Writer Believes a Rebirth of League Will Result From Italian Conquest

(Editor's note: Frank H. King, veteran foreign correspondent and chief of the London bureau of the Associated Press, in the following story outlines the reaction of European league powers to Italy's conquest of Ethiopia and its possible consequences.)

By FRANK H. KING Associated Press Foreign Staff LONDON, May 5 (AP)—Europe will take a realistic view of Italy's triumph in Ethiopia, will accept the facts and face them. No continental problems will be solved by this, but they will not be made worse nor will the danger of an European war be made more serious immediately by Il Duce's victory and the "king of kings" flight.

Court Quashes 31 Indictments Against Iowans

Cedar Rapids Editor Views Action As 'To Be Expected'

DES MOINES, May 5 (AP)—A state supreme court decision holding their indictments invalid disposed today of the cases of 31 defendants remaining from among 48 a grand jury charged took part in craft and official corruption "extending into Iowa's statehouse."

But an aggressive 47-year-old Iowa editor, whose campaign against crime brought their indictment only last night, the Pulitzer prize for meritorious public service, viewed the court action as "to be expected."

Vernon Marshall, editor of the Cedar Rapids Gazette, in a statement today termed the Pulitzer committee's recognition of the Gazette "an answer to anyone who interprets the supreme court ruling as a vindication of the crowd indicted at Sioux City many months ago."

'The War Is Ended'

"The war is ended," he proclaimed. More cheers reverberated against the dun colored walls of the Venezia palace and the gleaming white columns of the national monument to the dead of previous wars.

All fascist Italy was summoned into an "adunata," or mass mobilization, when word was flashed the conquering Italian army had occupied Addis Ababa.

Il Duce made clear that it was a "Roman peace"—one in which Italy would dictate the terms.

Tidings of Victory

The dictator stood silhouetted against two tremendous floodlights as he gave the nation the tidings of victory.

He read the terse communique from Marshal Pietro Badoglio, commander in chief of the African armies, which said:

"Today, May 5, at 4 p. m. (6:30 a. m. central standard time) at the head of the victorious troops, I entered Addis Ababa."

COURT UPHOLDS METHOD OF 3-POINT TAX LAW

DES MOINES, May 5 (AP)—The Iowa supreme court today upheld the method of passage of the three point tax law under which an estimated $16,000,000 is collected annually in sales taxes and personal and corporation net income taxes.

The court declared that through adoption of a conference committee report reconciling amendments of the Iowa house and senate the act was adopted in a constitutional manner.

The ruling, which upheld a Marshall county district court decision, set a precedent for cases in which laws are attacked on the method of passage.

Two cases now pending before the court challenge constitutionality of the state's gasoline tax law and the liquor control act upon the method of passage.

Cheers For The Victors

Marshall Offers Warriors Thanks With Tears in Eyes

By EDWARD J. NEIL (Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press)

ADDIS ABABA, May 5 (AP)—The victorious Italian forces of Field Marshal Pietro Badoglio occupied the riot-torn capital city of Ethiopia today amid the cheers of native and foreign residents.

The long line of motor trucks which has surged over the mountainous roads in the final Italian advance from Dessse rolled into the devastated city this afternoon.

The enthusiastic greetings of the population welcomed the fascist soldiers with a feeling of security after four days and nights of the wildest experience.

Reopens Italian Legation

The Italian commander formally reopened the Italian legation and addressed his warriors, thanking them for their heroic efforts in arriving at the principal city of Emperor Haile Selassie's kingdom.

The motor cavalcade of 30,000 soldiers and 1,000 trucks entered the city at about 4 p. m. local time (7 a. m. CST). The blackshirt warriors found the French sisters mission in flames and much of the city sacked.

The American legation staff and their friends had been driven to the British legation, which was guarded by barbed wire entanglements.

The Italian troops were fired on by brigands from the eucalyptus groves on the outskirts of the city but there were no casualties.

Offers Thanks to Men

With tears in his eyes, Marshal Badoglio offered his thanks to his warriors, finally victorious in their drive on the capital through the rocky terrain of northern Ethiopia.

He kissed the aviation general on both cheeks.

