HAWKEYES BEGIN GRID DRILLS TODAY

State Board of Education Appoints Mavis Acting Head Mechanics, Hydraulics Here

Will Serve in Absence Of Woodward; Others Get Appointments

Prof. F. T. Mavis, associate director of the Iowa institute of hydraulic research, was appointed acting head of the mechanics and hydraulics department of the college of engineering by the state board of education, meeting in Cedar Falls yesterday.

Professor Mavis will serve in the absence of Prof. Sherman M. Woodward, whose leave of absence to work on the federal Tennessee valley projects was extended for another year.

Two Named

Two men were named to take charge of Professor Woodward's classes. The appointment of Adolph Meyer, consulting engineer of Minneapolis, Minn., as part-time professor of engineering was approved by the board. Chesley J. Posey, who has been an instructor in engineering, was named to take over some of Professor Woodward's classes.

Professor Woodward will return occasionally during the coming academic year to meet with advanced classes in hydraulics, Dean C. C. Williams of the college of engineering said.

Two Other Appointments

Two other faculty appointments, in the speech department and the college of medicine, were approved by the board in yesterday's meeting.

Dr. Ernst Freund was appointed associate professor of orthopedic surgery, to succeed Dr. Jacob Kulowski, who resigned several weeks ago. Dr. Freund has been an instructor in the department, which is under the direction of Dr. Arthur Steindler.

Marie Park Gets Post

Marie Park was appointed instructor in the speech and dramatic arts department, to succeed Eugene H. Bahn, who has resigned. Miss Park served on the speech department staff during the summer session.

Yesterday's meeting of the board was the first since July, and several matters which have arisen during the summer were considered. Action taken last month, granting leave of absence to Prof. Dale Yoder of the college of commerce to serve on the University of Minnesota staff during the coming year was approved.

No Definite Action

President Eugene A. Gilmore met with the board. The general legislative program for the next two year period was discussed, but no definite action will be taken until the October or November board meeting, it was indicated.

Keller's Leave Of Absence Extended

The leave of absence of Prof. George J. Keller of the college engineering, who has been working on federal emergency projects in Iowa during the last year, was extended another semester, to enable him to continue his work in Des Moines.

This was announced following yesterday's board of education meeting by Dean C. C. Williams of the college of engineering.

Professor Keller served as engineer in direct charge of the Civil works projects of the state. Since the discontinuance of the CWA, he has been directing engineer in charge of the Iowa emergency relief administration.

In announcing the extension, Dean Williams praised Professor Keller's work highly.

"The outstanding work which Professor Keller has carried forward for Iowa has been of such eminent success and distinction that the university was pleased to extend his leave of absence in order that he might continue directing the state's relief projects," the dean said.

Fishing Party Of Family Results In Drowning of Four

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 14 (AP)—A family fishing party turned into tragedy late today when a St. Paul mother and three children drowned at Coon Lake, 28 miles north of Minneapolis in Anoka county. The father reached shore after a futile attempt to save his family.

The victims were reported identified as Mrs. Carl A. Larson, St. Paul, and her three children, Ernest, 14; Violet, 13, and Grace 10.

They were fishing on the lake at dusk when the boat overturned, according to reports of residents in the vicinity of the lake.

Senate Group Hears Charges Germany Arms

Munitions Testimony Also Says Du Ponts Hired Spy

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (AP)—Testimony that war supplies apparently are being piled up in Germany despite the Versailles treaty was given today to a senate munitions committee that earlier had suppressed evidence it felt was even more explosive.

Jaded by disclosures, senate investigators nevertheless straightened in their seats to hear also that the Du Pont company, in February, 1933, hired an "international spy" to sell powder in Germany and Holland.

Cancel Contract

The narrative of the great concern's dealings with Del Fungo Giera, said to have been a secret agent for 13 countries, included the hasty cancellation—and destruction—of the first contract made with him on Feb. 1.

In anticipation, apparently, of modification of the treaty of Versailles, the Du Pont company had failed to include any reference to arms prohibitions imposed upon Germany by the pact, and had given the one-time associate of Captain Boy-ed and Von Papen a free hand.

"Mistake"

"I made a mistake," ruefully declared young Felix Du Pont, who figured in the testimony today for the first time.

It was Lammot Du Pont, president of E. I. Du Pont De Nemours, who told the senate committee he had reports that "indicated" Germany was making war explosives in considerable quantities, despite treaty bans.

Evidence was presented also that German political associations in 1933 were being armed with American-made weapons smuggled in through Holland.

Imposes Censorship

The committee earlier had imposed a strict censorship on material in its files after charges that Du Pont and its English ally, Imperial Chemical Industries Ltd., had combined to prevent Argentina from getting a powder plant of its own.

"If these cables were made public," said Stephen Raushenbush, secretary of the committee, pointing his finger toward the material before him, "it might mean actual destruction of life and property."

"I agree that they should not go into the record," hastily added Lammot Du Pont.

Hitler Financed Is Charged

Major disclosures about the Du Pont's munitions business followed one another today like explosions of Fourth of July firecrackers.

Amid them, Senator Clark (D-Mo.) asserted that the rise of Hitler in Germany had been financed indirectly by French munitions manufacturers to stimulate their own arms sales.

Northwest Farm Conference In Favor of Control Program

Group Prepares To Suggest Plans For 1935

ST. PAUL, Sept. 14 (AP)—Farmers of five northwest states, meeting here today with C. R. Wickard, associate chief of the AAA corn-hog section, agreed with the federal government's representative almost without exception that a control program should be continued.

The meeting was one of a series of regional gatherings to plan a referendum on whether to have corn-hog restrictions in 1935.

Wickard explained that only farmers already signed up for the 1934 reduction plan will be permitted to vote in the referendum.

Most of the farmers and their representatives, from Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota and Iowa, seemed in strong agreement with the AAA representative, who urged a continued control program.

A dissenting opinion was voiced by Joseph Ball, Crookston, Minn., who argued it was unfair that the farmers who already have received federal benefits should be the only ones to vote on whether the program be held over next year. He inferred thousands of farmers who did not come in on the program this year were not in sympathy with it.

Wickard suggested three questions to propound to local meetings in taking the referendum vote. They are:

1. Do you favor any adjustment program dealing with corn and hogs in 1935?

2. Do you believe an adjustment program for corn planting in 1935 is sufficient to prevent excess hog production?

3. Do you favor a one-contract adjustment program, dealing with grains, to follow 1935 adjustment programs?

Dean W. C. Coffey of University Farm named two committees to consider just what degree and kind of control shall be suggested for 1935 and to map plans for local referendums in the five states represented.

Both committees will report to the conference tomorrow.

F. R. Ready to Intervene In Strike If Necessary

Open Conflict Between Labor, Hugh Johnson Arises Following Charges by Militant NRA Head

Immediate Need For Federal Troops Passes

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (AP)—President Roosevelt travelled toward the textile strike's most turbulent area tonight with indications that any new eruptions of violence would lead to direct intervention on his part.

The national strike committee here meanwhile appealed to transport workers to bulwark their struggle by refusing to handle textile shipments. The request went to longshoremen and stevedores of the Atlantic coast.

More and more the great walkout took on the appearance of a showdown fight between industry and the American Federation of Labor. To some it appeared that the textile war before it ended would furnish a real test of organized labor's strength under the industrial recovery act.

The number of strike idle was estimated by an independent survey during the day at slightly more than 400,000. While mill centers were reported generally quiet, additional militiamen were mobilized in Maine and Connecticut. The Georgia national guard was ordered to stand by.

Bound by yacht for Newport, R. I., to watch the international yacht races, Mr. Roosevelt scheduled conferences there tomorrow with Secretary Dern and Maj. Gen. Fox Connor, commanding the second corps area. On these parleys his future plans probably will depend.

A destroyer was held ready to rush the chief executive up Narragansett bay to Providence, should he decide to go to the state's capital, close by the scenes of the week's wild rioting in Woonsocket and Saylesville.

As Mr. Roosevelt boarded the Vincent Astor Yacht, Nourmahal, at Poughkeepsie for the cruise to Newport, Gov. Theodore Francis Green asserted the Rhode Island institution had so quieted that any immediate need for federal troops had passed.

Administrator Says Labor Head Broke Agreement

NEW YORK, Sept. 14 (AP)—Open conflict flared tonight between organized labor and Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, after Johnson denounced the national textile strike as a breach of faith with him.

Thomas McMahon, president of the textile workers, which called the strike, was said by General Johnson in an address before assembled code authorities of the metropolitan district to have agreed not to call a strike.

Woll Denounces Johnson

Moments after the general finished his address, in which he praised George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, vigorously denounced the administrator.

Woll attended the meeting.

He asserted General Johnson's remarks were "unwarrantable," and that his entrance into the textile strike controversy was "prejudiced intrusion" and has "made for greater difficulties."

Interrupted by Applause

Johnson, who frequently was interrupted by prolonged applause, told his audience the textile industry was the last one in which a strike should occur, and outlined benefits he said the code had brought to labor.

He declared the strike "in absolute violation" of his asserted agreement with McMahon.

"If such agreements for organized labor are worth no more than this," the administrator declared, "then that institution is not such a responsible instrumentality as can make contracts on which this country can rely."

Man Is Freed Accidentally

Kidnaped Oklahoman Is Released by Jolt Of Automobile

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 14 (AP)—Kidnaped, tortured and held for $50,000 ransom, H. D. Snell, 42, of Cordell, Okla., was freed accidentally today when his abductors' automobile, bounding along a highway north of San Antonio, threw him through a door he had managed to open.

