CHARGES CAPITALISTS 'ARMING'

To Abolish Slavery

ASMARA, Eritrea, April 11 (AP)—An announcement abolishing slavery throughout the Ethiopian territories occupied by the Italian armies will be posted tomorrow on tree-trunks and house-walls it was announced tonight.

"Chaotic Mexico"

EL PASO, Tex., April 11 (AP)—Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, Shorn Sampson of Mexico, declared today he had been banished by a "country swept with chaos" as he paused in his hurried air trip to a California exile.

Despite his insistence that he is "through with politics," the new weakened "strong-man" told questioners that he wants to return to his native country.

Hull Discloses Policy

WASHINGTON, April 11 (AP)—The United States' intention of seeking concerted international action to stretch a protective arm about the rights of neutral nations in war time has been disclosed by Secretary Hull.

Coupled with this revelation was a declaration by the secretary of state before a congressional committee last January, but made public only today, that the chances were "nine out of 10" against a "general war." To this Hull added an admonition that the world should not harbor any "false impression" that the United States "will not fight."

Committee Dissension

WASHINGTON, April 11 (AP)—Sharp dissension among members of the special house committee investigating the Townsend old age pension movement was disclosed today from within the committee.

Although Chairman Bell (D-Mo.) was out of town, it was learned that marked differences of opinion exist over methods of procedure and the failure this far to call Dr. F. E. Townsend, founder of the plan to give $300 monthly pensions to all over 60.

Turkey Pleads

ANKARA, Turkey, April 11 (AP)—Turkey pleaded today for permission to militarize the Dardanelles strait, coupling her plea that the nation's existence was at stake with a promise rearmament would be carried out only after formal negotiations.

To Geneva and the League of Nations went a copy of the note the foreign minister, Tefvik Rustu Aras, handed representatives of the signatories to the Lausanne treaty.

Railroad Hearing

MINNEAPOLIS, April 11 (AP)—A mass of evidence, in support of the plan of seven other railroads to buy the Minneapolis and St. Louis and divide its properties among them was written into the records of the interstate commerce commission when the Minneapolis hearing on the plan was adjourned at noon today for the week end.

The record also showed increasing opposition on the part of opponents of the sale and dismemberment, who have fought every inch of the way since C. E. Boles, assistant director of the L.C.C. bureau of finance, started the hearings Monday.

Knox Demand Widens Latest Controversy

Publisher Asks Borah To Clarify Charge Of 'Big Money Control'

CHICAGO, April 11 (AP)—A demand by Col. Frank Knox that Sen. William E. Borah clarify his charge that big money was being spent to "control the Illinois delegation" to the republican national convention opened wide tonight the latest controversy in Illinois many-battled primary campaign.

In a telegram to his senatorial rival for the republican preferential vote next Tuesday, Knox, Chicago publisher, took cognizance of the Mahoon's fling at his opposition as coming from "miserable crooks . . . in the payrolls of great corporations" and asserted his total expense for the campaign had been "approximately $25,000, all contributed by my friends in small amounts."

Knox continued in his telegram: "I have not, nor has anyone in my behalf, paid a penny to any candidate or group in Illinois to secure support or marking of their sample ballots in my behalf."

Borah Refuses To Take Back Charges

FAIRFIELD, Ill., April 11 (AP)—Sen. William E. Borah refused "to retreat one moment" today from his charges that "certain powerful interests" were spending "vast amounts" to defeat him in his presidential campaign in Illinois, but said he had made no reference to Col. Frank Knox of Chicago or any other candidate.

Believe Bell Marked Death

Delivery Boy Declares He Rang Bell Many Times at 11:30

NEW YORK, April 11 (AP)—The shrill ring of her doorbell, detectives suggested tonight, may have signalled the murder of Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton, in her Beekman Place apartment yesterday.

Wiley Straughn, delivery boy for a tailor shop, told investigators in to the 34-year-old writer's death that he rang the bell several times at half past 11 yesterday morning—the hour Mrs. Titterton's death is believed to have occurred.

An autopsy showed today that the woman, wife of an executive of the National Broadcasting company, died of "strangulation by ligature" following a criminal assault. Her body, virtually nude, was found in the bathtub of the Titterton apartment at 22 Beekman place—a short narrow street paralleling the East river and a location where many well known persons make their homes.

Straughn told detectives he went to the five story brown stone apartment building to deliver a dress. He said he had been instructed to ring the downstairs lobby bell and if there was no answer he was not to go upstairs to the fourth floor apartment. He rang several times without receiving any response, he said, and then left the building.

Thus, Mrs. Titterton may unwittingly have given her tailor the order that closed the door to a possible rescuer in the time of her greatest need.

Announces Candidacy

FONDA (AP)—J. H. Collins, whose 1934 democratic candidacy for state representative figured in charges of political activity against former Chairman Harold Cooper at the state liquor control commission, has announced he again is a candidate for legislature.

Cloudy Skies May Darken Easter Sunday

Cloudy skies this morning need not keep Iowa Citizens from wearing their newest and brightest, the weather man said last night with a wary eye peeled to the skies. Rain will come today, he predicted, but not until late this afternoon—if then.

Slightly higher temperatures today will bring out the newest in spring outfits from shoes to hats, merchants said last night as they reported the largest Easter trade in five years. Meanwhile last night local ministers were making last minute preparations for special Easter services in almost every church.

Beginning at 6 o'clock this morning, the Rev. W. S. Dysinger of the First English Lutheran church will hold a special sunrise Easter service. All of the three Catholic churches in Iowa City will conduct special early mass.

Song Service

At 8 o'clock 30 Iowa City children will begin a song service and holy communion at the Trinity Episcopal church. At the 10:45 regular morning service the senior choir, directed by Wendell Otey, organist and choirmaster, will sing.

Two Easter services will be observed at the First Baptist church today. Special music will be given (See Page EIGHT, No. 1)

Worker Says Industry Has Prepared For Labor Strikes

Tells of Mass Movement Of Guns, Tear Gas, Clubs to Stop Riots, Disorder of Labor

WASHINGTON, April 11 (AP)—Angry labor spokesmen told a senate committee today there was a mass movement of machine guns, tear gas and police clubs into industrial centers for use in curbing strikes and disorders.

The testimony was given in the quiet of a senate committee room while a mile away, in the heart of Washington, 500 delegates to the workers alliance convention conducted a noisy but orderly march to the White House—in company of a hundred policemen—to ask President Roosevelt to back their request for a six-billion-dollar relief program. They marched away, complaining no assurance was given that the president would do anything.

"Arming"

J. P. Harris, Portsmouth, Ohio, steel worker, was the first to appear before the senate labor subcommittee with stories of industrial plants "arming" for possible conflict with labor. In support of his assertions came a mass of data compiled by the senate subcommittee investigating committee and presented at the hearing by Heber Blankenhorn, an employee of the National Labor relations board.

At one point, Harris testified that he knew the Wheeling Steel corporation at Portsmouth, Ohio, was "arming," a statement that brought from corporation officials at Portsmouth an assertion that company police were armed to protect property against "thieves and firebugs," and "they will continue to be armed."

"Shot Through" With Spies

At another point in today's hearing there was testimony that general "rumors" were being circulated that the Ford Motor company was "shot through" with spies, hired to report on the activities of labor. The evidence presented by Blankenhorn was largely in the form of shipping orders for gas and guns from Federal Laboratories, incorporated, of Pittsburgh, to centers of impending strike troubles in 1934 and 1935.

Secret Activities

There was evidence also that some of the purchasers sought to keep their activities secret. Blankenhorn referred to a letter on May 24, 1934, from federal laboratories to Smith and Wesson company, Springfield, Mass., directing that a shipment of 12 pistols intended for Weirton Steel company, should be sent first to Federal Laboratories.

Ritter Issues Denial Of All Impeachment Charges in Senate

WASHINGTON, April 11 (AP)—Federal Judge Halsted L. Ritter of Florida personally delivered a complete denial in the senate today of house impeachment charges that he granted excessive receivership fees, "corruptly" benefited from these allowances, practiced law after becoming judge, and evaded income taxes.

