News Flashes

Iowa Falls Fire

IOWA FALLS, July 15 (AP)—Fire broke out in the "Ellsworth" block in the business district here tonight, and caused an estimated $10,000 to $12,000 damage before it was brought under control. Damage was confined largely to one building, owned by the Harriet Ellsworth estate. The blaze originated on the second floor of the structure, in a beauty shop.

Knox 'Fly Casting'

TOPEKA, Kan., July 15 (AP)—Gov. Alf M. Landon and Col. Frank Knox, took a moment from campaign discussion today to discuss fly casting. "How far can you cast, Colonel?" asked the republican presidential nominee. "Oh, about 25 feet—being modest," his running mate laughed. "How far can you cast, Governor?" "Oh, I couldn't cast any farther than my guest—about 25 feet," Landon said with a smile.

Find Iowa Girl

LAWRENCE, Kan., July 15 (AP)—Critically injured as a result of a beating she suffered, a young woman found on a road near here yesterday was tentatively identified today as Alice Williams, 17, of Cedar Rapids, Ia. Rousing briefly from unconsciousness, the girl murmured her name and home town today. Checking with Cedar Rapids police, Douglas county authorities expressed belief the identification was correct. Mrs. Clara Williams, the girl's mother, was en route from Cedar Rapids.

Lemke Loses

FARGO, N. D., July 15 (AP)—Congressman William Lemke, union party candidate for president, failed today in an attempt to have the federal court sustain actions under which 10 North Dakota farmers sought relief under farm mortgage moratorium legislation he helped frame. Judge Andrew Miller, basing his ruling on the decision of the eighth circuit court of appeals holding the amended Franz-Lemke act unconstitutional, granted motions for dismissal of the 10 actions.

Hamm Kidnaping

ST. PAUL, July 15 (AP)—Two confessed participants in the $100,000 William Hamm kidnaping will be government witnesses against John P. (Jack) Pfeifer, lone remaining defendant, George F. Sullivan, U. S. district attorney, announced today. One will be Edmund C. Bartholmey, former Bensenville, Ill., postmaster, who pleaded guilty as a kidnaping conspirator today. The other will be Byron Bolton, who pleaded guilty earlier. Guilty pleas also have been entered by Alvin Karpis, onetime public enemy number one, who reversed his former plea of innocent as the trial opened Tuesday, and Charles (Big Fitz) Fitzgerald.

Mrs. Alf Landon

ESTES PARK, Col., July 15 (AP)—Mrs. Alf M. Landon's mother related today that the wife of the republican presidential nominee has "carried on" many of the social welfare and educational activities of her father, the late Samuel E. Cobb, Topeka, Kan., banker. The widowed mother is vacationing here with her daughter and the Landon children.

Welcome Tugwell

FARGO, N.D., July 15 (AP)—North Dakota today welcomed Rexford Guy Tugwell, federal resettlement director and several aides, come to the state to help perform the task recent showers came too late to accomplish. En route, Tugwell described the showers as "a godsend," but expressed the opinion the relief program he will help direct will do more good for the approximately 60,000 North Dakota families in need as a result of prolonged drought. Those in distress represent approximately one third of the state's population, in 40 out of 53 counties.

Air Mass Relieves Great Lakes Area But Drought Holds

Cooling Breeze Knox, Landon Fails to Touch Inland Regions

By the Associated Press CHICAGO, July 15—A refrigerant air mass from the Hudson Bay region routed the heat wave on a wide midwestern and Great Lakes front today but drought maintained its sway on western plains. Another day was chalked up for the record stay of higher than 100-degree heat—its 13th—in sections.

With the weatherman unable to promise an immediate break, Iowa City today enters its 14th day of the blistering heat wave. "Not so warm" was the only encouragement forecasters could give. Yesterday's reading soared to 108 degrees after hitting a low of 73 degrees in the early hours of the day. The high mark is within one degree of the all-time record of 109 set Tuesday.