He lay unconscious for several hours on the unpaved road until a special policeman saw him and took him to police headquarters. There he told how the kidnapers choked him, stepped on his neck and poked pistols in his side. They did not take $56 in his pockets.

Bandit Gets $25 In Oil Station Holdup

A bandit held up the attendant at a Standard Oil company gasoline station on the corner of Clinton and Burlington streets at 9:15 last night and escaped with about $25.

The man, described to police as about 21 years old, visited the station earlier in the evening. The attendant could not tell whether or not the bandit drove an automobile.

Principal Of School Killed

Eastern Institution Head Shot While In Study

NORTHFIELD, Mass., Sept. 14 (AP)—Elliott Speer, principal of the Mt. Hermon school for boys, was shot to death tonight, state police said, as he sat in the study of his home on the school campus. His assailant fired through the window of the room, wounding him in the chest. He died shortly afterward.

Mrs. Speer and Dr. and Mrs. Welles of Philadelphia, her parents, were the only persons in the house at the time of the shooting. Mrs. Speer and her father told officers they had heard the shot and ran to the study where they found Speer attempting to walk from the room but collapsed in their arms.

There were two large holes in the window of the study and police said they were made by the discharge of a shotgun. They dug several pellets from a wall of the room.

Plan Huge Scientific Gathering

CLEVELAND, (AP)—Plans for holding the largest meeting of scientists in the world's records, in New York city next April, with upward of 10,000 present, were announced here today by the American Chemical society.

Flag That Flew Over F. R. to Be Used at Rally Here

The same flag that flew over President Franklin D. Roosevelt when he took the oath of office in 1933 will stand on the platform when James Roosevelt addresses Democrats at their rally in the field house here Sept. 23.

Congressman Edward C. Eicher of Washington, Ia., owns the banner and has promised it for the occasion.

When a president takes office, County Chairman William Hart explained yesterday, the old flag is lowered and a new one is raised at the capitol in Washington, D. C.

Katherine Hepburn, Wallace Beery Get World Movie Honors

VENICE, Sept. 14 (AP)—Katherine Hepburn and Wallace Beery were chosen the world's best movie actors tonight in the award of prizes for the recently closed second international motion picture exposition. Both won gold medals.

"The Mussolini cup" for the best foreign film was assigned the English picture, "The Man of Aran." Walt Disney won a gold medal for tht best animated cartoon.

A premium as the best world premiere was placed upon Douglas Fairbanks' English-made picture "Don Juan," while Frank Capra's film "It Happaned One Night" was selected as the most entertaining show.

F. R.'s Action In Haiti Seen as Step to League

Haitian Delegate Gives Praise; Problems Go To Background

GENEVA, Sept. 14 (AP)—President Roosevelt's political roadway leads the United States logically to Geneva and membership in the League of Nations, Constantia Mayard, Haitian delegate, told the league assembly tonight.

In an address which diverted minds of delegates from European political controversies, Mayard praised the American executive for his action in removing marines from Haiti.

"A new era of confidence has come to Latin America," he asserted, "as the result of Roosevelt's comprehension."

"Our Fervent Hope"

The Roosevelt attitude toward the problems of Haiti, Cuba and Nicaragua constitutes the milestones leading to Geneva, Mayard said. "That is our fervent hope," he added.

Meanwhile, Poland refused to let criticism shake her decision not to let any international body meddle with her handling of the racial, religious and linguistic minorities within her borders.

Joseph Beck, Poland's foreign minister who yesterday startled the assembly with his announcement that the Warsaw government no longer considered her minority commitments binding, told American correspondents Poland maintains her refusal.

Denies Plan to Resign

He denied, however, that Poland was contemplating resigning from the league as the result of British, French and Italian broadsides levelled at her action.

Under the Polish constitution, he said, all minorities, including the Jewish, will continue to be equal before the law.

(Some 2,000,000 Jews live in Poland).

Meanwhile the question of Russia's joining the league—shoved into the background in the sensation created by Beck's speech—appeared on the verge of successful solution.

Activities of Huey Cloaked by Mystery; Committee Adjourns

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 14 (AP)—Mystery today cloaked Senator Huey P. Long's threat to throw the entire New Orleans city administration out of office.

His legislative committee, investigating charges of "graft and corruption" in city officialdom, adjourned "subject to call," and political circles were wondering if Senator Long planned to call the legislature into special session to impeach the officials.

Long himself gave no indication of what course he would pursue, but the committee at Long's direction, arranged to give the chairman power to name any member as a subcommittee at any time to continue the legislative investigation.

Fall Campaign Opens as G.O.P. Hurls Charges

"High Command" Of New Deal Is Attacked

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (AP)—Campaigning for the November congressional elections got under full way today with a Republican assertion that "those in high command" of the New Deal were flouting and defying the constitution.

In a bitter attack on the Roosevelt administration, Senator Hastings of Delaware, co-chairman of the Republican senatorial-congressional committee, demanded an investigation into the use of a coast guard cutter to bring Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, minister to Denmark, home from Greenland. The boat was taken away, he said, from its station near New York where the steamer Morro Castle burned.

Outlines Position

Almost simultaneously, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) outlined what he termed his position as to the New Deal. He explained that he favored "rational and practical unemployment insurance" but was opposed to "state socialism, or state collectivism, or national regimentation."

Meanwhile, members of congress today discussed the statement of Rep. James M. Beck (R., Penn.) in which he said he was retiring from congress in January because it had "largely ceased to be a deliberative body" and that it was a "rubber stamp." Beck is a recognized authority on the constitution and vigorously opposed what he termed Democratic efforts to "destroy it."

Places Blame

Hastings in his statement asserted that "part of the blame for the long Morro Castle death lists falls on the head of whoever sent the (cutter) Champlain to Greenland." The investigation of the disaster, he said, should be directed into the "high authority" that ordered the vessel from its post to Greenland to bring back the minister to Denmark.

50 Candidates to Report To Solem As Alumni Gather In Annual Football Day Rallies

Use of Highly Inflammable Polish Heard

Investigation of Ship Fire Brings Out Revelation

NEW YORK, Sept. 14 (AP)—Surreptitious use of highly inflammable metal polish, banned by maritime law, aboard the cruise ship Morro Castle, was described today at the department of commerce investigation into the ship's fatal fire.

Testimony on the illegal, combustible liquid came from William O'Sullivan, Morro Castle store keeper.

"Was there liquid cleaning polish used on that ship?" he was asked.

"There was."

"Very"

"Was it highly inflammable?"

"Very."

"Was it known to those in authority?"

"It was used around the bridge."

The inquiry heard also a New York city fireman, a passenger on the fire-wracked vessel, declare he was positive of smelling smoke as early as 12:45 a.m. (EDT) although officers' reports had fixed the start of the blaze two hours later.

Drills Haphazard

Other witnesses declared fire drills on the vessel had been conducted haphazardly, with the passengers not participating and that even crew members failed to respond to calls.

On one occasion, the investigators were told, it was necessary for the chief officer to go below and rout out seamen from their bunks to join the fire drill.

Decision Today

A move by Ward line attorneys to vacate subpoenas, ordering them to produce statements and affidavits of surviving passengers for the federal grand jury investigation, was undecided. A federal court judge indicated his decision would be rendered tomorrow.

District Attorney Conboy opposed the motion to vacate his subpoenas, contending a criminal investigation was entitled to receive all pertinent information, except that constitutionally privileged.

Paper Says Engine Room Log Saved

BOSTON, Sept. 14 (AP)—The Boston Daily Record says in a copyrighted story that contrary to sworn testimony the engine room log of the Morro Castle was saved from the fire by William W. Tripp, student at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and engineer cadet on board, and turned over to attorneys of the Ward line.

The Record says United States District Attorney Martin Conboy, when informed of the fact, said, "it seems evident that the Ward line is hampering a federal inquiry. I have communicated information to this effect to the New York authorities and expect that they will demand the immediate production of the log book."

Iowans to Workout Twice Daily For Seven Days

Today marks the opening for University of Iowa football on a statewide front. As 50 Hawkeye grid candidates report to Coach Ossie Solem on old Iowa field this morning for the initial drill of the season, prospects for the 1934 campaign will be discussed by more than 1,500 fans at luncheon rallies in 52 cities and towns.

This third annual Iowa Football day will find the Iowans getting into the serious business of preparing for the opener against South Dakota university here two weeks from today and Northwestern one week later. Sandwiched between this morning's and this afternoon's practices, scheduled for 9:30 and 2 o'clock, four radio broadcasts from state stations will celebrate the occasion.

WSUI Opens Program

While the athletes rest between sessions the following schedule of radio broadcasts will be heard: WSUI, Iowa City, 12:15 to 12:30, Coaches Rollie Williams and Otto Vogel; WOC-WHO, Des Moines, 12:30 to 12:45, Prof. Clarence M. Updegraff, chairman of the athletic board; KWCR, Cedar Rapids, 12:45 to 1, Coach Ossie Solem; WMT, Waterloo, 1 to 1:15, Eric C. Wilson, editor of the University of Iowa news service.

With his official opening speech out of the way, Coach Solem will hurry back from Cedar Rapids to take up the reins of his Old Gold gridders, who received their equipment yesterday afternoon.

Two-a-day Drills

Whereas the morning session will be given over to news photographers, the day's nightcap drill will find the boys entering into actual work and for the next seven days will drill twice daily. Most of the Hawks have reported in fine physical condition and will be ready for scrimmages early next week.

Five assistants will help the Iowa mentor mold his third team on this campus. They are: Otto Vogel, head baseball coach and line coach; Rollie Williams, head basketball coach who will work with the backs; Bill Boelter, freshman coach; and Marcus Magnussen and Francis (Zud) Schammel, line assistants.