Taking the stand with 52 senator-jurymen present and before galleries packed with Easter visitors, the 65-year-old jurist also denied having any knowledge of the exclusive Palm Beach Whitehall hotel receivership until the action was brought into his court.

Three Killed When Clipper Strikes Boat

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad, April 11 (AP)—Three persons were killed today when the big flyingboat, Puerto Rican Clipper, grazed a launch in the harbor and "ground looped" on the surface of the water.

The force of the ship's collision with the sea broke open the forward compartment of the flying boat and the swirl of water drowned two passengers and the ship's steward.

Of the other 16 passengers aboard, five suffered superficial injuries while the others escaped apparently unharmed. None of the other six members of the crew were injured. Those drowned were E. Roman Martinez of New York, Eric R. Brogh of London, England, and Amedeo Lopez, the steward, of Miami.

All Christendom Proclaims Resurrection of Nazarene

(By The Associated Press)
Christians throughout the world today proclaimed the resurrection of Jesus of Nazareth with appropriate ceremonies bringing to a close the annual 40 days of Lenten mourning.

Contrasting with the more sombre character of the pre-Easter religious observances, preparations at home and abroad were made for a joyful Sunday holiday.

Appeal for World Peace

From the Vatican City, seat of the Catholic church, came an appeal for world peace, addressed to all the nations through the newspaper Osservatore Romano. The paper lamented that:

"Our dramatic world continues to exchange the cult of life for the cult of fire and force. . . . Force, placed above the laws of justice, has come to be the supreme law of history. . . . Across the Mediterranean and half of Africa armed forces of Italy's Mussolini relentlessly pursued the apparently depleted forces accom: Holy City;

May Restore Air Service In Three Weeks

Air mail and passenger service at the local United Air lines port may be restored within the next three weeks, it was estimated last night as definite word of PWA funds for labor on the proposed 625-foot runway addition was received here by Dave Crum, secretary of the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce.

The airport has remained closed since March 23 when Frew A. Tucker erected his trouble-making "measuring pole" which has stopped all regular plane service here since then.

Ralph Reed, division superintendent of the United Air lines in Chicago, will visit the local airport Tuesday to check the proposed runway extension, D. B. Colyer, vice-president of the company, telegraphed Mr. Crum yesterday. After company approval of the runway extension is received, a WPA engineer from Davenport will come to Iowa City to estimate funds necessary to finance the project.

Second Bomb Victim Dies

Experts Push Inquiry In Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Mail Package Terror

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., April 11 (AP)—The Wyoming anthracite valley's "Easter gift" bomb outrages claimed their second victim tonight, when four-year-old Thomas Maloney Jr. died in a hospital.

Michael Gallagher, 70-year-old cemetery sexton, died yesterday, when one of the six bombs sent through the mails in the guise of Easter gifts, exploded as he opened it.

Son of Thomas Maloney

The Maloney boy was the son of Thomas Maloney, organizer of the united anthracite miners, a union, since virtually disbanded, which was opposed to the United Mine Workers of America.

Mine labor dissension has been suspected in some quarters for the bombs. The elder Maloney, his son and his 17-year-old daughter, Margaret, were injured when another of the bombs went off as the father opened it in the belief it was a box of cigars.

Sinking Condition

Maloney tonight was described at a hospital as in a sinking condition, and a call was sent out for relatives and friends for a blood transfusion. Fingerprint, handwriting and dynamite experts pursued a three-way investigation tonight of the terrorists who mailed death in Easter packages.

Charles E. Hughes Takes Little Note Of 74th Birthday

WASHINGTON, April 11 (AP)—Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes was 74 today but declared himself "not interested" in the date and took but little note of it. "I am going along without reference to the calendar," he said. "I am not interested in my birthday. I don't want to talk about it."

That was the reply relayed to newspapermen in response to a request for an interview. He would take no further "judicial notice" of the occasion. Despite his years, the chief justice has not missed an hour from his duties, because of illness, since appointed head of the court by President Hoover in 1930.

Milady, Milord Amble in Colorful Spring Attire

The church doors are opened and the Easter parade has once more begun, with both milady and milord colorfully attired in their spring ensembles. Many unusual styles and colors are on review, with tailored clothes in the foreground.

The lady now coming down the steps looks very smart in a three-piece mannish tailored navy blue suit, set off with brilliant red blouse, hat, gloves and pocketbook. Her navy shoes have square toes and heels, while her red hat is cleverly trimmed with a confette veil. Her escort is attired in a light weight woolen suit with British stripes, a pale pastel shirt with a figured foulard tie. His topcoat is of the unbelted loose swagger type, worn with a soft-felt hat of a light shade.

Worsted Weave

The gentleman who is now speaking to the couple is wearing an Oxford brown suit of worsted weave with wide rolled lapels. His white shirt is set off with a bright figured tie. Completing his outfit he wears a homburg hat in light color and a tailored topcoat.

A group of ladies are standing on the steps talking, all becomingly dressed. The lady at the extreme right is attired in an Oxford grey suit with soft shoulder lines set off with a starched jabot. Her capeskin gloves are medium blue, with shoes, purse and hat of the same color. The young girl standing near her is wearing a navy blue suit with a dusty pink blouse, turquoise blue hat and chamoise yellow gloves.

Knitted Suit

Another lady of the group is wearing a light blue knitted suit, with accessories of a darker blue. Her dark blue coat is of the high-lapel-front-buttoned style with broad shoulder, breast and hip pockets, and shiny metal buttons.

Her younger companion is wearing a bright print dress over which she wears a baby swagger of soft camel's hair.

Colorful Accessories

As one watches the parade it is found that the mannish suits and the strictly tailored are accented with new colorful accessories, with flowers for all costumes.

The Day Of Rebirth

TODAY IS EASTER Sunday, which commemorates the resurrection of Jesus Christ, a glorious climax to His passion and finally His death on Good Friday.

Christ has come from the silence of the tomb to life. Wax white, green-stemmed lilies give a note of light and freshness to the altars of our churches, gladness predominates the sacred, immortal music, sung particularly on this Sunday.

The priest is robed in white, the symbol of joy. Lawns and fields are taking on an emerald dress, and all nature is astir. Easter eggs, which represent the resurrection and the new life of spring, are exchanged. Universal rebirth has brightened the earth.

And, of course, the hope and ideal of Easter is that rebirth will not only be outwardly symbolized and inwardly present in parts of nature, but, likewise, that it will vitalize the inner lives of men.

Baseball Returns To Its Throne

ONE OF THE big jobs facing President Roosevelt, now that he is back at his desk after his deep sea fishing trip, is opening the big league baseball season Tuesday.

Whether the presidential pitch is a ball or a strike or whether his control is bad and the ball hits an unsuspecting news camera man, America's million dollar sports industry will get underway for another season.

Since its beginning more than a 100 years ago, baseball has grown into an industry of million dollar proportions. Vast sums are spent on coaches, trainers, players and equipment. Baseball is truly an American game and carried on in a truly American fashion. Propaganda is spread throughout the nation to make each one of the 50,000,000 or so fans feel that he personally has some stake in the fortunes of his particular team.

According to the Literary Digest, Clark Griffith was the man who conceived the idea of having the President of the United States officially open each big league series.

A quarter of a century ago Griffith was the manager of the Senators. They had been losing games and, incidentally, some money. Obviously the club needed publicity. William Howard Taft, then president, was a moderate baseball fan.

Griffith invited the president to come officially and toss out the first ball of the season.

Since 1913 each president has received a leatherbound, gold season pass. President Harding was considered the best material for a big league club ever to occupy the White House. He was fast and accurate. Hoover was considered the poorest bidder.

Though Al Smith may claim that Roosevelt ought to be a good pitcher because he has had a lot of experience throwing boloney dollars, the baseball season will be on. No longer will politics be paramount in the minds of Americans. After all, presidential elections are small stuff compared to the world series.

