Congress Passes Measure To Give Roosevelt Unprecedented Power in Tariff Negotiations

Argentina, Germany In Quest of New Pacts

WASHINGTON, June 6 (AP)—Congress today gave President Roosevelt unprecedented power to negotiate reciprocal tariff treaties and almost at the same time Germany and Argentina acted to be among the first to negotiate the new pacts.

Quick acceptance by the house of senate amendments to the legislation completed congressional action and the measure was sent to the White House where the president was expected to sign it into law without delay.

Vast Authority
In voting the measure, congress delegated to the chief executive vast authority, previously jealously guarded by the legislative branch, to increase or decrease existing tariffs by as much as 50 per cent in making trade agreements with foreign nations as a means of stimulating trade and speeding recovery.

Soon after the house had signed its approval, Senator O'Mahoney (D. Wyo.) made public a letter from Mr. Roosevelt in which the latter said the wool industry was "one of those which needs price protection and the suggestion that the new tariff might be used to lower those prices is one which would not have occurred to me."

Surprised
"My concern," the president said, "that agricultural prices should be protected and, where possible, substantially raised ought to be well known by this time. This is why I was surprised that question should be raised about wool."

The new tariff bill has been thought of as one of the emergency measures which would help in the general effort to rehabilitate agriculture and industry together.

Anxious to Start
Anxious to start preliminary negotiations on trade treaties, Felipe A. Espill, the Argentine ambassador, and Hans Luther, the German ambassador, made official calls at the state department and bespoke the interest of their governments in beginning discussions at once.

Negotiations for a new commercial treaty with Cuba already are under way and Sweden, Brazil, Mexico, Portugal, Spain and Canada are understood to have made overtures during recent weeks.

Officials Plan Registration

2000 Students Expected Here for Summer Session

With hundreds of students already in Iowa City and every train and bus bringing new arrivals, university officials were preparing last night for registration of about 2,000 summer session students tomorrow and Saturday.

Though no definite estimate was available, it was expected last night that registration would compare favorably with that of the first term last summer, when some 2,000 students studied on the Iowa campus.

Registration will begin at 1 p. m. tomorrow, and will be practically completed by Saturday afternoon. Enrollment materials are available now.

Rooms and apartments for students were rapidly filling up yesterday as the hunt for living quarters became intense. Graduate students bringing their families to Iowa City for the summer were seeking houses and furnished apartments.

Two university dormitories, the Quadrangle and Currier hall, were open to summer session students. "Tent city," university camp, will be available for students wishing to live outdoors.

Class instruction for the first term will begin Monday at 7 a. m.

Elks Leader Speaks
SHENANDOAH (AP)—Walter F. Meier, grand exalted ruler of the Elks lodge, spoke informally at a meeting of the local organization here today.

WEATHER

IOWA—Showers Thursday and possibly Friday; cooler in south-east portion Thursday.

U.S. Report Says Drought to Affect Food Supply

Opposition Found To Great Britain's No Payment Plan

LONDON, June 6 (AP)—The opposition to Great Britain's decision to make no war debt payment to the United States on June 15 began to find its voice today after the first burst of general approval.

"I regret that Britain did not decide to pay the June 15 installment," said Lord Strabolgi, labor peer, in the house of lords. "We should avoid the possibility of default."

In other quarters similar expressions were heard, but the supporters of the government plan remained quite clearly in the majority.

G.O.P. Names H. P. Fletcher As Chairman

Party Drafts Platform Favoring Social Reforms

CHICAGO, June 6 (AP)—Henry P. Fletcher of Pennsylvania, a diplomat by career, tonight became field general of a campaign by the Republican party to win back political supremacy with a new deal of its own.

Fletcher was elected party chairman of the G.O.P.'s national committee today, shortly after the committee had announced that the party, in the fall congressional campaigns, would stand for a program of social reforms, while hammering "government domination."

Cheers and Boos
His selection to succeed Everett Sanders of Indiana, who resigned the post today, brought both cheers and boos from the party's office holders in Washington.

In accepting, from his home in Greencastle, Pa., Fletcher applauded the party's newly minted policies and set out for Chicago to meet the executive committee and start to work.

In between drafting the program, and picking a man to sell it to the voting public, the committee dispatched a telegram to its titular head, former President Herbert Hoover, praising him as a champion of "American governmental ideas."

Denies Farewell
The committee denied that the message amounted to a farewell or a leave-taking, insisting it was a conventional gesture of courtesy, and held no concealed significance.

The new statement of policy, a battle cry for the fall elections and for the presidential campaign in 1936, bespoke a "liberal and progressive spirit" for the party.

It declared opposition to an "all powerful central government" and charged that a "little group in Washington" now seeks "complete government control" of agriculture and business.

Aged Turk Cured
ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP)—Zaro Agha, who claims to be 160 years old, was discharged today from the Children's hospital, pronounced entirely cured from the attack of bright's disease he suffered five weeks ago.

Urgent Session-End Business Of Senate Still Stacked Up

Roosevelt Refuses To Allow Withdrawal Of Measures

WASHINGTON, June 6 (AP)—The senate's inevitable stock of urgent session-end business towered almost as high tonight as when the day began.

Adjournment of congress was nearer only by the fact that the day's developments made it unnecessary for the senate to adopt and argue over—the conference report on the tariff bill and that it got in a few hours debate on the pending silver measure.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt declined to yield, for the time being at least, to the pleas of Democratic leaders that the Wagner labor disputes bill and the housing bill be withdrawn from the list of legislation that the chief executive has requested.

The party chieftains argued that with these measures eliminated, congress could adjourn in 10 days with them still on the program, they found it difficult to forecast just

F.D.R. Fears Situation Nears Disaster Proportions; Famine Unlikely, Summary Indicates

President Says Duty Of Government To Provide

WASHINGTON, June 6 (AP)—The matter of fact language of an official government report which said the drought would "materially affect the national food supply" today told why President Roosevelt feared the situation had approached disaster proportions.

The president, however, made it plain that there was little likelihood of anything like famine conditions. He found support in the comprehensive summary issued by the department of agriculture. The report said the ravages of the angry and unclouded sun did not "mean there will be a national food shortage."

Few Cheerful Lines

Otherwise, there were few cheerful lines in the most thorough review yet made of the loss and misery growing out of the worst recorded drought in this country's history. Approximately 30 states have felt its effect and the continued lack of rain is rapidly turning portions of the west and mid west into semibarren areas.

A bit of comfort, small as it was, came from the weather bureau.

Local Showers
Forecasters reported local showers, "most of them light," in the Ohio valley and in the section northward from western Iowa and Nebraska during the last 24 hours. But there was nothing to indicate that a break in the dry spell was in sight.

Mr. Roosevelt indicated emphatically it was the government's duty to give all the aid at its command to those in distress and his aides were moving swiftly.

Hopkins Tells Policy
Harry L. Hopkins, the relief administrator, said it would be his policy to give farmers in the stricken areas paying jobs where possible, instead of doling out relief money.

Hopkins has already instituted a work relief program.

Chester C. Davis, the farm administrator, conferred with members of congress and said he felt the price paid for cattle in the drought section was a fair one.

The administration also went ahead with preparation for a request for approximately $525,000,000 for drought relief.

Hydraulics Engineer From Japan Visits S.U.I. Laboratories

Fhizuo Abe, hydraulics engineer for the Japanese government railways, was a visitor at the University of Iowa hydraulics laboratories yesterday morning.

The Japanese official is spending several months in the United States, studying problems of water conservation and utilization for electrical power.

Some Parts Of Iowa See Drought End

Reed Indicates General Rains in Near Future

DES MOINES, June 6 (AP)—The drought "will be temporarily broken in some sections of Iowa today, and Charles D. Reed, chief of the Iowa weather and crop bureau, held out indications that the drought might be broken by general rains in the near future.

A heavy, dashing rain which flooded Honey Creek 10 miles north of Council Bluffs and tied up traffic on the main lines of the Northwestern and Illinois Central railroads, was reported at Council Bluffs today. The precipitation totaled more than three inches, but was local and of benefit only to the area drained by Honey creek.

Accompanied by Winds
The storm was accompanied by high winds which blew down trees and caused other storm damage.

Shelby county reported heavy rains, the highest precipitation of 2.81 inches falling at Harlan. Suffering crops were relieved throughout the county.

Substantial rains in Harrison county brought temporary benefit to crops, Logan, county seat, reporting 1.50 inches.

Sloux City reported .95 of an inch. 59 at Council Bluffs

At Council Bluffs .59 of an inch was reported and counties to the north of Council Bluffs reported rains varying from .01 to .21 inches.

Meanwhile the crop condition was declared still serious by Reed and R. K. Bliss, of the Iowa extension service at Ames, director of drought relief in Iowa.

Bliss said he hoped the drought emergency could be met without the sale of cattle to the government, "because we may need that meat here next winter." He expressed the opinion that there will be a shortage of livestock feed here next winter regardless of favorable rains which might come now.

Corn Putting Up "Fight"
Reed said corn is putting up a "wonderful fight against terrible odds." Most of the early corn has been cultivated twice and still looks good, he said.

But the bulk of the corn crop, said the federal meteorologist, has scarcely held its own against the onslaught of the drought. He believes a fair crop could still be harvested off replanted acres.

Reed said there was general injury to oats, barley, spring wheat and flax and he said large acreages of small grain are being turned under and sowed to soybeans in southern Iowa because of damage by chinch bugs.