Upon the combined shoulders of Coach Solem and his five assistants rests the burden of bringing forth a team to equal or better last fall's great comeback eleven.

Optimism occasioned by the presence of seven regulars and 14 lettermen returning from last year's squad is more than slightly tempered by the fact that three of last year's star performers will be missing. They are Joe Laws, the "Fire Chief" quarterback and receiver of the Chicago Tribune's "most valuable player award"; all-American Francis Schammel, guard; and Tom Moore, center. Of the three, Schammel will be here, but in his coaching capacity.

Successors Important

As the Iowa coach says, the success of the team will depend largely upon the successors of this triumvirate. He will look toward the veteran halfback and captain, Russ Fisher, to George Teyro, senior quarter, Joe Richards, or perhaps to the promising sophomore Lawrence Haltom, for a signal caller.

Since Solem's regime here he has been handicapped by lack of wingmen of the rangy, powerful type. He at last has the material at hand, but it must be developed. Ousting Bernie Page, diminutive but fighting left flanker, will be a hard job. But such boys as Gordon Matson, Frank Jakoubek, Corney Walker and Bob Santee—all sophomores in the 190 pound or over class and for the most part towering over six feet—will be competing for the two flank jobs.

Tackles Need Strengthening

Even the tackle positions need strengthening, and veterans Fred Radloff and Jerry Foster, seniors, and Lloyd Hoffman, junior, will be fighting for their posts with husky newcomers. It will be a severe battle, with big Jim Kelly, Clarence Dee and Floyd McDowell the leading sophomore candidates.

Guard positions will be, as the

Hapsburgs Plan Return To Austria as Plain Citizens

Sixteen Year Exile Of Royal Family Nears End

(Copyright, 1934, By The Associated Press)

BRUSSELS, Sept. 14—The Hapsburgs, at last, are going home to Austria.

Sources close to the royal family that once ruled the mighty empire of Austria-Hungary said this evening that former Empress Zita, widow of Emperor Charles I who lost his throne in the upheaval that followed the World war, expects to be living in Austria by Christmas.

Preparations are already under way at Steenockerzell castle here for the return of Zita and her eight children, including Archduke Otto, the Hapsburg pretender to the thrones of Austria and Hungary.

Permission has been granted the family, it was understood, to reside in Austria as plain, ordinary citizens of that present-day republic.

Tonight Zita, her month's stay at Villa Pianore, the Bourbon-Parma estate at Viareggio, Italy, at one end, was hurrying back to Brussels, while Otto, too, was en route to the castle here after his tour of Scandinavia.

At Viareggion just before her departure Zita received King Victor Emanuel and Queen Elena of Italy, and after their call the "unofficial" engagement of Otto to Princess Maria of Italy was made known.

But for Zita that triumph of matchmaking must have been surpassed by the knowledge that her 16 years of exile—an exile that has sent her to Madeira, to Spain, to France, to Italy, to Belgium—was nearing its end.

If they go back to Austria, it was stated here, Otto must expressly promise that he will in no way seek to bring about the monarchy's restoration—unless Europe's great powers, their interest focused on Austria by the past year's events, consent.

In exchange for Otto's word, it was explained, part of the Hapsburgs' great estates confiscated after the fall of the dynasty will be returned to them.

Fitting Recognition For Local Art

WHEN prominent Iowa Citians gather at the Jefferson hotel tonight for the unveiling of a set of historical murals by Mrs. Louis Pelzer, the cause of local art will at last have won recognition for itself.

It is especially significant that Iowa City, first seat of government in the state, should be the first city to do honor to history in art. The eight murals dealing with the growth of the city from its earliest beginnings to the coming of the first automobile in 1902 are probably unique in the state.

The most interesting situation in the American art world in the last year has been the spread of mural painting. The nation has taken to "painting its walls," as an eastern critic expressed it. Communities have vied for the most ambitious and magnificent mural painting projects, just as in the middle ages the communities of France vied in the building of magnificent cathedrals.

For the first time there has been awakened in the United States that interest in art which has long been a characteristic of Europeans. When pioneer builders pushed the western frontiers of the civilized world deeper into the continent, they had no time or thought for art. Theirs were the bluntly real problems of earning a livelihood in the wilderness, of clearing the forests, of providing food and shelter and protection from nature, of erecting great cities, of gathering and investing silver dollars for a greater future.

Now the forests have been cleared, and agriculture and industry have gained a firm foothold. Now America can turn from the serious business of building in brick and steel to the joys of building in color, in words, in music.

There is no better way of bringing art to the public attention than that which Mrs. Pelzer has chosen. She has painted subjects which are of interest to the community—some of the murals bring back events within the memory of the present generation, all of them recall those epochal events in the citys' history which have been recorded in family records and handed down thus from generation to generation.

And through the interest in the subjects may come that interest in the art which recreated them which will make for discrimination and taste, for enjoyment of the color, the composition, the rare skill of the artist's technic—and thus finally to a lively interest in art for art's sake.

Making a Place for Liberal Thinkers

THE announcement of the reorganization of the Times club will have a pleasant ring for Iowa Citians and members of the University of Iowa who recall the visits of Carl Van Doran, Sherwood Anderson, Langston Hughes, and other famous literary figures and liberal thinkers.

Again this year, with such persons as Gertrude Stein, MacKinlay Kantor, Phil Stong, Philip LaFollette, and Sterling North scheduled to appear, the club will present a line-up of liberal thinkers, writers, and political figures which will make it an outstanding lecture course.

There is a place in a live community for organization of this type. Men and women who would ordinarily not appear on the lecture programs of other clubs and organizations in Iowa City can be secured by such a group.

For these men and women are the ones who are making the world think. Many eminent literateurs insist that Gertrude Stein has given nothing to the literary world; yet they recognize that she has started a literary rupture which is making thinking people re-examine old literary concepts. Many do not agree with the political creed of the LaFollettes, but none can deny that they have had the courage to grapple with fundamental social problems with thoughtfulness and determination.

And whatever may be one's opinion of modern American music, it is certain that W. C. Handy has caught a trend in his "St. Louis Blues"—a trend which has played an important part in the world of music.

The place in the community and the university of any organization which can offer such an imposing schedule of thinkers and liberal minded speakers should not be overlooked.

GOOD MORNING

Thursday another member of The Daily Iowan staff and I accompanied, at our own suggestion, a committee of the city council and a public relations representative of the Iowa City Light and Power company to Cedar Rapids.

The purpose of the trip was to make an investigation into the experience of Cedar Rapids consumers with natural gas, which was brought there last spring by the Cedar Rapids Gas company, a subsidiary, like the local company, of United Light and Power. A similar investigation had been made the previous week by the same committee in Davenport, where another subsidiary of United has been selling natural gas.

The result of the first trip was a report to the city council at its meeting last Friday in which the committee related almost unanimous approval by Davenport consumers, and listed reductions in gas bills of from 15 to more than 40 per cent.

The investigation in Cedar Rapids brought the same results, and a report will be submitted to the council at its meeting next Wednesday.

I think nearly everyone is thoroughly convinced that natural gas is a good thing. Savings over manufactured gas are so obvious as to be beyond question, and the gas itself is undoubtedly of higher quality. Of this I was convinced even before Thursday's trip to Cedar Rapids, and all evidence during the investigation supported that conviction.

The Daily Iowan is therefore ready to say that it will support the Iowa City Light and Power company in its attempt to bring natural gas into Iowa City under a short term gas franchise of about 10 years. The gas is already at the city's doorstep, and has been in use in Coralville for several months. To bring it into Iowa City would supply much needed labor for Iowa City's unemployed and unquestionably would effect a substantial saving to consumers.

Such a franchise should contain a guarantee by the company of savings averaging not less than a specified per cent and should be subject to revision by the city council. In addition, the city should require the company to install an apparatus in the city hall by which the city could make its own daily tests of the B. T. U. content of the gas, and rates should be made on the basis of therms, or heat units, rather than on the basis of cubic feet.

But while The Daily Iowan favors natural gas, I feel it is necessary to protest the methods pursued by Aldermen James E. Stronks, Roscoe B. Ayers and John P. Memler in their Cedar Rapids investigation Thursday. Of the committee's trip to Davenport the only information available is that contained in the committee's own report.

The trip to Cedar Rapids was made in two automobiles furnished by the Iowa City Light and Power company. The committee rode in a car driven by George Sheets, public relations man for the company, and The Daily Iowan's representatives traveled in a car driven by one of the company's appliance salesmen.

We arrived in Cedar Rapids shortly after noon, and were served dinner in a private dining room in the Roosevelt hotel, for which the Iowa City Light and Power company paid. Present at the dinner in addition to the city council committee, myself, the news editor of The Daily Iowan, and Mr. Sheets, were Donald Barnes, attorney for the Cedar Rapids Gas company, and the sales manager and another official of the company.

In fairness I must commend Mr. Barnes and one or two other company officials for their attitude. Mr. Barnes, in particular, was concerned about the propriety of accompanying the committee during its investigation, and declined to do so.

The manager of the Roosevelt hotel appeared during the dinner and testified that his savings with natural gas had averaged 42 per cent. He invited the committee to inspect his kitchen, which was done.

From the hotel we were taken to the city hall where we interviewed the mayor and the commissioner of finance. Later we were taken to the office of the Cedar Rapids Tribune, weekly organ of the labor unions, where the editor heartily endorsed natural gas and recommended its use.

