28-Year-Old Man Charged With $50,000 Stoll Kidnaping Is Captured Without Resistance

Robinson Rushed by G-Men to Louisville, Ky., By Airplane; Readily Admits Identity To Officers; Was Armed With Revolver

GLENDALE, Cal., May 11 (AP)—Thomas H. Robinson Jr., sought for two years for the $50,000 kidnaping of Mrs. Alice Stoll of Louisville, Ky., was captured here tonight by department of justice agents and was started for Louisville immediately on a special airplane.

The agents took Robinson into custody without resistance, although he was armed with a .38 caliber pistol.

Four department of justice men boarded a plane chartered from an airline with their prisoner. The ship took off from Grand Central terminal at 7:30 p.m. (Iowa City time).

Stops were planned at Albuquerque and Kansas City, Mo., with the plane scheduled to reach Louisville in 11 hours flying time.

Shackled to Captors
Robinson was dressed in a dark business suit when he was taken aboard the ship. He was shackled to his captors, by handcuff and leg irons.

Although often using the disguise of a woman, Robinson for the last two months had been known here as "John Simons."

Robinson had $4,560 on his person when arrested, of which $4,200 was kidnap ransom money, agents said.

WASHINGTON, May 11 (AP)—Thomas H. Robinson Jr., last big quarry of federal agents, was arrested tonight at Glendale, Cal., for the alleged kidnaping of a Louisville, Ky., society woman.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the bureau of investigation, announced to reporters that Robinson had been captured after a two-year hunt for the man charged with the kidnaping of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll.

With Robinson's capture, the federal agents wiped clean their major "wanted" list. In a week and a half, the last of the notorious kidnap suspects have been captured.

They are: Alvin Karpis, Harry Campbell and William Mahan. Robinson, known as a "lone wolf" criminal, had been hunted by "G-men" nearly two years since the $50,000 kidnaping of Mrs. Stoll, wife of Berry V. Stoll, Louisville, Ky., oil man, and niece of Frederic M. Sackett, former United States senator and former ambassador to Germany.

Unlike the gang kidnapers, Robinson had no underworld cronies or confidants. His practice of appearing in the disguise of a woman made the chase doubly hard. He had once been confined to an insane asylum.

"Nothing To Say"
NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 11 (AP)—Thomas H. Robinson Sr., retired engineer and now an employe of the state planning commission, refused to comment tonight when advised that his kidnap-son had been caught in California.

After asking where his son was captured and if he was safe, the elder Robinson said: "No, I have nothing to say."

PRIMARIES WILL TEST STRENGTH OF BORAH TODAY
(By The Associated Press)
A declaration by Senator Borah (R-Idaho) that he would continue to fight what he called the republican "old guard" focused additional interest today upon the test of the senator's presidential strength in the key state of Ohio.

Presidential primaries in the Buckeye state today gave republicans a choice between Borah and Robert A. Taft, son of the late president and chief justice, who is running as a "favorite son" with the backing of the regular party organization.

Simultaneous democratic primaries found President Roosevelt opposed again by Henry Breckinridge of New York, who was defeated by the chief executive in similar primaries in Pennsylvania and Maryland.

J. Edgar Hoover
Credit for the grand drive against criminals is given to J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the federal bureau of investigation.

In a week and one-half, he has personally directed the capture of Alvin Karpis, Harry Campbell, William Mahan, and last night, Thomas H. Robinson Jr.

Iowa Business Better - Davies

Iowa Professor Blames Lack of Confidence For Slow Recovery

A gradual forward movement in early spring has brightened several lines of Iowa business—but the situation in the state might be even better if there were less interference with the usual processes.

Prof. George R. Davies, writing in the current issue of the Iowa Business Digest, publication of the college of commerce, blames lack of confidence for the lethargic recovery.

Progressive Economy
He states that an advanced civilization would continuously re-invest its full productive capacity of capital and labor in a balanced progressive economy and believes that activity might surpass pre-depression levels if confidence leading to a normal flow of investment could be established.

"Probably at the root of the present confusion and lack of confidence lies erroneous thinking. It is a time when economic fallacies flourish," Professor Davies declares.

"The first heresy from which we have suffered is that prosperity might be regained by a limitation of production. Temporary limitation may sometimes be justified in certain fields, but general limitation cuts down real income and both wages and profits suffer. This fallacy is passing," he said.

Second Heresy
A second heresy advocates wasteful spending. Saving may be badly allocated, so that a particular activity is overdone, but the cure is not waste—it is a transfer of investment to other fields. Thrift is still a cardinal virtue, and wasteful spending, unproductive debts, and the like are still burdens on prosperity, according to Professor Davies.

Professor Davies states that (See Page Eight No. 1)

An Incentive To Creative Thinking

THE EXTENT to which creative thinking is recognized here is far too small. More recognition should be given, for example, to undergraduate achievement.

