If Reports Are True, Chinese Births Put Canada Behind.

CANTON, China, July 27 (AP)—The notoriety of the now world-famous Dionne quintuplets of Corbeil, Ontario, promises to be eclipsed if a report circulating here that a Chinese woman, the wife of a native boatman, gave birth to seven boys and one girl proves true.

Although reports of this octette birth were only recently given prominence, the babies were said to have been born in May aboard a Chinese fishing junk somewhere within the delta of Pearl river, a tortuous waterway connecting with the Canton sea.

The reports, which the Chinese press is featuring with evident belief in their accuracy, state that the woman is the wife of one Sam Ting, a poor boatman and that the mother and children all are in good health.

Attempts to locate the boat in which this family is said to be living or otherwise to confirm the story have failed thus far, although the Chinese papers are hailing the now famous Sam Ting as a great benefactor to the nation.

According to the Chinese interpretation, the boatwoman in giving birth to these eight babies brought forth "seven stars and one moon" which, to the Chinese, means that the seven sons will bring wealth and glory to their family and shine beautifully as stars while the daughter will bring solace and comfort and be as delightful as the moon.

Despite skepticism among foreigners here the story of this record-breaking birth is occasioning great excitement among the Chinese, to whom no event compares in importance with the arrival of a male child.

Dionne Babies 2 Months Old

CALLANDER, Ont., July 27 (AP)—The famous Dionne quintuplet sisters will be two months old tomorrow and they have gone all that time without a bath, except for cleansing with oil. Soap and water may be in store for them some time next week, their doctor said tonight.

Officers Think Nelson Seen

Believe "Baby Face" Driver of Car In Holdup

HENDERSON, y., July 27 (AP)—Belief that George "Baby Face" Nelson drove the automobile in which four bandits fled from Henderson after robbing the Farmers Bank and Trust company of $34,327 was expressed today by department of justice agents and local officers.

Employes of the bank and the operator of a filling station, where one of the robbers purchased a tire, viewed photographs of Nelson today and told the investigating officers that the pictures resembled one of the men in the holdup yesterday.

Tonight the search for the bandits turned to Adair county, after the automobile used by the bandits was discovered abandoned near Henderson today and found to be the property of John R. Foxx, 213 Schiller street, Chicago, but licensed in Adair county, Kentucky.

One Killed, Six Deputies Injured in Kohler, Wis. Strike Riot

Truckers Ask Olson to Lift Military Rule

Strikers in Minneapolis Seek to Answer Governor

BULLETIN

KOHLER, Wis., July 27 (AP)—One man was reported shot and killed tonight and another near death from bullet wounds received in a gun battle between armed deputy marshals at the strike-bound Kohler company plant here and strikers.

BULLETIN

KOHLER, Wis., July 27 (AP)—Tear gas was unleashed by deputy marshals tonight to disperse a crowd estimated at about 600 which was bombarding the strike-bound Kohler company plant here.

Disorders started in the picket lines as strikers and hangers-on, many of them children, began throwing stones through windows of the plant and smashing lights about the grounds.

KOHLER, Wis., July 27 (AP)—Six Kohler village deputy marshals were injured late today when strike pickets at the Kohler company plant stoned four trucks in which about 75 deputies were patrolling the streets. The most severely injured was Max Schultz, struck on the head with a brick. None was seriously hurt.

The deputies remained in the trucks during the fusillade of brickbats and the disturbance shortly subsided. Pickets, however, continued to mill about the plant, although their lines were routed earlier in the day when the officers confiscated ther clubs and other makeshift weapons with which they had besieged the plant for 12 days.

Fear New Attack

The hurling of missiles was taken up first by stragglers in the picket line far from the main building of the huge plumbing equipment manufacturing plant. Soon the attack ran down the line until it reached the main building.

Deputies were fearful that the throng, now that lights about the grounds were extinguished by the stones, would reassemble for another attack later.

Leaders, Olson Meet

MINNEAPOLIS, July 27 (AP)—Leaders of striking truck drivers met with Gov. Floyd B. Olson tonight, demanding that he revoke military rules of Minneapolis while the employers advisory committee penned a pert reply to the chief executive for his recent attack against the citizens alliance.

Unaware of these developments, armed guards patrolled the streets of a 72 block downtown area with orders to preserve law and order. The city's quiet was unbroken by any untoward disturbance.

Strike leaders claimed the military rule interferes with the strike and their picket activities.

Send Letter to Governor

Simultaneously, the employers, after rejecting the Rev. Francis Haas' suggestion that they reconsider action by which they refused the last peace terms and thereby precipitated martial rule, sent the following letter to the governor.

"Your communication of July 26 was delivered to our committee only a short time before your proclamation of martial law. Your proclamation suggests it would be dangerous to answer your letter in kind.

"May we have your official military permission to make and publish such reply as your letter calls for?" The missive was signed by Joseph R. Cochran, chairman of the committee.

Seek Omaha Settlement

OMAHA, Neb., July 27 (AP)—Strikers, company officials, and the public, too, tonight anxiously waited the results of lengthy conferences which it has hoped would lead to settlement of the second Omaha street car strike in four months.

R. L. Blume of Kansas City, secretary of the U. S. regional labor board, was the principal figure in the negotiations, but had nothing to announce as his first day of conferences drew near a close.

AUSTRIAN TURMOIL KINDLES SPARK OF UNREST ON CONTINENT

With the peace of Europe threatened by the turmoil in Austria where a Nazi element attempted to overthrow the government by slaying Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss and imprisoning other officials, war clouds loom again over the horizon of the continent. While the British government prepared to demand an investigation of shipments of arms and munitions from Germany into Austria, Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy issued war-time military orders, directing all military forces be held in readiness pending Austrian developments. At the same time, Czechoslovakia indicated it was prepared for any emergency.

EXTRA!

$10,000 Blaze Razes Two Buildings At Riverside Early Today

RIVERSIDE, July 28 (Saturday) (Special)—The Iowa City fire department was called here at 2:10 this morning to fight a $10,000 blaze which demolished two of the largest buildings in the business district of Riverside.

The fire started shortly after 1:30 in a frame building owned by R. H. Heitzman. The building was filled with storage and burned like tinder.

It spread rapidly to the building next door, a brick structure owned by L. K. Steman in the basement of which 100 barrels of oil were stored.

The blaze was the greatest Riverside had had since the entire business district burned down in a disastrous blaze about 50 years ago. Since then all of the frame structures had been replayed by brick.

Coast Brush Fire Spreads

Residents Ordered Out Of Homes; Damage Mounts High

PASADENA, Cal., July 27 (AP)—All residents of the Arroyo Seco district north of Altadena were ordered to evacuate their homes late today because of the menacing spread of a brush fire raging out of control a few miles north of here.

Damage was estimated unofficially at more than $2,500,000. At least 2,000 men sought to stem the advance.

Roars Up Mountain

Speeded along by a northeasterly wind, the fire was roaring up scenic Mount Lowe and had climbed two thirds of the distance along the Pacific Electric right of way toward the Mountain Tavern and several cottages.

About 300 cottages were in the path of the flames. Some had been destroyed. Forest rangers said there was no immediate danger of loss of life. They feared, however, they would not be able to get the fire under control before tomorrow.

Fires Near Duluth

DULUTH, July 27 (AP)—Fanned by winds sweeping across drought-blistered territory, grass, brush and forest fires this afternoon called hundreds of fire fighters into action near Duluth and throughout the arrowhead country.

3 Men to Man Stratosphere Balloon as Trip Starts Today

Last Minute Decision Includes Alternate Pilot of Flight

RAPID CITY, S. Dak., July 27 (AP)—Three men instead of two will take part in the daring stratosphere flight from the Black Hills, its sponsors announced tonight as inflation of the world's largest balloon was started in preparation for the ascent near dawn tomorrow.

Captain Orvil A. Anderson, alternate pilot, will ride in the sealed metal gondola with Major William E. Kepner, pilot, and Captain Albert W. Stevens, scientific observer, as they soar skyward from rock-rimmed Moonlight valley near here in the quest of scientific secrets of the thin upper air.

DES MOINES, July 27 (AP)—Two National Broadcasting company employes attached to the mobile radio unit which will be used to follow the flight of the stratosphere balloon over Iowa were released tonight from Polk county jail after posting bond on assault and other criminal charges.

The men, George Milne of New York, director of NBC's mobile unit which is expected to broadcast the stratosphere flight, and C. I. Russhon, NBC employe, were arrested following an alleged altercation with four Des Moines youths near Johnston, last night.

Decision to take Anderson on the theory that navigating the mammoth gas bag and operating the ton of intricate scientific instruments is a "three-man job" was reached after the balloon had been laid out for inflation on the sawdust-padded ring.

Motorists jammed the road to the flight camp a few hours after Major Kepner announced favorable weather would permit a takeoff between 4 and 6 a.m. Saturday. Hundreds of spectators gathered on the 500 foot cliffs overlooking the sheltered basin where a ground crew of 120 cavalrymen from Ft. Meade handled the balloon, working in the glare of giant floodlights.

DES MOINES, July 27 (AP)—Final orders were given today to national guardsmen mobilized in units of 26 men in each of 56 cities to give protection to the stratosphere balloon observers if they land in Iowa.

President Narrowly Misses Accident During Drive

BULLETIN

HONOLULU, July 27 (AP)—President Roosevelt narrowly escaped being involved in an accident here today when a horse drawing a vegetable cart became frightened and plunged into an automobile directly behind the presidential car.

