Page, and Dean ran the half in 1932, and in that same meet the shuttle hurdles quartet tied the record, but seven seasons have passed since the last mile triumph.

Glenn Cunningham to Meet Venzke in Mile Race at Penn Relays

PHILADELPHIA, April 5 (AP)—Glenn Cunningham of the University of Kansas, indoor mile world record holder, and Gene Venzke of the University of Pennsylvania, the former record holder, will meet in special mile events in the Kansas relays on April 21 and the Penn relays on April 28.

Announcement of the special races was made today by Forrest C. Allen, athletic director of Kansas, and H. Jamison Swarts of Penn, after a conference. Allen is on a business trip in the east.

Dunlap Wins At Pinehurst

To Meet Chapman in Final of Tourney Play Today

PINEHURST, N. C., April 5 (AP)—George T. Dunlap, Jr., the national amateur champion, coasted to a 6 and 5 victory over Arthur Lynch of Mamaroneck, N. Y., today, to win his place in the finals of the annual North and South amateur, in which he will battle Dick Chapman of Greenwich, Conn., over the 36 hole round tomorrow.

Chapman, who was new England champion in 1930, defeated Dick Wilson of Southern Pines, 3 and 2, in their semi-final match today.

Week's Rest Offers Iowans Opportunity to Prepare for Coming Tilts With Cyclones

Vogel Cards Practice Game to Prevent Let-Down

Coach Otto Vogel's undefeated baseball men, home from their successful journey into Illinois, spent the first night of practice loosening up and recovering from their trip.

The baseball men have a week's rest, as no games are carded until the encounter with Iowa State next Friday afternoon, when the locals will play their first home game. Coach Vogel intends to hold a regulation game either tonight or tomorrow afternoon, so his men will not have a chance to let down from the form they exhibited in their first three games.

A short fielding practice, followed by some throwing by all squad members, was the main workout for last night.

Fear of sore arms was allayed when all players reported in good condition. The infielders and outfielders spent about half an hour knocking flies.

The Iowan pitching staff may be improved by the addition of Harry Drishal, outfielder and southpaw, who Coach Vogel is trying out as a moundman. Drishal has a fast ball which has possibilities.

MUNICIPAL PLANT CUSTOMERS PAY TWICE! You Pay at Both Windows Under Municipal Ownership you pay TWO bills for electricity instead of one. First you go to the light office, and then to the tax office. We are asked to gamble $917,000 on a new plant. Say what you will, that gamble will fall back on the taxpayers, Simmer law or no Simmer law. There are numerous ways in which the purported provisions of the Simmer law may be sidestepped. Why does the ballot make no mention of OPERATING EXPENSES? Is it not because operating expenses can be paid out of taxes? And, even with the Simmer law, it is possible to throw all or part of the bond issue back on the taxpayers. Here is how it may be done: If the proposed municipal electric bill failed to pay interest or bond intallments at any time, the owner of the bond could get judgment against the city as owner of the plant. Then the city would have to issue judgment bonds to meet the debt, and these judgment bonds would be payable by the taxpayers. That seems roundabout, but the fact is that the buyers of this type bonds KNOW THE TAXES ARE BEHIND THEM. With politicians running the proposed plant, how long would it be before the taxpayer will foot the bills? IOWA CITY CONSUMERS' PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION

Sensational Pinning Provides Fireworks for Day's Play at American Bowling Congress

Shakeup in Standings Recorded as Men Set Hot Pace

PEORIA, Ill., April 5 (AP)—Starting off with a boom when Frank Snyder and Ross Greider of Erie, Pa., shot into sixth place in the doubles, the American Bowling Congress session today was brought to its usual fireworks close when Roy J. Nelson, St. Louis, sky-rocketed into fourth place in the individual class.

They were the only two changes produced, but many counts were just a few pins short of the board and will figure in for a generous slice of the $57,200 cash prize melon.