Last week's recognition of this fact was shown by the Order of Artus, honorary economics society, in announcing an annual essay contest.

The purpose of the contest is twofold: to provide an incentive for undergraduates to engage in creative and constructive writing and to stimulate interest among undergraduates in economic science and economic problems.

It seems a shame that love and devotion should take a back seat in one's decision to marry. We would hate to see a world that accepted Hitler's revolutionary ideas in regard to this sacred ceremony.

On Fishing

WARM MAY DAYS coupled with a gentle breeze from the south are spreading "fisherman's itch" these days. The symptoms of the malady are the getting out of the rod and reel from its winter resting place.

There is no sport that can compare with fishing. It is a sport for the lazy, the tired or the thrill-seekers. It isn't everybody who can cast a fly, but everybody can fish.

Politics In California

AS TIME passes by, after that first sudden shock from California, the discovery that Hearst and Landon were beaten in the republican primaries by an unpledged ticket of delegates backed by former President Herbert Hoover, it begins to appear as though the results do not indicate quite what they seemed to.

It is said by some, for instance, that the contest was purely to determine the relative unpopularity of Newspaper Tycoon William Randolph Hearst and Mr. Hoover, with the apparent result that Hoover is not so unpopular in California as Hearst, at least not in the eyes of the G. O. P. primary voters.

According to this line of thought, the future of Gov. Alf M. Landon was only a very minor issue in the titanic struggle waged between the conservative republican press as led by Publisher Harry Chandler's ultra-conservative Los Angeles Times and the Hearst papers represented by the San Francisco Examiner, and Governor Landon's managers are quick to point out that, as far as Governor Landon is concerned, the result doesn't make any difference one way or another.

What Others Think

MORE OPPOSITION NEEDED AT WASHINGTON

The deliberations of congress in recent weeks have been noteworthy for the number of empty seats in evidence during the sessions. Debate on the $800,000,000 tax bill, for instance, drew a house attendance of slightly less than 10 per cent.

Now this obviously is not a healthy state of affairs. The essence of good representative government is a legislature which debates thoroughly and intelligently, with an active opposition ready to act as a brake on the majority.

Certainly the minority cannot justify its existence if it does not present itself at the scene of battle; and by the same token it is equally hard to excuse the majority for its mass indifference.

The public has a right to expect more than that from its Washington representatives.—Spencer Daily Reporter.

Nazi Matrimony - A Test of Courage

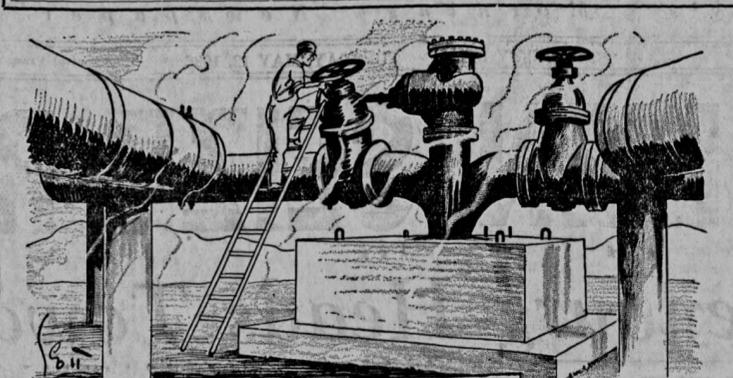

ALL NATIONS are characterized by the traditions that they uphold. Hitler has done much in re-establishing old German traditions. He has also created numerous new doctrines by which his people should discipline themselves.

His most recent action is to turn his Nazi nation into a compulsory matrimonial bureau. Marriage in his estimation is "a mark of courage." Any man reaching the age of 26 years will not be recognized as an individual qualified for leadership unless he is married.

Such is the case in Germany today, the nation of marriages and large families. But an age-old matrimonial ideal has been shattered. No longer, according to the Nazi chief, should a man select a companion to ease the burdens and to share the hardships through life.

It seems a shame that love and devotion should take a back seat in one's decision to marry. We would hate to see a world that accepted Hitler's revolutionary ideas in regard to this sacred ceremony.

A Washington Bystander

WASHINGTON — The Breckinridge "protest" primary vote against Roosevelt new dealism having been recorded in Maryland and Maryland, determining its election significance is in order. It certainly does not imply any convention troubles for the president since he emerges from that test with the Pennsylvania and Maryland delegations to the Philadelphia meeting safely in the bag by margins too great to warrant a contest.

What then does it all show as to election probabilities? Colonel Breckinridge indulged in the primary contest, presumably, for the purpose of disclosing that there was a protesting faction in the democratic party. He certainly could not have been disappointed that he failed to gather in any delegates; but was the percentage of the protest vote recorded for him up to his hopes?

