U. S. Peeress Aids England's Social Dictator

KING and QUEEN at ASCOT LADY GRANARD LORD GRANARD

England, too, is having a "New Deal"—a code to regulate admission to the royal enclosure at the Ascot race track, graced by their majesties, King George and Queen Mary every year. Ironically, the American-born Lady Granard, sister of Ogden L. Mills, former Secretary of the Treasury, has a big voice in deciding who shall or shall not enter the turf holy of holies. For her husband, the Earl of Granard, has been appointed social dictator whose duty it is to sort the wheat from the chaff. The rules for admittance are simple. Eight pounds ($40) buys a ticket, provided the applicant has not been the guilty party in a divorce suit and has either been presented at court or has been privileged to attend royal levees.

They Shall Not Pass
The man who decides the question, "to see or not to see," is the Earl of Granard, K.P.; G.C.V.O., and a dozen or so other titles. He was recently appointed as the final arbiter as to who shall or shall not enter the exclusive royal enclosure at the Ascot race track, where the horses are merely incidental and the real purpose of the meeting is a blend of fashion parade and mobilization of the flower of British nobility.

Daniel of Ducats
Will Lord Granard stand at the gate and take the tickets? No, he won't. But he will have the last word in deciding who gets the green and gold ducats that are the "Open Sesame" to the royal enclosure. Aided by Lady Granard, the social dictator is even now dealing with thousands of applications from British and American aspirants for the coveted postcards.

Meteor Display Observed By University Astronomers

A display of Lyrid meteors was watched by University of Iowa astronomy professors and students between 1:30 and 3:30 this morning.

Two reticles were operated from the observatory by Mary Lucille Smith and Portia Maine, A4 of Des Moines. A group of young men supervised by Prof. C. C. Wylie, University of Iowa astronomer, made observations from two reticles which have been permanently mounted in the press box of the stadium.

Near the stadium, a group of 10 students under the direction of Bemrose Boyd of the astronomy department made counts of the meteors. Eight of the students sat in reclining chairs placed at a 45 degree angle, and two others lay in the middle of the circle to watch the overhead display.

Arthur DeBary, an amateur astronomer in Davenport, operated a reticle pointing in the direction of Iowa City, and Benjamin A. Galer, A3 of Mt. Pleasant, watched from the roof of his home there, also using a reticle pointing in the direction of Iowa City. Meteors observed from two of these three stations make computations possible of the beginning, end, and direction of the meteors.

This display is called the Lyrid shower because the meteors seem to fall approximately away from the bright star of Vega, which can be seen in the northeast. Vega is the largest star in the Lyra constellation, from which the word is derived.

The last notable Lyrid display was in 1922 when counts of a meteor a minute could be made. In 1903, the action was too swift to count.

"The last really good display of meteors was the Giacobinid shower on October 9, 1933," said Professor Wylie. "This was especially good in eastern Europe. British astronomers were watching for the shower, but were surprised and pleased to have a good display."

"In Ireland, one astronomer said that the display was similar to an illuminated snowstorm, while in Portugal frightened people organized penitential processions and marched to the churches, singing hymns and praying."

An Election Of The Students

THE FIVE campus organizations for which officers were selected at a combined election Thursday are to be commended on the judgment which dictated the first all-university election.

Not only was the election marked by an interest wide enough to bring an estimated 1,000 students to the polls—because of separate ballots it was impossible to secure an exact count—but the election was remarkably free from disgusting and petty politics which has marred campus votes in the past.

Within the memory of any sophomore on the campus are the elections under the supervision of the student council, in which such a huge ballot as 50 votes was sufficient to carry an election—a senior class president was once elected with 45 fraternity controlled votes.

The importance of these student offices is not to be over-estimated. They have little to do with the conventional "student self-government," which is usually no self-government at all, but a mere sham. One should not be called an iconoclast if he recognizes the fact that the honor of election is much greater than the importance of the offices.

But it is important that these elections, for the sake of students who are honest and sincere in their motives, should be kept as free as possible from "dirty politics." The large vote in the all-university election is a good omen.

