Problems In Europe Still In Balance

WASHINGTON, April 18 (AP)—Blanket seizure of private communications, whatever the authority used, was denounced today by the American Society of Newspaper Editors as a violation of constitutional rights.

In resolutions striking at the activities of the senate lobby committee, the editors of the principal newspapers of the country recorded their conviction "that if such practice is not checked, the threat to liberty of individual action and particularly of the freedom of the press is immediate and menacing."

German, Italo-Ethiopian Turkish Situations Block Peace Efforts

LONDON, April 19 (Sunday) (AP)—The Exchange Telegraph reported today that half of an Ethiopian army of 10,000 men was wiped out in a fierce two-day battle on the southern front in Ethiopia. The dispatch said that the road to Harar now was open for the Italians, who captured 2,000 rifles and a dozen machine guns.

LONDON, April 18 (AP)—Europe's tension had relaxed tonight, but its major problems were still unsolved.

The Italian military advances into Ethiopia continued with the League of Nations conciliation committee formally acknowledging it had failed in its assigned task.

Despite official denials, reports still emanated from Turkey that the nation governed by Kemal Ataturk had suddenly remilitarized the Dardanelles in violation of the Lausanne treaty.

Up to Hitler

The situation arising from Germany remained, but with Prime Minister Baldwin significantly asserting that peace or war was a matter which Reichfuhrer Hitler himself could decide upon.

Baldwin declared that Hitler could do more to lift the danger of war from Europe "than any man living; God grant he may have the will!"

The next step at Geneva, following the failure of the conciliation efforts, will be a meeting of the league council Monday at which representatives of member nations, including Italy, will air their opinions concerning the Italo-Ethiopian conflict.

Baldwin gave the key note to the general situation when he said: "The sky is dark in many quarters . . . but I would not say the omens are wholly unfavorable."

Men Report Of Hearing Raps In Gold Mine

MOOSE RIVER, N.S., April 19 (Sunday) (AP)—Men listening at a tube which had been sunk in the Moose river gold mine where three men were trapped last Sunday by a cave-in reported they had heard distinct rappings at about 12:30 a.m. today.

Dr. D. R. Sutherland of middle Musquodobit, to whom the listeners immediately telephoned, advised them to send a small bottle of cocoa and one ounce of brandy down the pipe line.

The tube had been made by a diamond drill, brought here this week in an attempt to make a hole through which small articles could be sent to the entombed men if they were found to be still alive. It was directed toward the 141-foot level, where the trio was believed to be.

Fears for the men's survival, if still alive, had arisen last night when Minister of Mines Michael Dwyer said the mine was filling with water.

Farnum Asks New Methods

CREATIVE APPROACH TO ART NEEDED, SAYS FAMOUS DIRECTOR

A creative approach to art instead of imitated technique was proposed as the only way to teach art by Royal Bailey Farnum, educational director of the Rhode Island School of Design, in the opening address at yesterday's session of the University of Iowa graphic and plastic arts conference.

Dean George F. Kay of the college of liberal arts presided at yesterday morning's session of the two-day conference, which closed with a tea at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and President Eugene A. Gilmore gave an address of welcome to the some 125 teachers in attendance.

In his address, Mr. Farnum emphasized the value of a background of general education presented along with the technical curriculum. "A student should develop an awareness of human activities in his general environment," he declared.

The artist asserted that a beginning (See Page EIGHT, No. 2)

Boone Editor Wins Election

SELECTION COMES AFTER SPIRITED BATTLE WITH 'DOUG' FAIRBANKS

DAVENPORT, April 18 (AP)—Kenneth Goodrich, editor of the Boone News-Republican, was elected president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Iowa at the concluding session of a two-day annual convention here last afternoon.

His selection came on the third ballot after a spirited contest in which supporters of "Doug" Fairbanks of Iowa City and Thad Churchill of Sioux City staged a strong fight.

The nominating committee reported only the names of Churchill and Goodrich, but on a motion of Cliff M. Nolan, Iowa City lawyer, the name of Fairbanks was added. The convention was placarded with signs boosting Fairbanks for the presidency.

The secretary-treasurer is an appointive officer and will be chosen by the new president.

Belgian Military

ADDIS ABABA, April 18 (AP)—The members of the Belgian military commission, employed for the last five years by Emperor Haile Selassie to train soldiers and police, were reported reliably today to have resigned again.

The relations between the Belgians and the government have been strained often in the past, and they tendered their resignations in a body at least once previously since the outbreak of the war.

What relation there may be between the present report and the approach of the northern Italian army to the capital was not specified, but the Belgians are known to have had disciplinary troubles in the past.

Protection of Americans

As this fresh internal dispute developed, the government took steps for the protection of Americans and other foreigners still stationed here. There still are 118 United States citizens in Ethiopia, and 53 of them live in Addis Ababa. Those in the capital have been offered the protection of the bombproof shelters of the British legation, since the United States legation is undefended.

Ethiopian officials assigned special guards to watch over the foreign legations and assure the various ministers that they need not fear for protection.

Matrimonial Puzzle

GARRISON, April 18 (AP)—Jess Cramer and his divorced wife are related again.

After the divorce, Cramer married Adeline Merchant. His former wife married Willis Merchant, Adeline's brother.

So Cramer is now the brother-in-law of his former wife. He is also the brother-in-law of his former wife's husband. His former wife is a sister-in-law of his present wife.

His former wife's former husband is her brother-in-law of her former husband.

Horse For Ford

WASHINGTON, Pa., April 18 (AP)—A delapidated automobile wheeled by a big limousine slowly touring this college town.

A passenger in the big car lowered his window and called cheerily to the passing driver: "Get a horse!"

The passenger was Henry Ford.

Not Out Like a Light

HAMPTON, April 18 (AP)—Clair Roskam, though he's only 9, took the "dare" and walked across the skylight in a store here.

He also fell through, landing unharmed 18 feet below in a pile of electric light bulbs.

The light bulbs broke his fall—he broke 118 bulbs.

Scottie Answers Fire Call at Knoxville For the Last Time

KNOXVILLE, April 18 (AP)—Scott Beman, 63, wheeled the Knoxville fire truck to the fire here last night—but someone else drove it back.

Forty-three years ago Scott joined the volunteer fire department and "sort of" took over driving the fire engine for he was a good hand with horses. He kept on driving when Knoxville bought a fire truck.

Three weeks ago, Scott went to a physician.

"Can't seem to get my breath anymore, Doc," he said.

After an examination, the physician said: "I hate to tell you this, Scott, but you've got heart disease. You've got to quit work."

"That mean," asked Scott, "that I've got to give up driving the fire truck?"

"Yes, absolutely."

"I don't know—" said Scott. Last night the fire alarm brought Scott to the blazing home of Louis Robinson.

By the time the hose was laid, Scott was panting. He leaned

Wood Favors Social Trends

"PAINTING TENDING TO PROPAGANDA" SAYS NOTED IOWA ARTIST

Favor for socialized ideas in painting was sounded last night by Prof. Grant Wood of the graphic and plastic arts department in the final 1935-36 Times club lecture in chemistry auditorium.

Tracing the improvement of public opinion toward painting during the last several years with an illustrated discussion of his own work, the famed Iowa artist said, "I am going to turn even more to socialized ideas," in commenting upon

"You'd better go back home," advised several firemen.

"I'll stay until the fire's out," Scott gasped.

But he didn't.

He slumped to the ground, dead.

Griffin, Sweetheart, Surrender To Officers at Harrisonville

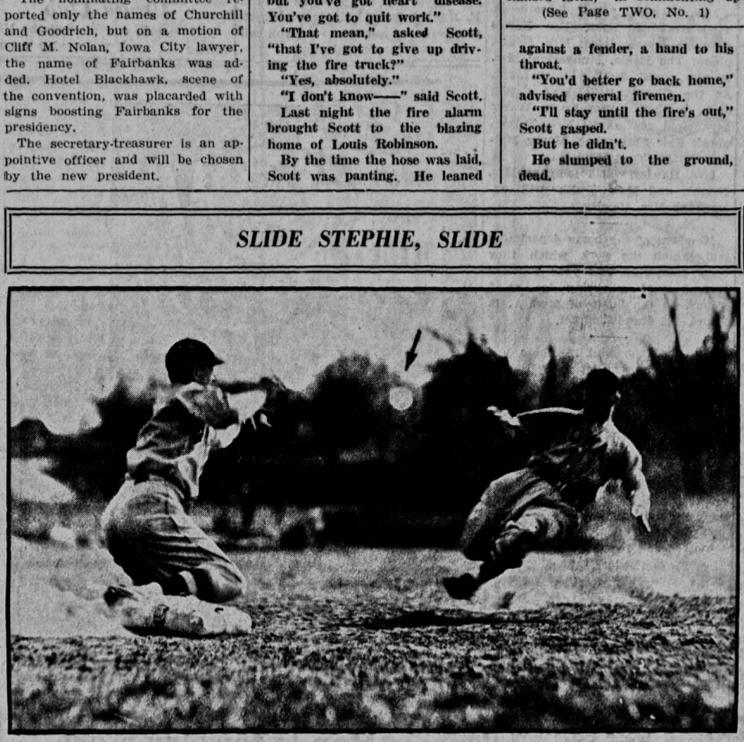

HARRISONVILLE, Mo., April 18 (AP)—Penitent and prayerful, Perry E. Griffin, erstwhile preacher, and Madge Copeland, his sister-in-law consort, surrendered today to officers who have sought them since they escaped from jail Wednesday night.