I do not mean to infer that the evidence obtained in this investigation was tinctured with dishonesty, or that either the committeemen or the company officials were not acting in good faith.

But it seems to me elementary that public officers owe it not only to their constituents, but to themselves as well, to take all precautions against the appearance of obligation to persons or corporations whose interests are affected by their public duties.

If members of the committee sincerely feel—and The Daily Iowan will support them in the conviction—that natural gas should be brought to Iowa City, it is perfectly proper for them to gather facts in support of their case and to make a thorough investigation. But they should accept from the gas company only facts, never financial assistance or advice. —Don Pryor

Behind The Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By Harrison Carroll

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. — Much to Jackie Coogan's embarrassment — considering all those marriage rumors—Toby Wing is going about these days knitting baby clothes. They are for the expected blessed event in the family of Toby's sister, Pat, who has been spending the season with her socially prominent and wealthy husband.

Toby Wing

Young Coogan gives the lowdown on how the report started that he and Toby had been married in Mexico.

Jackie himself was to blame. He was at the beach with some former high school chums. Going home time came and he said:

"Well, I've got to get back to the wife."

His pals took the announcement big, so, as a rib, Jackie faked some details.

But, although they aren't wed, these two film youngsters are plenty interested in each other. On one of the nights that Toby recently went out with Alfred Vanderbilt, Jackie's ma had to sit up until the wee hours feeding him soothing potions before he fell to sleep.

Funniest wisecrack of the week was made by an actress who had just returned to Hollywood after an absence of several years and who begs not to be credited with the remark.

Someone asked her if things had changed.

"Oh, no," she replied. "You see the same old faces—they've just had them lifted."

What well known young Hollywood actress is in a quandary? A few weeks ago she was smitten with a male star and asked her agent to get her a job in England because he was going there to make a picture. The agent has gotten her the job but now she is crazy about a young Englishman who must stay in Hollywood.

KNICK-KNACKS—

An unsuspecting audience at the United Artists theater in Berkeley broke into cheers the other night when there flashed upon the screen the opening title of "The Merry Widow." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sent it up for a sneak preview and Irving Thalberg, Ernest Lubitsch, Jeanette MacDonald and Maurice Chevalier flew up in a specially chartered plane. Picture went tremendously and the Hollywoodites were almost mobbed as they came out of the theater. Advance dope is that the Albertina Rasch dances will make the most blase sit up and take notice . . . Maxie Rosenbloom was so entranced with George Raft's new ear and with Mack Gray's re-shaped proboscis that he has gone for a plastic surgery operation to his own cauliflower ear. And, incidentally, the fighter has been telling everyone that the ear was the only thing keeping him out of pictures .

"Off the Record"

Unofficial Doings From Washington, D. C.

By SIGRID ARNE

Mary Moss Wellburn was interviewing one of the southern governors in the interest of the Women's International League for Peace. She urged disarmament, and the gentleman was irritated.

He made a long argument about needing guns in the state house.

"And besides," he scolded, "why are you gallivanting around the country? You should be home raising babies."

"Well, governor," said Miss Wellburn, "I'm from Mississippi and not married. And you know how Mississippians are about that."

The Dillinger mementoes have attracted such large crowds to the lobby of the justice department that J. Edgar Hoover, chief of investigation, had to move them to his private office.

The younger Washington set has adopted a young Italian count who is visiting here and struggling with the English language.

Mischievous Mary Cootes, daughter of the colonel, thought over the capital's match-making dowagers and contributed a sentence to the count's repertoire.

He used it to the indignation of a prominent matron he met at a club. He bowed, smiled and said:

"I am so happy to meet you and I am not thinking of marrying anyone, thank you."

Ruth Bryan Owen, minister to Denmark, has a little Eskimo namesake in Greenland, all because of a storm.

She left her boat to explore Godthaab in west Greenland one day. As she dined with the sheriff's family such a severe storm broke that her launch was unable to return her to the steamer. During the night an Eskimo girl was born.

Mrs. Owen stayed for the christening ceremonies the next day, and the child was named "Ruth."

When an auto graduates into the family of Senator "Bob" Reynolds of North Carolina it leaves behind its dust-collecting days.

Reynolds is a globe-trotter. He wore out two little "crates" rambling through China, India and Africa. Right now he owns a groaning chariot which he always assures friends "is good for another thousand miles."

Shortly one of the quaintest and most dignified rooms in the capitol will lose its standing.

It is the robing chamber for the justices of the supreme court who soon will be moving into their new building.

The little robing room is distinguished for two reasons. One is a portrait of Chief Justice John Marshall done by Rembrandt Peale.

The other is two magnificent crystal chandeliers which glint delicately in the afternoon sunshine. Legend says they were brought from France by Thomas Jefferson, and hung in the White House until the British burned it in 1814.

case with most other jobs, the ambition of several sophomores. William Secl and Jack Gallagher, who shared a guard post last year, are back and in shape to make an interesting fight with Gail Lundberg, Donald Nelson, Merrill Robb and Jack Shea, sophomores.

Ted Osmaloski, who played end last fall with the frosh and showed up well at center during spring practice, seems a likely candidate to succeed Tom Moore at center. Jack Shea, might make a bid for the pivot post.

Three Veteran Backs

Except for the quarterback post, last year's backfield returns intact. Dick Crayne, fullback, Capt. Russ Fisher, halfback, and Dwight Hoover halfback, are the veterans. Other "I" men are William Ash, fullback, George Teyro and Joe Richards, quarterbacks, and Herman Schneidman, halfback. Bidding for positions are Haltom and Sheldon Gordinier, quarterbacks, Oze Simmons, Bob Moore and John Hild, halfbacks.

Starting Monday, the squad will drill secluded from the curious gaze of the sideline experts. This policy of closed practices permits the boys to concentrate upon their tasks without the distraction of spectators.

SKIPPY— By PERCY CROSBY

PROVES REALISM OF ART

The title of this picture, which is in the World's Fair exhibit in the Chicago Art Institute is, "Women Ironing." It is by Edgar Degas. One of the women has paused from work to relieve her drowsiness with a yawn. It is a real stretch! Visitors have stood for a moment looking at this picture and they unconsciously raise their hand to their faces to suppress a real yawn. Very few succeed in doing so, as will be seen by this photograph, where the camera caught Mrs. Adele Lawson, Chicago, overcome by the suggestive force of drowsiness in the Degas picture.

Mrs. Louis Pelzer, Iowa City's Artist and Artist for the State

(Editor's Note—This is another in a series of articles about Iowa City women and their activities, written by Betty Reed, society editor of The Daily Iowan.)

Mrs. Louis Pelzer is not only Iowa City's artist, but is artist for the entire state of Iowa. Often seen in a gay smock, sketching from a high fence post, this artist is reproducing Iowa scenes, and at the same time aiding the Iowa public to become acquainted with its painters.

All summer Mrs. Pelzer has been working on projects relating to the history of Iowa City, and has completed a picture entitled "The Building of the Stone Capitol." In addition she told the story, in picture, of the construction of the new fine arts building.

She has just completed an historical picture map of Iowa, portraying both the noted settlers and the work of the common man. The map, most complete of its kind in depicting the settling of Iowa territory and state, will be published soon in large size, 27 by 40 inches.

In her small studio, surrounded by her paints, finished pictures, and those half completed, Mrs. Pelzer has produced many prize winning landscapes, portraits, and still life scenes. She has won prizes at the Iowa State fair, exhibits of the Iowa Federation of Women's clubs, has held one-man shows in Ames, Dubuque, Hibbing, Mich., Des Moines, and Iowa City, and has a large landscape, "Fantasy of Iowa," hanging in the Joslyn memorial gallery in Omaha.

Pictures in Galleries

Her pictures hang in the Los Angeles art gallery, and from New York Mrs. Pelzer has received word that some of her paintings hang among those of Reubens and Gainsborough. She is the author of two historical maps drawn for neighboring cities, "Burlington—A Hundred Years in Picture," and "Dubuque—An Historic Prelude in Picture."

This summer she was honored by having one of her flower pictures, "Scarlet Phlox," published as a cover for the July issue of "Better Homes and Gardens."

Mrs. Pelzer, in fact, has won so many prizes for her flower pictures that she is known all over the state as the "flower painter of Iowa."

Organizer of Library

She is organizer of the library of art, in which Iowa artists will be given opportunity to display their creations during October at the Iowa City public library, and to allow Johnson county citizens the privilege of displaying these portraits, borrowed for eight months, in their own homes. Mrs. Pelzer has recently instituted an art gallery in a local department store where Iowa painters will exhibit their productions.

Active in club work, Mrs. Pelzer is a member of the art committee of the Iowa Federation of Women's clubs, an enthusiastic member of Iowa Artists club and Iowa Authors club, chairman of the junior flower and art exhibit in Johnson county, the first exhibit of its kind in the state, and a speaker on art topics for clubs in Mason City, Dubuque, Ames, Burlington, Fairfield, Muscatine, Des Moines, and Iowa City.

Presents Painting

Last fall she presented a painting demonstration of zinnias for the Iowa City Woman's club, accompanying her drawing with informal speaking. This type of exhibit proved so popular that Mrs. Pelzer was called upon to present similar demonstrations throughout the state. She appeared before University club in a lecture on the arrangement of flowers.

Mrs. Pelzer, who receives mention in Iowa's "Who's Who" has, in New York artists' style, bartered her paintings for jelly, furniture, and knick knacks. From her sunporch studio she has produced a voluminous variety of paintings while at the same time she "stirred the kettle on the stove and raised her two sons."

