Three Reading Clubs Planned

Will Organize Clubs For Children At City Library

Vacation entertainment for Iowa City school children will be provided by reading clubs, open to students from third to eighth grades, Helen Davis, head of the children's section of the public library, announced yesterday.

Activities of the clubs, which will be organized soon, begin Monday and continue for six weeks, until July 21. Children wishing to join may sign at the library on or before June 11.

May Join Clubs
Adventure loving young readers may join one of three clubs, "Parachute Jump," "Transcontinental Flight," and "Treasure Hunt."

In the "Parachute Jump" club each child will be represented by a small parachute. As he reads a certain number of books, his chute will be lowered on a chart which records the progress in the book journey of the club members.

Miniature airplanes moving along the airway route from San Francisco to New York at the same rate that their "pilots" read books, will mark the six weeks' reading progress of members of the "Transcontinental Flight" club. The winner in this group will be the reader who reaches the destination first by the most indirect route.

"Treasure Hunt" Club
In the "Treasure Hunt" club, a list of 10 questions will be posted at the library. Under each question will be found the names of five books, one of which will contain the answer to the question. As the readers discover the answers they will report to Miss Davis to have a star placed by their names. The winner will be the reader who first receives 10 stars.

A club for fifth grade girls will be organized, with its first meeting the morning of June 14 at the library. Girls wishing to join may sign before June 11.

Steel Against Special Body For Disputes

Johnson Makes Proposal To Meet Threat Of Steel Strike

By The Associated Press

A special government board to watch over labor disputes in the steel industry was Gen. Hugh S. Johnson's suggestion for meeting the threat of a general steel workers' strike, but some of those workers looked askance Tuesday at the idea of another commission.

"We've had enough boards," said a spokesman for a steel workers' union committee. Referring to the national labor board, he added: "What did they get us? Nothing but promises."

Johnson proposed a steel labor board modeled after the national automobile labor board.

Hear Threats

Threats that Oklahoma City's strike of packing house employees would spread to Kansas City and Ft. Worth were heard. Strike votes were considered by union leaders in both cities. Wilson and Armour plants at Oklahoma City were operating despite the walkout of 900 employees, and nonunion labor was called to fill the vacancies.

Toledo's troubles were over, and employees started flowing back to the plants of the Electric Auto-Lite company, the Bingham Stamping & Tool company, and the Logan Gear company. The agreements signed after a bitter strike were reported to grant wage increases of 5 to 14 per cent.

Only 18 Return

Remington-Rand typewriter factories at Ilion and Syracuse, N. Y., reopened but only 18 employees returned to their jobs at Ilion and 200 at Syracuse. Pickets cheered when they saw the small response and said they would continue their strike, now three weeks old.

The magazine "American Machinist" said that strike threats were discouraging prospective purchasers of machinery and machine tools.

At Seattle a Committee of the Pacific Northwestern Longshoremen was awaiting an expected draft of a new basis for settling their strike.

Would March on Capital

Earl J. Forbeck, head of a "rank and file" group of steel workers at Pittsburgh announced that employees "discriminated against for their union activities" would march on Washington unless satisfied that legislation would be enacted prohibiting "company unions."

Seven hundred tug and Longshoremen in the Chicago harbor region were out on strike with affiliated Great Lakes unions. They asked restoration of the 20 per cent cut from wages since 1929, and a shorter working day.

Fatality Occurs

Sheriff J. F. Hawkins of Birmingham, Ala., attributed the burning of homes of two nonunion miners to incendiaries in sympathy with the strike at East Thomas, Ala., where Republic Steel corporation employees were striking.

Another fatality occurred at Long Beach as a result of the Longshoremen's strike with the death of a man injured May 15 in a riot at Los Angeles harbor. San Francisco officers of the International Longshoremen's association discounted reports that settlement of the strike was near.

A few minor outbreaks occurred in the packing strike at Oklahoma City but the injuries were minor.

PRIMARIES Give Nomination To Turner

was the vote cast for the top place on the Democratic ticket, interesting because it was regarded by political observers as a test of the ability of the Democrats to hold the ground gained in the last election.

The total count was expected to reach approximately 130,000 when returns were received from the few scattered precincts which had not yet reported.

Far Exceeds 1932

This count would far exceed the Democratic total vote of 97,227 cast for the nomination in the 1932 primary.

The Republican vote approached 321,000, falling considerably behind the 367,417 for governor in 1930 and further behind the vote of about 400,000 in 1928.

In winning the Republican nomination, Turner pulled much of his strength from the rural areas of the state, while Colflesh carried the urban counties almost without exception.

Carry Own Counties

All four of the Republican candidates carried their own counties, Turner receiving a lopsided score in Adams and other southwest Iowa counties surrounding his home at Corning. Colflesh carried his home county, Polk, by only 500 votes, however, and this narrow margin reduced by a considerable extent his chance of winning the nomination.

In the state office contest, four Democrats were unopposed for re-nomination. They were Lieut. Gov. N. G. Kraschel, Attorney General Ed L. O'Connor, State Auditor C. W. Storms, and State Treasurer Leo Wegman.

Miss Samuelson Wins

Republican incumbents, Miss Agnes Samuelson, superintendent of public instruction, and Fred Woodruff, state railroad commissioner, were assured substantial majorities for re-nomination.

Mrs. Alex Miller, secretary of state, and Secretary of Agriculture Ray Murray, both Democrats, also led their opponents by goodly margins.

Thomas Martin of Iowa City, Republican candidate for nomination for railroad commission, followed Woodruff but led C. O. Frazer of Council Bluffs for nomination. Two candidates for railroad commissioner were nominated by each party.

Go To Convention

Frank Flaherty of Sioux City and George A. Huffman of Des Moines were ahead in the Democratic race. Candidates in the three Republican contests to go to convention were leading in the order named.