Wires Washington
Meanwhile Bliss telegraphed Washington for the inclusion of Harrison county in the secondary emergency drought area. In Des Moines W. J. Albers, of the state emergency relief committee, and Paul C. Taff, assistant director of the extension service at Ames, conferred on the administration of relief work among farmers in the drought area.

A petition, signed by 1,500 Butter county farmers, was drafted seeking permission to plant fodder corn on contracted acres.

Nomination Confirmed
WASHINGTON (AP)—The nomination of Thomas C. Kasper as collector of internal revenue for South Dakota was confirmed today by the senate.

State Scholarship Leader Named To Head Another Field

Florence Green of Red Oak, for three years the "brightest of the bright" in the state scholarship contests at the University of Iowa, was chosen a leader in another field yesterday.

Miss Green was elected president of Page county 4-H girls at a rally in Shenandoah yesterday.

Other officers elected, according to the Associated Press, are: Catherine Custer of Norwich, vice president; Elaine Howard of Shenandoah, secretary-treasurer; and Dorothy Fischer of Shenandoah, historian.

61 Counties Carried By Dan Turner

Returns Show Former Governor Far In Lead

DES MOINES, June 6 (AP)—Former Gov. Dan Turner carried 51 of the state's 99 counties in winning the Republican nomination for governor, virtually complete returns from the primary election showed tonight.

His nearest rival for the nomination, Robert W. Colflesh of Des Moines, had the highest count in 32 counties while Clarence A. Knutson and Wallace M. Short each carried three.

Increases Margin
The clean-up of the unofficial returns, which accounted for all but a few scattered precincts, increased Turner's margin to 12,534 over Colflesh. Governor Clyde L. Herring won the Democratic nomination with little opposition.

Practically complete, the count stood at 123,847 for Turner, and 111,304 for Colflesh, while Knutson had 55,193 and Short 42,193. Turner's vote was 26.9 per cent of the total cast for the office.

No Material Changes
Tabulation of the late votes failed to effect any material change in the positions of the various candidates for Democratic and Republican nominations.

The six Democratic state officers below governor won renomination, four of them without primary opposition. Three Republican contests for state offices, lieutenant governor, secretary of agriculture and attorney general, were headed into convention when none of the candidates received the necessary 35 per cent of the total votes.

Nelson Has 34.4
Of these, the race for the secretary of agriculture teetered on the edge of the convention course. The leading candidate for the Republican nomination, Fred Nelson, had 34.4 per cent of the total vote.

The six Democrats and three Republicans who compose the Iowa congressional delegation were renominated. The only change which the later returns effected was to accord the Republican nomination in the fourth district to C. A. Benson of Elkader. King Palmer of West Union had the lead earlier.

Five Injured in Wreck
CARROLL, June 6 (AP)—Five persons were injured in an automobile accident two miles west of here today when the driver of their car endeavored to pass a truck and landed in the ditch.

Named Permanent President By Board; Three Important Decisions Before New Head

Wallace Says Drought May Bring Action

Tells Farmers Present Situation to Bring Future Planning

BISMARCK, N. D., June 6 (AP)—Secretary Wallace told farmers in the heart of the drought area tonight that "the severity of the present emergency may at last jolt us into action" on a long-range program of agricultural planning.

The present drought "does not give rise to fear of food shortage" because of enormous carryovers, he said in an address, but it does suggest "the necessity of future protection against crop failure in a continuous program of production control."

"Shall Hope For Best"
As far as the government's drought relief plans are concerned, he said, "we shall hope for the best, and prepare for the worst," adding that the present situation may be the end of a dry cycle of 26 years of subnormal rainfall which began in 1909 which is normally followed by 15 years of above normal rainfall.

"If history is going to repeat itself, this would be an ideal time for the process to begin," Wallace observed.

Relief of Humans
The first move in the drought aid program involves relief of human beings and the second the protection of property, principally livestock, he said. It will proceed along four lines: buying of surplus cattle, feeding of foundation herds, reduction of railroad freight rates, and use of government-contracted acreage for pasturing and forage.

"More Food"
"More food, more clothing, and more money, in so far as it is necessary, must and will be supplied," Wallace asserted. "If it is possible to find new opportunities for farm families whose crops have shriveled or blown away, those opportunities will be found."

To Prepare Budget
Institutions under the control of the state board of education are required by law to file estimated budgets by Aug. 1. Dean Gilmore said yesterday. The new president expects to have a schedule of budgetary recommendations for the next meeting of the board, which will probably be at Ames July 10.

The university is operating in the present biennial period under a reduced budget, yet with a favorable balance. What effect the expansion on the west campus will have was not indicated, but it will probably play an important part in the university's plans for the next two years. The requests for the next biennial budget will be presented to the state legislature when it meets next January, and the new budget will become operative July, 1935.

To Select Heads
Selection of administrative heads to fill several important university positions will form a second crucial question. Appointments in at least seven positions will face the new president.

Foremost will be the question of a successor to Prof. Edward H. Lauer, Iowa director of athletics, who resigned last Saturday to accept a position as dean of the college of liberal arts in the University of Washington.

With Professor Lauer leaving the university about Aug. 1, the appointment of his successor will probably be made at the July meeting of the board, and possible choices must soon be considered.

Seashore Successor
Within a year will come the question of a successor to Dean Carl E. Seashore as dean of the graduate college. Dean Seashore tendered his resignation to the board at its April meeting here. It was refused, and Dean Seashore agreed to continue for one year, only on condition that he would be relieved of his administrative duties at that time.

Dean Seashore has held his present position more than three decades, and his post will be an especially difficult one to fill.

The college of medicine has operated under a budget of $1,000,000. (Turn to page 3)

Navy to Get More Vessels

Swanson Approves Plan For Twenty-Four New Ships

WASHINGTON, June 6 (AP)—In the navy's first definite move toward treaty strength, Secretary Swanson today approved plans for the construction of 24 naval vessels.

Fourteen destroyers and six submarines, Swanson said, will be the first ships built under the Vinson plan to lay down by 1939 the 102 remaining fighting craft permitted by treaty.

They will be constructed with $40,000,000 of earmarked public works funds to be provided in the efficiency appropriation bill pending in the senate.

In addition, one heavy and three light cruisers will be built out of current appropriations from specifications approved today. Swanson said the navy hoped to open bids some time in August.

Asks Cooperation Of Faculty, Students, Iowa People

By TOM YOSELOFF (Managing Editor, The Daily Iowan)
Dean Eugene A. Gilmore of the college of law will step into the presidency of the University of Iowa July 1 in one of the most crucial—as well as promising—periods in the university's history.

Named acting president April 30, after George F. Zook, United States commissioner of education, had declined the Iowa position, Dean Gilmore was appointed permanent president yesterday morning in a surprise move by the board of education.

Notified Yesterday
George T. Baker of Davenport, president of the board, said that Dean Gilmore's appointment had been authorized at a special board meeting Tuesday night, after an all day session here. Why the board had chosen to delay its action until after its regular session had adjourned was not disclosed. Dean Gilmore said yesterday that he had had no indication of this action until he was notified yesterday morning.

President Gilmore will face three important questions when he takes office in three weeks. The question which will be uppermost is that of a new budget for the university.

"Most Beautiful"

Aubrey Hammond, English Illustrator, Says U.S. Women Prettiest in World

NEW YORK (AP)—Aubrey Hammond, English illustrator and designer of stage settings, considers American women the most beautiful in the world.

He likes their short, well shaped noses; their eyes spaced far apart; their long, shapely legs.

Hammond came to New York a few days ago to confer with theatrical interests and to refresh his recollection of Manhattan's feminine pulchritude.

Nowhere else, he insisted, do women have such attractive legs, such exciting grace, such interesting faces.

Why? "They dress smartly," he said. "They know how to achieve the most entrancing effects."

"It is difficult, you know, to discuss the topic for publication. The beauty of American women is not confined to superficialities. They are basically more attractive. "Not that I would disparage the women of my own country, you know."

Recalls Short Skirt Era

Aubrey Hammond is six and a half feet tall, with broad shoulders and a booming British voice. His illustrations in English magazines are popular, but he has concentrated his artistry of late on theatrical designing. He has done the scenery for various American productions including the recent success, "The Shining Hour."

He was here last about eight years ago.

"Women were wearing short skirts then," he sighed. "And rolled stockings." He indicated on his own sturdy right leg the approximate location of the roll. He preferred that fashion to the current vogue.

English women, Hammond continued, take their golf and tennis too energetically for the aesthetic good of their bodies.

"Their legs get knotty," he explained.

Pressed for further details, he shrugged his huge shoulders and made a quick sketch on the back of a menu. It showed thick ankles, large feet and bulging calves as the wages of exertion.

American women generally take their sports less seriously, he supposed.

Some Hollywood Beauties

Asked whether Hollywood contained striking examples of beauty, the artist replied "They're all beautiful—Kay Francis, Constance Bennett, Joan Bennett, Carole Lombard."

accurately judged, so that the garment may be properly cleaned. Not only do different types of cloth need varying methods of cleaning, but some garments, especially dresses, are easily ruined by the wrong treatment.

Taking out spots and stains is the greatest problem of the cleaner, for some spot remover liquids that act perfectly on one kind of cloth will permanently smudge or will even burn holes in another fabric.

That is why, comments Mr. Graham, Paris Cleaners takes extra care in the removal of spots and stains. But with all precautions, some errors occur.

Some of these accidents, in which dresses are spoiled, are a result of inferior materials. Dresses made from flimsy imitations are sometimes sold as silk, and these will occasionally fall to pieces or actually dissolve when cleaned.