Nelson cleared the mapleways of 247 as a starter. He returned with a 225 and then wound up with a 112. Minus a few splits and errors, the Mound City keeler, who is a member of the Webster Lambert outfit, could have easily taken first place which is occupied by Jerry Vidro, Grand Rapids, Mich., with a 721.

Ross Greider and Frank Snyder placed Erie, Pa., on the "big board" by ascending to sixth place in the two man event with a brilliant 1281. Mostly through the efforts of Snyder, the team chalked up games of 435, 420, 425. Snyder bombarded the 10 pins for games of 246, 225, 247. His partner hit a tune of 190, 195, 173.

Harold Rodefer of Clinton, Ia., got 670 on games of 188, 279 and 203.

FOXX-GEHRIG

Homer Battle Looms For Season

Other factor is that Gehrig has shed the strain of his record endurance streak.

"That may sound funny," he said recently, "because I haven't had a day off during the regular season since 1925 and I don't expect to ask for one this year but the fact I finally broke the record last season lifted a burden that I was unconsciously lugging around with me."

That's what I said but it wasn't true, of course. Music never tires me. For anyone who's so very subtle on paper, you're amazingly disingenuous in person."

John Harmon laughed a bit awkwardly. "Please don't expect me to be amusing. I'm no good at that sort of thing, I'm afraid."

Dennis St. John's long green eyes narrowed slightly. She lay back against huge satin pillows and looked at him coolly through a drifting wreath of violet smoke.

"I didn't bring you in here because I expected you to make love to me and I don't for a minute think you want to, but I did bring you in here to tell you something. I think you are writing an amazing novel!"

John Harmon grew very red, then he laughed uncomfortably. He told himself sternly that he'd be a fool to get angry.

"Thanks—thanks a lot."

"Don't thank me. You've no one to thank but yourself. I've read every story you've had published this winter—and you've had a lot—and not one of them has been worth a darn. They're amusing? Yes. They're clever? Yes. But they're light as air! They're smart stories about smart people—the sort of stuff smart people like to read about themselves. That's why they've caught on—that's why you're by way of becoming a vogue!"

"At least they're not at all too spiky!" defended John Harmon furiously, feeling his self-control slipping, aware that his hands were trembling.

"No, they're not even human enough for that! There's nothing clever or entertaining about so-called spiky literature, so you leave that to the other, clumsier scribbles who haven't your genius for know, if you want to, if you're willing to sacrifice the smart phrase, the clever subtleties, the amusing situation for the sort of thing that isn't that but is—life. You don't have to write about dull, uninteresting people; keep your slim, lovely girls, your attractive, decent men; but let them live—not just on the surface—saying and doing and experiencing the things we all appear to say and do and feel—that's not real writing. Let them live 'way through to the core of life. We all do, you know, actually, only we don't let the world beyond the surface. That's your job—to go beyond the smooth, clever outside of us and find out what's beneath, what it's all about anyway. Then you'll have written something, not a best-seller, perhaps, but a book—a slice of life, a bit of human nature captured forever from oblivion and given substance on a printed page. That's what you can do, if you want to. It's up to you to decide, but at least, don't go blindly on pretending there isn't any decision to make." She paused abruptly, flung her cigarette away. "Shall we go back and dance?"

"If you don't mind I'd rather not," John Harmon got to his feet, his face was curiously white.

"You've rather flattened me out, Dennis, the pinprick in the balloon, you know. If you don't mind, I think I'll get out of here. Ask Perry if he'll see that Stanley gets home, will you? Darn it all, I've got to be alone for a while!"

"I'll tell him." Dennis lit another cigarette.

"I hope you're satisfied," John Harmon's voice broke suddenly, went sharply brittle. "I'm sick as the devil!"

"I'm satisfied," drawled Dennis coolly and watched him leave her, a half-contemptuous, half-wistful look in her wholly unsmiling green eyes.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR

"Oh, here you are, Stan," Perry interrupted them, drew Stanley's arm through his. "Nigel's having the room cleared for dancing and you're dancing with me and there's no cutting in. Is that right?"