Lieutenant-governor: G. E. Cress of Mason City, Harry Thompson of Muscatine, J. A. Nelson of Decorah, and State Senator George W. Patterson of Burt.

Secretary of agriculture: Fred W. Nelson of Nevada, E. T. Davis of Iowa City, W. J. Campbell of Jesup, and W. H. Rowlands of Des Moines.

Attorney General

Attorney general: Ole Naglestad of Sioux City, Robert J. Shaw of Sigourney, Harry B. Swan of Atlantic, and Ross Mowry of Newton.

In the Republican race for the auditor nomination, Frank M. Hanson of Garner led E. B. McGlothlen of Jefferson. In the Republican treasurer nominees' fight, Frank I. Williams of Cedar Rapids was well ahead of George B. Perkins of Sac City and Seth S. Silver of Cantril.

G. C. Greenwalt, Republican candidate for secretary of state, was unopposed. Greenwalt held the post under the Turner administration, preceding that of Governor Herrins.

Turner Visits Headquarters

Declares G.O.P. Has Best Opportunity In Generation

DES MOINES, June 5 (AP)—Declaring the Republican party faces the greatest opportunity in a generation, Dan Turner, Republican nominee for governor, visited his state campaign headquarters today and issued the following statement:

"I am deeply grateful. I sincerely appreciate the confidence and fine loyalty shown by the voters of Iowa at the polls Monday. I can only reiterate the pledges which I made in the campaign, and assure the people that the discharge of the trust they have placed upon me. I shall say, always, that which I believe to be true, and do always that which I believe to be right.

"The Republican party faces the greatest opportunity that has presented itself in a generation. The surface has not been scratched in solving the depression problems. Our party will go to the polls this fall with the people back of us, in the fight to restore employment, in the demand for equality for agriculture, which can only be had when interest rates on farm mortgages are reduced, when prices for farm products assure a profit to the producer, and when taxes are substantially lowered.

"There has never been a prosperous country when conditions on the farm were bad. For a genuine solution of the problems of the day, we must start from the soil.

"In this effort of a united Republican party we will deserve and receive the confidence and support of the people of Iowa."

A Washington Bystander

Unofficial Doings From Washington, D. C.

By KIRKE SIMPSON

WASHINGTON—Recurrence of rumors of the impending retirement of Gen. Hugh Johnson as head of NRA brings a very definite prediction from high administration authorities that nothing short of his own insistence would cause such a change at any early date.

The White House apparently sees eye to eye with the general on the notion that his organization job is far from complete. Until necessary overhauling of some of the major codes, on the basis of experience with preliminary conceptions of what they should provide, has been completed, the sharp-tongued, hard-hitting ex-soldier appears destined to stay on the job.

Senator Nye's repeated declaration that many of Johnson's major NRA aides were preparing to step out after adjournment of congress, when they could do so with less embarrassment to the administration, was based on the theory that policy disagreement was at the root of the business. Johnson countered with a published invitation to any such go hand in their papers. It produced few resignations.

Yet there are a number of officials not only in NRA but elsewhere in the government's alphabetical setup who would like to get back into private business harness as soon as possible.

That fact implies very considerable changes in Washington, not so much after adjournment as on the eve of the meeting of the next congress in January.

General Johnson's intimates say it would take no more than a White House wink at any time to produce his resignation and that in such form as to minimize any political bad effect.

Whatever type of man may be sought for more or less permanent administration of this major industrial recovery experiment—and it seems agreed that Johnson is primarily an organizer—those who should be familiar with the president's views see no prospect of a change in NRA leadership for some months at least.

Frankness Helps

When President Roosevelt framed his celebrated 10 billion dollar budget message some of his closest political advisers wagged their heads in alarm. They feared popular reaction. They were for inside instead of outside estimates.

Now, with the July 1 deficit looming as about one-half the estimate, in gas about one-half the estimate, the advantage of presidential frankness as to possible costs is apparent.

Doctor Believes Quintuplets Might Have Been Sextuplets

CORBELL, Ont., June 5 (AP)—The country doctor who presided over the birth of Mrs. Ovilla Dionne's quintuplets revealed today that but for some unexplained accident of fate there would have been six children instead of five.

"I think there was a possibility of sextuplets," said Dr. A. R. Dafeo in discussing the five tiny mites, eight days old, who are holding their own against the death scientists widely predicted for them.

"I believe six embryos formed and one did not mature," he declared.

The five little Dionnes—Marie, Emilie, Cecile, Annette, and Yvonne—lay in their baskets and incubators impervious to the publicity. Medical attendants declared they are gaining strength.

Today Annette, who weighs two pounds, four ounces, punched Yvonne in the nose.

Yvonne weighs 2 1/4 ounces more than Annette. It may have been an accident; that punch in the nose, but to Dr. Dafeo it was evidence of increasing animation and strength. It looked really funny, the doctor said.

The five children, in Dr. Dafeo's opinion, are identical—the product of one cell. He did not elaborate on his expressed opinion that there were six embryos.

Ward Billick Gets 45 Day Sentence

Ward Billick found, much to his sorrow, that it doesn't pay to resist the Iowa City police department.

Billick was sentenced to 30 days in jail yesterday for nearly tearing off the shirts of two officers who arrested him and for kicking out a window of the police car. He also was sentenced to 15 days for intoxication.

M. J. Harris was also picked up by police yesterday and fined $25 for disturbing the peace. The fine was suspended on good behavior.

Ace Draft-Dodger in New Bid for Pardon

MRS. EMMA BERGDOLL GROVER BERGDOLL

BERGDOLL MANSION IN PHILADELPHIA MRS. GROVER BERGDOLL AND CHILDREN.