A New Yorker

At Large

By JACK STINNETT

NEW YORK—We've been pushed about by too many subway employees not to have a healthy respect for them. But at the top of our list is Boris Kagen, who has never so much as given the nickels a rough shove as he slides them through his cage window below the pavements at Broadway and Lafayette street.

Boris is a sculptor. We have it from him at last. He is the same Boris Kagen who, a few months ago, exhibited some 20 carvings in wood at Contemporary Arts without so much as a whisper that the rough hand of expediency has kept him in a subway change-maker's cage for nearly four years.

Kagen is a tall, bulky Russian, with a kindly, almost cherubic face. He is partially bald, which is premature and makes him look older than he is.

He was born in St. Petersburg, where his father edited a liberal magazine which satirized the opposition. When the revolution came, the senior Kagen found himself too far to the right for comfort, but the family stuck through the first years of chaos.

In 1921, Papa Kagen started a banking business in Berlin. It was caught in the gyrations of the mark, a few years later, though not before young Boris had tried his hand at art and found it to his liking. But the family had to move on and this time to New York.

Here, the Kagen fortunes saw-sawed again, when after an interlude that took young Boris to York, Pa., and a draftsman's job, he and his father opened a "bait" business. Boris designed and executed the brilliant-figured silks himself. The business prospered. There were even dealings with Broadway. The hangings which dazzled first nighters at the premiere of the Hollywood restaurant came from the Kagen menage.

But as Boris explains it, "the style changed," and the bait business, too. Pretty soon there wasn't any. The wrestle with depression ended when Boris joined the ranks of the underground change-makers. He doesn't mind. He finds it gives him time for his carvings and his carvings are his passion. Out of mahogany, maple, rosewood and such, he has fashioned statuettes which show unmistakably traces of influence by African art, and larger-than-life heads and mythological figures that hint of the Asiatic. His last work, however, is a sea gull in flight. The treatment is modern and the result, critics have told him, superior to previous efforts.

Boris gives his time the subway company and his four-year service record attests that he has done his job well, but his thoughts are his own and when business is slack, he is mentally fashioning his figures in wood.

Diction Contest Takes Place On Wednesday

Freshman to Contend For Prizes in Annual Test of Vocabulary

The annual freshman diction contest will be held tomorrow at 7:10 p. m. in the chemistry auditorium. All freshmen are eligible to enter this contest, a special test being given to those of the low group.

The test this year will differ from last year's in that there will be two parts instead of one. The first part, consisting of 50 items, will have a multiple-choice of words with which to complete the sentences, as did last year's quiz. The second part, made up of 20 items, will be a definition test.

First prize will be a copy of Webster's New International Dictionary, and copies of Webster's Collegiate Dictionary will be the second, third, fourth and fifth prizes. These are now on display in general library in Macbride hall. Any contestant is eligible to win any of the prizes, except that the fifth one will be reserved for the high scoring student in the low group.

This contest will have no bearing on English class work. Any student who is unable to start at the given time may still have a chance to complete the work if he is there by 7:30 p. m.

Final Play To Include Cast Numbering 35

With a cast of 35, Maxwell Anderson's "Elizabeth the Queen" will be presented by University theater Thursday at 8 p. m. in Macbride auditorium.

"Elizabeth the Queen" will probably be the last of the community series plays to be given on the stage of Macbride auditorium, since the new dramatic arts building is expected to be ready for use in the fall.

"MAKE TIMID CHILD BOLDER"

Two preschool children are shown here in a typical situation through which children are trained in self confidence. Construction toys like these, plasticene, puzzles and storybooks help them develop skills that overcome timidity.

Modifying Personality Iowa Child Welfare Station Changes Youth's Character

By RUTH BLANCHARD

"Make the timid child bolder, and the bold child more cooperative," might well be a slogan of the preschool at the Iowa Child Welfare Research station.

Here, for the first time in the United States, extensive studies have been made on methods of modifying children's personality and of measuring the changes that result.

Once, personality was classed with the I.Q. as a quality almost "fore-ordained" for each individual.

Today both personality traits and intelligence are believed to be modifiable.

New Methods and Work

Newly developed methods of measuring personality at the preschool have proved that the most timid children in a group can be brought up to the group average in dominant behavior, just as the intelligence score has been increased after preschool attendance.

Fourteen preschool children who had a tendency to withdraw from the group and to hesitate before even making suggestions, were trained by Marjorie Page, G of St. Paul, Minn., until they had a set of skills which they could display for other children's admiration.

To increase their self-confidence, each was allowed to show other children how to solve puzzles, use constructive toys, and "read" picture-story-books which the shy child had already mastered.

