Breaker Of Presidents Strange "Power" Of C. C. Calbreath Felt Three Times

Carmon C. Calbreath—though he would not admit it—is a maker and breaker of presidents.
At least it would seem so. Whether modestly or some other reason prevents him from telling of it, wherever he has gone to school there has been a change of administration.

It Starts
Back in 1928, Mr. Calbreath matriculated at Iowa State Teachers college, then under the leadership of President Homer Seerley. He had hardly had time to make his presence on the campus known—figuratively—than President Seerley gave up his position, and was succeeded by President O. R. Latham.
Then Mr. Calbreath left Iowa, and went to the University of Missouri, where President Stratton D. Brooks reigned at that time. But the Calbreath tradition did not fall. President Brooks resigned, and Walter Williams was named to succeed him.

Work Over
Last fall Mr. Calbreath came to the University of Iowa, and if the facts had been known, the result could have been predicted. He had been here a scant two months when President Walter A. Jessup resigned, with Dean Eugene A. Gilmore appointed to fill the position. Mr. Calbreath's work was done.
So he was graduated last week with a bachelor of arts degree—and with about 150 semester hours of work to his credit, the result of his somatic pursuits.

Isn't Sure
He is now taking graduate work in the college of commerce, with one eye on a master's degree and another on a commercial position. He may continue his work here next year, or he may carry his tradition to another campus. He isn't sure.

Hitler Confers With Il Duce

Colorful Leaders Talk Over International Problems
VENICE, June 14 (AP)—Europe's two most colorful national leaders, Chancellor Hitler of Germany and Premier Mussolini of Italy, went into a room by themselves today and talked for two hours about international problems.

The two men, after being given a rousing demonstration, met in the Villa Pasina near here, told their official refusals to stay outside, shut the door and exchanged their views without even the benefit of an interpreter.

The conversation was carried on in German, a language which Mussolini learned to speak when he worked as a bricklayer in Switzerland before the war and has studied since.
Hitler brought along two interpreters, but they were not needed. It was stated authoritatively that the two men covered every important question relating to European and world politics.

After the 145-minute conversation, Hitler motored back to his hotel on the Grand canal here, and Mussolini drove in to return the call, a formal task which required only five minutes.

While it was stated that no communique will be issued until after two conferences tomorrow, it was learned that the conversations took in disarmament, the Austrian situation, Germany's attitude toward the League of Nations and various economic topics, among them Italy's recent trade alliances with Austria and Hungary.

Mercury Reaches 83 Degree Mark
Despite the bright sunshine, two baby cloud bursts kept Iowa Citizens constantly on the alert and ready to scurry for cover at the first drop of rain yesterday afternoon.
The highest temperature recorded for the day was 83 at 12:30 p.m. The mercury had climbed to this point from a low of 55 at 2 a.m.
Late last night the thermometer showed 65.

WEATHER
IOWA: Partly cloudy Friday and Saturday; somewhat cooler Friday.

Recreation Board Completes Plan for Supervised Playground

Musgrove To Take Charge Of Activities

Play Center to Open At Longfellow Monday
A goal long sought by many local citizens will become a reality with the opening of Iowa City's first supervised playground Monday.

Details of the playground, which has been planned for months by the Iowa City board of recreation, were revealed yesterday by Luella Reckmeyer, executive secretary.

The playground, located on the grounds of Longfellow school, will be open every afternoon for eight weeks—from June 18 to Aug. 11.

Homer Musgrove, who graduated from the University of Iowa in 1933, will be in direct charge of all playground activities. Mr. Musgrove has had five years experience in this field, and served as playground supervisor in St. Louis, Mo., for four years. He will coach sports at Fontanelle next fall.

Belle Markovitz to Assist
He will be assisted by Belle Markovitz, who will enroll for her senior studies in physical education at the university next September. Miss Markovitz led activities at a private camp in Michigan for several summers.

A complete program will be arranged for young persons between the ages of 6 and 20.
The playground will be open every day, except Sundays, from 1:30 to 8 p.m. Lavatories of the Longfellow school will be available, and Lewis Powers, janitor, will assist in taking care of sports equipment.

To Repair Center
The recreational center, 104 S. Clinton street, will be open during summer months for special projects only. Repair work and improvement of the center is planned. Miss Reckmeyer will take part in activities at both the center and at the playground.

The board, according to Miss Reckmeyer, originally intended to open three playgrounds this summer, but at present there are not sufficient funds available to carry out this project.

The playground was located at Longfellow school because a large number of young people using the center come from the southeast part of Iowa City, and because of the size of the grounds.

Will Appreciate Donations
All persons particularly interested in playground supervision are asked to see Miss Reckmeyer at the recreational center Saturday morning if they wish to add in the new project. Miss Reckmeyer said last night that donations of outdoor sports equipment would also be appreciated.

Members of the Iowa City board of recreation are H. L. Hands, president, Mrs. Huber Olin, vice president, Mrs. Jessie B. Gordon, secretary, Harold Vestermark, treasurer, the Rev. Llewellyn Owen, W. L. Morgan, Mrs. A. C. Moyer, Mrs. Arthur O'Brien, and Mrs. Thomas R. Reos.

PEIPING, Cina (AP)—Dr. J. H. Ingram, an American medical missionary, was shot dead today by robbers who entered his home near here.

Iowa Ranks Second to Yale In Art Gifts From Carnegie

Receives $121,000 In Last Two Decades
The University of Iowa received more funds for work in the arts from the Carnegie corporation in the last two decades than any other university in the United States, with the exception of Yale, a report of the New York institution revealed. Grants in the arts have been made to 102 American colleges and universities in the period from 1911 to 1933, the report, made public yesterday, shows.
Out of a total of $1,983,450 awarded to these schools, the University of Iowa received $121,000. This is exclusive of a grant made two weeks ago of $12,000.
The only university receiving a greater amount, Yale, was awarded $201,500, the report says. Harvard university, with $106,000 ranks

Navy Fails to Find Vital Information In Crash Evidence

NEW YORK, June 14 (AP)—The U. S. navy failed today to find "any information of vital importance" in papers and chemicals salvaged from the wreck of an airliner near Livingston Manor, N. Y., and turned over the material to the federal district attorney.

Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig, assistant chief of naval operations, earlier in the day issued a statement at Washington disclosing the navy department no longer was interested in the case.

New Bill To Check Strikes Brings 'Kicks'

Business, Labor Objects To Secret Election Of Spokesmen
WASHINGTON, June 14 (AP)—A chorus of objection to the administration's draft of a bill to provide new methods of settling strikes came today from business men, labor and Republican senators.

The objections surged as the administration sought a means of thwarting a strike threatened in the steel industry.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said labor could "neither approve nor endorse" the administration proposal to give the president power to name an investigating board which would have the power to hold secret elections to select spokesmen for workers to bargain with employers in matters of wages and hours.

"Dangerous Measure"
Henry I. Harriman, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, called the joint resolution sent to Capitol Hill from the White House "a most dangerous measure."

Senate Republicans, to whom Democratic leaders made an appeal for support of the administration measure, handed to a committee of the Republican delegation a score of proposed changes, which tonight had resulted in at least five tentative amendments to the joint resolution.

The Democratic leaders were fearful that an attempt to push the resolution would invoke prolonged debate. "They did not want; it would block an early adjournment."

Johnson Retires
Meanwhile, Hugh S. Johnson retired from the negotiations for peace in the steel industry.
"I don't see anything more I can do," he told reporters.

Johnson denied published reports that he had been removed by President Roosevelt as mediator. He said he had acted only to assist the steel code authority in peace efforts, that he never held the post of arbitrator.

The White House supported this with a statement through the press by Secretary Stephen T. Early.

Stock Market Sluggish
NEW YORK (AP)—Bullish interest in stocks ebbed today and the market turned soggy. Traders watched developments in the threatened steel strike and for the grain market to find firm ground again.

Reluctant
The men seemed reluctant to tell what they were doing or where they were going, she stated, and asked for directions to U.S. highway No. 5.
Peace officers, who thoroughly investigated her story, were inclined to believe last night that the two men were not connected with the kidnapping, although they might have been driving a stolen auto. Their auto had New York plates, Mrs. Chaney said.

Police "Stumped" by Wierd Crime as Hunt for Kidnaper Centers in, Near Iowa City

"Phantom" Disappears With Three Men In Coupe
Dark skies and muddy roads last night brought an intermission to the hunt, conducted in and near Iowa City, for a "phantom" kidnaper who whisked three victims out of Davenport yesterday.

Federal, state, and local officers worked frantically to solve the kidnap mystery—a crime so bizarre that police shook their heads in bewilderment and attributed it to a madman.

On Crime Map
Iowa City came into the crime map before noon, shortly after the unidentified kidnaper disappeared from Davenport with a veterinarian, a baseball official, and a policeman.

When Policeman Elmer Schlueter appeared curious about the contents of a bag carried by the kidnaper, the latter "struck-up" the officer and marched him down a Davenport street, according to an Associated Press report.