HONOLULU, July 27 (AP)—President Roosevelt took an automobile drive about the city today and went on to Pearl Harbor, where his luncheon host was Rear Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commandant of the fourteenth naval district.

Inspection of the facilities of the navy's mid Pacific base was the principal part of the executive's afternoon program.

Mr. Roosevelt retired to his hotel suite at Waikiki early today after attending a reception and Hawaiian entertainment in his honor.

Byrd's Associates Telegraph Mother Not to Be Worried

WINCHESTER, Va., July 27 (AP)—Efforts of Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd's associates at Little America to reach him at his advance base probably will not be resumed until late August or early September, when the antarctic night will be over.

His mother, Mrs. Richard E. Byrd, Sr., was so informed in a message transmitted by radio from Little America to New York and thence by telegraph. It urged Mrs. Byrd not to be worried over her son's safety, nor uneasy about the reported injury to his arm, which the message said, was believed due primarily to soreness from cranking his radio broadcasting outfit.

Rains Bring Heat Relief

Toll of 1,429 Lives Taken by Long Heat Wave

(By the Associated Press)

Widespread rains and generally cloudy skies over the major portion of the nation Friday brought decided relief after a week of stifling weather with 100 degree and higher readings not uncommon. The heat took a toll of 1,429 lives.

Moisture was far from adequate, however, and most of the parched fields received merely a surface wetting which failed to reach the subsoil. Prices on the Chicago board of trade were higher for all grains. Crop experts continued to predict greatly decreased yields of all staple grains because of the ravages of drought, heat, insect pests and reduced acreages.

Drought stricken cattle continued marketward and numerous sections faced water shortage despite rains.

Accurate estimates of dollar losses to farmers and producers were unavailable but agronomists admitted they would reach into millions for both crops and livestock. Even with continued widespread rains, many crops already have been declared beyond hope.

Temperatures throughout the great Mississippi valley were considerably lower and the number of additional heat fatalities showed a decided decline. Forecasts for most states in the great central plains were for cooler weather and showers.

Compromise With Socialists Impossible, Says New Head Of Austria; Guarded by Guns

Reports of Successes Of Nazis Heard In Capital

By WADE WERNER

By The Associated Press

VIENNA, July 27 (AP)—A no-compromise defy was hurled at revolting Nazis tonight by the new head of the government, Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, after another day of bitter fighting which brought casualty estimates close to 3,000.

Protected by guns which told eloquently of fear for the safety of the capital itself, the youthful von Starhemberg exhorted Austria over the radio:

"Can Never Be Compromise"

"Do not depart one inch from the way prescribed by Dollfuss!

"I declare solemnly that we regard as the holy heritage of our dead chancellor that there can never be any compromise with national socialism."

Even as he spoke alarming reports of rebel Nazi military successes in Carinthia were accompanied by appeals for reinforcements of loyal Helmwehrmen.

"Von Papen Coming"

The government assured the people that "Von Papen is coming!" and that the former German chancellor would bring peace to Austria.

But peace assurances were offset by chaos in whole sections of the country caused by Nazi uprisings and hunger riots.

Unverified rumors that Italian troops were crossing the border brought flat denials from Italy. They had caused apprehension in neighboring Yugoslavia, which declared that nation must mobilize if Austria is invaded by foreigners.

The government was hard put to

Germany Pleased By Von Papen Appointment

BERLIN, July 27 (AP)—Appointment of Vice Chancellor Franz von Papen as minister to Austria with instructions to report personally to Chancellor Hitler was viewed in the Reich today as a master political stroke.

The German press and government officials pointed with satisfaction to the enthusiasm with which official Austria received the news that the conservative, non-Nazi member of the government is going to Vienna.

The action was taken to mean that Hitler is emphasizing his intention to preserve a stricter neutrality toward Austria, and that he is turning ill will into good will.

Italian Spokesman Says If Necessary Troops Move at Once

BULLETIN

ROME, July 27 (AP)—It was officially denied tonight that Italian troops had crossed the border into Austria, the statement saying that such reports were "utterly without foundation."

"There has been no movement whatsoever of the nature described," said a foreign office official.

"Not a single Italian soldier has crossed the border either intentionally or by error."

ROME, July 27 (AP)—A stronger Italian position, calling for intervention in Austria if the internal situation justifies such action, was revealed today by a government spokesman.

Heretofore the government had been represented as ready to move into Austria—on whose borders 48,000 troops are concentrated—in event independence of that nation was threatened from the outside.

No Delay

Today, with reports of severe fighting in Carinthia province, the spokesman said that if action is required, there will be no necessity for delay for any diplomatic protest.

The troops will simply move into the country when such action is regarded as necessary, the spokesman indicated.

Move Will Be Rapid

The move, he continued, will be rapid and decisive just as soon as it becomes apparent that the Austrian government cannot control the situation.

If Austria is able to settle the present difficulty without outside help, Italy will consider what steps should be taken to guarantee that country against further terrorism, it was indicated.

French Say War Now Impossible

PARIS, July 27 (AP)—The view that war as a result of the assassination of Chancellor Dollfuss is "impossible" was expressed today by the French foreign office.

Rather, it was said, the French view is that peace was strengthened by the failure of the Nazis to seize the government.

Other officials interpreted the events as a "striking defeat" for Chancellor Hitler of Germany.

The French pledged to the maintenance of Austrian independence, have taken no active steps. They regard any move as unnecessary at this time.

Engelbert Dollfuss—Martyr to Democracy

NOW that the haziness of the first reports on the attempted Austrian putsch has somewhat cleared away, the significance of the move becomes more apparent. Not only did the Nazis fail in their revolution, but in their failure they struck what may be a death blow to Austrian Nazism.

They have made so unpopular their cause that all of Europe stands ready to crush them at the slightest provocation. In Austria the population has turned against them viciously, with threats of lynching for the 144 who were responsible for the attempted coup at Vienna. In Germany Hitler is for the first time feeling the weight of European opinion against him and is doing everything possible to avert disaster to his party.

In all this the greatest contributing factor is the assassination of the "little chancellor"—Engelbert Dollfuss, the man who held Austria together through two severely critical years. The world is aghast at the descriptions of his slaying—of his courage at the last minute, of his suffering, and the cruelty of his murderers.

One of the youngest prime ministers in Europe—he was only 39 years old when he took office in May, 1932—he ruled with a sort of religious nationalism. When he came into power the feeling in Austria was strongly in favor of an "anschluss"—a union with the German republic.

Dollfuss put his foot down on that sentiment. He sent parliament home, he disbanded the socialist army and took away their arms, he reorganized the Austrian cabinet, taking four portfolios himself. In short, the "little Napoleon"—he was 4 feet 11 inches tall—ruled with an iron hand.

He gained the sympathy of the world. For he was trying to save a semblance of democracy in Austria when it was threatened by the viciousness of German Nazism. And he succeeded at the cost of his own life.

Europe is thoroughly aroused now. The death of the chancellor has made it determined that German Nazism will not spread into Austria. Engelbert Dollfuss died a martyr to the cause for which he worked.

"John Brown's Body Lies A-Mouldering—"

AN OLD, badly kept house at Springdale stands today as mute evidence of one of the strangest chapters in American history—enacted three-quarters of a century ago, when John Brown carried his anti-slavery campaign into Iowa.

Attention has been directed to the house several times in the last year, and several days ago Prof. Benj. F. Shambaugh announced that the State Historical society, in cooperation with the state planning board, may restore it and preserve it as a state historic shrine.

John Brown has always been in our memory an imposing part of American history. He formed a fearsome chapter in grade school study—this man inspired by the voice of God to free all the slaves in America.

He was a mystery—absolutely fathomless. Later biographies, with their attempted analyses of his character, only served to cloud more the auro of romance and mystery which surrounds his life.

"God's angry man" set out to wage a war by himself against the forces of slavery, the forerunner of the great conflict which followed a few years later.

The house at Springdale, where he lived in 1858, is indeed an important historic site in Iowa.

A Warning To Governor Canabal

"Thank God, there's no priest or bartender in my state"—excerpt from an address by Gov. Carrido Canabal of the Mexican state of Tabasco.

* * *

GOVERNOR CANABAL seems about ready for a lesson, and he can probably draw his moral from the experience of other governmental banning-ers.

He might have been safe enough if he had not attempted to set his foot down in the matter of tombstones and bobbed hair.

Even Adolph Hitler, iron dictator and champion banning-er of all time, knew where to draw the line. He stepped on religion, he stepped on the press, he stepped on political parties. He even went so far as to dictate matters of men's dress and to rewrite the stories of the Bible.

But he knew when to stop. He didn't try to dictate matters of feminine beauty, and to tell women not to bob their hair. And Governor Canabal will soon learn!

What Others Think

Triumph at Wimbledon

(From the New York Herald-Tribune)

Now that Sidney B. Wood and Francis X. Shields have brought about the defeat of Australia's tennis team through their double-barreled Garrison finish of yesterday, the possibility that the United States will regain the Davis Cup does not seem remote.

The American team now has reached the challenge round in which it will play England, starting Saturday. Theoretically England has a marked advantage in singles competition with Fred J. Perry and H. W. Austin as its representatives. But the competitive fervor displayed by Wood and Shields in beating Jack Crawford and Vivian McGrath, after Australia had gained a 2 to 1 advantage in matches, is reassuring.