"We made it," Badoglio said. "Is the war over?" I asked the field marshal.

"There is no enemy," he answered. "Therefore this must be the end."

Vice Consul Notifies Washington of Firing On Legation From Behind Fences; Attackers Retire After Brisk 5-Minute Skirmish

WASHINGTON, May 5 (AP)—The American legation at Addis Ababa asked for help from the Italian army which now occupies the Ethiopian capital after an unexpected attack by marauding natives tonight.

Vice Consul William M. Cramp, who returned to the legation late today after arrival of the vanguard of the conquering Italian forces radioed the state department of the attack on the legation at 6:35 p. m.

The message was dispatched at 11 p. m., Addis Ababa time (1:20 p. m. central standard time).

Cramp's message said: "Suddenly at about 10:20 p. m. (Addis Ababa time) the legation was fired upon from behind the fences on the northern side.

"The entire quarter began a continuous firing and the legation personnel concentrated a heavy return fire on the side of the attack. After about five minutes the attackers retired.

"As it would appear that the Italian troops have not occupied this side of town and are probably more than a mile away in its center, I have decided to request an armed guard for the legation for the night and am sending a car heavily armed to the city headquarters.

"At present this quarter is fairly quiet."

4 Miles From British Legation

(The American legation is situated some distance from the center of Addis Ababa, being almost four miles distant from the British legation, which is on the fringe of the city's legation quarter.)

The attack tonight—after Italian forces had taken possession of the city and established headquarters in the Italian legation late this afternoon—was the third to be made during the continuous three day siege the little band of fighting diplomats and sailors have withstood.

Cornelius H. Van Ensart, the American minister, and his wife presumably were at the fortified British legation where they went this morning when the attack came.

Respond to Request Cramp informed the state department in a message filed at 1 a. m., May 6, Addis Ababa time, that the Italian minister had responded to his request for aid by sending 50 men under the command of a captain and lieutenant.

He added that he thought the situation would be "entirely under control by morning."

His message said: "Italian headquarters at the palace have sent me captain, lieutenant and 50 men.

"I have placed them outside the legation compound.

"They inform me the nearest occupying force is six and one-quarter miles away.

"I think that by morning the situation will be entirely under control. "The city is now calm with only an occasional shot."

Suggestion

EACH YEAR THE graduating class of the university leaves a gift. Many times the cost of this gift to the university runs into four figures. Some of the more outstanding class gifts have been the Mark Twain room at Iowa Union, the balcony in Iowa Union, and the paintings in children's hospital.

This year we offer as a suggestion to the senior committee a memorial to Oran Pope as a fitting gift of the senior classes. The memorial could be in the form of a scholarship fund for outstanding athletes of good character and good scholarship records. Or, perhaps, the committee would feel that a more fitting gesture would be the erection of a statue at the south end of the Iowa stadium.

There are several sculptors of ability on the campus at the present time. Such a project would entail too great an amount of money. In addition, the statue might serve a double purpose. It would give recognition to Iowa as a growing center of art besides providing an excellent monument to this courageous patriot.

"START ON THE bottom rung of the ladder." That was the advice of Mrs. Ida Migliario, editor of Household magazine, given to prospective graduates of the university at a recent joint meeting of Sigma Delta Chi and Theta Sigma Phi, honorary professional journalism societies.

From her own personal experience, she emphasized that one can gain more valuable background from such a beginning than by depending on a college record to leap into the middle of the ladder with a head start. If one does have the advantages of greater talent and ability, he will soon become apparent, and he can capitalize on them to obtain his ultimate goal just as rapidly, and much more thoroughly, than by omitting the earlier rungs.

Petty professional jealousies, which frequently occur, can be avoided by starting humbly at the bottom and working upward through recognition for work well done, an important matter when the unbusinessness of a superior at approaching steady demotion or failure to rise further. By beginning at the bottom, one does not advance over the injured pride and ambitions of an older worker, and instead of bitter rivalry, a friendly camaraderie may be expected to develop.

By starting over one's head, one may make just the opposite impression from that desired, and instead of being pushed forward, will be pushed back, an occurrence which may impede progress indefinitely.