One example of a fabric which troubles cleaners is that of celanese. Chloroform, used to remove certain stains from many materials, will eat right through this cloth, so that if a dress contains even a few threads of celanese it may be spoiled.

In order to safeguard their customers' apparel, Paris Cleaners always keeps one man busy examining all materials so that the right cleaning methods are applied.

If this extra care was not provided for customers of the establishment, many garments would be ruined. But, with due precaution taken, there are very few cases where this happens.

SMITH & BURGER Well Equipped to Handle Estimating, Planning, and Construction Work. Combining training in actual building work and in estimating and planning construction, Smith and Burger, contractors, are well equipped to handle almost any type of work in their line. Frank Burger, who is a partner of Herman Smith, is an experienced carpenter and personally supervises all construction work. Mr. Smith has designed approximately 300 homes since the firm was started in 1929, and his ability was recently recognized by the "American Builder," trade magazine published in Chicago, Ill.

A picture of an Iowa City home in the process of construction forms the front cover of the May issue of this magazine, which describes the residence in an article. A portion of the story, written by Joseph Mason, who gives a general review of building throughout the Middle West, is as follows:

"An active contracting firm is that of Smith and Burger at Iowa City. They have been building houses right along through the depression. I visited Mr. Burger out on a $7,000 job on Lexington avenue. This house is illustrated on our front cover, and is of sturdy frame construction, concrete foundation, Celotex plaster base, brick veneer exterior, seven rooms, and bath."

The partners expect a general improvement in the contracting business in the near future, especially if the federal home building and modernization program gets under way as expected.

Many homes, they believe, need improvements and repairs, and this need has increased by the years of depression in which such work has been below normal. Homes can be completely remodeled for surprisingly low costs, they point out.

Several Iowa Citizens, according to Mr. Smith, are waiting to build new residences as soon as they can get assistance from the national administration. Persons thinking of home construction can get estimates and a variety of modern building plans by conferring with Mr. Smith.

The firm is able to do almost any kind of construction work, from plastering to painting. Approximately 30 men are employed at the present time, although the number fluctuates widely according to building demands.

An example of Smith and Burger work is the Lambert apartments on Woolf avenue, one of the larger pieces of construction work that they have built locally.

The Smith and Burger of-office is at 228 E. College street.

Says Hartzell Unfairly Tried In Fraud Case

Sioux City Attorney Files Brief At St. Paul

ST. PAUL, June 6 (AP)—A 345-page brief, contending Oscar M. Hartzell, one-time Iowa farmer, was unfairly tried and convicted of mail fraud in connection with the mythical Sir Francis Drake estate, was filed in United States circuit court of appeals here today.

Statements that the government failed to prove Hartzell guilty and that the indictment was "a fabrication of Mother Hubbard phrases and shot gun clauses" were included in the appeal presented by Carlos W. Goltz, Sioux City, Ia., attorney, against Hartzell's conviction last Nov. 15, by a federal court jury.

Under Prison Term
Hartzell is under a 10 year prison sentence and a fine of $2,000 as a result of the trial in Sioux City in which the defendant was convicted of using United States mails to defraud.

D. C. Browning of Sioux City, assistant United States attorney general, filed a 116-page brief, containing contentions the government proved its case, and will appear before the court tomorrow to present the government's case.

Replete With Errors
In his brief, Goltz asserted Hartzell's trial was replete with errors: that the government failed to show Hartzell made, as was charged, false statements concerning the estate of the English sea rover, and that the defendant was in England during the alleged promotion of the estate, and therefore was not under jurisdiction of American laws.

In support of his contention that Hartzell did not have a fair trial, Goltz said one prospective juror said he considered the Drake estate promotion as "nothing but a damned scheme," while another observed he "considered it (the scheme) a hoax and it would take considerable evidence to remove the conviction from his mind."

Goltz asserted Federal Judge George C. Scott, who presided at the trial, erred for failing to admonish other jurors to disregard the comments of the two prospective falsemen.

"Congenital cystic disease of the lung" was the subject of the paper read by Dr. Gibbon and Dr. Ernst Freund lead the discussion.

ated under an interim administrative committee of three faculty members, headed by Dr. J. T. McClintock, since the resignation of Dean Henry Houghton last year. What action will be taken toward a permanent arrangement has not been indicated, and the new president must face this decision.

May Select New Dean
Though Dean Gilmore has indicated that he will continue as head of the college of law for some time at least, it is expected that a new appointment will be made. President Baker said that the new executive "might have some recommendations at the July meeting" toward the solution of this question.

President Gilmore will be faced with the problem of selecting permanent heads in at least two liberal arts departments soon. One of these has been operating under an acting head.

The university libraries, also, have been operating under an acting director, Grace Van Wormer having held this post since the former director, Milton Lord, left the university to accept a library position in Boston, Mass.

To Complete Expansion
With the monuments of President Walter A. Jessup's administration—in the form of many new buildings—as a challenge, President Gilmore will have before him the task of completing the new program of expansion begun under President Jessup's regime.

In at least two instances President Gilmore's ability in this direction will face a test soon. A new building to house the university general library has been considered one of the most urgently needed buildings on the campus for many years. Plans have been underway for such a structure for more than six years, but funds have not been available.

President Jessup has said that his greatest disappointment is the fact that he must leave the Iowa campus without a new library building.

Theater Project
The second building project, already underway with limited funds, is the new University theater building on the west bank of Iowa river. Plans have been made to construct one of the best equipped theaters in the United States, with many of the latest developments in experimental stagecraft devices, but funds are available for the completion of only a part of the proposed building.

The newly elected president faced the highest position in the university yesterday morning "fully conscious of the high standard" set by his predecessor and with a determination to "carry on in keeping with the traditions and spirit of this great university."

He indicated that for the time being at least, he did not plan to make any unnecessary changes in administration, and promised to "maintain the present cooperation between the three Iowa colleges un-

Child Prodigies— Where Do They Go?

THE ANNUAL state scholarship contest which was recently concluded here has once again presented to the state its host of child prodigies—the shining lights who flicker for a moment in the public view.

One young lady has demonstrated for several years her intellectual excellence in several academic subjects; a boy has shown himself superior in three subjects.

Which raises the interesting question: What happens to the child prodigies? With a little thought one may recall the boy of 11 who entered an eastern university a few years ago, or the girl of 17 who received a master's degree.

For a day their fame is widespread. They become the subjects of newspaper publicity, newsreels, and newspaper pictures. Then they disappear from the limelight, and as far as the public is concerned, are no more.

In few instances have they become the great men and women of the nation. Several cases might be cited—such as President Roosevelt's young Harvard "brain-truster"—but they are so few that they cause hardly a public flicker of interest.

One wonders if too much stress has not been placed upon academic pursuit in elementary and high schools. Can it be that these students, showing such high intellectual promise in their youth, find their training unsuited to the more varied battle of life into which they are thrown?

Perhaps, as one school of psychology contends, man's intelligence is composed of three factors—academic, mechanical, and social intelligence. Is it true that the schools have cultivated one at the expense of the other two?

One can hardly deny the importance of academic instruction. But the disappearance of brilliant children into the limbo of forgotten men seems to indicate that something has gone wrong. While their minds were being developed, the other factors which might have made for better social adjustment have perhaps been neglected.

Prohibition After Six Months

AFTER six months of legal liquor, the United States is beginning to see the wheel turn again. Less than a year ago the hue and cry was repeal; today the dry advocates are again beginning their attack on liquor.

F. Scott McBride formally opened a new battle in New York city, when he issued a challenge to do away with the "cocktail hour," which he has assured the nation is more vicious by far to young women than the saloon treating habit was to young men in the old days of the nickel plate railing and the cuspidor.

The history of drinking in the United States has been like that—a series of turns of the wheel, with liquor in favor at one turn and prohibition the hue at the next turn.

In Iowa this cycle has been completed no less than three times. Beginning just a few years after the state was admitted to the union, the prohibition-legal liquor wheel has passed through the various degrees of open and free sale, local option, state prohibition, national prohibition, constitutional amendment, state owned liquor store, and several variations of each.

Experiences in many of the other states have been very similar. In all of them legislation to control liquor sales has been short lived and unsatisfactory.

So it is not surprising that Mr. McBride's attack upon the "cocktail hour" should start a new anti-liquor crusade. At each turn of the wheel there must be a new motivating force.

Once it was the sale of liquor to the Indians which formed the basis for a minor crusade; back in the well known "mauve" period the open saloon, in its effect upon the young man and the wage earner, made the battle-cry; during the recently deceased prohibitory period the "speakeasy" was the subject of attack; now it is the cocktail hour, most fashionable and respectable of all the liquor drinking customs.

Facts and figures have already been made available by Mr. McBride's group. They show that accidents have increased, more liquor is being consumed, and so on—the well known lines of attack.

So, while most of America stands at the side lines, the wheel begins to turn once again and the battle is again on.

What Others Think

Extending Extension (From the Christian Science Monitor)

Despite the jesters who poke fun at correspondence courses, such courses are increasing. Their popularity with the American public was demonstrated at the recent meeting of the National University Extension association when it was revealed that new courses will enable the average citizen to re-orient himself in the new political and economic world. Adults taking these courses are not only studying the framework of the New Deal from AAA to ZZZ, but getting an insight into its import to them. Such instruction should pay large dividends in individual enlightenment and satisfaction and promote more intelligent citizen participation in government.