Wood and Shields have been at best indifferent performers in crucial international team play up to this point. Wood was a fizzle as a member of the 1931 Davis Cup team and has not participated since. Shield's last previous Davis Cup campaign in Europe was in 1932, when he was beaten by both Prenn and Von Cramm in the interzone final with Germany and was displaced by Wilmer Allison in the challenge round against France.

Yet at various times both he and Wood have played unbeatable tennis. Under the steadying influence of Dick Williams, who seems to be an exemplary team captain, it is not improbable that they will continue as they have started. The United States needs two singles victories out of four to beat England; but after yesterday's magnificent tennis, played with odds against them, American hopes will rise together with American congratulations upon the feat.

GOOD MORNING

If Stuart Chase is right in describing himself as the precurser of a new economic philosophy which is to take the place of capitalism, socialism, communism and fascism all in one sweep, probably there is some hope for the future.

Whatever one thinks of Mr. Chase, one can hardly disagree with his thesis that no single one of these isms is any longer adequate.

Capitalism, as he observes, has now "compounded itself into a a quite dreadful impasse," until it has reached the point where, with a better than two hundred billion dollar shrinkage in values in four years, the question of plant ownership is no longer of paramount importance.

And this self-invalidation of capitalism cuts many a firm timber from beneath the structure of socialistic doctrine, for "capitalism has become a dear and necessary enemy," upon whose continued dreadful countenance socialism depended for its principal fire.

Both of the doctrines, Mr. Chase contends, were dependent upon a continued scarcity of goods, and necessarily lost most of their force as soon as surpluse became the primary fact in our economic system.

In his "Economy of Abundance" Mr. Chase rehaips the tenets of the technocrats and points out that this is an age in which the problems of distribution and of mass consumption have overshadowed those of production to such an extent that they have overturned all the old economic doctrines.

The result is obvious all around us, not only in the temporary stagnation of business, but in the uncertainty of the political scene and in a general feeling of dangling in mid air.

Though politicians sometimes talk in confident tones and offer promising plans for rejuvenating the prostrated body politic, one perceives a vague uncertainty beneath their surface confidence.

Parties no longer know for just what principles they are supposed to stand. Indeed, they can hardly claim any principles whatever anymore. States rights. What does the phrase mean today, and to what party? High tariffs, low tariffs, which is which and who is who? Nobody knows.

And socialism—the opposition which once could be counted upon at least for a definite objective and a continuity of aim—seems to have disintegrated into a conglomerate hodge-podge of "progressive" off-shots.

There is no doubt but that the political scene today is more or less a muddle. Nobody knows just where we are going or why. Everyone attempts to interpret, and must alter his interpretations every week if he is not careful to be vague and non-committal.

Perhaps Mr. Chase has the answer. Maybe what we need is a completely new philosophy based firmly on the fundamental necessity for distributing goods. And perhaps he is the new prophet, although he admits that he has not yet reached the prophet stage. —Don Pryor

Behind The Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By Harrison Carroll

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. — As Marie Dressler's courageous life fight nears its end, the beloved actress has made a final gesture to bring laughter to the world. She has ordered that her own portable sound projection machine be put at the disposal of children recuperating from infantile paralysis. Her request was relayed to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, which is installing the equipment at Los Angeles' new general hospital. Dozens of youngsters, who have safely passed the crisis of their illness, will pay tribute with their laughter to the kind thought of the dying star.

Herr Lubitsch's house-warming drew 140 guests to exclaim over the beauty of his Mexican farm house, authenticity sworn to by Harold Grieve and Jetta Goudal who did weeks of research on the decorating. The rotund director doubled as host and hostess for his party, which went on till the wee small hours and hung up a new record for gayety. Dinner was served in the patio, where a wall of canvas shut off the sea breeze and a large brazier of hot coals took the chill off the air. Diners ate to the romantic strains of Viennese music.

Guests included practically the entire foreign colony and dozens of the bigger stars. Gloria Swanson was there in the same party with Herbert Marshall. Francis Drake squired by Frank Lawton. Virginia Bruce sat out several dances with Maurice Chevalier. And the Carl Brissons telling of the Danish star's narrow escape. Earlier in the day, he'd tried a difficult back dive and was knocked unconscious when his forehead struck the springboard.

A long and full evening—too full to chronicle here.

Nothing definite is decided as yet, but the Crosby twins probably will be named Dennis Michael and Phillip Lang—the former after Bing's grandfather and the latter after the late Eddie Lang, musician and pal of Bing's.

Order for 18 Coffins Tells Results of Phyrn Pass Battle

By CHARLES M. MEISTER
Copyright, 1934,
By The Associated Press

LIEZEN, Austria, July 27—An order for 18 new coffins summarizes the result of the battle on Phyrn pass which continued intermittently until nearly noon today.

It began at 2 p.m. Wednesday when an army battalion and several battalions of auxiliary troops were entering Ennstal, Styria, from upper Austria.

Among the dead were an army major, an army colonel and the gendarmerie commanders of three towns—Mautin, Saint Gallen and Groedming.

Woman, 2 Children Die

Casuities of a skirmish at the nearby "lime works and inn" include a woman and two children.

Eight miles down the road from this pleasant town men will work all night to make the coffins just as last night some four miles up the road men worked all night to make them necessary.

Some of the coffins are finished—they are painted grey and have bountiful golden decorations.

At the lower end of Ennstal a blownup railway bridge made it difficult for soldiers to enter the valley.

Putschist Troops Fail

Putschist troops desperately tried to keep them from entering through the upper end, but they failed after nearly 48 hours of fighting, just as the Nazis failed in Vienna and Leoben.

Fifty eight miles of beautiful mountain scenery separate Leoben from the Phyrn pass.

No part of it is more impressive than the pass where the men died in a setting of majestic beauty. There is a rocky cliff on one side and a narrow plain wooded area on the other.

To this pass the government forces marched down the road into a trap set by the Nazi Putschists.

Die in First Volley

Most of the federal men killed apparently died in the first volleys.

After that the soldiers and Heimwehrmen sought shelter of trees, thus preventing a repetition of Braddock's defeat in America.

A gendarmerie officer who participated in the battle told this correspondent that a lively exchange of shots continued until darkness. Then it ceased.

Late a nearly full moon brightened the peaks through the tops of pine trees and finally made it possible for men to continue killing each other.

Guns Cease at Times

From time to time clouds brought respite and the guns ceased to crack.

Some time about noon today the last Nazi hiding place from which the pass was defended by snipers was taken, and the order for wooden coffins was placed.

There is supreme irony in the battle here, for the bitterness which made the Nazis risk their lives against a superior force was due largely to lack of commercial orders from Germany.

PWAP Artists Will Exhibit Painting at Iowa State Fair

All Works of Local Group Are Eligible for Selection In First Showing in Iowa

Grant Wood May Also Exhibit Recent Paintings

An exhibit of paintings made by Public Works of Art artists working on the University of Iowa campus will be shown at the Iowa state fair, Prof. Grant Wood, director of the art works, announced yesterday.

The exhibit will be a feature of the annual salon of art, and will include those works selected as the best of the paintings made here. Selection will be made from all the work done, with the exception of three canvases now hanging in the White House and several selected by Iowa senators and representatives to hang in Washington, D. C.

This will be the first public showing in Iowa of the murals and other paintings completed here, Professor Wood said. Several of the works were exhibited in Washington, D. C., last spring in the national exhibition.

One of the features of the Iowa show will be a group of six-color reproductions made by Fortune magazine of the murals painted for Iowa State college in Ames.

Fair authorities declared that this exhibit will be the most unusual ever shown at the fair's art salon. Mrs. Henry Ness, head of the salon, announced recently that Professor Wood may also show several of his new paintings in the salon, but will not compete for any of the prize awards.

The Public Works of Art project was established on the University of Iowa campus last January, under the authority of the Civil Works administration. Professor Wood, who had gained much attention with such works as "Daughters of the Revolution," "Paul Revere's Ride," "American Gothic," and "The Birthplace of Herbert Hoover," was appointed to direct the project, for which artists were selected from all over the state.

In a studio set up in the northwest room of library annex, the artists began to work on a set of murals depicting the rise of agriculture and industry in Iowa, for the library at Iowa State college in Ames.

In addition, the men have made numerous reliefs, a set of murals for the Des Moines public library, and many other works. Iowa ranked highest in the states exhibiting works in the national show in Washington last spring.

With the disbanding of the Civil Works, the Public Works of Art project was taken over by the emergency relief administrations of the federal government and the states.

The studio here was moved to the field house, where Professor Wood has been working this summer with a smaller group of artists.

·SEEN· from Old Capitol

By TOM YOSELOFF

Lost, strayed, or stolen: One A.D. Pi. It seems that the whole thing started Thursday afternoon. At about 6 o'clock one of the girls at the Alpha Delta Pi house walked out. She didn't return Thursday night, and by yesterday morning, everyone was in some sort of state. Telephone calls thither and yon proved of no avail.

So the telephone calls continued—as did the frantic searching. Yesterday afternoon she was still among the missing, and things were in a mess generally. Late yeterday afternoon she returned, nonchalant and airy. Of course, you've guessed the rest by now. She stayed all night at the home of one of her girl friends. . .

The good ship What's-Her-Name, in port these 30 years or more, has set sail on the high seas for the second story of Macbride hall. In case these nautical terms have made you seasick, I might explain that a ship model which reposed in the batik case in the lower corridor of Macbride hall is being moved to a new location in the corridor of the second floor.