But the point which Mrs. Migliario had in mind more than any other was that by starting at the bottom, the ambitious worker finds an opportunity to learn the field from the ground floor up. Such a knowledge is now of extreme importance due to the added complications of modern business and industry, and in view of the necessity for knowing the reactions of the mine and lesser known employees of the firm, as well as those of the interested public.

Mrs. Migliario made an important observation, one that applies not only to students of journalism, but also with equal significance, to prospective entrants in practically every other field.

Students Turn Politicians: MONDAY UNIVERSITY students, or many of them at least, went to the polls in Iowa Union lobby and voted for their favorites for Union Board and Student Board of Publications. It was one of the few genuine examples of student interest in their own affairs.

To some who voted, the election was merely a means of doing their bit for a friend whose name had been placed on the ballot. To others it represented a battle between fraternity functions. To a sadly small number, it was a chance to put into office those who were best fitted. By these remarks we do not intend to question the results or the merits of those elected. As far as we know all the candidates were equally well qualified to hold the positions.

It was great fun to watch the "party leaders" marshal their forces. They distributed handbills, they furnished transportation, they even passed out cigars. With most of them it was "give and take and may the best man win."

It is, however, an opportune time to say that it might be a wise idea to forbid campaigning within 50 or 100 feet of the polls. There appeared to be quite a little pressure brought on a few who were unwilling to quarrel and who voted as some overzealous back-slapper insisted. Every student should have the right to privacy when casting his or her vote.

Then, too, we would like to rebuke those who went so far as to question the honesty of those who were to count the ballots. In both elections the retiring members of the boards served as counters. It is conceivable that these members had personal interests in the election, but it is scarcely probable that they would attempt to "stuff the box" or to miscount the ballots. Those few persons who demanded the right to help count ballots were insulting the retiring members. But all in all it was a successful election. If it accomplished nothing else it shook the student body from its customary lethargy. That is quite a task. We hope there will be more elections like it in the future.

The Spirit Of Pioneering

ABOUT A YEAR ago 200 of our middle western families, beaten and discouraged by the depression, ventured westward and northward. Pioneering into Alaska, these adventurers accepted the challenge of the bleak and hitherto non-productive area and began at once to prepare for themselves a district that would preserve their life, their peace, their happiness. It was a gambler's chance, and they were forced to be gamblers.

Since that time they have accomplished a great deal. More than 150 families of the original 200 are still on the job. Eugene Carr, who is just back from there and is now in Washington, believes that the "weak brothers and sisters" have been disposed of and that those remaining are of the determined pioneering stock who will see the job finished. They will not permit discouragement and hardships to hinder them in their project.

Already the colonists have erected 175 houses, 123 barns, 188 wells, and 82 miles of road. A community center has been established which includes a trading post, a warehouse, a garage, a wood working shop, a power house, and a farm machinery storage building, a combination barber shop and shoe store, a postoffice, a gymnasium, hospital and other buildings. A public school is near completion and a cannery is about to be started along with a cold storage warehouse and a radio signal station for the United States signal corps. Reports show that there will be over 1,000 acres cultivated for planting this year, and preparations are taking form to boost this acreage to almost 3,000 next year.

These American pioneers in Alaska have gone far and they have conquered many barriers. They deserve no limited amount of praise. We who are remaining in the United States can learn a lesson from our adventurous brothers. There is still vast room for improvement in our own vicinity. Let us accept the spirit of progress as have the Alaskan colonists.

What Others Think

STUDENTS AND faculties alike may congratulate themselves on the manner in which peace demonstrations were conducted on American college campuses this week. Indeed, cooperation by university officials, which in the past has too often been wisely withheld, this year made the word "strike" a misnomer for many of the gatherings. Notable speakers addressed the students, who for the most part showed themselves orderly and earnest advocates of peace. The relatively few cases of disorder appear to have resulted from attacks on the peace groups by student gangs otherwise minded.

One of the chief objections to student peace demonstrations has been that they exploit the same emotional elements that are latent causes of war hysteria—that the leaders have had to rely on the promise of excitement and on an appeal to the readiness of young people to exhibit an adolescent independence of restraint. The students have answered such criticism by pointing out that those who could help them make the student peace movement effective have often thwarted, or at best ignored, its efforts.