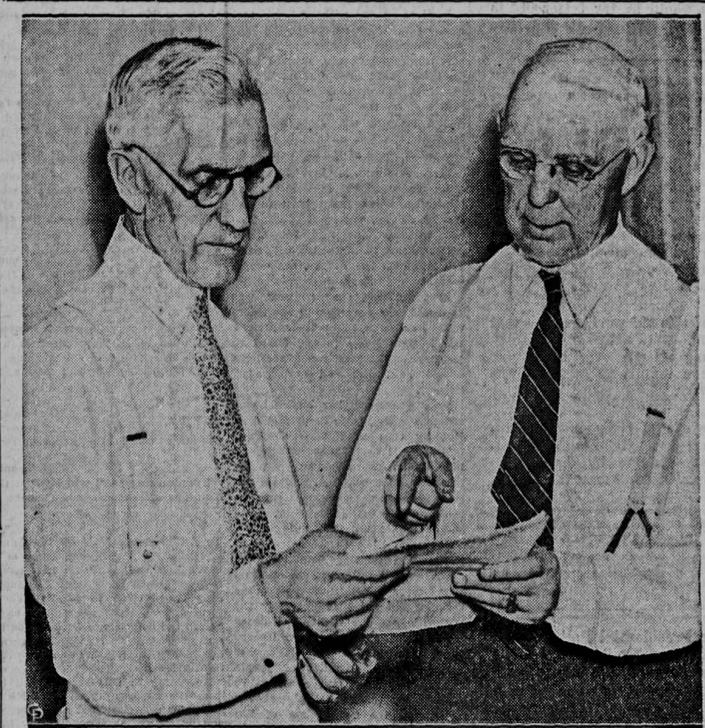

which the cooling breezes failed to penetrate and fatalities ascribed to the torrid spell, though their rate was reduced somewhat, passed 3,500 for the period. Early in the afternoon, Quincy on central Illinois' western boundary, reported a 112-degree maximum. Other "hot spots" were Indianapolis, 102.9; Clarendon, Tex., 110; Wellington, Kan., 111; Falls City, Neb., 106; Kansas City, 102; and Ponca City, Okla., 108.

Approaches 1934 Severity In the latter state, K. D. Blood, federal crop statistician, said the drought situation was approaching its severity that of 1934. He said most farmers had fed and water for only about ten days more. Grasshoppers were additional crop destroyers.

In Montana, Wyoming and Colorado drought worries returned. Resettlement Administrator Rexford Guy Tugwell, traveling to Bismarck to speed federal relief in the burned out northwestern states, termed the recent showers a "godsend" but said the relief plans would prove of more lasting benefit.

Washington Estimates In Washington, the federal crop reporting board estimated that this year would be second only to that of the "great drought"—1934—in reduced feed grain yields, that hay yields would be as light as other drought years excluding 1934, and that a substantial recovery of the nation's corn crop would be realized for "a considerable portion."

TOWNSEND CHATS WITH CONVENTION KEYNOTER

Dr. Francis E. Townsend, head of the old age pension organization bearing his name, chats with Otto A. Case, of Seattle, Wash., in Cleveland as the second annual Townsend convention gets under way. Case, treasurer of Washington state, is keynoter at the convention. In an interview, Dr. Townsend indicated that his organization would not back the third party presidential candidacy of Representative William Lemke of North Dakota, despite the fact that Lemke had accepted an invitation to address a mass meeting of the convention in Cleveland stadium, Sunday, July 19. Dr. Townsend said he would leave the decision up to the delegates.

Townsend Hits Spending Orgy Assails Administration; Coughlin to Address Convention Today

By the Associated Press CLEVELAND, July 15—Dr. Francis E. Townsend, founder of the Townsend old age pension plan assailed today the Roosevelt administration's "crazy orgy of spending" and told the second annual Townsend convention his movement has the support of other groups who seek a "new era of social justice."

Townsend told his followers the pension plan has the backing of the National Union for Social Justice, the Share the Wealth movement, and "other groups of unhappy and dissatisfied voters opposed to the new deal's crazy orgy of spending," and those "who are working toward a new era of social justice."

Townsend's convention headquarters announced tonight that the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit radio priest, would address the convention delegates at 10:30 a. m., tomorrow. Townsend leaders refused to say how the address had been arranged.