There's a history back of that ship. A few sticks of wood and whatnot, under the inventive genius of the late J. G. Gilchrist became a ship model three feet long, four feet high. Dr. Gilchrist was associated with the University of Iowa medical laboratory, and received an honorary M.A. degree in 1898. He died in 1906, leaving to the museum this official sloop-of-war.

It has been said, by those who should know, that the good ship What's-Her-Name has attracted more attention than any other display in the university museum. The new port will make its third. In the good old days of the sailing vessel and the bustle it resided in the old museum in geology building. Then it was moved to the first floor of Macbride hall, and now to the second floor.

Add exigencies of the economic depression: It was at the matches of the Mississippi valley tennis tournament yeterday. A well known man-about-the-campus was sitting with a woman waiting for his match to come up. He spoke to her, she nodded, and opened her purse. From the recesses she drew forth a package of tobacco of the brand with the bull and a package of cigaret papers. Nonchalantly they both sat and rolled their own.

Today's word for the campus dictionary:

Laboratory—a place where one may go to receive university credit without the inconvenience of instructors' lectures. Of various types, as Zoology laboratory—a training ground for sadists; geology laboratory—a training ground of fossils; botany laboratory—a safe place to experiment on the mysteries of life; and psychology laboratory. . .

University Club Women Make Plans For Winter Activities

(Editor's Note—This is the first of a series of articles about Iowa City clubwomen and their activities, written by Betty Reed, society editor of The Daily Iowan).

Mrs. Paul C. Packer, who started her presidential term in June as head of University club, will be chief director of all bridge parties, teas, lectures, sports, and special features of the club's winter program.

Although the organization's activities do not start at full capacity until September, clubrooms are remaining open this summer, for the first time, to permit members to meet for afternoon kensingtons and evening bridge parties.

A member of University club since she and Dean Packer, head of the college of education and summer sessions, came to the University of Iowa 11 years ago, Mrs. Packer is a former member of Columbia Dames club at Columbia university's teachers college.

She is an alumna of Knox college at Galesburg, Ill.

Next winter's events, as scheduled, will include evening and afternoon bridge parties, teas, Sunday night suppers and lectures, and pursuit of a different athletic event, such as ping pong, deck tennis, or hiking, each month, Mrs. Packer explained. The program committee is now arranging plans for September.

University club's membership totals 252. Women graduates of any college and wives of faculty members are eligible to membership. The three clubrooms, on the second floor at Iowa Union, are filled several times each week during winter months with University club women busily engaged in some social activity or listening to a lecture.

All social events are planned by the monthly committee, and are regularly announced by club bulletins printed each month.

While the members and their guests meet for informal afternoon kensingtons and bridge parties, Mrs. Packer and the program committee are searching for new ideas for a full and varied University club profram from September to June.

Dressmakers' Fight for Business In Paris May Send Prices Down

By ADELAIDE KERR

PARIS (AP)—A dressmakers' fight for business may force further reduction in clothes prices here.

One of the largest is even reported contemplating the installation of a special department selling frocks as low as 500 francs (about $35 at the present rate of exchange).

Such a departure would be in line with the battle which designers have waged for the last two years on business conditions produced by the world-wide depression, the fall of the dollar and pound and the resulting decline of sales.

"Down to Bed Rock"

Many big dressmakers declare, however, that they have already cut their prices "to bed rock" and can shave no more if they wish to remain in business. They point out that, while fabric costs have been reduced between 20 and 30 per cent, labor and overhead remain the same.

The designer reported to be planning the sale of 500 franc frocks refused to confirm definitely the report at present.

"I have no idea yet what I can do," he said. "I won't know until I have finished my collection and weighed overhead, fabric costs and production costs.

Contrast With 1930

"Many of us have cut prices already to about half of what they were in 1930. And these figures are interesting: In the first six months of 1934 I sold the same number of dresses as in the same period of 1929, but for half the amount of business in francs, while for the same period, namely the first six months of 1934, I have done 42.5 per cent more business than in the same period of 1933."

At present in a number of large houses a fairly simple dress without elaborate embroidery or other expensive trimming can be bought for 1,600 francs (about $112 at the present rate of exchange), an unfurred coat for 1,800 francs ($126) and an evening gown for 1,800 to 2,000 francs ($140).

Cline, Okerbloom Meet Rugg, Demaree in Men's Doubles Finals

BITS ABOUT SPORTS

Crowds at Valley Meet Grow Larger . . . Rugg, Cline Active Participants . . . Fleming May Come Here to School.

By KERMIT BUNTROCK

THE STANDS at the University of Iowa courts should be packed for the finals of the Mississippi Valley tennis tournament this afternoon. The gallery has been growing steadily as word of the closely fought battles has gone the rounds.

* * *

DICK RUGG and Ken Cline, who battle for the men's singles championship today must have slept well last night. At least they should have. Both played four matches yesterday, two doubles and two singles—and one of Rugg's matches went three sets—putting out Big Ed Davis should be almost a day's work in itself.

* * *

CHARLES FLEMING, the steady 19 year old Nebraskan who upset Bell Raymond, No. 2, Thursday, hopes to come to the University of Iowa next year. Bob Demaree appeared on the courts yesterday morning with an armful of racquets—but there's a reason. He runs a sports store in Tulsa and uses up his profits in tennis racquets.

* * *

TALK ABOUT beautiful sun tans, Betty Butler, the hard-smashing Des Moines girl who opposes Thelma Kenefick in the finals of the women's singles, has one that makes most of the fans look twice. Incidentally, if it weren't for Miss Kenefick, Betty, who is only a sophomore at Lindenwood, school for girls, would already have a good string of championships. She has been runner-up in the state meet twice, and took second to Miss Kenefick here last year. However, she has 1931 to look backward to. That year she won the state championship, putting the Eagle Grove player in the semi-finals.

THE REASON for Paul Wegener's brilliant green cap has at last been explained. Wegener went into a local store and called for a white cap with a short brim. The store didn't have any, so he took the next best—and it happened to be green.

ONE CAN'T help being impressed with the consistent sportsmanship of tennis players. Even though judges have missed a few decisions thus far, there has been no crabbing—and there have been occasions where the players in whose favor the decision was made, reversed the decision of the judge, or intentionally knocked the next point into the net.

THERE MUST be something in this changing old balls for new ones while a set is in progress. Rugg did it yesterday when behind 2 to 1 in the second set. He won the next five games and then went on a romp in the final and deciding set.

Waterloo Ace Upsets Davis In Semi-Final

Thelma Kenefick, Betty Butler Battle For Women's Title

By KERMIT BUNTROCK

A new Mississippi Valley men's singles champion will be crowned this afternoon. Big Ed Davis, backhanding champion of 1933, fell before the drives of Dick Rugg, Waterloo ace, in the semi-finals yesterday, 2-6, 6-2, 6-2.

Rugg will be pitted against Iowa City's Ken Cline in the finals which will start at 1:15 this afternoon. Cline, seeded No. 7, advanced to the championship round yesterday by downing Ken Black of Peoria, Ill., 6-0, 6-1, in the quarter-finals, and by besting Charles Fleming, Nebraska player, 6-1, 6-4, in the semi-finals in the afternoon.

Plays Brilliantly

In the three previous rounds he had drawn a bye, bested Al Sieh, Iowa's 1934 captain, 4-6, 6-4, 10-8, in a three-set marathon, and downed Wegener of Des Moines 6-4, 6-2. Cline, who was off his game on the first day, has been playing brilliantly ever since, using a wide variety of strokes to down his opponents.

Davis dominated the first set in his match with Rugg, but lost his touch in the last two sets and began to press, as Rugg, who started slowly, gradually grew better and better. Rugg took the final and deciding game of the match on four straight points as Davis, attempting to blast across his famous backhand drove into the net.

Beats Cliff Carle

Rugg reached the semi-finals by defeating Cliff Carle of Garrison, 6-1, 6-2, yesterday morning. Playing methodically, he made only three errors in his first five games of the opening set. In previous matches Rugg had defeated Dick Goepel of Rock Island, 6-2, 3-6, 6-2; Sidney Miller of Iowa City, 6-1, 6-2; and Imy Alberts of Chicago, Ill., 6-2, 6-4.

Fleming, the unseeded 19 year old youth who upset Bell Raymond Thursday, won his right to oppose Cline yesterday by downing Jay Fink of Des Moines 6-4, 6-3. The Davis-Demaree quarter-final match turned out to be a disappointment as the Tulsa, Okla., youth, who was plainly off his game, went down before the drives of the Bradley Tech athlete, 6-3, 6-1.

Both Use Speed

Today's final with Rugg and Cline as principals will bring together two players who place a premium on speed and steadiness. Cline has a superiority at the net, which may be offset by the staying power of the Waterloo player.

The woman's singles will be another renewal of the Butler-Kenefick duel. This match will be played in conjunction with the men's finals at 1:15 this afternoon.

Miss Butler advanced yesterday by defeating Diana Southern, another Des Moines player, 6-3, 6-1. In the first two rounds she drew a bye and defeated Mrs. Andrew Woods, 6-0, 6-1. Miss Kenefick defeated Margaret Miller of Iowa City, 6-2, 6-2, in the semi-finals yesterday morning.