"The House of a Thousand Candles" has been adapted to the screen and when we see the show we plan to accept, for once, the advance billing of the producers or else take along a stooge to do the counting for us.

Circuses And Summer

SPRING IS IN the air and already the circuses are rumbling out of winter quarters—the menageries, the freaks, the clowns, the acrobats, the equestrians.

For more than a century this has been happening in this country, 110 years ago to be exact, for it was in 1826 that Hoves and Turner's show took the road under a full top canopy, an innovation that marked the beginning of the modern circus.

For more than a hundred years prior to that, however, various elements that have been moulded into the present day circus were delightful early Americans. The first lion was exhibited in this country in 1720. Presently other strange beasts were brought in and eventually menageries were formed. Strolling players, acrobats and clowns traveled through colonies. Equestrian performances were popular. The museums were opened with freaks and animals.

"All of these elements eventually came together to form the circus of today, which, in spite of a thousand other entertainments and distractions, still thrills 20 million children of all ages each year," says R. W. G. Vall, librarian of the American Antiquarian society of Worcester, Mass., who has discovered many facts about the early American circus from material in the society's archives.

"We have seen the circus grow from a single ring with a half dozen performers to the days when W. C. Coup first introduced the two-ring circus and, with the help of Barnum and Ringling, transformed it from a wagon show to a great establishment traveling in its own special railroad train of 90 double length cars, with hundreds of animals and performers and several rings or oblong stages.

"Lighted at first with pine knots, then with candles, or whale oil lamps, and later with gasoline torches, the circus now carries its own electric light plant, and takes in at a single performance more money than all the 30 circuses of the 1830s hoped to see in an entire year.

"In the '30s Van Amburgh, 'the Lion King,' thrilled his audience by entering a cage with a living lion, while today Clyde Beatty puts 40 highly trained lions and tigers through their paces in a single arena.

"It is interesting that the 30 lesser circuses still touring the country have deserted the railroad, and have gone back to the highways—but now they travel over concrete roads in fleets of motor trucks.

"Gone are the precarious days of the old show with its adventures, prairie fires and cyclones, runaway trains in the Pennsylvania mountains, and its many battles with the local toughs of our frontier towns, in which more than one sturdy clown or ringmaster ended his exciting and checked career as he helped his circus fight its way out of hostile territory."

The most conservative man in our block has been out of the city for a couple of weeks and we strongly suspect that he was one of the judges at the Calgary cattle show in which entries by King Edward VIII took most of the blue ribbons.

Traffic Schools

A PLAN FOR cities to sentence traffic violators to a school to learn how to drive safely will soon be suggested by the president's accident prevention conference as a method by which cities might help cut down the number of automobile deaths, says an Associated Press dispatch from Washington.

The plan already has been adopted by Milwaukee, which, as the big city with the fewest traffic deaths, has been selected as a model of the traffic drive.

Under it, the judge of the traffic court is given the job of deciding whether the offender might profit more by instruction than by money or jail penalty.

If he decides in favor of the school the offender is sentenced in the regular manner and paroled on condition that he take the traffic school course.

Tardiness, failure to attend or failure to complete the work properly brings the offender back into court for revocation of the parole.

In the beginning, only first offenders were allowed to go to school, but later the judge became convinced that proper instruction is more effective than punishment in correcting a wrong driving attitude. Therefore, some persistent violators are now enrolled.

Each person is required to attend two nights a week for three weeks. Classes begin at 7:30 and last an hour. After the roll call, the instructor gives a half hour lecture and the rest of the time is given over to discussion.

Since the topic for discussion usually centers upon the city's traffic laws, they are frequently very warm, and require a quick witted instructor to keep ahead of his students.

An examination is given at the end of the course. Briefly the lectures cover:

The public's responsibility in accident prevention.

Rules of the road and traffic laws.

Proper turning movements and signals.

Pedestrian versus motorists.

Safety maintenance of motor vehicles.

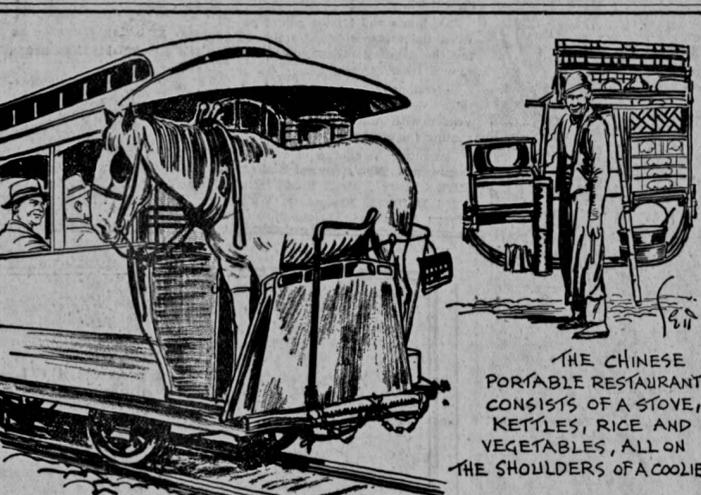

Enforcement of speed law versus injury accidents.

The nut behind the wheel.

The outline of the plan submitted to the accident prevention conference said:

"The school is based on the conclusion that approximately 85 per cent of all accidents result from a wrong mental attitude on the part of the driver. The instructor keeps this thought constantly in mind and the entire course is aimed at correcting an improper driving attitude."

THE CHINESE PORTABLE RESTAURANT CONSISTS OF A STOVE, KETTLES, RICE AND VEGETABLES, ALL ON THE SHOULDERS OF A COOLEE

VARIOUS FLAG POSTMARKS USED IN CANADA

A Washington Bystander

WASHINGTON — The strategy board advising Governor Landon must be having its troublesome moments. There are rumblings from or about the camps of the other republican nomination aspirants, open or under cover, suggesting that Landon is already beginning to pay the price of his quickly established leadership in the race.

That price is always the same in these pre-convention contests. The slogan of everybody else becomes "Stop-the-leader." It may become "Follows-the-leader" after the nomination, but right up to the final ballot in the convention that picks the candidate every other man's hand is against the high man.

'Stop' Movements: Glance back over the news files of any national convention except where a first term president was to be renominated. These "stop" movements are always major news. Who does not recall the futile "Stop-Hoover" alliance at Kansas City in 1928, the "Stop-Lowden" of 1920, the "Stop-McAdoo" at New York in '24 the "Stop-Roosevelt" of '32? Some of these were evidenced by direct and open cooperation among managers of rival candidates; some not so plain to public view; but they have always been there.

Naturally, the democratic two-thirds nominating rule lends itself more easily to these "stop" drives than does the republican majority requirement. That is the chief reason that an actual effort may be made at Philadelphia to discard that century-old handicap to harmony.

On The Anxious Seat: Even under the republican majority plan, "stop" movements have always flourished, however. With the Borah candidacy being openly classified as a "Stop-Landon" movement without denial from Borah, and the mysterious Hoover device now being placed in the same category by those claiming inside information, the Landon boomers must be decidedly on the anxious seat.

They have committed their man to an effort to make a run-away race of it. That means he must roll up one way and another an irresistible lead before convention time. Should he fall short of that, the prize is apt to go to some nominal dark horse.

There is a curious aspect about Governor Landon's position, assuming that the Borah and Hoover activities are now to be regarded as in part, at least, of the "Stop-Landon" order. In these two power party figures the Landonites have pitted against them men whose candidacies, open in Borah's case, never admitted by Hoover, are generally regarded as aimed to attain other ends than their own nomination. If both are opposed to Landon, that is about the only point on which they agree.

'Thumb Traveling' Experts: GEORGETOWN, Ky. (AP)—George Ashford and Jeff Kirkpatrick, students of the University of Kentucky, have "thumbed" their way to Lexington and back—12 miles each way—every school day for the last three years.