"I want to ask all of God's people to pray for us," said the sorrowing Griffin, accused of highway robbery.

"That goes for me, too," echoed his sister-in-law, charged jointly with him.

Gridiron Club Gives Annual Skit of Events

WASHINGTON, April 18 (AP)—A ship with nine captains sailed the merry seas of the Gridiron club tonight to give a long roster of the nation's dignitaries a burlesque version of national events as viewed by capital correspondents.

Few of those who figure in the whirl of events that is leading to the vortex of a political campaign were omitted in the score of skits that the correspondents paraded to the stage in the annual show of the famous dining club.

President Roosevelt, his cabinet and dignitaries of both parties watched and the president made a speech.

What he said was, by rigid rule, held within the confines of the club, however.

The other principal speaker was Frank R. Kent, the Baltimore political writer.

City Watches PWA Contest

LEGALITY OF GRANTS TO BE TESTED IN COURT AT WASHINGTON, D.C.

With the Iowa City Light and Power company's suit against PWA Administrator Harold Ickes and his assistants scheduled for tomorrow, local city council members and Mayor Thomas E. Martin are holding themselves in readiness for a quick trip to Washington, D.C., during the coming week to testify in behalf of the defense.

Four separate cases on the same subject, the legality of PWA disbursements, will be tried before the District of Columbia supreme court at the same time. All name Ickes as defendant, but plaintiffs represent utility companies of scattered cities.

Mayor Martin said last night that local men will probably not be called before late in the week because the plaintiffs will present their cases first, followed by the defense arguments, of which Iowa City's will be the last.

The light company late last year was awarded an injunction by the District of Columbia supreme court, holding up PWA funds here allocated for use in the erection of a municipal power plant.

Was Friend To Roosevelt For 25 Years

PROLONGED ILLNESS PROVES FATAL TO SECRETARY; DIES IN HOSPITAL

WASHINGTON (Sunday) (AP)—Louis McHenry Howe, secretary, friend and political advisor to President Roosevelt for many years, died at Naval hospital at 11:10 o'clock last night after a prolonged illness.

President Roosevelt learned of his old friend's death when he returned to the White House from the annual gridiron dinner at the Willard hotel, and a few minutes later—at 12:10 a.m.—Stephen Early, a presidential secretary, made the announcement.

The White House announcement said Howe had died peacefully in his sleep from heart and chest complications.

Mrs. Roosevelt telephoned the news to Mrs. Howe, who is at the family home in Fall River, Mass.

White House attaches said no funeral arrangements had been made.

Stricken Last Spring

The frail figure, who was perhaps the president's closest friend and advisor for 25 years was stricken early last spring with a bronchial ailment and pleurisy which aggravated a weak heart.

He amazed physicians who looked for his immediate death by rallying sufficiently to permit the president to make his Florida fishing trip last year.

Remained Bedfast

But although able to see a few intimate friends, including members of the Roosevelt household and Postmaster-General Farley, he remained bedfast, and an oxygen tent was used frequently to conserve his ebbing strength for many weeks.

The son of a newspaperman in Indianapolis, where he was born Jan. 14, 1871, Howe moved with his parents to New York state when he was seven years old.

He followed his father's profession, and it was while serving as political correspondent for a New York paper at Albany that he met Franklin D. Roosevelt, then a young state senator.

Admirer of Theodore Roosevelt

Howe had been a close admirer of Theodore Roosevelt, and he became intertwined with this political fledgling who bore the same name but was a democrat.

When Roosevelt was stricken with typhoid, Howe took over his campaign for re-election, and when Woodrow Wilson called Roosevelt to Washington as assistant secretary of the navy, "Louie" went along as secretary.

Objected to F. R.'s Running

Howe was reported to have objected to Roosevelt's running for vice-president in 1920, but after registering his protest, he turned faithfully to the task of lining up political paths for the candidate.

Not long after the 1920 campaign when Roosevelt was brought back from his Campobello, New Brunswick, summer home, stricken down with infantile paralysis, Howe was there to bolster his morale in his fight to health.

Howe was credited with a substantial part in setting the background of New York state governmental moves against which Roosevelt, as governor, was limned for national attention.

The silent Howe stepped out of that role to move into at least some public attention in the 1932 convention.

ALL-IOWA PLEBISCITE

Following are the questions to be asked in all-university plebiscite Wednesday evening.

1. "Which do you favor on this campus:
 - Compulsory R.O.T.C.?
 - Voluntary R.O.T.C.?
 - Or no R.O.T.C.?"
2. "Would you willingly participate in an American war of defense? aggression?"
3. "Should present military appropriations of the United States government be decreased?"
4. "Should the United States join the World Court? the League of Nations? a revised league of nations?"

Former Sen. Smith W. Brookhart of Washington, Ia., will be the principal speaker on the program, to begin at 7:30 in chemistry auditorium.

Karpis Sought in Connection With Wm. Hamm Kidnaping

WASHINGTON, April 18 (AP)—Alvin T. Karpis was written anew at the top of the justice department's list of wanted men tonight—this time with an announcement that the William A. Hamm kidnaping had been "solved at last."

The department set down this kidnaping, like that of Edward G. Bremer, another St. Paul man, as the work of the old Karpis-Barker gang. It announced solution of the Hamm kidnaping after the arrest of three alleged conspirators.

Karpis, "public enemy number one" and last survivor of the inner circle which hovered around Old Kate "Ma" Barker, is still at large. With him is Harry Campbell, a pal and hanger-on.

Asked about the connection between the two kidnapings, J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the bureau of investigation, said:

"The same gang did both."

Hoover named eight men in the Hamm plot and said "there may be more arrests soon."

Hamm was seized by two men as he left the office of the Theodore Hamm Brewing company at noon on June 15, 1933. He was held in a hide-out for four days until $100,000 ransom was paid.

NUMBER ONE

There exists a closer relationship between the painter and general public today, and, he said, "painting is tending today to become more in a way a propaganda."

"Naturalistic reproduction is not a justification for painting," the speaker said in describing some of the public misconceptions of the function of the painter.

"Painting is not a manual process, it is a mental process. Painting is as carefully planned," he said, "as the writing of a book."

The Iowa artist who seven years ago revolutionized his work by painting to please himself added, "Another public misconception is the belief a picture must be something beautiful." A painter today is not only concerned with an idea but his picture must have vitality—a god-like quality.

Too many people who go to exhibits judge pictures by a standard based on whether they are to own and live with it in their home. Painting today, except for commercial painting, is not necessarily beautiful, he explained.

The Rev. Evans A. Worthley of the Unitarian church introduced the speaker.

Perkins Tells About Crime

A.A.U.W. Elects Two Officers in Meeting At Dill Residence

Tales of crime detection illustrating his subject, "Administration of Criminal Justice," were included in the talk Prof. Rollin Perkins of the college of law gave following a business luncheon meeting of the A. A. U. W. yesterday at the Homer R. Dill residence, 112 Dill street.

Prof. Nellie S. Aurner and Mrs. Harold E. Wessman were elected organization president and secretary, respectively, and will assume office next fall. Other officers of the association, which will be open for election next year, are now occupied by Mrs. F. T. Mavis as vice-president, Mrs. H. F. Wickham, treasurer, and Catherine Mullins, historian.

In driving home his point that a community has the kind of law enforcement it is entitled to, Professor Perkins told of instances where the citizens could have helped in tracing criminals. "The public should realize that the police are their servants," said Professor Perkins in conclusion.

Mrs. A. H. Fuller of Ames, state president of the A. A. U. W., outlined events of the state convention to be held at Ames May 8 and 9.

A peace platform designed in a study group was presented at the meeting and adopted. A last study group meeting will take place Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in room 209, Schaeffer hall.

Shirley, at Seven, Is 'Still Unspoiled' - Girl Star Thrives Despite Busy Life

By HUBBARD KEAVY

HOLLYWOOD—The world's best known 7-year-old has spent almost half her life in the movies. To all appearances, Shirley Temple is yet unspoiled by the extraordinary attention she receives as a motion picture star.

Shirley Temple and her birthday cake

Not every girl of seven can boast of a fame that extends to far corners of the earth. But Shirley Temple, child screen star, can. Thus, when she has a birthday, as she does on April 23, everyone sends well wishes.

posing for pictures and of waiting between camera set-ups seems neither to tire her nor upset her. Wastes No Expressions. The person expressing the least concern for the going-on on the Shirley Temple sets is Shirley Temple. She never hurries when she is called for a scene.

Seen From Old Capitol

By JESS GORKIN

Everybody seems to be doing it and if you don't watch out someone may stick their fingers in your eyes. Perhaps someone has already.

What they call it is pseudo-isms, but you can call it what you will. This department will concede the fact it might be cute; however, there should be a limit to how far we carry the aesthetic.

To be more explicit scores of the local folk may be seen illustrating with waving arms and active fingers a hitchhiking trip to heaven. The "Broken Record," "Anything Goes," and a walk around the block—among other things.

This revival of the sign language, or what you will, may be one of the outcrops of spring. We hope, as many others also undoubtedly do, that nobody chokes himself trying to imitate an angel flapping its wings while caught in a tornado.