When the experiment was concluded, Miss Page found all 14 to be "standing up for their rights" and making many more attempts at leadership.

Important Problem

Measuring the extent of change was an important problem in the experiment, since generalized, elusive personality traits had to be reduced to an objective basis.

The necessary scale for testing these three and four-year-old children was devised in 1935 by Lois M. Jack.

In the experiment, two children are led into a room containing a sandbox with a set of toys that require almost constant cooperation: a truck, sifter, shovel, pail and two rubber animals.

"I will show you how to play a frame as soon as I come back," the teacher says. "Until then, just play with the toys in the sandbox."

Then she leaves the room and remains for five minutes observing the children through hidden perforations above their heads. Each time that the child she is studying attempts to defend his own rights, she marks down a point for his score on verbal attempts to secure a toy; forceful attempts to secure the materials; success in getting them, or defense, snatching back materials.

A tendency to control others' actions also was scored, and increased to a marked degree in the child who at first did not act like a "born leader."

Points were given for each verbal attempt to control the other's behavior, for success in getting the other child to follow directions, or for forbidding, criticizing, or reproving his companion, or providing a pattern which the companion definitely imitated.

Paired With Five Others

Each child was paired with five other children at different times. Nearly 50 children from the Iowa City preschool and about 25 from the Davenport Soldiers' Orphans' home were studied.

The idea for the experiment first came from a questionnaire in which a large group of mothers admitted that either they did not know whether their children usually submitted to others' domination on the playground, or they believed them to be leaders of their groups.

This demonstrated the need for exact knowledge on this frontier of child study, the personality.

A related problem, "What makes children shy?" was attacked this year at the Iowa Child Welfare Research station, on the assumption that superior motor skill might give dominant children more self-confidence, but no correlation was found.

Du Buque Visitor Appeared As 1st Iowa Newspaper 100 Years Ago in Log House

By VIRGINIA COOK

Just 100 years ago when Iowa's rolling prairies still rippled and billowed with virgin blue stem grass and the redskins were yet noble savages, the state's first newspaper was started at the Du Buque lead mines.

In a two story log house on a Smith hand press, parts of which were at one time carefully guarded in two states by two historical societies, the first issue of the Du Buque Visitor was published May 11, 1836. It bore the caption, "Truth Our Guide, The Public Good Our Aim."

Established by John King, an early emigrant to "the western paradise," the four page, six column paper resembled the French journal more than the modern newspaper.

In the editor's brochure to his readers King wrote: "The undersigned intends publishing in the town of Du Buque, a weekly newspaper to be called the Du Buque Visitor. He feels it his duty to notify the public that he will endeavor to cherish and advocate republican principles, to defend our rulers while they keep within the pale of the constitution and do their duty and act with fidelity to the people."

Emigrated From Ohio

King emigrated from Ohio in 1834, and first came into prominence when he helped form rules for settling disputes between the lead workers and the mining companies. He was appointed by Territorial Governor Mason as chief justice of Du Buque county, one of Iowa's two original political divisions. In 1839 he was postmaster and for 12 years was a member of the city council.

In the spring of 1836 King went to Ohio to buy the press for his paper. At Chillicothe he met William C. Jones, a whig, whom he hired as a printer. Jones' political views clashed with the democratic principles of the editor, and the printer resigned in August.

The real genius of the paper was Andrew Keeseecker. When he was working at Galena, Ill., King saw Keeseecker composing his editorial with the printer's stick. The editor took the young printer across the river to help him on the Du Buque Visitor. Keeseecker was called by his associates "a walking encyclopedia on all typographical matters." According to legend the first piece of type he took from the case when he started to work on the Du Buque Visitor was capital I, afterward the initial letter of the state. He continued to set type on Iowa newspapers until his death in 1871.

No Place for Weaklings

In those days Iowa was the far west and Du Buque, a mining town on the Mississippi, was no place for weaklings.

When the Du Buque Visitor was started, the settlement had about 1,200 persons and 250 buildings. 15 of which were dry goods stores. There were three or four church societies, three churches, three schools, three hotels, a theater, a printing office, several billiard halls, and a few elegant one story brick mansions. The city "cabalogue" was completed and plans were made for building a courthouse. A land office was the focal point for social and business activities. In 1836 at a public meeting a library association was formed. A year later a circus and an exhibition of fine paintings came to the town and a stock company played a 10-night stand; included in its repertory were "Othello," "Charles II," "Richard III," "Rob Roy McGregor," and

A certain University of Wisconsin student had been accused of cheating by his instructor. All during the final exam, the instructor watched the student, expecting to have his suspicions justified.

Finally he caught the student peeking at a slip of paper he held in his hand. Triumphantly the instructor strode down the aisle and demanded the paper.

He read, "Is it true that you were secretly married on Dec. 4?"