Montana State Graduate

Her education Mrs. Pelzer has received at Montana State Teachers college, of which she is a graduate, Pratt Institute of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Columbia university. She has directed art work at South Dakota State Teachers college, and in the Bedford, Ind., public schools.

As one could see from a complete exhibit of Mrs. Pelzer's paintings, she has not narrowed her talents to one field, but instead has painted a variety of pictures for many purposes, other than her own enjoyment. She has painted for "Palimpsest," State Historical society's booklet, portraits of University of Iowa deans and professors, children's portraits, flower pictures, landscapes, actual working scenes, and many other pictures now privately owned, or exhibited in galleries.

Painting for the pleasure which she receives from her art, Mrs. Pelzer has combined her talents with organized schemes to depict Iowa's history and present progress and to bring Iowa artists to the attention of state residents.

Order of Rainbow Girls Will Convene

Order of Rainbow for Girls will meet for a special business session at 1:30 this afternoon at the Masonic temple.

Girl Scout Troop Leaders Tell Of Their Work at Tea

One of the most interesting features of the Girl Scout troop committee tea at Mrs. E. D. Plass' home yesterday afternoon was a spontaneous response from leaders of the 10 local troops, explaining what scouting had done for them.

"Scouting," said heads of the girls' groups, "develops initiative, creates a desire for hobbies, helps in liking home duties, and is a cure for the blues when working with young girls in Girl Scout fields."

Mrs. Thomas Farrell, chairman of the committee in charge, led an informal discussion on the duties of a troop committee. In discussing the outdoor phase of Girl Scout life, Ruth Frerichs, local director, said that the program is no longer a two week camping period, but is an all year division of Girl Scout life. Included in the outdoor program are hikes, overnight trips, and outdoor cooking, based upon the assumption that if a girl learns to master simple tasks by a simple, efficient method, she has a better preparation for life.

Miss Frerichs asked anyone knowing of a hiking place which will be safe, not public, and welcome for Girl Scouts, to notify Girl Scout headquarters, 9239.

Tea table appointments were of pastel shades of lavender and green. Twenty-five troop committee members and leaders attended the tea, at which announcement was made of the field institute for leaders Sept. 25 and 26 at Iowa Union.

After dinner, the group will adjourn from the dining room to the lobby, where Prof. and Mrs. Pelzer's sons, Parker and Henry, will unveil the canvases, the significance of which will be explained by the artist.

Members of the executive committee are: Catherine Berry, principal of junior high school; Mrs. E. T. Hubbard, president of the Parent-Teacher association; Mrs. Lloyd Howell, vice president; Helen Burns, secretary; Mrs. W. E. Mrs. L. R. Benson, chairman of hospitality; Mrs. James C. Kessler, publicity; Mrs. Thomas Caywood, school visiting; and Mrs. R. E. Coughlin, relief.

One of the projects planned for the year was a class party for each grade in junior high school, given under the auspices of the P.T.A. Throughout the school year, each class will have a mother and teacher acting as sponsors.

Class sponsors are: Mrs. R. B. Ayers and Ruth Jones, 7B; Mrs. Ed Korab and Dorothy Adams, 7A; Mrs. M. C. Serup and Ione Heller, 8B; Mrs. Herman Smith and Agnes Krarup, 8A.

Plans were also made to designate one school visiting day each six weeks.

CITY HIGH OPENS SEASON WITH 19 TO 0 WIN

BITS ABOUT SPORTS

BY JACK GURWELL

Here Again . . . Optimism Prevails Over State . . . Question Can't Be Answered Now . . . Joe Laws' Lucky Rabbit Foot.

ABOUT 500 football players will gather on the Big Ten fronts today for the opening practice of another grid season. Ere the leaves have turned, 10 teams will have been welded into fighting units. On Oct. 6 Iowa, Northwestern, Indiana and Ohio State will swing into the Western conference campaign action. Again the question of who will win the championship is mulled over. With Minnesota slated on paper as the team to beat, with Michigan apparently not as strong as last year because of graduation of star players, and with the Hawkeyes again more or less of an unknown quality despite rabid enthusiasm, your guess is as good as mine.

The Hawkeyes open up today on what is supposed to be, according to "dope" analysis about the state, their banner year in football. The Iowa mentor, Ossie Solem, has made no predictions as to the success of his third edition of the Old Gold grid machine. His veterans are back, his sophomore candidates are ready for the first test under fire, and he will have a larger and abler reserve strength. He will also be under the pressure of two jobs, that of head football coach, and of athletic director. Today his troubles have just begun.

AN ENTHUSED FAN said, "Boy, what a team Iowa will have this year. Solem's got Crayne, Fisher, Hoover, Radloff, Page, Haltom, this big boy Osmaloski, Hoffman—" The Hawkeyes also face Northwestern, Minnesota, Indiana, Purdue, and Ohio State. Now there is nothing we'd like better than to have that team come back from Ohio State with a Big Ten championship flag. The whole state would be willing to help hoist it right up the flagpole atop Old Capitol where it could wave in the breeze. Back the team with all the spirit able to be mustered. Yell for the boys, see that they get off to the games and meet 'em at the station when they get home.

BELIEVE IN the Hawkeyes. An improvement is rightly to be expected. But victories are hard won and reserves are disconcerting. Temper the optimism with a consideration of the situation and optimism still prevails—but of the sort that hopes for the best and is not so disappointed with the final results if they be unfavorable to preseason reckonings. To predict a fair season is certainly logical but one shouldn't state outright that Iowa will win the Big Ten at this stage of the game. In a few weeks we'll know if we have capable ends, that quarterback to fill Joe Laws' shoes, a boy to plug up the hole left by Schammel's graduation and an athlete with the makings of a good center.

"Skeets" Haltom was trying on a helmet yesterday afternoon in the fieldhouse when he suddenly laughed. "By gosh," exclaimed Haltom, "this was Joe Laws' helmet. It's got a rabbit foot in it. I'll just wear this one." . . . The rain failed to dampen the spirits of the prospective Hawkeye gridders. They received their suits and departed from the fieldhouse in the slight drizzle. Tomorrow they will report to Iowa field, more than 50 strong, for the opening ceremonies, which includes posing for photographers, deciding whether or not equipment fits, and a few preliminary maneuvers.

AFTER A GAME like yesterday's, you've got to admit that the Detroit Tigers are a bit lucky. Although the American league leaders won the game 6 to 4, they were out hit 11 to 7 and erred four times to the Senators' once. That's certainly not playing the percentages. A victory such as yesterday's could be called luck. .

Columbus Junction Is Easy Victim

Locals Give Promise Of Successful Season

By DEWEY CUMMINS

Coach George Wells' Iowa City high Little Hawks opened the local grid season last night at Shrader field with an easy 19 to 0 victory over the small but fast Columbus Junction eleven. The game was slow and ragged, as most opening games are, but the local eleven showed promise of a successful season.

Playing was marked by many offsides and fumbles, the latter being caused by the steady drizzle which accompanied the game. Although none of the fumbles were costly to either team, the visitors' only scoring threat came in the second quarter after the locals fumbled on their own 30 yard line.

Playing his first official game of football, Jerry Pooler, former St. Mary's athlete, was the outstanding man on the field with his shifty running and hard plunging. The flashy halfback scored two of the Red and White touchdowns for scoring honors and returned punts for an average of 40 yards.

George Eakes, sophomore veteran, showed a great improvement last night in his playing over that of a year ago. The speedy fullback will prove valuable with his line plunging. Maresh and Duros played heady games in the City high backfield.

The Little Hawk forward wall had little trouble opening holes in the Columbus Junction line and it showed up strong on defense. Norgaard at tackle, and Ballard and Miller at ends were outstanding. Paul Ross, husky Missouri boy, at center played a good game.

For the visitors, Newman was outstanding with his long distance punting. The Blue and White end kept the locals out of scoring territory in the second half with his long kicks. James at quarterback got off a few nice passes in spite of the wet, slippery ball.

The locals started their scoring march shortly after the kick-off when the visitors punted to the Little Hawk 20 yard line where Pooler received and returned to the Wildcats 20 yard line. On the first play he carried the ball through right tackle for a touchdown. Norgaard missed the placekick for the extra point.

Iowa City again stopped its opponents on the kickoff and Pooler returned a punt 8 yards to the visitors' 44 yard line. Eakes picked up 6 yards through left tackle before Pooler went around right end from the 38 yard line for another touchdown. Norgaard's kick was low, missing the extra point.

Eakes plunged over from the 6 yard line in the first few minutes of the fourth quarter for the third touchdown and also carried the ball over for the extra point, giving the Little Hawks 19 points to their opponents' 0.

Starting lineups:

Iowa City (19)		Columbus Jct. (0)
Ballard	LE	Newman
Norgaard	LT	Ayers
J. Snyder	LG	Davis
Ross	C	Honts
Nelson	RG	Leonhard
James	RT	Howell

Maresh	QB	James
Pooler	LH	Bitting
Duros	RH	Cornic
Eakes	FB	Snyder

Officials: Lance (Pittsburgh State Teachers) referee, Fisher (West Branch) umpire, and Shain (Iowa) head linesman.

Scoring: Iowa City high: touchdowns—Pooler (2); Eakes (1). Extra point—Eakes (plunge).