Most recent move to seek a Presidential pardon for Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, America's most famous draft-dodger, comes from Bergdoll himself, now married and the father of three children in Weinsberg, Germany, and is said to have support of a Philadelphia post of the American Legion. Bergdoll is willing to come back to stand trial before a civil—not military—court and to take the medicine from which he fled in 1920. Last January, Mrs. Emma Bergdoll, the exile's mother, who still resides in the palatial family mansion in Philadelphia, petitioned President Roosevelt for a pardon for her son. But her appeal was as unsuccessful as her court fight to prevent confiscation of Bergdoll's $1,500,000 fortune by the U. S. Alien Property Custodian following his flight. Bergdoll's usual fight for the U. S. was inspired by his love of Germany, his parents' native land. It is recalled he offered to fight for Germany in 1914.

An Honor Well Deserved

AN HONORARY degree, as bestowed by colleges today, is sometimes an empty honor. Even long lists of honorary letters can not make worth where worth does not exist. In instances, however, this honor comes in recognition of worthy service to society, and offers a reward for distinguished abilities.

Such an instance is the recognition Monday by Cornell college of the outstanding work of George T. Baker, president of the state board of education.

"In recognition of 25 years of service to education in the state of Iowa," Cornell bestowed upon him the honorary title of doctor of laws. A fitting recognition, for Mr. Baker, successful in his own field, has given much to the state.

His record in educational service of the state is widely known. Through 25 years—in the greatest period of the University of Iowa's growth—he has sat on the guiding board of this institution. For several years he has headed the state board.

His record of public service is much greater, however. For several years he was a representative in the state legislature. He served his community, as head of the Chamber of Commerce and as mayor of Davenport.

He served the nation, also. Named by President Coolidge on a commission dealing with railroad affairs, he gave much time to this work. His engineering knowledge and his study of the commission's problems made his work of great value.

His honor, coming from an Iowa college, seems eminently deserved. Mr. Baker has grown with Iowa. He has given a quarter of a century of unselfish service to his community, his state, and the nation.

The World Gets Its Face Lifted

THE DISCOVERY of "element 93" in Italy offers proof that the world is becoming younger every day—that new elements, the result of nuclear collisions, are adding to the supply of the world's materials.

The "face lifting" process of the earth thus confirmed adds a new chapter to the scientific study of the world's history. Work of astronomers and geologists has indicated that the earth is probably about 2,000,000,000 years old.

How long has the world to live? Immediately after the World War, dozens of pseudo-scientists spent their days and nights predicting the final end of the world almost every day.

Remember the sessions in barber shops, when men sat around the old stove in lengthy discussion of the weighty problems of the existence of the earth? The barber invariably set the date for the world's demise for the seventeenth of some month, and described in detail the manner in which the end was to come.

Then there was always the man who described how his great grandfather had been awakened by the great meteor shower way back in the 1830's, and how the world almost came to a fiery end that night.

With the advent of bobbed hair and the shift in barber shop discussions, this topic fell out of favor as one on which to hold a worthwhile session.

Now it seems the barber shop scientists can rest easier. For with a face lifting going on continually, the world has probably a few million—or billion—years of youth still left!

The new element is said to be the hardest substance in the world. It's going to be hard for everyone. The barber shop scientists, the crepe-hangers, and the students who must add a new name to an already long list of chemical substances.

What Others Think

Sensation! English Bobby Shot!

(From The Kansas City Star)

A relatively trivial incident in American police life becomes a regional sensation when it occurs in England. The difference in popular attitude is just about as wide as the difference between crime prevalence in America and in England.

A burglar, questioned by a British policeman, draws a pistol and shoots and slightly wounds the officer. Why should that arouse the whole countryside, enlisting in the chase airplanes, motor cars, bicycles, motor cycles, bloodhounds and the population generally? Just because not even criminals are supposed to be armed in England. Even officers do not carry weapons except under special dispensation and in the face of uncommon danger. The law against carrying weapons is so severe and so rigidly enforced that criminals almost without exception respect it. When it is violated, it is in fact sensational.

In this instance the burglar was so terrified by the gravity of what he had done that when cornered he killed himself.

It might be difficult in this country to prevent the sale and use of weapons to the extent of prevention in England, but it is possible. Isn't it about time that all consideration for the manufacturers and dealers in the firearm business be disregarded in favor of a long-suffering public? Why should congress act on the request of the president for authority to stop the sale of arms to warring South American countries and yet fail to prohibit the sale of arms to public enemies in this country?

GOOD MORNING

Huey Long popped into prominence again the other day when the Women's Committee of Louisiana announced a "sacrifice sale" of family heirlooms to finance an investigation into charges against him.

The Women's Committee insists that both Huey and his henchman, Senator John H. Overton, were elected to the United States senate through fraud and corruption, and is disgusted with the senate for its lethargy.

The women have been pressing their charges against the senators for the last two years, but the senate has not seen fit to appropriate enough money to make a thorough investigation.

The hearings conducted last summer by Senator Connally's committee turned up a formidable looking report containing evidence about Senator Overton's campaign. In the public mind the committee's findings were virtually nullified when a federal investigator denounced the committee at one of its own hearings, and the senate decided that no action could be taken.

The charges against Long himself have never been taken seriously enough at Washington for the senate to appropriate money for an investigation.

But Huey Long is not yet through. The women, and a good share of the male population, of Louisiana are not willing to forget so easily. If the heirlooms hold out there might still be some worthwhile fireworks down by New Orleans.

A curious angle of the recent orgy of fleet worship in New York was the report in the New York Herald Tribune which, displayed on the front page in large type, proclaimed the fact that: "City Churches Halt Peace Navy."

