Nashville Man Seeks Missing Daughter in New York; Says He Thinks Kidnaper Contacted

Six Year Old Girl Has Been Missing Nearly Two Months

NEW YORK, Nov. 12 (AP)—Prepared to pay the $5,000 ransom demanded, A. E. Distelhurst, of Nashville, Tenn., declared tonight he believed he had established contact with the kidnaper of his 6-year old daughter, Dorothy Ann, missing nearly two months.

Distelhurst, who has been in New York since last Wednesday in compliance with instructions in the supposed ransom notes, said he believed the department of justice would "lay off" to allow him the chance to negotiate.

Will Not Use Police

The father has not, and said he would not, ask the aid of New York police. In Washington, the department of justice, without any comment, announced it was investigating the disappearance of the child—who has not been seen since she left a Nashville kindergarten for her home the afternoon of September 19.

Distelhurst said he felt certain the kidnaper was a New Yorker and was prompted by reading, in May of last year, the news of the death of Distelhurst's father, Hugo, who left a sizeable fortune to his son.

Sees Money Motive

"I'm certain there's no possible motive aside from money," Distelhurst said. "From the letters written to me, the kidnaper appears to be a man of intelligence. The letters contained no misspelled words and there was no indication that the man was of foreign nationality or extraction."

The ransom notes asked for payment of the $5,000 in one, five and ten dollar denominations and specified old bills. The father came to New York in carrying out the requirements in the ransom notes. From the outset of the investigation a New York man was thought to be the kidnaper, inasmuch as an automobile with a New York license was noticed on several occasions in the neighborhood of the kindergarten and the Distelhurst home.

Harold Stuart Defends Insull

Stoutly Upholds Actions of Former Utility Head, Self

CHICAGO, Nov. 12 (AP)—Harold Stuart, whose business with Samuel Insull made him a millionaire a year for 25 years, stoutly defended both Insull and himself today from the witness stand of the Insull mail fraud trial.

Stuart, president of the investment banking house of Halsey, Stuart and company, followed another witness from the top rank of American business to the stand. The first was Cyrus S. Eaton, Cleveland steel man, who appeared to deny that he "beat" Insull in a $56,000,000 stock deal in 1930 which the prosecutors contended almost toppled Insull from his business throne.

A calmer witness than Insull himself, Stuart met a raking fire of questions from Prosecutor Leslie E. Saffler which covered every one of the financial practices by which it is charged Insull investors were defrauded of $100,000,000.

Vinson Proposes Construction of 2 Giant Airships

Henri Verbrugghen Dies; Appeared Here With Symphony Group

Henri Verbrugghen, until 1931 conductor of the Minneapolis symphony orchestra, and well known to the University of Iowa, died at Northfield, Minn., yesterday morning after a lingering illness.

Mr. Verbrugghen conducted the university symphony orchestra last January at the music teachers and supervisors conference here. He also served as a judge at several of the state music festival contests conducted at the university each spring. Among his friends here were: Prof. Frank E. Kendrie of the music department and Mrs. Kendrie, Prof. Christian A. Ruckmick of the psychology department and Mrs. Ruckmick, and Dr. Erich Lindemann of University hospital and Mrs. Lindemann.

Vote Opposes Compulsory R.O.T.C. Here

Interchurch Council Votes on 5 Questions Pertaining to War

The compulsory feature of university R.O.T.C. was opposed by a vote of 88 to 21 by students at a meeting sponsored by the Interchurch council of Iowa City Sunday night.

Nearly 150 students attended the meeting where a lively discussion ensued over five questions drawn up by the council and presented at the meeting at the Christian church. At the close of the session a vote was taken.

43 Oppose War

Results showed that 43 students refused to sanction any future war or to participate as armed combatants, while 41 balloted to fight only in case of actual invasion, and 16 agreed they would bear arms at any time their country called.

By a vote of 100 to five the group favored the federal government taking over the manufacture and sale of armaments.

On the question, "I believe that the policy of armed intervention in other lands by our government to protect the lives and property of American citizens should be abandoned and protective efforts confined to pacific means," there were 92 affirmative and 14 negative votes.

Hot Arguments

"I believe the churches of America should go on record as refusing to sanction or support any future war" rated 85 yeas and 19 nays.

Questions dealing with the R.O.T.C. and the participation of students in war drew the hottest discussion from more than 30 students who participated. At several times boos and hisses of those assembled interrupted the arguments.

"Where's the Senator?"

Huey Says "Abe Had to Study," But Friends Say Grid Star "Had His Own Ideas"

BATON ROUGE, La., Nov. 12. (AP)—Abe Mickal stood on his own as Louisiana State university's ace football player tonight and refused to be seated as Huey P. Long's latest creation in state senators.

As a result of the Kingfish's scheduled floor show in the halls of the Louisiana legislature for the opening of the special session was a "flip."

No star, no show; but Master of Ceremonies Long had an explanation for the collapse of his widely advertised determination to have the football star, a native of Syria and a resident of McComb, Miss., sit through the session as state senator from East Baton Rouge parish and draw the regular $10 daily pay of the office.

Said Huey: "Your good friend Abe needed to stay in his dormitory and study." But in other quarters it was reliably reported that "Senator" Mickal, elected at a mass meeting of students of the L. S. U. campus last Friday supervised by the "Kingfish," had ideas of his own about

Aviation Body Hears Proposal Of Georgian

Also Suggests Building Of Aircraft Carrier, 'Flying Deck' Cruiser

Copyright, 1934, By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12 (AP)—Prompt construction of two giant airships, an aircraft carrier and a "flying-deck" cruiser unlike any other ship now afloat was proposed privately today to the president's aviation commission.

The recommendations were delivered by a man generally regarded as an administration and a navy spokesman—Chairman Vinson (D-Ga.) of the house naval affairs committee.

Without raising any war-scare spectres, Vinson nevertheless informed the committee that a number of things should be done to make the navy's aerial forces absolutely top notch.

Received With Interest

Remembering that Vinson wrote the bill under which the navy's ship strength now is being built up to treaty limits, and that he convinced President Roosevelt that money for the work should be allocated from public works funds, commission members received the Georgian's statement with more than usual interest.

It was understood that Vinson's recommendations were made with the knowledge and approval of the navy and possibly of the president as well.

The commission recently has been conducting all its meetings in executive session. Behind the closed doors today the committee also heard a whole navy contingent, led by Secretary Swanson.

Proud of Aviation

The navy secretary declared his service was "proud of its aviation arm and wants to keep it." He added:

"The navy needs more tenders for patrol planes. It also needs more shore bases for these planes in the localities which are of strategic importance. The function of patrolling the seas for the protection for our lines of sea communications is purely a naval function, of which naval aviation is an essential part."

"Lighter-than-air craft is still in the development stage to determine its naval usefulness in national defense. The navy department has repeatedly voiced its readiness to cooperate with the department of commerce in the development of commercial airships and the training of civil personnel therefor."

Opposed to Separate Force

Swanson declared himself "opposed to a separate (or unified) air force," asserting that "an adequate navy, including its indispensable naval aviation, is the surest defense for the United States and its overseas possessions."

Morley Opens Times Club Series

He Asks For A Sandwich

Morley Goes Without Dinner; Paradoxes Are Sought, Found

"Will there be a sandwich waiting for me?"

Thus spoke Christopher Morley, scholar of "John Mistletoe," philosopher of "Translations From the Chinese." Mr. Morley had just finished his address to members of the Times club in the American Legion building last night, and he leaned back in the back seat of the speeding car with a sigh of relief.

"You know," he confided, "I haven't had any dinner. I don't dare eat with this dinner jacket on, because it's so tight. A square meal would just about split it."

3 Days in Iowa

Three days in Iowa had given him a large acquaintance with it—especially its southeastern portions. He thought about it a few moments, and then brought forth his reminiscences.

"It's strange," he said, "but I've spent every night since I've been in Iowa in the Hallwood cafe in Marion."

"There's a queer odor about the place. I don't mean physically, I mean sociologically."

Always seeking after paradoxes, Mr. Morley found plenty of them on his journey to Iowa City. He was particularly perturbed by the paradox of "Shakespeare."

"In the Club Car"

"I was sitting in the club car, drowsing, just after lunch," he explained, "and someone turned on the radio. I heard something about 'Shakespeare has done it again, he's around the end.'"

"I thought, 'What are they broadcasting things about Shakespeare?' Then I roused myself, and gained the information that Shakespeare was a football star of the Notre Dame-Navy game."

He found paradoxes even more ludicrous here in Iowa City. He passed the field house and the astronomical observatory as he came into the city.

"On My Right"

"On my right," he pointed out, "I saw the largest building used for athletics in the world. On my left was what is probably the smallest building anywhere used for looking at stars."

The most serious of his paradoxes he found in the realm of literature and the fine arts.

"Literature and art spring up in the most unexpected places," he said. "You can build magnificent buildings, dedicated to the fine arts. But you must allow for the personal element. Art may disregard your the buildings and spring up where you'd never expect to find it."

This is Christopher Morley, Rambling? Perhaps. But only because he says what he thinks. His

Talks of Present Literature, Future Novel, 'Streamlining'

Author Chats About Iowa, Wood, Gertrude Stein, Definitions

Christopher Morley stepped out of his traveling Parnassus last night to talk to the Times club about books and things.

Insisting that his purpose was to "drag you down to my own level," he talked about the present state of literature, about Iowa and his friend Grant Wood, about Gertrude Stein, about the definitions of art, about the novel of the future, and about the application of "streamlined" principles to literature.

"The success of art depends upon how much you can leave out—how much you can convey without ever having to say it," he pointed out.

"Imperfect"

"A work of art, being human, is necessarily imperfect. But its imperfections are of so subtle a character that, in the nature of their imperfections, they would remind us of perfections we could never understand, could we attain them."

Literature and great art is always at hand, Mr. Morley declared, not in the far distance.

"Literature is not necessarily remote, austere, or removed from the material things, for subjects of literature are around us, wherever we are. One doesn't have to go to New York or Boston to be a writer, or to Paris to become an artist."

Sees Field in Iowa

A great field for art and literature lies right here in Iowa, the distinguished author suggested.

"Out here there is a possibility of space and relaxation impossible in the neighborhood of metropolitan districts. Great artists are more likely to come from remote districts in the future. I was riding with my good friend Grant Wood today, and he took me out to see one of his favorite spots."

"I experienced a thrill from the glimpse of the unexpected vitality and charm in your countryside here."

Commenting on literature today, Mr. Morley talked of the current interest in the fad of Gertrude Stein.

"Can Not Succeed"

"Gertrude Stein's work is mislaid; it can not succeed," he declared. "You can not make a success in any art by using the materials of another art. In Gertrude Stein's work there is a confusion between words, the universal element of literature, and sounds, the materials of music."

"Your near townsman, Carl Van Vechten, who understands better than any one else, has said that to understand Miss Stein's opera, one must lie back and put his mind thoughts are important and full of meaning, just as the verses of the Mandarin of Manhattan, or the reflections of the scholar in "John Mistletoe."

7,500 Pounds Bursts Into Flame, Fatally Burns Victims

Two Others Critically Burned; No Explosion Accompanies Blaze, Say Survivors of Tragedy

AVALON, Catalina Island, Cal., Nov. 12 (AP)—Six men were fatally burned and two others critically injured by searing flames when 7,500 pounds of blasting powder became ignited at a rock quarry on the southern end of the island today. The dead, all of whom apparently lived on the island, are:

- Marion Hall, 27.
- Kenneth Ernest Smith, 23.
- Peter Hanson.
- Raymond Lander.
- Herman Hernandez.
- Angel Hernandez.

Those seriously burned were Manuel Flores and John Halvorson. Hall and Smith died in the flames, the others a few hours later.