Score by periods:

Iowa City	12	0	0	7	—19

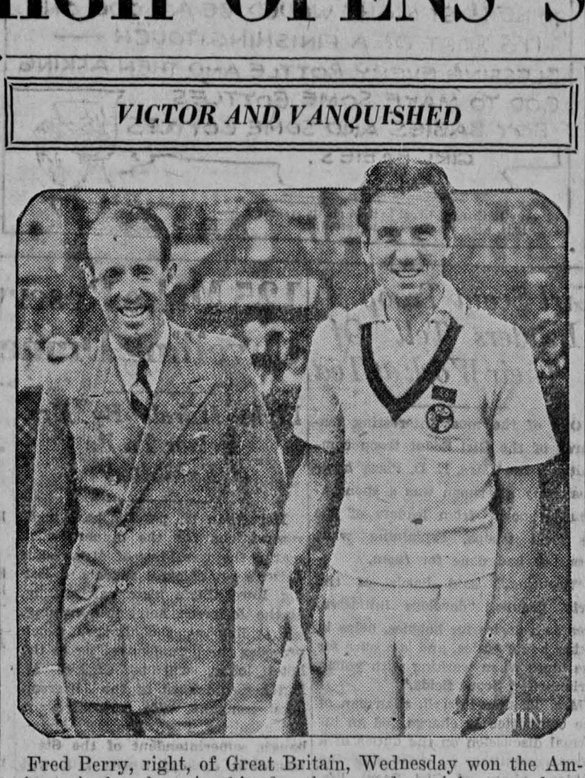
VICTOR AND VANQUISHED



Fred Perry, right, of Great Britain, Wednesday won the American singles championship for the second straight year, beating Wilmer Allison, tall Texan and one of America's best tennis players, easily, 6-4, 6-3, 3-6, 1-6, 8-6. Perry was at no time extended, although a slight rally by Allison in the final two sets, forced him into faster pace.

Ross, McLarnin Prepare For Postponed Welter Title Fight

Freaky Weather Again On Hand; Both Say They Feel Fine

NEW YORK, Sept. 14 (AP)—Barney Ross, brisk little double champion of the lightweights and welterweights, is supposed to defend the latter of those titles against Jimmy McLarnin, the Irish avenger, in Madison Square Garden's bowl on Long Island tomorrow night, but everyone's fingers still are crossed.

Freaky weather that already has forced 10 days of postponements, still was in charge of the situation and the prospects for a clear night for the 15-round return engagement actually were no better tonight than when the bout was first scheduled to go on, Sept. 6. The weather man said showers were due tomorrow.

Finish Training

Regardless, the athletes finished their training chores today as unconcerned as if they hadn't been trying to fight their way out of hotel rooms for almost two weeks. McLarnin punched a light bag and exercised for four rounds at one gymnasium and Ross, who took McLarnin's 147-pound laurels away from him on a split 15-round decision in May, did about the same at another.

Each insists that the postponements have done no harm. There was every possibility, too, that the promoters would be satisfied with the gate receipts if the sun would only shine tomorrow. Mike Jacobs, putting on the show for the New York American Christmas and relief fund, said there was still $137,000 left in the till and good weather would result in a boom that would

Braves Jump On Cincinnati For 4-2 Win

BOSTON, Sept. 14 (AP) — Fred Frankhouse held the Cincinnati Reds to seven scattered hits today as the Boston Braves won the first game of a series, 4-2.

The victory was especially pleasing to the Braves for it was won in the face of the hurling of their old nemesis, Si Johnson, whose offerings were tagged for 10 safeties.

Rowe's Mother Promises Licking If He Says "Maw"

DETROIT, Sept. 14 (AP)—Schoolboy Rowe's mother came to Detroit today and greeted her baseball-famous son with a threat of a whipping "if you ever call be 'Maw' again."

She was referring to the Tiger pitching star's recent radio debut, which he concluded with "Hello Maw; Hello Edna; how'm I doin'?"

"I don't know where he got the idea of calling me 'Maw'," Mrs. McGlothin, just arrived from her home in Dallas, Tex., said. "I taught him long ago to call me 'Mother.'"

And then to her six-feet-four son: "If you ever call me 'Maw' again, I'll whip you sure."

Kizer Faces Hard Task

Must Rebuild Purdue Eleven Around 3 Veterans.

This is another of a series on major college football prospects.

By PAUL MICKELSON
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Sept. 14 (AP)—Purdue will place another strong team on the field this fall, but Coach Noble Kizer faces a most difficult task in maintaining the dazzling pace Boilermaker machines have set since the "golden era" started here five years ago.

Since 1928, the Boilermakers have been so powerful that they established a modern scoring record by pushing over one or more touchdowns in 48 successive games. Only four of those games were lost, two of them by one point. Hence the victory habit is so firmly established in the Boilermaker camp that Coach Kizer, who lost 20 major lettermen from last year's squad by graduation, has his worries this fall.

Coach Kizer will open his fifth campaign as head of the Boilermaker forces with a reconstructed team with only three men available who were on the starting eleven against Notre Dame last season—Duane Purvis and Jim Carter, two of the speediest halfbacks in college football, and Ed Skoronski at center. The rest of the regulars, except Capt. Carl Heldt at left tackle, will have to be recruited from a fine looking but inexperienced set of candidates.

Kizer isn't worrying about his backfield with Carter and Purvis lugging the leather, but the forward wall is an enigma. If the line comes through with the usual superb Purdue blocking for Carter and Purvis, the Boilermakers may continue their big victory march; if it fails, the Boilermakers seem doomed to their poorest season in many years.

Eight games are on Purdue's schedule:

Oct. 6—Rice Institute here.
Oct. 13—Purdue at Notre Dame.
Oct. 20—Wisconsin here.
Oct. 27—Purdue at Carnegie Tech.
Nov. 3—Purdue at Chicago.
Nov. 10—Purdue at Iowa.
Nov. 17—Purdue at Fordham.
No. 24—Indiana here.

Tigers Growl, Squeek, Howl And Win, 6-4

Down Senators, Jump To 4½ Game Margin

DETROIT, Sept. 14 (AP)—Three times the Tigers nearly threw away a ball game today as they played as if disgusted by their inability to hit Bob Burke's pitching, but each time they repented their actions and tied the score and finally they won out 6 to 4 in the twelfth, to increase their lead over the defeated New York Yankees to 4½ games.

Charley Gehringer's home run with one out and one on base in the twelfth brought home the winning markers after Manager Mickey Cochrane had knotted the count for the fourth time.

Udell, Arnold In Six Round Draw

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 14 (AP)—Larry Udell, Aberdeen, S. D., and Pat Arnold, 170, Minneapolis, fought a six-round draw in the main event of a boxing card tonight.

Udell, weighing 165, scored the only knockdown of the bout in the fifth round when Arnold went down from a flurry of gloves to the head for a five count.

Indians Blast Yank Hurlers' Offerings 12-5

CLEVELAND, Sept. 14 (AP)—The Indians trained their batting eyes on the offerings of four Yankee pitchers, beginning with Charley Ruffing, and blasted out a 12 to 5 decision over the second place New Yorkers today.

The defeat dropped the Yanks to 4½ games behind the league leading Tigers and evened the current series. Lou Gehrig's forty-sixth home run started a Yankee rally that drove Lefty Thornton Lee out in the seventh but didn't do much damage. Earl Averill socked his twenty-seventh to start the Cleveland scoring in the first inning and his mates continued for a total of 14 assorted blows.

Goldman Licks Pal for First Big Chance

Little Overpowers Don Armstrong; Reigns Favorite

BROOKLINE, Mass., Sept. 14 (AP)—David (Spec) Goldman, 25 year old metal worker from Dallas, Tex., who has never won a title tournament of any description, tonight remained the only obstacle to the booming drive of William Lawson Little, Jr., the San Francisco "siege gun," toward his objective of adding the American amateur golf crown to the British title he won this spring.

Veteran Golfer

Goldman and Little, a veteran of international golfing wars despite the fact he is only 23 years old and still a Stanford university undergraduate, emerged as the finalists in the first all-match play tournament in 31 years. They will meet tomorrow over the 36 hole route to decide the championship, starting at 7 a.m. (CST).

Goldman capped the climax of the first national championship in which he has ever competed, by downing his roommate and hometown rival, Reynolds Smith, 22 year old Texas

Schumacher's 5 Hit Hurling, Home Run, Slaps Card Flag Hopes as Giants Win 4 to 0

Raise Lead Margin To 5½ Games; 22nd Victory for Hal

NEW YORK, Sept. 14 (AP)—Hal Schumacher picked up the gauntlet the Cardinals tossed down today, and slapped the St. Louis pennant hopes right in the face with a five hit pitching performance and a home run that lifted the Giants to a 4 to 1 victory over their second place rivals.

The triumph again increased New York's lead to 5½ games at the halfway point of the crucial series and did serious damage to the Cards' prospects to making a race of it for the flag. The Giants have only 14 more games to play and the Cards 16.

The big right hander pitched one of his best games of the season as he chalked up victory 22, against seven defeats. The only Cardinal run was unearner and Jim Collins, who scored it, was the only Cardinal player to touch third, getting there twice. The tally came in the fourth as the result of Travis Jackson's fumble, a passed ball, Bill Delancey's out and Ernie Orsatti's single. In the ninth Collins got to the far corner again when he and Delancey singled but Schumacher whiffed Orsatti for the final out.

GOLDMAN, LITTLE

Play for National Amateur Championship

state champion, by 4 and 2 in the semi-finals today.

Little overpowered Don Armstrong, 29 year old Chicago whiskey salesman, by 4 and 2, in the other 36 holes semi-final but the match was by no means a rout.

Choice for Title

Outstanding favorite from the start, Little is now a prohibitive choice to hurdle the last barrier and achieve the amateur "double" that only Harold H. Hilton of England and Robert T. Jones, Jr., of Georgia ever registered before. Hilton came over to the United States to turn the trick in 1911 and Jones included both amateur crowns in his farewell sweep of the golfing boards in 1930.