"For many of the officers and men of the fleet," said this paper, "the day (Sunday) began with religious services at St. Patrick's Cathedral and at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

"... Both Cardinal Hayes and Bishop Manning, warned in their sermons of the dangers of unpreparedness. Quoting from the eleventh chapter and twenty-first verse of the Gospel of St. Luke, Cardinal Hayes said:

"When a strong man armed keepeth his court, those things are in peace which he possesseth." Bishop Manning asserted that "Extreme pacifism is not Christian—the Christian religion is never out of accord with the facts of life, as this position is."

In the first place, the American navy is not a peace navy, but very decidedly a war navy. It was built for war and for nothing else. And it is for war that hundreds of millions of dollars that might much better be spent for relief of the suffering are being poured into more and more ships and airplanes.

In the second place, there are many who would not agree with Bishop Manning and Cardinal Hayes that the position of pacifism is not in accord with the "facts of life." The pacifist believes that preparedness is a cause, not the cure, of war, and he is entitled to his own opinion.

In the third place, one wonders with misgivings, what the purpose of the New York Herald-Tribune might be in attempting so obviously to picture the church as sanctioning militarism.

American churches have rather definitely gone on record opposing militarism and all it stands for. Ministers, both individually from their own pulpits and en masse, have denounced war and war preparedness.

Of course the fleet is an awe-inspiring spectacle. The sight of great hulking grey masses covered with turrets and towers and bristling with proud guns stirs the blood even of pacifists. Their presence in the harbor gives the poor citizen a faint sense of pride and of power.

Perhaps it was merely under the influence of this fleet intoxication that the Herald-Tribune looked to sermons for approval. Perhaps that is the reason they were careful to choose the right sermons. But not many great newspapers are as innocent as that.

Behind The Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By Harrison Carroll

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—An innovation, fraught with startling possibilities, is being developed by Lou Brock, RKO-Radio producer. He is devising "symphonies in perfume" to be broadcast in the theaters with the showing of pictures.

His idea is to place a synthetic odor that matches the action or locale of the film in the air-conditioning system and have it wafted through the theater so that the nostrils of the screen fan will aid his eyes and ears in illusions of the screen.

Working with an amateur chemist on the R-K-O lot, Brock has been developing his scheme secretly for some time. He tried out the idea with successful results recently in several small theaters in Santa Barbara.

Now he is all set to supply exhibitors with a complete set of the simpler odors to create an ordinary atmosphere for the screening of lullaby's boudoir, sea scenes, flower gardens or any scene that flows on the screen long enough for the odor to be practically used.

The smells come in egg-shaped chunks, which volatilize rapidly on exposure to air. One of them can fill a small theater with its odor in 60 seconds. The aroma can be wiped out of the theater in less time than that.

Producer Brock, who got the idea for his smell symphonies from Sid Grauman's custom of making the Chinese theater aromatic in keeping with the picture on premiere nights, has got the cost per perfume egg down to fifty cents and is preparing to supply exhibitors with a set per picture.

And now, let the wise-cracks fall where they may!

It was Wynne Gibson who got the first laugh out of that dogbite suit between Billie Dove and Publicist Ruth Roland. Wynne wants to know if the animal that is alleged to have bitten Ruth is a "publicity hound"!

Modern China seems to have lost some of its traditional probity, judging from David Doyle's experience with Huey Wong Long, his ex-retired servant. The Chinese man quit Doyle's employ a few months back with his life savings and went back to China to live the rest of his days. He was back in Hollywood a few days ago broke. It was fan tan.

Doyle, who scripted First National's "Oil for the Lamps of China," took him on again. The other might he took his wife for a Chinese dinner to Chinatown here.

In an adjoining booth he heard what seemed to be a party for a big shot. Looking around the partition he saw it was faithful Wong Long, celebrating the night off and his first pay in Doyle's grey suit, red tie and light tan shoes.

Yesterday on "The Merry Widow" set Lubitsch sat down at the piano, struck a few chords, sang a few notes and broke into an exquisite, whistling solo. Maurice Chevalier came over amazed to congratulate him. Lubitsch stopped playing. The whistling went on. Hidden under the piano, he had Ruth Metzger, the radio whistling star.

Movie kids don't have the anticipation of seeing the school house burn down. But they have their moments. While Jackie Cooper's schoolteacher was on her way to Catalina Island with him on location for "Treasure Island," a satchel containing her purse and all his school books slipped overboard while they were getting out of the seaplane. Jackie was sorry about the purse but he whooped when he saw the books go down.

"Off the Record"

By SIGRID ARNE

Madame Simopoulos, wife of the minister from Greece, has good reason to believe friendships can bud and bloom more quickly in New York taxicabs than anywhere else.

She no sooner had entered one recently than the driver burst out about his Great Dane which had just had 10 pups. Mme. Simopoulos smiled so sweetly that the driver exploded:

"Say, I'll just give you one."

"But I'd have to take him back to Washington on the train," said Mme. Simopoulos.

"Oh, that's all right," said the driver, "I'll give you a nursing bottle and some milk."

But the pup stayed in New York.

On the desk of Representative Ross Collins of Mississippi there is a gilt baby shoe with engaging little bulges which make it look as if it had just come off a pudgy little foot.

It was one of the baby shoes worn by Collins' daughter who is now a young lady. He had it stiffened with gilt.

Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, has been here for some of Washington's extremely changeable spring weather. He says it reminds him of the little boy who wanted a rifle.

"Santa Claus finally brought him one," Baker recounts. "After that the boy's diary read like this: 'Christmas day—got rifle. Dec. 26—rained. Dec. 27—snowed. Dec. 28—too sleety to go out. Dec. 29—shot grandma!'"