Los Angeles county authorities began a hurried investigation in an effort to determine the cause of the sudden blaze which trapped most of the workmen.

The explosion came while the men, employees at the quarry of the Rohl-Connolly company, were transferring black powder from 25 pound tin containers to canvas sacks. The sacks were to be packed in a tunnel for blasting down rock.

One of the laborers said there was a sudden puff and in an instant the containers burst into flames. No detonation was heard. The place was an inferno of flames which quickly subsided, leaving its victims writhing where they had fallen.

Saves Life

Oscar Larson, 39, foreman, saved his life by running to the ocean, his clothing ablaze, and jumping into the water. Other men tried to follow, Larson said, but stumbled and were seared by the torches of flame.

Lander, one of those fatally burned, stumbled as he raced from the flames and then hurled his wallet containing nearly $500 to safety.

A call for help was radioed to the mainland and three physicians and nurses were placed aboard an airplane and flew to the scene. In the meantime Dr. D. G. Buffey, head of the Santa Catalina hospital, hurried with the living to the hospital and directed the efforts made to save them.

MEN'S MANNERS—

Would Be Improved By Dueling—Marquis

NEW YORK, Nov. 12 (AP)—Revival of dueling, the young Spanish Marquis of Amodio said tonight, would improve the manners of men.

The marquis, one of the world's leading fencers, said dueling "exerts a far more disciplinary influence on manners than does the quaint threat of an American fist. The possible threat of a duel makes men think twice."

To this statement, an American replied:

"I wouldn't think of accepting a challenge to a duel. Do you think I want to stand up and let an expert do me to death?"

The dapper nobleman—who for two years was captain of the Oxford fencing team—said "You don't have to fight with swords if the challenger is an expert fencer. Choose pistols."

"But I don't want to be shot, either," responded the American.

The marquis, whose mother was American-born, then explained that dueling need not be dangerous.

"The nature of a duel," he said, "all depends upon the choice of the errander."

"If you are afraid, or if for any reason you want the duel to be a harmless one, then insist that one of your trusted friends be named arranger. Tell him your thought and have him harass your opponent all he can."

"Also, fight the duel at daybreak and have the arranger call the match when it is still so dark you can scarcely see. If, in addition, you can arrange to have your opponent entertained until late the night before—then there is not one chance in a hundred of anyone's being hit."

Arizona Head Uses Militia

Guardsmen Ordered To "Repel Invasion" Of Rights in Dam Fight

PHOENIX, Ariz., Nov. 12 (AP)—Commanded to "repel an invasion" of Arizona's rights, national guardsmen today were mobilized and ordered by Gov. B. B. Moeur to proceed immediately to the site of the Parker dam to prevent any construction work on the Arizona side of the Colorado river.

The mobilization was ordered when Governor Moeur failed to hear from Washington that work on the project had been held pending settlement of Arizona's claims.

A zone on the Arizona side of the dam site, where Six Companies, Inc., is constructing a pile bridge preparatory to actual work on the dam, was placed under martial law Saturday by Governor Moeur.

In Washington, Harold Ickes, secretary of the interior, said he could "see no reason for the Arizona governor's calling out troops in the Parker dam controversy."

Physicians Seek To Save Lives of Eight Child Poison Victims

DENVER, Nov. 12 (AP)—As physicians labored over eight children in the babies' ward of Denver General hospital tonight police learned an entirely new version of how they were poisoned with marshmallows and pronounced the case "entirely an accident."

Death already has claimed the life of one of nine children in a receptive trance—I call it hydrocephalic imbecility, or a sort of sitting in one's sleep. You are then supposed to obtain an understanding—of what, I have no idea."

700 Attend Streamlined principles are being applied more and more in the realm of literature, he said. As the physical shape of things around us has changed in accordance with this scientific principle, so has literature.

The novel of the future, he believes, will "take realism for granted." No attempt will be made by the authors to describe the physical appearance of a room, a scene. The tendency is toward the analysis of feelings, emotions, thoughts.

About 700 persons were present at his lecture, the first in the Times club series for the year. Mr. Morley was introduced by Tom Yosseloff, G. of Mason City, president of the Times club.

Pi Beta Phi To Entertain 250 Guests Today

Two hundred and fifty guests will be entertained by the Pi Beta Phi Alumnae club at a tea from 2:30 to 5:30 this afternoon at the sorority chapter house. The annual exhibition and sale of settlement school products will be featured at the tea. These products will include handwoven textiles, hooked mats, hand dipped candles, and handmade baskets which have been made in the mountain homes in the vicinity of Gatlinburg, Tenn.

For 22 years Pi Beta Phi sorority has maintained a settlement school in that community, and as a part of its community service, has revived and encouraged home industries. Granddaughters of women who grew and spun their cotton, who carded and combed their wool, or who prepared their blueprints for dipping, are now busy in their own home weaving on modern homemade looms or on the older reed looms.

An expert weaver from the school supervises the work of 65 looms in various homes, and divides the work in order that the largest families can be helped. Products are then marketed through the Arrow Craft shop, with the help of Pi Beta Phi Alumnae clubs.

Receiving hostesses will be Mrs. W. O. Blynting, Mrs. J. J. Large, Elizabeth Fuller, A4 of Mt. Ayr, and Jean Lovell, A4 of Mason City. Parlor hostesses will include Mrs. Stephen Swisher, Mrs. Carl Strub, Mrs. Glenn Ewers, Mrs. Kenneth Dunlop, and Florence Bradley.

Pouring tea will be Mrs. Lynne Crabbe, Virginia Ball, Zane Irwin, A4 of Ft. Worth, Tex., and Roberta Wayne Proud, A4 of Ottumwa. Dining room assistants include Margaret and Madelyn Hickenlooper, both A3 of Winterset; Helen Blanchard, A2 of Council Bluffs; Janet Welden, A3 of Iowa Falls; Maxine Redmond, A2 of Monticello; Ruth Flynn, A3 of Quincy, Ill.; and Madge Jones, A1 of Cedar Rapids.

Hurrey Talks Here Sunday

Student Worker Says Present Era Greatest Creative Period

Declaring that the current era is the greatest creative period in world history, Charles D. Hurrey, traveling secretary of the World Student Christian federation, pointed out to foreign students and faculty members in an Armistice day address at Iowa Union Sunday afternoon, that there are four outstanding characteristics of student groups throughout the world.

"Students are critical of existing conditions," Mr. Hurrey said. "There is general dissatisfaction and unrest among young people, and confusion about economic and social problems. There is also uncertainty about participation in war."

During the last few years Mr. Hurrey has visited 50 nations and knows intimately thousands of students in the United States and abroad.

He said that strong nationalism and an increasing international mindedness are increasing side by side. Though students are interested as never before in historical and cultural aspects of other countries, India, Egypt, and Turkey particularly are vibrating with "narrow nationalism."

Following the lecture, President and Mrs. Eugene A. Gilmore entertained the group at a tea from 4:30 to 6 p.m.

Bose Flays Arms Makers

Proposes Remedy For International Munitions Trouble

Munitions manufacturers are more international than any government, Sushindra Bose of the political science department told 40 members of the League of Women Voters at their luncheon meeting yesterday at Youde's inn.

Profit is the one objective of all munitions manufacturers, who will sell as freely to any country as they will to their own, he said. Mr. Bose proposed, as the only remedy for this promotion of the sale of armaments, a changed psychology for all nations—teaching that international quarrels are not to be settled with arms.

Other Remedies

Two other remedies, government monopoly or international control of munitions manufacture, cannot be brought about, the speaker said. Should capitalistic government attempt to control the manufacture of munitions within its boundaries, it would become involved in attempting to control the great steel and iron industries.

Since six nations control sufficient munitions factories to supply the world, small nations would cry for a place to buy arms if munitions manufacture were placed under international control, Mr. Bose explained in his speech, "International Relations and Munitions Manufacture."

"Mystery Man" Zaharoff

Zaharoff, "mystery man of Europe," was titled by Mr. Bose, "The arch murderer in the world today." This master munitions seller, he explained, has been prominent in keeping Balkan strife stirred to a high pitch.

Munition companies were not more patriotic during the World war than they are today, since they shipped their products to alien nations by roundabout methods, concluded Mr. Bose.

The league of Women Voters' first luncheon meeting of the fall season was directed by the committee on international cooperation.

THE NEW BOOKS

As the Presses Roll

The most discussed book of the month is undoubtedly Victoria Lincoln's "February Hill." This story of a strange New England family, the first novel from Miss Lincoln's pen, will be discussed more fully on this page next week.

The appearance of Gertrude Stein's new volume, "Portraits and Prayers," was timed to coincide with her first lecture appearance in America. Random House is the publisher of the book, a collection of "sketches" of Miss Stein's famous artist and literary friends.

Henry Seidel Canby, author of "The Age of Confidence," had an amusing experience in Detroit recently. He was autographing copies of his book in a bookstore, and a little old lady came up to the clerk and said:

"Confidence?—I don't want confidence. I want 'The Age of Innocence'."

The clerk explained that "The Age of Innocence" was out of stock at the time. The old lady stormed.

"Innocence shouldn't be out of stock. There should be more innocence! I don't want confidence! I want innocence!" she and tottered away.

"Black Soil," Josephine Donovan's $2,000 prize winning novel of Iowa life, is announced for publication by the Stratford company, in its new winter catalog, just out.

New Light On The Career Of The Boy General

GLORY HUNTER, by Frederick F. Van de Water, Indianapolis: Bobbs-Merrill, 394 pp. $3.75.

"He followed Glory all his days. He was her life-long devotee. She gave him favor withheld from most men, and denied herself when his need of her was sorest."

In this Mr. Van de Water finds a key to the life of Gen. George Armstrong Custer, "the boy general with the golden locks," whose life has been a hidden chapter in the history of the middle west for half a century.

Desire for Fame

This insatiable desire for fame and glory led Custer into adventure, war and bloodshed, murder, treachery. It made his life an enigma, full of contradictions and unconventionalities. It made him fight furiously, kill without mercy, until his history was belocuded with inconsistencies never before satisfactorily answered.

Mr. Van de Water's biography is thorough and comprehensive. Careful and scholarly research is evident and he presents ample proof in support of his thesis. Where other students have given up the attempt to explain Custer's strange life, or have resorted finally to psychological muckraking, this author has succeeded in presenting a clear and well supported answer to the mysteries surrounding the "Murat of the American army."

"Not the Last Word"

His explanation will, of course, not go unchallenged. This biography is by no means the last word on this interesting character who played such a large part in the opening of the new western American frontier. But certainly it is the most complete and satisfying to the student of middle western history thus far written.

From earliest childhood Custer was a wild insurgent. Appointed to West Point at the age of 13, he went through a disgraceful four years there. He neglected his studies; he rolled up demerits shamefully. Yet Glory smiled on him, and he was a general at the age of 25.

Mystery of Death

The book follows with clarity and detail his career in the Civil war, his cruelty and treachery and his subsequent court martial, his reinstatement, and his stormy career as a leader against the Indians in the west. Then, just as he was entering the prime of life, Fortune deserted him, and he died in the midst of the battle he had followed all his life, under circumstances as mysterious as those which clouded his life.

In spite of its substantial documentation and quotations from source materials the book is easy to read. It forms an interesting and certain contribution to the history of the middle west. —Tom Yoseloff.

Nature and The Life of The World About Us

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE, by H. G. Wells, Julian Huxley, and G. P. Wells, New York. The Literary Guild, 1,514 pp. $3.75.

When H. G. Wells, his scientist son, and Julian Huxley first published "The Science of Life" three years ago, the work was hailed by scientists, physicians, and critics as the outstanding book of its kind in the world.