Predicts Heavy Rains Astronomer, Barring 1,000, Forecasts Weather Change After Today

By the Associated Press CHICAGO, July 15—An immediate end to the drought, with its crop ruin and threats of rising food prices, was forecast tonight by the man who predicted the hot, dry weather six months before it arrived.

There would be "no more damage from drought" after tomorrow, he asserted, although it may take the nation 10 days to accept the fact. By July 26, he added, there would be so much rain that "everyone is going to see that the drought danger is ended."

Maxwell predicted the drought's end with the same air of confidence with which he warned of its coming around Christmas time in 1935. At that time, he glanced at his long-range forecasting charts—based on the distances the moon wobbles in its orbit—and opined: "That January and February would have heavy snow, and that drought would develop during March, April and May and do its worst in June and July."

All that came to pass. Tonight Maxwell looked at his charts again. They showed, he said, the end of the drought began with last week end's rains—the ones the weather bureau expected would break the hot wave.

SERIOUS KING England's Edward VIII Proves Himself

By the Associated Press LONDON, July 15—Known once as a playboy "Prince Charming," King Edward VIII of England approached the end of his first half year on the throne today with a new reputation as a serious, hard working monarch. Today, besides holding an investiture at Buckingham Palace, he granted audiences to a number of dignitaries, including the Canadian ministers of finance and trade, Charles Dunning and William Euler. Yesterday he was even busier, with an investiture in the morning, a number of audiences, visits to two medical schools and a meeting of the council of the duchy of Cornwall.

Thus little doubt lingers in England that the 42-year-old bachelor king has abandoned the gay days and ways of his youth and has settled down to the steadfast business of sovereignty.

REACTIONARY Dr. Butler Comments on G.O.P. Convention

By the Associated Press NEW YORK, July 15—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university and for many years a prominent figure at republican national conventions, tonight said the 1936 convention has recorded itself as "the most reactionary in the party's entire history."

In a statement issued on his return from Europe, where he spent four weeks in the interests of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, Dr. Butler said: "The doctrines set out and defended in the Cleveland platform are economic nationalism of the narrowest and most dangerous sort."

Former Iowa Faculty Woman Dies of Illness

By the Associated Press DANVILLE, Ill., July 15—Ruth Wardell, dean of domestic science at the University of Illinois, Champaign, died in Lakeview hospital after several months' illness. Her physician, Dr. H. E. Ross, said Miss Wardell, whose home was in Tuscola, Ill., entered the hospital for a chronic ailment. He said her condition was aggravated by the recent heat wave.

Miss Wardell had headed the University of Illinois' department of home economics since 1921, after having taught in South Dakota, Ohio and the University of Iowa. She was head of the home economics department at Iowa. She resigned the position in April and was succeeded two weeks ago by Rita Bane. Miss Wardell was 59 years old and a native of Tuscola, Ill.

A recognized authority on home economics, she had written widely on the subject. She studied at Knox college and the University of Illinois. Survivors included two brothers, W. J. Wardall of New York, and Charles, of Miami, Fla. Funeral services were set for Saturday, with burial at Tuscola.

Deserve Praises Of the Community

FOR THE fourth straight year, Iowa City Elks club trapshooters Tuesday won that organization's national shoot. This is a phenomenal record when one considers that the best shooting squads from other Elks clubs in the United States annually enter the event.

These men representing the local club have expended much time and effort in perfecting themselves so that they now repose at the top.

To win the national crown even once is an achievement; to capture it four times in a row is an accomplishment of which Iowa City Elks and the members of the team can well be proud. They justly deserve the well-earned plaudits of this community.

Press Should Be Free and Impartial

DESPITE ITS contradiction to individual rights, the present status of the German press is considered by citizens of the world as one of the most ethical in the world, reports a foreign correspondent in a recent magazine article. The rigid governmental censorship and control exercised upon writers and editors is not only accepted by the German people, but also praised as a highly workable system.

The contention is based upon the fact that in Germany, the press is controlled by the state and exists for the state. It is not subject, they say, to the whims of various individuals and does not exist for the mercenary gain of private enterprise. In this way, its readers feel they are attaining a much higher standard in their publications than could possibly be realized otherwise.