A Medal for Our "Yankee Doodle Boy"

SENATOR COPELAND of New York, who is usually serious minded about his work in the national legislative halls, has evidently a sense of humor—only recently revealed.

For the New York lawyer has suggested in all seriousness that George M. Cohan should receive a congressional medal for his song "Over There" and other "patriotic" compositions.

As George Jean Nathan once pointed out, Mr. Cohan's style of writing consists of tossing a few "Aw, geees" and "Oh, you kids" into any literary work, and producing it upon the stage. The same would apply as well to Mr. Cohan's patriotism.

Such choice bits of Mr. Cohan's commercial flag waving as "Over There" and "My Yankee Doodle Boy" have been exceeded only by his more recent outpourings about "the father of his country" and one dashed off in time for President Roosevelt's birthday.

Mr. Cohan is undoubtedly a good actor; at least millions of Americans have paid richly for his "art." But, as for giving him a medal, congress might as well give a medal to all other war profiteers—for flag waving has paid Mr. Cohan well.

Prof. Margaret Alterton

(A Guest Editorial by Wilbur Schramm)

SOME PEOPLE die as great trees fall, says Edwin Markham, and leave "a lonesome place against the sky." Others depart less spectacularly, and the emptiness they leave, although it may not be so glaringly apparent at first, becomes increasingly and painfully apparent as time passes. Of this second class was Prof. Margaret Alterton, who died last week after a long illness.

During her 14 years as a member of the English faculty she had influenced the lives and thinking of thousands of Iowa students. In her quiet way she had impressed upon them her own ideas of ethics and scholarship. She had interested herself in their problems and had always been generous with advice and assistance. The gentleness and kindness of her manner hid the vigor with which she led many a graduate student along the road to a thesis, and her quiet speech never betrayed how many undergraduates had told her their confidences.

Even during the months when her last illness was already upon her she was never too busy or too weary to confer with any student who might wish to see her. Until the very afternoon when she was able for the last time to leave her home she gave freely and gladly of her time and her counsel.

Not many of her undergraduate students knew of Miss Alterton's reputation as a scholar, for she was never an advertiser. It was probably from outside the university, if at all, that they heard that she was one of the greatest authorities on Edgar Allan Poe. The program of research with which she and her graduate students were illuminating American literature of the years adjacent to 1800 remains unfinished. At the time of her death an edition of Poe, with a monumental introduction which was to bring to college students her great knowledge of the poet, was all but ready for the printer. These tasks will be carried on, it is to be hoped, as a memorial richly deserved.

Community Interest In Smoke Control

AN OPENING toward what may mean the elimination of much of the smoke and soot for which Iowa City is so justly famous was made recently when a local laundry installed a smoke control system operating on a new principle.

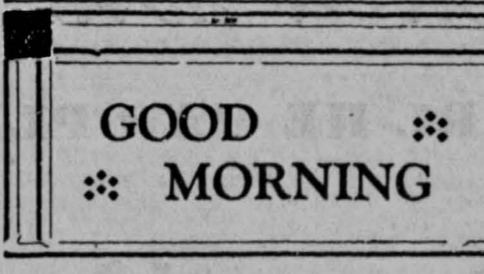

The steam filter plan, which causes excess carbon to be burned, has proved practicable and valuable in the plant in which it has been tested.

This does not mean that this plan is necessarily the best means of smoke and soot control. But it is at least an attack on what has become an important and difficult problem in Iowa City.

Records of local scientists in recent years indicate that Iowa City is among the "smokiest" cities in the United States, even surpassing Pittsburgh, Pa.

The community has too long neglected this phase of sanitation and public welfare. Medical science has often pointed to the dangers which lurk in the haze of city smoke. It should be the duty of the lawmaking and law enforcing agencies of the city to protect its citizens from these dangers.

The new appliance, if it continues to prove its value, may offer a sound means of smoke control. But, in any event, it is time that definite action be taken.

Now is the time for all good senators and congressmen to get their vacations at government expense lined up for the long summer months. And they are doing it.