Car Abandoned
They met Al Schultze, secretary of the Davenport Western league baseball club, and he joined them, unwillingly. In Schultze's automobile, a new Ford sedan, they sped away. No witness could identify the kidnaper.

Schultze's auto was abandoned near Blue Grass, a village 10 miles west of Davenport, where the kidnaper apparently added Dr. W. H. Fitch, Walcott veterinarian, to his list of victims. Dr. Fitch and his car, a 1929 coupe, were both missing, and a bottle from the veterinarian's medical kit was found in the road.

Kidnaping in Morning
Although the kidnaping of Schlueter and Schultze took place at 10:30 a.m., the kidnaper was reported speeding toward Iowa City on U.S. highway No. 6 at 2 p.m. Sheriff Don McComas and members of the local police force, armed with rifles and a sub-machine gun, stopped every car coming east on the road, but abandoned their guard about 5 p.m.

Meanwhile, a private plane from Davenport landed at the local airport and took off again for Cedar Rapids, flying low over the highway so that observers could see every auto.

Federal Agent Here
C. C. Dewey, a federal agent, arrived in Iowa City at 5 p.m. and then left for Davenport. State agents went through here all afternoon and night.

All had apparently quieted down and police were trying to unravel the disturbingly inconsistent threads of the case, when a telephone call from Mrs. Vera Chaney, who lives about a mile south of the airport, stirred up a terrific commotion.

Mrs. Chaney told police that two men, having parked their car a half mile down the road, walked up to her house and asked for food. While she prepared soup, they watched her carefully, and in a "suspicious manner."

Legal Liquor Sale to Begin
DES MOINES, June 14 (AP)—Legal sale of liquor will get under way in Iowa next Tuesday when the first five state retail stores will open in as many cities at 11 a.m., the state liquor control commission announced today.

The first stores to open will be those at Des Moines, Oelwein, Marshalltown, Mason City and Atlantic. Chairman H. M. Cooper of the commission said.

Stores to be opened after the first five are those at Cedar Rapids, Sioux City, Clinton, Council Bluffs and Davenport. The remainder of the 27 stores which will constitute the state system for the present will be ready for occupancy June 23.

2 Prisoners Make Sensational Break At McNeill Island

TACOMA, Wash., June 14 (AP)—In the most sensational escape at McNeill Island federal penitentiary since Roy Gardner made his successful bid for freedom 14 years ago, two desperate inmates broke from the main cell block today, overpowered the pilot of a prison motor boat and made the mainland safely.

The escaped prisoners, believed by authorities to be hiding tonight in the woods of the Ft. Lewis military reservation between Dupont and Steilacoom, were William L. Fitzmaurice, 34, and T. F. Audette, 32. Fitzmaurice was received at the prison Feb. 18.

Tugwell Gets O.K. by Vote Of 53 to 24

Confirmation Given Nomination By Senate
WASHINGTON, June 14 (AP)—At the end of a day of tense and acrimonious debate, the senate tonight confirmed Rexford G. Tugwell as undersecretary of agriculture by a 53 to 24 vote.

Six Democrats voted against the nominee. Three of them, Chairman Smith, South Carolina, of the senate agriculture committee, Senator Byrd, Virginia, and Senator Bailey, North Carolina, led the movement to reject the nomination.

Independents Support Nominee
Another Democrat, Glass of Virginia, was paired against Tugwell. On the other hand, most of the Republican independents supported the youthful nominee. Norris of Nebraska and Cutting of New Mexico staunchly defended him in the senate discussion which kept crowded galleries on edge.

Cutting asserted those opposing the nominee "were aiming at someone higher up."
"Why don't you come out and say so?" he asked.

Senator Black (D-Ala.) also saw the issue as one of "progress versus reaction." Senator Neely (D-W.Va.) said those against the nominee belonged in the same group with those who forced "Socrates to drink the hemlock."

Dickinson Calls Wallace "Theorist"

WASHINGTON, June 14 (AP)—Secretary Wallace was described as a "theorist and impractical" by Senator Dickinson (R-Iowa) today in debate over the confirmation of Rexford Guy Tugwell as undersecretary of agriculture.

Dickinson's comment came in a verbal clash between the two Iowa senators, with Democratic Senator Murphy asking "does the present secretary of agriculture meet your approval?"

"I think he is a theorist and impractical," replied Dickinson.

Batters Huge Primo Carnera To Gain World Championship With Eleven Round Triumph

Nearly 2,000 Hear Jessup At Assembly
Says Education Still Sound in America; Gilmore Talks
America's educational system is still sound and practical, in spite of depression or world changes, President Walter A. Jessup told nearly 2,000 persons in the thirty-fifth annual summer session assembly in the main lounge of Iowa Union yesterday morning.

The basic values of life have not been altered, though outside circumstances have been changed, he declared. Pointing to the drift in England, Germany, France, and Russia toward the American form of secondary education, the Iowa head predicted greater opportunities for individual development, without regard to class or economic condition, throughout the world.

"Believes in Education"
"The world still believes in education which gives opportunities to develop individuality and personality," President Jessup asserted.

Lauding the students who have returned to continue their studies year after year despite economic difficulty, President Jessup interpreted summer session work as a movement in adult education in the middle west—an effort to understand and maintain an interest in world affairs.

President-Elect Eugene A. Gilmore, introduced by President Jessup, urged the students to "get a front seat in education."

"I know of no other field other than education in which men and women consistently refuse to 'take the front seats.' Students in university classes invariably cheer when their classwork is reduced."

"Front Seats for All"
"There are 'front seats' in education for all of you who want to take them," he said. Listing numerous extra-curricular and class opportunities, he urged students to take advantage of them, "that you may not leave with regrets."

Dean Paul C. Packer, director of the summer session, directed Bruce E. Mahan, director of the extension division, made several announcements of coming university events.

Prof. M. Willard Lampe, director of the school of religion, gave the invocation and benediction, and Louise Rood and Prof. Philip Greeley Clapp, head of the music department, presented a musical number.

Payne Relected
DES MOINES (AP)—R. F. Payne of Council Bluffs was reelected president of the Iowa Retail Coal Merchants association at its convention today.

Freak Summer Weather of '34 Mild Compared to Flood of '51

The freak summer weather of 1934 may be difficult for its victims, but history will record it as mild compared to the Iowa flood of 1851, described by Professor John E. Briggs, editor of The Palimpsest, monthly publication of the State Historical society, in the June issue out today.

Like the Biblical flood, the great Iowa inundation lasted 40 days, beginning in May. Following as it did a huge rainfall the previous year, it was ruinous to south-eastern Iowa. The waters of the Cedar, Iowa, Skunk, and Des Moines rivers reached the highest mark.

Had modern conditions prevailed, the farm relief problem would have been terrific. Describing agricultural conditions, Professor Briggs wrote:

"Farmers in the valleys despaired of getting their corn planted. Crops of small grain were washed out or ruined. . . Hundreds of acres of tilled land were overflooded; horses, cattle, hogs, sheep, and chickens were drowned; fences and buildings were swept away.

"Huge trees, washed out by the roots, came floating down or caught at the bends to form temporary dams. Water flowed in at the second-story windows of mills and

Thunderous Punching Of Max Results In Clear Cut Win

Floored 11 Times
Eleven times in 11 rounds the massive Italian, biggest man ever to hold the title, crashed to the floor from Baer's blows, twice in the last round, before Referee Arthur Donovan stopped the fight after two minutes, 16 seconds of the eleventh amid such chaos and tumult as the ring hasn't seen since Dempsey's most famous triumph in 1923. A twelfth time the giant slid to the floor full length from loss of balance in a wild lunge at his foe.

Helpless at the end of the tenth when Referee Donovan almost stopped the fight in between two knock-downs, Carnera staggered out for his finish in the eleventh, bloody, semi-conscious, but as brave as any man who ever went to so certain a fate.

Arise for "Kill"
The thrill-sodden crowd, losing one sullen, hoarse roar after another that swept in waves across the arena, arose for the "kill." Once the sneering Baer half pushed, half battered the champion to the floor, Azalia Carnera went down from a right high to the head.

He came to his feet, his tree-like legs barely able to hold him up. Donovan rushed in as Baer set himself for the final smash. Through his crushed and swollen lips the champion whispered as he turned his head to the referee.

"Fini," he mumbled. "Fini, I am finish."

Stops Punch
Donovan wrestled in between them, stayed Baer's finishing hand, pushed him back toward his screaming corner, the new heavyweight champion of the world.

Carnera started to protest and his seconds tore wildly about the ring. Then they threw a robe about his battered, bleeding head and led him down the steps, toward the end of the trail for the monster man of the ring, the peasant from Seguals, Italy, eight short years ago, a freak in a circus.

He decried afterwards that he hadn't said he had enough, that Donovan shouldn't have stopped it.

Quake Strikes Afghanistan

Fear Many Die As Result of Heavy Shocks
CALCUTTA, India, June 14 (AP)—A terrific earthquake which it is feared may have killed many persons shook Afghanistan and Baluchistan early today.