Other courses will guide the average man in making better use of the new leisure which recent changes have brought. Vocational guidance has been recognized as an important factor in education, industry and the professions. Now, apparently, a similar opportunity for usefulness is opening to avocational guidance. If anything like the present leisure becomes a fixture in American life, such guidance will be needed. To be sure, courses in avocational guidance may draw gibes from those who see them only as fads and frills. Yet if life is something more than making a living, one man's frill may be another man's essential. If a planned economy is desirable, planned lives and planned living may well accompany it.

The American Association for Adult Education, too, has adopted resolutions that more attention be given to training of leaders and teachers in the field of adult education, and urging more serious attention to "what are the sound bases on which adult education may rest as a sound and cultural revelation of our civilization."

All these developments indicate that the movies and radio have not completely captured the popular mind and diverted it wholly to entertainment. Both the radio and the motion pictures might well become allies of extension work. Extending extension is a salutary development and ought to use some good channels now too largely wasted.

GOOD MORNING

Some time ago it was predicted in this column that no possible good could come of the Johnson bill closing the channels of credit to nations in default on their war debts.

One begins to perceive now, however, that perhaps the settlement of the vexing debt problem will depend upon some drastic stimulation of this kind. No credit for this would be due Senator Johnson, however, for if there are in the end any good results they will have been in spite of him and against his wishes.

There is no use fooling ourselves about war debts. The greatest share of them never will be paid, and as long as there is a legitimate difference of opinion as to whether they should be paid it will benefit no one to allow them to be too perturbing.

The foreign reaction to the Johnson bill has been sufficiently bitter to justify the prediction that the net result will be a showdown within the next year or so, and possibly complete repudiation.

Great Britain's resentment of the bill is easily understood in view of the fact that repeated assurances had been given that a token payment would be acceptable in June. Subsequent indication that token payments would be classed as defaults riled the British temper.

In the face of these developments, the decision of the chancellor of the exchequer to suspend payments entirely "until President Roosevelt is ready to discuss settlement of the whole problem" is understandable.

The nation will watch with interest the hearings now being conducted by a special house committee into propaganda activities of the German government in the United States.

Information placed before the committee Tuesday showed that the German consul general in New York has paid $4,000 to a New York promotion firm to obtain publicity of anti-Semitic statements in this country.

It would be interesting to know what connection, if any, there might be between these activities of German agents in this country, and the persons responsible for the campaign of sidewalk propaganda on the Iowa campus this spring.

Ten million dollars is a lot of money, and could profitably be spent in scores of ways, but it is unfortunate that the house failed to approve an appropriation for an unemployment and farming census.

Figures on unemployment and the condition of farmers are so muddled and so varied that one hardly knows what to believe. The American Federation of Labor insists that there still are between 10 and 11 million men out of work, while other agencies are just as certain that the facts are both less and more discouraging. It would be well to know what figures are reliable before the political air becomes too heated in the coming campaign. —Don Fryor

Behind The Scenes

in HOLLYWOOD

By Harrison Carroll

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. — The happiest man in Hollywood is Will Rogers, taking a vacation from the screen in "Ah, Wilderness" at El Capitan theater here. Fifteen years ago on Broadway, Will used to go into a little corned-beef sandwich place after his rope act in the "Follies" and wish they'd write him into the plot of the show, the way they did his pal, Fred Stone, across the street.

Added to the satisfaction of that ambition, he is reveling in playing scenes the way he wants to, he told me.

"Take the little character touches in this play," he draws, "you wouldn't get to do them in pictures. Those people out at the studios say anything that doesn't advance the plot don't belong. I'd like to play all my pictures the way I do this play."

"Some one who sees a 100 pictures to one stage play might think a show like this drags. But I like to act human stuff the way O'Neill has written it in there. And make no mistake that man knew right off what he was writing. He makes the characters talk like real folk. I took my two boys to see the play and they liked it."

Will confesses his two biggest thrills came when Norma Shearer congratulated him for his timing in a speech at the annual Academy awards and when Blanche Bates said the same thing about his performance of the O'Neill role in San Francisco.

After his run in San Francisco and two weeks here with extra matinees, he is still excited about the role. That third act scene, where he tells the boy about the facts of life, is his favorite.

"I'm a sort of sentimental fellow and the situation gets into my hide every time I play it," he said bashfully.

Although he gave up his trip to Russia and is having the time of his life doing this show, he's going right back to his pictures when the run ends. There are three stories already lined up for him.

He yearns to do satire again on the screen, of the type of "Two Wagons, Both Covered," which he thinks was the best of them all.

His curtain speeches are still consulting the audiences at every show. The other night, he twitted the critics for not noticing he wore long underwear for the role.

"I wear this garment," he said, pulling up a trouser's leg, "for art's sake. That's my only addition to the play. The rest is O'Neill's. But after scratching for six weeks no one notices it. If Belasco had put that in a show, they would have called it a stroke of genius."

Who own the 12 most valuable voices in Hollywood? The question is answered by Oliver Himsdale of M-G-M's dramatic school.

Here is his list: George Arliss, Lionel Barrymore, Clark Gable, Greta Garbo, Ann Harding, Katharine Hepburn, Herbert Marshall, Robert Montgomery, May Robson, Norma Shearer, Pete Smith and Lewis Stone.

May Robson's voice reminds him of a "wind-blown wheatfield." Ann Harding suggests "starved lines." Hepburn has "the beauty of sun on the snow." Robert Montgomery's is a "good time" voice. Norma Shearer's is "ermine and satin."

Bruce Cabot and Adrienne Ames, in from Pebble Beach, bring back with them a ring inscribed with his real name: Jacques Debutjac. He lost it five years ago in a French seaport while working his way on a tramp steamer. The finder had sent it to his Carlisbad, N. M., home address.

Science Races Against Time, "Floods" to Save Aztec Relics In Tennessee Valley Region

By F. B. COLTON (Associated Press Science Writer)

MUSCLE SHOALS, Ala. (AP)—Scientists are doing in the Tennessee valley what they wish had been done in fabled Atlantis—rescuing for posterity a few relics of a past civilization.

Soon the waters of new lakes, rising behind dams in the Tennessee valley, will guarantee undisturbed forever the sleep of prehistoric warriors who once roamed the south, but not before a few mementoes of their ancient cultures have been snatched from the path of the advancing waves.

Several hundred sites of prehistoric villages, mounds, caves and other centers where Indian populations once teemed will be covered by the lakes. Archaeologists, therefore, are excavating representative sites to preserve typical remains of these ancient peoples, since time is lacking to investigate all.

Already they have probed into shell heaps built to enormous proportions by Indian generations who ate fresh-water mussels for a thousand years. Some of these heaps contain millions of tons of mussel shells, bones and many tools and other relics. In some of the graves of chiefs literally bushels of fresh-water pearls have been found, believed now valueless except for their historic interest.

Two groups of ancient peoples once lived in this area, archaeologists believe. The oldest known lived long before historic times, were the most skillful carvers of stone pipes and other objects among all the American Indians, traded with shells and buried their dead in stone-lined graves.

One curious custom unearthed in the Tennessee valley was that of enclosing the heads of dead children in large conch-shells brought north from the Gulf of Mexico.

After these ancient, but unnamed people, the region was inhabited by the Cherokee Indians who are believed to have migrated from further west, and they lived there when the first white explorers arrived. Some of the older village sites are believed to date back to the time when the bow and arrow had not been invented and the chief weapon was a dart given strong momentum by a "throwing stick."

The Cherokees built their houses by setting poles upright in the earth close together and weaving rushes between them, plastered with clay. Although the poles long since have rotted away, archaeologists have found the old post holes and from them can gauge the sizes and shapes of the houses.

Major W. S. Webb of the University of Kentucky is supervising the archaeological work in the Tennessee valley area. Relics are being sent to the University of Tennessee, Alabama, Kentucky and Michigan.

Bride Confesses Killing

Hitch-Hiker Blocks Road

BEND, Ore., June 6 (AP)—Angered, police said, because passing motorists would not give him a "lift," Fred Ott, a hitch-hiker, barricaded the Dalles-California highway north of Bend with boulders last night. He finally got a ride to the Deschutes county jail, with Sheriff Claude MacCauley.

Announce Complete Program of Child Welfare Conference

11 Speakers Scheduled For Eighth Annual Affair; "New Deal" Aspects General Topic

George F. Zook Will Deliver Main Address

The complete program of addresses, discussion, and demonstration of the eighth annual Iowa conference on child development and parent education here June 19 to 21 was announced yesterday by the extension division.

Eleven speakers have been scheduled for the three day meeting, which will be on the general topic of the educational aspects of the "new deal." About 700 persons are expected to attend the various sessions of the conference.

Jessup to Open Meeting

The morning session of the first day will be in the senate chamber of Old Capitol. Following an address of welcome by President Walter A. Jessup of the University of Iowa, William E. Blatz, director of the St. George's School for Child Study, Toronto, Can., will address the group on "Human needs and how they are satisfied."

A second lecture of the morning session will be by Prof. Paul H. Douglas of the University of Chicago, on "The impact of modern economic changes upon the family." Prof. May Pardee Youtz of the Iowa Child Welfare Research station will preside.

Two Discussions

In the afternoon, two round table discussions will consider the two subjects of the morning addresses. They will be led by Mr. Blatz and Professor Douglas.

Following these discussions two tours of the preschool laboratories will be made, starting from conference headquarters. Tea will be served at the laboratories to the visitors.

The evening session, in chemistry auditorium, will be presided over by Bruce E. Mahan, director of the extension division. An address by Professor Douglas, on "How is the new deal affecting the American family," will be broadcast over station WSUI.