Benefit Payments: PALO ALTO, Cal. (AP)—Allan Hoover, son of the former president, said yesterday the Greenfield Land company of Bakersfield, Cal., in which he and three other persons are interested, had received about $4,800 in cotton benefit payments from the new deal AAA program.

Mayor Bans Swearing: BURNSVILLE, W. Va. (AP)—Mayor C. E. Whysell warned residents swearing on the streets must stop "to make Burnsville a decent and respectable town in which to live."

He decreed that all who cannot curb their speech will be fined.

Clark's Dig Potatoes: ADAMSON GROVE (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Tom Clark reversed the order of Good Friday by eating potatoes dug from their garden. The potatoes, uncovered while digging for this year's garden, had remained in the ground all winter, and were firm and edible.

Syracuse, Kan., rose fanciers have donated approximately 400 bushels to make highway 50 for a mile east of town a fragrant lane.

BRUCKER MAY OPPOSE COUZENS

Wilbur M. Brucker, right, a Grass Roots stalwart who served as governor of Michigan from 1931 to 1933 may oppose Senator James Couzens, left, for the Republican senatorial nomination. Brucker is said to have the backing of the Michigan G. O. P., which is fighting to oust Couzens, independent Republican termed by conservative Republicans as too friendly to the New Deal. Senator Couzens, however, is extremely popular with labor.

A New Yorker At Large

By JAMES B. RESTON

NEW YORK—The days of graceful living in New York may be past, but all the old brown-stone houses haven't been changed into dress shops and stinking bars. There is, for example, Sophie Kerr's old mansion on East 38th street, a peaceful corner in the mad modernistic pattern of midtown Manhattan.

In every respect this is an excellent establishment. Mrs. Kerr has collected fine early American furniture for over thirty years and has added slowly but tastefully to the four floors and cellar of the old mansion. Even now she takes time out from her story-writing to visit the island's auction sales.

One of the most successful women in the city, Mrs. Kerr has proved that it is possible to withstand the change of the city. Her high-walled garden is reminiscent of nineteenth century New York and here in the summer she does most of her year's writing.

But Mrs. Kerr is by no means living in the past. She travels widely every fall, flying everywhere she can. And few people in the city are so familiar with the theatrical life here. She is especially fond of the opera and practically gives over her winters to music and the drama.

Though she uses her maiden name in her stories, in private life she is Mrs. Sophie Kerr Underwood, the "Underwood" having been contracted in an unsuccessful venture into matrimony years ago. So she lives now with her Maryland cook, maid and butler, and her two black cats, Careless and Useless.

The wildest block in Manhattan is West 52nd street between Fifth and Sixth avenues. Here there are between twenty and thirty night-clubs, all holdovers from the speak-easy period. How they manage to keep open no one pretends to know, for they can't compete with the food and service of places like Jack Rockefeller's saloon (The Rainbow Room atop Rockefeller's 65 story building) or the clubs in the hotels.

Still they keep going by featuring swing music and fancy foreign dishes. This block is definitely the Montmartre of New York, and is worth visiting at least once.

Among the many jobs in this city are those of cleaning Manhattan's sewers. This vast system of sewers is cleaned periodically not only to keep them free but to search for valuable trinkets which have made their way below the surface.

The people who have $6.00 to pay for two show tickets are back from Florida all right; but are now busy preparing to leave New York's summer heat. So the peace of April has fallen on the Broadway theater.

I don't know what Walt would have said about this ad, which appeared recently in the Times: WALT WHITMAN BIRTHPLACE. Huntington, L. I., widely advertised, historic landmark, for sale; ideal inn; commercial possibilities.

HOLLYWOOD—Real and unreal: Whenever two or more movie scenarios get together, the conversation eventually gets around to Dudley Nichols. . . . A majority of the writers dislike Nichols' attitude toward the academy award this year. . . . Nichols was declared the year's top writer for adapting "The Informant," but he refused to take the prize because he is a member of the Screen Writers' guild. . . . Guilders are opposed to the academy because, they allege, the latter is "producer controlled."

When Nichols learned he was being considered for the award, most of his fellows believe he should wouldn't accept it. . . . Instead he took the kudos and the monetary values that go with such an honor while refusing the emblem. . . . Nichols' statute reposes in the safe in the academy offices here. . . . Since there is no inscription on it, it will be used next year. . . . Nichols' refusal saves the academy $100. . . .

Return of F.R. to White House Will Mark Beginning Period In New Deal Policy Development

Preparations to Be Made For Party Conventions, Campaign

WASHINGTON, April 11 (AP)—President Roosevelt's return to Washington, and the active reassertion of his leadership which is expected to follow, mean the beginning of a new and interesting period in the development of administration policy.

About eight weeks remain before the date privately mentioned for the adjournment of congress. Immediately after adjournment will come the national political conventions. After a long season of drifting in Capitol Hill, it now becomes imperative to set the course which will guide the dominant party directly into the campaign.

Some difficult decisions must be made. The tax problem seems about as far as ever from solution, the principal question being whether the administration will go through with its proposal to enact a law over the protest of organized business. Precisely what is to be done about relief still is undetermined. There are a dozen lesser uncertainties centering around such things as ship subsidy legislation and chain store regulation.

Is Time Propitious?
As the more important of these pending issues are drawn together into a pre-adjournment, pre-campaign program, it must be decided also whether the time is propitious for some entirely new stroke to add color and momentum to the new deal. Various suggestions have been made, and in some Washington quarters a dramatic venture of one kind or another is expected. But the expectation appears to be based largely on guess-work; no such plan has been disclosed on competent authority.

The universal expectation in the capital is that it will be Mr. Roosevelt who sets the course, whatever it is. Congress has been twirling its thumbs while he was away on vacation. Almost openly it has been waiting for him to return and tell exactly what he wants on taxes and other issues. Some of the ranking administration managers say as much privately.

Higher Peak
In fact there are signs that the president's leadership in congress is at a far higher peak than it was earlier in the session. Much complaint persists in the ranks, and now and then amendments prevail, but in the larger matters of policy the White House is able to get what it wants from the overwhelming democratic majorities in senate and house. The leaders predict this will be increasingly true as adjournment approaches.

One reason for the changed situation is political, and quite natural. The time is not far away when democratic senators and congressmen will be going before the country for reelection, on a ticket headed by Mr. Roosevelt. Already numerous members who have been critical in the past are looking for seats on the party bandwagon. They say frankly they can see no feasible alternative.

To Take Firmer Grip
Another reason is that on his own side of the equation, the president is expected to take a firmer grip on the reins of part control, now that he is back from a refreshing holiday. He is one of the world's best vacationers. His periods of rest and recreation are intervals of real detachment. Officials left behind in Washington at such times have found it impossible to unload their troubles and worries on him. As a rule, seasons of positive action have followed his return to his desk.

Such action as he now must take is sure to be directed first toward the general problem of spending and taxation. The administration forces in congress have received advance hints that some of their spending proposals, such as the large sectional items which have been tucked tentatively into the schedule under the head of flood relief, will get the cold shoulder at the White House. They are prepared to accept cuts in various directions.

WPA Control
Awaiting his more complete views, too, is the question whether WPA is to be given control, as he originally proposed, over the requested billion and a half for general relief. Sentiment for attaching some strings to the appropriation continues strong, and concessions would not be surprising. A diplomatic handling of this situation might have an important effect in another direction. It might enable the administration men in congress to quiet current demands for a wide scale investigation of WPA.

The corporation income tax program, as rewritten in the house, is thoroughly unsatisfactory to some of Mr. Roosevelt's aides, although in general outline it follows his suggestions. A compromise is indicated, with the president insisting, however, on the central plan of putting the chief burden on corporation income. Apparently he is in a position to enforce his wishes in that regard.

Labor Cost
HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Burglars went to much trouble to knock the knob from a safe here. The strong box was unlocked and empty.

Seen From Old Capitol

By JESS GORKIN

We took our first spring walk of the year yesterday, and will probably be nursing sore muscles for the next week.