All of which may provide a partial answer to those who look with wonder upon the German citizen's toleration of a government which many foreign nations consider despotic and obnoxious. Only a few are forced to "tolerate" it. The greater majority believes as strongly in the policies of the Nazi regime as any citizen ever did in his own nation.

Even in our own United States, the government has seen fit to exercise control over business in many instances. Child labor laws, pure food and drug acts, and many others were reforms which might never have come about without government leadership. During the present Roosevelt administration, many have condoned the new deal's attitude of control over "individual enterprise."

Yet no one can deny that the channels of public opinion such as the press and radio should be free for impartial writing and speech. They should stand as fair critics and guardians of fundamental rights rather than organs of political and social ballyhoo. It is true, we have our tycoons in the field of public opinion as well as in any other. Yet as long as there are ethical publications which insist upon truth and honesty, there is little need for governmental interference.

Exercise Moderation While Vacationing

BETTING ON your golf game can easily boost your blood pressure 20 points above normal. Getting angry in a sand trap shoots it up another 20 to 30 points. If you clench your teeth and break a club over one knee, the pressure may jump 80 points instead, warns a vacation health bulletin issued by an insurance company.

But even if you merely mutter your anger, the panting climb up the next hill forces the pressure up another 30 points, something is liable to give way, and the newspapers print another headline about a prominent business man dropping dead at only 54 years of age.

Unwise vacations are shortening the lives of thousands of Americans who would be better off to remain at their desks, the warning continues.

If you are one of the vast army whose blood pressure needs watching, beware of all vacation excitements and strains, such as:

- Pushing yourself frantically to get your work in shape so you can go on a vacation. Working frantically to catch up after returning from a vacation. Driving hundreds of miles at high speed to get some place or other in too short a time. Gambling on golf, bridge, or any other game. Fishing for tarpon, sailfish, and other big gamefish which involve long gruelling battles. Mountain climbing. Long hard swims. Carrying city excitement along via radio: Listening to market quotations, prize fights, etc. All abnormal "grandstand" excitement.

But the following enjoyments are entirely safe for the person who must watch his blood pressure, according to the bulletin:

- Golf in moderation. Moderate swimming. Hiking. Fishing—trout, bass, salmon, and all angling that does not exhaust the sportsman. Moderate rowing. And practically any exercise or recreation that does not speed up the heart action greatly or make heavy demands on wind or endurance.

Unless commonsense rules are observed, the warning concludes, the average American business man in his late forties and middle fifties would be far better off to remain quietly at his desk. He will live longer.

The Louisiana senate has passed a bill that lobbyists must wear green caps and uniforms. Of course, the legislation was intended to impart some humor to a prosaic session, but to those with a knowledge of his sometimes devious ways, the lobbyist is far from being a joke.—Christian Science Monitor.

A few years ago the economists raved about prosperity being around the corner. Now the weatherman keeps repeating that rain is around THAT corner.

The state of this old world is such that a dirigible cannot fly across any country without passing directly over an arsenal, a fortress or a munitions factory.—The Evening Courier.

Boy Scouts of St. Louis, Mo., are cooperating with the city health departments against diphtheria by distributing educational literature in homes throughout the city.

What Others Think

The Presidential Poll

THE RESULTS of the latest poll of the American Institute of Public Opinion, conducted on the scientific principle of a cross section of the population, covering every element in the social scale, indicates that the country is at this moment pretty evenly divided and that if the election were to be held today the result would be very close. Indeed, the survey, as reported by the institute, indicates that while Roosevelt would obtain a popular majority, Landon would obtain a majority of the electoral votes and, as everybody knows, it is by the electoral votes that presidents are chosen. The poll gives to Roosevelt 51.8 per cent of the popular vote and Landon 48.2 per cent, but Landon, according to this poll, would carry 21 states with an electoral vote of 272, six more than enough to carry the election.

Specifically, the institute assumes, as a result of its survey, that public opinion, at this time, would certainly give to Landon the electoral votes of Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Kansas, Connecticut, Nebraska, Massachusetts, South Dakota, Rhode Island, Delaware, Iowa, New Jersey and West Virginia, with a total of 99 electoral votes, and probably the votes of Ohio, Colorado, Minnesota, New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Indiana and Montana, with 173 electoral votes.