Now the Literary Guild has taken the work, formerly available only in expensive editions of two or four volumes, and reissued it in a single large volume of more than 1,500 pages. Printed from the original

Members of Drama Department to Give "Little Show" Friday

Activities of the Iowa City Woman's club are confined to two meetings this week; the general club luncheon meeting Friday and a rehearsal by members of the drama department Thursday, at 3 p.m., in the river room of Iowa Union.

Purdue Man Speaks Here

Prof. Remmers Tells Of New Type Scale To Measure Attitudes

A new type of scale for measuring student attitudes was presented by Prof. H. H. Remmers of Purdue university yesterday afternoon in a graduate college lecture in the senate chamber of Old Capitol.

Professor Remmers in speaking on "Emotionalized Attitudes, Outcomes and Measurements in Education" presented charts and graphs showing his findings from experiments conducted over a period of two years at the graduate college of Purdue university with the new type scale sheet.

The new scale is different from other scales because it is more inclusive, showing the student's reaction to many different questions. The expense and work involved in conducting experiments with the new scale is much less.

Questions in the new scale measurements concern social and economic problems; the new deal, communism, marriage and several general problems. The test was conducted to determine the student's reaction to social institutions.

Professor Remmers predicted that

The Future And The Past

SATURDAY patriotic groups celebrated the signing of the armistice. Sunday the interchurch student council of Iowa City celebrated peace. These meetings were unimportant in themselves, but significant as components in the trend of American ideas and ideals. One group faces the past and war; the other faces the future and peace.

Looking to peace in the future is an idea that has become, along with socialism and recognition of Russia, eminently respectable. It is the viewpoint of youth; not necessarily youth of years, but youth of ideas. Peace is the cry of youth the world over. Senility has no watchword.

Some groups are so intent on celebrating the winning of a war and so determined to win another in case of a national emergency that plans for peace seem to them blueprints of cowardice, the standard of bolsheviks, the measure of traitors. These groups symbolize the nationalistic and self-complacent attitude of the man who said, "—my country, right or wrong."

Though the church in America has been called decadent and emasculated, the stand it has taken for peace may offer the patriotic propagandists troublesome opposition in event of war. Student church groups are not limited to fundamental acceptance of Christianity. They are interested in economic and political aspects of the nation and the world in their relationships to Christianity. Although the fervor found among students in European countries and the Orient is not duplicated in America students in this country are taking more interest in things which were formerly left to their elders.

An eminent French author recently said six men whom he knew could have prevented the World War merely by getting together and talking over the situation. In the face of such a statement, thinking, intelligent students cannot swear unqualified allegiance to any nationalistic program.

The Next Big Controversy

THE MANY-SIDED program now being worked out in Washington for the insurance of economic security for American citizens probably will be the focal point of national controversy by the time the next congress gets under way.

This type of legislation, which embodies schemes for unemployment insurance, old age pensions, expansion of public works as a balance wheel to alleviate unemployment in times of low industrial activity, and other plans equally as "radical and visionary," is anathema to the old individualists who find great enjoyment and low taxes in watching dogs eat dogs.

But some program of the kind seems certain of adoption not long after the congress meets in January. Already the cabinet committee on economic security has drawn up a tentative list of objectives and is in the process of evolving a definite legislative proposal for the president's approval.

This will be another step in the long process of catching up with most foreign countries in the matter of social legislation. Objectives of the president's program have long been accepted features abroad, where governments have taken an active interest in the welfare of their citizens since the Kaiser inaugurated unemployment and old age insurance many years ago.

What Others Think

A United Nation For Recovery

(From The Kansas City Times)

Now that the midterm elections are over, that the results have been pronounced and that the will of the majority (no matter what the various determining factors) has been positively expressed, the attitude of financial, industrial and other business groups and of the people as a whole doubtless will be, and should be, an attitude of genuine and sincere co-operation with the earnest efforts that are being made to carry the country farther toward recovery.

It should not be merely an attitude of going along or of ready acquiescence in every plan that is undertaken, regardless of its merits. There should be reserved the right and the free exercise of differences of opinion; not only the right but the duty of maintaining and expressing that individual conviction which is at once the fundamental and the safeguard of republican government.

But the day of the sorehead and the disgruntled, of selfish shortsightedness and lack of vision as to the need of change and new enterprise and initiative, quite definitely has passed. Some of the new deal measures, such as those on banking and securities and those relating to emergencies with urban and farm property owners, are establishing their worth. Others, including the NRA and the AAA, have developed weaknesses and are in for radical revision. Monetary policies stand for clear enunciation and control, together with the fiscal policies of the government.

There has been the assurance and there can be the measurable confidence that these troublesome problems will be handled with every possible attempt at discretion and that the ultimate welfare of all will be the chief end and aim of action. So the spirit of good sportsmanship as of good citizenship requires that a whole people lend its united energies, its accumulated experience, its collective wisdom and its combined good purposes to the final attainment of a more secure position for the country.

GOOD MORNING

Sunday night, at a dinner at Iowa Union in honor of Christopher Morley, the American system of education was subjected to informal but enlightening examination by men and women whose notions on the subject should be of value.

It was not an open meeting, and those who expressed themselves so freely there probably would be chagrined to find their opinions quoted in print. They will not be quoted, but the subject of their discussion is of such vital interest in this community, and their remarks were so pertinent, that it seems a virtual necessity to relate them.

The argument began with references by Mr. Morley to his experiences at Oxford where, he said, he became conscious for the first time of the existence of a great inland empire in the United States through his associations with other American students. It moved from there to a discussion of the comparative values of the American and foreign systems of education and of the validity and difficulties of mass education.

It was the opinion of one that the American system can hardly be blamed for anything, because it has achieved nothing for which to be blamed.

Another felt that our greatest fault is a lack of the personal element in education and too much emphasis upon organization and routine. In this opinion many concurred.

And out of it all, one was able to arrive at some rather definite conclusions, the first of which is that America is traveling in the right direction, but that she has barely started on her way.

In the first place, I am still convinced as I have always been, that mass education is right. Whatever may be said of our shortcomings—and plenty can be said—, the fact remains that of all the nations of the world we are making the most glorious attempt in history, and the only serious one in the modern world, to make it possible for the great masses of people to play the part of intelligent and informed citizens.

And it is the partial success we have so far attained which constitutes the fundamental and all-important difference between this country and those nations of Europe which find themselves today in the strange hold of dictators.

Walter Lippmann has pointed out on numerous occasions the obvious fact that no valid analogy can be drawn between this country and Europe, because Europe has never known democracy as it has existed here for 150 years. But there is another phase of the picture to which sufficient emphasis has not been given.

The form of democratic government is not of great importance. The best constitutions man can devise will be found inadequate in the tension of modern international friction and economic crisis as long as they rest upon a structure of ignorant and unenlightened peasantry.

It should be obvious, but it is often overlooked, that we have nothing in the world to thank for the continuing stability of our representative form of government but our attempt at universal education, feeble as it might be.

This program of enlightenment and the freedom of the press go hand in hand as the two indispensable bulwarks of our kind of government. Without either one of these it would fail as surely and as completely as attempts at democracy have failed elsewhere and are failing constantly.

It is a fallacy to expect a program whose aim is universal education to lift the whole mass to a level of high intellectual appreciation or attainment. And it is a mistake to criticize it for the failure to achieve the impossible. Certainly it is not inconsiderable praise to say merely that it has lifted the American people to a higher standard of bare literacy than the people of any other nation.

But that, of course, is not enough. Our whole national life is tied up in the possibility of consolidating gains already made and of moving on to a better approximate realization of the idea. The critical nature of this necessity is hardly realized.

And to do it will require an honest reappraisal of methods and many changes. It is possible to continue mass education—even to make it more genuinely universal than it is—and at the same time to lift it to a higher level through a change in emphasis and a liberalization of methods. It is not only possible; it must be done.

Behind The Scenes in HOLLYWOOD By Harrison Carroll

HOLLYWOOD—After a careful examination by doctors, the Marquis Henry de la Falaise has been allowed to go to the desert. The titled husband of Connie Bennett made the trip in his wife's luxurious car and, arriving at La Quinta, found a house ready for his occupancy. There, with a nurse, he will spend the next three or four months in absolute quiet. Very few visitors are to be allowed, but Connie plans to make as many week-end trips as possible.

Constance Bennett months in absolute quiet. Very few visitors are to be allowed, but Connie plans to make as many week-end trips as possible.

Meanwhile, don't be surprised to see La Bennett sign for another picture at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. And, the word is, she'll have Clark Gable as a co-star.

Is Victor Fleming's face red? He once owned the "Lady Southern Cross" in which Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith and Captain P. G. Taylor made their record flight from Australia to California—and considered it a jinx plane. A bit ruefully, the M.G.M. director has admitted that he never could get the ship to perform perfectly. On the last trip he took in it, he and Douglas Shearer made a forced landing near Reno and returned to Hollywood by the United Air Lines.

The film young people who are staging the benefit for Mary Blackford are whispering it about that Will Rogers himself will perform at the observance. Will is sage about personal appearances, but Mary worked with him at the El Capitan theater in "Ah Wilderness" and the star is known to have a warm feeling for that stage venture and the people connected with it.

At any rate, Hollywood will turn out generously for the benefit. And the money will be used to pay for an operation which may save Mary Blackford from being hopelessly paralyzed as a result of her automobile accident.

A local scenarist threatens suit against Gene Fowler on his screen play of "The Mighty Barnum." Gene's memo to his boss at Twentieth Century Pictures is a honey, but entirely too flowery to be printed here. In any event, the studio points out that 36 books have been sold in the United States alone. Not counting the copies translated into 14 foreign languages.

This tall lad, Fred MacMurray, who came to Hollywood from the stage play, "Roberta," and promptly landed a lead opposite Claudette Colbert in "The Gilded Lily," has been putting a neat one over on the gossips. He is not unattached, as Hollywood has been led to believe, but very much interested in a pretty model in an exclusive Hollywood gown shop. Her name is Lillian Lamonte and she has film ambitions. She used to be a show girl in "Roberta."

Crooner Bing Crosby was Gonzaga's honor guest the other weekend when his alma mater played its annual game against San Francisco university.

Prof. Bartow Leaves To Attend Meeting Of Chemical Engineers Prof. Stewart Goes On Research Lecture Tour This Week

Prof. Edward Bartow, head of the chemistry department, will leave tomorrow for Pittsburgh, Pa., where he will attend the semi-annual meeting of the American Institute of Chemical Engineering. The organization will meet Friday through Sunday.

Among those present will be representatives from the University of Pittsburgh, Mellon Institute and the Carnegie Institute of Technology.

Society Prints Paper By Prof. Kittredge

A paper entitled "Coordination of Railway and Highway Transportation" which was read by Prof. Raymond B. Kittredge of the college of engineering at the forty-sixth annual meeting of the Iowa Engineering society has been printed in a pamphlet published by the society. In his paper Professor Kittredge stressed the fact that it was the duty of the engineering associations to bring about coordination between the two forms of transportation.

'Yellow Jack,' by University Theater, Opens Tomorrow Night at Macbride Hall

"Now science and humanity become one in the person of Johnny O'Hara! And no shadow of gain for him but his own satisfaction, and only the hell and vanity of that!"—comes the cue.

Someone presses a button. A light flashes high up in the control room. Swiftly, silently, a switch is pulled. The stage is "black-out." Players scamper hurriedly to new places. A "wagon-stage" is rolled away. Someone else grinds a crank which turns the revolving stage. Two more quick flashes of the pilot light, another switch pulled, and, all in five to 15 seconds the stage is prepared for the next episode of Sidney Howard's "Yellow Jack," to be presented by University theater tomorrow and Thursday evenings and Saturday afternoon in Macbride hall auditorium. This is the first play of the community series, and is being produced under the direction of Prof. Vance Morton.