No detailed reports from the affected area, which was reported to extend along the whole northwest Himalaya range, had been received here last night. It was recalled that the quake in Bihar province last January so disrupted communications that it was more than a week before details of the disaster were learned.

(Estimates of dead in the Bihar earthquake ran from 4,000 to 6,000, and there was a great deal of suffering from disease among the refugees.)

There were indications that Mach, near Quetta, which was destroyed by an earthquake in 1931, has again been seriously hit.

The epicenter of the tremor was in Afghanistan, reports suggested. Seismographs here, however, recording the most severe shock—at 3 a.m. G.M.T. (9 p.m. Wednesday C.S.T.)—indicated that the center of the greatest earth activity was in Baluchistan.

DES MOINES (AP)—The state corn-hog committee said today it had reports from several committees that banks are making exorbitant charges of corn-hog benefit checks.

R. E. Neff Explains Movement for Care Of Crippled Children

Robert E. Neff, administrator of University hospital, explained to the League of Women Voters yesterday afternoon the objectives of the international movement for the care of crippled children.

The first interest in caring for crippled children, said Mr. Neff, is to find the child, then secure medical treatment for him. Next, education must be arranged for the child, he continued, and finally an occupation should be found for him.

Mr. Neff spoke at the League tea at Mrs. Albert V. Hardy's home, 508 Melrose court. He also told the league that it is hoped a branch of the International Society for the Care of Crippled Children will be established in Iowa. Members of the league replied that they would be interested in helping such an organization.

Pythian Sisters To Meet in Kensington

Election of delegates to the Rebekah assembly at Mason City in the autumn, nominating of state officers, and drafting of the charter comprised the main features of the business session at the meeting of Iowa City Rebekah, 416, at 8 p.m. yesterday at the Oddfellow hall.

A social card party and refreshments followed the business session. Mrs. John Frenzen had charge of the party.

Office Selects Dates for Two Dinner Parties

Dates for the all-university men's and women's dinners, given each year during the first term of summer session, have been announced as June 26 and 28 respectively, by the summer session office.

Both dinners will be given at Iowa Union, although specific rooms have not yet been selected. Prof. Frances Zull of the home economics department will take charge of arrangements for the women's dinner. The chairman for the men's dinner has not been appointed.

Because of a conflict with the women's dinner, the Nebraska dinner meeting has been postponed from June 23 to 29.

Both men's and women's dinner parties are open exclusively to summer session students and faculty. They provide an opportunity for summer students to get acquainted with each other and with their instructors.

Rickard Talks At Observance

Elks Hear Plea For Maintenance Of Armaments

The American flag was the center of attraction as Elks observed their traditional Flag day ceremony in the lodge rooms last night. Capt. Roy V. Rickard was the guest speaker.

Citing critical situations which are demanding the attention of the world today, such as Japanese aggression and German discontent Captain Rickard pleaded for the maintenance of American armaments. Claiming that when arbitration and mediation fail, force is the only recourse of a nation, Captain Rickard compared modern armaments to police forces, the chief duties of which are to maintain peace.

"First Duty Security"

"The first duty of a government is the security of its citizens," said Captain Rickard. Armies of the past were feared because they were armies of the king, but modern armies, as armies of the people, do not have to be feared, he said. To emphasize his point, he stated that the most effectively armed nation in the world, Switzerland, where every man is enrolled in the army and where each soldier keeps his own weapons continuously ready, was able to maintain its neutrality during the World War when the rest of Europe had armies in the field.

Simple Presides

Judge H. D. Evans, aided by an orchestra and a group of Cub Scouts, reviewed the history of the flag. The evolution of the flag was illustrated by a number of banners modeled after those used at various times in the history of the nation.

Delmar Semple, exalted ruler of the local lodge, presided over the ceremonies.

Johnson Tells Of New Rays

Explains Cosmic Rays In Graduate Lecture

Cosmic rays, the recently discovered rays of physics, affect the human body much as do X-rays, Thomas H. Johnson, research physicist of the Bartol Research foundation, said in a graduate lecture in physics building last night.

That these effects are not more noticeable Mr. Johnson pointed out may be explained by the fact that the number passing through the body at any time is very small.

Corpuscular Properties

Asserting that "cosmic rays have corpuscular properties," the physicist said that his experiments in Peru, Panama, Mexico, and the United States have supported the theory that the corpuscles are charged with positive electricity.

Cosmic rays were introduced to physics by Prof. James Millikan in 1926, and physicists since that time have been engaged in studying the nature of these powerful rays which penetrate all the earth's substances.

Has Experimented

Mr. Johnson has carried on experimental work both in the United States and abroad. His work has been partially supported by the Carnegie foundation.

He will preside over a round table discussion on this subject in room 221 physics building this afternoon at 2 o'clock. This discussion, of a technical nature, has been planned largely for graduate students in physics.

The Doctrine of Mediocre Complacency

COMMENCEMENT speakers almost invariably have a habit of admitting that the present generation has failed and is now passing on the torch of a responsibility for the world to the rising generation—and charging them with the weight of that responsibility.

How often we have wished that some commencement speaker would find some new angle. Last week end the Rev. C. Leslie Glenn of Cambridge, Mass., did just that in his baccalaureate address at Vassar, and the result was far worse than the conventional tack.

For the worthy Rev. Mr. Glenn urged upon the graduating women a doctrine of middle class complacency, which would do justice to a Sinclair Lewis or a John Galsworthy character.

"Do not become cynical," the Rev. Mr. Glenn urged the young women. Merely accept the inevitable as inevitable—do the "Pollyanna"—be content in the midst of adversity.

The doctrine of complacency which the speaker urged could hardly be accepted by any thinking person, and merely an intelligent toleration allows it to be given even a hearing. In the midst of a world chaos, a middle greater than any in the last century, how could any intelligent human expect an intelligent generation of young men and women to remain complacent?

It has been said that the world moves not because 95 per cent of the people are satisfied, but because there are about five per cent who are dissatisfied. The radical of today becomes the prophet of tomorrow.

The difficulty is that the Rev. Mr. Glenn and those who preach content have mentally confused radicalism, cynicism, and an attitude of progressive tolerance, banded them all together, and branded them unorthodox and disturbing.

One need not be a cynic to realize that the world is not yet perfect; one need not be a radical to hope for social reform, that the next generation and the next may not suffer a few of the social injustices of the past and the present.

Complacency may be satisfying—it may be a happy sort of attitude. But its reward is mental and social stagnation—a sterility of civilization.

Baseball is Different, Mr. Danowski

ED DANOWSKI, last year's captain of the Fordham university football team, managed to get himself into something of a mess last week end in Quogue, N. Y.

It seems that Mr. Danowski, playing shortstop on a semi-professional baseball team, became angered in the midst of the ninth inning, and attacked the umpire in a rather vicious manner.

The whole incident, leading to Mr. Danowski's arrest, seems to point to the utter futility of deserting one's chosen vocation for other fields. You can't teach an old dog new tricks.

It is simple to explain Mr. Danowski's situation. Perhaps the odds had gone against him. Perhaps his hatred of the umpire had increased by bits during the game.

It was only natural that he should seek an outlet for his pent-up emotions. Being a football player by all the smiling fortunes of the gods, it was only natural that he should seek the football player's outlet.

Had he been in a football game, Mr. Danowski would have fixed a malevolent eye on the subject of his enmity, awaited the next play, disregarded the ball or the runners, and gone out to get his man. He would have stepped on his head, bitten off just enough of his ear to serve as an outlet, or perhaps have pushed his elbow with boyish abandon into his opponent's eye.

But baseball is different. One just can't toss down one's bat, walk up to the pitcher, throw him down and bite his ear off. One just can't. What Danowski failed to realize is that the same rule applies to the umpire—and he was angry.

When in Rome, do as Romans do, Mr. Danowski. After all, baseball is different!

What Others Think

Popular Songs and Singers (From the Kansas City Times)

Maggie Cilne's name comes back into the news. It comes back pathetically, as so often do the names of old stage favorites who have lived long in retirement. Maggie left the theater

In 1917. Now, at 77, she has died, and it is her death that recalls her as a singing comedienne who entertained us many years ago with fun and songs, into which she threw her abounding vitality. Even those who have forgotten everything else she did will remember her fighting songs, "Throw Him Down, McClosky." It was rough, but it was irresistible. Many another old-time entertainer is remembered by some song inseparably associated with a name, Lottie Collins for "Terra-ra-boom-de-ay," Josie Sadler for "Heinie," Blanche Ring for "My Little Irish Rose," which she made everybody sing with her; Vesta Victoria for "Don't Marry Anymore, Ma," May Irwin for "Mamie," Eva Tanguay for "I Don't Care," Fannie Brice for "My Man," Frank Moulton for "The Water Wagon," Chauncey Olcott for "My Wild Irish Rose." DeWolfe Hopper probably is more widely remembered for his extraneous recitation of "Casey at the Bat" than for any of the many songs that fell to him in his extensive operatic repertoire.