That there will be warm disagreement with this conclusion hardly needs to be said. Indeed, it is difficult to believe that such agricultural states as Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota are "safely" republican and Minnesota probably so. That Kansas might be ranked in this "safe" group, because of Landon, is a natural presumption, but the inclusion of those others is surprising, to say the least, in view of recent events. As to those ranked as probably republican ("republican advantage" is the term used) New York and Pennsylvania are of very great importance because of their large electoral vote. Pennsylvania, of course, has always been strongly republican and it went republican even in 1932. It elected a democratic governor by a small majority in 1934 and every effort is being made to assure its vote for Roosevelt this year, but the institute's survey indicates it has not a democratic majority now.

As to New York, the "pivotal state," the institute's poll showed 52 per cent for Landon against 48 per cent for Roosevelt. The state of New York, outside of New York City, has, like Pennsylvania, always been strongly republican and no doubt still is. But the city has always been strongly democratic and no doubt still is. Hoover, in 1932, carried upstate New York by one-fourth million, but because of the vote in New York City he lost the state by a majority of some 600,000 for Roosevelt. The institute figures, from its returns, that upstate New York would now give Landon a plurality of 830,000 while the city would give Roosevelt a plurality of 640,000.

How accurate the polls of the American Institute may be is yet to be shown by a general election. It is a new way it has of testing public opinion, and the results of its methods in surveys of many subjects have seemed to justify its conviction that it has developed a scientific method of determining public trends which can be depended upon. At any rate it presents conclusions that are highly interesting.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A New Yorker At Large

By JACK STINNETT

NEW YORK—Violet McTurk is in New York for her first visit to the big town and is having the time of her life. It is her first chance to know how tourists feel when she guides them through the strange jungles of British Guiana and up the racing Potaro river to the foot of Kaieteur falls.

For Mrs. McTurk thinks tourists are tourists and explorers, explorers, no matter whether they are New Yorkers wading through the untraced forests in her homeland or natives of British Guiana dodging with fright through the traffic of Times Square.

Visitors gasp with delight and awe when, breaking out of the jungle, they get their first view of the waters of Potaro, several hundred feet wide, dropping more than 800 feet through space to churn and boil on the rocks below. And Violet McTurk who lives near the Kaieteur, gasped as she looked up the great reach of the RCA building.

Mrs. McTurk is just 27 years old. Seven years ago, Mick McTurk, an Englishman born in the British colony, came out of the jungle to Barbados and found his bride. Back to little McTurk island 200 miles up the Potaro, the couple went.

Mrs. McTurk, then as now, was the only white woman in the interior. For days after their arrival, the Indians came to the island to put her on the arm, touch her high brown hair, and call her "vaku" (friend).

Four years ago her husband was stricken with jungle fever and died. But by that time Violet McTurk had learned to love the jungle. Besides there were gold and diamond mines to be worked. . . and visitors and scientists to be brought through the jungle to the Kaieteur. She stayed on. Soon she's going back.

She'll go back to Georgetown at the mouth of the Demerara and across to the Essequibo and up that river to Bartica and then through 110 miles of jungle to the Potaro where one of her half-dozen little outboard motorboats will carry her up through the rapids to her home. That 110 miles of jungle has a road now and a chugging little motor truck that plows over it, due to the cooperation of the government and the slim attractive young woman who made her home in the brush.

Screen Life

By HUBBARD KEAVY

HOLLYWOOD—The lady has a pretty little nose, as short and pert as that. But she didn't feel like posing the last time she was obliged to come into the gallery. She didn't like the photographer assigned to her. The weather was too warm. And her gowns didn't suit her a-tall. In a word, she was disgusted and as a result, she refused to smile.