If spring walks do nothing else they serve to make you realize to what extent you are out of condition. During yesterday's stroll we averaged six puffs to the minute during the first hour and 14 puffs to the minute during the second hour.

Spring is by far the most enjoyable season of the year and, without becoming too sentimental, it is best to observe the sites of Iowa City and its environs by walking—even if it puts countless kinks in your muscles.

If we accomplished nothing else during our walk we did manage to do one thing we had been hoping to do for a long time—count the number of steps on the stairs leading up to Law Commons from the foot of U. S. highway 6. There are 103 steps.

The other day in a sophomore English section Frances Nelsen, A2 of Hampton, said to Albert Williams, A2 of Liverpool, England, "My there is a big crowd in the room today." To this Albert replied, "That isn't a crowd you see, that's Floyd DeHeer."

There used to be a city park on the present sites of the journalism building, electrical engineering building and East hall. Where the journalism building is now located there was also once a blacksmith and carpenter shop.

One student who is spending the recess in Iowa City is using the period to outdo Homer and Dante. He writes, "It seems to me they are wasting their talents (if they have any to waste). Why don't they write something beneficial, such as showing and aiding bashful students how to go about the art of lovemaking."

He adds, "What could be more appropriate than an interesting and stirring original in a form of poetry as original as the text itself?" Following is his effort, in part:

You are the Queen of my heart
As long as I live I will not let you depart
I ask your hand on bended knee
I'll jump into the ocean if you say nay to me
Think, think dear lady of the sea.

The trouble is that she might think, then what?

PASSING IN REVIEW

A Commentary on the New Books
Conducted by American Prefaces

EVER TOMORROW, by Eleanor Saltzman. New York, Coward McCann, 1936. $2.00.

IOWA CITY has been more than usually interested in the publishers' catalogues this spring. First, it read that Robert Whitehead had earned the dedication of Edward J. O'Brien's annual volume of short stories. Then Madeline Horn combined her stories with Grant Wood's pictures to produce a charming children's book. Paul Engle's book of poems brought forth a few gasps and many words of commendation. Professor Louis Pelzer's monumental history of the cattlemen's frontier is just beginning to appear in the book stores. And now comes a distinguished first novel by Eleanor Saltzman.

Her book is the story of Joseph Mueller. From birth to death, Joseph Mueller lived in southwestern Iowa, never more than a few miles from the farm where he was born. His brother left the farm to work in Chicago. His son left it to work in Des Moines. His daughter went to State Teachers and taught school near Waterloo. When Joe was a boy, he himself dreamed of leaving the farm, and after he was married his wife persuaded him to buy a house in town. But they came back—his son to bring his wife and children to a depression haven, his daughter to marry her high school sweetheart, and Joe because of necessity and because of a love for the farm where he was born.

What emerges from this simple telling of the life cycle of an Iowa farmer is a great love for the land and a deep admiration for the plain virtues that a life close to the soil teaches—faithfulness, honesty, sympathy, taciturnity, fortitude, and patience.

DON'T READ this book if you expect such a dream of the Great Plains as Rolvaag wrote into "Giants in the Earth." Don't read it if you expect such a bitter indictment of the social order as Garland's "Main-Travelled Roads," or such sprightly comedy as Phil Stong wrote about the state fair, or such bold strokes of characterization as Dickens wrote, for instance, into Mr. Carke. But if you want to read a successful novel which has found it unnecessary to make use of a seduction, a drinking party, an unfaithful husband or wife, or a villain; a novel of real people, normal people, with normal vices and virtues; a novel with a background of authentic Iowa farm life; a novel that moves along through the unheightened tragedy and comedy of everyday life—then read "Ever Tomorrow."

You will find it beautifully written. The obvious comparisons are Ruth Suckow and Bess Streeter Aldrich, but Miss Saltzman has managed to avoid the most pedestrian moments of Miss Suckow's more detailed style as well as the occasional cloying sweetness of Mrs. Aldrich. When "Ever Tomorrow" is criticized it will probably be on the latter count—that it is too sweet, that it avoids the less pleasant aspects of life, that it fails to preach a social thesis. For these criticisms the friends of the book will have an answer.

Eleanor Saltzman was born in the southwestern Iowa she writes about. A few years ago she came to the University of Iowa as a student. She became a secretary and editorial assistant in the department of classical languages and now serves as an assistant in the publication division of the Child Welfare station. She has had a few stories published, and another story is about to appear in "American Prefaces." And now she has a most promising first novel.

Iowa's Dickinson May Prove The Republican Dark Horse

Editors' Note: This is the second of a series of six stories on republican presidential possibilities.

WASHINGTON—A republican presidential possibility of the dark-horse type is Lester J. Dickinson, the stalwart, silver-haired senator from one-time rock-ribbed republican Iowa.

There is talk in political circles here that the presidential lightning might strike him at Cleveland in the event a deadlock develops between leading candidates at the national convention. There is speculation also as to the possibility of his selection as a vice-presidential nominee. Dickinson was elected to the senate in November, 1930, after serving

Landon Holds Lead in Delegate Power for G.O.P. Nomination

Politicians to Watch Vote in Nebraska, Illinois Primaries

WASHINGTON, April 11 (AP)—Governor Landon of Kansas held a substantial lead in delegate strength for the republican presidential nomination tonight, despite antagonism among some supporters of Senator Borah and among those Californians who resented entry of a Landon ticket in the primary there in opposition to wishes of former President Hoover.

While watching the progress of his cause, many politicians directed more immediate attention to the contest between Borah and Col. Frank Knox in the Illinois primary next Tuesday.

The strength of the senator in the pre-convention considerations from now on may largely be affected by his showing there and in the Nebraska preference primary the same day. Neither, however, is binding on the delegates elected.

posed to government interference with the economic life of the nation.

Defended Hoover
A Hoover loyalist in those "dark days" for the G.O.P. in 1932, Senator Dickinson was the militant keynoter at the last national convention and did much of the campaign work designed to keep midwestern farmers in the republican field. Few republican leaders have been more zealous in defending the Hoover administration.

With the possible exception of the late Senator Schall of Minnesota, Dickinson has been the most persistent and severe critic of the "new deal" among the republican senators from western states.

He vigorously assailed the administration even in the heyday of Roosevelt popularity when such outspoken opposition was considered tantamount to committing political suicide. He voted for the original AAA but persistently attacked it as "regimentation" and predicted that the supreme court would hold it to be unconstitutional.

Although he comes from the heart of the corn-hog belt which voted overwhelmingly for continuance of AAA contracts, Dickinson hailed the court's overthrow of the adjustment program as a great landmark in American history" and "a body blow to the basic philosophy of the new deal."

Asks Uncompromising Campaign
He has declared repeatedly that "Roosevelt is the only issue in the national campaign" and that "the administration proposes to amend the constitution so drastically that the bill of rights will be virtually annulled."

Dickinson, like Colonel Frank Knox of Chicago who also is a prominent presidential candidate possibility, insists that the G.O.P. wage an uncompromising campaign. He says "the republican party cannot pussy-foot its way to victory," and he has denounced those republicans "who under the guise of liberals would graft part of the 'new deal' onto the republican party."

The American Petroleum institute estimates that by 1960 there will be 31,100,000 passenger autos in the United States, an increase of 39 per cent over 1935.

Art And The East

Gov. Herring Enters Iowa in Art Show In New York City

DES MOINES, April 11 (AP)—Gov. Clyde L. Herring flung a gauntlet at "long-haired men and short-haired women" artists of the east today and invited all Iowa painters and sculptors to back up his claim that the corn belt produces art as well as a breakfast food.

The governor announced Iowa has accepted an invitation to enter an interstate art show at Rockefeller Center, New York City, May 18 to July 18. Mayor Florida LaGuardia of New York issued the invitation.