Some time ago, in connection with a review of Beverly Nichols' book, "Cry Havoc," I suggested that it was within the power of the church to wage an effective battle against war and militarism.

It would be necessary, for the church to succeed in such a campaign, for denominational controversies to be laid aside and for clergy and laymen of all congregations to join hands in the common cause.

Developments since that time indicate more and more definitely that such cooperation on the part of the church is not the hopeless impossibility it might seem. The program for peace begun by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America has been expanding with heartening rapidity, and denunciation after denunciation has committed itself to varying degrees of opposition to war.

The most unequivocal of all declarations to date is that adopted by the Presbyterian church's general assembly in Cleveland last month. This body, made up of more than 900 official representatives of the church from all parts of the country (half ministers and half laymen), adopted 13 resolutions which leave no doubt about its official position. Briefly summarized, they are:

- 1) "... it is incumbent upon all who profess the name of Christ to frown upon and disavow all that is a barrier to free and friendly intercourse between the races and nations of mankind."
2) "... in any matter in which the laws of ... country conflict with the commands of God," Christians "must assert their duty and right 'to obey God rather than men.'"
3) "That Christians cannot give their support to war as a method of carrying on international conflict."
4) The Presbyterian church opposes the increase of naval and other war forces, both because it provokes conflict and because it is "an inexcusable waste of the people's money."
5) "That we are opposed to military training ... as tending to cultivate the war spirit and as distinctly anti-Christian in character, and further as a waste of the people's money."
6) "We recognize that military policies have been the support of economic imperialism, and we condemn as godless any system of economics that requires war for its support and maintenance."
7) "We announce our support of all conscientious objectors ... and demand ... that such objectors be excused from classes in military instruction without loss in academic standing or official censure of any kind."
8) "We urge ... the necessity of making the requirements for citizenship compatible with the Pact of Paris' outlawing war as an instrument of national policy."
9) "... we advocate repeal of the Exclusion Act of 1924, and admission of orientals on the quota basis."
10) The assembly approves the signing of a pledge declaring, "I will not cross the borders of any nation except in friendship, nor will I support my country in such action."
11) The assembly also advocated the abolition of private manufacture and sale of munitions, and denounced the practices of private arms vendors.
12) Boards of the Presbyterian church were asked to withdraw any investments they might have in businesses which derive profit from the munitions industries.
13) The peace crusade of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America was approved.

The platform of the church in America obviously is being formulated into something that gives promise of meaning more than words. The responsibility for combatting the vast machinery of militaristic propaganda is clearly the church's. No other agency is in a position to do the job. And if the church accepts its responsibility, it will not find itself without reward.

Behind The Scenes in HOLLYWOOD By Harrison Carroll

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—Little boys like to plant their bare feet on hill-tops and imagine themselves owners of all they survey. Standing in the middle of a ranch near Carlsbad, N. M., young Bruce Cabot used to dream just such a dream. The other day, he returned to Carlsbad, a successful movie star and the husband of one of Hollywood's most beautiful women. But he sought to recapture a boyhood dream. And, unlike "Conrad in Quest of His Youth," he found it just as real as ever. So he dug down into his pocket and bought 3,000 acres of his home state soil. Now, he'll stock it with 200 head of cattle and play at being a range baron.

The so-called Mae West turns out to be the head of the drapery department in a Los Angeles furniture store. She's five feet six inches tall, but looks a good deal like Mae. The Santa Barbara episode started out as an innocent hoax upon the school-boy, but got out of control. Being a good sport, Mae laughed the incident off. "But I don't particularly like the idea of that boy being made the goat in a rag on me," she declared. "Maybe I'll really go up an' see him sometime."

Adrian, M.G.M.'s stylist (and the world of fashion eagerly waits his word these days) gives you this red hot tip on fall sports ensembles. They'll feature suede. Connie Bennett's ensemble in "The Green Hat" will be suede from hat to shoes. Even the scarf is of this material. The people who worked with Dorothy Dell at Paramount still find it hard to believe she is dead. It's sincere grief for a girl as friendly and gay as the songs she sang. Robert Sparks, production official on Dorothy's picture, "Little Miss Marker," writes in her memory: "Snuff the candle slowly lest the glow Shall leave us in the blackness of our sorrow; And lower the curtain gently—whisper low— For we must in this silence seek to borrow A song of yesterday to last the morrow."

Washington Bystander

WASHINGTON—Herbert Hoover's reply to the telegram of greeting sent the former president by the Republican convention in Chicago shed additional light on his plans. Although some newsmen at Chicago, in their first analysis of the national committee message, found in it a political obituary flavor, Mr. Hoover's reply passed up the opportunity to make an "I-do-not-choose" declaration of his own regarding any presidential comeback ideas which might be in his mind. The phrase of the committee message which most caught the reporters' eyes in framing quick news bulletins of its purport was that wishing he might be long slated to enjoy the earned gratitude of his countrymen. That became, for some writers, a virtual invitation by the party governing board to permanent restful retirement. Whether that interpretation was justified only the framers of the message to Hoover could say. "Those In the Know" The language could have quite a different meaning. Many of Mr. Hoover's former administrative and political keymen were in or about that gathering. Some of them must know positively, from his own lips, whether he has any interest whatever in being considered again for presidential nomination honors. Their only hopes might be as profoundly influenced by his decision as were those of Mr. Hoover by an invited "I-do-not-choose" Coolidgeism. Soon after Mr. Hoover's recent trip to Chicago, at which time he exchanged greetings with many party colleagues, word began to drift about that he had made it clear to them as was not considering another presidential nomination. The greeting from the national committee to the titular leader of the party might merely imply knowledge that such was his purpose. Personalities Forgotten In any event, framing a national committee "creed" was engaging all the attention of the Republican word-smiths at that time. It required tact and some spirit of compromise as between clashing views of different meaning. Many of Mr. Hoover's former administrative and political keymen were in or about that gathering. Some of them must know positively, from his own lips, whether he has any interest whatever in being considered again for presidential nomination honors. Their only hopes might be as profoundly influenced by his decision as were those of Mr. Hoover by an invited "I-do-not-choose" Coolidgeism.

SCENE OF TRAGIC CRASH

Only a single spot in the Catskill mountain wilderness marks the place where the airliner crashed and burned with a loss of seven lives. This photograph from the air indicates how little there was for the searchers to see in seeking the lost aircraft. That this spot was discovered through glasses from a distance of several miles seems almost a miracle.

Barrie Play Selected For H.S. Players

Twenty-Three Students In Summer School Drama Group

"The Admirable Crichton," a play by Sir James M. Barrie, will be presented by the all-state high school players as their annual public production, it was announced yesterday by Prof. Vance Morton, who is in charge of the group.

Twenty-three students have been accepted for the special high school courses in dramatics and debate, and the cast of the play will be chosen from this group.

The dramatics course is under Professor Morton's direction. Prof. A. Craig Baird is working with a group in debate and public speaking, and a general course in speech for all the high school pupils is given by Prof. Harry G. Barnes.

List of Students

The complete list of students taking the courses, announced yesterday by Professor Barnes, is as follows:

Betty Holt of Iowa City, Isabel Greenbeck of Algona, Ida Helen Olin of Iowa City, Edward Freutel of Aledo, Ill., Robbins Warren Fischer of Turin, Rachel Johnston of Washington, Merle D. Miller of Marshalltown.

West Bend

Irene Mikes of West Bend, Flora-Houston of Nevada, Joseph Hadish of Cedar Rapids, John Collinson of Marshalltown, Roy Stephenson of Potosi, Dorothy Ellen Rambo of Creston, Robert Bell of Mt. Hamilton, and Mulford Studebaker of Madrid.

The all-state high school players and debaters are selected each year on the basis of work in the state public speaking contests and the one act play production contest here. Several are also named for excellence in regular class work, upon recommendation of the teachers.

SEEN from Old Capitol

By TOM YOSELOFF

Unless my debating sense deceives me, the summer session assembly yesterday morning in Iowa Union almost turned into an argument between President Walter A. Jessup and President-elect Eugene A. Gilmore on the merits of educational averages.

President-elect Gilmore compared averages (educational and climatic) with a shower bath which alternated scalding hot and icy cold water.

"Of course," he admitted, "the average of the water was 70 degrees. But it was not the average which was disturbing; it was the extremely hot and extremely cold water which fell at specific times.

"Education is like that—not a matter of the average, but of the individual."

Then President Jessup arose to speak. Telling of his early experiences here at Iowa, he said that in his first years as director of the summer session, 1913, classes in educational statistics were organized. And in a subtle way he deflected educational averages. However, he did not carry the matter further. Which this department believes was considerable on his part—for, after all, Dear Gilmore was not allowed a rebuttal speech.

Lift, says this corner, is made up of little incongruities. For example, consider the case of the somewhat bald summer session student—probably headed toward a Ph.D.—who came to the assembly yesterday morning and slept through nearly the entire performance, and woke up just in time to jump up when the audience started singing the university hymn, "Old Gold."

This morning we present the fourth sketch—"It takes all kinds to make a campus like ours."