The cameraman took pictures anyway, beautiful, artistic sittings. But nary a smile did the high-priced star have for the camera. She just wouldn't give. The photos, her latest sitting, soon will be seen in many newspapers and magazines anyway. As I say, the lady has a short nose—and she apparently can't see any farther than the end of it. Cole Porter, here writing some music, likes Hollywood's way of doing things thoroughly. He was looking over the "break down" script for a new picture, the one in which the props are listed also. Here's what he found on one page: Scene No. 248, requisitions: The United States navy. One stand-in for Pekingese dog. Bing Crosby has just learned that one of his fan clubs is doing something besides writing him letters. The Crosby club in England, its president wrote, retained 50 city children in the country for a day and then loaded them up with ice cream and cake. Harry Carey might as well throw away his guns and his chaps and his big black sombrero. He seems to be well on the way toward a new career, as character actor. Harry hit a slump after playing the title role in "Trader Horn" and the sledding for a long time was rough. His roles are becoming increasingly prominent. At the moment, he has one of the principal parts in "With Banners Blowing" (newest title for "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie") and next he will be in "Spawn of the North."

"Try Anything Once"

Attitude of Gay Nineties Blade Inspires Invention of Sundae

TWO RIVERS, Wis. (AP)—The "try anything once" attitude of a gay young blade of the nineties, made Two Rivers the reputed birth place of the American ice cream sundae.

The story is told by E. C. Berners, a retired confectioner, who concedes, however, that the dish, though brought to light here, got its name at Mantowoc. "One night George Hallauer, who lives in Marshall, Ill., now, dropped in at my ice cream parlor," Berners recalls. "He spied a bottle of chocolate syrup on the back bar."

For Sodas Only "Why don't you put some of that on the ice cream?" he demanded. "You don't want to ruin the flavor of that ice cream," Berners answered. "I only use that for chocolate sodas."

"I know what you use it for," Hallauer answered, "but I'll try anything once." So Berners poured some syrup over the ice cream, George Hallauer liked it, and the ice cream sundae was born.

The name didn't come until later. The fame of the dish spread, Berners explains, and even reached Mantowoc, six miles away, where George Giffy then operated "the finest ice cream parlor in the district."

A Sunday Only Treat "Well, George came to my place and asked what in blazes I was doing," says Berners. "He said the added flavoring would put a parlor owner out of business at a nickel a dish." But Giffy tried it himself and started serving the treat as a Sunday special.

One day a little girl stepped up to his fountain and asked for some ice cream "with stuff on it." "I only serve that on Sundays, my little miss," said Giffy. "She Got Her Dish" "Why then it must be a sunday," the child said, "for that's the kind of an ice cream I want."

So Giffy called it a sundae, and sundae it remained. Glassware salesmen spread the name everywhere. "A year after that," reminisces Berners, "I unpacked some dishes and found them marked 'Handle with care—Sundae dishes.'"

How Kidney Disorders Are Managed Nowadays

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D. ONE OF THE greatest physicians who ever practiced in the United States, William Osler, once read a paper which had the following title: "On the Advantages of a Trace of Albumin and a Few Casts in the Urine of Men Over Fifty."

Dr. Clending

It is a cheerful aspect of what appears to be a pretty gloomy prospect—the bright side of Bright's disease, as it were. But, as I say, he was a very eminent man and the viewpoint is thoroughly justified. What he meant involves three things: First, that kidney troubles are insidious and painless in their onset. The kidneys do not hurt, except when stone or infection is present. Therefore, changes may go forward to a serious extent without the person whose kidneys are involved being aware of them.

So the first intimation he may have is when, on a routine examination of some sort—say for life insurance—the person of 50 learns that he has some renal changes. And lastly, this is an advantage to him in many instances, because, as Richard Bright himself said, "Where the mischief is less rooted, we must undoubtedly do much." The person of 50 who finds these things out, should learn to bank his fires, to give up some part of the strenuous life, to arrange his diet, to rest, to avoid strain and, if possible, in this troublesome world, worry. We cannot restore the kidney tissue especially salutary is the fact that albumin in the urine is not necessarily regarded any longer as a sign of kidney disease. There are many forms of albumin and, as was pointed out by Bright's chemical co-workers, there were cases where it was "so trifling in nature as to render it almost a constant occurrence."