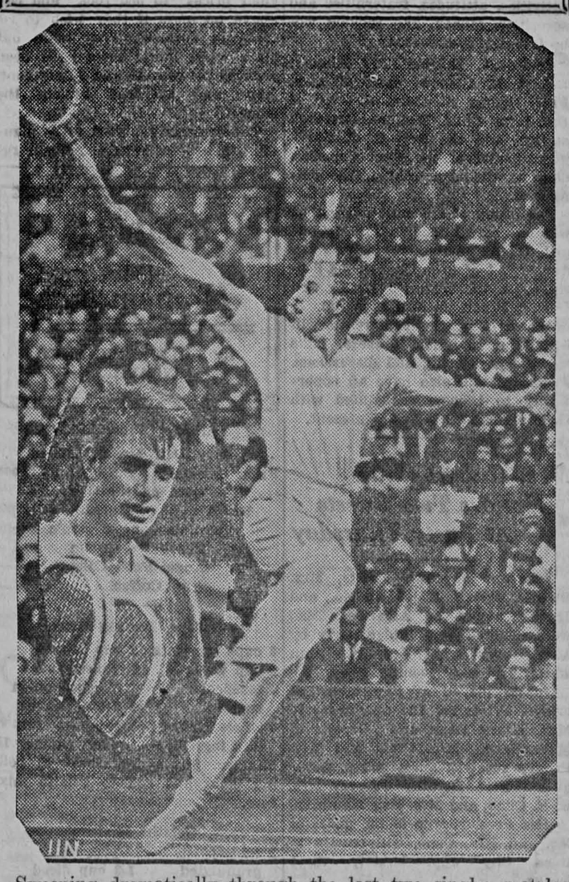
AMERICANS IN DAVIS CUP FINALS



Sweeping dramatically through the last two singles matches against Australia, Sidney B. Wood, Jr., above, and Frank Shields, inset, carry American colors into the finals of the Davis cup championship at Wimbledon, England.

U. S. Opens Davis Cup Play As Even Choice With British

Shields, Wood Play Singles Matches Today

LONDON, July 27 (AP)—The fightingest set of Davis cup players to represent the United States in many a year squares off against England tomorrow in the challenge round, conceded an even chance of carrying the big cup back to America.

While there was no trace of overconfidence in the American camp as the players engaged in a final tune-up there was an air of cheerful determination either to win or convince the defending team it had been in a whale of a fight.

Reflects Attitude

Frank Shields, who clashes with Henry Wilfred (Bunny) Austin in the opener, which many critics regard as the key match, reflected the team's attitude when he said:

"I don't know whether I'll win but I'll promise one thing. I won't choke up and I won't quit pouring everything I have on every ball."

Sidney B. Wood, Jr., the other American sngles player, meets Fred Perry, ace of the English team, in the second match. Although he isn't particularly confident as to his chances he said he thinks America "is an even bet to win the cup."

"Hitting Them Better"

"Frank's hitting them beter than I ever saw him," Wood said, after a hard workout with Shields.

Perry, who was dressing across the aisle, overheard the remark and called over to Wood:

"Say, you fellows were shot with luck even beating Australia."

"That wasn't luck, we're just a bunch of fighters," Sidney yelled back.

Iowa Supply vs. Auto Supply.

By JACK MAHR

Behind a record pitching performance turned in by their invincible fast ball hurler, Ted Fay, Falstaff Beer paraded to the first half title of the local diamondball league by handing the Elks a 7 to 2 trimming at the City park last night.

In the first game of the evening Fry Bros. advanced to third place with an 11 to 7 victory over the hapless A. & P. Food Stores. Iowa Supply may still wind up the campaign in a tie for the third post, however, since it has a postponed game with Auto Supply to play off.

Fay last night broke his own strike out record by four victims when 18 of the Elks boys swung on his speed ball without result. In addition he held the losers to only five hits and allowed no runs to cross the plate until the sixth and seventh frames.

The winners went to work early, sending one run home in the first and then shoving across the final six markers in the second to assure Fay of his ninth victory and a clean slate for the campaign.

Fry Bros. won by virtue of a seven run rally in the last inning which overcame a three run lead held by A. & P.

Defeats Bryan Grant In Singles Final At Seabright

SEABRIGHT, N. J., July 27 (AP)—Thanks to his terrific service, Berkeley Bell of New York is Seabright singles champion for 1934. In a five-set final today he defeated Bryan M. Grant of Atlanta, national clay court title-holder, 5-7, 6-1, 6-3, 2-6, 6-4.

Service aside, Bell's game was far below his play in beating Wilmer Allison yesterday in the semifinals.

Three times in the first set, after leading 40-0 or 40-15, he lost long deuce games and in the fourth set his errors let Grant run up a 4-0 lead. His backhand was weak.

The final in the women's doubles saw Helen Jacobs, Berkeley, Cal., and Elizabeth Ryan, London, Eng., triumph over Mrs. John W. Van Ryn, Philadelphia, and Josephine Cruickshank, Santa Ana, Cal., 7-5, 6-3.

Miss Jacobs meets Carolin Babcock of Los Angeles in the women's singles final at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The men's doubles finals is set for 4 o'clock tomorrow. Wilmer Allison, Austin, Tex., and John W. Van Ryn, Philadelphia, oppose Bell and Gregory S. Mangin, Newark, N. J.

BERNIE PAGE ELECTED CAPTAIN OF 1935 IOWA TRACKSTERS BY MAIL VOTE OF SQUAD MEMBERS

Bernie Page, an outstanding member of the University of Iowa track and football squads for the last two seasons, has been elected captain of the 1935 track and field team, according to the results of a mail ballot of squad members announced yesterday by Coach George T. Bresnahan.

Page will succeed Sidney Dean of Traer, who, like the captain-elect, was an outstanding quartermiler.

The Newton star has been a member of the Iowa mile and half mile relay teams for the last two years besides taking part in the individual 440 yard and half mile races.

In football, Page has performed as an end and a fullback. During his sophomore year he was given the regular fullback berth, ranking as the smallest line plunger in the Big Ten. Last fall he was a standout as an end.

Des Moines Ace Turns In 4 and 3 Win

Ottumwa Woman Finds Little Opposition In Semifinals

GOLF AND COUNTRY CLUB, DES MOINES, July 27 (AP)—Lucile Robinson of Des Moines and Mrs. Dave Bonella of Ottumwa will meet tomorrow for the state women's golf championship.

The present state and western champion shot her way into the finals with a 4 and 3 victory over Day Waterman of Davenport while Mrs. Bonella eliminated Jennet Jones of Des Moines 5 and 4.

In Trouble at Start

Miss Robinson met unexpected resistance from the pretty Davenport girl. The latter won the first and third holes to take a 2 up lead, only to have Lucile rally at the sixth hole to take four straight holes and finish the first nine 2 up.

They halved the tenth with 4's when Lucile missed an easy putt. The Des Moines girl, however, won the next hole as Miss Waterman three-putted and went three down. The twelfth was halved with 5's.

Miss Robinson got her par 5 on the long thirteenth and increased her advantage to four, her opponent taking a six because of poor putting.

Dub Shots

They both dubbed a couple of shots on the fourteenth and the Davenport girl took the hole with a 5. Lucile missed an easy putt for the halve. The match ended on the next hole, however, with the defending champion driving the green while Miss Waterman sliced badly. They had a 3 and a 4.

Mrs. Bonella had a comparatively easy time putting out Miss Jones. She fired her way to a 4 up lead at the end of the outside nine, getting a 42 medal score, the best golf of the semi-finalists.

Shute Gains Triumph In P.G.A. Play

To Meet Craig Wood In Semi-Final Match

PARK CLUB, Buffalo, N. Y., July 27 (AP)—Craig Wood of Hollywood, N. J., and Denny Shute of Philadelphia, who met in a play off for the 1933 British open crown with Shute triumphing, won their quarter-final matches today and will meet tomorrow in one of the two semi-finals for the professional golfers championship.

Wood, the belting blonde Adonis, registered a notable 2 and 1 victory over Al Watrous, the squint eyed Detroit veteran, who conquered Champion Gene Sarazen yesterday. The sharp shooting Shute shattered par for the third straight day in eliminating Al Houghton of Washington, D. C., a youngster who once caddied for President Wilson. Shute won 6 and 5.

The other semi-finalists are Paul Runyan, 26 year old White Plains, N. Y., star, who nosed out young Dick Metz of Chicago, one up on the 36th green, and Gene Kunes, an unknown from Norristown, Pa. Kunes took over Bob Crowley of Dedham, Mass., the qualifying medalist, 4-3.

Kenefick-Goepel Team Fains Finals Of Mixed Play

Iowa City's own doubles team, Ken Cline and Charles Okerbloom, play for the championship of the Mississippi Valley tournament this afternoon. This combination will be opposed by Digg Rugg of Waterloo and Bob Demaree of Tulsa, Okla., which team advanced to the final bracket by downing Al Sieh of Spencer and Jay Fink of Des Moines, 6-2, 6-4, yesterday afternoon. Cline and Okerbloom defeated Ed Davis and Ken Black of Peoria, 6-2, 6-4.

The two matches held the attention of the large gallery for over an hour yesterday. Cline and Okerbloom won handily in their first set but were pressed in the second and had to come from behind to win.

Demaree Carries Load

With Rugg tired from three previous matches in the day, Demaree dominated the play as he and Rugg downed Sieh and Fink. The Oklahoma youth, who was wild against Davis in the quarter-finals of the singles, had his ground strokes under control again and reeled off numerous placements. Sieh and Fink had pulled a surprise in the morning by defeating Wegener and Alberts in straight sets, 6-0, 7-5, in the quarter-finals.

The mixed doubles, an innovation in the Mississippi Valley tournament, placed in the schedule to add more interest in the meet among the players, last night had thinned down to three teams.