Said the AP yesterday morning: "Washington, April 19 (AP)—The senate organized today for an investigation which its sponsors said would show conclusively that manufacturers of arms and munitions were engaged in propaganda to promote war and a stronger national defense for private profit."

"A special committee of seven senators, headed by Senator Pope (D. Idaho), was selected by Vice President Garner to conduct the inquiry. Other members: Bone, Washington; Carl, Missouri; Sheppard, Texas, all Democrats, and Barbour, New Jersey; Nye, North Dakota, and Vandenberg, Michigan, Republicans.

"The group will meet Monday. Its initial work will be a thorough research. Public hearings probably will be held in late summer after the evidence is collected."

The announced purpose of this investigation is wholly commendable. In fact, it is about time some agency conducted a thorough and reliable inquiry into the activities of armament manufacturers and their relation to our wild program of war preparation. The results might be startling.

But a man by the name of Helm wrote a book a year or two ago, called "Washington Swindle Sheet." It makes one inescapably skeptical of summer investigations, because it lists in black and white the absurd and costly items for which senators and congressmen spend the taxpayers' money while engaged in such "official business." Consequently, one supposes that it will require a great deal of fishing tackle and perhaps a little bicarbonate of soda to ferret out the inside dope on arms.

If Dr. George Crile of Cleveland is right in his contention that all human energy comes from lightning in thunderstorms, as he told the American Philosophical society Thursday, we have another natural phenomenon for which to be thankful as well as fearful.

Harris E. Willingham, assistant director of the federal alcohol control administration, put it very aptly Thursday when he said, "The man who buys from the bootlegger ought to get a kick in the pants."

But a "kick in the pants" will hardly solve the problem revealed in Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's announcement that the illegal liquor business still is a "very husky industry" selling as much as legitimate dealers.

State laws like that adopted by the Iowa legislature, which virtually invite the bootlegger to remain in business by prohibiting the consumption of liquor in places where it is ordinarily consumed, are more to blame than most other factors.

It is interesting to note that the cost of carrying the airmail at a profit has dropped to half its old figure in the few short weeks since the postmaster-general cancelled the contracts.

Perhaps the cost of labor has dropped, or the operating expense of airplanes. How else can one explain the fact that when operating companies submitted bids on an honest basis, they halved the cancelled contracts.

It is touching to read in the papers that the citizens around Mooresville, Indiana, where John Dillinger lives, are circulating a petition asking that their hero Robin Hood be given amnesty if he surrenders. Perhaps the police would be more effective if they would present Dillinger a petition asking for amnesty for themselves if they let him go his way and rob what banks he will. He certainly would rob no more, and a few lives might be saved. —Don Pryor

Behind The Scenes in HOLLYWOOD By Harrison Carroll

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—Most fantastic story going around the boulevards is that Diana Wynyard may help her stand-in to come into an English fortune of several millions. The known facts are these: Idalyr Dupree, the girl now standing in for the star at R-K-O, has the off-screen name of Lynn Cardiss. She is the great-niece of Lady Sarah Hubert and her family dates back far into British history. The question is, can she prove that she is a direct descendant and a legal heir of Sir Richard Cardiss, eighteenth century peer, whose great fortune has been in chancellery for more than 125 years. There is a missing link in the history of the family. And here it is where Diana Wynyard comes in. After numerous talks with her stand-in, and after correspondence with England, she believes that one of her cousins, several times removed, came of the same line as Lynn Cardiss. This cousin has a complicated chart of the family tree and Diana believes she may be able to trace the lineage. When the star goes to England, one of her first acts will be to look up the cousin and try to solve the long-standing mystery.

CONFLICTS: In case of conflicting examinations the student should report to the instructor in charge of the first of the two conflicting subjects as listed within the particular SPECIAL GROUP rectangle above which is involved. (Read downward first in left column and then in right column.)

The first meeting of the class means the first lecture or recitation in courses having both lectures and recitations, and laboratory periods; or in the case of courses involving only laboratory periods, the first clock-hour of the first weekly meeting.

N.B. All sections of Principles of Speech (2), 02, and (4) will meet on the days and at the periods designated below. Consult the bulletin board in room 13, Hall of Liberal Arts, for room assignments.