The Californian figured to be at least a 2 to 1 betting choice in the books and there were no prospective takers except for enthusiasts from the Lone Star state who have enjoyed their biggest national golfing holiday on record.

Going to Help

"I'm going to help pull him through too," smiled Smith, as he paid tribute to his buddy, with whom he has been skimping to make their limited funds last through a tough tournament week 2,000 miles from home.

America's Cup Yachts Tuned For Efficiency

NEW PORT, R. I., Sept. 14 (AP)—Barnacles were given no opportunity today to take up abode on the bottom of Rainbow, the defender, or Endeavour, the British challenger for the America's cup. They awaited tomorrow's starting gun to send them away in the opening race of the international series.

Both yachts, now tuned to their greatest point of sailing efficiency, were out under sail, sporting about the cup course, nine miles southeast of Brenton's reef lightship, with Weetamoe, unsuccessful contender for dense nomination, and Vanitie, old and ineligible cup boat. Little could be learned in advance of the potential speed of the rivals through observing their performance today, for close contests were avoided.

BIG SIX

(By the Associated Press)

Not one of the Big Six could improve his batting average yesterday but Charley Gehringer managed to restrict his loss to one point to break a tie with Heinie Manush and gain an unchallenged hold on third place. Gehringer hit once in five times up while Manush couldn't connect in five. Heinie lost three points. Bill Terry also suffered a three-point loss as he made four fruitless trips to the plate. Lou Gehrig made the best showing, holding his mark at .362 with two hits in five tries.

Browns Divide Twin Bill With A's, 9-7, 5-2

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 14 (AP) — The wildness of Buck Newsom, young Brownie right handed pitcher, started the Athletics to victory in the first game of a double header today, but Buck came back in the sunset contest and the Browns won 5 to 2.

Newsom walked the first four batters in the initial contest, won by the visitors, 9 to 7. Athletic batsmen had little difficulty with following St. Louis hurlers, Andrews, Knott and McAfee.

Manager Hornsby started Newsom again in the second game and the big Californian was right. He struck out the first four batters. It was his fifteenth victory of the season.

shove gate receipts above the $175,000 mark. About $10,000 has been turned back in ticket refunds because of the postponements.

Where Ross probably would have entered the ring 9 to 5 favorite on the original date, and even after the first two postponements, McLarnin has gained in favor to a point where he's a mere 5 to 6 underdog, with reports that in some quarters he was held at even money. There was little wagering of any kind.

Big 10 Opens Drill; Camps Take Action

Minnesota Issues Gear To 60; Kipke Needs Running Back

CHICAGO, Sept. 14 (AP)—Two weeks of pre-season drills, leading up to two months of gridiron warfare, will open in Big Ten camps tomorrow.

Minnesota, figured as the best bet to beat Michigan out of the title if any team can, issued equipment to 60 candidates today. Included in the list to report to Coach Bernie Bierman tomorrow are 17 lettermen, 10 of them regulars of the 1933 eleven.

Michigan will have a squad of around 50 men at the start, but such stalwarts as Chuck Bernard, all-America center, Tackle Francis Wistert, Ted Petoskey and Herman Everhardus, will be missing. Coach Harry Kipke has promising material, but stands in need of a capable running back. Coach Bob Zuppke of Illinois, beginning his twenty-second season at Champaign, expects his team to be about as good as last year when two one-point defeats deprived the Illini of a share in the title.

Iowa, under Ossie Solem, also has a majority of last year's team returning, but will miss Joe Laws, Francis Schammel and Capt. Tom Moore. Northwestern has George Potter, 1932 quarterback, returning, and a flock of promising sophomores. Purdue lost most of its veterans, but Noble Kizer will have the biggest squad in the conference, from which to build around Duane Purvis and Jimmy Carter, last year's "touchdown" twins.

Chicago's problem is lack of reserves to back up an improved regular eleven, while Wisconsin, like Northwestern, hopes for great things from sophomores. The Badgers suffered a big loss today when John Golemgeske, a regular tackle, was declared ineligible.

Alvin (Bo) McMillin will start his first year at Indiana with enough veterans to promise a dangerous team. The other newcomer to Big Ten coaching ranks, Francis Schmidt at Ohio State, will have few veterans, but plenty of good youngsters.

"DEATH SONG"

by JOAN CLAYTON AND MALCOLM LOGAN

CHAPTER XXXV

"Miss Montague," Mark said, "this is Dr. John Calvert. You may have heard Mrs. Vail speak of him."

She looked at the doctor and then at Mark. She moistened her lips. "No, I haven't," she said.

"I asked Dr. Calvert to come here so that we could all be convinced that you're not Mrs. Vail," Mark continued pleasantly. "He was Vail's physician in New York."

"She isn't Mrs. Vail," Calvert said.

Miss Montague turned haughtily to the sheriff. "Are you satisfied now?" she demanded.

"Oh, no," Mark said softly. "You haven't quite explained yourself, Miss Montague. There was five hundred dollars in Vail's room when you went in, and it wasn't there when his body was found."

The woman's face grew pale. Her skin looked greenish under the powder. The mask of youth dropped from her, leaving her an aging, unbeautiful woman.

"It was in large bills—very easy to trace," Mark added, watching her.

"Well, he promised me money, didn't he?" she cried angrily. "It was as much mine as his! I knew how he was getting it!"

"So do we," Mark said. "He was blackmailing Dr. Calvert. Mrs. Vail told you about it, didn't she?"

Miss Montague hesitated for a moment. "Yes," she said in a low voice. "Francine showed me a letter the doctor wrote her."

"Mark!" John Calvert cried. "She does know!" His voice rang triumphantly. "I can tell about it now."

"It will be better evidence if Miss Montague tells us," he said.

Again the woman hesitated, and this time the sheriff prodded her.

"Come on," he growled. "There's a grand larceny charge against you if you don't talk."

"When Francine left her husband," Miss Montague said, "she took ten thousand in Liberty bonds from the safe in their apartment. She told me they were hers, that Vail gave them to her before they were married.

"Just after she got to Europe she got this letter from the doctor. He and Vail had been playing the stock market, and they had to put up more margin just after Francine left. The doctor said he went to Vail's apartment and Vail took an envelope out of the safe and gave it to him. Vail said there was ten thousand in Liberty bonds in it. The doctor was to take it to their brokers.

"Well, Dr. Calvert wrote Francine that he didn't open the envelope until he left Vail's apartment. There was nothing in it but some blank paper, he said, but Vail wouldn't believe him. He said Vail acted like a wild man—threatened to have him arrested unless he promised to pay back every cent.

"The doctor had heard Vail say once that he'd given his wife some bonds, and he wrote to her thinking maybe she had taken them when she sailed to Europe. He asked her if she had taken them to write and tell Vail. But in the meantime, the doctor paid Vail some money, and once you start paying blackmail, you never finish."

Dr. Calvert nodded in bitter confirmation.

"Our brokers sold us out because we couldn't put up more margin," he said, "and it made Vail almost insane with anger. I acted like a fool. I thought a scandal like that would ruin me professionally."

"It wasn't the loss of the money," Mark said. "Vail learned just about that time that his wife wasn't coming back to him, and he took it out on you."

"Why didn't Mrs. Vail help him?" Sue cried. "If they were her bonds, why didn't she tell him she had taken them?"

Elaine Montague smile patronizingly at her. "My dear child," she said, "Francine Vail disliked Dr. Calvert. She wouldn't lift a finger to help anyone she didn't like. She used to laugh over it, thinking of Dr. Calvert paying back that ten thousand dollars." She looked archly at John Calvert. "I shouldn't be surprised if she'd been disappointed by him."

Sue looked at the doctor. There were tears in her fine eyes. "Oh, John," she said, "how cruel women have been to you!"

But all his despondency was gone. He smiled at her radiantly. He looked young and attractive again.

"No, only one woman," he said. "It doesn't matter now."

"You might have trusted me, John," Mark said.

"I should have told you both, but the truth seemed so unbelievable."

The sheriff looked at him with a perplexed frown. "It don't make things look any better for you," he said. "It gives you a real motive."

Nobody spoke. It seemed so apparent to all of us that the only thing John Calvert had been concealing was the reason for those payments to Vail and that the sheriff's accusation was utterly absurd. He himself seemed to feel that, too, for he turned suddenly and angrily on Miss Montague.

"I guess you wanted some of that blackmail money, didn't you?" he demanded. "That's why you wanted to see Vail?"

Before she could reply, there was a knock on the door. Mark said, "Come in," and as the door began to open, I saw Loren Ruxton.

"Hello, Mark," he said. "Did you want to see me?"

"Yes, thanks for coming over," Mark said. He gestured lazily toward Elaine Montague. "I thought you might like to meet an old friend, Mr.—Rivers."

For a moment Loren stood gaping ludicrously at Elaine Montague, and she returned his astonished stare. Furiously then he turned upon Mark. His debonaire manner was gone, and his face, flushed and twisted with anger, was no longer handsome.

"What business is it of yours if I am?" he snarled.

"You admit, then, that you're the man who ran away with Vail's wife?" Mark asked.

Loren started toward Mark's bed so threateningly that Finn stepped between them.

"I don't admit anything!" Loren shouted. "Who are you to question me, you darned busybody?"

The sheriff said to Elaine Montague, "How about it?" She nodded.

"He's Mr. Rivers," said Mark, "and he's something else, too. He's the man who murdered Seifert Vail. Arrest him, sheriff!"

Loren's frightened glance darted from Mark to Dave Finn. Fear constricted his throat so that he could only whisper his denial.