"I expect it is. See you later, Marcia."

"At my next dinner-party!" Marcia threw after them laughingly as they moved away.

"Isn't the real reason why you refuse her invitations—Drew?"

Perry asked the question casually, as they walked toward the music.

"I suppose it is. I'd be sure to see him there if he happened to be in New York, but then I'm sure to see him somewhere sooner or later."

"Why evade it, then?"

Stanley shrugged. "Oh, I don't know. I'm an awful darn fool. Perry, I ought to hate him but I'm not at all sure that I do. It's awful—not knowing; it would be worse—finding out."

"But John Harmon?"

"Let's leave John Harmon out of it, please. He's the one thing in the world I am sure about."

In a little room at the end of the apartment, of it and yet away from it, Dennis St. John was sitting alone with John Harmon.

"You probably wonder why I brought you in here." She crushed a cigarette carefully against a bronze ash tray and snapped open a silver case to select another.

"You said the music tired you," offered John Harmon, his eyes on his own cigarette.

"That's what I said but it wasn't true, of course. Music never tires me. For anyone who's so very subtle on paper, you're amazingly disingenuous in person."

John Harmon laughed a bit awkwardly. "Please don't expect me to be amusing. I'm no good at that sort of thing, I'm afraid."

Dennis St. John's long green eyes narrowed slightly. She lay back against huge satin pillows and looked at him coolly through a drifting wreath of violet smoke.

"I didn't bring you in here because I expected you to make love to me and I don't for a minute think you want to, but I did bring you in here to tell you something. I think you are writing an amazing novel!"

John Harmon grew very red, then he laughed uncomfortably. He told himself sternly that he'd be a fool to get angry.

"Thanks—thanks a lot."

"Don't thank me. You've no one to thank but yourself. I've read every story you've had published this winter—and you've had a lot—and not one of them has been worth a darn. They're amusing? Yes. They're clever? Yes. But they're light as air! They're smart stories about smart people—the sort of stuff smart people like to read about themselves. That's why they've caught on—that's why you're by way of becoming a vogue!"

"At least they're not at all too spiky!" defended John Harmon furiously, feeling his self-control slipping, aware that his hands were trembling.

"No, they're not even human enough for that! There's nothing clever or entertaining about so-called spiky literature, so you leave that to the other, clumsier scribbles who haven't your genius for know, if you want to, if you're willing to sacrifice the smart phrase, the clever subtleties, the amusing situation for the sort of thing that isn't that but is—life. You don't have to write about dull, uninteresting people; keep your slim, lovely girls, your attractive, decent men; but let them live—not just on the surface—saying and doing and experiencing the things we all appear to say and do and feel—that's not real writing. Let them live 'way through to the core of life. We all do, you know, actually, only we don't let the world beyond the surface. That's your job—to go beyond the smooth, clever outside of us and find out what's beneath, what it's all about anyway. Then you'll have written something, not a best-seller, perhaps, but a book—a slice of life, a bit of human nature captured forever from oblivion and given substance on a printed page. That's what you can do, if you want to. It's up to you to decide, but at least, don't go blindly on pretending there isn't any decision to make." She paused abruptly, flung her cigarette away. "Shall we go back and dance?"

"Oh, here you are, Stan," Perry interrupted them.

"If you don't mind I'd rather not," John Harmon got to his feet, his face was curiously white.

"You've rather flattened me out, Dennis, the pinprick in the balloon, you know. If you don't mind, I think I'll get out of here. Ask Perry if he'll see that Stanley gets home, will you? Darn it all, I've got to be alone for a while!"

"I'll tell him." Dennis lit another cigarette.

"I hope you're satisfied," John Harmon's voice broke suddenly, went sharply brittle. "I'm sick as the devil!"

"I'm satisfied," drawled Dennis coolly and watched him leave her, a half-contemptuous, half-wistful look in her wholly unsmiling green eyes.