First of Its Kind

"Yellow Jack," according to Arnold Gillette, art director for University theater, is the first of its kind and perhaps the most technically complex drama yet produced by the theater. Written on a tremendous scale, it has been produced by professionals at costs of $40,000 or more.

In attacking this "play of burning excitement," this narrative of 29 episodes, University Players and directors took upon themselves a gargantuan task. Hundreds of situations and problems—lighting, scenery, costumes, sound, and technical—have had to be dealt with in minute detail, then synchronized perfectly to yield a smooth, harmonious whole.

29 Acts

Playwright Howard was evidently aware of the impracticability of a play of such proportions if time were to be taken for a complete change of set between each episode. The expense alone would make it impossible for the average theater group, and no narrative thread could be sustained through an evening of 29 acts.

As a consequence, the background for the entire play will be a setting including only "essential, suggestive" elements in a neutralizing blue-gray permanent setting, which reduces unlighted portions of the stage to utter blackness. No attempt will be made to localize more than superficially any of the scenic effects, and "atmosphere" will be created solely through the costuming and the actor's characterization. No curtain will be drawn throughout the performance.

Need Hired Stage

The stage required for "Yellow Jack" is, in one word, huge. The average stage is some 26 feet in width. The first task thus imposed upon the stage craftsmen was to take up the first four rows of seats in Macbride hall auditorium, extending the "apron" 12 feet farther out and increasing the width of the stage to 80 feet, six inches.

To further facilitate the continuity absolutely necessary to a play of this type, two wagon stages were constructed, one down-right and one down-left, and a revolving stage was built up-center. The wagon stages consist of two low platforms about 12 by six feet, which, moving on rubber rollers, are manipulated by an invisible stage hand.

In order to operate the revolving stage also by an invisible hand, the circular platform was geared to a shaft extending through the stage proper to a crank beneath. But, as the operator obviously could not tell when the platform was in correct position, a "brake" was devised which automatically stops the mechanism when the set squarely faces the audience.

Three Stage Managers

Three stage managers, instead of the usual one, are required for the three separate stages of the play. Two for the wagon sets are concealed down-right and down-left, and the third back-stage from the revolving platform. Each manager operates a push-button signal which lights a small pilot bulb in the control room. As no curtain is drawn throughout the drama, changes in the sets must be effected in the few brief seconds of "black-out" between each episode. The signal bulb indicates to the operators at the switch board in the control room exactly when and what to illuminate. With such hair-trigger precision is the timing arranged that an error of a fraction of a second would horribly distort the dramatic situation.

The "black-outs" gave rise to another problem of more or less grave portent. The periods of darkness between episodes are so utterly black, and the players must move to new positions so rapidly, that there is a real danger of injury through stumbling or falling about the set. To relieve this situation, luminous paint has been applied along all edges of the several stages and stairways. The paint is invisible to the audience, but serves as a very adequate guide for the player.

Modernistic Note

Observers will detect a slightly modernistic note in the scenic effects, which, throughout the play, are but cross-sections of the locale represented. Costuming is entirely authentic to the period of 1900 and includes actual army uniforms used at the time and secured from Bannerman's Island Arsenal, New York city. Ranging in style from the stone age to the present, the military equipment collection of this firm is perhaps the most complete in the United States.

Employed in handling the production back-stage are 34 students on the light, property, sound, costume, and stage crews. All of the stage construction and scenic work has been done by students, and two graduate students will operate the highly intricate lighting board.

Unusually elaborate lighting effects have been worked out by H. D. Sellman, University theater technician. Besides the actual added depth to the stage, lights blended on the cycloramic "dome" of the stage achieve an illusion of infinite distance. Stretcher-bearers silhouetted against this dome form one of the most striking scenes of the play.

Miss Kenefick Placed on All-Midwest Team

Thelma Kenefick of Cedar Rapids was selected as a member of the Midwest hockey team last week and at the Midwest hockey tournament, in which the Iowa City Hockey club team defeated the west suburban (Chicago) team, 5 to 1, and defeated the North Shore (Chicago) second team, 4 to 1. The tournament was at Madison, Wis.

Miss Kenefick, a member of the Iowa City Hockey club team, was chosen by a selection committee, which picked for each position on the Midwest team the best player in the whole group of teams. The Midwest team will play in the national hockey tournament Thanksgiving week end against other teams similarly chosen from the northeast, southeast and the Great Lakes district.

Lorraine Frost, instructor in women's physical education, was selected for the reserves of the Midwest team.

Mary Stewart, instructor in women's physical education, Thelma Kenefick and Lorraine Frost passed the national umpiring examinations, conducted at the time of the tournament, with "B" ratings.

A hockey luncheon Saturday noon and a banquet Saturday night, at which there was entertainment and the regular Midwest business meeting, was prepared by the social committee of the Madison (Wis.) Hockey club.

The Iowa City Hockey club, like many others in other sections of the country, is organized for the purpose of providing an opportunity to play hockey for those who have graduated from college. The club consists of faculty wives, women on the faculty, and townswomen who are interested in continuing the sport.

Seniors Whip Sophs In Fourth Game Of Hockey Tournament

The seniors whipped the sophomores, 3 to 0, in the fourth game of the W.A.A. Hockey club tournament yesterday afternoon. Scores for the seniors were made by Margaret Dewees, A4 of Keokuk; and Esther Ketting, A4 of South Bend, Ind.

Members of the senior team are: Estella Mahoney, C3 of Iowa City; Margaret Dewees; Esther Ketting; Jesselene Thomas, A4 of Marshalltown; Mildred Samuelson, A3 of Akron; Dorothy Manhard, A4 of Rock Island, Ill.; Jeannette Schwarz, A4 of Freeport, Ill.; Miss Cunningham; Dorothy Arnold, G of Sac City.

Sophomore players are: Lois Coughlan, A2 of Mingo; Mary Vincent, A2 of Des Moines; Annette Kaspar, A3 of Iowa City; Lorraine Stacey, A2 of Des Moines; Rose Mannick, A2 of Riverside; Anne Nichols, G of Greenacres, Ind.; Florence Hobstetter, A3 of Tipton; Frances Jones, A2 of Wellman; Kathryn Neuzil, A2 of Iowa City.

Frank Cooney Injured In Auto Crash Sunday

Frank Cooney, 116 Harrison street, is in University hospital as a result of injuries received in a head-on automobile collision at Clinton and Des Moines streets Sunday at 5:30 p.m.

According to police records, the car in which Mr. Cooney was riding collided with one driven by W. O. Herten, 807 Melrose avenue.

Following the accident, Mr. Cooney was taken to the hospital and treated for head injuries which were said to be serious.

7 p.m.—Children's hour, The land of the story book.

7:30 p.m.—Radio Child Study club, Elementary school course, Iowa Child Welfare Research station.

8 p.m.—Drama hour, Speech department.

9 p.m.—Musical frolic, The Music Masters.

9:30 p.m.—University of Iowa sports review.

Hunt Missing Student

A widespread search has been launched by eastern authorities for Charles A. Schaefer, above, 18 year old freshman at Williams college, Williamstown, Mass., who has been missing. His mother, Mrs. James A. Schaefer of New York city, told police she had received a letter from the youth in which he said his mind was a "blank."

Dr. C. Fenner Chosen President of Alumni Students' Association

Dr. C. L. Fenner of Cedar Rapids was chosen president of the Alumni association of the college of dentistry at its twenty-sixth annual meeting Saturday. Dr. A. N. Humiston, also of Cedar Rapids, was chosen vice-president.

Dr. J. V. Blackman of Iowa City was elected secretary, and Dr. J. F. Schoen of Blairtown was elected treasurer.

Reproduction in Plants Discussed by Rogers

The present necessity in limiting the ambiguous use of the terms sex and sexuality to other terms more precise and logical in reference to the reproduction of plants was stressed by Donald P. Rogers of the botany department in a talk at a Botany club meeting yesterday afternoon.

Confusion came about, Mr. Rogers explained, through the mistaken idea which generally held that the pollen grain of the plant was comparatively like the animal sperm and the plant ovule like the animal egg.

Gavel Club to Hear Oration by Blakely

Robert Blakely, A2 of Onawa, will give a 10 minute dissertation on "Poluphlobostrousity" at Gavel club meeting 7:30 this evening in Iowa Union.

The discussion will be led by Robert King, A2 of Sioux City; Walter McGregor, A2 of Des Moines; Stetten Browning, A2 of Iowa City; Marion Fry, A1 of Onawa; and Everett Lyons, A1 of Newton.

Crack Squad Drills At Armory Tonight

The crack squad of Pershing Rifles will meet this evening at 7 o'clock in the armory.

Prof. McCarty Confers With Planning Board

Prof. Harold H. McCarty of the college of commerce was in Des Moines yesterday, where he conferred with members of the Iowa state planning board.

Engineers To Hear Talks At Joint Meeting

The Iowa Section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers will meet in joint session with the student branch of the society tomorrow at 7:15 p.m. at the electrical engineering building laboratory.

Prof. E. P. T. Tyndall of the physics department will discuss "Bearing of the Visibility Curve on Photometric Problems"; Prof. Richard R. Whipple of the college of engineering, a member, will speak upon "Computation of Illumination from Line Sources"; Hunton D. Sellman of the speech department will discuss "Application of Colored Light for Spectacular and Display Purposes"; and J. W. Blessing and R. B. Miller, graduate students of the college of engineering, will discuss "Current Research Work in Illumination at S.U.I."

Prof. Edwin B. Kurtz, head of the electrical engineering department of the college of engineering is a member of the executive committee of the Iowa section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, and Prof. Richard R. Whipple is a member of the meetings and papers committee.

Johnson, Travis Write Article on Stuttering For Scientific Review

Wendell Johnson of the speech pathology department and Prof. Lee E. Travis of the speech department are co-authors of an article, "Stuttering and the Concept of Handness," in the November issue of Psychological Review.

Included in the conclusions drawn as a result of this study are; that change of handedness occurs with significant frequency in the history of cases of stuttering, and that there is more left-handedness in the hereditary background of stutterers than normal speakers.

Prof. Reitz Leaves Today to Attend Meeting of Trustees

After being in Washington, D. C., recently as an actuarial consultant to the national committee on economic security, Prof. Henry L. Reitz will leave today for New York to attend a meeting of the trustees of the Teachers Insurance and Annuity association.

Professor Reitz will attend a special meeting of the committee of actuaries Thursday, and the regular meeting of the trustees Friday, returning to Iowa City Sunday.

Student Worker Speaks On Religious Attitudes

Charles D. Hurrey, student worker, spoke at an informal luncheon to members of the faculty of the school of religion, ministers of the various Iowa City churches, and a few representative students yesterday noon in the private dining room of Iowa Union.

Prof. William Morgan of the school of religion introduced Mr. Hurrey, who explained the attitudes of foreign students toward religion.

Quad Voters to Elect Councilmen Tonight

Quadrangle members will elect councilmen for the coming year in the Quadrangle lounge this evening.

Three judges will supervise the voting, which will take place from 7:30 until 10 o'clock.

SEEN from OLD CAPITOL by TOM YOSELOFF

Amateur anatomists are causing much disturbance on the campus these days. To begin at the beginning—a large whitish cat was seen wandering about the corridors of the Quadrangle. Scene two takes place in a history of painting class, where the students nearly suffocated from the odor of ether.

Whereupon we shift to an ash can across the street from the Quad, where the much mutilated remains of the whitish largish cat have been deposited. Now for a few flashbacks to explain the intervening action. Two amateur dissectors spotted the cat, and decided that opportunity was knocking. One of the boys bought a tube of ether, and carried it in his pocket. In the art class the top became loosened, and the fumes escaped.

That afternoon the kitty was given enough ether to end one of its nine lives. Whereupon the boys cut in and examined the circulatory system and muscles and whatever else an anatomist examines. They had such a jolly time—they worked on the kitty's interior decorations for three hours—that they nearly missed a dinner. However, they remembered in time to eat a heavy meal.