To watch some of the students go through the routine of the ever-growing number of things they are attempting to simulate makes you feel dizzy. It affected us so much, at one time yesterday, we even began doing the silly stuff.

We understand the thing might have started in that movie, "Millions in the Air," which played in town recently. In this flicker there occurred a skit by Benny Baker, as part of an amateur hour program in which was imitated "River Stay Way from My Door."

When Frances McEnroe, A1 of Algona, arrived late in Prof. Gilbert Houser's 9 o'clock class the other morning, she saw many strange faces. What was more someone else was occupying her seat.

It wasn't until after the end of the hour that she realized she came to class—same course is taught during two consecutive hours—early instead of being 20 minutes late.

The April issue of Frivol, university humor magazine, was issued yesterday. Class cooperation will go a long way. Take for example the class spirit in Prof. Frank L. Mott's Today's Problems course.

When Professor Mott recited Lindbergh's "Gongo" to the class the other day, he wanted his reading to be as realistic as possible. To the raising of his right arm the class would boom into the reading with roars that outdid that of a real lion, etc.

Here are some choice bits from Grant Wood's Times club lecture last night: I am not enough of an authority to speak on somebody else's paintings, but think it proper to speak about my own.

Painting is not a manual process, but a mental process. When I finish painting a picture, I think it is nice for about a month, and after that I begin finding more and more faults.

Wood's painting of Stone City was being exhibited in Des Moines and a certain farmer studied the work for some time. He then turned to the famed artist and remarked, "I would not give 40 cents an acre for that land."

An aged West Branch woman wrote to Wood in regard to the picture of Herbert Hoover's birthplace. She said, "You did strange things to the trees but we will forgive you because you left out so many weeds."

Rex Sayre, E3 of St. Charles, will accompany Mr. Adams to the conference as an official delegate. Rex Sayre, E3 of St. Charles, will accompany Mr. Adams to the conference as an official delegate.

With The Ladies

By Ruth Blanchard

Finer pottery, in Venetian pink, turquoise or white, and more formal lines than in previous years will lend grace to your table on special occasions this year.

Set over gay, smart mats of celophane, hemp, beads, coarsely woven cotton and wool, or leather strips, special dishes shaped like chickens, swans or fish are the fad of the season.

Thousands of pieces of china ordered for use in the new ships, French Normandie and English R. M. S. Queen Mary, have given a strong impetus to production of china in both countries.

Old formulae have been revived and old pits of finest clay that have lain unused at Limoges, France, for 30 or 40 years have been reopened, according to William D. Haviland, French manufacturer who is visiting in America this month.

Young married people in France, much more than in America, are selecting modern rather than traditional designs in china, preferring those depending on pure harmony of form and stark simplicity of design for beauty, he says.

A rich ivory tone is taking the place of white in popular demand for dinnerware abroad. Slate gray is also a smart style color, while yellow is preferred for earthenware and pink for fancy pieces.

The "coupe plate" shape (without any rim or with only the narrowest shoulder) is accepted as the smart modern style.

Modern designs were also used for Queen Mary table service ordered from English potteries.

The earthenware, 30,000 pieces, has a deep ivory ground with neat bands of black, primrose and gray. Teapots, "jugs" (pitchers) and sugars are cube shaped. The saucers have deep wells. Cube stoneware in pale matt oatmeal color for breakfast sets, modern flower vases in the same color, a pure white Wedgwood coffee service and fireproof porcelain in a specially created golden crest color were ordered for the great ocean liner.

Tips for buyers: To distinguish between different types of wares, keep these points in mind. Common earthenware is porous and opaque; it sounds dull when struck with a pencil.

Semi-vitreous ware, sometimes called fine earthenware or semi-porcelain, is of fine texture and low porosity. It is usually white or ivory colored and opaque. Where

A Music Festival And I.C. Hospitality

IOWA CITY will be host to nearly 7,000 high school boys and girls, music supervisors and other escorts on April 30, May 1 and 2 as the seventh annual State High School Music festival is conducted here. It is necessary to secure free lodging for these participants during their stay in our city. It is not an easy task, particularly as there are even more visitors this year than last. However, the importance of the event to Iowa City and the university justifies the effort. Attempts have been made to move the contest to a more centrally located city, but this failed largely because of the past record of hospitality and the facilities of the university.

Iowa Citizens have been more generous in the matter of offering lodging to these boys and girls in past years. The hospitality of our citizens has resulted in grateful reports "back home." We are proud of this record. We know that it will be upheld this year. At present the university has been able, through work of the extension division, to put 3,000 cots in university buildings and other lodging centers. This of course leaves many more guests who must be provided for. Space for a few extra cots in your home would be a considerable boon.

We appeal to residents of Iowa City to extend a welcome to as many of these boys and girls as facilities will allow.

Reform Our Primaries

SEN. William Borah opposed Col. Frank Knox in the Illinois presidential preference primary in a struggle for pledged supporters to go to the national convention. However, the outcome of this election was not binding upon the selected delegates of that state. Gov. Al Landon, the most popular republican candidate today, did not have his name on the ballot.

Because of a lack of uniformity in the primary throughout the various states today, it is a farce. It is not a vote to determine the favorite candidate because the favorites do not always run; instead it is a game of hide and go seek being played by the various candidates for the chief executive's chair.

Landon did not purpose in running in Illinois because results were not binding on delegates, and by running he would have incurred a huge campaign expense. In Ohio the primary vote is binding upon the delegates, therefore when Borah announced his intention of placing his name on the ballot there, republicans of that state named Taft as his opponent. But no one gives Taft much chance for the nomination; this move was taken so that Ohio's votes would not all be pledged to Borah. This problem occurs only in the republican party at the present time because the democrats so far have only one leader.

To remedy the situation, either uniform primary laws should be adopted by all states or else the presidential preference primary should be abolished. The national convention names the candidate therefore the primary is not essential.

It is useless to attempt to predict the future presidential race by the primaries because they have very little direct bearing on the true situation.

Student Jobs At Iowa

STUDENT EMPLOYMENT figures for the University of Iowa compare favorably with those of other midwestern universities. As an illustration we present here statistics from the Northwestern university employment bureau and then from our own bureau.

The Evanston institution found in a recent survey that 35 per cent of the total student enrollment was employed part-time. Lee Kann, director of our employment office, gives us the Iowa figure as 49.4 per cent of the student body. While 1,246 students are employed at Northwestern, more than twice that number, nearly 2,500, work part of their way through our university.

Again, among co-eds at both institutions, we note that while 221 hold some sort of position in the Illinois school, approximately 475 are working at Iowa. On the other hand the average wage is approximately $180 a school year for women here, while $92 is the figure for Northwestern. Men students at both institutions earn about $160. The higher wage for girls is explained by the fact that many of them are employed in office jobs that pay higher.

These figures speak well of our school. Credit may belong, in part, with the students themselves, who are willing to work hard to obtain college degrees.

Then too, the efficiency of our employment service deserves credit, as do business men of Iowa City and university officials for their cooperation in offering jobs.

Pampering Parents

THE Australian educator who recently declared that the "weak, pampered, short-sighted parents of the present day are giving to the race a selfish, pleasure loving, work shirking, spineless, thriftless lot," has raised a delicate question. The question is, are parents at fault in not insisting upon stern discipline which Robert Lee, the educator, thinks advisable in the rearing of children?

In the first place, parents of today are handicapped in deciding the amount of discipline necessary, because of their lack of acquaintance with their children. The school, such organizations as the Boy Scouts, the radio, the motion pictures, take the child from the home. These have become the teachers and disciplinarians of today's child.

For better or for worse, the parent has lost much of the authority over the child which he had in former days. Responsibility has been turned over to others—the teachers and scout leaders.

For the most part, the "weak, pampering parents of today" have put the job up to Robert Lee and his associates. And we hope that the teachers are turning out a creditable generation.

Hans Christian Andersen's Birthday

APRIL is the birth month of Hans Christian Andersen. At the mention of this name, what a melee of pictures comes to the mind.

Although Andersen was born in 1805, his fairy tales and other stories still furnish the last worthwhile, exciting toad to many kiddies' days. "The Flying Trunk," "The Ugly Duckling," and "The Little Match Girl" continue after generations to tutor the child's imagination and to make his world a richer place.

Hans Andersen's immortal stories do not stand alone to his memory. There is likewise the fact that his progress was threatened by hardship. Andersen was an awkward "little town" boy whose father, a cobbler, died when Hans was 11. The mother then did washing to keep herself and son.

At 14, Hans went to Copenhagen to seek his fortune on the stage, but with little success. Popularity, at last came with his novel "The Improvisatore," and success was insured by his first book of "Fairy Tales." Andersen was not a boy or man to despair. Today he is listed among the world's famous men.

Are American Men Henpecked?

TILLY LOSCH, European dancer who claims American men are henpecked, says: "In Europe men walk ahead of a woman or by her side, but in America the man is the humble one. He follows the woman like a puppy."

If Tilly's idea of the subordination of the American man is based on this observation only, her assumption is none too convincing. Perhaps the gentleman takes the rear position on the street for the same reason a policeman marches behind his prisoner—so he can't get away with anything.

Roosevelt And The Radio

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, most extensive presidential use of the radio the world has ever known, will shun the air waves in his campaign for reelection.

Valuable though the radio may be because of the larger number of persons that can be reached, the president believes he will be able to talk more intimately to the folks he can see and be seen by.