1. Wednesday, May 23, 8-10; Section F 2. Thursday, May 24, 8-10; Section C; 2-4: Sections A and D 3. Monday, May 28, 2-4; Sections H, I; Speech 02, Speech (4) 4. Tuesday, May 29, 8-10; Section G; 10-12; Section E; 2-4: Section B

"ODD" classes, namely those whose first or only weekly meetings occur on Wednesdays, Thursdays, Fridays, or Saturdays, or which meet on alternate days, will be assigned for examination, as announced to each such class by the instructor in charge of the class, at one or another of the following periods:

1. From 4 to 6 on any day from May 23 to May 31, inclusive. 2. Any one of the examination periods assigned, as indicated above, for the examinations in the SPECIAL GROUPS, A, B, C, D, and F, since for such "odd" classes these five examination periods will be found quite available.

In connection with any such announcement it would doubtless be well for the instructor making the announcement to ascertain whether any member of his class is already under a appointment for examination in some other class for the proposed period. To be sure, it is possible to have examinations in more than one class at any of these times,—if no student is a member of more than one of these classes.

According to one clause in the formal faculty action providing for a special semester-examination program, "the instructor may use the examination period as he sees fit provided he holds the class for the full period. He may have an oral or a written examination, or both, or neither. He may continue regular work or he may use the time for review, or for any phase of his work which may seem to him desirable at the time."

According to another faculty regulation, which is on record as adopted by the faculty, a student absent from the final examination should be reported "Abs.," unless the instructor recognizes that his work up to this examination has been a failure, in which case the final report should be "Fd.," even though the student may have been absent from the final examination. No examination should be given, subsequently, to such a student until after the absence has been excused by the Committee on Admission and Classification, as shown by a partially filled special report card, signed by the Secretary of the Committee, as indicating that the absence has been excused and that the student is authorized, subject to the consent and at the convenience of the instructor concerned, to take the final examination.

SEEN from Old Capitol

By TOM YOSELOFF

Signatures on charters and other documents are more than so many ink lines, I discovered last night. With my brothers of Sigma Delta Chi, to which the better journalists swear allegiance, I had viewed the charter of the Iowa chapter of that fraternity. The signatures, although interesting, meant little until last night, when Conger Reynolds, one of the first signers, and now director of public relations for the Standard Oil company of Indiana, addressed a dinner meeting.

Mr. Reynolds told of the early days of journalism in the University of Iowa, and the organization of the Sigma Delta Chi chapter. A striking appearance, what with a shock of graying hair and sharp features, and the manner of having something to say and knowing how to say it made clear the reason for Mr. Reynolds' rising to the top in his profession. It's safe to say that Mr. Reynolds is one "press agent" who was accepted by a "brother" by a gathering of newspapermen.

Sorority and dormitory chaperons seem to have gotten a "new deal" in the matter of reasons for staying out after hours. Time was when excuses consisted mainly of "We had a flat tire, and just couldn't make it by 10," or "The town clock said five minutes to—But now things are different. Authentic reports have it that great favor is being shown this spring to this one: "We got lost, miles from a telephone, but I called just as soon as we got to that little town—you know the one I mean." No wonder house mothers walk around with that happy expression these days!

There are other excuses just as original, of course. And this one is getting rather old by now—it's often been used this spring, according to the best authorities. So this department is open to suggestion. For the most original excuse submitted during the next week, this corner offers a beautiful printed certificate of honor. Every one submitted will earn for its submitter membership in the Iowa Clever Excuses club. We'll be waiting....

Another first for the spring season: The first tulip in bloom on the campus has been observed near the north door of natural science building. Simultaneously with this interesting event comes a note to my desk suggesting that the most unconscionable rascal in the world must be the student who helps himself to the flowers blooming on the campus. Uneasy hangs the hand that "swipes" a tulip....

ably look carefully at his projector which he uses in class before showing pictures on the screen in the future. "That demonstrates the educational value of present day journalism," said Professor Mason—and lo and behold, the screen bore the picture of a demure miss in a bathing suit, examining a bunion. Prof. Harry G. Barnes, a member of the executive council, will give a report to that body on "Organizations of speech teachers in member states of the association." Prof. A. Craig Baird, director of university debate, will speak to the debate section on "Problems in the improvement of instruction in debating." Membership in this organization is comprised of speech teachers from 13 of the central states. The purpose of this organization, Professor Barnes explained, is to afford an opportunity for the speech teachers of these states to meet and discuss problems in the promotion of their common professional interests.