Mae Habenicht to Preside

Two round table discussions, in addition to a general session, will make up the program for the second morning of the conference. Mae Habenicht, superintendent of the bureau of child welfare of the board of control of state institutions, will preside over the general session.

Dean David M. Trout of Hillsdale college, Hillsdale, Mich., will speak on "How the child becomes religious," and Mr. Blatz will discuss "The importance of failure." Following the general session, both men will lead round table discussions on their subjects in the house and senate chambers of Old Capitol.

Luncheon

A luncheon for leaders of child study groups will be held on the sun porch of Iowa Union at 12:15 p.m. Mrs. Hazel S. Schaus of the Iowa Child Welfare Research station will preside. Professor Youtz will speak on "The leader and her group," and Prof. Ralph H. Ojemann of the Iowa Child Welfare Research station will discuss "Research materials available for leaders."

department here, will speak on "Implications for family life."

A tour similar to the first day's will be conducted, and a sound film program on "The stages of child growth" will be shown in chemistry auditorium.

Zook to Speak

George F. Zook, retiring United States commissioner of education, will deliver the main address of the conference at a dinner in the Iowa Union in the evening of the second day. With Prof. George D. Stoddard, director of the Iowa Child Welfare Research station, presiding, Commissioner Zook will speak on "The child in our educational crisis."

Two general sessions in chemistry auditorium and three round table discussions will make up the final day's program.

Dean Trout to Appear

Thomas F. Vance of the psychology and child development departments of Iowa State college will preside over the morning session. Dean Trout will speak on "Guiding the religious development of the child" and Edna N. White, director of the Merrill-Palmer school of Detroit, Mich., will speak on "Parent education in the emergency."

Edmonds Chairman

In the final session that afternoon T. J. Edmonds, executive secretary of the Iowa Tuberculosis Association, will serve as chairman. Dean Trout will discuss "Character through religious control," and Mr. Blatz will consider the subject of his morning round table.

The Iowa conference on child development and parent education is the largest conference of its kind at the university each year, attracting more than 700 men and women annually. It is under the auspices of the Iowa State Council for Child Study and Parent Education, composed of 18 state organizations including the University of Iowa extension division and the Iowa Child Welfare Research station.

Some historians say James Robert Adair, an Irish nobleman who was buried near Rowland, N. C., in pioneer days, was the inspiration for Lady Caroline Keppel's ballad, "Robin Adair."

SPEAKER ON CONFERENCE PROGRAM

George F. Zook, United States commissioner of education, who will deliver the main address on the program of the eighth Iowa conference on child development and parent education, as he looked upon his recent arrival in Iowa City with Mrs. Zook. The retiring commissioner was offered the Iowa presidency in April.

Washington Bystander

WASHINGTON—White House action in promptly knocking flat the most recent rumors that General Johnson of NRA was about to be shelved for someone with less "crack down" complex seemed to stimulate the general's vocabulary—not that it needed it much.

He came out of a one-day hospitalization for teeth and sinus overhauling with attack on former Secretary Ogden Mills. And Mills, incidentally, has achieved the distinction of personifying in the eyes of most administration leutenants the whole attack from the conservative Republican front on the Roosevelt new deal.

During the presidential campaign, Mr. Roosevelt refused to enter direct debates with anyone except his rival, President Hoover. He ignored Mills, chief Hoover campaigner, so far as mentioning his name went.

Quite likely Mills, now assumed to be a candidate for presidential nomination himself, will subject General Johnson to similar treatment. It is good political strategy.

While Johnson was responding to the White House vote on confidence so promptly, however, he might have over-looked something else of conceivable significance in the newspapers. It was a quotation from Professor Ray Moley's latest editorial comment on NRA and its future.

As a one-time leading figure in the Roosevelt "brain trust," Moley may have more than his own opinions behind his statements. He still is understood to be a rather close-up administration man, and it happened that what he has to say now as to essential changes in the NRA structure coincides with the notion many onlookers have about what President Roosevelt may be planning.

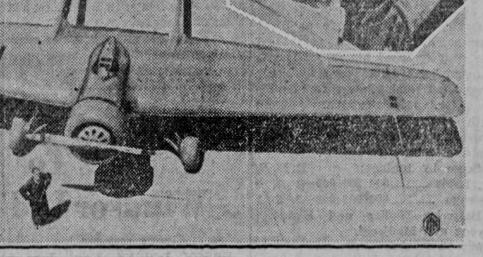

Moley suggests abolishment of some codes and the revamping of others by a "negotiation" process. That is in process, although the Moley phrase of "quiet negotiation" hardly applies to the steel and textile code rows.

Beyond that, however, Moley suggests a "federal industrial commission" absorbing the federal trade commission and the permanent administrative functions of NRA, to take charge of the whole code job.

When the White House surrendered its preference for the trade commission as stock exchange control administrator it looked as if this ultimate idea of an industrial commission, paralleling the interstate commerce commission might be under consideration.

PLANNING ATTACK ON POST'S GLOBE RECORD

Here is the powerful plane, "Flying Wing" in which Lieutenant Murray B. Dilley (inset), army reserve flier, will attempt to better the round-the-world record of Wiley Post. The plane, now at Oakland, Cal., is being groomed for a dash around the globe in four and one-half days. Post's record is seven days 18 hours and 56 minutes. Lieut. Dilley plans to make Melbourne, Australia, his starting point.

S.U.I. Grads To Take State Examinations

Colleges of Pharmacy, Medicine, Law To Give Exams

State examinations in three professional colleges of the University of Iowa will occupy the attention of recent graduates for the next week. About 300 June and February graduates will take the examinations in medicine, pharmacy, and law.

Examinations by the state pharmacy board began yesterday and will be continued today. A total of 21 students are taking examinations, required for pharmaceutical work in the state, Dean Wilber J. Teeters of the college of pharmacy said last night.

Four in Iowa City

Four members of the state pharmacy board are in Iowa City to administer the examinations.

The state board of medical examiners is administering tests to about 70 University of Iowa graduates of the college of medicine and 10 medical graduates from other institutions who are seeking the state certificate.

Law Examinations

Examinations for certification for legal practice in Iowa will be administered next Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, it was announced last night at the college of law office.

Though no figures are available on the number of law graduates who will take the examination, it is expected that about 100 will be on hand. The majority of these will probably be University of Iowa graduates.

Convicts Get Time Off Paying Lifers To Help Mine Coal

TOPEKA, Kan., June 6 (AP)—Even confinement in the state penitentiary does not stifle the business instinct in the prisoners.

Convicts who mine more than a stipulated amount of coal are given time off on their sentences. When some of them began putting out big coal piles to be chucked up to their credit, prison officials investigated and found they had been paying life termers who had no hope of a parole to supply them with their output.

Currency used was credit slips issued by the prison commissary.

The first pastor of the Second Presbyterian church in Charleston, S. C., founded 123 years ago, opposed the organization of a Sunday school on grounds that it was "too secular."

French Designer Says White Now Taboo for Brides

HOLLYWOOD, June 6 (AP)—In a tip to June brides, Rene Hubert, French designer who heads a large film studio wardrobe department here, said Wednesday white bridal costumes are no longer the thing.

"To be up to the minute summer brides must wear pink, soft pink in chiffon or organdie," he said. Bridal veils, also, are of soft pink tulle and the flowers used for decorative purposes are fashioned from the dress fabric.

Skirts are to take on more fullness this summer and the bridal skirts will be no exception to the mode.

Elect George Judisch To Honor Group

George Judisch of Ames, a member of the state pharmacy board, was initiated as an honorary member of Rho Chi, national honor pharmaceutical society, Tuesday night at Iowa Union.

Mr. Judisch is one of three men to receive such membership in the United States in the last year. The others were H. A. B. Dunning of Baltimore, Md., and Dean C. B. Jordan of Purdue university college of pharmacy.

Candidates for honorary membership are proposed by the executive council, and must be approved by the 21 chapters in the country. The chapter originally proposing the name of a successful candidate initiates him.

Following Tuesday's initiation, dinner was served in the private dining room of the Union. Other members of the state board who attended the dinner are: George W. Gillman of Ft. Dodge, president; John Weber of Cascade, and Walter F. Meads of Des Moines, secretary.

Set Date Of Assembly For Next Thursday

The only official gathering of the summer session student body—the annual summer session assembly—has been scheduled for next Thursday at 11 a.m., the summer session office announced yesterday.

President Walter A. Jessup will address the meeting, which will be in Macbride hall auditorium. This will be the last of these assemblies over which he will preside.

The traditional program for the summer meeting includes several musical numbers by students of the music department, and a short dramatic program under the direction of a faculty member of the school of religion.

All classes will be suspended the hour of the assembly, it was announced.

ABOUT SPORTS

Mile of Century... Four Minute Mile... It Can Be Done... Four Crack Distance Runners... Attempt Set for June 16

BY JACK GURWELL. A FOUR minute mile. No less than 10 years ago experts were agreed that no human could possibly negotiate a mile in four minutes.

IN 1930 Ralph Hill, running in a meet in Oregon, clipped off the mile in 4:12.4 and hung up the fastest outdoor mile in American history.

BUT RIGHT now, in competition, are runners who have bettered the 4:10 mile. Glenn Cunningham, Kansas Cyclone, is perhaps the more famous because of his consistent wins over the country's best.

PLANS NOW call for a meeting of the world's greatest in attempt to run the "Mile of the Century." Luigi Beccali of Italy, winner of the 1,500 meter "Olympic mile" at the 1932 games at Los Angeles, Glenn Cunningham, Bill Bonthron, Princeton ace, and Gene Venzke of Pennsylvania were scheduled to meet at Princeton June 16 for the attempt.