Life is so exciting for Mrs. Henry T. Rainey, wife of the speaker, that she has been wearing someone else's coat for the last two weeks without knowing it. Now she wonders where she got it, and who has hers.

William E. Barrett, the writer, has a 7 year old son.

The boy answered the phone one day as his father's Washington friends called.

"Father isn't home," said the boy. "What do you want?"

"I want to make a date with your father to take him out and feed him at lunch-time tomorrow," said the friend.

"Oh," said the boy, "don't bother. He doesn't need it."

Attorney General Cummings and his wife like dancing so well they stay late with the "youngsters" and take a few spirited swings around the floor when the early-to-beds have left it somewhat clear.

The sailor who goes rowing on shore leave has a rival in Pat Hartigan, reading clerk of the house of representatives.

When the house had a recent week end vacation—the first in months—Pat Hartigan was among the missing at the golf clubs. He was sitting in the galleries at the senate, listening to the debate.

Mary Roberts Rinehart has found a way to fool the doctor who ordered her to stay at home.

She has had a news ticker installed in her study.

Johnny Weissmuller has started a new fad here for the masculine rollers. He waits until he gets far enough from the club porch and then pulls off his shirt and plays in a stunning coat of tan.

From the porch the course looks as if the men had suddenly developed a universal passion for brown shirts.

Paris Riots Aided France's New "Strong Man"

COLONEL DE LA ROCQUE AT HEAD OF 'CROIX DE FEU'

Aiming at the dissolution of all political parties and the election of a parliament without parties, Colonel de la Rocque, head of the "Croix de Feu," association of war veterans decorated for bravery under fire, looms as the current "Strong Man" of France. Although the organization controlled by the colonel was relatively unimportant up to the Paris riots of last February, when many of its members were shot down by police, it has grown to gigantic proportions since. De la Rocque, although a soldier with a distinguished career of war service in Europe and Morocco, refuses to arm his followers, said to number more than 100,000. He believes he can achieve control of France by constitutional means.

PARIS, France (I.N.)—Although he has no desire to be known as "another Mussolini," nor yet a "Hitler," Colonel de la Rocque, head of the powerful nationalist organization, known as the "Croix de Feu," is rapidly looming as the "Strong Man" of France.

Under his leadership the "Croix de Feu," an association of war veterans decorated for gallantry under fire, has grown into an army of more than 100,000 since the disastrous riots here last February.

Thrived on Trouble
It was a demonstration of the "Croix de Feu," incidentally, that precipitated the riots. The organization, protesting against a radical government and radical control of the Chamber of Deputies, insisted on holding their meeting before the Chamber in defiance of an official ban. The result was, as the world knows, the veterans who had stood between France and her outside enemies were fired upon by Parisian police and many were killed.

Already inflamed by the Stavisky scandal, this treatment of its war heroes aroused all France to a fighting frenzy. Consequently the stature of the "Croix de Feu" grew to gigantic proportions almost overnight. Up to the time its members fell before police bullets in the ferson Township (Shueyville), Far-trar, and Vail.

Last night's award convocation and dinner closed two days of the state contest. Prof. Benj. F. Shambaugh, head of the political science department, served as master of ceremonies, and Harry K. Newburn, principal of University high school, was manager of events.

Under the leadership of Walton Multer of the music department, the group of nearly 1,000 who attended the dinner sang "America." Invocation was by Prof. M. Willard Lampe, director of the school of religion, and Dean Carl E. Seashore of the graduate college greeted the students.

Dean George F. Kay of the college of liberal arts presented the award keys and certificates.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sweeping aside objections that conferees had written new legislation into the measure, the senate today adopted the conference report on the air mail bill and sent it to the White House.

A picture of desolation near Waukerton, Ind., where trees and ground growths, made tinder by the protracted drought, have been burning for more than five weeks. The fire was started by backfire from a tractor, and has defied all efforts of the farmers of the region to extinguish it. It is impossible, at this time, to estimate the loss.

SEEN from Old Capitol

By TOM YOSELOFF

This department has followed high school contests like Kentuckyans follow "hawes." After so many months of contest-following, this corner is prepared to give unbiased estimates on various items. Today, it is a barometer of feminine pulchritude, and it is hereby exploding a popular theory.

It has long been held that women are "beautiful but dumb." On this basis, it has been held that the girls who come to Iowa City for the academic contest each year are less easy to look at than are those who come, for example, to the state music festival. Nothing to it. Through personal observation, this department now reports that feminine pulchritude was at a high peak yesterday, with some 500 high school girls in town for the contest.

The storm caused some of the group no little difficulty Monday afternoon. What with huge limbs of trees blowing down all over the place, one of them fell on a car parked near Iowa Union. The occupants of the automobile spent much time and effort extricating the car from the leaves and branches, which had almost completely covered it.

Then there were the boys and girls who came here Monday morning from a little school in eastern Iowa. The man who had accompanied them left them at the registration desk in the Union, where they were assigned to their sleeping quarters, directed in regard to time and place of examination, and left alone. They went through the two days of examinations all alone, and last night—when they had almost given up hope—their teacher showed up. This corner did not ask for an explanation.

Overheard at the academic dinner last night (also seen): Bruce E. Mahan perspiring and worried, trying to make things run right. . . This dinner, incidentally, is the largest one the Union serves annually, what with nearly 1,000 persons at hand. . . Even the butter plates were perspiring—the ice intended to keep the butter cold melted and spread over the table. . . Then the talk shifted to politics, with some talk about "why did Turner get the nomination" and "will the Republicans be strong at the polls next fall" . . . But the chaperons, not the kiddies, showed an interest in politics. . . "Gallia est omnis divisa" and "Chaucer was an author (statesman) (racehorse) (breakfast food)—check the correct one" . . .