This year's "strikes" have been most striking because they have shown that cause for criticism either of students, or of faculties and school administrations, is lessening. On the one hand, students have shown a willingness to listen to

A Washington Bystander

WASHINGTON — The Landon write-in vote in the Massachusetts and Pennsylvania primaries sharply emphasizes this. The rank and file of republican voters in the east seems agreed that their presidential nominee must hail from the west. It is true that apparently not more than one out of any 10 Massachusetts republican primary voters expressed a presidential preference. Yet when 75,000 or more did take the trouble to write in Landon's name to give him a 10-to-1 margin over any other write-in beneficiary, Landon took certainly went up.

With California and Ohio next to be heard from in the preferential primary schedule, there soon will be some opportunity to compare notes on the growth of the Landon boom east and west. Western republicans certainly agree with their eastern brethren that a westerner must carry the party banner; but they may not be so keen about a westerner with so decided indications of eastern picking. Where the Borah challenge to eastern republican leadership is particularly appealing in the west, that eastern Landon vote could prove a liability.

An Interesting Notion: However that may turn out, the Massachusetts primary vote blocked in a much intensified background for the Landon boom. It drew from Governor Landon himself the comment that it should "give heart to the whole country" because it reflected something more than the "personal factor" bearing on himself. "It should be regarded," the governor said, "as an expression of the voters' approval of an administrative record that seems to them in contrast to that of the new deal."

A New Yorker At Large

By JACK STINNETT: NEW YORK—In the heart of crowded Manhattan, there thrives a weekly newspaper as homey as an Old Settlers' picnic, as chatty as Mrs. McGonagle's morning gossip with Bridget O'Connor over the back fence, and as bucolic as the mudsill County Bugle. It is The Villager, which this week is celebrating its third anniversary to the accompaniment of much community singing of praises but no notice whatever from the metropolitan dailies. If there are any misconceptions that Greenwich Village is an iniquitous Bohemia where sin, vice and long-haired artists run rampant, a few hours with The Villager will be illuminating.

Its columns are as friendly as a small town insurance salesman. Bushels of free advertising are dumped into its pages with the helping hand spirit of a good neighbor. "Friends" and "folks" are editorial bywords. On the door of its offices at 10 W. 13th street, there is a sign to the effect that "the latch-string is always out." It points with pride to its contention that Greenwich Village is "the final stronghold of New York family life" . . . that there are 41 churches and 12 private chapels in the community . . . that it has more home owners than any of the other 26 sections of Manhattan . . . that "as a city, its per capita income is exceeded only by Washington, D. C." . . . that is the birthplace of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, grand opera, light opera and New York university . . . that 25 per cent of its population has been occupying the same homes from five to 15 years (a terrific figure in this city of floating residents) . . . and that the population is greater than that of Harrisburg, Pa., Topeka, Kan., St. Joseph, Mo., or Pasadena, Cal.

The founders, publishers and editors of The Villager are Walter G. Bryan and his sister, Isabel Bryan. They were born in Fulton, Mo. Bryan, after military academy and the University of Missouri school of journalism, worked on Kansas-City newspapers, the Chicago Tribune, and published the Atlanta Georgian. Miss Bryan went from Mt. Holyoke college into advertising. For years the couple were newspaper counselors.

In Greenwich Village they generally are referred to as "the Bryans." They got the idea of a community paper while talking things over one day in Washington Square. They lacked capital and the depression was heavy on the land but they managed to get started and keep going.

Screen Life

By HUBBARD KEAVY: HOLLYWOOD—Nearly every motion picture personality has two names—one for the autograph books, the other for checks.

LONG ago, Hollywoodites discovered that two names were necessary. As a consequence, forgery of stars names is practically unknown here. It's Carole Lombard with the "g" in the books and on photographs, but her "bank name" is the correct spelling of her name, without the "g." When Dick Powell scrawls his bold signature across a page at the request of an admirer, it is his own name he is writing, but it is not the same name that the teller at the bank will honor. That name is "Richard E. Powell."