TWO OF THE three left, Cunningham and Bonthron, are capable of running a mile in 4 minutes. Venzke can push them to a mark. But there is one thing wrong in the set up. In the race at Princeton, Cunningham and Bonthron will probably hang back, content to let Venzke set the pace, which will not be fast enough to break the mark.

Free Hitting Contest Sees Iowa Lose 8th

Blackman Gets Four Hits in 5 Times At Plate

KALAMAZOO, Mich., June 6 (Special)—University of Iowa's traveling baseball team met their second setback of their seven game tour through Michigan here today in a free hitting contest, 8 to 2, to Western State Teachers.

Jerry Newman, sensational sophomore third baseman, contributed two hits out of five times at the plate, one a home run. His playing was instrumental in handing the Teachers their fourteenth victory in 15 games this season.

Gene Ford, newly elected to lead the 1935 Hawkeye nine, opposed Lefty Brandt, who won his ninth game today. Both hurlers were combed freely for hits, Western State Teachers getting 13 to Iowa's 10.

The victors took the lead in the first inning with one run. They put across three in the second before Iowa rallied in the first of the third to run in their two tallies.

Brandt struck out six Hawkeye batters to Ford's four. Harry Frohwein will take the mound tomorrow for the Hawkeyes.

Following tomorrow's contest the Iowans close their road tour with a two day stand against Michigan Normal at East Lansing.

Browns Win 3 to 2 Game Over Chisox

Zeke Bonura Makes First Error Of Major Career

CHICAGO, June 6 (AP)—Scoring all their runs in the fourth inning as a result of two White Sox infield errors, DeBarms' single and Rolie Hemslry's double, the St. Louis Browns edged out the Chicagoans, 3 to 2, today, to take the lead in the series two games to one.

Ted Lyons went the route for the sixth time in as many starts hits, one less than his mates got off Irving Hadley. In addition Lyons drove in both Chicago runs with a sharp single to center with the bases filled in the sixth inning.

Joe Chamberlin, subbing at short for the injured Luke Appling, paved the way for the Browns' three unearned runs in the fourth when he made a two base wild throw on Sam West's grounder.

At any rate, ballyhoo or serious, the question will be argued at the commission offices Friday. Bill Brown, one commissioner, will examine Baer tomorrow and he says if the challenger isn't fit the fight must be postponed a week.

Epsom Derby Win Goes To Windsor Lad

EPSON DOWNS, Eng., June 6 (AP)—Amid tense silence that testified to the disappointment of the multitude of spectators, Windsor Lad, flying the silks of the Indian potentate, the Maharaja of Rajpipla, ran the legs off the wonder horse, Colombo, in the last uphill furlong to win the 151st Epsom derby today.

The entire royal family and perhaps a half-million subjects of His Majesty, King George, saw the hitherto unbeaten Lord Glanely's Colombo, favorite at 11 to 8, move up and make his challenge in dramatic fashion in the final straightaway only to falter before Windsor Lad's closing burst of speed.

Lord Woolavington's Easton, purchased only a few days ago for $75,000 from Ralph Strassburger of Philadelphia, finished under a whip drive to nip the fading Colombo by a neck. Windsor Lad, held at 15 to 2 in the wagering was a length in front of Easton, a 100 to 9 shot.

Under Charley Smirke's well judged ride, the aptly named Windsor, an Irish-bred son of Blandford, ran the one and one-half miles over sun-baked turf in 2:34 to equal the record made by Hyperion 11 year.

But the athletes were ready to compete and with approval of their school, decided to hitch hike to the meet. Graham Moulton, star hurdler, arrived here today and worked out in the Marquette stadium, Capt. Sidney Dean, quartermiller; Mark Panther, Western conference javelin thrower, and others are expected tomorrow.

Iowa's return to the Central marked the entry of the fifth Big Ten school, Indiana, Wisconsin, Purdue, and Chicago already having filed. Thirty-seven schools in all are entered.

Manager Calls For Extension Until June 21

Hoffman's Request Gets Uproar From Box Office, Carnera

By EDWARD J. NEIL (Associated Press Sports Writer) NEW YORK, June 6—Genuine worry over Max Baer's physical condition—or a neat bit of ballyhoo—caused the handlers of the challenger for Primo Carnera's heavyweight title to proclaim today the necessity for a week's postponement of the original date set for June 14.

Down in Asbury Park, N. J., where the night club nabob has been puffing and hauling through his workouts, Anell Hoffman, his manager, and Jack Dempsey, his adviser, took a long look and decided Max couldn't possibly be ready for the 15 round duel in Madison Square Garden bowl one week from tomorrow night.

"If I were Hoffman I'd ask for a postponement," said Dempsey critically, "so as to have the young man in perfect shape. He has seven days left to work and that's not enough. I think he'll come through all right and be the Baer that knocked off Schmelling but it will require plenty of hard work, Carnera is a Baer isn't it."

Hoffman thought that over for a while and then announced that he'd appear at the New York state athletic commission Friday to ask the postponement. His words touched off an immediate explosion on two other main fronts—the Garden offices in New York and Carnera's training camp at Pompton Lakes, N. J.

"I refuse to consent to any postponement," Carnera fumed. "There will be a fight June 14 or not at all."

"We couldn't postpone it now," said Col. John R. Kilpatrick, president of the Garden. "Too many people have made their arrangements to come here for the fight. It may just be ballyhoo."

Jimmy Johnston, manager of boxing at the Garden, frothed and swore.

"It's a larcenous trick on the part of the Baer people," he said. "We'll object and object strenuously to any postponement. They've got an idea that if they can hold off another week Carnera will go stale and they'll get that title. Baer's been training six weeks tomorrow. He's in shape."

For several days Carnera's worry with Boston today put the Tigers in the lead in the American league.

Split Double Header With Red Sox As Detroit Wins

DETROIT, June 6 (AP)—A solitary hit off the bat of Charlie Gehringer in the sixth inning plus some unfortunate passes issued by Bob Weiland, gave the Detroit Tigers a 2 to 1 victory over the Cleveland Indians today.

The defeat of the Yankees in the second game of their double header with Boston today put the Tigers in the lead in the American league.

Hurling Dual

With both sides in a scoreless tie and a nice pitching duel developing between Weiland and Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe, the sixth inning opened with Fox grounding out.

Goslin, the next man up, walked and stole second. Walker also was passed and then Gehringer came through with his single to score Goslin. Rogell forced Gehringer at second and Walker scored the deciding run on the play.

Although he was charged with the defeat, Weiland had the satisfaction of holding Goslin hitless during the seven innings he pitched. Today's game was the first of 30 consecutive contests in which the Tiger left fielder has failed to hit safely.

Lone Score

The lone Indian score was chalked up in the eighth after Trosky had struck out, Burnett and Myatt singled with Hale pinch-hitting for Moore and rapping out a onebagger to bring in Burnett.

With the exception of the eighth inning all of Cleveland's hits were far too scattered to be of much use. Typical of the hard luck encountered by the Indian batters was the second inning when Trosky singled and then saw Hayworth and Gehringer work a double play to retire the side.

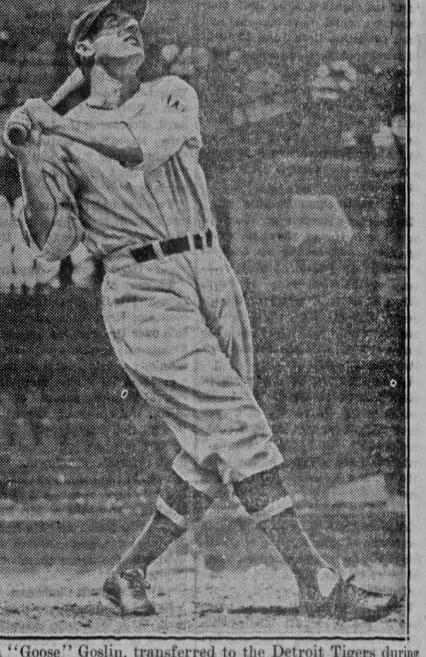

The Indians touched the School boy for six hits. Mel Harder succeeded Weiland on the mound in the eighth and finished the game.

Score by innings: R. H. E. Cleveland 000 000 010-1 6 0 Detroit 000 002 000-2 1 1 Batteries—Weiland, Harder and Myatt; Rowe and Hayworth.

On the result of the derby at Epsom Downs today will go to the United States. Statisticians went to work within minutes after Windsor had thundered under the wire and announced that $1,901,854 would go to holders of tickets in the United States.

There were four American tickets on Windsor Lad and the holders of each ticket will get $151,200. On Easton, the second horse, there were likewise four American tickets, each of which will pay $75,600. Two tickets on Colombo, which showed third, fell to holders in the United States and each of these pays $50.

Detroit Defeats Indians, 2-1, To Lead American League

Yanks Fall in 2nd of Twin Bill to Give Tigers Lead

DETROIT, June 6 (AP)—A solitary hit off the bat of Charlie Gehringer in the sixth inning plus some unfortunate passes issued by Bob Weiland, gave the Detroit Tigers a 2 to 1 victory over the Cleveland Indians today.

The defeat of the Yankees in the second game of their double header with Boston today put the Tigers in the lead in the American league.

Yanks Slide From First

BOSTON, June 6 (AP)—The Yankees slid out of first place in the American league today by splitting a double header with the Boston Red Sox. The Detroit Tigers, by beating Cleveland, took the lead.