Many of these functional albuminurias were formerly frightened and restricted to severe diets and to limited activity. "It is particularly important," writes a high authority in a recently published popular health book, "to recognize benign, postural and other forms of functional albuminuria to prevent persons so affected from being limited by unwarranted fears and needless restrictions, as occurs when confused with true nephritis."

This type of albuminuria is especially common in young people, being noted, for instance, in 5 per cent of 20,000 male college students.

WHAT'S WHAT AT A GLANCE WASHINGTON - WORLD

By CHARLES STEWART Central Press Staff Writer WASHINGTON, D.C.—Industrial leaders have shown a remarkable unanimity lately in letting the public know just how heavily taxation is represented in the prices they are compelled to charge for so they say for the products they market in their various different lines.

Quite a series of such articles has been appearing recently and more, it's stated on reliable industrial authority, are to come. Now, the question is: Did the industrialists think up this idea among themselves or was it put into their heads by the new G.O.P. management? It is excellent republican propaganda anyway.

Its purpose obviously is to let consumers know the price it is paying for the new deal. It takes the campaign into the country's homes. It is conceivable that it will be made the overshadowing issue of the season's presidential contest.

Indirect Tax The average individual has small appreciation when he makes a purchase, what percentage of the price he pays goes to the tax collector, because most of the collection is so indirect and roundabout. Throughout all history it has been the policy of governments to maintain this system of indirectness, to avoid irritating the 90 per cent or more of folk who foot the bill and cast the votes. It's a vast service to the masses to enlighten them as to the fashion in which they have been befogged.

Those who are doing the enlightening doubtless are actuated by no altruistic motive. In the past they themselves have profited by concealed taxation. Just now, however, it suits their ends to expose the cheat.

By JOHN SELBY "THE ADOPTED CHILD," by Eleanor Garrigue Gallagher; (Reynolds & Hitchcock).

There is nothing new in the idea of adopting children, nor is there very much new to trained social workers in a book by Eleanor Garrigue Gallagher called "The Adopted Child."

But many will find the book extremely helpful. Mrs. Gallagher is a mother and a grandmother. She has taught both in kindergarten and high school, and she has been concerned with the adoption of children for 15 years, in which time her experience has brought her in touch with 3,000 cases.

So that what she has to say about adoption is tempered by knowledge acquired from widely differing sources, and tested by experience as thoroughly as such matters well could be tested. Adopting a child is a normal and generally a rewarding experience, she believes, and under proper modern conditions, one which may be undertaken with quite the same confidence as the acquisition of a child by the usual method—sometimes even more so!

Mrs. Gallagher tells what those adopting a child should know. She describes the method of acquiring the child, and sketches briefly the laws involved. She tells what various and helpful tests are made with babies, so that adopters may know they are receiving a normal child. She goes deeply into the matter of what can be learned about ancestry, and especially details her opinions and those of many others on the matter of illegitimacy.

But what probably will be of most service to the reading public Mrs. Gallagher is trying to reach is her intimate discussion of intimate matters—for one example, whether a child should be told he is adopted, and when. And it should be added that although this reader has no intention of adopting anything, and thus no direct interest in Mrs. Gallagher's subject, he read her book eagerly for the light it sheds on a complicated and serious problem.

GOIN' HOME? S.U.I. Bulletin Boards Offer Variety In Summer Travel

By ALPHA BRAUNWARTH "Say, pal, how ya goin' home today?" That's what they all say—these notices on the bulletin boards in university buildings.

Drivers are looking for one to three passengers "to share expenses," "for very reasonable rates," or just for company. As far as the notices state, there is no preference as to age, color, sex or size.

One young married couple is advertising for two companions on a two weeks' trip to the Black Hills. An answer to the inquiry penned on the same notice, reads, "Any objection to two single people?"

Evidently the man had to go home to ask his wife, for an answer was promised the next day.

Another lady desires freight service to Council Bluffs. Apparently she is not going in the same direction as her baggage, but a small steamer trunk and typewriter need to be sent home.

The majority of rides point to the larger cities, Chicago, St. Louis, Sioux City, Council Bluffs and Oklahoma City. Most ride advertisers, whether drivers or passengers, are leaving Iowa. Ads for less than 200 to 300 miles do not occur; hitch-hiking is too simple and convenient for short distances.