Giants Strengthen First Place Hold With 6-3 Win Over Phils As Schumacher Goes Distance

Champions Pile Up Big Margin in Early Innings

NEW YORK, July 27 (AP)—The Giants found the seventh-place Phillies a team of "breather" opponents today after yesterday's pair of bitter battles with the Cardinals and scored an easy 6 to 3 victory behind Hal Schumacher.

Increases Lead

The victory, while the second place Cubs were idle and the Cardinals lost to Pittsburgh, enabled the league leaders to increase their margin to three full games over Chicago and five over St. Louis.

The Giants handed Schumacher a big lead when they blasted Roy (Snipe) Hansen for all their runs in the second and third innings, and the big right hander breezed through on a seven-hit hurling job. It was his fifteenth victory of the season against five defeats.

Troubles Start Early

Hansen's troubles started after two were out in the second and didn't let up until he was out of the game. Mel Ott opened the inning with a single. After the next two men had been retired Blondy Ryan smacked a single that advanced Ott to third and Gus Mancuso drove in the first run with a high-bounding single that he barely beat to first. Schumacher helped himself along with a base-hit that scored Ryan and when George Davis, in center field, let the ball get through him, Mancuso also tallied and Schumacher reached third. Joe Moore wound up the rally with a double that brought the pitcher home.

Vergez Homers

In the next inning after Hank Leiber singled, again with two out, Johnny Vergez smashed a home run against the upper deck of the left field stand for a homer that completed the Giant scoring.

After getting only three hits in the first five frames, the Phils finally solved Schumacher for a run in the sixth when Dick Bartell singled and completed the circuit on two infield outs with a wild pitch sandwiched between. The other two Philly runs resulted from Johnny Moore's tenth homer of the year, which followed a single by Lu Chiozza and a force-play in the eighth.

Pirates Shut Out Cards 4-0

Swift Holds St. Louis To Seven Hits For Victory

PITTSBURGH, July 27 (AP)—Bill Swift held the flag-hunting Cardinals to seven hits today to give the Pirates their second shutout in two days, 4 to 0.

After six scoreless frames of a duel between Swift and Jess Haines, the Bucs solved the St. Louis veteran for three runs in the seventh when Gus Suhr broke the spell with a triple. Manager Pie Traynor came through with a hot single for the first run. Tommy Thevenow and Earl Grace followed with base hits and Thevenow scored the third tally on Swift's fly.

Suhr scored again in the eighth off Jim Mooney on a walk, Traynor's hit and Thevenow's fly.

Only one runner got as far as second against Swift and none reached third. He struck out seven and didn't grant a pass.

Explanation Of "Strange As It Seems"

Tamerlane, famous Mongol conqueror who five and a half centuries ago overran Asia and part of Europe with his armies, and made for himself a vast empire, was the son of Teragai, chief of a small clan of Berlas in Asia. Slowly at first, then with unbelievable swiftness, he gained more and more power and lands, adding one after another of his neighboring nations to his empire. None were able to stop the spread of his power. Rebellions he put down with cruelties that sound incredible.

Tamerlane became Lord of Turkestan in 1369 after a civil war in which he led his faction against Hussian, a rival. From then on for 36 years, until his death in 1405, Tamerlane was a conqueror.

His empire spread until its northern boundary ran from the Great Wall of China to the center of Russia, to the Nile and the Mediterranean on the west, eastward beyond Karashar in India, and south to the Persian gulf. The conqueror wore the crowns of 27 nations. He was the head of nine different dynasties of kings.

Tamerlane was never unsuccessful in a conquest. He died while marching to engage his last great foe. Though cruel beyond description in war, he was a patron of art and science and was a kindly ruler in peace. When he died there was none to take his place, and the empire he conquered speedily dissolved.

Production of gold in Australia during the first quarter of this year was appreciably greater than in the corresponding period of the two previous.

Production of coffee in Cuba is reported to be declining just at a time when prices have been rising.

Expansion of steel production in Australia and South Africa is expected eventually to curtail exports of steel from the United Kingdom to those markets.

Economic improvement in Japan in the last two years has improved the position of the motion picture industry in that country, Japanese-made films being the most popular.

Intensive cultivation of sweet potatoes as a source of glue and mucilage, the bulk of which is now imported, is being considered by the Tennessee valley authority.

"MA CINDERELLA" by Harold Bell Wright

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Ann Haskel received them with a meaning twinkle in her black eyes.

"Glad to see you-all done wore your old clothes. Me an' my son want you-all to feel right to home."

John Herbert, a dignified and gracious host, gave no sign that he noticed their embarrassment.

At the earliest possible moment a group of the uneasy guests surrounded Diane.

"You traitor." . . . "You did this." . . . "What are you trying to pull off here, anyway?" . . . "You've made us feel like a lot of bounders." . . . "We're going to beat it right now."

Diane's lip curled scornfully. "You dare to beat it and I'll make you the laughing stock of this city."

In the silence which followed she continued, coolly: "You planned to make a fool of Mrs. Haskel, didn't you? What's the matter? Can't you take it? What sort of sports do you call yourselves, anyway?"

"By gad! she's right at that," murmured one of the men.

"I say, let's play the game," greed another.

"That's the spirit," cried Diane. "You accepted Ann Haskel's invitation. Now that you're here, be decent enough to make her party a success. Turn yourselves loose; carry it off. Really, it is the only thing you can do, isn't it?"

They saw the point. "Fine! Let's go." . . . "No rough stuff." . . . "Play up to all this as if Ann were the queen she looks." . . . "Just as if it was exactly what we expected." . . . "Yeah, and what we'll do to Ma Cinderella later! Oh boy!"

"What you do to Mrs. Haskel when she is your guest is your affair," Diane returned, challengingly, "but if you have one drop of real sporting blood in your veins you'll remember that she is your hostess this evening. And listen," she added, with an earnestness which in spite of themseves impressed them, "not one word or hint to Ann Haskel or John Herbert that this is my old home. I give you my solemn word of honor they do not dream that they are living in the Carrol house, or that I have had anything to do with the arrangements for the evening. My lawyer rented this place to them without their knowing the real owner. Promise me, every one of you, that you will not give me away, and pass the word to the others."

They stared at her in silence. With wondering looks they consulted one another. It was Sally McBride who surrendered, and the others quickly followed her lead. "You win, Diane." . . . "This is your funeral, dearie." . . . "We'll play fair."

"I was sure you would," Diane smiled.

"But look here, Diane," said one of the men. "Who is the owner of this place in case we have to know?"

"We'd be supposed to know, if the Haskels mention it," said another.

"Fentress is the name," Diane returned. "But you'd better dodge any talk about it."

"Shades of Aunt Jessica!" murmured Sally McBride. "If she knows about this——"

Diane checked further comment by saying, quickly: "Break up now. Here comes Ann; she's been watching us. Pass the word to the others."

"Where are the drinks?" . . . "I sure need one."

"Find Wilson," Diane returned as she moved away to meet the hostess.

The thirsty guests found Wilson. "I'm sorry," explained the dignified personage, "but madam has instructed me to say that Mr. John Herbert does not allow drinks to be served in this house."

Ann Haskel eyed Diane shrewdly, but there were no danger lights in the mountain woman's eyes. "Mebbe you'd tell me how come you ain't a-wearin' your old clothes same's the balance of your crowd?"

The girl answered, demurely: "I am sorry, Mrs. Haskel; I did not understand that you wished it. Naturally I dressed as I would for any occasion similar to this."

The older woman chuckled. "I reckon mebbe hit war the natchal thing fer you to do, same's hit war natchal fer them others to come like they be. I been a-watchin' you talkin' to that bunch, miss, an' my eyesight's fair to middlin' good yit to see a lot what I can't make out to hyear. I'm obliged to you."

A few minutes later Diane encountered John Herbert.

"Look here," he said, brusquely. "I've been trying my best to get at you and you have been dodging."

"You had better be attending to your duties as host," she retorted. "Help your mother. If you don't play up to her tonight you're no Haskel."

"But, Diane, I want an explanation."

"Oh yes?"

"Why did you come so early—before all the others? What were you saying to Wilson when I came downstairs and overheard you?"

"Well, what was I saying—if you overheard me?" she countered.

"You said, 'I think there is nothing more, Wilson. You may go.'"

"Oh yes, I remember, and I said I would wait in the library. You see, I was explaining to Wilson why I had arrived so far ahead of the others, and he was explaining to me——"

"How did you happen to know that our butler's name is Wilson?"

"Don't be silly. I have been a guest in this city often enough to know the Fentress' butler. Now run along and dance with Mrs. Jones-Williams."

"I want to dance with you."

"Not now. Later—perhaps—when you have proven to me that the last of the Haskels is in spirit and in truth his mother's son."

Ann Haskel's guests, aroused by Diane's challenge and excited by the novelty of the situation, followed the artist's suggestion and made the mountain woman's party a success. With the pep which was so large a part of their equipment, and the freedom which was their creed, they let themselves go. They bemoaned the lack of hard liquor, but by sending out a surreptitious relief expedition when the normal hip-flask supply was depleted they managed to key the affair to their customary high pitch.

Diane watched it all understandingly and, without failing to contribute generously to the general good time, managed to be always not far from Ann. When John Herbert sought to engage her undivided attention she ordered him back to his duty, and saw to it that he obeyed.

At the very height of the revelry Diane saw Wilson go to the mountain woman and hand her a telegram.