For a time it was an interesting situation, but a passing taxi was the means of escape for the janitor.

With The Ladies

By Ruth Blanchard

Pads of the season... Gay dancing curls are taking an upward trend away from the neckline, with a new and different swirl to the wave, in many individual styles inspired by springtime fancies and by period styles from history.

For 1936 we have, no Empress Eugenie, but Gibson girls in feminine styles dating from the turn of the century; Tyrolean, Mexican or Argentinian "cowboy" types; womanly "Margots" with more dignified costumes inspired by the historical plays, "Elizabeth" and "Margot"; and elegantly gowned ladies of ancient China in exotic colors tracing to the great London exhibit of Chinese art this year.

Vary your curls with the historical period of your costume and with your moods. Campus beauticians suggest that even the woman with irregular features, who must study her type carefully, should not cling to a set style. By asking usually for one operator who will make a study of her as an individual, she may add a dash of variety to her hairdress as she does to her clothes.

For the doll-like, exquisite little lady in a gown of rich colors from Chinese influence, large smooth flat waves, leading back to curls with jeweled effect may be accented by jeweled ornaments, reminiscent of ancient Cathay.

Tyrolean Effect For the Tyrolean or the cowboy effect, short hair arranged to give a carefree impression may defy curls or waves under a vagabond felt, colored panama or straw.

The girl in the sailor hat or rolled brim of 1900 will have her hair swept off her face and neck, with a trig set of back curls. Or if a brighter color than the natural hue of the shells is desired, the light colored hickory nut and peach seed can be dipped into cloth dye. A cluster of hickory nuts dyed various colors and hooked together by thread through a screw eye in each nut constitutes something new and different in the boutonniere so popular this season.

With The Ladies

By Ruth Blanchard

Buttons, button, who wants something new in buttons? Fashioning buttons out of nuts is a fascinating hobby, according to Prof. Miriam Taylor of the women's physical education department.

Attractive Buttons Professor Taylor uses nuts common to this section of the country, a small jigsaw, screw eyes, plastic wood and dye, for the various attractive buttons she makes and uses on her dresses.

A cross section of a black walnut cut by the jigsaw to the desired thickness and polished with wax or varnish can be tied on by pieces of the dress material through the natural holes. Pecans, hazel nuts, and butter nuts need nothing but a small amount of filing and polishing and a screw eye to make a worthy adornment for a dress.

If a brighter color than the natural hue of the shells is desired, the light colored hickory nut and peach seed can be dipped into cloth dye. A cluster of hickory nuts dyed various colors and hooked together by thread through a screw eye in each nut constitutes something new and different in the boutonniere so popular this season.

76 Iowa City High Musicians To Leave for National Contest

Charter Special Train For Cleveland Trip; Enter 7 Groups

Entering in seven competition groups, 76 Iowa City high school musicians will leave by special train tomorrow morning for the national music contest at Cleveland, Ohio, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, it was announced yesterday by Lloyd W. Swartley, director of instrumental music.

Three special cars, two coaches and a baggage car have been chartered for the tournament-bound musicians. A dining car will be added when the troop reaches Chicago.

The students will leave at Rock Island station at 9:30 tomorrow morning and arrive in Cleveland at 9:30 tomorrow night. They will stay at the Cleveland hotel. The group will be chaperoned by six adults and many others are planning to attend the contest.

In 1934 the high school band won "superior" ranking in the nationals at Des Moines. Thomas Ayres, playing a B flat clarinet, was given "highly superior" rating and Paul Lyness received "superior" ranking in the trombone section.

Orchestra National Champions

In 1935 Iowa City's orchestra was proclaimed national champions in class B competition. It was the only school to be ranked "highly superior" at Madison, Wis. Alfred Soucek was undisputed national champion in E flat clarinet solo and Hans Witschi was chosen as one of two national champions in the cello group.

The chamber group of brass instruments, composed of Floyd Mann, William Swisher, Ralph Dunlap, Richard Cambridge, Don Floyd and James McCollum, were the only ones to be judged "superior" that year.

Representatives

Representing Iowa City at this year's contest will be Velma Roberts, bass clarinet; Rollo Norman, cello; Dorothy Soucek, flute; Gene Hubbard, alto clarinet; chamber groups of woodwind and brass instruments and the concert band.

As there is no vocal competition in the nationals, Iowa City's girls' small vocal group, winners of "superior" ranking in the state festival here May 1, will not enter the contest at Cleveland.

Dorothy Soucek won the right to enter the nationals last year when she rated "superior" in the flute solo at the state festival. This made her eligible for national competition as long as she was in high school but disqualified her from further state competition in the flute solo. She did not compete in that group in the state meet this year.