Gail Patrick is Margaret Fitzpatrick, her real name, at the bank. The signature, "Harry Lillis Crosby," means much on checks, but its owner always signs his better known name, Bing Crosby, for the autograph seekers. Charles Ruggie prints his autograph, but his check and legal papers bear the same name in almost illegible script.

"Muni Weisenfreund" At Bank: Paul Muni is free enough with his signature, but financially it has no standing. His legal signature reads "Muni Weisenfreund." There is no bank account in the name of "Bette Davis"—the lady who bears that screen name is "Mrs. Harmon O. Nelson" on the checks.

Many players' checks are signed and countersigned. James Cagney has no other name, but his checks always are countersigned by a business manager. Gary Cooper's checks aren't worth a cent, unless they also bear the name of Jack Moss, Gary's business manager. Joe E. Brown doesn't sign checks. Kathryn Brown, Mrs. Joe E., pays all the bills.

Reconciliation Present: A California orange ranch will be Ketti Gallen's "reconciliation present" to her parents should the reconciliation she is trying to effect between them come to pass.

The French actress' father, Victor Gallen, all operator of Nice, is making preparations to visit his daughter in Hollywood. Ketti's mother, with whom she lives, and her father were divorced 16 years ago. Ketti has been trying for years to reunite her parents, but it wasn't until a few days ago that her father agreed to come to America.

University Symphony To Present Third Formal Concert

The premier performance of symphony in E minor by Prof. Harry Thatcher Jr. of the music department will be featured in the third formal concert for 1935-36 by the university symphony orchestra tonight at 8 o'clock in Iowa Union lounge.

Directed by Prof. Frank Estes Kendrie of the music department, the orchestra also will play Mozart's D major symphony (KV 385) and Dvorak's "Carnaval Overture."

Professor Thatcher, whose symphony was written as a partial requirement for the Ph.D. degree he received here in 1933, has taken all his training in the university, with the exception of a year of study in Europe. He holds the position of assistant professor and piano and theory instructor in the music department.

Dedicated to Prof. Philip G. Clapp, head of the music department, the symphony was suggested to the composer by a short story, "The Song of the Tomblaine," by Donald Cory. The emotional atmosphere and dramatic structure of the tale of passion and gallantry in a mythical kingdom form the basis for the work.

Among Professor Thatcher's compositions for piano are a sonata, a quintet and short pieces. He has written for string and vocal groups as well.

Free tickets for the concert may be obtained at Iowa Union desk.

It read—"Know all men by these presents that the board of regents by virtue of the authority vested in them by the state of Minnesota have conferred upon . . ." The auxiliary verb "have" and the pronoun "them" refer to the singular subject "board" and this should require a singular verb and pronoun.

The matter has been referred to the board of regents by the graduate. At the next meeting of the body, consideration of the discrepancy will be the first order of business.

Commemorate Centennial Of First Newspaper in Iowa

The first newspaper in what is now Iowa was published May 11, 1836. It was the Du Buque Visitor, with date-line "Du Buque (Lead Mines) Wisconsin Territory."

The centennial of the issue of the first newspaper in what is now Iowa on May 11, 1836 will be commemorated next week.

No news was printed on page one. Half of the six columns contained a selection from a popular novel, and the remainder had essays on woman's love, religion, education, and ingratitude.

"Truth Our Guide, the Public Good Our Aim" was Editor King's motto for his new paper. Subscriptions were three dollars per year in advance.

Commemoration of the centennial has been arranged by the school of journalism at the University of Iowa and includes the publication of special historical numbers of Palimpsest and the Iowa Publisher, a commemorative all-state meeting in Des Moines by Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic fraternity, and the publication of centennial material by Iowa newspapers.

Approve Road Improvements

County Board Sanctions Allotment for Use On Road Program

Extensive road improvements totaling $211,529.85 were approved here yesterday morning by the Johnson county board of approval. A total of $417,645.85 was allotted, the remainder to be used for interest and retirement of bonds in a three-year Johnson county road program.

The board, composed of representatives of the 21 township trustee groups and the three members of the county board of supervisors, by a 23 to 4 vote approved the program arranged by County Engineer Ray H. Justen.

