With The Ladies

By Ruth Blanchard

Should mothers depend on schools to teach children art appreciation? At what age should this training begin?

Mildred Voss, a research assistant in the psychology department, working under the direction of Prof. Norman C. Meier, recently completed an experimental study sponsored by the Carnegie foundation among Iowa grade school children to determine the answers to these questions.

She found that even a second grade child can be taught to notice, of his own accord, pictures and designs that violate aesthetic principles.

A constant need for choosing clothes, planning ways to beautify the home or to arrange an attractive garden spot offers a mother invaluable opportunities to teach her children the art of choosing well, Miss Voss explains.

Her research was carried on with 85 fifth grade children at Grinnell and at Villisca with 109 children in grades two, three and four.

At her first meetings with the pupils she gave them standardized tests for measuring aesthetic judgment, and when these had been filled she divided the pupils into two groups equally matched in intelligence, art appreciation scores, age, sex, grade and mental age.

One group was then given special instruction for one-half hour each day for three weeks, while the other children were left untaught as a control group by which to measure the others' improvement.

In three experiments on different phases of art, the small children with whom Miss Voss had worked showed a significant gain in ability over the control group. They could select pictures that exemplified a principle of art from a group containing others violating that principle.

The children's ability to paint pictures did not increase with their ability to appreciate art, a study of their drawings before and after the experiment showed. There had been no opportunity for practice in drawing.

They did learn to select articles on their artistic merits. How a mother can teach her children these principles by the method Miss Voss developed will be explained in later issues of The Daily Iowan.

Sowers Says Times Better

English Professor Tells Altrusa Club Of Theater Boost

"Prosperity must be near," stated Prof. W. Leigh Sowers of the English department, at a dinner meeting of the Altrusa club last night, "because a marked increase in theater attendance is noticed in New York."

"More money has been put into theatrical ventures than has been the case in recent years, and as a result, the settings and costumes are more costly and beautiful," he said.

Describing the recent plays he saw in New York, Professor Sowers explained that marvelous color schemes are being used in productions of costume and period plays.

A new play, "Russet Mantle," was intended to be a serious bit of writing, but instead turned out to be a comedy. It concerns a wandering, penniless poet, who becomes enamored with a restless, high-strung society girl.

Commenting on this play, Professor Sowers said that he is always amazed that "the hard veneered type of society girl seems to have a perfect heart of gold, if the right man comes along."

Other plays reviewed were, "Frida and Freud," "Winterset," "Mullato," "First Lady," "Boy Meets Girls," and "Ethan Frome."

Yetter's Has 48th Birthday

Yetter's department store, one of Iowa City's oldest business firms, is celebrating its forty-eighth anniversary in Iowa City this month.

This department store, a home-owned concern, has been operated by members of the Yetter family since its organization, several of the employees having been with the firm as long as 30 years.

The first store was situated on S. Clinton street between Iowa avenue and Washington street. It was then moved to the present location of the Woodworth company, and for the last 16 years has been located at 115 to 117 E. Washington street.

The present store consists of three floors. The basement floor handles men's and boys' furnishings, women's wash frocks and accessories.

On the main floor are needlework, toiletries, gloves, hosiery, neckwear, piece goods and other accessories. On second floor are women's ready-to-wear apparel, draperies, children's ready-to-wear and accessories, women's lingerie and millinery. A new feature, a women's beauty shop, has been installed at the rear of the first floor.

Women's Relief Corps Bridge Winners Play

Winners in bridge played following a social meeting of the Women's Relief Corps in the American Legion building yesterday afternoon were Mrs. A. G. Derksen, Mrs. W. P. Mueller Jr., and Mrs. J. L. Schillie.

Plans for a bingo party next Tuesday were discussed at the meeting.

President Roosevelt Directs AAA Administrator to Survey European Economic Policies

WASHINGTON, March 10 (AP)—Asserting that "future plans made by farmers of this country will depend in large measure on the extent of their outlets abroad," President Roosevelt today directed Chester C. Davis, the AAA administrator, to survey Europe's economic policies.