ABOUT SPORTS

Busy Season . . . Spring Sports Schedule Crowded . . . Baseball Seeks to Better Win Record.

BY RON TALLMAN

THE fall has its football and the winter its basketball—THE events of the collegiate sports year. But the spring can boast of the greatest variety and the busiest schedule with its track, baseball, golf and tennis. Right now Iowa's Hawkeyes are right in the midst of this "busiest season" and as the schedule advances it becomes more crowded.

YESTERDAY the baseball team played. Today the diamond men are in action again as well as the track, golf and tennis athletes. Monday Coach Vogel's nine goes into action again, at State Teachers this time. And then—next week end—comes the busiest program of the entire year. The baseball team has a two day home stand against Chicago; the golfers meet DePaul of Chicago in the first home dual on Friday; the netmen meet Iowa State Saturday and Chicago Monday. And as if that isn't enough, there's the Drake relays, one of the biggest track affairs of the year, with more than 30 Hawkeyes entered in the annual carnival. A busy season to be sure, but an interesting one.

THIS SURPRISING Hawkeye baseball team, which has won seven games already this year, will be trying to stretch its home winning streak to nine games in the conference clashes with Chicago. Victories over the Maroons would give Iowa a record of eight consecutive home triumphs, the last defeat coming April 24 last year when Monmouth took a 6 to 5 10 inning verdict.

If the Old Gold players can beat Iowa State again today, however, they can set an even greater record against Chicago by chalking up their tenth straight win of this year and their thirteenth straight since the fall end of last season.

Green Set for Strong Bid in Two Mile Relay Race

A team of 10 men will wear the Green of St. Patrick's in the State Teachers college relays at Cedar Falls today. Half mile and two mile relay teams and two men in the weights are to compete for Coach Tom Kelly.

Captain McNamara and Emanuel will compete in the shot put and discus throw. The half mile relay will be composed of Connors, Burger, Healey, and Carrigg. The two mile relay team will be Hogan, Gutierrez, Duane, and Burns.

While the local Irish are not to be favored in this meet, they are expected to place well up in the events in which they are entered. In their only showing this year they were barely nosed out by St. Ambrose of Davenport in a dual meet under adverse weather conditions.

River School Enters Four at Cedar Falls

Coach M. F. Carpenter will take four University High athletes to the State Teachers college relays at Cedar Falls today where they will be entered in special events.

Capt. Martin Warren and Miltner will be entered in the shot put and discus events in which they have been steady performers. Bob Schnobelen will probably be used in the 100 and 220 yard dashes. Howard Fountain will run in the hurdles.

NEW YORK, April 20 (AP)—The Giants crossed Ben Cantwell up with a couple of timely bunts in the sixth inning today and started a four run rally that enabled them to continue their victory march with a 7 to 3 triumph over the Boston Braves in the first contest of the series. It was the champions' fourth straight victory.

Owen's Hit In Ninth Decides Hurlers' Duel

2-Bagger Clears Sacks To Break Tie; Carl Fischer Stars

CLEVELAND, April 20 (AP)—Scoring all their runs in the ninth inning, the Detroit Tigers bested the Cleveland Indians 4 to 0 today in a duel between two southpaw hurlers. Carl Fischer, winning hurler, held down the Tribe to five hits.

Both hurlers marked up six strikeouts, all in the first eight innings. In the third, Brown fanned Fisher, Rogell and Gehring in a row.

Indians Miss Chance

Cleveland missed its best chance to score when in the third inning, Walker dropped Knickerbocker's drive for a two-base error with none out. Knickerbocker, however, went out at third when L. Brown rolled to Fisher, Holland struck out and Fisher's single that followed was wasted.