The radio will not be neglected entirely. His important speeches will be aired with careful preparedness.

Radio has its disadvantages for political purposes. The speaker is compelled to suit his remarks to the tastes of too many different groups of listeners at the same time.

In pre-radio days, it was possible for a candidate to make a speaking tour, say what he wanted to say at each section of the nation, and satisfy all. He could address the farmers on one set of terms and the industrialist on another.

But now with radio, he must be consistent, which is a difficult thing for any man seeking public office.

Describes Rise of American Water Colorists

Editor's Note: The following review of American water color painting by George Pearce Ennis was published in the London Studio. Mr. Ennis was a speaker at the fine arts conference here last week.

A review of contemporary water colorists reveals the growing power of a definite school of painting in America, brilliant, resourceful, and varied in handling. Painting in water color demands the clearest and best of an artist's intuitive knowledge. Hesitation is fatal, and consequently a pace is being set that calls forth the best in those who are using the medium.

In the last few years the water color exhibits exemplify this statement. To quote Dorothy Grafly in a recent review of one of the larger shows, her reaction shows "an urge to mental and emotional rather than technical, and as we are all human it bids fair to bring art into greater flavor than was possible under the old realistic puzzle-picture tangent, swinging decidedly toward the experimental but with a difference in the flavor of the experiment."

The pictures chosen by the jury of selection of the American Water Color society, composed of 15 outstanding American artists, show the trend toward serious application of the medium as expected by those who realize its possibilities. The habit of exhibits of earlier years must be impressed with the "paintings" in water color rather than the tinted drawings to which he must have become accustomed in years past. The artists themselves have realized the possibilities of water color as being interchangeable and inseparable from work in oils and have developed the medium of water color to a point of vigor so definitely different from the amateur culture of a generation ago.

Lack of knowledge. Analyses of many critical surveys recall a woeful lack of actual knowledge of the scope possible with this medium. Criticism is most entirely objective though it is hoped by most publications that it will be accepted as penetrating and knowing. It seldom is, however, and less so than water color painting is the target of review. The use of the medium has progressed at such a lightning pace during the last decade that style and imagination have entirely outrun public and critical reviews.

Sixty-seven years ago the American Water Color society was formed and rose steadily in popular esteem and prestige. Twenty-four years later a split occurred within the society caused by differences in policy. A group formed the New York Water Color club, but thereafter neither body was able to maintain quite the excellence and power of the parent society.

Thirteen years ago the two societies combined again to hold one annual exhibition. This combination brought a sudden revival in the art of water color painting and is definitely responsible for the present popularity existing in the country. Many prize awards and purchase prizes were secured and sales mounted rapidly. Up to this time it had been most unusual to see one man water color shows in the art dealers' galleries. This revival, however, brought almost every important art dealer into the field with individual exhibitions of all varieties of water color painting and made the American public water color conscious.

Club Formed 30 Years Ago. Under the patronage of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts the Philadelphia Water Color club was formed about 30 years ago at Philadelphia and became one of the great annual water color exhibitions. This created another opening for workers in the medium. Running concurrently with the American Water Color society, the two groups exhibit over 1,500 pictures representing every phase of water color painting existing in this country.

The American Water Color society has at this time about 400 members, divided into two classes—artist life members and associate artist members. Life members can only be elected from the list of associates who must be represented in the annual exhibition at the time of proposal.

The flavor of the American School of Water Color Painting is decidedly adventurous and shows a striving towards the fullest use of the medium. To cite Chinese art of 1,000 years ago is to base its premise and prove its renaissance and its future rests in the unknown.

Graduate College Students
To Students in the GRADUATE COLLEGE expecting to Receive Higher Degrees at the University Convocation to be Held June 1, 1936:
Each student in the Graduate College who expects to receive the master's degree, or the doctorate, at the forthcoming June Convocation, is requested, so far as he or she may not have done so heretofore, to procure for us, immediately, the official transcript of whatever graduate work he may have accomplished in another graduate school, so that this may be taken into the account in determining whether he or she fulfills the requirements for the higher degree sought.
This should be done immediately since, otherwise, it is possible that we shall be unable to certify for graduation next June, a student who may have accomplished satisfactory graduate work elsewhere, just because we shall not have received the requisite official statement of it early enough.

Pershing Rifles
Starting Friday, April 17, all active Pershing Riflemen whose names are posted on the Military Department bulletin are officially excused from regular Friday drill but are required to report for Pershing Rifle Drill at 4:10. CAPT. JAMES DE VOSS

A New Yorker
At Large

By JAMES E. RESTON
NEW YORK—The old comedy act of Gallagher and Shean, broken several years ago by the death of Ed Gallagher, is making the circuit again, this time with the sons of the two famous comedians in the principal roles.
Al Shean, the elder, is still making his way, however, in the pictures. He's in Hollywood playing "bit" parts, and even the name of Gallagher is still part of the Rialto. Ed Gallagher's widow has started a chop house on 52nd street and is doing well.
But the current act is not likely to attain the success of the first one, and not only because of the death of vaudeville, either. The sons are scarcely up to the standard of the originals. Mainly they are trading desperately on their names; and the old song with new lyrics is still part of the trick.
Al Shean, who, incidentally, is an uncle of the Marx brothers, has profited by the experience of his old partner. There is, perhaps, no canny actor in the business today. He is not likely to fall into the difficulties which beset Gallagher and drove him to an untimely end.

ONCE each morning a particular, by gruesome train slides into the labyrinthine tunnels of the Grand Central terminal and stops its last car opposite a wide elevator. The train has been named by the workers of the station, The Pine Box Express.
It stops in New England at a great tuberculosis sanitarium, where many New Yorkers go for the cure. But it seems a few each day are dismissed from the hospital in boxes and loaded on this train.
Nice cheesy story, huh?

WE always have some sort of campaign going on in this town. They campaign for more noise and less noise; for no turns on red lights and all turns on red lights; for 8 o'clock curtains in the theater and for three cent fares on the subway.
By nature I'm no "joiner." I haven't campaigned for anything except a salary raise for years. But I've joined the latest crusade, which is aimed at guys who go around dropping lighted cigarettes on carpets or leaving them on window sills or the top of grand pianos.
In a town where courtesy is a forgotten art this little bit of negligent impudence hits a new high record. The hotels and restaurants pay a fortune every year because customers evidently think paying their check gives them the right to burn down the place.
There is nothing malicious in their actions. They are just inexcusably careless. They don't realize that one forgotten cigarette sometimes means that an entire piece of furniture must be refinished.
Incidentally I'm still trying to find the chap who let his cigarette burn a nice brown scar on my living room window sill.

Screen Life

By HUBBARD KEAVY
HOLLYWOOD—An old Hollywood custom met a couple of rebuffs the other day.
Veda Ann Borg and Leif Erickson, newcomers to the screen, refused to change their names. Names like those, naturally, came to the attention of the name changers.
Miss Borg was given a new tag almost the minute she stepped into the studio. It was "Ann Noble." "Glenn" was substituted for Erickson's Leif. Miss Borg contended that her own name is more descriptive of her personality than Ann Noble. The former model's argument was convincing. She will be billed as Veda Ann Borg.

Erickson's defense of his given name is that it is not spelled like that of the Viking discoverer and he insists that its correct pronunciation, "life," will soon become known. He won his point, too.
It was suggested, a few months ago, that Kay Linaker's name be shortened to "Lynn Akter," but she didn't like the abbreviation and refused to take it. Olivia de Havilland is such a long name that her studio considered doing something about it, but no satisfactory substitutes were thought up.

It must be admitted that many times there is something more than caprice behind the producers' desire to switch names. A name may be difficult to pronounce or remember, or it may be too long to fit a theater marquee. Miss De Havilland's is, certainly. Most theaters call her "O. De Havilland."

Warren William, amateur inventor, is thinking about a radio contrivance to be applied to his power lawn mower. He expects it to steer the mower by radio control on the same principle that boats and airplanes have used successfully. Instead of rolling the mower, he plans to sit in the shade and direct it.

Joe E. Brown is not signing another contract with Warners for financial reasons. Joe has been getting $5,000 a week, for 40 weeks. He wanted $7,000 and Warners said that was more than he was worth. Joe will make pictures for some other company hereafter.

Nearly 7,000 Students Expected Here for Music Festival

11th Annual Festival Begins Here April 30

Much Need Is Found For Lodging Room For All Contestants

With nearly 7,000 visitors expected for the eleventh annual high school music festival here April 30, May 1 and 2, an appeal was made by the chamber of commerce, who met yesterday with Prof. Bruce E. Mahan, director of the extension division, and representatives of city service clubs, to assist in providing lodging for contestants.

Cots for 3,000

"Although we shall put 3,000 participants on cots in university buildings, we shall need many more free beds in Iowa City homes," Prof. Mahan declared. "Some 6,000 high school pupils and 1,000 music supervisors and parents will be the guests of Iowa City."

This year's festival, it is believed, will surpass the record of the 1935 event of 5,282 contestants. Already 4,000 musicians from 109 high schools have qualified. Final reports from the two remaining districts will be available tomorrow.

Free Lodging Sought

"It is an enormous task to secure free lodging for this group, but the importance of the event to Iowa City, to the university, to the boys and girls, and to public school music in Iowa justifies the effort," Prof. Mahan continued.