Amana Trip Tomorrow To Open Summer Session Tours

The first of the summer series of excursions under the auspices of the extension division and directed by Bruce E. Mahan, director of the division, will leave the Iowa avenue entrance of East hall at 8:30 tomorrow for a tour of the Amana colonies.

From Iowa City, the excursion will follow highway No. 6 through Homestead to Amana. Here the group will inspect the Amana woolen mills to see the entire process by which blankets and other woens are woven. The washing, dyeing, carding, spinning, and weaving of the wool; the washing and shrinking of the woven material; and the finishing processes will be explained and demonstrated.

To Visit Store

The group will then visit the community store after which it will proceed through the colonies of Middle, High, and West Amana to South Amana.

In lower South Amana dinner will be served at one of the hotels which

Popular Foster Compositions Shown at Ranney Library

"Massa's In De Cold Ground," "Old Black Joe," "Old Dog Tray," and reproductions of all other first and early editions of Stephen Foster's compositions are now on display at Ranney library.

"Open Thy Lattice Love," Foster's first copyrighted song, "Our Darling Kate," probably the last music he composed, and "The Toga Waltz," his first composition, are among the collection.

Well-Known Selections

The popular Civil war lyric, "We Are Coming Father Abraham, 300,000 Strong," for which Mr. Foster supplied many musical settings, may be seen.

The familiar song, "The Old Folks At Home," may be found labeled "words and music by E. P. Christy."

This is a bit disconcerting until one reads that Foster sold to Christy the right to have his name appear on the title page. Later editions credit Foster with both the words and music. Christy was the leader of a troupe of minstrels.

Two Portraits On Display

Two portraits of Foster, one with his friend and collaborator, George Cooper, and an architect's drawing of the Stephen Foster Memorial building now under construction at the University of Pittsburgh are also on display.

The completion of this work was under the direction of Josiah K. Lilly and made at Foster hall, Indianapolis, Ind.

Ranney library is located in the basement of Schaeffer hall and is open from 3 to 5 p.m. daily.

Commerce Group Plans Picnic At City Park Today

Students of the college of commerce will attend a picnic at the City park this afternoon. They will assemble at university hall at 4:30 and will go from there to the park. Recreation will include swimming, baseball, and other sports.

At 6 o'clock they will go to Red Ball inn for dinner. Dancing and bridge will follow.

Persons wishing to attend should make reservations at room 104, university hall.

Homer Dill To Lecture

Lists Schedule For Series of First Term

Homer R. Dill, director of university museum, has announced a series of lectures he will present on his field of work each Tuesday evening during the first term of the summer session.

His first lecture given last Tuesday evening was on the bird rookeries of Laysan island. The addresses will be presented at 8 p.m. in geology auditorium, and will be broadcast over WSUL.

The list of lectures to be given is as follows:

June 19—"Wild animal life of Louisiana gulf coast."

June 26—"The sea lions and birds of the northwest."

Another Jack Dempsey... Grueling Pace Wins... No Question as to Italy's Favorite... Former Champs at Ringside... Fight Game Looking Up

BY JACK GURWELL

IT LOOKS like another Jack Dempsey has stormed his way to the world's heavyweight championship. Baer opened his assault on Carnera with a fierce snarl and a barrage of terrific lefts and rights and was still hammering away when the fight came to its dramatic climax in the eleventh round.

THERE WAS no question, in Italy, as to who was the favorite last night. Italy's sporting public awaited news of the Carnera-Baer battle with odds ranging from 5 to 1 to 10 to 1 on their native son and their champion of the world.

THERE MUST be something in the saying that you can't keep an old fire horse away from a fire if he wants to go. Last night found three former champions at the ringside to see the title change hands: Gene Tunney was there, Jack Sharkey said he had come to see somebody else "take a punching around for a change."

IF LAST night's fight was indicative of anything, it was that the heavyweight fight game is looking up to better times. The $400,000 gate was a huge jump over the small takes from the past few heavyweight fights.

Hawkeye Ace Looks Ahead To Olympics

The Olympic games are two years distant but a University of Iowa athlete already is harboring hopes of becoming one of America's best hurlers of the javelin in Berlin.

He is Mark Panther of Burlington, who in a single year improved his mark from 180 feet to 211 feet 3 inches—and he is whipping the spear farther in almost every meet.

Panther will complete his sophomore year of intercollegiate competition at the National Collegiate A. A. meet in Los Angeles next week.

CHICAGO—America's greatest industry, agriculture, will be particularly recognized and honored at the 1934 World's Fair, Chicago, from Saturday, Aug. 11, to Saturday, Aug. 25, inclusive.

Stars Gather For Western Open Tourney

Officials Elated Over Large Field; Hagen Among Favorites

PEORIA, Ill., June 14 (AP)—Rallying to the cause of the historic tournament just as it was about to be snuffed because of unsatisfactory competitive support, more than 200 golfers, among them some of the foremost shot makers in the game, open fire on the western open championship over the short but heavily wooded Peoria Country club layout tomorrow.

MacDonald Smith, veteran carnoustle Scot, who won the title for the third time last year, was unable to defend his crown, but tournament officials were elated at the turnout, which included 10 of the low 25 at the national open last week and two Walker cup players, Gus Mereland of Dallas, Tex., who tuned up with a brilliant 67 yesterday, and Jack Westland of Chicago.

Senator Ace Gives Four Hits; Banish Haas From Park

WASHINGTON, June 14 (AP)—Monte Weaver baffled the Chicago White Sox today with a four-hit pitching performance that gave Washington a 5 to 1 victory and increased his own string of successive triumphs to seven. It was Weaver's eighth win this season.

The Senators supported him with timely blows of George Earnshaw and Phil Gallivan, who went to the mound in the eighth after the former Mackman had yielded seven hits. Banished Haas, Chicago's centerfielder, was banished from the park in the sixth when he protested from the bench against a strike that Donnelly called on Boken.

Kuhel led the Washington attack at the plate, pounding out three safeties in four times. His third hit was a triple against the score-keeper, scoring Stone and Cronin.

RINGSIDE, MADISON SQUARE GARDEN BOWL, NEW YORK, June 14 (AP)—While a cheering, shouting crowd milled outside his dressing room and his handlers put on fox trots in their joy, Max Baer calmly rose up from a dressing table and said "somebody bring the new champion a bottle of beer."

Defeats Italian by Technical Knockout in Eleventh Round Before Wild Mob of 50,000

Bout Ends in Chaos After Carnera Knocked To Floor 11 Times; Italian Asks Referee to Stop Fight

By EDWARD J. NEIL (Associated Press Sports Writer) RINGSIDE, MADISON SQUARE GARDEN BOWL, New York, June 14—In scenes as wild as the modern ring has ever seen, Max Baer won Primo Carnera's heavyweight title on a technical knockout, in the eleventh round of their championship match before a crowd of 50,000 tonight.

The bout ended in chaos after Carnera had been on the floor 11 times, twice in the last round before Referee Arthur Donovan stepped in with Carnera back on his feet and stopped the one-sided duel two minutes and 16 seconds after the start of the round.

Terrribly beaten, Carnera asked Donovan to stop the fight. Baer's right hand smashes, followed by lefts to the body, had reduced the giant to a state of complete helplessness.

Carnera was knocked down three times in the first round, went down three times again in the second round with Baer on top of him, then weathered the blasts until the tenth, when he was down twice from terrific right handers to the chin, all but out.

He was an easy mark for Baer in the eleventh. Carnera had a shade over 53 pounds in weight on the challenger, scaling 263 1/4 to Baer's 210. The Fight by Rounds Round One Baer, his face suddenly serious, slouched lazily from his corner as the gigantic Carnera boxed towards him, left carefully extended. They fell into a quick clinch without striking a blow and Baer missed a left to the head as they came away. Baer's face contorted fiercely as Carnera pumped three lefts to his mouth and the challenger ripped him furiously. He banged a left and right on the champion's side but Carnera, stepping about lightly for all his awesome bulk, fended him off to the left. A right hand smash knocked Carnera down. He was up without a count. Baer chased him from one side of the ring to the other and Carnera was up and down three times under the rightful pounding of Baer's furious fists. The champion reeled from rope to rope. There was no count on either of the three times he hit the floor. Baer was trying to measure him at the bell. Baer's round.

As Baer tore off viciously for the kill he nailed Carnera with a right to the head and both tumbled to the floor. They crashed down again as Baer landed a right high on the head. Again they fell, Baer on top as he drove the champion to the floor with a right high to the head. Game and dogged, Carnera fought to hold the challenger at bay, his left stuck out, his right high, as Baer stalked about him. But for a moment Max seemed to have punched himself out. Carnera quickly recovered. Another long overhead right smashed Carnera's temple but again he recovered quickly and, driving Baer to the ropes, clubbed him about against a strike that Donnelly called on Boken. Kuhel led the Washington attack at the plate, pounding out three safeties in four times. His third hit was a triple against the score-keeper, scoring Stone and Cronin.