Two double plays by Knickerbocker and Trosky and one by Owen, Gehring and Greenberg figured in the battle. The best was in the fourth after Cochrane walked and took second on Walker's single. Knickerbocker stabbed Greenberg's bouncer, stepped on second to get Walker by a narrow margin, and whipped to Trosky to get Greenberg at first.

Walker Cup Golfers Attend Farewell Party Before Sailing Today

NEW YORK, April 20 (AP)—Their trunks loaded down and packed with a supply of long woolen underwear to protect them against the fierce and biting gales of St. Andrews, the nine American amateur golfers comprising the U. The tardiness of Francis Olmest, the team captain, in reporting to the United States Golf association headquarters for his passport and other credentials caused some concern among association officials.

U. High Noses Out Monticello In Track Meet

Martin Warren Leads Blue to Triumph Over Maroon

By BOB KENDRICK
A cold wind swept Iowa field yesterday afternoon, but University high tracksters withstood the low degrees and nosed out Monticello, 68 1-2 to 58 1-2, in the first outdoor competition of the year for the Blue team.

Monticello had a habit of grabbing first place laurels or the river boys would have had a very successful afternoon of it. Nine times the Maroon squad got firsts. U. high scored seven firsts, had a monopoly with 10 seconds, and finished third six times.

Warren Leads

Big Martin Warren, Bob Schnoebelen, Fountain, and Miltner weren't bothered by the weather. Captain Warren gave his team 14 points, winning two field events, the discus and shot put, and tying for first with Seedorf of Monticello in the pole vault. Bob Schnoebelen was supreme in the short distances, coping the 100 yard dash and the 120 yard lows.

Seedorf and Spooner seemed to be in everything for Monticello, and the two made life miserable for the Blue team. Seedorf started things off by tying for the pole vault. Spooner broadjumped 18 feet 3 inches for a first. Seedorf came back with a second in the century dash, and still not satisfied with the status of his team, Spooner polished the performance off with a win in the quarter mile and thirds in the 120 yard lows and highs. Both men also ran the half mile relay.

Slow Mile

The river boys had an easy time in the mile, shot put, 120 yard highs and discus. They scored a grand slam in the mile run and shot put. Smith, Stevens, and Ribble combining to put across the first, and Warren, Miltner, and Fountain predominating in the shot. Coach M. F. Carpenter didn't allow Miltner and Warren to take the usual quota of tosses as he is going to take them to the invitation meet at Cedar Falls tomorrow.

Fountain threw off some of the hard luck that has been dogging him thus far and won the 120 yard high. He copped thirds in the javelin and shot.

Sec. A Bats Out 21 to 20 Kittenball Win

Section A came out ahead in a 21 to 19 scoring orgy with section C in the only game played in the quad kittenball league yesterday afternoon. The game between B and D was postponed.

It took a rally in the last half of the seventh inning to enable A to overcome C's 20 to 19 lead. Selzer was the first man to bat in the seventh, getting a clean single to center field. Spetz was called out on strikes. Emmer then came through with a two bagger into deep left placing runners on second and third. Magrini stepped to the plate and brought in the two runs necessary to win the game with a hit to center field.

"Strange As It Seems"

In Mt. Rainier National park the glaciers push steadily forward, yet strange as it seems, they are constantly moving backward. The entire glacier moves ahead, but melting at the lower extremity causes it to retreat farther and farther into the mountains.

On Nisqually Glacier, which Supt. O. A. Tomlinson and Park Naturalist C. Frank Brockman have been studying for several years, the forward movement has been found to vary between four and 15 inches a day. The lesser movement occurs in the fall, winter and spring, while in the summer the body of ice slides forward more than a foot each 24 hours. However, the glacier melts away at the lower terminus at a rate which causes it to lose ground at the rate of 60 feet a year.

CHAPTER FORTY-SEVEN

"I think I'll go and see Dr. Baker, Val, you know, the doctor we had for John Harmon. I think I'll go tonight—he has office hours every evening."