Explanation Of "Strange As It Seems"

The ice mushroom illustrated above is one of the strange ice formations that may sometimes be seen in the antarctic area after a blizzard. The start of such a formation is always on an exposed reef or rock. It begins when salt spray, whipped up by the wind, freezes against the exposed rock. As the freezing continues the "mushroom" grows, sometimes to contain thousands of tons of ice.

The underpart is regular and flat, appearing as though it were sheared off a few feet above the water line.

A group of miners, their names now forgotten, carried on one of the strangest mining ventures known when in Havaasu canyon, northern Arizona, a few decades ago, they sought silver ore from the face of a perpendicular cliff 250 feet above the floor of the canyon.

To reach the site of their outcropping of ore they erected a gigantic ladder, 260 feet high, up the face of the cliff—a height greater than that of an average 20 story building. In places the ladder had to be built out around humps on the canyon wall, and several links lean dangerously away from the rock.

At the top of the ladder a 30 foot shaft was driven into the rock, but there the venture met failure. The ore, though valuable, was not worth mining because it was so difficult to get it to the nearest smelter. The miners did take 100 tons of ore out of their strange mine, however, before abandoning it.

Rehearing For Two Is Denied

Supreme Court Refuses Campbell, Wieland Case Petitions

Petition for rehearing of the cases against James S. Campbell and Joseph B. Wieland, both convicted in Johnson county, were denied yesterday by the state supreme court, according to an Associated Press dispatch.

As a result of the ruling, James S. Campbell, Negro, convicted of second degree murder in connection with the death of Annabel Cross, killed while tussling with him over a revolver after he had threatened to commit suicide, will get a new trial here. He was sentenced to life in the penitentiary.

The supreme court reversed the decision of the district court which returned an opinion holding that suicide is not unlawful under the Iowa law and an attempt to commit suicide is not an unlawful act.

Wieland, convicted in Johnson county of manslaughter in connection with the death of Morgan Hartsock in an auto accident, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to eight years in the penitentiary and fined $500. After sentence, the lower court refused to allow Wieland to change his plea to not guilty and was reversed by the supreme court.

Ann Ricel Tells Rotary Club Of Plan for Peace

Establishment of closer contacts between business men of the community and foreign students in the university would aid materially in the furtherance of world peace, Ann Ricel, A4 of Hazelton, Pa., president of the International Student association of the University of Iowa, told members of the Iowa City Rotary club at their luncheon yesterday noon at the Hotel Jefferson.

With three other members of the Iowa association, Miss Ricel was recently sent by the Iowa City Rotary club to Madison, Wis., for the first annual foreign student conference sponsored by the Madison Rotary club and the foreign students of the University of Wisconsin.

The Madison Rotary club plan for foreign students to visit in the homes of business men over week ends helps give them the proper social relationship which is so vital, she said.

Gaffney Gives Decisions On Two Actions

Two decisions, one calling for a foreclosure to satisfy a $10,000 mortgage and the other involving a fence dispute, were handed down by District Judge James P. Gaffney yesterday.

In the action of Malissa Fawcett, guardian for Floyd T. and Alfred W. Fawcett, against William and Sarah Scharf, and Barbara Kranz, the court ordered a foreclosure on a Johnson county farm to satisfy the $10,000 judgment. The appointment of a receiver was denied, but the plaintiff was granted the right to sell 4,000 bushels of corn, in case of a deficiency from the sale of the land.

Attorneys Messer and Nolan represented the plaintiff and Attorneys Popham and Hayek the defendants.

In the case of Della Kelleher against W. F. and Elizabeth Vedepo, the court ruled that the defendants are required to return 500 rods of fence and replace it in substantially the same position on the Kelleher farm, where it was removed during their tenancy.

The defendants were allowed a judgment of $81 for clover seed against the plaintiff. Two-thirds of the cost of the action were taxed to the defendants and the remainder to the plaintiff.

Mrs. Kelleher was represented by Attorney A. E. Main and the defendants by Attorney Henry Negus.