Indians Beat Philadelphia In 11-7 Fray

PHILADELPHIA, June 14 (AP)—In three big innings, the Cleveland Indians pulled a ball game out of the fire today and administered an 11 to 7 trouncing to the Athletics to even the current series.

Hal Trosky's Two Home Runs Feature Contest

PHILADELPHIA, June 14 (AP)—In three big innings, the Cleveland Indians pulled a ball game out of the fire today and administered an 11 to 7 trouncing to the Athletics to even the current series.

The Redmen's rallies were featured by a pair of long home runs hammered out by Hal Trosky, rookie first baseman—one in the sixth with one on, and the other in the ninth with the sacks loaded.

Trosky Homers Mel Harder held the A's to 10 hits, but after a shaky start he had the situation in control all the way. Joe Casarella, the Philadelphia Italian, started on the mound for the A's, but weakened in the sixth and was replaced by Bill Dietrich, who, in turn, gave way to Bob Kline. Trosky's second four-bagger was made off Kline's slants.

The A's started the scoring, when Higgins' single sent home Jimmy Foyx in the second inning, but the Indians went into the lead in the third on Knickerbocker's hit which scored both Kamm and Harder.

Harder weakened in the third and the A's tallied four runs on as many hits. Warbler tripled scoring Crammer; Johnson doubled to send Warbler in; McNair singled to tally Johnson, and Foyx, who walked, crossed the plate on a fielder's choice.

Seeds scored Cleveland's third run on Harder's fly in the fifth, and Trosky's sixth-inning homer, with Hale on base, tied the score. Kamm's double in the eighth scored Trosky and Seeds to send the Indians ahead, and Trosky's homer in the fifth completed the Indians' scoring.

A belated rally by the A's in the closing frame was cut short after Cramer singled to score Higgins and Bing Miller.

Boston Defeated

ST. LOUIS, June 14 (AP)—Thirty-two hits, including five home runs, a triple and 10 doubles rang off the bats of the Cardinals and Braves today as St. Louis defeated Boston, 12 to 9. The victory enabled the Cardinals to remain in second place, ahead of the Chicago Cubs.

Frisch, Delaney and Durocher of the Cardinals hit for the circuit, Durocher's coming in the fifth with the bases full. Berger let Durocher's hit to center bounce past him and it went to the fence.

Tex Carleton got credit for the victory, although Dizzy Dean finished for him.

Score by innings: R. H. E. Boston.....200 401 002-9 18 1 St. Louis.....411 040 20*-12 16 2 Batteries—Cantwell, Mangum and Spohrer; Carleton, J. Dean and Delaney.

Dodgers Win

PITTSBURGH, June 14 (AP)—Van Lingle Mungo pitched five-hit ball over the 10 innings route to gain his fifth victory of the season today as Brooklyn turned back the Pirates, 3 to 2.

After Sam Leslie's fumble in the seventh had allowed the home team to tie the score, the Dodger first baseman made up for his misplay by rapping Ralph Birkofer for a double in the tenth and scoring the winning run on Joe Stripp's single.

The Dodgers bunched three singles off Larry French for a run in the fourth and tallied again in the sixth on an error by Gus Suhr. Stripp's steal of second and French's wild pitch.

Giants Down Reds for 3rd Straight, 3-0

Schumacher's "Jinx" Holds Good; Gives Four Hits

CINCINNATI, June 4 (AP)—The league leading New York Giants again ran into difficulties against the last-place Reds today but came out with their third straight victory because of Hal Schumacher's "jinx" against the Reds. Schumacher gave only four hits and bested Bernie Frey, 3 to 0.

The young right hander, who has been pitching to National league batters only three years, beat the Reds for the tenth time in that period. He has never lost to them. Frey, who was knocked out in the first inning two days ago, did somewhat better today. He pitched eight frames and allowed eight hits before he was removed for a pinch hitter and Don Brennan finished.

The Giants got their runs singly. They broke the scoreless deadlock in the fourth when Travis Jackson singled, took second on George Watkins' infield out and came home on Blondy Ryan's hot single through the box. In the next inning they added another run on plays that almost duplicated the first set. Joe Moore batted out a slow roller for a hit. Hughie Critz grounded out, sending Moore to second and Manager Bill Terry brought the runner in with a single. In the eighth Mel Ott got a base hit, advanced to third on Jackson's sacrifice and Watkins infield out and scored on a passed ball by Bob O'Farrell.

The only time the Reds threatened was in the eighth when the only walk of Schumacher and O'Farrell's single put Gordon Slade on third, but Ernie Lombardi, batting for Frey, hit into a double play.

Score by innings: R. H. E. New York.....000 110 010-3 9 0 Cincinnati.....000 000 000-0 4 1 Batteries—Schumacher and Mancuso; Frey, Brennan and O'Farrell.

Home Runs Feature Cub 6-4 Victory

CHICAGO, June 14 (AP)—Jarring a popular baseball theory that left-handed hitters usually are embarrassed by left-handed pitching, three Cub southpaw swingers—Chuck Klein, Babe Herman and Don Hurst—swung on Roy (Snipe) Hansen, Philadelphia left-hander, for a trio of home runs and a 6 to 4 victory today. The triumph put the Cubs ahead in the series, two games to one.

Between them, Klein, Babe Herman and Hurst accounted for eight of the Cubs' 10 hits and drove in all of the team's six runs. Klein's homer, his season's 16th, came after Capt. Woody English doubled in the first inning. Hurst's homer in the fourth and Babe Herman's in the sixth each found the bases empty.

But Klein singled and Babe Herman doubled in the seventh after Haslin fumbled Billy Jurge's grounder and English walked to account for the final two Cub runs.

Score by innings: R. H. E. Philadelphia.....001 000 030-4 11 1 Chicago.....200 101 20*-6 10 0 Batteries—Hansen, Johnson and Wilson; Malone, Lee and Harnett.

Max Baer's Mother Fights For "Honey Boy" as Hard As Champ Fought in Ring

Stages Radio Rally; Cries When Son Wins Title

DENVER, June 14 (AP)—Max Baer's mother fought for "honey boy" tonight almost as hard as her fighting son fought in the ring.

When it was all over and her boy was champion she cried and cried. "God bless you Mickey boy," she said half a dozen times, and then she stalked Scotch-Irish mother just put her head down and bowed.

All through the fight, she had been shouting encouragement to Max. "He's going after his solar plexus," she cried once, "that's what he wants to do."

Again and again she urged "honey boy" to "go in there and get him." Once, when Carnera had the best of it, she curled her lip a bit and said, "He can take it."

Then she added, "Max said he would bring home the bacon, and it looks like he'll bring the whole hog."

"In the Pantry" And when Max was measuring off the Italian, she advised him to "get the full measure while you're at it," and to "hit him in the pantry, big boy."

But when it was all over she could only cry. In that exciting first round, when Carnera was down, three gold fish were almost casualties in the Baer home. They were in a bowl on the Baer radio and in her excitement she brushed them off with her elbow. Somebody caught the bowl before it hit the floor.

"Sock 'em! Sock 'em!" Ma shouted. "Go after him sonny boy. You've got him going."

Blood Pressure Mounts As the going became exciting and Ma's blood pressure visibly mounted somebody called for a glass of wine for the champion's mother.

"I don't need it, give it to Carnera," Ma shouted. The radio suffered. Time and again Ma squared off at it and took a few punches before she realized it was wood and not the Italian's head she was pounding.

It was several seconds after the fight ended before Ma realized what had occurred. "He Won!" "He won!" she shouted. "He won!" Then her head crashed down on her arms and she cried. Most of the Baer clan was crying. But they quickly revived and beer was served to all.

BAER Batters Carnera To Win Crown

that he could have continued, but he spoke from his heart and his courage more than his senses. He was one of the most terribly beaten champions in all heavyweight history, crushed almost as badly as was Jess Willard under Dempsey's iron-fisted fists at Toledo in 1919.

Fought in Flashes Every time this grinning, derisive, contemptuous Baer, the Livermore ladies' man, threw his cobblestone fists into the great hulk of the Italian he all but tore him apart. That the challenger fought only in flashes probably accounted for the fact that Carnera lasted as long as he did.

Three times Carnera was on the floor in the first round, and three times more in the second he floundered down, terribly hurt, but dragging Baer with him as he grabbed his tormentor's arms trying to keep his balance. Again in the third a right to the chin flattened the mammoth.

Cuts Loose Again There were no more knockdowns until the tenth, although Carnera slid full length in his corner in the eighth as his weak legs failed to hold up his lunging body. But in the tenth, this murderous successor to California's earlier champions, Jim Corbett, Jim Jeffries and Dempsey, cut loose all over again.

Here was a round that for chaos, drama and throat-choking excitement will take rank with some of the most tense in all ring history. Battered, staggering, his huge face a bloody, gargoyle mask, Carnera came out with some doggedness and courage that marked every step of his hopeless stand. Baer drove him to a corner, drove both hands so deep to the body of the huge creature that it seemed the muscles should have boomed protest like the hide covering of a bass drum.