Qualified at Burlington

Because there was no competition for bass and alto clarinets at the state festival, Gene Hubbard and Velma Roberts qualified for the nationals when they won "superior" in the district meet at Burlington in April.

Playing in the brass group of instruments will be Richard Cambridge and Charles Beckman, cornets; Ralph Dunlap, French horn; Vernal Wagner, trombone, and Donald Graham, bass horn.

Members of the woodwind group are Dorothy Soucek, flute; Josephine Sidwell, oboe; Christian Schrock, bassoon, and John Webster, clarinet.

Band Members

Dorothy Soucek, Tom Nelson, Dorothy Smith, Katherine Ruppert, Barbara Mezik, Virginia Simpson, flutes and piccolos; Albert Soucek, E flat clarinet; Josephine Sidwell, Warren Burger, oboes; Velma Roberts, Lois Sample, bass clarinets; Robert Bruce, Gene Hubbard, alto clarinets; Christian Schrock, Ann Strub, bassoons; George Miller, Fletcher Miller, alto saxophones; John Whinery, tenor saxophone; William Meardon, baritone saxophone; Kenneth Jones, bass saxophone; Roger Rardsley, Edgar Hicks, string bass; Richard Cambridge, Eldon Parizek, Charles Beckman, Bertha Griffith, Robert Ivis, Robert Hampton, Lee Seger, Arthur Stevens, Herman Miller, William Voelckers, cornets.

ETTA KETT—

RARE BIRDS AT MUSEUM

With spring comes kite flying, but there is one new kite at the University of Iowa that won't be doing much flying this season. Prof. Homer R. Dill, director of the museum above, through an exchange with James Moritt, curator of zoology at the California Academy of Sciences, has received a white-tailed kite, probably one of the rarest of raptorial birds. The arrival of this bird has completed the series of kites that Professor Dill has been trying to fill for several years. The series and the swallow-tail kites are glades, the Mississippi and the white-tailed kite. The Mississippi and the swallow-tailed kites are especially desirable in the museum. At one time they were found in Iowa, but have been extinct in this part of the country for many years. Probably the last swallow-tail was found around here in 1895, and the last Mississippi in 1907.

Ruth Strub, 9th Grade Student, Wins 5th Place

Ruth Strub, ninth grade student at St. Mary's high school, yesterday was named winner of a $2.50 prize for fifth place in an essay contest on the subject "Why My Dad Owns Insurance." The contest was conducted in the local schools by the Iowa City Life Underwriters.

Mrs. Strub's essay follows: "One of my dad's investments was the purchase of his life insurance policy. There were five major reasons which arose in his mind and encouraged him to carry insurance. "First: 'If I should die, my wife would have doctor and funeral bills to pay. How could she meet these bills?' "My dad lived on a comparatively small income, and even though he managed to save some for an emergency, it would have been difficult to pay out such a large amount of money at one time. "Second: 'After my death my wife would either have to be supported or support herself.' "No man likes to see his wife go to work. My dad believed a woman's place was in the home and he wouldn't allow my mother to support the family. "Third: 'If I should die while my boy is still in school he might be forced to forfeit his education and seek employment.' "My dad realized what an important part an education plays in the world today. He wanted his son to advance and this requires good education which cannot be acquired if a boy has to work. "Fourth: 'Could it be possible that my children would be sent to an orphanage or juvenile home because my wife couldn't support them after my death?' "My dad was interested in his family and it would have been tragic for him to see them separated from each other. "Fifth: 'Would an investment of this kind be profitable for me?' "An insurance agent answered this question for my dad. "Insurance," he said, "isn't only for the benefit of a widow, but it is also profitable for him who owns it." "Many insurance agencies will loan money on a policy according to its age. After insurance has been carried by a certain man for a length of time, money can be borrowed from the face value of the policy. "So when my dad had considered the advantages that insurance offered, he bought a large policy from a reliable and dependable insurance agency. Henceforth he has felt confident that this was one purchase he'd never regret."

Lawson Little Fails to Qualify for National Open Tourney

New Pro Ace Falls Down In District Meet

Diegel, Kirkwood Also Fall by Wayside In National Prelims

(By The Associated Press) The failure of Lawson Little, double winner of the American and British amateur golf championships, to qualify, featured the far-flung play in the sectional qualifying rounds for the national open championships Monday.

Playing at Hartford, Conn., Little failed to clinch a New England berth when he carded 77-152 for 36 holes and yielded the places to six professionals and a pair of amateurs. There was a four-man playoff at 149 for the last two places.

Several other big names in golf fell as a number of newcomers asserted themselves. The carnage was heavy as the New Jersey and eastern Pennsylvania aspirants took their shots at Newton Square, Pa. Leo Diegel just missed the qualifying set with 154 and Joe Kirkwood did not even bother trying for the second 18 holes after posting a first round 81. Max Marston, former national amateur champion, was named second alternate from the district after posting 79-154.