Dorothy MacCulloch, A3 of Nashua, is hereby awarded the medal for collegiate energy. It seems she had a morning class the other day, and a theme was due. She prepared the theme, and found that it was almost time for class. So she called a taxi. The cab arrived and Miss MacCulloch was still garbed in her unmentionables. The following conversation ensued:

Cab driver: "Did someone here order a cab?"
Dorothy: "Yes, I did." The cab driver looked at her intently for a moment, then asked: "Well, are you going?"
Miss MacCulloch thought, "Oh, I guess not," she decided. "It's getting late. I'll tell you what. You take this theme and deliver it to Professor _____." And she retired.

A Hawkeye for an eye: Now that the Hawkeyes sales campaign has begun, strategy will be the order of the day among sorority representatives. This is number the first. A couple of girls from one of the sororities appeared at a fraternity and made a sales talk. The boys agreed to buy it. If the girls would allow themselves to be spanked with standard fraternity paddles. And—so bright is the lure of that prize in the distance—the girls agreed, and

Literary Scholarship Nearing Possible End, Schramm Says

Literary scholarship, like the snake that swallowed itself, is eating too much scholarship and is in considerable danger of disappearing, in the opinion of Wilbur L. Schramm of the English department, in an article published in the November issue of the American Review.

"We are coming to know more and more about less and less," the article states, "and when we know an infinite amount about nothing, or an almost infinite amount about next to nothing, then we may expect a loud pop, and we shall find that scholarship has swallowed itself and disappeared from the face of the earth."

The ordinary process of literary scholarship is first history, then interpretation, and finally criticism, and Mr. Schramm discusses the mass of material which future scholars will have to go through in this process. Specifically, he discusses the plight of a biographer of Ernest Hemingway in 2134. It will be the work of a lifetime because of the amount of material that is preserved. "We have a scholarly penchant for preserving everything and a scholarly insistence on using everything," Mr. Schramm states. "There are two alternatives," the article concludes, "either we must develop criticism to a point that we may have some idea what is worth saving and worth studying or hope that the next war will not be as conscientious about destroying things as we are."

University Hospital Medical Society To Hear Eight Talks

Eight talks will be presented at a meeting of the University Hospital Medical Society in the medical amphitheater 7:30 this evening. The group will meet in conjunction with the Society for Experimental Biology and Medicine.

Dr. Willis M. Fowler of the college of medicine will present a paper on "The Effect of Splenectomy and Other Surgical Procedures," and Dr. Philip C. Jeans of Children's hospital will give a paper on "The Utilization of Calcium Salts by Children."

Others who will address the group are: Dr. William D. Paul, Genevieve Stearns, Ruth Catherwood, Dr. H. W. Lovell, Dr. William Malamud, and Prof. Lee E. Travis, of the speech and psychology departments.

Mouth Health Program Offered in Schools

Edith M. Holmstrom of the bureau of dental hygiene will give her mouth health program before schools in Sioux county this week.

Helen M. Needles, also field representative of the bureau, will present the illustrated mouth health program in schools in Union county.

J. Saylor Discusses X-Ray Ionization

"X-Ray Ionization Material" was discussed by J. Norvel Saylor of the physics department before a physics colloquium yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Saylor based his discussion on research conducted during the last year.

ABOUT SPORTS

Goal Line Stands . . . Back, And Back Again . . . Lack Strength in Forward Wall . . . Wickhorst Rumors Unfounded.

IT'S a glorious spectacle to watch when a team makes a goal line stand against the opposition inside the 10 yard line with four tries in which to make a touchdown. The Hawks turned seven determined thrusts aside Saturday, but the one that really looked good, spectacular and glorious was after the Bollermakers had pounded for a first down on the Iowa five yard stripe in the second quarter.

Johnny Hild broke through and dropped Drake for a one yard loss on a try around Iowa's right end. Purvis then tried the same spot and Rudy Leyze and Oze Simmons hit him for a two yard loss. Carter then fumbled the ball as he hit out for his own right end and recovered on the Iowa 22 where he was tackled by Hild. Simmons batted down Purvis' long pass over the Iowa goal and Iowa took the ball on the 20 yard line.

THAT STAND was only an example of what happened all afternoon when the Bollermakers blasted their way into scoring territory. But if the Hawks had fought as hard in the middle of the field perhaps there would have been no two passes to score a pair of touchdowns. Iowa certainly boasts a scoring punch, but so do these other teams, and behind a line that seems to outclass the Hawkeye forwards.

BRIGHT spot in the defeat, however, was the stellar play of a group of sophomores who will be back next year with Dick Crayne. From end to end Coach Solem will have men who have had some degree of experience. Capt. Russ Fisher and George Teyro will be the regular veterans missing from the backfield. The Iowa mentor will use plenty of sophomores in the Ohio State game, you can bet, to give valuable experience.

Rumors that Frank Wickhorst, line coach here from 1927 to 1929 and now at California, would come back to coach the Hawkeye forwards were quashed last night by Prof. C. A. Upegaff, chairman of the Iowa board of athletics and Big Ten faculty representative. Professor Upegaff said he had heard nothing of the matter. Wickhorst, former Navy star, turned out powerful forward walls during his coaching days here.

Even injuries failed to keep Jay Berwanger, Chicago's crack fullback, from losing his lead in Big Ten scoring. He holds a one point 31 to 30 lead over Frank Boucher of Ohio State. Although Berwanger has made only four touchdowns on Boucher's five, the Dubuque athlete has kicked seven extra points. Alfonso of Minnesota is tied for third with Heekin of Ohio State with 24 points. Crayne, Iowa, is in a fifth place tie with four others with three touchdowns for 18 points.

Haskell Indi's Scalp Coyotes In 13-7 Battle

LAWRENCE, Kan., Nov. 12 (AP)—Haskell Institute defeated the University of South Dakota 13 to 7 in a football game that featured today's program of the fiftieth anniversary and homecoming celebration at the Indian school here.

Wilson Palmer scored the winning touchdown in the fourth period, climaxing a sustained march and breaking a 7 to 7 tie.

Both teams tallied touchdowns and extra points in the second quarter. Haskell registered first when Palmer drove over the goal line after a series of line smashes. Otto Smith converted.

The Coyotes rallied and knotted the count when Isley scored on a pass from O'Connor, who kicked the extra point.

O'Connor, Palmer and Carney starred offensively for their respective teams. South Dakota threatened several times but lacked the scoring punch.

A crowd of 4,000 attended the game which followed a parade, Indian dances and a talk by Senator Arthur Capper.

SOLEM HANDS HAWKEYES LIGHT DRILL

Open Date Aid To Work For Season's Final

McDowell, Simmons, Hild Injured; Solem To Scout Buckeyes

Back for another Monday's drill, following a courageous stand against Purdue's Bollermakers Saturday, Coach Ose Solem's Iowa football players were sent through a fairly light drill last night on old Iowa field. Not at all downcast, the regulars were dismissed following a short signal drill, while the reserves were held for a longer period.

Only three Hawks suffered injuries of a more or less serious nature in the 13 to 6 defeat. Floyd McDowell, sophomore guard, received minor head injuries; Johnny Hild, halfback who played a fine defensive game, suffered a wrist injury; while Oze Simmons, Negro halfback, was bruised about the hips.

Solem plans fairly heavy workouts this week with a vacation in store for his charges next Saturday while he attends the Ohio State-Michigan game at Columbus. He has two weeks in which to drill the Iowans before the final game of the season against the Buckeyes.

Although Dwight Hoover, junior blocking half who received a cracked neck vertebra in the Minnesota game, is definitely out for the Ohio State contest, Herman Schmeidman, blocking half, reported for practice for the first time since the Nebraska game. It was thought that the sturdy senior would be out for the remainder of the season after a shoulder dislocation at Nebraska.

While the laydown after the strenuous battles is welcome, the Hawks will need the two weeks of intensive preparation with only the Buckeyes to consider, because Ohio State, with victories over Indiana, Northwestern and Chicago, is one of the finest scoring teams in the conference. The one point victory by Illinois is the only blot on the Buckeye record.

Iowa coaches are encouraged by the stout defense of the team deep in its own territory. Purdue backs, notably the "Touchdown Twins," Purvis and Carter, ripped through the line for long gains far down the field, but were held or hurled back when near the Hawkeye goal line.

Sophomores were responsible for some of the defensive gems. Jim Kelley, Sioux City tackle; Don Nelson, red headed guard from Rockford, Ill.; Corney Walker, Denver, end; Frank Jakoubek, end from Cedar Rapids; and Floyd McDowell, Jefferson guard, were line standouts. John Hild was the sophomore defensive star in the Iowa backfield.

By gaining 50 yards against Purdue, Dick Crayne took the lead among Hawkeye yard gainers for the first time this year. He now has 330 yards in 108 attempts for a 3.5 average, while Oze Simmons, who had led up to Saturday, has 370 in 83 attempts for a 4.4 mean. In third place is George Teyro with 102 in 26 attempts, for an average of 3.9.

The Hawkeyes to date have made 1,302 yards, 973 by rushing, and 31 points. Crayne has scored half of the team's 14 touchdowns and holds a long lead over Simmons in individual scoring, with 42 points to the Negro's 13.

Healy and T. Patterson, Toomey and Leuz are the only lettermen.

The first game for the Shamrocks will be Dec. 4 with either the alumni or Parnell. About 18 games are being planned for this season.

Iowa Cagers Put on Pressure In Preparation for Opening Tilt

With less than three weeks remaining before the opening game of the year, University of Iowa basketballers began a period of intensive workouts yesterday afternoon.

One week after the close of the football season, Hamline college of Minnesota will bring down a quintet to provide opposition for the cagers. Faced with the task of filling huge gaps left by the graduation of three key men—Moffitt, Bastian, and Selzer—Iowa coaches called out candidates earlier than usual this fall.

About 20 have been reporting to Rollie Williams and "Pops" Harrison during the fall sessions.

In the process of rebuilding his wrecked team, Coach Williams has been using various combinations. With the exception of the seniors, Grim and Blackmer, there are no certainties about positions. Workouts the next three weeks will determine who of the equally able candidates will fill the remaining positions on the first and second teams.

NAVY OVERPOWERS NOTRE DAME IN 10-6 VICTORY

Marking up a victory in an important intercollegiate contest, Navy gained sweet revenge by overpowering the Notre Dame grid outfit with a score of 10 to 6 in a close game played at the Cleveland stadium. In this photo, one of the early thrills of the game, Shakespeare, Notre Dame halfback (indicated by arrow), is shown being stopped after a slight gain by a horde of hard-hitting Middies.

Penn, Central In Annual Tilt; Neither Score

Quakers Lose Scoring Opportunity as Rogers Fumbles in Late Rally

PELLA, Nov. 12 (AP)—Penn and Central, two bitter Iowa conference football rivals, battled to a scoreless tie here today before 2,000 persons.

Most of the game was played between the two 26-yard lines, and few scoring opportunities were halted by fumbles and intercepted passes.

Penn's most serious threat came in the last five minutes when the Quakers pounded their way to the three yard line. Capt. Joe Rogers, on the sidelines at the start of the last half because of an injured shoulder, was sent into the contest and fumbled on the first play. Michael, Central center, recovered, and the Dutchmen kicked out of danger.

'Pop' Warner Won't Speak Of Rose Bowl

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 12 (AP)—Glenn (Pop) Warner, coach of the Temple football team, won't talk Rose Bowl or any other bowl until after sundown Thanksgiving day.

Meanwhile, as the coach made this statement, an official of the university, who declined to be named and the Temple committee on athletics had been approached on its willingness to play a post-season game on the Pacific coast or in New Orleans if Temple wins its two remaining games. Bucknell and Villanova, two teams that tumbled the Temple men last year, still are to be met.