Though it requires deviation from the academic meet, this story should be told. It concerns two students who had allowed their soiled clothing to gather dust for several weeks before school was out here. Monday they packed their laundry into half a dozen or so packages and sent it to a local laundry. It seems they misjudged the cost of laundering, for they were somewhat taken by surprise when the bundle came back with a bill of $7.21. The truck driver affirmed that it was the "biggest bundle I've ever delivered."

Truth is stranger—It happened at the home of Mrs. Werner Huck Monday evening. Her guests were engaged in a bridge game. At the end of four rounds of bridge, they compared scores—and discovered that they had each made exactly the same score!

Breeding chicks by artificial incubation is said to have been practiced by the Egyptians.

Plan Two Special Art Classes For Summer Session

Two special art classes will be conducted in the University high school studios during the first term of the summer session, it was announced yesterday by Prof. Edna Patzig of the graphic and plastic arts department.

The classes, one for children and one for adults, will be taught by Florence Brown. The children's group will meet Tuesday and Thursday afternoons, beginning next Tuesday. The adult class will meet next Monday and will meet Monday, Wednesday, and Friday afternoons.

Landscape painting will be given much attention in the adult class. In both classes individual instruction will be given in drawing, painting, modeling, and design.

DROUGHT AND FIRE IN INDIANA

A picture of desolation near Waukerton, Ind., where trees and ground growths, made tinder by the protracted drought, have been burning for more than five weeks. The fire was started by backfire from a tractor, and has defied all efforts of the farmers of the region to extinguish it. It is impossible, at this time, to estimate the loss.

ABOUT SPORTS

Athletes Turn Pro... Four Big Ten Hurlers Go Up... Lefty Harris a Hitter... Iowa City Diamond Ball... 12 Team Loop

WHEN a sport season ends we find crack college athletes going into professional ranks. Football and baseball draw many boys who were marvels in their collegiate days.

THREE WESTERN conference hurlers have received the call to the professional ranks so far this spring, all ace pitchers who can also play other positions well.

HARRIS HAS been outstanding for the Wildcats for two years, with his running mate, Lager, considered as efficient a hurler. Besides his pitching ability, Harris is one of the heaviest hitters in the conference.

NEXT WEEK will see the Iowa City diamond loop get under way with a league sporting about 10 teams. The games will be played at City park under the night lights.

Smith Says Good Golf Must Be Played To Win

PHILADELPHIA, June 5 (AP)—The thoroughbreds of golf today surveyed the possibility of setting a new 72-hole record for the national open championship beginning Thursday on the heavily trapped Merion layout.

Stroke Lower

Goodman, Runyan and the veteran Smith believe the winning total will be a stroke lower than the existing record, while the heavy-hitting Little predicted it would take 234 to win.

Hitters Not Favored

"Merion does not favor long hitters or those who are kept up to and on the greens. It simply rewards good golf. Any golfer who can put together four good rounds, plus the breaks that go with that kind of golf, might find himself well under 285."

Carnera Stages Exhibition Of Three Ways of Fighting Against Baer in Title Bout

Shows How to Win, Lose, or Draw Against Max

By EDWARD J. NEIL
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

POMPTON LAKES, N. J., June 5.—In a training ring pitched in the middle of a heap of alder bushes, Primo Carnera, heavy-weight champion of the world, showed a small but select clientele today how he could beat Max Baer, a week from tomorrow night, how he could tie him, and how he could lose most thoroughly.

He gave all three of these contradictory displays in a rapid succession against three sparring partners—Chester Matan, a burly sailor; Yustin Sirutis, a tall, gawky youngster who was once an amateur champion, and Corn Griffin, a rough little Irishman who did all the winning. It might have been worth the championship of the world to Baer if he could have watched.

Pleasant Encounter

Matan came first, for two rounds, and Carnera, broad and healthy as a grizzly, belted the unfortunate navy graduate all over the premises. The champion, in peak condition at 235 pounds, met Chester's plunges with straight left hands that were as pleasant to encounter as a bedroom door in the dark. Matan barely staggered through the last minute of the second round.

Then came Sirutis to show how a monster of a man could be held even—by bobbing under Carnera's long left jabs, sidling in close to him, sticking to him like a terrier with the baby's teddy bear, yanking your head out of the way of Primo's ponderous right hand chops. This went on for two rounds and Sirutis got none the worst of it.

But it remained for Corn Griffin, smallest of the three sparring partners and newly released from the army, to show how possible it is to whip the huge champion.

Up and Down

Corn, cleverly feinting with his head, drew out Carnera's long left hand, ducked under it, and came up inside whamming left hooks to the body. When Primo's guard came down, Corn's fist went up to the chin.

Once losing command of the situation, Carnera obviously became flustered. He floundered around the ring, all his book knowledge of being tossed overboard, and he was side on to any kind of punch.

Carnera boxed five rounds and exercised two more and in general his fight was impressive. As long as his treacherous left hand was extended and he wasn't being pressed, he was all but impossible to hit. He was vicious at short range and punches bounced off him like hammer raps on an anvil.

He is down to fighting weight now for the 15 round test in the Madison Square garden last June 14 and will train carefully from now on, working every day until next Wednesday. Benny Leonard and Willie Ritchie, formerly lightweight champions, were impressed with his boxing skill.

Jack Pearl, radio's Baron Munchausen, also saw the workout and thought Griffin was the champion.

Latonia Derby Victor Will Be Real Champ

LATONIA, Ky. (AP)—A "derby champion of derby champions" will emerge from the Latonia derby, time-honored stake of the Kentucky turf here Saturday, June 30.

Derby-winners and more derby-winners decorate the list of nominations from which the field will be drawn. And winning the Latonia of this has a big bearing on determining the high money winner of the year.