"It's a lie!" he said. He looked pleadingly at the sheriff. "I ran away with Vail's wife," he said, "but I didn't kill Vail." His voice rose hysterically. "He can't prove it! Nobody can prove it!"

"So it's proof you want," Mark said. "I can furnish that!" There was something terrible, remorseless, utterly convincing in his unshakable calm. Automatically the sheriff put out his big hand and, seizing the cuff of Loren's coat, twisted it tight.

"Let me go!" Loren cried. "What are you doing?"

"Just makin' sure you're here when I want you," Finn replied grimly.

"Picture the situation, sheriff," Mark said. His voice was low and colorless. "The first time Loren visited his uncle here, he discovered that in the same cottage was the man whose wife he had stolen—the man who had hunted him through Europe to kill him. But he didn't dare stop his visits. He was always in need of money, and he wanted to inherit his uncle's fortune. As months went on and Vail remained in ignorance, Loren's confidence grew, but he couldn't escape that fear that some day Vail might discover who he was—and use that revolver in his bureau drawer.

"Then another factor entered the situation. He met a girl here and fell in love with her. Discovery now meant not only physical danger, but the probability that he would lose her if she learned how he had treated Francine Vail. His fear of Vail became an obsession, and it's fear that makes men murderers. The idea of murder becomes less and less horrible as we consider it. It grew in Loren's mind. He evolved a crime that he thought was perfect—so perfect that even now he challenges me to prove it.

"Following that plan, he stole the overalls and hedge shears from the tool house—easy enough for a person who had the run of the grounds at all hours. He took them just in case he should have to kill Vail. Then, unexpectedly, the crisis arrived. He learned that Vail was expecting a visit from his wife. He had to act at once and he did.

"We know from his own admission that he was in the woods behind Lakeside Cottage that afternoon when Vail was stabbed to death in his bedroom. He changed there into the overalls, strolled across the lawn, entered Vail's room and murdered him. He had time to remove the overalls and throw them in the lake with the shears before Sue arrived to keep a date with him."

"It's a lie!" Loren cried. "Francine Vail was in Europe! Why should I think she was coming here?"

"Vail obligingly told you when you got him drunk on the night of the dance," Mark said. "Of course, neither Vail nor you knew that Francine had died and that the woman who wrote to Vail, using her name, was Miss Montague."

Loren's face was haggard. His eyes swept our faces. None of us could look at him.

"Sheriff," he faltered, "you don't believe that, do you? You don't call that proof?"

"I'm still listening," Finn answered.

"The day after the murder," Mark continued, "Loren lied to me. He had no alibi, and he tried to create one. He said he was with Sue when Vail was killed, although she didn't leave here until half an hour after the murder. No one had accused him. No one had the slightest suspicion of him, but nevertheless because he knew his guilt, he felt that he had to account for that half hour. He asked you to back up that story, didn't he, Sue?"

The girl's eyes dropped. She nodded miserably.

Suddenly Loren's cringing terror left him. He straightened his shoulders and looked at Mark triumphantly.

"How do you account for the fact that I took a photograph of the murderer entering Vail's room?" he sneered.

The sheriff exclaimed, "Yeah, how about that?"

Mark smiled. "I wondered when you'd come to that, Loren," he said. "It was a better alibi than the first, wasn't it? But that's the thing that's going to convict you."

Loren's face went white.

"After Loren had lied to me," Mark said, "afterward, mind you, he had some photographs developed, and one of them showed a man in overalls standing beside Vail's door. Immediately Loren saw a perfect alibi in it. He dropped the first one, then, and told us he had taken the photograph at the time when he knew Vail was murdered. But we have no one's word but his that he took the photograph that afternoon.

"The truth is, he took a roll of films two days before. He photographed his uncle and the cottage. He said he spoiled the whole roll, but the druggist's clerk who developed the two rolls remembers that one picture of the first wasn't spoiled. It was the picture Loren showed us—a photograph of an actual gardener who was working beside the cottage that day."

There was a moment's silence. Then Mark went on:

"One final proof: this morning an attempt was made to poison me. Someone substituted a salt cellar filled with arsenic for the cellar on my breakfast tray. Why? Because I was getting dangerously close. Because Bob was about to go to New York to find the woman who visited Vail—the woman Loren and I believed was Francine Vail." He paused and with slow emphasis concluded:

"Except for Sue, Bob and I, no one in the sanatorium but Loren Ruxton knew Bob was going to New York."

A look of horror grew on Loren Ruxton's face. He shuddered. His hand went to his collar, as though it were choking him. Finn reached into his pocket. His handcuffs clinked as he pulled them out. He slipped them on Loren's wrists.

"I arrest you for murder," he said.

Loren winced at the cold touch of the steel. He turned to Sue.

"Sue," he said, "it's a lie, every word of it! You believe me, don't you? Don't you, Sue? Tell me you believe me!"

She looked at him with eyes misty with tears.

"I don't know what to believe," she said.

He turned back to the sheriff. "Let me call my uncle," he said. "I've got a right to do that."

The sheriff looked questioningly at Mark.

"After all," Mark said, "Mr. Ruxton should know. Why don't you tell him, sheriff?"

"Strange As It Seems"

The world's best seller, second only to the Bible from whence it gets its theme, was written by Dr. Charles M. Sheldon in 1897 when he wrote "In His Steps." The story concerns a modern preacher who set out to solve daily problems by acting as he believed Christ would have acted. The hero, Henry Maxwell, also started a laymen's movement whose members were pledged to the same practice.

The author was a Congregational minister at Topeka, Kan., when he wrote the story as an inspirational piece to be read first to his Sunday school class and later published serially in The Advance, a church paper.

It was published in book form as a cheap edition and soon sold out, but it was soon discovered that the copyright was imperfect—the church paper had sent only one copy to the copyright office instead of two. Then the story was the property of anyone who wanted to publish it.

"In His Steps" was translated into 21 foreign languages and printed abroad in 47 different editions. In this country scores of editions were printed until the total sale of the story ran to 25,000,000 copies.

For all his bookrights Dr. Sheldon was paid nothing except an occasional check in the form of a donation. Generally he got nothing—often not even a note of thanks. He did realize $275 for the manuscript for serial publication in The Advance.

TRAILS into the UNKNOWN

Story of Indian Migrations Rebuilt

(Editor's Note: This is the third in a series of five daily articles.)

By F. B. COLTON
(Associated Press Science Writer)

WASHINGTON (AP)—A trail into the unknown of 20,000 years ago, beginning perhaps with a stone age hunter tracking mammoths across what is now Bering strait, and ending with Custer's last stand, is being retraced in Alaska gravel beds, midwest mounds and Virginia stream banks.

Delving for relics, scientists of the Smithsonian institution are scattered over the entire North American continent reconstructing one of the great epics in history—the peopling of the new world by the Mongoloid ancestors of the Indians.

They came in probably a series of migrations that may have begun when the vast glaciers of the ice age were but half melted off from Canada and northern United States.

The scientists are piercing together the story with ancient human skeletons, bones of extinct animals, old arrowheads, beads, baskets and ashes of campfires cold for uncounted centuries. The story ranges over perhaps 20 centuries or more, from the earliest savage hunting tribes who had not even heard of the bow and arrow, to the civilized Maya empire whose priests predicted eclipses of the sun with great precision and devised a calendar more accurate than the one used by civilized nations today.

Asiatic Origin Verified

Columbus was right after all when he believed the Indians were Asiatics. Excavations already have proved this.

Scientists now are sure the Indians came from Asia by way of Bering strait, crossing either in canoes or on a "land bridge" that is thought formerly to have connected Siberia and Alaska. A rise of the land or a fall of the sea level of only 180 feet would re-create such a land bridge. Greater changes in land and sea levels have occurred.

But unsolved mysteries about the Indians remain. Why did they build pyramids in Mexico and Peru so closely resembling those of Egypt? Why were the astronomical ideas of the Maya priests so closely akin to the Egyptians? Whence came the Eskimos, who differ in many ways from other Indians? Why are Indians in the north darker-skinned than those in the tropics?

Mammoth Contemporaneous

This summer's excavations have helped. Scientists now are reasonably sure that:

The Indians began entering North America during or soon after the retreat of the glaciers of the last ice age, 5,000 to 10,000 years ago. There is good reason to believe they lived in America at the same time as many animals now extinct, including perhaps the hairy elephant, or mammoth, the mastodon, also an elephant, the giant moose, prehistoric horse and camel, extinct bison and giant ground sloth.

Perhaps 40,000,000 to 50,000,000 Indians lived on the two continents at the population peak in 1200 A.D. They spoke 1,800 dialects, 600 in Canada and the present United States, 400 in Mexico and Central America, 800 in South America. About 1,200 tribes lived in Canada and the United States area alone. Outside the great Indian empires of Peru, Central America and Mexico, the average tribe contained about 300 or 400 individuals under one chieftain.

Brought Knowledge From Asia

When the Indians came from Asia they knew of fire, chipping stones, the atlatl or throwing stick for hurling darts, drills for making fire, canoes, weaving, domesticated dogs and slat-armor.

At first they lived as hunting nomads, learning agriculture later. Corn was raised all the way from Chile to Canada. The whites have never discovered any important new world crop or medicinal plant that the Indians had not learned of previously.

Although Edward Everett Horton strives to emerge as the great lover of the screen in the effervescent comedy, "Kiss and Make Up," now showing at the Varsity theater he runs a poor second to Cary Grant who not only takes his wife, played by Genevieve Tobin, but steals his sweetheart, Helen Mack, who appears in this scene from the film.