"During the past year an attempt was made to move the contest from Iowa City to a more central location in the state. The hospitality of Iowa City and the facilities of the university for the contest are important factors in keeping this large community enterprise here," he said.

The new rule qualifying only winners of superior rating, excluding highly rated excellent who formerly qualified, was expected to reduce the number of contestants here. Many more entrants are receiving the superior rating this year, however, perhaps because of general improvement in public school music and the enrolling of nearly 60 more high schools as members of the music association.

Public Buildings Used

Several churches, classrooms, gymnasiums, churches and the university fieldhouse will provide sleeping room for a large proportion of the visitors, as in previous years, but it is necessary that local homes house the rest for the three-day event.

Attending the meeting yesterday morning were Postmaster Charles A. Bowman, president of the chamber of commerce; D. W. Crum, secretary of the chamber; Alva B. Oatout, president of the junior chamber of commerce; Elza Means, president of the retail merchants association; LeRoy Mercer of the Rotary club, Ben Summerfield of the Kiwanis club and Dr. O. E. Schlanbusch of the Lions club.

Lists of festival visitors who have already been invited to be guests in Iowa City homes, are requested by Prof. Mahan from the hosts.

Iowa Citizens who will be able to provide quarters for music festival visitors have been asked to dial university extension, 2111, and ask for 713.

Professor Mahan declared, "Some 6,000 high school pupils and 1,000 music supervisors and parents will be the guests of Iowa City."

PASSING IN REVIEW

A Commentary on the New Books
Conducted by American Prefaces

Early Reviews of Miss Saltzman's Book

One week ago this column reviewed Eleanor Saltzman's first novel, "Ever Tomorrow." Here are extracts from other early reviews:

Frank L. Mott, in Des Moines Register (gives the book an A): Here is a novel of which Iowa may be proud . . . proud because here is a fine, honest book woven out of the very texture of farm life in this state. . . This is a first novel, but it has the sureness of sincerity and good writing. Some of its situations will not be easily forgotten.

Mackinlay Kantor, in pre-publication statement (another A): Miss Saltzman rises with this, her first novel, to become one of the most promising figures in the Midwest Renaissance. The good words "sincerity" and "simplicity" and "honesty" have been worked to death in blurbs about farm novels; but it is no use—we'll have to harness up the faithful fellows again and drive them out for Eleanor Saltzman.

T. P. Jr., in Saturday Review of Literature (grade C): The author of this first novel has purposely simplified and reduced her material until her story of an average Iowa farmer and his very average family becomes a somewhat colorless distillate of all the books on the subject which have been published in recent years. . . Her writing is clear and never pretentious. . . Her book is a capable but not highly interesting performance.

(M.W., in New York Times (another C): Joe Mueller, the central figure of her Iowa chronicle, is a man first and a farmer only incidentally. This, perhaps, is the principal distinction of her novel. . . "Ever Tomorrow" is gravely and honestly written; nevertheless it is not a novel which will be likely to leave a deep impression upon the reader's memory.

Permits for New Residences Total $9,600 for March

Remodeling permits issued the same month totalled 396 with a valuation of $192,641 as compared with 296 permits for $86,237 last year.

Sets Deadline For Entries

With May 1 as the deadline, entries may now be submitted in the private library contest under the auspices of Iowa Union library, Dorothy Spencer, Union librarian, has announced.

Students interested in competing for the book prizes offered by Union Board must make a list of books in their libraries, giving author, title and date of publication. They are required to state their first and second choices of books for each prize, including title, author, publisher and date of publication. The best libraries will be exhibited in the Union library May 8, 9 and 10.

Private library contests have been established as annual events in other colleges and have been successful, according to Miss Spencer, who said the contests create new interest among students in the discriminating choice of books.

Iowa Nine Drubs Northwestern Again, 8 to 1

Clausen Crashes Homer Over Dike in First, Leads 11 Hit Battering of Three Pitchers

Howard Miller, Making Big Ten Debut, Holds Wildcats to Seven Hits, Whiffs Eleven; Mason Plays Stellar Game at Shortstop

By ED WALSH

Iowa's baseball nine marched to an 8 to 1 victory over Northwestern yesterday at Old Iowa field to make a convincing clean sweep of the two-game series. The Hawks won the first game Friday, 7 to 4.

Howard Miller, sophomore right hander, allowed the Cats only seven well-scattered hits in his Big Ten debut. The tall hurler, stingy in the pinches, whiffed 11 Wildcats, while at the same time his mates were pounding three Northwestern mounds-men for 11 hits. Marion Clausen, Old Gold cleanup hitter, amped up to the plate in the first inning and smashed one of Skidmore's pitches far over the right field dike for a home run which brought the crowd of 2,500 to its feet. Stephens and Gugler, parked on the sacks, scored ahead of Clausen.

Two More in First The Old Gold nine scored two more in the first on three Northwestern errors and singles by Kadell and Bowlin.

In the second frame, Stephens scored another Hawk run when he got a walk, advanced on Mason's single and scored on Clausen's long fly.

The Hawkways completed their scoring in the third with two runs when Underwood walked, stole two bases and scored on a wild pitch, and Kadell walked and scored on Bowlin's single over the third base line.

Bob Mason Stars Northwestern finally got to Miller for a run in the eighth. Woy doubled to left field, reached third on a passed ball and scored on Walsh's putout at first.

Bob Mason handled six hot grounders without an error and his throws to first were unerringly accurate. Capt. Marty Underwood made putouts instead of hits of several Texas leaguer blows by his shoe string catches.

First Inning Northwestern: Merrill singled to center. Billings bunted and both men were safe. Merrill was thrown out at third by Miller when Katz hit to the pitcher. Woy struck out and Hayskar hit to Miller to Clausen. No runs, one hit.

Iowa: Stephens walked. Mason filed out. Gugler was hit by a pitched ball. Clausen hit a home run over the right field dike. Pickerrill was safe at first on Merrill's error. Pickerrill went to third when Walsh threw wild to second base. Underwood filed out. Kadell rapped a single to center scoring Pickerrill. Bowlin hit to left field and the ball rolled past Woy with Kadell scoring and Bowlin racing to third. Miller was thrown out by Shannahan. Five runs, three hits.

Second Inning Northwestern: Walsh struck out. Shannahan singled to center through the box. Lymper filed to Stephens. Pendergast, pinch hitter for Skidmore, struck out. No runs, one hit.

Iowa: Kaufmann replaced Skidmore on the mound for Northwestern. Stephens walked. Mason singled through short. Gugler struck out. Clausen filed long to center driving in Stephens. Pickerrill struck out. One run, one hit.

Third Inning Northwestern: Merrill struck out. Billings filed foul to Clausen. Katz singled and Woy put him on third with a double. Walsh filed to Underwood. No runs, two hits.

Iowa: Underwood walked and stole second. Kadell walked. Underwood stole third and scored on Bush Lamb, versatile Hawkeye, surprised the crowd as he flung the spear 189 feet 3 3/4 inches to cop second place honors.

An Emporia, Kan., quartet raced through its variety of distances to establish a new world mark of 10-12.7 for the medley relay to feature the meet, but Glenn Morris, Ft. Old Gold Net Team Blanks Pioneers, 6-0

Golfers Drub Iowa State In Opening Meet

By JIM BRAMMER

For its third consecutive win of the season, the Iowa tennis team blasted Grinnell off the courts yesterday morning to the tune of 6 to 0. The Pioneers, unable to win a set, were completely outclassed by the superior play of the Iowa netsters.

In the best match of the day, the top-notch Iowa doubles team of Capt. Frank Nye and Kenny Cline bested Capt. Lee Bach and Dwight Porter of Grinnell 6-2, 7-5.

Experiencing little difficulty, Chuck Fleming, Iowa's sophomore star, white-washed Captain Bach, Grinnell's No. 1 player, 6-0, 6-0. Fleming passed Bach consistently at the net and bewildered the Grinnell leader with his accurately placed flat forehand drives. Kenny Cline, Iowa City veteran, trounced Dwight Porter, Grinnell's No. 2 player, 6-2, 6-1. Cline's service was noticeably improved and his drop shots were working to perfection.

Captain Nye disposed of Tracy Garrett 6-1, 6-3, in a match which saw the Hawk driving the ball into the far corners of his opponent's reach so consistently that many times Garrett failed to make an attempt to reach the ball in order to make a return.

In the other singles match, Dave Metz, Burlington senior, raced through James Davis, No. 4 Grinnell man, 6-1, 6-2. Metz's steady, all-around game and his powerful service were too much for his less experienced rival.

The second doubles match brought another win when Fleming and Metz defeated Garrett and Davis 6-1, 6-1. Fleming's overhead shots were working beautifully and Metz's forehand drives found many loopholes in the Grinnell boys' defensive game.

Results Fleming defeated Bach 6-0, 6-0. Cline defeated Porter 6-2, 6-1. Nye defeated Garrett 6-1, 6-3. Nye and Cline defeated Bach and Porter 6-2, 7-5. Fleming and Metz defeated Garrett and Davis 6-1, 6-1.

PHILADELPHIA, April 18 (AP)—Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic committee, cracked the whip at his official family today to start sending home definite reports on the $350,000 fund necessary to get Uncle Sam's athletes to Berlin in August.

The chief worrier over problems connected with getting the squad to Germany has seen plenty of reports relating that prospects for raising the huge sum are good. But he hasn't had many mentioning actual cash money.