In 1935, when the program is completed, the county trunk road system of 143.93 miles will be completely surfaced. The present program calls for the grading and surfacing of 29.49 miles of county trunk roads and the grading of 44.85 miles of local county roads.

Seven per cent of the entire 1,166.75 miles of Johnson county road system will be improved, according to the program. Upon completion of the program, 46.85 miles of local county roads will be graded and 58.79 miles surfaced, leaving 794.63 miles of unimproved roads.

The program includes the improvement of the county trunk system of 143.93 miles and the primary system of state roads in Johnson county which totals 101.55 miles. Cherrington Cites Issues

Discussing "Major Issues Before the Public Today," Prof. Homer V. Cherrington of the college of commerce told the Kiwanis club at its luncheon at the Jefferson hotel yesterday. "... it is my belief that a great deal of our present difficulties are caused by monopolistic enterprises that are not subject to public regulation.

"In the United States we have found a house divided against itself. On one hand is the farmer who finds it difficult to combine against depressions," he said. "On the other hand are the industries who met the depression by cutting their volume of output and thus providing an emergency control over themselves."

Professor Cherrington cited methods of dealing with the problem of regulating price levels. Selective price raising, he said, is in the form of our protective tariff somewhat, but if one group under this system should be satisfied another group is sure to pay higher prices. This would lead to higher taxes placed on the satisfied group who would have to take care of those who could not pay the prices," he said.

Guests at the luncheon were E. A. Chappell with William F. Wade; Harry Johnson of Des Moines with Prof. Forest C. Ensign of the college of education; Edward Hall and Frank Heglin of New York, and Roscoe Taylor with President Jay J. McNamara.

Says Everyone On Relief Rolls Should Work

Everyone on government relief rolls or receiving supplementary government aid must take part in the relief garden projects begun here, it was announced yesterday by Joe O'Leary, Johnson county garden director, on an order issued by the Iowa State state relief administration.

Increased production to raise the total of $20,000 made here last year in a similar project was urged last night by Mr. O'Leary.

Orders for seeds, seed potatoes and garden plots are now being issued at the office of the garden director, room B-12, University hall, daily from 1 to 5 p. m. and on Saturday from 8 a. m. to 12 noon. An additional number of lots for anyone needing more is available, and persons needing an additional supply of seeds or a second order can obtain them now.

Persons who are employed, but who have had relief before, should have gardens, and those who will again apply for relief will experience difficulty in getting help unless gardens measuring up to the requirements have been provided, Mr. O'Leary said. Lots are now being issued to such cases on the schoolhouse tract east of the city in addition to the regular assignment of lots to those already on relief.

A new route to the garden plot east of the city has also been announced. A new roadway will lead into the field from the end of College street which will make all gardens available to automobiles to facilitate the moving of tools and produce.

Tomato and cabbage plants will not be purchased for the subsistence gardens this year but will be grown in a large hotbed which has been constructed at the Johnson county farm west of here.

The only machine of its kind

500 camshafts can be inspected every hour by an automatic machine which has been designed and built by the Ford Motor Company. It is the only one of its kind. It has a gaging accuracy of one ten-thousandth of an inch.

It gages Ford camshafts at 25 points. Any dimension not within the specified limits causes electrical and mechanical devices to reject the camshaft as it leaves the machine.

There are ten inspection stations. The camshafts are placed in registered position in carriers mounted on an endless linked conveyor and carried into the machine. At each station the conveyor stops momentarily. Automatic centers engage the ends of the camshafts and hold them rigidly. Then 25 floating gage heads lower automatically, measure the shafts, then rise. As the conveyor moves the shafts to the next station, other mechanism rotates and indexes them for the next set of gage heads.

The gage heads contain hard-alloy-tipped measuring plungers which are linked to amplifying levers. Variations in shaft sizes, beyond set limits, close a set of contact points which operate two solenoids. One sets the rejection mechanism; the other raises a marking plunger which puts a daub of copper sulphate solution on the shaft where the dimension is over or under size.

When shafts come out of machine they are automatically passed or rejected. All told, there are 54 inspections on every Ford V-8 camshaft.