But instead of quailing, Carnera made his final gesture, a gallant thing to see. He lifted his arms and twisted his smashed features into a grin. He walked past Baer to mid-ring. He patted his body with his huge fists.

"No Hurt Me There?" "No hurt me there," he laughed. Baer, the clown, the showman, had to laugh with him. But only for a few seconds. His face drew down in his killer scowl. He bared his teeth. He crouched. He threw himself forward, hurling his overhand right that was as deadly as night as a leather bag full of buckshot.

His first right smashed so hard on Carnera's jaw, with a left hook following it to the pit of the stomach, that it stretched his shattered length on the canvas, full on Baer missed a long left to the head but drove a long right to the body and Primo beckoned him to come in and fight. Baer did, diving in headlong, and his right smashed on Carnera's chin as his left swung again into low territory. Carnera didn't complain. He came back with two right uppercuts that shot Max's head back though the champion's legs were floundering under him. Baer dove in with a left hook to the body and a right that glanced off the champion's shoulder. Carnera seemed to have a shade in this round.

Round 10 Baer came out in an exaggerated crouch and when Carnera reached for him with an open left glove, Referee Donovan ordered him to close his hand. They fell into a clinch and Carnera, strong again, hammered Baer's body with both hands. Then Baer turned the champion around and it was his turn to furiously smash a dozen lefts and rights to the ribs. Carnera walked out of the corner and motioned to Baer that the challenger could do no damage there. So Baer flung a long right to the head and missed, and Carnera grabbed him, hugged him, then pounded his head with both hands. As they came out of the clinch, two rights floored Carnera and he came up reeling. Baer smashed him to the floor again for a count of three. Baer had punched himself out as the champion lay back helplessly against the ropes and the bell rang with the crowd in an uproar. In one of those furious exchanges, Referee Donovan tried to stop the fight but Carnera forced it away. It was Baer's round.

Round 11 Baer was cautious as Carnera stumbled, a terrifically beaten hulk from his corner and Baer floored him with a long right to the chin. Carnera came up without a count and Baer smashed him again about the head. A dead game champion, Carnera flung his hands aimlessly at the challenger, and even whipped a hard left and right up to the head in mid ring. Carnera's legs wobbled scarcely hold him, but he threw a long right to the head. Then Baer floored him again with a long left to the chin. A right flattened Carnera again and as he came up Referee Donovan stopped the fight, giving Baer the world's championship on a technical knockout in two minutes, 16 seconds of the round.

Round Nine Carnera seemed much weaker as he came up this time. Baer stalked him like a merciless panther, grunting, baring his teeth, for the kill. But Carnera's courage was not undiminished. He crowded forward, jarring Baer off balance with his left, and he brought up a thunderous left hook to the challenger's face.

his back. It seemed as though no man living could stand up under such a fearful smash. Referee Donovan thought so. As Carnera stumbled to his feet, helpless, he stepped in and tried to turn Baer away, tried to send him to his corner, a victory then and there on a technical knockout.

Melee Furious But the melee was so furious, the weight and fury of the giants so great, they floundered loose from Donovan's grasp and again Baer shot that fearful right overhand to the head. Again it cracked full on the champion's jaw and again he stretched his awesome bulk, quivering on the canvas.

Fully as frantic as the roaring, maddened crowd, the leaning Baer, the howling seconds, the shouting newspapermen who didn't know whether Baer had fouled or not by hitting after the fight might have already been stopped, the harassed Donovan counted four over the prostrate champion before the bell ending the round came to his rescue as well as Carnera's.

Somehow they got Carnera off the floor and to his corner and frantically they prepared him for the last measure of punishment in the final round. No champion could have tried harder, anyway.

"Strange As It Seems"

In 1926, when precision flying was much more difficult than it is today, Roman Warren astounded the aviation world by flying a war-time scout plane 125 miles per hour under a bridge with only three feet clearance above and below. The feat was made even more difficult by the fact that just beyond the bridge it was necessary for him to go into a steep climbing bank to avoid trees along the river.

The bridge arch measured 16 feet from the highest point to the water-line. Warren's plane had an overall height of nine feet, but as the bridge arch curved downward from its central point the clearance above the wing tips and below the landing gear was less than three feet.

In flying under the arch the pilot had to judge his lateral position as well as his vertical position with uncanny correctness, for although the arch was 75 feet from side to side it curved downward so much that only the central portion would clear the plane.

Compared with this the flight through Eiffel tower arch was comparatively simple, for there is a space of 150 feet from side to side. Tomorrow: The dead victor.

"MA CINDERELLA" by Harold Bell Wright

CHAPTER I This story happened in the Ozark Mountains, not many years ago. The Ozarks, as you no doubt know, are in southern Missouri and northern Arkansas. The neighborhood of the story is not far from the boundary line which separates the two states; and for reasons which you will understand later I shall not say on which side of the line. For the same good reasons I will substitute names of my own invention for the people and places mentioned. In these days of federal watchfulness and easy libel one cannot be too careful. In all save these small but most necessary exceptions I shall tell the truth.

About forty miles, as the crow flies, from the Haskel place, a narrow-gauge baby railroad escaped from its parents one day, and wiggled and crawled through the woods and between and over the hills until it lost itself and stopped, too tired to go farther, too discouraged to go back. On the exact spot where the baby railroad gave up the ghost they built a shack for a boy telegrapher, a turntable for a toy locomotive, and a hut for a handcar, and called it all Wilderness Station.

From the station Wilderness Road drags itself fourteen lazy, crooked miles further into the wooded hills, fording the creeks in the narrow valleys, loafing along the hillsides, and toiling over the ridge until it climbs heavily up to Pine Knob store, which is on Pine Ridge at the foot of Pine Knob. Crossing the more pretentious Ridge Highway at the store, our road saunters indifferently on down a hogback to the Haskel place, where it hesitates a bit before moving on through the woods to its final destination—Wilderness Lodge, Wilderness Lodge is a clubhouse on a bluff overlooking Cold River, where a group of city folks spend their summer vacations.

Uncle Jimmie Cartwright says: "Hit air plum' humorous the way them Lodge folks wear themselves out a-tryin' to rest from wearin' themselves out so's they can go back to the city an' wear themselves out some more."

It was a sunny morning in early summer. "Cawn-plantin'" was well past. In the bottom field of Ann Haskel's little backwoods farm the rows of green blades could already be seen from the log house on the hillside. A few days more and it would be time to begin cultivating; the Ozark farmers call it "plowin'." Uncle Jimmie was working his slow passage along Wilderness Road between the Lodge and the Haskel place on his way to Pine Knob store to "fetch a new pint fer his cawn plow an' a passel of store terbaccer fer the old woman." I say "working his passage" because Uncle Jimmie was riding an ancient and melancholy mule and a very reluctant step of his unwilling mount the little old dried-up wrinkled mountaineer's heels thumped a hollow resounding thump on the gray skeleton's ribs, while Uncle Jimmie's gray head bobbed and his white chin-whiskers wagged and jerked in perfect time to the mournful tune.

As he laboriously approached the Haskel house (a log house of rather more imposing proportions than the typical cabin home of the Ozark mountaineer) Uncle Jimmie scanned the premises with wistful interest. He was wondering if it would be his fortune, that morning, to "meet up" with Ann Haskel, or Nance, or Jeff. Perhaps, if Ann were in a kindly mood—perhaps she would invite him to "light" and rest himself for a spell. She might even offer a swig of real mountain hospitality. Or Jeff, if he were around, might, in a neighborly spirit—that is, Jeff might, if Ann were away, Uncle Jimmie's blue eyes sparkled and he touched his dry lips with his tongue in pleased anticipation of what could so easily happen. It was likely though, he reflected, that Jeff would be plowing corn down in the bottom field; Ann Haskel always was a full week ahead of everybody else. As for Nance—Nance wouldn't dast to give a feller so much as a drink of spring water without askin' Ann if she could.

Ah! the mule, suddenly achieved a full stop. Uncle Jimmie remonstrated, emphasizing his protest with vigorous heels and arms. "You dad-burned old reprobate, what you stoppin' fer now? Giddap! Go 'long, blast you! You ain't got nothin' to think about; if you had, this ain't no time to be a-thinkin' 'bout hit. If a body war a-dyin' of thirst within half-a-quarter of a drink you wouldn't keer a hoot. Giddap! I ought to jest natchally get down right hear an' hang you measily hide on the fence. Git along, will ye? G-e-r-r-e-salem-on-high! You ain't took root hear, be ye? Ain't you never goin' to stir your fool self?"

Had Ahab inherited the genius of his paternal ancestors who served in somewhat similar circumstances under the illustrious Beaumont, he probably would have retorted: "You dad-burned old hill-billy, ain't you got no eyes in your fool head ter see what I'm a-seein'?" As it was, he mere pointed with his huge ears.