Ann read the message, and the girl, watching, saw her face all in an instant go white and haggard and old. Then she saw that masterful spirit assert itself and, save for a certain watchful readiness which recalled to the artist her first meeting with the mountain woman in the glade at the head of Shady Creek, Ann was as if nothing had happened.

When next Diane looked, Ann Haskel had disappeared.

* * *

The sudden departure of Ann Haskel with her son and Nance Jordan from their backwoods home was an event in the annals of that region of the Ozarks. To Swamp Valley and the distant Smoky Mountain; to Cedar Ridge and Lonesome Hollow and Signal Bald; as far, even, as the head of Cold River—the news traveled with amazing speed. In log cabins on remote creeks, at cross-roads stores, at the widely scattered mills on grindin'-days, in hidden moonshine retreats, at chance meetings on seldom-traveled woodland roads and mountain trails, the matter was discussed. But nothing was known beyond the fact that Jeff Todd had driven the three to Wilderness Station and that Ann had purchased tickets to the city where "them Lodge folks lived when they war to home."

Pappy Giles, under the fire of questions, shook his head and affirmed that he "warn't runnin' Ann Haskel; he war only tendin' her store an' post-office." When pressed too hard he would add that he "had allus found hit paid best fer him to mind his own business an' let Ann mind hern." He "had tuck notice, too," he said, "that Ann ginerally knowed what she war a-doin' an' that she didn't never need nobody's help."

Jeff Todd knew no more about it than Pappy, but he was not at all backward in giving out the information that from now on he, Jeff Todd, was the boss of the Haskel place, and that he "aimed" to run things to suit himself.

Uncle Jimmie Cartwright summed up the many and various conjectures with the philosophical remark that "when everybody knowed so dad-burned many different things about anything, hit war certain sure that nobody didn't know nothin'. Mebbe Ann's goin' away war on account of young Herb. Mebbe that thar Jedge Shannon did have somethin' to do with hit. Mebbe hit war that young artist woman's doin's. Mebbe Ann had got word from some friends in the government that somethin' war about to happen. Whatever hit war that sent her packin' so all-of-a-sudden, you could count on Ann Haskel havin' her reasons. As fer her not tellin' anybody, Ann hadn't never been given to talkin' much or askin' folks' permission to do what she wanted." It was Uncle Jimmie's opinion, too, that "folks had best to be a little careful with their talk. Ann might come back jest as sudden as she went, an' some of the things what war bein' said mightn't sound so good if she war to hear 'em."

* * *

The crops which had been "laid by" when Ann Haskel and John Herbert and Nance went to the city were now ripening to the harvest. The rows of tender green blades which Diane had sketched from the hillside below the Haskel place were now close-standing ranks of tall and sturdy veterans. Their uniforms of green were tinged with russet by wind and rain and sun. They bore their weight of grain with the sure strength of the season's growth. Their faded yellow plumes lifted proudly as if they were conscious of their worth. Ready for the final fulfillment of their promise, the fields waited in the Indian-summer sunshine for the gatherers. Here and there leafy banners of yellow and orange and red and gold showed against the green of the forest mass. Over the forest sea the blue autumn haze lay like a veil of shimmering gauze. The air, for all its dreamy stillness, had a wine-like tang which suggested frost. Everywhere the woodland creatures were busily gathering their stores against the coming winter. Wilderness Lodge was vacant. Striped chipmunks chased one another over the wide veranda. Quail and wild turkey invaded the premises without fear. On the road between the Haskel place and the Lodge, except for the occasional passing of Uncle Jimmie and Ahab, the fallen leaves lay undisturbed.

Uncle Jimmie and Aunt Josie spoke often of Diane these days, wishing that she were there to see the colors that were every day growing more gorgeous on the mountain-sides above Shady Creek, along the fence rows, and in the bushy pastures.

They spoke of John Herbert, too, and "'lowed hit war a plum' shame that Ann Haskel's boy an' the artist girl couldn't 'a' made a go of hit."

"They would have, sure," Aunt Josie said, "if only they could 'a' been left alone to manage fer themse'ves. Hit war plain 'nough to see what they war both a-wantin'."

To which Uncle Jimmie returned, "Looks like hit war plum' ag'in nature fer that thar Ann Haskel to let anybody manage anything. She's the all-firedest, doggondest, managin'est female woman anybody ever hyeard tell of."

It was the shrewd little old mountaineer's opinion, too, that "Ann war certain sure a-fixin' to give them Lodge folks seven particular kinds of fits when whatever hit war happened to make her light out like she did with Herb an' Nance so sudden an' unbeknown to anybody." Not that "he knowed anything fer sure," Uncle Jimmie was always careful to explain. "But a body jest natchally couldn't he'p figgerin' things out that a way if so be Gawd-a-mighty'd give 'em anything to figger with."

Pledge Drive To End Soon

Wednesday to be Final Day in Renovizing Campaign

Managers of the renovizing and reemployment drive set Wednesday as the end of the campaign and planned an intensive program of work pledge solicitation in residential districts for today, Monday, and Tuesday at a meeting in the Chamber of Commerce office yesterday.

Solicitation of pledges for home improvement and employment from local property owners has been practically at a standstill, due to the heat. Junior Chamber of Commerce members called on business men and obtained pledges totaling close to $50,000 before the heat wave started.

William L. Davis has asked that local home owners plan improvements, and have pledges ready to offer when solicitors call, thus helping the canvassers to complete their work in the limited time left.

Volunteers wishing to aid in making house to house calls may report to the Chamber of Commerce office.

The purpose of the drive is to boost business in Iowa City through home and business establishment renovation, and to give employment to the 3,000 jobless registered at the federal reemployment office in this county.

Home owners wishing to make extensive improvements may be able to get funds through the federal housing administration, and can learn details of housing loans by calling D. W. Crum, Chamber of Commerce secretary.

2 Local Robberies Reported to Police Yesterday Morning

Two local robberies were reported to police early yesterday morning. At the Academy cigar store, thieves took $94.50, and an automobile was stolen from the Quadrangle parking space.

Thieves forced open the rear door at the cigar store and left with the money bag, which had been carefully concealed, without disturbing anything else in the place.

The automobile belonged to Ernest Merrill, G of Eau Claire, Wis. It is a black Ford, 1930 model, with yellow wheels.

It was the first marriage for Miss Page, but the third trip to the altar for Brown, who recently was divorced from his second wife, Peggy Bolinni. His last divorce was obtained in Mexico.

Miss Page and Brown were married by a justice of the peace.

NEW YORK, July 27 (AP)—Edwin Kurzenhauser, a railroad engineer, opened the refrigerator and found a note, addressed to his daughter:

Kurzenhauser, grateful for his wife's thoughtfulness, took a large bite but his teeth struck something he said was glass. He carried the pudding to the police station.

An analyst said it had been liberally seasoned with ground glass.

Mrs. Manna Kurzenhauser, the wife, was arrested on a felonious assault charge.

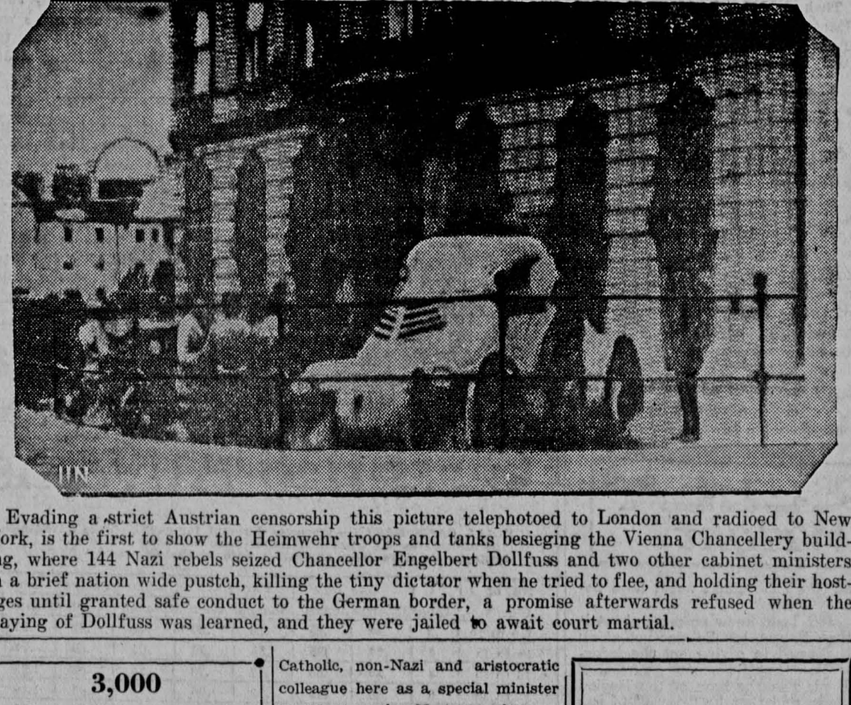
"UNCENSORED" PHOTO OF AUSTRIAN NAZIS' BRIEF PUTSCH



Evading a strict Austrian censorship this picture telephotoed to London and radioed to New York, is the first to show the Heimwehr troops and tanks besieging the Vienna Chancellery building, where 144 Nazi rebels seized Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss and two other cabinet ministers in a brief nation wide pustch, killing the tiny dictator when he tried to flee, and holding their hostages until granted safe conduct to the German border, a promise afterwards refused when the slaying of Dollfuss was learned, and they were jailed to await court martial.

3,000 Killed, Wounded In Austria

answer SOS calls for aid against the Nazis in sections where the rebels were winning.