To Hold Golf Tournaments For Quad, Dormitories

Both the men's cooperative dormitories and the Quadrangle will stage their respective golf tournaments Saturday. Teams will be entered from each cooperative house and the Quad will play by sections.

At Buss, a rangy sophomore guard from Keokuk, has been receiving a great deal of critical attention from coaches. After a smooching down of rough spots, it is believed that he will be a capable successor to the all-conference Selzer. Louis Shine, a fast, stocky guard, built along the lines of Johnnie Grim, has also been fitting in nicely with the Williams style.

Iowa fans will witness a fast type of play this year. Two offensive formations will be used. One is the usual criss-cross center pivot style featuring legal blocks; the other is a three out-two in style, which will probably be used when the Hawkeyes have a comfortable lead. A forward, in this formation, joins with the two guards in bringing the ball down the floor. Fast breaks are depended upon to gain shots for the basket.

Kipke Sighs, Schmidt Is Glad, Kizer Lifts His Lid; Chicago Slumps, "Bo" in Dumps, Tsk

By PAUL MICKELSON (Associated Press Sports Writer)

CHICAGO, Nov. 12—Harry Kipke, inspired squad that plays as if never has before. First it was Michigan and then Northwestern. Those Wildcats played a whale of a game. Now do you suppose they'd let us take things easy? Not much. Here's Wisconsin with a new lease on life and we have to play the first Big Ten game at Madison. What a life!

Kizer: "My hat is off to that Iowa line for its courageous goal line stand that turned back repeated scoring threats. We'll need more scoring punch against Fordham this Saturday and Indiana a week later when both the old oaken bucket and our chance at a share of the title will be at stake."

Praise for Kelo
Fo McMillin, Indiana: "Reed Kelo did a good job in stopping Kostka Saturday and the reserves performed commendably against Minnesota's running attack except in a few places. This week we are going to work on our offense for Maryland. Professor, it is too bad that Minnesota doesn't meet Bob Zupke's great Illinois team. Noble Kizer's Purdue team, or Ohio State's eleven, any such games would be worth going miles to see."

Clark Shaughnessy, Chicago: "Ohio State's the strongest we have met thus far. Now we have to tackle Minnesota and Illinois. Any one want to swap with me?"
Ossie Solem, Iowa: "Purdue had a swell team, but I was pretty pleased when they couldn't push the ball over by rushing. In holding Carter and Purvis without touchdowns, we accomplished something few other teams have been able to do. Our sophomores are showing real improvement, but it won't help much this year. Ohio State will be too strong for us in the last game."

Spears Has Fears
Doc Spears, Wisconsin: "Our boys played pretty good ball against Michigan, but they didn't show anything on offense outside of Jordan's long run. But their defense looked all right. They'll have to play much better ball to hold Illinois Saturday."
Dick Hanley, Northwestern: "We might have won that Illinois game if Freddie Lind hadn't fractured his ankle, but I got a thrill out of that one just the same. The Illinois team is Zupke's greatest masterpiece. And those two backs, Beynon and Lindberg, are two of the greatest I've seen anywhere, anytime. We don't hope to beat Notre Dame. Our scouts said the Irish should have beaten Navy by four touchdowns."

Professor: "Yes, 30 to 0 revealed a setback in the Gopher offense. I also noted your boys are getting safeties now."
"Why Is It?"
Zupke: "Why is it, boys, that the mere fact that it is going to play Illinois proves a veritable elixir of life to a team, which has been knocked all over the lot previously? Every Saturday, we have to meet an

Devens "Finished"

Announcing that his professional ball playing days are over, socialite Charlie Devens, above, former Harvard athletic star, is winding up his career as a pitcher for the New York Yankees to become a banker so that he can have his own club some day. Charlie's three-year contract expires this year.

Bears Upset St. Mary's 6-0 In Coast Game

California Surprises Crowd of 40,000 With Thrilling Victory Fight

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 12 (AP)—In a major surprise of the Pacific coast football season the University of California at Los Angeles defeated St. Mary's college 6-0 here today.

A crowd of 40,000 sat under drab skies to see a game as dull as the weather in the first half blossom into a thrilling struggle in the second.

The winners took advantage of a St. Mary's fumble on the four-yard line in the third period, recovered the ball and pushed over the only touchdown. Led by two great guards, Wendell Womble and Verdi Boyer, the Bruins uncovered an amazing defensive game, kept the visitors back in their own territory in the first half and took the ball away from them on the three-yard line in the fourth period.

Boston College Shades Centre By 7-0 Score

NEWTON, Mass., Nov. 12 (AP)—For the fourth consecutive year Boston college, after being out-played for three periods, put on a belated scoring drive today to defeat Centre college, 7-0. Eddie Anderson, substitute end, completed a 25 yard forward pass to score the touchdown and Bo Curran place-kicked the extra point. The Colonies' only scoring chance died early in the game when "Flash" Hendren fumbled on Boston's five-yard line, and "Red" O'Brien recovered for the Eagles.

Harris is a freshman taking pre-medical work. Eighteen years old, and weighing 190 pounds, he is a fast runner and well adapted to any sport, as his record shows.

Annual University Wrestling Tourney Scheduled for Dec. 15

Date for the first action of Iowa's grapplers has been set for Dec. 15. Coach Mike Howard has planned an all university championship tournament with both the freshmen and varsity participating. Gold and silver awards are to be given first and second place winners in each of the eight classes.

A dual meet with Wisconsin on the latter's mats Jan. 18 will be the first Big Ten competition for Old Wrestling. Other engagements will not be known until the schedule is made out in December.

Although the squad will not be completed until the football season closes, several new men are appearing for workouts. Among those who are now exercising regularly are Co-Capt. Earl Kiehn, National A.A.U. champion, and three outstanding freshmen, Don Maland, Scott Fisher

Nat. A.A.U. Harrier Meet Draws Stars

Ray Sears Will Defend Crown; Millrose A.A. Defends Team Title

Millrose Athletic association of New York, holders of the National A.A.U. 10,000 meter cross country championship, will definitely defend their title here in the 1934 classic to be run Thanksgiving morning, Nov. 29, as will Ray Sears of Butler university, individual title holder. William Zepp of Michigan Normal college will attempt to regain the crown he held in 1930. Indiana has also entered the race and with entries closing Nov. 24, many other schools and individual runners are expected to enter during the next few days.

Assurance that the stars would compete over the 10,000 meter Hawkeye course, was received last night by Coach George T. Bresnahan, manager of the championship meet.

Sears Wins
Sears won the individual title at Chicago last fall in 32:51. He also won numerous two mile races in track meets last spring, including the event at the Drake relays and the Central Intercollegiate.

Four years ago, Zepp, who then had not entered college, won the title in 29:43, while running for the Dorchester, Mass., club. He was second in 1931, fifth in 1932, and sixth last fall. Zepp was a 10,000 meter runner on the American Olympic team in 1932.

From athletic clubs, universities, and colleges throughout the nation, runners will come for this thirty-seventh annual contest of both speed and endurance. This event has never before been held west of the Mississippi. Teams and individual stars who have already entered the 10,000 meter race include: Boston Athletic club, winner of the New England cross country championship; Sears of Butler, Michigan State college, which boasts many intercollegiate stars; Iowa State Teachers college; Indiana; Millrose; and Michigan Normal. Other teams are expected to enter, include: Wisconsin, Notre Dame, Drake, Illinois, Ogden Park, Chicago; and the New York Athletic club.

Final Preparation
University of Iowa harriers will take their final competitive strides in preparation for the National championships, when they meet the Cornell college team here, Friday afternoon.

The dual meet will be over a five mile course, the longest jaunt to date for the Iowans. Since the A.A.U. affair will be run over the 10,000 meter trail, the Cornell meet will help to accustom the men to the longer distance.

500 Per Cent
So far this season, the Iowa team has defeated Carleton, lost to Wisconsin, and tied Drake. Probable starters will include: Capt. Max Wisgerhoff, Ed Hass, Ray Pratt, John Sitko, Verne Schlaser, and Sid Melnick.

Led by Bob Nelson, colored freshman from Okaloosa, both the varsity and freshman squads took a stiff four mile trial last night. Nelson's winning time was 21:58, and was followed closely by Pratt, Wisgerhoff, and Schlaser.

Cihecki First to Sign For '35 With Cubs

CHICAGO, Nov. 12 (AP)—Edward J. Cihecki, a recruit infielder, today became the first to sign a 1935 contract with the Chicago Cubs.

Cihecki, who was with the Philadelphia Athletics in 1933, was drafted by the Cubs from Syracuse of the International league.

Freshman intertrast basketball blanks were sent out yesterday by Larry Griswold intramural assistant. They must be filled out and returned to him not later than Nov. 17.

Mr. Griswold expressed hopes of getting this sport well under way before Thanksgiving.

Kistlermen Pack Suits

Glance Back Over Grid Season of 4 Wins, 3 Losses

By BOB HOGAN
University high footballers were packing their football clothing away for another year at the river school last night as Coach Joy Kistler directed the work following the completion of the 1934 campaign.

Although the Blue and White eleven didn't go through the season undefeated, winning four and losing three, it presented well-coached performances under Coach Joy Kistler. Assisting Kistler in his directorial role, was Mike Menzer, member of last year's river eleven and assistant coach this fall.

Starting his fourth year as football mentor at the University high school, Kistler issued a call to practice before the opening of school last September. A group of 32 candidates reported but only two of these men, Capt. Abe Brender and Howard Fountain, were regulars on the strong 1933 team. Bob Jessup and Thomas, both ends, and Jim Barron, quarterback, had seen a bit of service the year before but were not regulars. All in all, it looked like a sad year as far as University high football was concerned.

Moulds Team
Undismayed, and firmly believing in the ability of his boys, Kistler began to mold a suitable machine to carry the colors of the school onto the gridiron.

The season opened against Kalona, a supposedly strong eleven, and the Blue and White unleashed an offensive that swept the visitors off their feet and gave them a 13 to 0 victory. Forster and Wyjack, both new men, led the offensive attack, while the line, consisting of nearly all new material, was unpenetrable. St. Patrick's of Iowa City was the next in line and succumbed by a 13 to 0 count, after a hard struggle.

Why West Liberty
Turning from non-conference foes, the river school eleven opened its Eastern Iowa conference campaign with a sterling 13 to 0 victory over West Liberty on the foreign field. In three encounters the green University high team had piled up 45 points while a strong defense had held its opponents scoreless. A set back was suffered the following week as the team journeyed to Monticello to lose a 26 to 0 conference battle. This defeat at the hands of the conference champs was the worst drubbing of the year, and weakened the team as it lost its next battle to Mt. Vernon in the closing minutes of the fray by a 13 to 7 tally.

Plaster West Branch
The big homecoming battle was next on the card and the Blue and White eleven rallied admirably to smother a strong West Branch team 27 to 0. The annual in-tracy classic last Friday night, won by the Little Hawks marked the exit of one of the scrappiest and gamest eleven's ever turned out at the river school. A green team to start with.

Yearlings Start Drill for Week On Ohio Plays

Another week, another set of plays was the same old story for freshman football candidates as they set to work on Ohio State formations at yesterday's practice on old Iowa field. Coaches Schammel and Oaks handed a few Buckeye plays to two teams of fresh for later use against Iowa regulars. The rookies proceeded slowly with mastering the plays.

As the Hawks do not meet Ohio State until a week from Saturday, it is doubtful that the yearlings will be called upon for action against the varsity before the end of the week.

The lineup of Schammel's team follows:
Mason and Milten, ends; Vas Meter and Hull, tackles; Goldberg and Fontinakes, guards; Stong, center; Wright, Klumppar, Brady, Vet Dought, and Krouch, backs.