At the same time, the president appointed H. R. Tolley, former assistant to Davis, as acting administrator. Davis is scheduled to sail for Europe about March 20, and probably will remain for at least two months.

Tolley, director of the Glanville foundation at Berkeley, Cal., and former director of the AAA's division of program planning, was recalled to Washington a few weeks ago to help launch the $500,000,000 soil conservation program. He has taken a leading part in regional farmers' conferences during the last week.

Mr. Roosevelt said that as acting administrator, Tolley "will be in direct charge of the present work of developing the programs under the new soil conservation and domestic allotment act."

Among the subjects to be investigated by Davis, it was reported, is the movement that has led some countries to seek substitutes for American exports. Foreign cotton consumption will have a part in the survey.

Davis succeeded George N. Peek as AAA administrator early in 1934, when Peek resigned because of differences with Wallace over policy.

The text of a letter written to Davis by the president today, outlining objectives of the survey, follows: "As you well know, the fortunes of American agriculture in the next few years are certain to be closely linked with the world economic situation, and particularly that of Europe."

Remley Wins First Award In Law Trial

Hemingway Gets 2nd Place in Freshman Law Club Contest

Howard Remley of Anamosa, was awarded first place, and Whitley Hemingway of Webster City, second, in the initial Freshman Law club trial last night in the college law.

The court reversed the decision of a lower court in favor of the defendant, giving the verdict to the plaintiff, despite the fact that both individual winners were attorneys for the appellee. Paul Schweibert of Iowa City, and Howard Smith of Cedar Rapids represented the appellant.

Seniors Judge
Judges were Morton Adler of Des Moines, Howard Beach of Oskaloosa, and Kenneth Miller of Erie, Ill. all members of the senior practice court class.

The case concerned refrigerators sold by the plaintiff, an electric company, to a man building an apartment house.

Two Trials Today
There will be two trials today, the first to occur at 4:15 this afternoon in the practice court room of the college law.

Attorneys for the appellant will be Winfield White of Clinton, and William Barrels of Chicago. Defense attorneys will be John Owen of Washington, and Ray Nyemaster of Davenport. Seniors who will judge the trial are Jack Corry and Chauncey Carl, both of Des Moines, and Bob Moody of Nora Springs.

Physician's Liability
The second trial today is scheduled for 7:30 in the evening. Ruth Duncan, the only woman competing in the trials, and Edward Kelley of Tipton, will represent the appellant. Clarence Johnson of Chariton and Sabina Nassif of Cedar Rapids will be attorneys for the appellee. Judges will be Tom Bannister of Des Moines, Nels Branstad of Forest City, and Jack Cherny of Independence.

Forbids Sale of Gasoline
CANTON, Ohio (AP)—Canton's city council forbade the sale of gasoline to drunken driver yesterday and thereby presented filling station attendants with a problem that has puzzled sociologists. An ordinance prohibiting dealings with inebriated made no suggestions as to how the station attendants might determine when a driver is intoxicated.

WPA music program, but said, "Like oil and water, relief and music can't be mixed and help music. The human side must be considered."

Professor Richter's resignation followed that of Prof. Edward C. Mahle, director of the University theater, who in January resigned as dramatic director of the prairie region in the WPA artists program.

Basing his report on study of middle-western music conditions while regional director, Professor Richter last night released the following recommendations for the advancement of music:

More rigid standards in determining qualifications of professional musicians; discouragement of the majority of students majoring in music in college with a view to making it their profession; revival of private lessons by lowering costs and teaching in the pupils' homes; organization of community music groups including orchestras, choruses, and bands made up both of professional and amateur talent.

Since his appointment as one of nine regional music heads, Oct. 8, Professor Richter had developed a relief program employing nearly 400 needy musicians. Under state supervision, federal music projects are now underway in Iowa, Minnesota, Kansas, Missouri, and North and South Dakota.