Johnny Goodman of Omaha led the qualifiers in his district with a 144. Johnny Revolta and Tommy Arnold ran one-two at Chicago with 149 and 145 respectively. Billy Burke, who won the 1932 open, and Fred Haas Jr. of New Orleans, runnerup in last year's intercollegiate, were among those to make the grade at Cleveland as was Maurice McCarthy Jr. Clarence Deer led the qualifiers at Buffalo, N.Y., with 74-149.

Wille McFarlane, 1925 national open title; Jimmy Hines, third ranking money winner of last winter's golf, and George Voight, Walker cupper, failed to qualify at New York where Jimmy Dante led the field with an aggregate of 150. Wiffy Cox of Washington and Joe Ear of New York were inside the limit here.

Morton McCarthy qualified at Richmond, Jack Mungler at Dallas and Sam Perry, twice southern amateur champion, at Birmingham, Ala. Joe Turnesa led the field in which Little failed, shooting 70-144 to be out by Harold McSpaden of Winchester, Mass., by one stroke. Zell Eaton led four Oklahomans into qualifying berths at Oklahoma City but afterwards said he did not intend to play in the finals. Eaton turned in 72-143.

Scotty Campbell of Seattle, the Canadian amateur champion, failed to appear at Portland, Ore. Perry, the southern amateur ace, carded 69-138.

The Rivermen were only able to score two firsts and a tie for another. Charlie Smith easily won the mile in 4:53, while Charles Robbins, his teammate, placed third. The two mile relay team, won the other first place and Ted Hinman tied for first in the pole vault.

Freddie Miller Loses World's Featherweight Title to Sarron

Petey Outrashes Champ In Early Rounds, Almost Gets K.O.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 11 (AP)—Petey Sarron, flailing Syrian buzzsaw, swarmed all over Champion Freddie Miller here tonight to win the world's featherweight boxing crown by decision after 15 furious rounds. Miller weighed 126 and Sarron 125 1-2.

Sarron, the Birmingham lad who has been fighting for a dozen years, piled up points during the early rounds and then tore into the tiring defending champion in the closing rounds with a drum fire offensive that had Miller on the verge of knockouts in the 13th and 15th rounds.

Freddie, the ex-baker boy from Cincinnati who won the crown in January 1933 from Tommy Paul, had successfully defended it 19 times, far exceeding more often than any other titleholder. Three times before he had beaten Sarron, the last occasion two months ago in Miami where Sarron put on a great battle only to lose his opportunity with low blows in the late rounds.

More than 23,000 were crowded into the American league ball park to see the capital's first world's championship fight.

PRAIRIE DU CHIEN, Wis., May 11 (AP)—Coach Ossie Solem of the University of Iowa said tonight that with Harry Stuhldreher as director, University of Wisconsin athletics will "begin a steady climb to the former glory."

Addressing the annual Letter club banquet here, Solem said the new coach has a personality that will do much to restore to the school the deserved confidence of the state's citizenry.

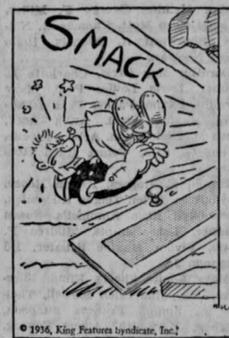

"Stuhldreher is a superb diplomat, a good coach and will handle the situation as well as any other man the university could have secured."

Solem, returning from the Minnesota-Iowa baseball series, said Coach Bernie Bierman's annual laments over lack of football material at Minnesota will not be "swallowed hook, line and sinker this year."

"He has a bunch there that is going to be a powerfully strong organization and will bear plenty of watching," Solem said.

Examination Schedule

Second Semester, 1935-1936
Thursday, May 21, 8 a.m., to Thursday, May 28, 4 p.m.

The regular program of class work will be suspended, and the following semester-examination program substituted for it. Classes will meet for examination in the rooms in which they have been regularly meeting (except classes in SPECIAL GROUPS, A, B, C, D, E, F, and G, as shown in the form below; and Speech (3), (1), and (4) as shown at "N.B." below).

The Program Committee directs the attention of both students, and instructors and professors, to the regulation that there is to be no deviation, in the case of any examination, from this Schedule, except as authorized by the Committee on Admission and Classification, on the student's written petition, filed in ample time, supported by the recommendation of the department concerned, to provide relief from an excessive number of examinations within a single day. Deviation for the purpose of getting through earlier will not be permitted. Students should prepare and deposit such petitions in the offices of the Dean of Men (men) and Women (women).

In the case of conflicts (within the SPECIAL GROUPS A, B, C, D, E, F, and G) of the schedule itself, as presented below, provides a general method of making adjustments.