Assistant Coach Ken Heristot slung the remaining frosh into a slam bang scrimmage in which the Golds nipped the Blacks by a 7-0 score. Sprague of the Golds drove through center for a touchdown early in the fray. Grosser booted the extra point. The Blacks scored in the closing moments when Willis Newbold, Keosauqua end, won a fumble on a blocked punt and surrounded the ball with himself to hang up six points. Try for the extra tally failed.

Novice Swimmers To Get Chance At Splash Tomorrow

Looking in at the Grid Camps

IOWA STATE AMES—Coach George Veenker today outlined a week of stiff practice for his Iowa State Cyclones and their game with Drake here Saturday.

New plays came in for the most attention and the coach sought a rehabilitation of the running and aerial attacks. Paul Berger, tackle, suffered a twisted left knee in the Oklahoma game and may be out for the rest of the season.

MISSOURI COLUMBIA, Mo.—The University of Missouri football squad will practice henceforth in private.

That was the grim order of Coach Frank Carideo today as he barred spectators from the Rollins field gridiron and set about mustering every ounce of power in an effort to win at least one of the three remaining games on the schedule.

"A player takes suggestions and corrections more easily," Carideo explained, "if there are no onlookers. When there is an audience, he resents criticism as a 'call down' and it affects his play. I think the squad will cooperate better behind locked gates."

ILLINOIS CHAMPAIGN, Ill.—The Illinois squad started work today for the Wisconsin game Saturday with a drill on a new tricky forward pass offense. Regulars who played in the Northwestern game were excused after the signal drill. The reserves scrimmaged.

CHICAGO CHICAGO, Nov. 12 (AP)—Jay Bawanger, Ned Bartlett and Clarence Wright were back in uniform today as Chicago began preparation for the Minnesota game Saturday, and the Illinois battle next week.

The regulars worked on offense, while the second team drilled on Illinois formations. The third stringers began working up Minnesota plays. John Baker, pass-catching end, suffered a severe nose injury Saturday at Ohio State and probably will not play against Minnesota.

NORTHWESTERN EVANSTON, Ill.—Northwestern's varsity squad was excused from practice today while Coach Hanley drilled the freshmen on Notre Dame formations.

With Freddie Lind out with a fractured ankle, Hanley indicated that Bob Swisher, Peoria, Ill., sophomore, will call signals against the Blue Saturday. Hugh Duvall, regular fullback, also will be schooled in running the team on the field.

WISCONSIN MADISON, Wis.—Their morale high as a result of their first conference victory in two years, the University of Wisconsin Badgers today went through a brisk workout on offense in preparation for the Illinois invasion. Coach Clarence Spears gave several regulars a rest while he concentrated on the reserves. The practice marked the return of Karl Schuelke, ace halfback, to the lineup after being out with injuries for a week.

NEBRASKA LINCOLN, Neb.—Undismayed by the 25 to 6 walloping it took from Pittsburgh here Saturday, the University of Nebraska football team today returned to preparations for defense of its Big Six title.

Johnny Williams, versatile back and center, appeared to be the only casualty of the Pitt game, and the sight of him hobbling about on crutches provided the tip that Bob Benson probably will get a starting backfield berth this week.

The birds also whispered Glenn Skewes probably would get the call at fullback because of his fine work against the Panthers.

Only players who saw little action against Pitt were drilled today; the full time gridgers appreciating a slight layoff.

MINNESOTA MINNEAPOLIS—Idling regulars at Minnesota today turned over the practice field to the annual varsity reserves and freshman football game while confining attentions to Coach Bierman's chalk talk. The ordinary Monday routine was followed with treatment for minor injuries sharpening the time with the first plans for the reception of Chicago here Saturday.

Quarterback Glen Seidel, with a sore back, headed the Gopher casuals but it was not regarded serious.

PURDUE LAFAYETTE, Ind.—The Purdue Boilermakers enjoyed a complete rest today and will get to work tomorrow on preparations for the Fordham game Saturday. The squad leaves for New York Thursday noon. No serious injuries were reported from the Iowa game. Jim Carter, halfback star, is favoring an injured leg which has been healing slowly. Carter says he can run right in a straight line, but that quick twists cause some pain.

OHIO STATE COLUMBUS, O.—Taking nothing for granted in the forthcoming clash with Michigan, Coach Francis A. Schmidt pushed Ohio State's gridgers through offensive maneuvers today while Assistant Coach Floyd Stahl, who has scouted the Michigan games, equipped a reserve eleven with Wolverine plays.

Tomorrow the second stringers will see what they can do against the varsity. Barring injuries in practice this week, the Buckeyes will be at full strength for the homecoming tilt.

MICHIGAN ANN ARBOR, Mich.—Coach Harry Kipke started his shakeup of the Michigan varsity football team today by designating Chris Ever-

It will scarcely shock even Navy if it falls to halt the Panthers. Pitt rates next to Minnesota as the country's standout team—unless you happen to live around Alabama, the south's best Rose Bowl bet. The Army-Navy game is a certain sellout at Franklin field, home of the University of Pennsylvania. This means a crowd of 79,000 at $4.40 per head and the biggest "gate" of the eastern season by a wide margin. The service classic will outdraw the Army-Notre Dame game at the Yankee stadium. The "fighting Irish" from South Bend, since hitting the skids the past couple of years, have lost many of their volunteer alumni.

Jonas, Fryauf Cop Playmoor Kegler Honors

By WARREN FRANKLIN Jonas with a 213 game and Fryauf with a 578 series won individual honors in the Commercial bowling league on the Playmoor alleys last night.

The fast improving Bremers kegglers took team honors with a 920 game and a 2676 series. City Fuel continued to lead the league by winning a pair of tilts from Old Manhattan Beer. Bremers gained a game on league leaders by taking three straight games from Nall Chevrolet; while Athens Press snipped Kelly Bros. two games out of three.

Following are the scores without the handicaps.

It was a veteran eleven at the close. The personnel of the team: Capt. Abe Brender, able leader and guard; Lenz and Meyers, guards; Tom Horn, center; Goss, Lackerder, Anclaux, tackles; Jessup, Thomas, and Matthes, ends. Jim Barron, quarterback and Howard Fountain, fullback. Foerster, Westcott, Wyjack, halfbacks assisted by Wombaker and Schnoebelen.

Foerster Leads Scorers The scoring for the University high eleven in all their grid battles of the year was distributed between eight men. Dave Foerster, besides taking care of the punting duties for the entire year, managed to score five touchdowns and two points thereafter for a season's total of 32. Howard Fountain, hard playing fullback of the Kistler team, notched second place honors with five touchdowns and an added point for 31. Johnny Wyjack, Wombaker, and Schnoebelen, each garnered a six-counter apiece. Jim Barron, quarterback, received none of the glory that comes after scoring touchdowns as he was busy doing the blocking for his mates, but he did manage to add two points after touchdowns while Bob Jessup and Westcott each collected a point.

hard as varsity fullback and indicated that other reserve backs might draw varsity berths. Everhardus was promoted as a result of his showing against Wisconsin Saturday when he gained 103 yards. Winfred Nelson, sophomore punter and passer; Dave Barnett, sophomore halfback, and George Bolas, quarterback, also may become regulars.

Little Hawks End Season This Week

The city championship safely stowed away for at least another year, Iowa City high's Little Hawks this week wind up their gridiron season here against the Orange and Black eleven from Washington high of Cedar Rapids. Originally scheduled for Saturday afternoon, local authorities are trying to arrange to have the game played Friday night.

The Hawks reported in good condition after their bruising battle with University high last Friday. In this week's tilt they will probably need every bit of physical stamina they possess. Washington has the eleven which has grown progressively stronger as the season has aged.

Saturday the Tigers hung a 13 to 12 defeat on a strong team from Moline. Previously they had defeated Dubuque. City high's lone conquerors, 18 to 7. Grant was another victim by 6 to 0.

The Hawks will win to maintain their fourth place berth in the Mississippi Valley conference. A defeat would send them behind the Orange and Black.

The University high game uncovered a new threat in the Red and White offense. George Eakes, who had been used as a blocker most of the year, was given a chance to show his stuff and did just that. He showed a lot of speed and plenty of power while running the tackles and ends for a total gain of almost 140 yards. Jerry cooler also showed to advantage while in the game and his recovery to form is a boon to the Wellsmen. Paul Ross was a marked man and got away only once, that time covering 14 yards.

Wells is again emphasizing passes with Fred Ballard recovered from the arm trouble which hampered him last week. Facing a team which will boast a material weight advantage, passes are bound to play an important part.

INDIANA BLOOMINGTON, Ind.—Flattened by Minnesota Saturday, the Indiana football varsity today engaged in an unusually hard Monday drill preparing an offense for use against Maryland. Only one Hoosier reported an injury from the Gopher tilt. Adolph Sabik, reserve forward passer, hurt his knee.

water to cover the entire world with a foot of water. The atom has never been seen by man, but its existence has been established by years of research and experiments until now all scientific learning is based on the premise that atoms do, in fact, exist—that they can be counted and weighed, and even broken down into other substances.

The term "spring tide" has nothing to do with the seasons of the year. It is an expression used to designate the unusually high tides that occur when the moon and the sun are pulling in the same straight line as happens at the full moon or new moon. Thus the lunar and the solar tides occur at the same time. When the sun and moon act at right angles to each other moderate tides occur, called neap tides. Spring tides occur twice a month.

Tomorrow: The man who owned all England.

Explanation Of "Strange As It Seems"

In the scheme of things according to their size, man stands almost at the midpoint. He is just about half way between the atom and the star. The atom is the smallest unit of an elementary substance that can exist and still be that element.

An atom of iron, for instance, cannot be broken down into smaller bits and still be iron. In the average human body, according to Eddington, there are about 10<sup>27</sup>, or 1,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 atoms. In an average star there is enough matter to make about 10<sup>33</sup> human bodies.

The enormity of the number of atoms in a bit of matter can be seen in this fact; if each atom in a drop of water were itself a drop of water then there would be enough

Kostka May Wind Up Career This Season; Big 10 Rule Is Cause

By ALAN GOULD (Associated Press Sports Editor) NEW YORK, Nov. 12 (AP)—Gridiron from the gridiron: If any eastern team should get the call to the Rose Bowl intercollegiate classic on New Year's day, it most likely will be the winner of the up-state New York battle Saturday between unbeaten, untied Syracuse and Colgate's Maroon magicians, whose lateral passing attack is one of the season's sensations. . . . Princeton probably can't go west, even if last year's invitation is repeated—which is unlikely—and Navy, the east's third major unbeaten, untied aggregation figures to be upset this week by Pittsburgh's powerhouse.

Election Costs County $3,000

Supervisors Allow Expenses for Boards, Polling Places, Booths

The general election last Tuesday cost Johnson county approximately $3,000, County Auditor Ed Sulek said yesterday.

The board of supervisors allowed $1,881.25 yesterday for cost of election boards, rental of polling places, and setting up of booths. Ballots and election supplies will total almost $1,000 more, it was estimated.

The five election boards cost $541.30. The largest amount, $154, was paid to the fifth ward board. The cost of the other boards was: First ward, $87.30; second ward, $91.50; third ward, $97; fourth ward, $111.50.

Hobby Horses University High Students Exhibit Different Hobbies

Such widely divergent things as seeds and snake rattles are now shown in the "hobby-horse" exhibition in the University high school library as part of national book week.

Wallace Adams of grade 10, is exhibiting a large cardboard to which are affixed some of the 75 varieties of seeds he has collected since he began the hobby in September.

A red berry cluster was labeled the arisaema triphillum, and a familiar looking weed the asclepias syriaca. The common name for the two is Jack-in-the-pulpit, and milk-weed.

The snake rattles are part of a collection belonging to Raymond Rarey of grade 10, who collects different objects among which are ancient powder horns and a peace pipe.