Professor Richter said last night that Guy Maier of Ann Arbor, Mich., now in charge of the federal music program in a district including Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, and Kentucky, may be appointed in his place.

Projects to be continued under the WPA music program include concert orchestras, bands, choruses, theater orchestras, and dance bands. Extensive teaching and community recreational projects are in operation for unemployed musicians in several states. Composers, tuners, repair men, and music librarians are also included in the relief program.

PASSING IN REVIEW

A Commentary on the New Books Conducted by American Prefaces

BROTHERS THREE, by John M. Oskinson. New York, Macmillan Company, 1935.

THIS IS NOT an important book. It is not even a very interesting book. Like many other novels, it is the story of a farm which serves as a loadstone to the lives of its owners. Mr. Oskinson has made it his protagonist and, by so doing, has almost nullified the vitality of his characters. Only the clearest of these occasionally achieve three dimensions and rarely, if ever, that sympathetic depth begot of meaningful analysis.

Not is the portrait of the farm itself vivid enough to hold the interest as a regional picture. Under-Ridge farm could, essentially, belong to any section of the country. This in itself would not be so unfortunate had the author not occupied himself ineffectually with many purely regional details, a stylistic falling which leaves the impression that "Brothers Three" describes accurately the interesting peculiarities of Indian territory but does not contribute illuminatingly to the body of indigenous material already known about this region.

Oskinson's appreciation of Oklahoma is sincere and deep, but his communication is not successful. His sentences are in categories of simple things in the manner of Thomas Wolfe but lacking the great gusto of Wolfe's happy poignancy. Oskinson is more successful in the use of a plain, solid phraseology to underscore the essential qualities of the land and people whom he describes, and he achieves fairly well a shift in style to fit his successive emphases of the different brothers.

The author is forthright and sincere. His book, in parts, is freshly wholesome, if not exciting; but neither his story telling nor his character drawing is adept enough, nor his point of view vital enough to redeem "Brothers Three" from stuffy unimportance.

—Dorothy Rosenham.

George M. Cohan is perhaps more noted for this trait than any other. Very seldom does he add new people to the casts of his plays.

George Abbott is another who follows Cohan's theory, and so does J. C. Nugent, the director.

Superstition dictates the casting of many plays. An outstanding actor after a long struggle gets a bit and when it closes he decides that next time he'd like to have the same doorman or the same leading lady.

A note on Mr. Huston: When finishing making the picture "Dedworth," he will return to Broadway and appear in "Othello" with his wife, Nan Sunderland.

County Obtains School Funds

$1,128,711, Semi-Annual Share of School Funds, Given

From the permanent school fund of $103,775 created by school lands owned by the state, Johnson county received a warrant for $1,128,741 as its semi-annual share yesterday. State Comptroller C. B. Murtagh sent warrants to the state's 99 counties Monday.

The income comes to the state as the result of a federal government grant of a sixteenth section of land in each township for school use at the time Iowa was admitted to the union. Each county's allotment is based on a little less than 14.37 cents for each youth of school age in the county.

This year's allocations to counties ranged from $417.58 for Clarke county to $7,570.93 for Polk. There are 7,855 youths listed in this county, and a total of 722,185 are listed for the counties. The money received by each county is divided among districts in the same ratio as the county allocations.

"Weathermen do predict the weather accurately," according to Prof. J. W. Jones of the college of engineering in a discussion of "Weather Records and Meteorological Phenomena" before the Kiwanis club meeting at the Jefferson hotel yesterday noon.

Professor Howe traced man's interest in weather from early times to the present work of the United States weather bureau that was established Oct. 1, 1890. The bureau is charged especially with the collection of weather data as a basis for predictions and statistical records.

"Weathermen hope to predict weather of the future," he said, "for such predictions would benefit mankind immensely. For example, it would be of great advantage to the farmer to know if we were going to have an early frost this fall in order to govern his activities accordingly."

Sides of maps showing the vicissitudes of seasons and annual rainfall for unusual years were used by Professor Howe. Among them was