"Less than 90 days remain before the teams sail," Brundage said, "and I haven't been able to get together a definite idea of where we stand financially."

ROBIN HOOD

PETER B. KYNE'S
Great Serial Story
from the M.G.M. Picture of El Dorado

The Story Thus Far:
In the year 1848, the once kind and gentle Joaquin Murietta has turned outlaw and bandit. In the gold country of California, invading Americans have murdered his wife Rosita and a drunken man, after hanging his brother Jesus, have publicly lashed Joaquin. He is rescued by Three-fingered Jack, an outlaw. After a hurried visit to the rancho of Don Ricardo, his former employer (whose daughter Juanita has always loved him), Joaquin assumes leadership of Jack's gang. They go forth, robbing and plundering wherever they can. Then, with some men, Joaquin rides to Sawmill Flat and there kills five of the mob who had lashed him. Later he meets Sheriff Hannon, who, with Johnny and Bill Warren, had formerly been friendly with him. Hannon warns Joaquin to stay away, for he has orders to arrest him on sight.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

"YOUR PARDON, my captain," said Claudio, as the quartet jogged out of town, "if I appear to criticize. But my captain is a strange man. He spared that fellow with the star . . . so now we shall have trouble later."

"We will," Joaquin replied with ferocity, "discuss trouble when we meet it. That Hannon is a brave man and also my good friend. It is not my habit to kill such men, even in defense of my own skin."

"Bravo," yelled Reyes Peliz. "Our captain is a gentleman. My caballero."

"The way of the caballero, friend Peliz," Jack rebuked the latter, "is not the way of the peon. Remember that."

They rode on up the valley to the Warren cabin, and while his three men stood on guard outside and held his horse, Joaquin entered and found Bill and Johnny at breakfast. "Joaquin!" Johnny cried, panic-stricken, "you clear out of this country. You're wanted for that Horatio killing!"

"Joaquin inquires for additional victims."

"So I have been informed by that excellent fellow, Hannon. We have but recently conversed and he handed me this notice. It seems these gringos hold me very cheap. Am I not worth more than a thousand dollars, friend Bill?"

"Ain't got no time to argue that, son. Had your breakfast?"

"An hour ago, thank you."

"Then git going. You're plumb outside the gringo law now, Joaquin, an' if you hang around here the folks'll think me an' Johnny is harboring you, a-givin' you aid an' comfort an' information. An' that's agin the law."

"We can understand that Horatio killing, Joaquin," Johnny pleaded, "because we know you; we read your mind like a book. The hell of it is other people don't an' can't."

"I will go—in a little while, my friends. I may have a cup of coffee, no?" He pulled out a pistol and his Bowie knife and the Warren brothers saw fresh blood on the point of the knife. Joaquin wiped the blood off on a piece of the newspaper that served as a table cloth and carved five notches in the butt of the gun, which already carried four notches. "I have just paid something on account of my debt to Jesus," he explained. "Ward, Howard, Murphy, Schultz and Bowker. Do I presume if I inquire where I may find others of the fifteen remaining?"

"The Warrens? Yes, His Rescue Plan."

"Lang, the fellow that accused Jesus an' flogged you, is dead. Green, the man that tried to save you met him in the main street yesterday and told him what sort of animal he was. Lang pulled an' fired, but missed an' Green put three in his craw. Now, they got Green in the jugo, an' I reckon the law'll hang him."

ing and reloading their pistols as Joaquin emerged. "We have finished work for the day," he advised them. "By nightfall all men for five miles around will know that I am taking vengeance, and tomorrow what a scurrying of rats there will be! The fourteen I seek will hasten to leave the country. Blood of the devil, which way will they go?"

"North," Claudio murmured. "To the south are our people and they would fear spies. So they will flee north, takin' the road to Sacramento."

"Those are true words, Claudio." They returned to their camp in the hills and Joaquin put out sentries. Then he dealt them black-jack and monte until they were all out of money, when he gave his winnings back to them. About four in the afternoon Joaquin suddenly saddled his horse and rode out of camp. At sunset the Warren brothers heard two pistol shots down the road and hastened to their cabin door. Joaquin came galloping up the road, splashed with creek and pulled up before them. He held up two fingers.

The Pussy Cat
And the Mouse

"Bullard and Smith," he cried joyously. "They were hurrying home from town to their claim and I leaped out at them from the timber. I have them covered so they madly no attempt to draw. I said to them: 'Senores, you are aware of my business?' They commenced to plead. They knelt in the dust of the road; they wept; Bullard said he had children in a land beyond the Sierra—I forgot the name. Having savored their sufferings a little while I became disgusted and finished them. Ah, what cowards! They feared to die; they lacked even the pride to die fighting."

He cocked his leg over the pommel and cut two more notches in the butt of his gun. "Be kind enough to present my compliments to the good Senor Hannon," he cried joyously. "I play with him the game of the pussy cat and the mouse."

As daylight he saw his horse, hiding in the timber beside the road that lead down from the foot-hills to Sacramento. Many men passed him but at last came one on foot. From the leafy shadows Joaquin spoke.

"I am Joaquin, the brother of Jesus Murietta."

A Wounded Horse Stays Further Slaughtering
"I been sorta expectin' a call from you, mister," the man replied and fired from his hip. The bullet imbedded itself in the pommel of Joaquin's saddle; a second bullet crossed the black horse's neck as Joaquin caused him to rear on his hind legs, to protect his master. Then he commenced bucking and as he bucked the man in the road continued to fire.

Suddenly the horse stopped bucking, coincidentally with the release from his shoulder of Joaquin's huge rowel. "I think, my brave fellow," he taunted, "that I counted six shots, and because I made my horse dance, all of them missed me. What? You have not another gun?"

He shot the man through the head, helped himself to some sixty ounces of gold in his victim's pack, and by a circuitous route rode back to camp, where he carved another notch in his gun. Then he washed the slight wound in his horse's neck and sewed it up; he complained to Jack that but for the fact that the black horse had been wounded he would have remained on that road and paid further installments on his debt to Jesus.

They Shoot It Out With Six Miners

In the morning the company rode north, over the hills, thence down into the Sacramento valley and north along its eastern bank. At Nye's ferry, on the Yuba river, Joaquin detached Claudio and two others to ride into the camp and purchase supplies. Instead, they robbed the general store, because they saw a miner selling his gold must have quite a quantity of it on hand. So they killed him and robbed him of a thousand ounces and bed him of two mule-loads of beans, bacon and flour and some salt and pepper. In the midst of their foray they were surprised by half a dozen miners and forced to shoot their way out of Nye's ferry, with the loss of one mule and a bullet through Claudio's thigh. But they left three men dead behind them, and received a sound cursing from Three-fingered Jack for the loss of the mule, when, eventually, they caught up with the main body.

The Doctor Asks Too Many Questions

The bullet was still in Claudio and it was beyond the rough skill of Three-fingered Jack to extract it, so Joaquin decided to return to Sacramento and seek the services of a surgeon. At the outskirts of the city they separated, to enter in ones and twos at intervals and put up their horses at a certain feed corral. Joaquin rode in with Claudio and found a surgeon.

"How did this happen?" the surgeon naturally queried.

"He was shot, senior medico," Joaquin replied softly. "A very impatient man shot him."

"What for?"

"Oh, because he is such a foolish fellow. He talked too much. He was always asking questions about the private business of other men."

The doctor looked up. He looked down again. "Crazy as a loon," he soliloquized. He extracted the bullet and a fragment of Claudio's leather trousers with it, dressed the wound and said: "That will be a hundred dollars." To his amazement Joaquin gave him the money and helped Claudio out of the office and onto his horse, waiting in the street.

His Verbosity Costs Dearly
The window above him opened and the doctor's head and shoulders were protruded.

"Murietta!" he shouted. "That greaser on the black horse is Joaquin Murietta, the bandit and killer. Take him. Tell the police. Shoot him. Reward out for him."

"My good medico," Joaquin called up to him, "you are unable, it seems, to accept a hint. You still talk too much." And he put a bullet through the head of that doctor. "Also, his charges are very high," he added to Claudio. "That is because you are a Mexican. Ride quickly, now, thou careless one, to the feed corral and I will follow at a distance and lead them away from you. We meet at Sonora."

He spurred his horse down the street in one direction while Claudio, experiencing agony at every jump of his horse, found himself in a back street and rode on at a walk until he reached the corral, where the company awaited him. Nobody paid the slightest attention to him, but as he rode past Jack he murmured: "We meet the chief in Sonora. An outcry has been raised against him. I remain here. A woman will hide me. When I am well you will find me in Arroyo Cantora."

Claudio's Mother Takes Care of Him

He continued on down the street, still at a walk, and rode out toward Sutter's now abandoned fort. He turned in at a shabby one story house, dismounted, led his horse around to a shed in the rear and slipped into the house via the kitchen entrance, to be greeted by a stout woman.

"Well, my son, always you return in trouble."

He kissed her affectionately and, divining his need, she poured him a large tumbler of aguediente. "My horse is in the shed, my mother," he said. "Have you care for him. I will be here a month."

"Thou vagabond," she cried but not with too much anger, and assisted him to an inner room, where he lay on a bed and fainted. His mother turned his pockets inside out, found a score of twenty dollar gold pieces and blessed God for His manifold mercies.