The Yanks had a field day in the first game, hitting Lefty Bob Grove and Henry Johnson safely 55 times to win 15 to 7, but dropped the nightcap, 7 to 4, when the Sox rallied for four runs in the eighth.

Meryl Hoag, subbing for Babe Ruth, who took a day off, hit six straight singles in the first game.

A sudden storm in the eighth inning of the second game halted activities for 15 minutes, cooled off Gimnes, who had just relieved Red Ruffner after Bob Johnson and Carl Reynolds had singled, and sharpened Dick Porter's batting eye to the proper pitch. When play resumed Porter tripled, and scored later on Larry's fly. One run was in when Gimnes took over.

First game: New York 151 122 210-15 25 9 Boston 000 001 200-3 1 3 Batteries—Murphy and Jorgens; Grove, H. Johnson and Hinkle, R. Farrell.

Second game: New York 100 002 010-4 10 1 Boston 000 120 04-7 10 2 Batteries—Ruffner, Grimes and Dickey; Welch, Rhodes and R. Farrell.

Runyan Favorite as National Open Gets Under Way Today With Fastest Field in Years

Goodman to Make Bid To Retain Crown From Pros

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Writer)
PHILADELPHIA, June 6.—Thunderstorms broke the grip of the heat wave late today and 149 golfers, representing the pick of American amateur and professional talent, hope to crack the resistance of old man par starting tomorrow in a wide open scramble for the United States open golf championship.

A veritable deluge broke up the final workouts of the combatants, but whatever the weather tomorrow for the first 18 holes of the 72-hole test over the historic east course of the Merion Cricket club, the tournament promises to develop one of the hottest fights in years.

It will be waged over the same battleground where Bobby Jones completed his "grand slam" in 1930 by winning the national amateur tournament but the famous old layout has been stiffened, 20 extra tons of sand have been poured into approximately 100 brutal-looking traps and the terrors of the old stonewall quarry, around which the last three holes are laid out, remain.

The chief visible differences as compared with the situation four years ago are that Jones will be on hand only in the combined role of spectator-syndicate writer.

From the competitive standpoint it appears only a marked comeback and a good share of the "breaks" can save Johnny Goodman, of Omaha, the young amateur holder of the open crown, from being beaten by the most determined professional counter-charge in years.

Only a few days off the boat, fresh from his Walker cup conquests abroad, Goodman is rated distinctly an "outsider," no better than a 15 to 1 shot to repeat, but Johnny wasn't considered much of a threat at Chicago last year until he startled the rail birds with a 66. The Nebraska hasn't lost any of his cockiness and he served notice of another threat to the pros by negotiating Merion late today in 73.

If Goodman finds the pace a bit too swift, there are a number of other amateur threats, including William Lawson Little, Jr., the new British amateur titleholder, Gus Moreland, of Dallas, who shows signs of being very much "on" his game, and Howard Creel, southpaw swing sensation from Denver, but the pre-tournament indications all point distinctly to a professional holiday.

The "money men," led by the redoubtable Paul Runyan, sensation of the winter season, are primed for their biggest open championship drive in years. The concerted rush of the professionals has been stimulated by an undoubted upswing in the business and the prospect that the winner, with better times, may be able to "cash in" to the tune of perhaps $25,000 for the ensuing year.

Because Merion seems ideally suited to his well-kept, accurate game, featuring fine work around the greens, Runyan rules a 6 to 1 favorite but the pressure from all sides is such that at least a dozen other professionals have strong support and the experts figure at least 30 players in the big field have a chance to crash through. Consequently the tournament record of 284, jointly held by Chick Evans and Gene Sarazen, may be wiped out late Saturday afternoon.

Sarazen, the national P.G.A. titleholder, long-driving Craig Wood, silver-haired Tommy Armour, the old campaigner Walter Hagen and Guy Laffoon, scoring sensation from Denver, all figure to be in the thick of the scramble. No better than 10 to 1 can be had against the chances of any of them among the betting commissioners.

Sarazen has not yet demonstrated his game is back to championship form but Hagen seems in rare form and Craig Wood belied his criticism of the course, on the ground it handicapped the big hitters, by banging out a 68, two under par, today. Laffoon has the best scoring average in practice of the professionals.

Iowa Breaks Even in Big Ten Games

Composite Standings Give Hawkeyes Fourth Place

An even break in 28 football, basketball, and baseball games gave the University of Iowa a tie for fourth place in the Western conference composite standing in these sports.

Only Illinois, Purdue, and Michigan have a better average than Iowa's during the 1933-34 season in the sports for which percentage standings are figured. Iowa was sixth in last year's composite standing.

year ago, and Illinois, the current first place runner, was fourth. For the first time since 1928, Iowa's football wins exceeded the defeats, with the Hawkeyes victorious in three of five games. The basketball team broke even in its 12 contests, and the baseball squad took five of 11.

In the conference games in these sports, Iowa achieved a victory margin on Purdue, Northwestern, and Minnesota; broke even with Indiana, Chicago, and Illinois; and conceded the edge to Michigan and Wisconsin.

The strangest marine museum in the world is located in Seattle, Wash., where the specimens are exhibited just as they came from the water. They are neither stuffed nor embalmed, intense cold is the only preservative used—and it keeps the exhibits in an uncannily natural appearance.

"THE LONE WOLF SON"

by LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

CHAPTER XXXIX
The Japanese was politely blank. "Yes, sir," he assented, yet with a hint of obtuse obstinacy continued to hold the door open. "What name, please, I beg to see?"

"Say, Mr. Bellamy is calling," Lanyard said.

If his choice of that non-de-guerre had been unpremeditated, purely a matter of the moment's whim, it was at once evident that he had hit on a name of power.

"Oah, yes!" Intelligence waked instantaneously in the black eyes; and the Jap, as if his every misgiving had been set at rest, released the door, which closed of its own accord.

"Wait," Lanyard enjoined in the indolent tone of one who expects his lightest wish to be humored. "Here—take these, will you."

Without more ado he dumped his hat, coat and gloves upon the servant's hands; and again affronted by the Jap turned to stow his armful away in a closet—a work of seconds only, yet many enough to cover a stretch of quick thinking.

It seemed evident beyond question that Lanyard's extempore stab at an alias for the hour had been a happy one. The Jap's prompt and supple reaction to the name Bellamy proved nothing if not the existence of a liaison between the hotel of the racketeers and this proud Park Avenue apartment; and if it proved that much, it proved more, that he would be waste time with the Boyce if he were to attempt now to accomplish anything either by diplomatic methods or by appealing to her sportsmanship; and still more, that the Jap was on terms of sympathetic acquaintance with the mob relations of his employer, therefore a potential menace as long as at large in the place while Lanyard was occupied with his mistress.

"And why not?" Lanyard mused, eying the Jap's back as he stood a-tiptoe to engage the loop inside the collar of the top-coat with a hook. "If the son makes free to copy his father's methods, why should not the father profit by the technique of his son?"

Deliberately, then, he planted a hand between the shoulders of the servant, toppled him in, to thresh among the hanging garments, and shut the door and turned the key in its lock.

Less deliberately he left the foyer, prepared for anything, prepared for, at best, a stiff scene with the Boyce. . . . But in the drawing-room there was no one.

He held briefly an alert halt, talking in the ample evidences that it had been till quite lately tenanted. A handsome room, if a thought florid in its general scheme, it was lighted exclusively by table-lamps. An easy-chair closely slumped one of these, in its arm a wisp of lace handkerchief lightly crumpled, on the floor beside it an evening newspaper a-sprawl; from an ash-tray on the table a thin fume of cigarette-smoke lifted, swaying in a light draft like a wisp of a small snake. In a corner back of the chair a miniature radio-set stood crooning to itself softly.

If their erstwhile audience was invisible, the assumption was reasonable that she had, as women will, hearing a new voice at the door fled to primp and repair her complexion. But Lanyard could neither hear any sound nor detect any symptom of life in the adjoining room of old-rose walls that an open door revealed; and when impudent reconnaissance from its threshold demonstrated that this, the bedchamber, was also empty, he went boldly in and through, via the foyer, to the dining-room, pantry, kitchen and servant's room, then returned the way he had come, stopping only to look into the bathroom and search every closet, without finding a sign of the Boyce.

Back in the bedchamber once more, he pulled up at a loss.

Nothing was more certain than that he was alone in the apartment with the embittered Jap, who was still venting his indignation by fits and starts on the panels of his prison-door.

If one surely was as good as another, the way he had come, stopping only to look into the bathroom, when he heard a strange man's voice at the door, and had made her escape. Proof there was a-plenty beneath his very hand that she had left in haste; there on the glass top of her sybaritic silk-dressing-table a corsair raffle lay, all the priceless treasure of her everyday jewelry, lost that would have paid the old Lone Wolf for any amount of planning and painstakingly abandoned, apparently, without an instant's hesitation; for with the lot was something that, one would think, the lady would hardly have forgotten if she had had her wits about her and thought herself in any peril—a sweet trinket in gold-plate and mother-of-pearl, as vicious as dainty, an automatic pistol small enough to nestle unsuspectingly in a pocket.

For calling outside numbers. The other was without a dial and carried a card with the legend "Ex. 31-B." To this last Lanyard applied himself. A feminine voice brightly responded and asked: "Order, please?"

"Tell me something, Mr. Frederick Isquith has an apartment in this building, hasn't he?"

"He certainly has—all the thirty-second floor, right over your head. Wait a minute! I'll connect you."

"Never mind, I only wanted to be sure—thank you."

Lanyard hung up. One question, at all events, had been answered.