Shirley Briggs of grade 11 displays photographic art of her own composition which had been accepted for exhibition at the salon of photographic art at the University of Iowa. Among the pictures are "North of West Point," "Picketed Weed," "Ann," "Water Lily," "West Portico of Old Capitol," and Lincoln.

Bobby Parden, in grade 7, collects milk cans, and he exhibited 75 caps from Montreal and cities in the United States. Carroll Heckock of grade 12 displayed a ship model, planned and completed by himself.

Ruth Brandstatter of grade 12 embroiders for her hobby and she displayed several examples of her work.

Judith Page of grade 9 corresponds with other girls her age in Paisley, Scotland; Eklatina, Alaska; Berlin, Germany; and Eksjo, Sweden. Their letters to her were on display.

The exhibition will, it is hoped, arouse an interest in hobbies among all students according to Alice Ralston librarian.

Nobel Prize Winner

Here is Luigi Pirandello, noted Italian novelist and playwright, who has been selected as the winner of the 1934 Nobel prize for literature, valued at $45,000. Pirandello's best known play is "As You Desire Me."

Iowa City Mattress Factory Now Employs 50; Zintelman Directs

Fifty mattresses a week is now the quota of the Iowa City FERA mattress factory established in September under the supervision of Dr. W. L. Bywater, head of relief in Johnson county.

More than 50 unemployed persons work four days a week in the factory, located in the old Iowa City Canning plant at Sheridan and Oakland avenues. Workers use 9,000 yards of heavy spool thread, four bales of cotton, and 500 yards of ticking for the weekly output.

Long staple cotton provides the filling of the mattresses. This is superior to "linters," cotton fuzz taken from cotton seed, which is used in many mattresses, according to Frederick A. Zintelman, factory superintendent. While "linters" sell for a few cents a pound, the staple cotton is about 20 cents a pound.

Work Quickly

All work on the mattresses except reginning of the cotton is done in one large room 100 feet long and 50 feet wide. A smaller adjacent room is used for the reginning. There the casings of durable blue and white striped ticking, cut and sewn in the large room, are brought to be filled from the ginning machine.

It takes 30 minutes to fill a case. Two women sort cotton from the bale and hand to a man who feeds it to the many-toothed machine, which fluffs it up and blows it into the mattress. Another man watches it, smoothes corners, and sees that it is packed correctly.

Are Finished

Then the unfinished mattress goes to a dozen or more tufters, stitchers and rollers. The tufters put stout twine through the body of the mattress and draw it together so that it is surfaced in squares punctuated at the corners by cotton dots to hold the knots. The rollers roll and sew the edges, and the stitchers sew the sides. The finished mattress is then wrapped and sealed and placed with others in the back of the room, awaiting shipment to various relief agencies in the state for distribution to persons on direct relief.

Better mattresses cannot be obtained anywhere, according to Mr. Zintelman.

"They are so good they can be used by your great grandchildren if taken care of at all—that is, with a general overhauling and reticking now and then," Mr. Zintelman says.

Zintelman Experienced

This recommendation is backed by 51 years experience of operating mattress factories in Dallas, Tex., Minneapolis and San Francisco among other places, and in Fond du Lac, Wis., where the superintendent owned and operated the Fond du Lac Mattress and Quilt company for 15 years before coming to Iowa City.

As he punched his fist into the mattresses to show how soft they are, Mr. Zintelman remarked that 5 years has made a great change in mattress making.

New Methods

"We used to make mattresses on ground-up clothing clippings and rags, and by filling a top and bottom cotton strip with ground wood shavings or shredded corn husks. These retailed for $5.50 to $6. For the better trade that could afford to pay $35, $40 or $50 we made curle horse hair mattresses," Mr. Zintelman related.

"They use kapok, a by-product of silk, now. It's soft enough, but after two or three years it mull where the wear is greatest and goes to dust. And as for those made with linters and filled with inner springs—they are easy to sleep on, too, but when they are worn out they can't be remade and you have to pay someone to haul your mattress away. In the old days we used striped sateen ticking, and it was good enough for anyone. Now the haul flowers printed on the covering and call them fancy art ticks, he said.

"We have some recreation out here too, don't we?" Zintelman asked some of the workers, who seemed to be enjoying their jobs.

"That is, we have fire drills quite often. The last time it was 20 working here got out in 11 and a half seconds, so you see we are experts in other ways than fixing mattresses."

Importance of Local Red Cross Stressed As Drive Continues

Johnson county chapter of the Red Cross continued its annual roll call drive yesterday with a talk to campaign workers by Robert L. Larson, chairman of the drive at the headquarters in the Iowa City Savings bank building.

Mr. Larson stressed the fact that although much is known of the national and international Red Cross activities, little is known of the local Red Cross work and its importance to a community.

Lists Activities

Numerous activities of the local chapter during last year were reported by Mr. Larson as follows:

"Office interviews, 1,560; telephone calls into office, 542; calls out, 864; and a great number of letters, telegrams, and long distance telephone calls. The local office prepared and delivered 38 Christmas baskets to widows and 26 children were given Christmas toys. Fourteen men were placed in the state hospital at Oakdale, 93 men at University hospital, and seven at Mercy hospital.

"The office attended to 20 applications for soldiers' relief, obtained 33 loans on adjusted service certificates, obtained seven out of eight death benefits for veterans, and placed 22 out of 23 government headstones. It aided in 42 cases relating to pensions for local service men, took care of 137 transients and four transient families, and distributed clothing to 213 veterans and families. It gave food and furniture to 14 families in distress, and in other ways aided the needy."

Urges Membership

In urging the purchase of membership in the Red Cross Mr. Larson said that last year local membership was approximately 1,100. Additional donations of $206, and dividends from closed banks brought $150, which gave the local chapter a total of $1,525.96. From this sum, debts incurred from relief work in 1931-32 amounting to $478.19 were paid and $532.38 sent to the American Red Cross for national and international use. Other expenses listed were roll call drive, $39.16, and $41.86 for veteran's Christmas.

"The emblem of the Red Cross has always stood for charity where it is most needed," Mr. Larson asserted.

No Politics

"It is not connected with any government appropriations or gifts and therefore is not tainted with politics," he said.

"However, the government has seen fit to use the Red Cross in this community as well as in others for the distribution of thousands of pounds of meat, flour and cotton. To continue the good work of the local organization it is hoped that a new height will be reached this year in contributions by people who realize the importance of maintaining this service. The membership costs less than two cents a week and the amount of good it does is beyond question," he concluded.

Ping Pong Tourney In Fourth Round; To End Thanksgiving

Second and third rounds of the ping pong tournament at the recreational center are completed, Luella A. Reckmeyer, director, announced yesterday.

Those in the senior division who won at least two games are: Jack Keller, Don Delsing, Ruth Patten, Maynard Meecham, John Riley, Harold Bright, and Art Elbright.

Winners in the junior division are: Robert Paukert, Lu Verne Homewood, Paul Hennessey, and Raymond Tiffany.

Fourth and fifth rounds will be completed this week. Those who rank highest will enter the elimination tournament which is to be completed before Thanksgiving.

John Neuzil Took His Own 'Medicine'; But It Had a Real Wallop

John W. Neuzil, 74 year old farmer living out of Iowa City, took his own medicine, but it landed him in jail.

Mr. Neuzil told Police Judge Harold Vestermark in police court Sunday morning that he drank some beer because he didn't feel well, and then couldn't find his way home, so he called the police who obligingly lodged him in the city jail for the night.

"You drank just two glasses of beer?" Judge Vestermark asked.

"When did you begin to drink?"

"In the morning, but first I had a little wine," replied the 74 year old man who was before the court for the first time in his life.

When questioned he admitted he still had five gallons of the "medicine" that put him in jail, and he promised to pour it out if released. He was given a suspended sentence on good behavior.

Work Bench Built At Recreational Center

A new work bench and tool chest have been completed by wood workers at the recreational center, Luella A. Reckmeyer said yesterday.

Other workers are building ship models, airplanes, block prints, penholders and trays, book cases, and tie racks.

Prof. Croft Named To Testing Committee

Prof. Huber O. Croft of the college of engineering has been appointed a member of the power codes test committee number 21, dealing with dust separating apparatus, of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

The first meeting of the committee will be held Dec. 5 at New York City.

Cole, Jacob Hotz, Margaret Hoover, Robert Knodel, Wilma Kasper, Omar Letts, Mary Kathleen McGurk, William Schindhelm, Raymond Reiland.

AROUND THE TOWN with Bill Merritt

Approved

The Iowa City Parent-Teacher council yesterday approved three movies for the entire family. The films are, "Lady by Choice," "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," and "Circus Clown."

Continues

The Iowa City Music Auxiliary will continue its rummage sale at 220 E. College street again next Saturday. It was announced yesterday. Members of the committee said there were enough usable articles left from last Saturday's sale to warrant holding the sale again.

Adult School

First classes of the adult school, sponsored by the General Workers organization of Iowa City, will begin Thursday and Friday evening.

Methodists

The Methodists will hold their annual fall dinner tonight at 6:30 in the church parlors. H. O. Woodbury will preside and the Rev. W. Glenn Rowland of Mt. Vernon will be the guest speaker.

Remodels

A building permit was granted to L. H. C. row, 219 Riverside drive, yesterday to remodel his residence at a cost of $500.

Expenses

J. Clack Hughes, defeated for the two year term on the county board of supervisors by Dan. J. Peters, was the first candidate to file his campaign expense record with County Auditor Ed Sulek. Mr. Hughes lists his expenses as $88.83.

Kiwanians

The Kiwanians will meet for their weekly luncheon at the Hotel Jefferson this noon.

Legionnaires

The local Legion post met in regular session last night. The Legionnaires made further plans for the membership drive to attain the quota of 155 members set by the state department. Several members of the post volunteered their services in the Red Cross membership drive.

At State Meeting

James L. Eastridge, district manager of the National Reemployment service, attended the monthly state meeting of district managers in Des Moines yesterday.

ST. MARY'S SCHOOL NEWS

The junior and senior pupils in collaboration with thousands of other schools throughout the nation carried on a little classroom program in which each pupil participated in the fourteenth annual observance of Education week.

On Friday of last week, the sophomore class presented a history program, with Georgine Keller giving the opening speech. Each member of the class recited a characteristic of Charlemagne in answer to the roll call, which was read by the secretary, Irene Gaulcher. Papers concerning Charlemagne and the three most read books of the thirteenth century, were read by Louis Grimm, Robert Strabley, Francis Lenoach and Martin Gerber.

Intensive study in Latin vocabulary seemed to be the aim of the freshman class, for the following students have mastered 100 words of vocabulary: Virgil Amelon, Kathleen Fannon, Maxine Belger, Margaret Graf, Lo's Metzger, Jeanne Strub.

Pupils in the eighth grade who have received 100 in arithmetic during the last week are: Cyril Black, John Bock, Gerald De France, Marian Halsch, Dorothy Hebl, Patricia Kunce, Stuart Mueller, Lorraine Soens, Helen Villhauer.

Seventh grade pupils who have received 100 in arithmetic during the last week are: Isabel Adrian, John Aicher, Patrick Bannon, Donald Brown, Eunice Burger, Raymond

Fair enough

WE tell you that Chesterfield Cigarettes are made of mild, ripe tobaccos. We've told you about the paper—that it's pure and burns right, without taste or odor.

We have said that Chesterfields are made right. The tobaccos are aged, then blended and cross-blended, and cut into shreds the right width and length to smoke right.

These things are done to make what people want—a cigarette that's milder, a cigarette that tastes better—a cigarette that satisfies.

You can prove what we tell you about Chesterfield. May we ask you to try them—that would seem to be fair enough.

Strictly on their merits the cigarette that's Milder the cigarette that TASTES BETTER