Meanwhile the company had left the feed corral unhurriedly. Apparently these men had come solely for the purpose of an hour's rest, some oats and grooming. Not one departed with another; all took different directions.

Joaquin Outrides Two Deputies

Their precautions, however, were needless. The hue and cry was on after Joaquin, out the Folsom road and up the south bank of the American river. Two deputy sheriffs, mounted, had been within a block of him when the doctor gave the alarm, when they took after him and he spurred his horse to a gallop that here was assumed correctly, that here was the fugitive. Unfortunately their horses were cold-blooded mustangs, fast for a quarter of a mile but no match thereafter for the magnificent thoroughbred Joaquin bestrode. He contented himself with keeping about 300 yards in front of his pursuers. Two miles out the latter lost sight of Joaquin around a bend; and just around that bend stood the remnant of an adobe house, into the shelter of the wall of this Joaquin darted; as the deputies lumbered past; as their spent horses he shot the horses from under them and with a triumphant yell continued on across country.

He Conspires Himself For His Clemeaty

As he rode he pondered his own unfathomable psychology. It had been in his mind to kill both those deputy sheriffs yet, at the last moment he had spared them and killed their horses instead. Why had he done this? Were not all gringos, with the exception of those who had been kind to him, his enemies? Were they not the enemies of his people? Were they not all bent on hunting him down and destroying him, now, as they would a mad dog—and merely because he was taking vengeance on murderers upon whom the established law had turned a complaisant back?

"I will not again be weak," he told himself. "I will not again stay my hand."

Roosevelt Hi Track Squad Snatches Win From Little Hawks

CEDAR RAPIDS, April 18 (Special to The Daily Iowan)—Roosevelt's great versatile trackster, Reilly, hurtled himself through the air on the Coe field broad jump runway this afternoon 18 feet, six inches to win the event and gain enough points to enable the Roughriders to snatch a close 74½ to 70½ victory over the Iowa City Thimble.

Previous to this event, last on the 15 event program, the invading Hawks held a slender three-point margin. But Nelson pounded in behind his teammate Reilly to nose out Dick Amerine of Iowa City for second place. Reilly won four individual first places, besides running a leg on the winning half mile relay team of Roosevelt. The Roughrider ace's triumphs came in the century sprint, the 120 yard high hurdles, the 220 yard low barriers, and the broad jump.

Burly Paul Ross recorded as impressive a performance when he registered a "triple" with victories in the javelin, discus, and shot put. His javelin toss was 156 feet, nine inches. Ross spun the platter 115 feet, and heaved the shot 42 feet, two inches.

Amerine was next in scoring for Iowa City with nine points, a first in the 220 dash, second in 100 yard dash, and third in the broad jump. Jerry Pooler garnered a second and two thirds for five points. Tallman of the invaders lapped out Hamill of the local squad in the final yards of the half mile run to win in 2:28. Roosevelt won both the mile and half mile relay events. The most impressive marks were Ross' javelin distance, Reilly's 10.3 century, Amerine's 24.3 furlong, wherein he was pressed to the tape by Dale Eymann, a teammate, and Endsley's 55.5 quarter mile for Roosevelt.

Irish 880 Relay Mark At Teachers' Meet Remains Untouched

CEDAR FALLS, April 18 (Special to The Daily Iowan)—Although University high and St. Pat's high school of Iowa City failed to capture any first places in the annual State Teachers college relays here, the boys from the university city piled up points in many lesser places.

University high won one second and three fourths in the relay events St. Pat's placing third in the medley relay.

Bill Leuz and Ed Connors were the Irish heroes today. Leuz placed second in the shot put which was won by Liens of Clear Lake with a heave of 45 feet. He also took fourth in the discus. Connors tied for third in the high jump and placed fourth in the shot put respectively.

The Rivermen's relays team was hitting on all four as they copied a second in the two mile relay and came in fourth in the 440, 880 and mile relay. The 440 yard relay was won in the fast time of :45.5 by Vinton.

St. Patrick's half mile relay record of 1:35.9, made in the relays last year, remained unbroken, the event being won by Iowa Training school in 1:36.1.

Police Issue Warnings To 50 Motorists

Local police last night issued nearly 50 warning tags to motorists with defective lights, carrying through a program inaugurated last night as 40 tickets were issued.

Receivers of the tags must have their lights corrected, and must report to the police station for an "okay." Police court action will be taken against those not reporting.

Chief C. O. Paine last night urged motorists to have their lights checked and repaired immediately, to avoid receiving the pink tickets.

ning art student should use the simplest mediums and tools possible, doing the work naturally, leaving a technical study until later. He may then analyze in terms of principles. "Art is struggling to be free," Mr. Farnum said, "and it must unlearn the bonds of tradition, eliminate imitation and meticulous representation."

He described the relation between art and industry, denying the idea that true art is impractical.

Prof. Lester B. Longman of McMaster university, in another address on yesterday morning's program, declared that art instruction should include history of art, creation, and a psycho-philosophical approach.

Suggests Library He suggested a library of framed reproductions which might be loaned to students, an introductory course in art to interest students, and isolated lectures on art in other departments. "The staff of an art school should be good artists regardless of their degrees or attainments," he declared.

"We would break down the self-imposed, intellectual boycott between artists," he remarked, "and refine the aesthetic sense of the university as a whole." Visiting lecturers and exhibitions would help accomplish this, he believes.

Professor Longman predicted that the comparative aesthetician will have a place in the future of art instruction. With a training in psychology, philosophy, history of art, and preferably some creative ability, such a teacher will be important. "The primary purpose of an art department in the university is appreciation of art," he declared.

More Direction Professor Longman believes there should be more direction in the curriculum and not so many electives. History of art should be included, since it gives cultural advantages, and a student must find out about the history of art before he can be successful in creation.

A water scene was the subject painted by George Pearce Ennis, president of the American Water Color society, in a lecture and demonstration yesterday afternoon in Iowa Union.

"Don't overlay the 40 or 50 pieces of glass in a stained window, nor overpaint in water colors," said Ennis. "The more simply it is done, the better is the effect."

During the demonstration, Ennis explained that color should be driven into the paper while working with the flat side of the brush. A certain amount of white left in the picture adds vitality, he said.

"Try to establish a pattern and contrasting elements as soon as possible in order to give a rich scheme to the picture," the water color expert continued, "and if you maintain your contrast, you can maintain the vitality of your picture."

At a luncheon yesterday noon in Iowa Union the announcement of awards in the Iowa high school exhibition of graphic and plastic arts was made by Prof. Rufus H. Fitzgerald, director of the school of fine arts.

County Plans Soil Program

Johnson county township committees, with the assistance of a large majority of 1,500 farmers, are planning to participate in follow-up work in the new soil conservation program. It was announced yesterday by Emmett C. Gardner, county agent.

The committees of two townships have scheduled second sign-up meetings. In Sharon township a meeting will be held Monday evening at the Masonic hall from 7 to 10. Clear Creek township farmers will meet Tuesday evening at the Tiffin high school.

Future Veterans Demand Cash Now

"LAUGH IT OFF!" The seriousness that has for many years dominated the work of campus workers for peace has been forced to take a back seat these days by the nation-wide acclaim that followed the Princeton bull-session inception of the Veterans of Future Wars. The parent organization has fostered the establishment of "posts" on more than 99 campuses, and these have given birth to such off-shoots as the Association of Gold Star Mothers of Veterans of Future Wars (now called "Home Fire Division" by some), the Foreign Correspondents of Future Wars, the Conscientious Objectors of Future Wars, and groups demanding payment of future social security. Texas' Rep. Maury Maverick has announced that he will introduce a bill to meet the demands of the V. F. W.

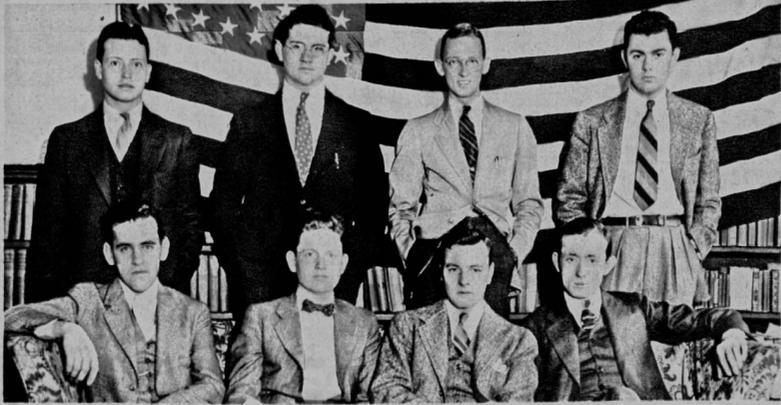

New members of Veterans of Future Wars are signed up at a mass meeting at Washington University.

A conscientious objectors protective organization to insure better prison conditions and bonuses for families of future war objectors is being urged by Phil Monypenny of Washington University (St. Louis).

Association of Future Gold Star Mothers of the V. F. W. are actively supporting the activities of their "sons." It was founded at Vassar, but an official release from that institution disclaims the honor.