A committee to take charge of selection of 12 pieces from Iowa was announced by the governor: Mrs. Louis Pelzer, Iowa City, art chairman for the Iowa Federation of Women's Clubs; Catherine McCarty, Iowa City, professor and acting head of the University of Iowa graphic and plastic arts department, and W. W. Arnold, Des Moines, state WPA art projects director.

The governor asked that Iowa artists send paintings and sculpture to the state house at Des Moines not later than April 22. He said paintings must be suitably framed.

After a jury of prominent artists of the state have selected the 12 Iowa exhibits, they will be sent to New York May 1 for entry in the interstate exhibition.

Mrs. Pearl Broxam Will Visit Speech Chapters in East

Mrs. Pearl B. Broxam, program director of WSUI and national president of Zeta Phi Eta, professional speech fraternity, will leave Tuesday for New York. During her trip Mrs. Broxam will visit chapters of the fraternity at the University of Syracuse, Syracuse, N. BITS ABOUT SPORTS

Tuesday evening Coach Harry Ryan presents his Irish cagers with letters at the annual basketball banquet in St. Pat's high school. Seven men of the team that won the Davenport diocese crown and was runnerup to Columbia academy for the state title, will receive letters.

Bob Coen, we venture to say, will go far in college competition. This Catholic all-state forward is slenderly built, 6 feet 1 inch in height and is an ambidextrous shooter.

Speaking of the Irish, Gene Ford, Iowa's baseball captain in '35, goes back to the Windy City with the Cubs. Despite a poor season last summer with Peoria of the Three-I league, Gene showed enough stuff, however, to be sent up to the Chicago nationals.

Roy Henshaw, former University of Chicago pitcher, took Ford under his wing and worked on the big Irishman's sore arm. The Cubs are taking Gene to Chicago so that a specialist on lame arms can work on his ailing limb.

The high hurdles at the track meet between the Hawks and the combined forces of Coe and Cornell were called off when a strong north wind persistently upset the tall timers.

Detroit Takes Hockey Crown With 3-2 Win

Hawkeyes Win Firsts In All But 3 Events In Iowa Fieldhouse

By LOU LAYNE
Driven indoors by a whipping northwest gale that would brook no opposition, the University of Iowa's first outdoor track meet of the season ended under the fieldhouse roof yesterday afternoon with Coach George T. Bresnahan's scanty-pants outfit leading a Coe-Cornell "little entente" to the tape by a 78 1/2 to 69 1/2 score.
Because of the 55-miles-an-hour windstorm which howled around the stadium and played havoc with an attempt to run the 120 yard high hurdles in conventional style, two events—the 220 yard low hurdles and the javelin throw—were called off. Cancellation of the latter event cheated track fans of their chance to see the performance of Mark Panther, Iowa's spear hurler supreme and candidate for this year's Olympic games.

HAWK TIMBER TOPPERS WIN

Capt. Francis Cretzmeier (second from right) taking the first barrier of the 120 high hurdles in the Iowa, Coe-Cornell track meet yesterday afternoon on the windswept track between the fieldhouse and stadium. The Hawk captain nosed out his shadow, Ray Latham (third from left), for first place honors. The race was run under difficulties, for a strong north wind succeeded in toppling the hurdles time after time before a lull permitted the race to go on.

Floyd DeHeer, gargantuan and versatile athlete, ran off with individual honors by amassing 10 points to top Latham's eight markers. Captain Cretzmeier and McKinley of Coe each registered seven units.
No standing records were toppled, although the 120 yard high hurdles event was run in the fast time of 13.6 when Cretz and Latham showed the other boys the way. Since, however, low hurdles were used in an effort to combat the high winds driving across the field, the mark will probably not stand as a new university record.
Half mile relay—Won by Iowa (Matteson, Briggs, Skinner, Waples); second, Coe. Time 13:1.2.
One mile relay—Won by Iowa (Latham, Cretzmeier, R. Nelson, Lyle); second, Cornell. Time 33:4.6.
Two mile relay—Won by Iowa (Matteson, Briggs, Skinner, Waples); second, Coe. Time 1:04:5.5.
Four mile relay—Won by Iowa (Latham, Cretzmeier, R. Nelson, Lyle); second, Cornell. Time 3:34.6.

440 yard relay—Won by Iowa (Matteson, Briggs, Skinner, and Waples); second, Coe. Time 44.8.

three—the running broad jump, 100 yard dash and 440 yard dash.
DeHeer and Homer Harris, the bronze Adonis, clinched first and second scoring columns in both the shot put and discus throw, Harris also placing in the high jump.
L'I Jimmy Lyle, running anchor in the mile relay, provided a thrilling lap when, after having taken part in the mile and half mile, he insured victory to the Iowa quartet by running his quarter in 51.8.
The mile relay proved more or less of a cut and dried affair, with Waples, last lapper, breasting the string fully 18 yards ahead of his nearest competitor.

2,600 Pennies Buys Culver One Suit
RED OAK, April 11 (AP)—Orville Culver once told his friend, Rex Hawkins, local tailor, that he'd buy a suit of clothes if he ever got enough pennies.
This week when a suit he had ordered was delivered he paid for it with 2,600 pennies which he said he had been saving up "for a long time."
When Mrs. Agnes Wicansky was granted a divorce in Milwaukee the court ordered her to pay alimony to her jobless former husband.

The Story Thus Far:
In 1848 Joaquin Murietta, handsome, gentle and bold, has wooed and won Rosita Sanchez, daughter of Don Ricardo's majordomo, although Juanita, Ricardo's daughter, had also loved him. Taking his bride to Sutter's Fort, Joaquin prospers amid the gold rush. But rising hostility between the invading Americans and the Spaniards force him into a duel. He injures his opponent. Then, with two new friends, Johnny and Bill Warren, he moves to Sawmill Flat, stakes a claim and settles down. But now tragedy enters his life. By sheriff's order he risks himself of some trespassing gold seekers on his land, but a few days later he returns, attack him brutally and murder Rosita. Joaquin vows vengeance on the four men and takes leave of Johnny and Bill.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

THREE WEEKS later Bill and Johnny noticed, as they walked in to town one evening, that smoke was issuing from the chimney of Joaquin's cabin. They looked in at the old workings on the creek bank and saw that operations had been renewed. While they stood there speculating, a man came out of the cabin with a bucket in his hand and strolled down to the spring. The man was Wilson. He favored the brothers with a sour, suspicious glance, dipped his bucket in, and started back to the cabin. And that a strange sight, a stream of the waning light as a horseman came out of the timber, whirling a rattle. Bill and Johnny saw the loop whirled, almost lazily, three times. Then at 40 feet, the man made his cast; even before the loop had settled around Wilson's neck the rider had tied the other end hard and fast to his pommel and set his horse at a tangent. Before Wilson could cry out the noose tightened with a savage jerk and he was pulled over backward.

"I murmured 'Good-night snorers,' appeared to drop off to sleep immediately. They gave him breakfast before dawn, he murmured his thanks and disappeared into the darkness with his outfit. Presently they heard him riding away.
"Notice anything queer about that boy?" Johnny queried.
"Yes—his eyes. They burn like a tiger's in the dark, an' he's plumb quiet an' thoughtful."
"God help the first gringo that allows him off a trail or calls him greaser."
"Poor devil! Well, he'll be a wanted man from now on—an' he won't be took. He'll be wise to keep away from this country until the excitement dies down. Still, I reckon he'll be out o' danger in six months. The population here shifts pretty fast an' public opinion shifts with it."
"He'll come back, Bill."
"No, he's too smart."