Deliberately, then, he planted a hand between the shoulders of the servant, toppled him into the closet and turned the key in its lock.

pected in the bottom of a lady's hand-bag, and deadly enough to drop a charging bull in his tracks. Gingerly Lanyard examined the weapon. It carried a full clip, and had one cartridge already chambered. No telling how soon it might prove useful. Never before, it was true, had he gone under arms on his unlawful occasions. But tonight he was pitting himself against a new school of desperadoes, savage and treacherous as wild beasts. Even their women—as this bijou testified—were the sort to stop at nothing.

On second thought, however, Lanyard contented himself with extracting its fangs and leaving the pistol where he had found it. It went too much against the grain to break a life-long rule of conduct, in this instance especially, when he looked to find himself in actual conflict, if in any, only with a woman.

But where had she fled in such panic? And why? Had she mistaken the voice at the door for that, perhaps, of some enemy in the strange American mob-world, some one at whose hands she had worse than arrest to apprehend?

The question went on gnawing, as irksome as a growing tooth: Where had she gone—to call for help? But she could so readily have done that by telephone!

To some other apartment? Some friend's, in the building? If so, whose?

There were, on the stand by the bed, two French-type telephones. One had on its base a dial device

But if the Boyce had gone to call on Isquith for assistance, what chance had Lanyard of escaping from this trap into which he had walked unwittingly? A trap, moreover, from which he had no mind to try to escape unless and until he found out what he had braved it to find.

He tried the other telephone, dialing the number of Crane's hide-away, but got no response other than a broken, muted trilling, the signal for a call that is not completed.

Then he visited the outer doors of the apartment again and thoughtfully set their chain-bolts; he wasn't of any mind to be taken by surprise if, as he suspected, this delay meant that Isquith and the Boyce were waiting for reinforcements from the mob-world to arrive.

The outraged Jap was still giving muffled yelps from time to time as he pummeled the door of the foyer-closet; but Lanyard, pitiless, merely stopped at the radio set in the drawing-room and adjusted the volume control till the music was loud enough to override the racket.

It was while he was thus engaged that he grew sensible again of the draft through the room, saw how the curtains were bellowing in at long glass doors that opened on the terrace, and for the first time he thought him that the woman might possibly have taken to that refuge.

If so, she had, in all probability, been watching his every movement.

Petition Filed By Vida Thompson In Court Yesterday

Vida Thompson filed a petition for a decree of separate maintenance from Robert Thompson in district court yesterday.

Mrs. Thompson asks $60 a month from her husband, who is employed as a mechanic in Waterloo, and the custody of three children. The couple was married in O'Neill, Neb., Nov. 7, 1919.

Harriet M. Otto Gets Appointment

Harriet M. Otto of Carroll has been appointed assistant to the Rev. William P. Lemon of the First Presbyterian church in Iowa City.

AROUND THE TOWN with BILL MERRITT

Outposts

The outposts established by the county treasurer's office in various parts of the county for the collection of the $1 old age pension tax are meeting with success. W. E. Smith, county treasurer, said yesterday. More than $300 was collected at Lone Tree and Hills Tuesday.

This Month of June

County Clerk Walter J. Barrow reports the marriage license business booming so far this month. Fourteen licenses have been taken out by couples during the first six days of the month. Two licenses were issued yesterday. The first went to Lumir A. Cuhel of Cedar Rapids and Libbie Novy of North Liberty and the second to Lee Waterman of Cedar Rapids and Daisey Laing of Tipton.

Polite

The Vernon L. Sharp disbarment proceedings thus far have been a model of judicial etiquette, with the opposing attorneys each trying to outdo the other in politeness.

Worried

Dan J. Peters, who won the Democratic nomination for the two year term on the county board of supervisors, and William Novy, who took the Democratic nomination for county treasurer, according to unofficial returns, are worried about their narrow margins of votes over their competitors and are waiting impatiently for the official canvass to be made by the county board of supervisors next Tuesday.

Not Here

The rumor that Jean Harlow, screen actress, had stopped in Iowa City several days ago to purchase some gasoline for her automobile, blew over yesterday when the filling station attendant who was supposed to have sold her the gasoline couldn't be located.

Evidence In Trial Heard

Six More Witnesses Testify in Sharp Proceedings

Disbarment proceedings against Vernon L. Sharp moved slowly and uneventfully yesterday in district court with the appearance of six witnesses.

The evidence was closed on two more accusations and late in the afternoon the examination of witnesses on a third charge against Sharp was started.

Harry Garrett, prosecuting attorney, indicated last night the case would probably continue into next week.

Damage Suit

The evidence for the first charge to be completed yesterday dealt with a damage suit before Justice of Peace F. H. Kirchner of Fremont township in which Sharp appeared as an attorney for James Masek of Lone Tree.

The greater part of the day was spent in hearing evidence on the fourth accusation of the 18 filed against Sharp. The charge stated that Sharp accepted $50 from Anna Fountain as a fee to act as her attorney in a divorce suit. Mrs. Fountain claims that Sharp did not fulfill his duties as an attorney and she was forced to retain another attorney.

Closed on 5 Charges With the evidence closed on five of the 18 accusations, the third, fourth, eighth, seventeenth, and eighteenth, some testimony was given on the seventh charge in which Mrs. J. L. Roberts employed Sharp as an attorney to settle the estate of her husband, J. L. Roberts of Hardin township. This accusation deals with the disposal of rent received from a farm, part of the estate, by Sharp. The trial will continue this morning with the calling of additional witnesses.

Ladybirds in London-Australia Air Race

Amy Mollison

Jacqueline Cochrane

Louise Thaden

Laura Ingalls

Among the early entrants in the MacRobertson International Air Race from London to Melbourne, Australia, next fall, is Jacqueline Cochrane, Pensacola, Fla., beauty, who left the New York beauty shop she operated to win a pilot's license after three weeks' training for a bet of $200. Miss Cochrane will fly a special plane being built for her at Springfield, Mass. It is capable of 250-miles-an-hour cruising speed and has a non-stop range of 3,000 miles. But Miss Cochrane will have stiff competition from members of her own sex, including Mrs. Louise Thaden holder of many women's air records; Miss Laura Ingalls, who flew 15,000 miles solo around South America this year, and Amy Johnson Mollison, English aviatrix, who set a record from London to Australia and later flew across the Atlantic with her husband, Captain Jim Mollison.

NEW YORK (I.L.N.)—If confidence is half the battle, as some philosophers tell us, then victory is half-way in the grasp of Jacqueline Cochrane, aviatrix extraordinary, who, less than two years ago, learned to fly on a bet that she couldn't qualify for a pilot's license in three weeks.

The latest exhibition of confidence on the part of the former nurse and beauty shop operator is the announcement that she is entered in the MacRobertson International Air Race from London to Australia next fall, and if you don't think that calls for a supreme brand of faith in one's ability, look at the set-up.

Galaxy of Veterans

Miss Cochrane, a slim blond, from Pensacola, Fla., will have some of the most formidable competition that the aviation world can provide. Among early entrants in the great air derby are Wiley Post, holder of the record for aerial circumnavigation of the globe, Clyde Pangborn, another U. S. globe circler, Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, hero of the first trans-Pacific flight, and a host of others, equally famous.

But the cock-sure ladybird is not the slightest bit daunted by the halo surrounding "big names." She is confident she can win, and with a first prize of $50,000 awaiting the first to put wheels down in Melbourne, Miss Cochrane hopes to show her heels to the field.

Special Plane

Although the aviatrix has shrouded details of her plans with a veil of secrecy, it has been revealed that a special plane is being built for her at Springfield, Mass. This craft, according to reports, will be one of the most powerful of its type ever built. It will have a guaranteed cruising speed of 250 miles an hour, and a non-stop range of more than 3,000 miles. Other features are a 700 horse power motor, a controllable pitch propeller and wing-flap airbrakes, which will reduce the plane's landing speed to 60 miles an hour—a big safety asset when it comes to landing on some of the third-rate airports along the 12,000 mile route from London to Australia.

For many months, Miss Cochrane has been quietly training in the art of blind flying in preparation for her bid for glory. But she is not going to depend on her own knowledge of navigation. According to her present plans, it is said, she has arranged for a relay of European navigators familiar with the successive legs of the long jaunt. The rules of the race require that all competing planes check in at Baghdad, Iraq; Calcutta, India; Singapore, Darwin and Charleville. A different navigator, familiar with the section between these points, would eliminate much of the hazard. But there is plenty of danger left. Trackless deserts, long stretches of forest and jungle, where a forced landing would be fatal, and forbidding mountain ranges are only a few of the obstacles.

Other Ladybirds

Miss Cochrane will not be the only aviatrix in the race, however. Another is Mrs. Louise Thaden of Pittsburgh, one of America's front-rank ladybirds. Mrs. Thaden holds many women's air records and, unlike Miss Cochrane, is a seasoned flyer. As far back as 1929, she won the women's air derby from Santa Monica, Cal., to Cleveland. Since then she has set endurance records, via the refueling route.

Laura Ingalls, who, according to many experts, is the best woman flyer in the United States, also is entered. This year, Miss Ingalls made a 15,000-mile solo air tour around South America in preparation for the London-Melbourne race. On that trip she flew over the Andes, the first woman ever to do it alone.

Still another ladybird who must be considered is Amy Johnson Mollison, English ace, who set a record for a flight from London to Australia and later flew across the Atlantic with her husband, Capt. Jim Mollison. Many others are expected to enter before the deadline in September and it behooves the male air pilots to look to their laurels.