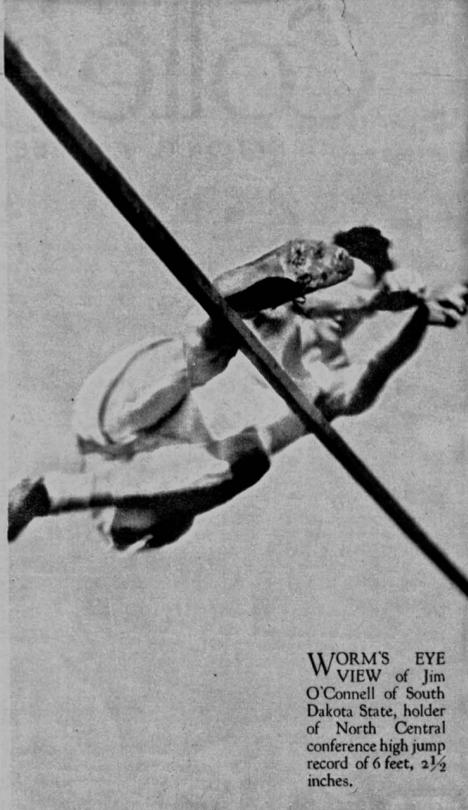

They started it all! These are the eight original members of the parent organization at Princeton University.

ACCOMPLISHED HORSEWOMAN Helen Franke, Kappa Delta at Alabama Polytechnic Institute, takes her champion over a jump on the campus riding course.

MARY CORZINE was rated by her junior classmates as one of the top-ranking beauties in an election staged at Texas Christian University.

THE Spotlighter

45 Fanned in 36 Innings

TO SPEAK of University of Chicago athletics is to speak of heroes rather than of teams. Currently it is Jay Berwanger in football, Bill Haarlow in basketball. On two successive afternoons in the spring of 1931 it was Roy Henshaw, short and slight product of Chicago sandlots. Roy took the mound for the University of Chicago baseball team against Minnesota and polished off the Gophers in a double-header; the next day the team was Indiana, likewise polished off by Chicago in two games in one afternoon. The record books showed that Pitcher Henshaw had fanned 45 men in those 36 innings.

This was really worth setting down, but for Roy Henshaw the two afternoons were almost lackadaisical. He had always fanned out batters with the greatest of ease for three years with Chicago. One season it was 92; and that same season he averaged five hits a game.

Such Big Ten splendor could not long pass unnoticed by the Chicago Cubs. In 1932, Roy left college to try out with that noisy and periodically brilliant club. His college education having been satisfactory on the diamond, Roy gradually grew to lustre as a Big Leaguer. This year the ex-collegian may be named in a breath with the dizziest of Deans himself.

"Bah" to Athlete's Heart

ASCIENTIFIC question that has a bearing on the case of Roy Henshaw, and those of a thousand others named in college athletic books, has been settled, in a measure, by Dr. William G. Leamon of the University of Pennsylvania. To the query: What about athlete's heart? Dr. Leamon, in medical terms, replied: nothing. The terms: heart-strain is not possible in a healthy heart; participation in athletics does not predispose to early development of a cardiovascular disease. Dr. Leamon's conclusion has been supported by Boston scientists and with proof that college athletes live longer than average men.

45 Fanned in 36 Innings

TO SPEAK of University of Chicago athletics is to speak of heroes rather than of teams. Currently it is Jay Berwanger in football, Bill Haarlow in basketball. On two successive afternoons in the spring of 1931 it was Roy Henshaw, short and slight product of Chicago sandlots. Roy took the mound for the University of Chicago baseball team against Minnesota and polished off the Gophers in a double-header; the next day the team was Indiana, likewise polished off by Chicago in two games in one afternoon. The record books showed that Pitcher Henshaw had fanned 45 men in those 36 innings.

This was really worth setting down, but for Roy Henshaw the two afternoons were almost lackadaisical. He had always fanned out batters with the greatest of ease for three years with Chicago. One season it was 92; and that same season he averaged five hits a game.

Such Big Ten splendor could not long pass unnoticed by the Chicago Cubs. In 1932, Roy left college to try out with that noisy and periodically brilliant club. His college education having been satisfactory on the diamond, Roy gradually grew to lustre as a Big Leaguer. This year the ex-collegian may be named in a breath with the dizziest of Deans himself.

100 Musicians Registered By Local School

Famed Orchestra Will Lead Entry List In Annual Event

Along with 159 other Iowa schools, Iowa City high school will enter more than 100 musicians in the state music festival at the university April 30, May 1 and 2. It was announced yesterday by Lloyd W. Swartley, director of instrumental music.

To win the right to enter the state finals the local musicians were ranked "superior" in their classes of competition in the sub-district contest at West Branch and district meet at Burlington.

Leading this year's entry will be Iowa City's nationally famous orchestra. After winning "superior" in last year's state finals, the orchestra was ranked "highly superior" in a class B competition in the national contest at Madison, Wis. The Iowa City orchestra was the only one placed in the "superior" group.

60 in Orchestra
Conforming to contest regulations, 60 students will play in the orchestra. They will play "March and Procession of Bacchus" from ballet "Sylvia" by Delibes and "Russian Sailor Dance" by Gielre.

Having won "superior" ratings last year and because there was no competition for bands in national competition, the local band will enter the nationals this year without participating in state competition.

Glee Club to Sing
Iowa City high school's glee club, with 35 girls, will sing at the festival. Grace Giddens, director of vocal music, will direct the glee club in competition.

Iowa City will also enter a girls' sextette in the vocal division. Singing in the sextette will be Gwendolyn Pratt and Beth Livezey, first soprano; Alma Ruth Findly and Betty Martin, second soprano; Katherine Reeds and Doris Gaffler, altos.

Other Groups
Other group entries will be the chamber groups of brass and woodwind instruments. The brass group will consist of Richard Cambridge and Charles Beckman, cornets; Ralph Dunlap, French horn; Vernal Wagner, trombone; William Swisher, baritone-euphonium, and Donald Graham, bass horn.

Playing in the woodwind group will be Josephine Sidwell, oboe; Dorothy Schrock, flute; John Webster (See Page FIVE, No. 1)

Council Favors City Manager, Says Swisher

"The present city council favors a city manager type of government," declared Alderman Jacob A. Swisher to the Iowa City League of Women Voters at their monthly meeting yesterday afternoon.

"If Iowa Citizens would like to try the plan, A petition to the mayor signed by 25 per cent of the voters at the last municipal election would bring about a special election," he said.

"At this election," he asserted, "the voters can decide for or against the plan. If the ballot were favorable, an election of council members would take place somewhat later."

Speaking on "Some Aspects of Municipal Government," Alderman Swisher traced the development of the city manager system as it arose from the commission plan which Galveston, Tex., adopted around 1900 after finding it successful in handling a flood emergency.

"I believe the chief objection of many citizens to the plan would be an objection to the high salary necessary for a well-trained city manager," he asserted. "While there might be an apparent increase in expenditures because of the manager's high salary, he would more than earn his salary by bringing about other reductions."

Cook Argues Power Case

The Iowa City company charged that if, through a federally-financed municipal plant, the city were lost as a customer, it would be unable to continue service to nearby corporate customers.

Iowa City Light Co. Fights PWA Funds For M.O.L. Plant

WASHINGTON, April 20 (AP)— Counsel for the Iowa City Light and Power company presented arguments in the District of Columbia supreme court today against use of PWA funds for municipal plants, along with suits of four other private concerns.

Reduced 50 Per Cent
Asserting that the company has reduced its service charges 50 per cent since it acquired the small electric distribution system in operation since 1912, the Iowa concern's attorney, Wayne Cook, argued the proposed new municipal plant would be unlawful because it was not authorized by the state.

He said Iowa law permits a city council to establish municipal plants by popular vote, but that it was not mandatory for the council to proceed. He declared that prior to the application for a PWA loan and grant totalling $917,000, elections had been held on the question of a municipal plant and action was tabled.

Oregon High School Lad Wins Eddie Cantor Peace Prize

Owen W. Matthews III, a high school graduate of 615 N. Ainsworth street, Portland, Ore., is the winner of the Eddie Cantor $5,000 peace scholarship competition, it is announced by the radio and screen star. The previous winner having been disqualified, the prize was awarded to the contestant who received the second highest number of votes from the judges.

The judges were Robert M. Hutchins, University of Chicago; Frederick Bertrand Robinson, College of the City of New York; Ray Lyman Wilbur, Leland Stanford University; and Henry Noble MacCracken of Vassar college.

In the final elimination of 14 letters, each of which was designated to the judges only by a number, Owen's essay on "How Can America Stay Out of War?" stood in second place. The judges based their decision on the quality of "the most constructive, sincere and interesting letter, regardless of fancy writing and technical knowledge."

Young Matthews is an Eagle Scout. He was graduated from high school in Portland in June, 1935, and is now employed in Portland by Swift and company. Though he had wanted to enter college, financial circumstances did not permit it.

Colleges Aid Flood Sufferers

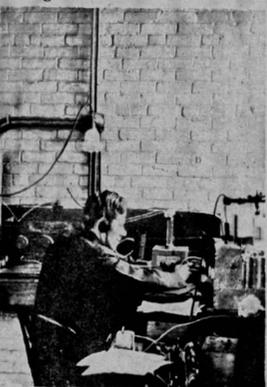

UNIVERSITIES and colleges in eastern United States were thrown into turmoil when the raging waters of swollen rivers flooded their campuses, cut off water and electricity. Classes became irregular, and many were poorly attended because of difficulty in reaching campus buildings and because of students' interest in flood activities. Many institutions threw their buildings open to flood refugees and aided in their care.