A Coroner's Jury Without a Coroner

"His mother and Jesus are here—an' Joaquin thinks a lot of his family. Rosita's buried here an' I 'ear an' Joaquin Murietta never even got acquainted."
"You're growin' up," his brother murmured ironically. "Well, thanks to Joaquin, we got a nice rich piece o' ground to work as soon as we've finished here. We'll set aside half the gold for him. Something tells me he's goin' to need money in a hurry some day. Yeh, that boy's certainly goin' to need law money."
Two days later Hannon, the deputy sheriff, rode up to their claim.
"You two boys is summoned on a coroner's jury," he announced.
"How come?" There ain't no coroner."
"Law provides I handle that job, too. Got three murdered men down on Murietta's old place. All shot plumb between the eyes. Murietta done it, of course."
"Then what's the sense o' wastin' time on an inquest?"
"Oh, just a matter o' form."
"What makes you think Joaquin done it?"
"Fastest wing shot in California—an' I found hoof-marks all over the place. Shod horse, too. Still, Wilson might have done it. Four partners on a rich claim can easy git to quarrelin'—an' Wilson's missin'. Trouble with that theory, though, is that Wilson didn't have no horse. I stick to the Murietta theory myself. Him an' the boys was pretty close friends, I understand."

The Warrens Come To Joaquin's Defense

"You've found Wilson?" Bill charged. "If you don't you're so dumb you ought to resign your office."
Hannon laughed. "Well, I can read signs pretty well—an' Joaquin left a broad trail. The buzzards led me to Wilson. Cripes, his neck was six inches longer's his ma ever washed it an' squeeze thin as your waist. Roped an' drug. Work of a Mexican."
"They jumped his claim after you'd run 'em off once. An' before that they 'em him an' beat him up an' raped his wife an' tromped on her and she died. Me an' Johnny buried her. Show you her grave. Prove it by his brother an' the old lady."
"It was your duty as citizens to report that crime to me."
"You was chasin' hoss thieves over Mariposa way. Them skunks never knew they killed the girl—an' Joaquin asked us to keep it dark. Then he went away, an' when they concluded they'd run him off they dared to come back in defiance of you an' your writ. Joaquin knew they'd do that. He knows how to wait."
Hannon scratched his head. "Well, come along an' we'll hold that inquest an' decide them fellers come to their deaths at the hands of party or parties unknown. I'll try to hang the job on Wilson—an' after the inquest you two might go down an' bury the skunk, just to back up my play. Nobody'll miss him. I bear he killed two men in a saloon brawl over at Hornitos."
"Good. We'll forget everything, including the death of Joaquin's wife."
Jesus Conducts The Burials—With Pleasure
"Nobody's interested an' I reckon you two boys was the only white men friendly with the Muriettas."
"Within the hour a very bored and disinterested coroner's jury voted unanimously the verdict practically put into their mouths by Deputy Sheriff Hannon. They were anxious to get back to work on their claims. The verdict having been delivered, Hannon wrote it down on the back of an old envelope, together with the names of the jurors and then announced:
"In the cabin of the deceased I found 12 ounces of placer gold, an' inasmuch as these here corpus delicti lies intestate an' we ain't got no record of their next of kin, if any, I've decided they got to pay their own funeral expenses. Who'll wants the 12 ounces of draggin' these here remains over into the woods an' plattin' 'em all in a common grave?"
Nobody wanted to accept the contract, so Bill Warren said he thought Jesus Murietta might care to earn the 12 ounces and thereupon he and the deputy sheriff walked over to the latter's house and asked Jesus, Jesus was agreeable, so Hannon handed him the gold. A rude sled drawn by the mules constituted the hearse, but it must be recorded that Jesus did not dig a grave. He knew a pothole in a limestone formation on an adjacent ridge and into this pothole he dumped the enemy and rolled boulders in on top of them, then brush and a foot of loose dirt. In all his life he had never made so much money, so easily, in so short a period and with such great satisfaction to something primitive in his cosmos. Verily, the law of Joaquin Murietta had triumphed in Sawmill Flat beyond the wildest expectations of that impassioned and desolate law-giver. While Jesus was so engaged, Bill Warren and Johnny were busy tucking Wilson away from the sight of men.

Johnny Proves Himself A Good Prognosticator
"Best day's work we ever done, Johnny." Bill Warren declared. "even if we lost a day's work doin' it. That Jesus boy can't read or write, but he got word to his brother once before, an' brought him back, so I reckon he'll do it again. Between my Spanish and his English, complicated with Injun sign talk, I managed to get it into his head that everything's hum-dor-y."
"You sure, Bill?"
"Sure, I'm sure. He grinned like the head of an old fiddle."
"Joaquin ain't far away. He's hidin' out in the timber somewhere an' Jesus has been supplyin' him with groceries. Reckon we better put Joaquin's name in the pot for dinner tonight. He'll be droppin' in to get the news straight from headquarters."
Johnny demonstrated that he was no mean prophet, for Joaquin rode in to their cabin after dark. His big dark eyes roved from one brother to the other, silently, questioningly, and again each marked the strange wild glitter in them.
"You can come back to Sawmill Flat," Bill boomed. "All your creditors is dead an' the books is burned. The sheriff knew you'd done it so we had to tell him why. We had a coroner's inquest an' your name wasn't even mentioned; we sort o' hunt suspicion on Wilson, because he was missin', although the sheriff knew where he was. Me an' Johnny wanted Wilson so he'll stay missin'. Set down and eat. We are expectin' you. Have a snort of toothwater? You need it."

Kindness Can Thaw A Frozen Heart

Kindness can thaw a frozen heart. Tears flooded Joaquin's eyes and he murmured: "You are bully boys with crockery in the eyes. You have been kind to me and you have been kind to Jesus. I have not had the wish to live because my love is dead. But God has the mercy. In my heart—one little place of my heart—there is the need of a beautiful flower—the flower of friendship. When the soul is dead that little flower brings the wish to live again. It makes me to think: 'Holla, Joaquin, take courage. Be a brave fellow. For a little time, you have known the great happiness, maybe so long year from now you know more happiness. From the heaven my Rosita look down an' I think I hear her say: 'Heart of my heart, it is not like my Joaquin to play the baby.' Amigos mios, if I make the tears it is the fault of you. I am not a baby—excuse, please."
He leaned his arms on the table, his face hidden in his hands and quivered; Bill Warren commenced to sing softly:
Blow the man down, bullies, blow the man down,
Way, hay, blow the man down,
Blow the man down to Liverpool town.
Give us some time to blow the man down.
He reached over and cuffed Johnny. "Quit your snivelin', kid." There was a knock at the door. "Come in if you're good lookin'." big Bill followed—and Deputy Sheriff Hannon walked in. He stood a moment, gazing upon the tableau before him, then slipped over and carefully withdrew Joaquin's pistols from their scabbard. The Bowie knife followed; Joaquin, immersed in his grief, did not know. Hannon placed the weapons on a shelf and waited until Joaquin pulled himself together. Then:
"Joaquin Murietta, I want you." Joaquin leaped erect, whirling as he did so and his hands dropped to his empty belt. He bowed his head and stood there trembling.
Merely Called To Make News Official
"Sometimes," said Hannon, "I'm real proud o' my intelligence. Something told me I'd find you here tonight. Come here, son." He took a wild rose from his coat pocket, walked up to Joaquin and drew the stem through a buttonhole in Joaquin's bolero jacket. "Merely called to make the good news official," he added, "but, being most as intelligent as a jackass, I never take chances with a Mexican fire-cracker. Welcome back to Sawmill Flat, Murietta. I'm right proud of you an' if ever I'm elected sheriff I'll be teetotally ding-whizzed if I don't make you my chief deputy. You're a bully boy."
Joaquin essayed a twisted smile. "With crockery to the eyes?" he queried softly. "A bully boy with crockery to the eyes is better, so Bill inform me."
"Whatever it is goes on, son. Warn you, you're a hell of a host. Don't this occasion call for a drink?"

Attorney H. J. Ries Announces Candidacy for Senatorship

Attorney Herbert J. Ries of the law firm of Attorneys Dutcher, Walker and Ries yesterday announced his candidacy for state senator from the twenty-fifth senatorial district on the republican ticket at the June 1 primary.

Attorney Ries' announcement released yesterday afternoon follows: "I am asking for the endorsement of the republican voters of Iowa and Johnson counties, which comprise the twenty-fifth senatorial district, at the primary election to be held June 1 on my record as a republican.