TRAFFIC GOAT-GETTERS

THE ROAD HOG
He's traffic Goat-Getter No. 1, is the familiar road-hog, but if you ever accuse him of it he will elevate his eyebrows disdainfully and say: "Who?—Me?" He prides himself on tending to his own business, overlooking the basic law of traffic that you must give some attention to the other fellow's business, too. So he sails along, blithely ignorant of the fact that he is straddling the line and jeopardizing human life. It's wise to let him have all the room he wants, for it is extremely difficult to get the idea into his thick dome that highways are built for other folks to ride on, too.

BITS ABOUT SPORTS

By HAROLD REED
THERE IS A DYING WALKER being given a new lease on life on this campus. This carcass is called "school spirit" for want of a better name and the newly injected life blood is being brought about through the organization of a completely rejuvenated "I" club.

SO THE "I" CLUB HAS BEEN revived. It will be a strong, potent force on the campus if it is conducted rightly, and as it has the wholehearted backing of the athletic heads, this is already assured. More than anything else that has been accomplished here for years will it help stem the exodus of disgruntled athletes.

It is no secret here that the athletic department is regarded as a point when compared with the lush setup of competing universities. Thus, steps have been taken to form a nucleus upon which the athletes can lean when in need of help.

Hawk Golf Team Leaves For Meets With Gophers, Carleton

Miller, Crack No. 2 Linksman, Unable To Go With Mates
Coach Charles Kennett, University of Iowa golf coach, will pack six ambitious golfers into cars this morning on a trip that will take them through meets at the Gopher stronghold in Minneapolis Friday and a meet with Carleton the day after.

Chances of victory for the Iowa team were given a severe blow when it was found that Frank Miller, No. 3 man on the team, would be unable to make the trip. Robert Brown, who will go instead, should show up well when he takes the regular's place in the lineup. He has been in good form.

Although little is known of Carleton's strength, it is safe to say that Minnesota will have another powerful aggregation. Couple this with the disadvantage the Hawks will experience in playing on a strange course, and it seems the Iowa linksman are in for a hard battle.

If the local team continues to show the brand of golf that has been played in practice rounds, another Big Ten victory should be added to the win over Wisconsin last Saturday.

The six golfers making the trip are: Captain Jim Gardner, George Cook, Dick Ruge, Gordon Sheldy, Robert Brown and Don Fulk. Gardner is undefeated as yet in competition this year, and in the whole squad of Hawkeyes has accounted for a larger percentage of wins than losses. The team will return to Iowa City Sunday.

A.A.U. Men's Greedy Tactics Sicken Kansan

Mentor Brands A.A.U. Cage Directors As 'Olympic Chislers'
LAWRENCE, Kan., May 5 (AP)—Denouncing A.A.U. officials as "oceanic hitch-hikers on the other fellow's money," Dr. F. C. "Phog" Allen, outspoken athletic director at the University of Kansas, resigned today as director of the United States Olympic basketball team.

"This ambitious A.A.U. group of quadrilateral Olympic oceanic hitch-hikers chisel their way across every four years on the other fellow's money," protested the veteran Kansas coach whose team was undefeated in Big Six competition this year. The Kansans lost in the Olympic tryouts.

Allen, who with Romney Berry of Cornell and L. W. St. John of Ohio State, was instrumental in having basketball included on the Olympics calendar, declared he "found satisfaction enough in the achievement without thought of personal reward."

"However, the collegiate group serving on the joint committee with the A.A.U. members saw fit to honor me with the appointment as director of Olympic basketball."

"The A.A.U. group ground their own axes," Allen said. The Kansas-Utah Olympic tryout series in Kansas City "proved to be the financial straw wagon on which the Olympic basketball contingent will travel to Berlin."

The series, he declared, grossed better than $10,000 and netted nearly $5,000, "while a week or so before the Missouri Valley A.A.U. tournament," also held in Kansas City, "grossed less than $700 and three nights—thereby showing the difference in public favor between college and independent basketball."

Some for Olympic Fund
The $6,000 revenue from the national A.A.U. basketball tournament at Denver last March was used to pay the annual administrative expenses of the A.A.U. in New York City and Chicago," he charged. "Not a cent was contributed to the Olympic fund."