Stanley slid off the bed, stood up a bit shakily. It was still hot in the room but the sunlight had been blotted out by a thick, warm dusk.

Valerie accepted this casually but later she said: "Want me to go with you, darling, for moral support and what-not?"

Stanley was drawing a lipstick carefully across her mouth. Now she rubbed her lips gently, shook her head. "No, thanks, Val, I'll be all right. It's just around the corner in an apartment hotel. I went there one night for some medicine."

After she had gone, Valerie sat for a long time in the wing chair frowning thoughtfully. She had not forced any confidences but she thought she knew pretty well what had happened to Stanley in the past three weeks. She wished that John Harmon was home, that Drew Armitage had never left Chicago and that Perry had not gone off to Canada on his annual fishing trip. She felt that Perry would have helped tremendously just then; that he would have made certain things seem much less unbearable, the weather, for instance, and the look that had been in Stanley's eyes just now, and the stillness and heartache she had somehow managed to leave behind her in this old room.

A nurse admitted Stanley and took her name and address and said that the doctor would see her in just a few minutes. Then she left her and went back through a white paneled door.

The room was small but miraculously cool. There were slim maple chairs and one or two deeper, cushioned chairs, and a maple table with a gay litter of magazines. There was a faint smell of ether and antiseptics and a general air of well-ordered expectancy about the place. Stanley found herself thinking that in this pleasant, calm atmosphere nothing seemed so very bad. She might have been waiting for a manicure or a facial or something equally unimportant. She picked up a New Yorker and turned its pages—hats were wearing brims again, enchanting ones, this season; there was a new perfume "as intriguing and mysterious as moonlight"; gloves were going to be very important, soft, wrinkled, suede gloves—

Her hands were trembling so that the magazine shook ridiculously. She put it back on the table, started staring at the closed white door. She tried to think about casual, impersonal things; whether the doctor was really busy or was just having his dinner or was perhaps finishing a good detective story. She remembered him as being a young man with friendly eyes and a pleasant, informal manner. He and John Harmon had got on splendidly. He had been interested in John Harmon's novel, had said he would bring a copy around to be autographed.

For a moment she wondered a bit apprehensively if it mightn't have been better to have gone to a stranger—someone to whom she would have been just a name—but she dismissed this almost at once. He had had friendly brown eyes and had laughed a lot; had been efficient without appearing to be. He would know exactly what to do and would make it all seem not too important—as he had made John Harmon's temperature and the frightening way in which he had raved deliriously seem not too important.

The nurse came back most unexpectedly, and the next minute Stanley had gone through the white door and was shaking hands with Dr. Baker.

New Angle In Cannon Trial

Hint Campaign Money Sent to New York Stockbrokers

WASHINGTON, April 20 (AP)—The prosecution sought today—in the main unsuccessfully—to tell the jury trying Bishop James Cannon, Jr., that money "borrowed for use in the campaign" of 1928 against Alfred E. Smith was "sent to stockbrokers in New York city."

Before Justice Peyton Gordon halted open court testimony and brought attorneys to his bench for a low voiced conversation John J. Wilson, chief prosecutor, had succeeded in asking Cannon if a firm he mentioned had "not in fact operated a bucket shop in New York city."

To which the bishop replied: "No."

The testimony to this point had involved mention of "H. Goldhurst," subsequently identified as of the firm of Cable and company.

The resulting wrangle between the prosecution staff and defense counsel, headed by Robert H. about Cigarettes

As to the cigarette paper on Chesterfields

THIS reel of cigarette paper is sufficient to make 42,000 Chesterfield Cigarettes. It is of the finest manufacture. In texture, in burning quality, in purity, it is as good as money can buy. Cut open a Chesterfield cigarette. Remove the tobacco and hold the paper up to the light. If you know about paper, you will at once note the uniform texture—no holes, no light and dark places. Note also its dead white color. If the paper is made right—that is, uniform—the cigarette will burn more evenly. If the paper is made right—there will be no taste to it and there will be no odor from the burning paper. Other manufacturers use good cigarette paper; but there is no better paper made than that used on Chesterfields. You can count on that!