All classes whose first weekly meetings have occurred as indicated in the rectangles below meet for examination during the periods noted at the tops of these three columns, and on the days noted in the rectangles directly opposite at the left of the double, vertical line.

(Time announced by instructor)

"ODD" classes, namely those whose first or only weekly meetings occur on Wednesdays, Thursdays, Fridays, or Saturdays, or which meet "as arranged," will be assigned for examination, as announced to each such class by the instructor in charge of the class, at one or another of the following periods:

1. From 4 to 6 on any day from May 21 to May 28, inclusive.
2. Any one of the examination periods assigned, as indicated above, for the examinations in the SPECIAL GROUPS, A, B, C, D, E, F, and G, since for such "odd" classes these seven examination periods will be found quite available.

In connection with any such announcement it would doubtless be well for the instructor making the announcement to ascertain whether any member of his class is already under appointment for examination in some other class for the proposed period. To be sure, it is possible to have examinations in more than one class at any of these times—if no student is a member of more than one of these classes.

According to one clause in the formal faculty action providing for a special semester-examination program, "the instructor may use the examination period as he sees fit provided he holds the class for the full period. He may have an oral or a written examination, or both, or neither. He may continue regular work or he may use the time for review, or for any phase of his work which may seem to him desirable at this time."

According to another faculty regulation, which is on record as adopted by the faculty, a student absent from the final examination should be reported "Abs." unless the instructor recognizes that his work up to this examination has been a failure, in which case the final report should be "F."—even though the student may have been absent from the final examination. No examination should be given, subsequently, to such a student until after the absence has been excused by the Committee on Admission and Classification, as shown by a partially filled special report card, signed by the Secretary of the Committee, as indicating that the absence has been excused and that the student is authorized, subject to the consent and at the convenience of the instructor concerned, to take the final examination.

Seventeen members of the Iowa City high school will present "Seven Keys to Baldpate" in the school auditorium at 8 p.m. May 21 and 22. It was announced yesterday by Lola Hughes, head of the dramatics department.

The drama, a melodramatic farce, is based on the novel of the same name by the late Earl Derr Biggers. The main character, William Hollowell Magee, novelist, comes to a deserted summer resort on a wager to write a novel in 24 hours. He steps into an atmosphere of mystery and romance.

A gang of political crooks, who have made the inn their hideout, lose their $200,000 booty. With the search for the money arises the mystery of the seven keys to Baldpate.

Presenting the play for the two nights here are Charles Armstrong as Elizabeth Quimby; Ruth Blair and Dorothy Lehman as Mrs. Quimby; Robert Eaton as William Hallowell Magee; Sherwood Nichols as John Bland; Arlene Riecke and Alice McCollister as Mary Norton. Mrs. Rhodes; Marion James as Peters; Eleanor Droll and Frances Spence as Myra Thornhill; Toby Mason as Lou Max.

QUICK PICK-UP FOR TIRED EYES

Want to give your eyes a lift? Use Murine. Soothing, refreshing to hot, tired, red-dened eyes. Great for eyes irritated by reading, dust, wind, smoke, or light glare. Use it daily.

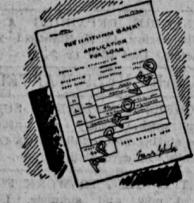

"BARNUM WAS RIGHT"

The one and only P. T. Barnum is alleged to have said many things that never found their way into our copy-books . . . things to which few of us would wish to subscribe. But he uttered a profound truth when he said: "If you don't advertise your business, the sheriff will."

Firms which intend to stay in business, that is, firms which deal directly with the public, must advertise. By the same token, it is a sign that they mean to stay in business when they do advertise. For they are offering, through advertisements, the values in their stores.

You, the customer, will decide whether or not they are values. If they are not, it is "just too bad" for the firm that claimed they were. Don't you see, therefore, that no merchant can afford to misrepresent himself or his goods in print? Advertising merely magnifies a misrepresentation - brings the fatal day nearer.

Naturally, then, you can trust the advertisements in this paper. You can believe that the stores signing those advertisements want your trade, and are willing to earn it - with honest values and fair treatment. Read the advertisements. Patronize the advertisers. It is your selfish interest to do so.

NUMBER ONE

"The process of saving and investing takes many forms, some of which represent misdirected efforts." The principal forms are as follows: hoarding, speculation, duplicative investment, investment in new techniques and investment in education and research.

If a suitable portion of income is directed toward the creation of new techniques and new inventions, profitable employment for capital is created. He said that only a small number of business leaders appear to realize the significance of science.

Complete Iowa figures for March show gains over February marks in building contracts, 29.5 per cent; railroad carloadings, 57.2; life insurance sales, 30.6; bank debts, 18.1; industrial payrolls, 5.4, and employment, 2.8.