Loyal forces—heimwehrmen and soldiers—were reported to have recaptured St. Veit in Carinthia, killing 50 Nazis. The government also claimed to have stormed Feldkirchen successfully.

The Nazis still held Bleiberg and Seldamsee. At those places, as well as many others, bitter fighting continued late at night.

Nazi forces were reported in complete control of the Tauern railway tunnell connecting Carinthia with Salzburg.

Not in Full Control

The government forces were said to be doing better in Styria than in Carinthia, but were not in complete control.

The socialists and communists warned "our hour will come" as their Fascist enemies killed each other.

Communications with the centers of disturbance in Styria and Carinthia were cut off except for the government radio, leaving the public in doubt as to the extent of the slaughter.

The battles sometimes pitted father against son and brother against brother.

2,500 Nazis Victims

Headquarters of the Fascist heimwehr (home guard) here estimated that 2,500 Nazis had been killed and wounded.

They said 180 heimwehr men died defending the government of Prince Ernst von Starhemberg up to last midnight, but had no estimates of the toll today. The best available estimates put the dead well above 100.

Government officials, battling desperately to solve their own problems while Italian troops waited at the border to step over if necessary, professed to believe Vienna was not in danger, but no precautions were overlooked.

Capital City Echoes With War

The capital city, in which the Nazi putsch of Wednesday killed Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, echoed with the sounds of marching feet and the clang of steel weapons.

Strong detachments of the heimwehr protected districts in which government buildings were located. Machine gun companies commanded the Ballhaus-Platz, the huge square before the chancellery.

From a positon atop the "Hochhaus," Vienna's skyscraper, machine-gunners were ready to pour deadly fire into the ranks of rebels if they should attempt a march against the seat of government.

Peace Pleas Avail Nothing

Desperate pleas for peace seemed for the time to avail nothing.

Loudly, emphatically — over the radio, in the press and by hand bills scattered from airplanes — the government sought to allay the disturbances and induce the rebels to lay down arms.

"Von Papen is coming!" was the slogan of the government.

"Von Papen is coming!" shrieked the radio, supplemented by big type in newspapers and handbills.

The government hoped that the fact that Chancellor Hitler of Germany is sending his conservative, Catholic, non-Nazi and aristocratic colleague here as a special minister would stop the Nazis—would convince them that they had no hope of aid from the third reich.

Believe Nothing

But the southern rebels were paying little or no attention—they believed nothing they heard or read.

They fought on in ignorance of the true state of affairs in the capital. The government itself was in doubt as to exactly what was happening in some areas.

Calls for reinforcements were coming in from the prince of Carinthia even as the guard in the capital itself was being strengthened and candles were being passed out in preparation for a possible cutting off of the electric light plants.

Carinthia wanted all the men available. Already orders had gone out for every able-bodied man not in active service to be ready for a call to the colors.

In Bad Position

The hemwehr was in a bad position to answer these SOS calls because it felt that the 6,000 men here were needed for possible defense of the capital.

"Personally I don't believe any attack is seriously planned," said one of the officers in Ballhausplatz over the telephone before communication with the chancellery was cut off.

There were reports, he added, that the Nazis were planning "another foolhardy attempt to surprise and imprison us." He referred to the "putsch" of Wednesday in which 144 Nazis were able to seize the government building.

Dollfuss Slayers Held

The 144, who were promised safe conduct to Germany but were arrested when it developed that Dollfuss had been shot to death, still were held today. There were reports, unconfirmed, that eight had been executed without trial. Plans were said to have been made to hang 30 others but this lacked confirmation.

The pitched battles in the southern provinces were for possession of various towns and railway lines, and were complicated and made more tragic by hunger riots.

The Nazis were reported gaining in some points and to have hopes of bringing at least part of the regular army over to their side, but the soldiers, so far as could be learned, still were aiding the heimwehr, despite the jealousy which exists between the two groups.

Revolt Said Crushed

The government claimed that in Styria, where artillery was brought into use yesterday to oust Nazis from the city of Leoben, the revolt was completely crushed.

But even the official account was not extremely optimistic regarding Carinthia.

Austrian Legionnaires from Bavaria were officially said to have attempted to invade the country, but to have been pushed back over the German border.

Police Patrol Two Iowa City Roads

Roads through Iowa City, between West Liberty and Ames, are now patrolled every Sunday, according to E. A. Connelly, state officer, who was here yesterday.

Mr. Connelly will remain in Iowa City today to watch for violators of state traffic laws.

AROUND THE TOWN with BILL MERRITT

Petition

Victoria Schneider filed a petition in district court yesterday, asking payment of $3,364.76, which she says is due on a note given her by Mr. and Mrs. Emil Dvorak, and Frank Smykil.

Redeemed

Chamber of Commerce scrip, issued here last year, is still dribbling in for redemption. The last note issued, number 1641, was turned in many months ago, but number one was redeemed just recently.

Three More

Three men were fined and then had their fines suspended by Police Judge Harold Vestermark yesterday. They were E. C. Pulver, intoxication; Howard Daly, intoxication; and Paul Cilek, disturbing the peace.

Who's Guilty?

Incidentally, the Chamber of Commerce office reports that its city directory is missing and that the person who walked off with it had better scurry back.

Engineers Survey For Location of Two New Police Radio Stations

DES MOINES, July 27 (AP)—State engineers will soon complete surveys to determine the location of two new state police radio stations, Attorney General Edward L. O'Connor said today.

Spencer, Cherokee and Storm Lake have asked for a station which will be placed in northwest Iowa, while Decorah and New Hampton have requested a station which will be in the northeast part of the state. The stations were authorized by the special session of the legislature last winter.

Officials Declare No Intention To Force Dakotans to Move

WASHINGTON, July 27 (AP)—Government officials today hastened to reassure Dakota farmers that there was no intention—and had never been—of forcing them to move from land ravaged by drought over a period of years.

Dr. Elwood Mead, head of the bureau of reclamation, said his statement that "tens of thousands of persons must be moved from the drought-stricken western half of the Dakotas and the eastern slope of the Rocky mountains" had been misunderstood.

Mead said he was "not advocating forceful evacuation of the drought" area but that he believed "removal of the farmers from this section is the best means of furnishing relief."

H. R. Tolley, head of the farm administration's planning division, said:

"We have come to the conclusion that farmers on some of the dry land in the Dakotas, Montana and Wyoming cannot make a living. For every good year, there are several with deficient rainfall. The result is seen in the relief that has had to be extended even before the depression.

"We felt it would help these farmers and agriculture generally, if they moved to better lands where they have a prospect of supporting themselves, or went into other occupations. We intend to use funds available, or a part of them, to provide places for these farmers. The state of South Dakota and other officials are assisting us. We intend to buy land and to pay a decent price for it. But if the farmers do not want to leave, there is nothing we can do about it.

"The government's land program contemplates the purchase of about 4,000,000 acres of land, which is only a small percentage of all the poor land in the United States. Therefore, the government will initiate projects only in those areas where the landowners desire to be helped. Not one acre will be purchased without the consent of the owner."

Basic Metals Industry May Be Revised by School's Plan

HOUGHTON, Mich., (AP)—With $25,960 of FERA money, a "shoestring" compared to the prospective billions involved in success of the project, the Michigan College of Mining and Metallurgy is undertaking a revision in the basic metals industry.

Three branches of this investigation potentially touch the welfare of the entire United States. The first of these is search for methods of utilizing low-grade iron ores of the Michigan district. Because of the tremendous tonnage involved the prospects are spectacular.

Depletion Seen By 1950

Present reserves of high-grade iron ores in Michigan, the college experts announce, will be practically depleted within 15 to 20 years, at normal rates of consumption. But after this high-grade is gone, there still remains billions of tons of rocks containing 20 to 25 per cent iron.

These rocks contain the low-grade ores. The Houghton institution has invented processes of treatment, of recovery and of costs which improve on former methods of handling these low-grade ores. But much, their announcement states, remains to be done before the new processes can become commercially successful.

The increase in research personnel made possible by the FERA grant has speeded up this work.

Improving Cast Iron

In another department part of the $25,960 is going to experiments in improving cast iron by introducing into it higher percentages of copper. Formerly use of more than two per cent of copper resulted in castings which were not uniform. The Michigan Tech scientists have discovered a new process by which the percentage of copper can be increased, with good effects on the structure of the iron.

The third project is solution of one of the expensive problems of the copper industry—how to select from the rocks the portions containing the valuable quantities of copper. The rock, even when handpicked, contains considerable material not worth the expense of running it through the crushing machinery.

Profesor A. T. Sweet and his staff have found methods of selecting the materials so that sometimes as much as half of the stuff now sent to the mills can be discarded and all that expense saved.

He Could Take It, But Snake Wasn't Able To

HAYES CENTER, Neb., July 27 (AP)—Earl Rudisil "took it in the nose" but is getting along all right.

Hearing his police dog making a commotion he went to the door and heard the buzz of a rattlesnake. He picked up a flashlight and a carpet beater and went to the dog's assistance, hitting the snake with the beater.

It cut the snake's head off but the head flew up, striking him in the nose beside the left eye with such force that the fang broke off in his nose. A doctor was summoned.

Most of the air over the middle western and eastern United States at any given time has drifted there from the Pacific region.

Dr. Bywater, who returned yesterday, said that the factory, located in the old chair plant building, may turn out comforters as well as mattresses. The federal surplus corporation will send cotton and F. A. Zitelman, 107 S. Clinton street, will manage the work.