In this Cavalcade, winner of the Kentucky derby, being groomed as well for the American derby at Chicago June 16, there is his stablemate, Time Clock, winner of the Florida derby; Mata Hari, winner of the Illinois derby; Hiskalus, winner of the California; Flight, winner of the Texas derby and third in the Illinois; Discovery, second in the Kentucky and third in the Breakneck; Singing Wood, winner of the Withers, and Fiji, winner of the Kentucky Oaks.

Rated at $10,000 added, for three-year-olds and upwards, the Latonia derby offers an additional $5,000 if the winner also won the same year's Kentucky derby. That hasn't happened since the extra prize was offered, and hasn't occurred at all since 1906. This year it's Cavalcade's chance to take extra money.

But Cavalcade won't have the "laydown" chance—unless miracles happen—that fell to Lieut. Gibson in 1900. Winner of the Kentucky derby that year, Lieut. Gibson merely had to walk around the derby course at Latonia. He was the only starter and the mild exercise paid him $4,715.

Entering its fifty-third running, the Latonia derby was worth $25,000 to Chithowen in 1924, but only $7,750 to Gold Basis, winner last year.

Explanation Of "Strange As It Seems"

Harvey Hendrick, who remained on the bench while the Phillies won a double header yesterday, was ousted from the Big Six on his record of inactivity, thus making a place for Arky Vaughan, although Joe Medwick climbed past the idle Pittsburgher in the National League batting list.

Explanation Of "Strange As It Seems"

(By The Associated Press)

An enthusiastic inventor, a Mr. Hatton of Scotland, harnessed the wasted power of active mice and applied it to the very useful purpose of running a threading mill. A little over 100 years ago he saw mice running in a cylindrical cage at a prison, and the happy thought struck him that if this power could be utilized it would solve the power problem. He made a small machine on this principle and actually operated it.

THE LONE WOLF OF SONIA

by LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

CHAPTER XXXVIII
"At that," Crain added in mild mortification, "you're only guessing."

"That I grant you; and in vanity, if you like—paternal vanity that bolsters up my faith in the courage and resource of my boy, I will confess," Lanyard with a fond smile admitted, "I like to believe Maurice a true child of my own spirit—that he met the situation and dealt with it as I, at his age, would have."

"Oh, well," his friend admitted, "if it had been you in his place, I guess I wouldn't be so slow to take stock in your theory. The Lone Wolf, I remember, got away too regularly with the impossible."

"Permit me to commend the Lone Wolf's whelp, then, to your attention. Not that I need to, if you know as much as I imagine you know about what went on behind the scenes on the way over."

"I know a lot more than you ever let out to me, hombre. I'm willing to admit he's a likely youngster—but a handoff."

"I have found him that," the father confessed, "still, I do believe the boy's too intelligent not to see what as an ass he's been before it's too late—if he hasn't already. If it needs more than that affair of last night to open his eyes, and it is here, if you understand me, that I find the most cause for being contented by what you have told me—in what the floor-clerk's story would seem to prove, that Maurice found himself, his true self, when he perceived to what ends his folly had led him."

"I'd like to think you're right," Crane protested. "But it takes a heap of believing; and while I don't like to seem a crab, I can't help locating the fatal flaw in your theory. If Maurice and the girl made a clean get-away, as you assume, what's become of them? Why hasn't Miss Fenno shown up at home? Why isn't the boy waiting for you at the Walpole? Why has neither of them so much as tried to communicate with their parents?"

"Common prudence may have conspired their keeping under cover till the mob that murdered Fowler was put where it couldn't take similar measures to silence them, too. As long as Maurice remains lost, you see, he enjoys much the same advantage over the mob that I enjoy, who am at large in New York while it believes me still a prisoner aboard the Maverick—able to make my own reconnoissances, and perhaps execute reprisals, unembarrassed by espionage."

"Reprisals?" Crane drawled, with derision in his eyebrows as well. "You surely don't think the lad's simple enough to dream of trying to get level with that bunch single-handed?"

"You are doubtless justified in terming it a simpleton's course," Lanyard admitted. "But if I know my son, the Lone Wolf is not the kind of head that consents and orders to be supervised by its execution."

"Oh, yeah?" The native son, who knew his own people and their ways better than any benighted foreigner could pretend to, enjoyed a sarcastic moment. "And who might that be, to your way of thinking?"

"You do not know?"

"A mob's a mob," Crane stoutly argued; "it ain't any one particular person."

"Think again. A mob, we know, is a group of individuals more or less held together by common interest in crime; it can work as one man to one end only when dominated by a single superior intelligence. Now, take those whom we

Sharp Trial Begins; Hear Four Charges

Local Attorney Defends Self in Disbarment Proceedings

Fighting for his place as a member of the bar in Iowa, Vernon L. Sharp, local attorney, confidently defended himself against four accusations of unprofessional conduct leveled at him by Prosecuting Attorney Harry Garrett of the attorney general's office in the first day of the disbarment trial in district court yesterday.

Sharp, who has 18 accusations of unprofessional conduct against him, is being tried before three district judges appointed by the chief justice of the Iowa supreme court.

First Charge

The first charge on which witnesses were called yesterday was one in which it is alleged that Sharp advised Mrs. Charles Lawson to withdraw $382.47 from a New Haven, Conn., bank and to leave it with him for investment. It is alleged that Sharp received the money and deposited it to his account in a local bank and did not invest the money for Mrs. Lawson.

Mrs. Lawson received no writing of any kind in regard to the transaction until about a year and a half later, but after appeals for her money Mrs. Lawson received a note for $382.47, payable in six months, she testified. It was alleged that Sharp paid to Mrs. Lawson at different times the total sum of $142 and interest on the note.

Committee Claims

The investigating committee claims that Sharp did not invest Mrs. Lawson's fund in accordance with his agreement with her.