Uncle Jimmie looked, age when most men of his wealth are content to eat and sleep in the quiet pastures of retirement. Diane was little more than a baby when her mother died. Mrs. Carrol's sister, Jessica, a Virginia widow without children of her own, became mistress of the Carrol home and, so far as it was possible for such a woman to mother such a child, mothered Bill's daughter. But it was written that as mentor and guide to the only child of the house of Carrol, Aunt Jessica should find her responsibilities at times somewhat trying. Aided and abetted by a father who delighted in flouting Aunt Jessica's canons of culture and in violating the established laws of social propriety, Diane, as she grew into womanhood, developed a spirit and personality as unlike Aunt Jessica's model young lady as Aunt Jessica, herself, was unlike her rebellious

Less than fifty yards away a young woman was sitting before an easel.

"Wal, I'll be—Why'n heck didn't you say so?" "The poor child," Aunt Jessica frequently complained in tearful despair, "grows more like her father every day. What in the world am I to do?"

What, indeed, was she to do? What was anybody to do? Bill Carrol, understanding his daughter as no one else could, and instinctively believing in her genius, encouraged her to study art seriously.

"Don't dabble at it," he would say. "If you have no appreciation of the great souls who are giving themselves through the medium of form and color to the enrichment of human life, you can, at least, be decent enough to refrain from making a plaything out of what, to them, is most vital to their existence. Dabblers are an abomination unto the Lord. Their dabbling is an insult to every real worker whose work is a grim necessity."

Diane did not "dabble." In the same spirit which led sons of wealth and social position to enlist as buck privates in the Great War, she enlisted to serve her apprenticeship with those self-supporting, self-respecting, self-sufficient but poverty-stricken students who dare to stake the years of their life in the great gamble. As desperately as they worked and played and lived she worked and played and lived.

Aunt Jessica was scandalized, but helpless. The girl's father "gloried in her spirit," and rooted for her madly as he watched her playing the game without fear or favor. When her first picture was accepted, Bill staged a celebration at home which would have stunned Diane's fellow-students in Paris. It sent Aunt Jessica to bed for a week.

Baer drilled a right to the body but the champion stuck doggedly to his task, popping the challenger's head with lefts as Baer straddled, grinned, and posed for his friends at the ringside. Carnera caught him on the ropes and smashed both hands to the head, forcing Baer to take him seriously. The challenger was all bent up in a furious snarl, about to launch another crushing attack. It was Carnera's round.'

2 Witnesses Fail to Appear; Sharp Trial Continues Today

Disbarment Trial Draws Toward Close at Courthouse

Failure of two witnesses to appear for a second questioning yesterday afternoon caused the disbarment proceeding against Vernon L. Sharp to continue for another day.

Mr. Sharp indicated that he would examine the witnesses at 9 o'clock this morning before concluding his final argument, which began shortly before adjournment yesterday.

Garrett to Answer

The case is expected to go to the three district judges sitting as a special court by this afternoon, after Harry Garrett, assistant attorney-general, has answered Mr. Sharp with final argument for the prosecution.

Mr. Sharp's defense occupied the day yesterday. After calling four witnesses in the morning, he spent the day on the witness stand in his own defense, relating his version of each of the transactions involved in the 18 charges against him.

Cross-Examined

He was cross-examined by Mr. Garrett, and questioned at length by District Judge D. E. McGuire of Dubuque, who acted as chairman of the bench for the day, and by District Judges D. W. Hamilton of Grinnell and George A. Johnston of Creston.

Mr. Sharp admitted neglect and unwise business methods in connection with many of the financial transactions involved, but has denied bad faith or unprofessional conduct.

Witnesses called yesterday morning were Henry Negus, Joe Yeggs, Joe Callahan and O. E. Carroll.

City Council Meets Tonight

The third reading and vote on an ordinance fixing electric light rates in Iowa City will be the main feature of tonight's council meeting in the city hall.

The letter received by Mayor Harry D. Breene last week on Iowa City's application for funds for a sewage disposal plant will also be discussed at the meeting.

It was thought last night that Alderman S. M. Woodward and Jacob Van der Zee would not be in their chairs tonight, both being out of town.

John Butler Dies Yesterday From Appendix Rupture

John Butler, 31, of Iowa City died early yesterday afternoon at Mercy hospital. Death resulted from a ruptured appendix.

Mr. Butler was born in Silverton, Col., and came to Iowa City eight years ago. He was employed as a driver for University hospital.

Complete funeral arrangements have not been made, but burial will be at Oakland cemetery with the Beckman funeral home in charge.

Mr. Butler is survived by his widow and two children.

N.Y. State Population Up

ITHACA, N. Y.—The population of New York state increased 21.2 per cent from 1926 to 1930 while the rural non-farm population increased 49.6 per cent during the same period, it is reported by Kenneth Hood in "Farm Economics," published here by Cornell university.

Johnson County Farmers Prepare To Fight Invasion of Chinch Bugs

Johnson county farmers are busy "digging in" for an extensive battle against invading hordes of chinch bugs, which are eating their way into the county from the south.

More than 2,000 gallons of creosote emulsion have been poured into furrows being dug on every bug-infested farm to stop the advance of young bugs from small-grain fields to the corn fields.

Officials of the Iowa City Light and Power company said yesterday that they had already donated 2,000 gallons of creosote and have orders for that much more.

Supply Limited

The supply of creosote is limited to about 9,000 gallons in Johnson county and County Agent S. Lysle Duncan urges farmers to obtain it as soon as possible. Farmers may obtain the creosote for the barriers from the light company, after receiving an O.K. slip from the farm bureau office.

Chinch bugs have been reported on farms along the southern edge of the county but only occasional reports have come from northern sections.

Sucking Insect

The chinch bug is a sucking insect which feeds entirely upon the sap of plants belonging to the grass family and usually originates in small-grain fields from which it migrates to nearby corn fields. Some idea of its size may be obtained from the fact that in one spot in the county 5,000 bugs were reported in a square foot of ground.

According to County Agent Dun-

Kautz Tells Of Superior Motor Fuel

Rotarians at their luncheon yesterday noon at the Jefferson hotel had as their guest speaker C. F. Kautz, western manager of the Ethyl Gasoline corporation. Using a one-cylinder gasoline engine as a demonstrator, he explained the comparative merits of regular and ethyl gasolines.

Pointing out that automobile manufacturers had increased the power of motors in the last decade by increasing the compression, Mr. Kautz showed that beyond a certain point the increased compression causes a knock in the motor which can be eliminated by using a fuel which contains tetraethyl lead. Guests at the luncheon were Ed M. Smith of Winterset, Ralph F. Evans of Neoga, Ill., Paul H. Bek of Seward, Neb., J. Herbert Peet of Washington, Ia., and H. U. Choldan of Sterling, Ill., and Dean Julian Monett of the college of law at the University of Oklahoma, Norman, Okla., with Lee Nagle, Robert M. Spedel and Merritt C. Spedel.

New Highway Project Gets Started Here

The R. J. Phelps Construction company started work yesterday on the first of four PWA county highway projects, which are to cost a total of $13,455.

The first project is the grading and draining of a county trunk road in Washington and Union townships.

The company, using four skilled and 20 unskilled laborers, received its contract from the county board of supervisors several months ago and began work after the contract had been approved by the bureau of public roads at Omaha, Neb.

The second project will be the grading and draining of a county trunk road in Oxford township.

Two projects are on local roads in Oxford and Hardin townships.

Youths May Enroll in Marine Corps

During the next five months an unlimited number of young men between the ages of 17 and 25 will be accepted for service in the marine corps, Postmaster C. A. Bowman announced yesterday. Eligible men must be between 5 feet 8 inches and 6 feet 2 inches in height and be enlisted for four years.

Interested persons may write to the marine corps recruiting station, room 824, new postoffice building, Chicago, Ill.

Minors are eligible only with the consent of their parents.

Grass-Covered House

AUSTELL, Ga. (AP)—The metal roof on the community cotton gin here is covered with a carpet of grass that is growing thicker and taller. Loose cotton brought in for ginning apparently contained grass seeds which the gin fans blew to the roof. Nobody, however, seems able to explain just how the seeds germinated and the grass grew without soil.

AROUND THE TOWN with BILL MERRITT

Oh, Well
Puns are never anything more than obnoxious, but here is one of the better ones—as overheard in a local cafe yesterday. "Women are being barred from Madison Square Garden," the waiter said. "Why?" asked the customer. "Because Carhera is fighting Baer," the waiter flipped. So we paid our bill and left.

Popping
Things were really popping at the police station yesterday. The place was littered with agents, federal and state, and with Iowa Citizens anxious to hear kidnap news.

Padlock Wanted
Martin Pederson, husband of Mrs. Martin Pederson, who is director of the local Red Cross relief office, is in the market for a padlock to lock up his clothes.

It seems that Mrs. Pederson has been donating her husband's shirts and socks to the unemployed coming into her office for aid.

"Hints to Horses"
South Clinton street, long a stamping ground of all the best horses in the county on afternoons when their drivers were in town, has been closed to horse parking. Looks like a back to the farm movement for horses.

Wheat Prices Fall
CHICAGO (AP)—Dominated by big stock-loss selling, the wheat market crashed today to 14 1-8 cents a bushel under 1934 top quotations attained hardly a fortnight back.