"I have not heretofore sought or received any elective or appointive political office or position, although I have always been actively interested in the republican party, its candidates and affairs.

"If the republican voters decide on June 1 that I shall be their candidate at the general election in November, I pledge them to an active campaign and, if elected, will to the best of my ability represent the people of this district fearlessly and honestly."

What to Do? Road Project Still Up In Air, Farmers Remain Undecided

While skies outside threatened early Easter rains, inside the courtroom of the Johnson county courthouse Wes Robovsky of the board of supervisors of Linn county threatened injunctions and legal proceedings to stop proposed beautification of U. S. highway 161.

At the end of the four-hour meeting the small group of farmers was still undecided as to what to do to get the money for farm-to-market roads, and the six-months old dispute still remained in the air.

Urging the farmers of Johnson and Linn counties to "quick and concentrated action," the bombastic Robovsky told the group present "not to sign anything; not to let your property be taken without proper recompense by the state highway commission, and not to let your homes be destroyed by something you don't want."

A committee of six, three from Johnson county and three from Linn, is to be drafted to act as the mediator between the farmers who do not sign contracts to let the highway commission proceed through their farms with the work already begun.

Frequently interrupted by the applause of interested farmers, S. K. Stevenson of Iowa City reported on letters from Gov. Clyde L. Herring, and Congressmen Edward C. Elcher and B. M. Jacobson promising to investigate the matter. No reply has been received from President Franklin Delano Roosevelt who has been asked to stop proceedings of the highway commission.

R. M. Work, vice president of the Johnson County Taxpayers league, who presided at the meeting, urged the farmers present to sign their contracts. "The money must be used for beautification projects somewhere in Iowa," he said. "Why not let Johnson and Linn counties have the benefits? Protest will get us nowhere."

Shulman Speaks Harry Shulman gave a short discussion urging "one-way roads to prevent accidents."

Professor Mott Named Judge In Research Contest

The conditions are that the study must have been completed or published between Oct. 1, 1935 and Sept. 30, 1936. The material submitted may be a manuscript, an article, or a book.

Any inquiries regarding the contest should be addressed to Dr. Alfred McClung Lee of the University of Kansas, Lawrence, Kan., who is chairman of the contest.

"Lunatic Fringe" Charged With 5 Per Cent of Accidents By Professor

AMES, April 11 (AP)—Dr. A. R. Lauer, Iowa State college psychologist, today announced results of a survey which showed five per cent of Iowa automobile drivers belong to a "lunatic fringe" chronically involved in accidents.

The psychologist studied 1,289 drivers in arriving at his conclusion. "Only about 25 per cent of all drivers have all the accidents in Iowa," he said. "It seems that about 20 per cent of Iowa drivers are accident liable.

"This means that they might have accidents but could be trained to keep out of trouble."

He classed as the "lunatic fringe" an additional five per cent of drivers whom he described as "accident prone."

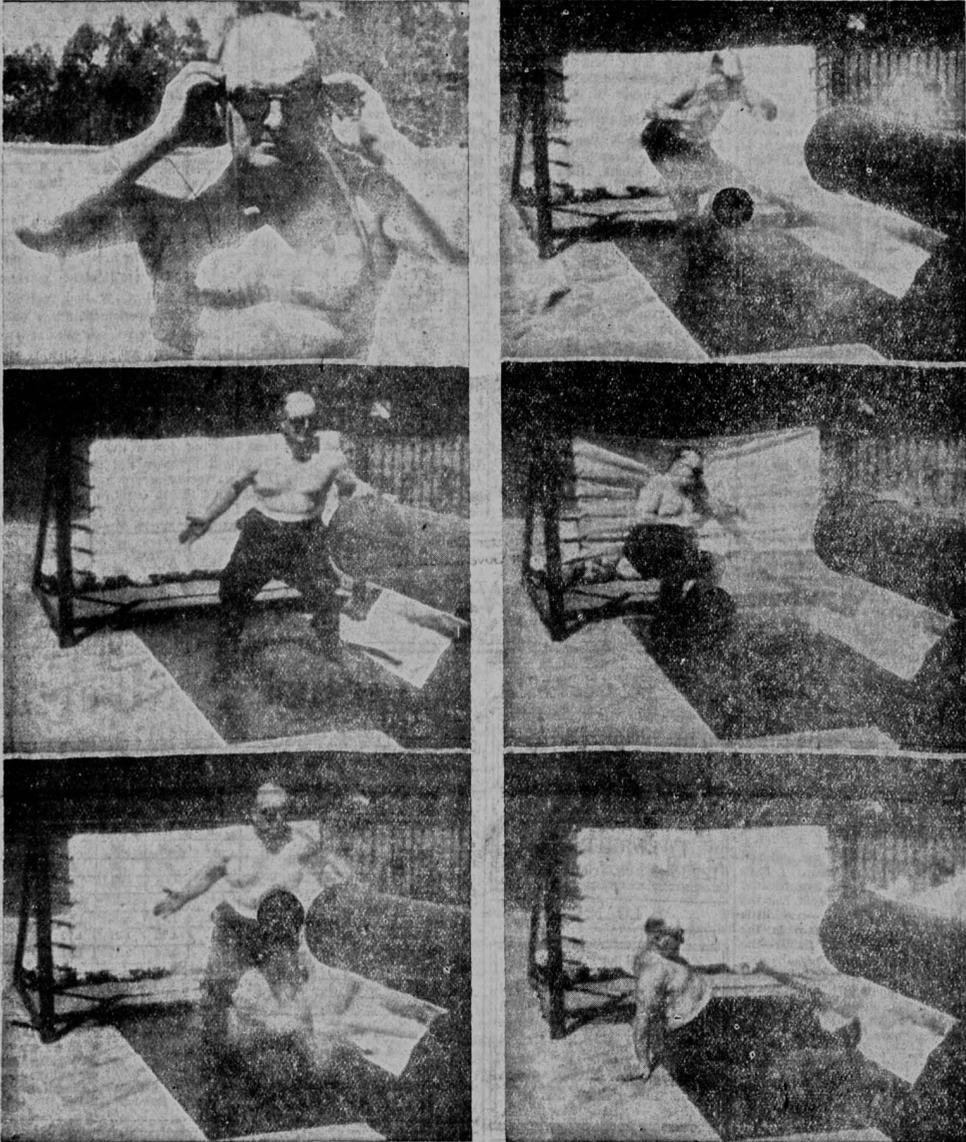

"They should be allowed to drive only with a restricted license," Dr. Lauer said. "In this way they could assume the responsibility for accidents in which they are involved."

The last picture shows him on the ground after being knocked into the net and apparently none the worse for his experience.

Mrs. Winston Testifies Miss Clay Boarded Train Dec. 22 or 23

By RICHARD EVERETT (Daily Iowan City Editor)
Two motions by Defense Attorney W. F. Murphy for a directed verdict of "not guilty" in favor of Louis Clay, 28-year-old local Negro on trial for his life for the alleged murder of George J. Folsom, were overruled yesterday afternoon in Johnson county district court by Judge James P. Gaffney. Previously, sensational testimony by Mrs. Margaret Winston, Negress, had exploded a bombshell for the state squarely in the center of Clay's alibi. Mrs. Winston was a surprise witness, located at her home, 824 S. Dubuque street, on a tip furnished to County Attorney E. A. Baldwin.

Visited by Lucille Clay
The surprise state witness told the jury she had been visited at her home on Friday or Saturday night, Dec. 22 or 23, 1935, at home with her sister, and that Louis had taken his sister to the train that night. The state contends that Clay choked Mr. Folsom to death on that Christmas eve.

Declines to Cross-Examine
Defense Attorney Murphy declined to cross-examine the state's new witness. Closing arguments will begin this morning at 9 o'clock, with County Attorney Baldwin presenting the state's case first. Closing summaries will be limited to one day for each side by agreement of counsel. The state will probably ask for death, with the defense pleading for acquittal. Indications were last night that (See Page THREE, No. 1)