The second charge brought before the court yesterday was one in which the committee charges that on Dec. 20, 1931, Sharp asked Charles Kennett to lend him $300, stating that the amount was needed to save the business of a client in Oxford. It is claimed that Kennett borrowed the money from the Iowa City Savings bank and gave it to Sharp, who agreed to pay it back in 10 days. He allegedly gave Kennett a note and when the note came due gave him a check for $302 on the Iowa City Savings bank, but when the check was presented it was not honored.

The third accusation under discussion yesterday dealt with a $500 check given to Jacob Van der Zee by Sharp which was not honored when presented. According to the committee, Sharp went to Van der Zee and asked for $500 for 24 hours.

Masek on Stand

The disbarment proceedings closed yesterday with James Masek of Lone Tree on the witness stand in connection with the fourth count in which it is charged that Sharp agreed to act as an attorney for Masek in a damage suit, which was to be tried before Justice of Peace F. H. Kirchner of Lone Tree. Under Sharp's advice, Masek said, the case was transferred to the court of Justice of Peace B. P. Carter of Iowa City.

According to the committee, the parties in the case reached an agreement whereby the defendants agreed to pay Masek $27.90, out of which court costs were to be paid by Sharp, the balance to go to Masek.

Proceedings Continue Today

It is alleged that the defendants in the case paid Sharp $25, Sharp giving a receipt. The committee claims that Sharp has not paid the court costs in either Kirchner's or Carter's court nor has he paid anything to his client.

The proceedings against Sharp will continue in district court today with 14 more charges to come before the court.

Leviathan Primps for Another Comeback

SS LEVIATHAN IN 'BEAUTY PARLOR' TAKING THE BOYS 'OVER THERE'

Headed for the junk heap a year ago, the grand old liner Leviathan is getting a new lease on life as she is being reconitioned in Boston for her comeback to the trans-Atlantic passenger trade under command of Captain Albert B. Randall, hero of many sea rescues. Built in Germany as the Vaterland, the giant liner was interned at Hoboken, N. J., on outbreak of the World War. When the United States threw in with the Allies, she was seized and transformed into a troop transport. After a brilliant record of war service she again was reconitioned as a passenger liner at a cost of $8,000,000, but prohibition ruined her. Being a dry ship, she did not attract passengers, so she was slated for the scrap heap. A ruling of the Shipping Board, however, gave her a reprieve, and on June 9 she returns to write another chapter in her colorful history.

BOSTON, (I.L.N.)—Repleved on the very brink of the scrap-heap, after a whole year during which her fate hung in the balance, that gallant old S. S. Leviathan is being groomed here for a comeback on the transatlantic run, to write, perhaps, another chapter in her colorful history.

Had Ups and Downs The most publicized liner in the world, the Leviathan might be called an orphan of the World war. As the Vaterland, the pride of Germany, she was interned at Hoboken, N. J., after having made only two and one-half voyages, at the outbreak of the European cataclysm. There, with her mighty keel burned deep in the mud, she remained idle until the United States threw in on the side of the Allies.

On declaring war against the Vaterland's owners, Uncle Sam's first action was to seize the big ship. Turned over to the navy department and re-christened with the name she now is known by, the liner underwent a major operation. Her gorgeous saloons were torn out and layers of bunks installed at a cost running into millions, and the ship was commissioned as a troop transport.

No chapter in the Leviathan's history is more brilliant than that dealing with her war service. On her first trip in December, 1917, disguised with camouflage, she carried 1,249 of Uncle Sam's fighting men "Over There." On the following May 22, she made her great record by transporting 11,322 men to the front.

Many of those who made the trip over in the Leviathan did not come back. But the big liner did the joyful duty of bringing back many sons and husbands to mothers and wives.

Sorrows of Peace Following completion of her transport service, the Leviathan was returned to her old berth at Hoboken. The government did not know what to do with her and she lay there running up an annual bill of $700,000 for repairs and maintenance. She was the subject of many debates in congress, but as it would take $8,000,000 to put her in shape for passenger service, there was no great rush to put the gallant ship back in her rightful place.

It was while congress was trying to decide what to do about her that the big rat story started about the Leviathan. Somehow a rumor was born that the liner was infested with a plague of rodents, and the story grew until it assumed international proportions.

Finally a rat expert came upon the scene. He agreed to exterminate the rats at 25 cents a head, or a tail. After a week's work, the Pied Piper and his small army of assistants, having used tons of poison and hundreds of traps, reported the catch—one dozen rats.

Eventually congress voted the $8,000,000 to reconition the big liner. Under the supervision of A. D. Lasker, then chairman of the shipping board, she was made over inside more elaborately than ever and she returned to sea.

But prohibition had come while

Wheat Prices Rise

CHICAGO (AP)—Seasonally low estimates of United States 1934 spring wheat production did much to bring about nearly 6 cents sheer rise in wheat prices today.

Lines to cancel the Leviathan's schedule. She was believed headed for the junk heap. But a later ruling decreed that she must be run for another year; so now the old ship goes back to compete with the youngsters on the field where once she was undisputed queen.

AROUND THE TOWN with BILL MERRITT

A carrier pigeon was found in the clock on the city hall tower yesterday morning by workmen who were repairing the south face of the clock which had been smashed by the storm Monday.

The pigeon, evidently tired and badly frightened by the storm, took refuge there. A message on its leg revealed that it belongs to the Illinois Carrier Pigeon club of Moline. According to the express company officials, who crated the pigeon and sent it home, the pigeon was undoubtedly one of the flock released in Newton last Sunday.

A Visitor

Hans Pfund of Des Moines, director of the national re-employment service in Iowa, was in Iowa City yesterday inspecting the local office in the post office building.