These mutual travelers go east as far as Chicago, south to St. Louis, west to Manhattan, Kan.—but nobody seems to be headed for Minnesota, the land of lakes.

East lead heads in the number of thumb-nail advertisers on its bulletin boards. University hall ranks second, and Schaeffer hall comes in third place in the cross-country transportation exchange.

Petition Asks Police Around Market Street

Plea for the assignment of police to patrol the business district centering around Market street is asked in a petition filed yesterday in city hall by residents and businessmen in the district.

Signed by some 85 persons, located in the district north of Jefferson street, east of Dubuque street, south of Fairchild street and west of Johnson street, the petition states:

"That most of the territory above described is business district and that there is a large amount of business done in that area during the day and in the evening after stores in the main business district are closed.

"That the undersigned realize the difficulties under which the undermanned police force now operates, but shows the council that automobiles have been taken and other deprivations have been committed in this area which probably would not have been committed had the area been patrolled."

The petition explains that this "is not a complaint but a plea for service for the future and a plea that this portion of the business district of Iowa City be given protection in form of definitely assigned policemen to patrol beats in said district regularly."

Today's Hostess Hints

Mrs. M. L. Redfield, 509 E. Davenport street, has a number of old southern recipes. Here are two for different types of bread made with corn meal.

Hoe Cakes
2 cups of corn meal
1/2 teaspoonful of salt
1/2 cup of boiling water
1/2 cup of cold water

Bacon fat or other shortening
Put the corn meal and salt together in a bowl, pour the boiling water over them and when cool enough to handle add the cold water and mix in thoroughly. Shape with the hands into oblong cakes. Bake on a well greased griddle, turning when partly done so as to have both sides browned. Serve hot with plenty of butter.

Corn Sticks
1 1/2 cups of water
1/2 cup of molasses
1 teaspoon of salt
1 cup of corn meal
Three-fourths cup of flour
2 teaspoons of baking powder
Bacon drippings

Put the water, molasses and salt together in a saucepan and bring them to boiling point, add the corn meal and cook, stirring constantly, until the mixture is stiff enough to hold the spoon upright. Turn into a bowl and when cool add the flour and baking powder sifted together. Form the mixture into sticks about five inches long and one inch thick.

Place one cupful of bacon drippings in a shallow baking pan and when smoking hot add the corn sticks shaking them about in the pan to coat each stick with the drippings. Then bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F) about 18 minutes.

Other shortening may be used in place of bacon drippings, if desired, but the best flavor is given by the bacon.

American Olympic Team Leaves for Berlin

Cream of U.S. Athletes Off To Berlin Games

Brundage Presides At Flag Ceremonies On Liner's Deck

NEW YORK, July 15 (AP)—America's challenge to the world for athletic supremacy was under full steam tonight bound for Berlin and the Olympic games.

Survivors of a bitter internecine fight to bar their participation as a gesture of protest against Chancellor Hitler's policies, and winners of a battle of dollars to balance their budgets, 334 men and women competitors and half a hundred officials embarked in the liner Manhattan shortly after noon.

Save for a lone picket who strode up and down the dock, bearing a placard which said: "Boycott Hitler Germany; fight for tolerance, freedom and liberty," no reference to the Nazi situation and no untoward incident marred the takeoff of what is regarded as Uncle Sam's most powerful foreign athletic expedition.

Flag Raising Half an hour before the Manhattan backed into the river, the Olympic insignia with five intertwined circles was hoisted to the top of the aft mast.

Avery Brundage of Chicago, president of the American Olympic committee, assisted by Capt. Harry Manning of the Manhattan, presided over the brief ceremonies. The sun deck was crammed with athletes who stood bare headed as the flag raising ceremony officially started their mission.

"We have the best athletes in major and minor events ever to represent us," said Brundage. "Their records of the past two years speak for themselves."

Confident of Win "But we have 50 other nations against us. Since the war they've been studying our technique and perhaps the fruition of their efforts will be seen at Berlin. I am confident, however, our boys and girls will give a commendable accounting of themselves."

The team itself, insofar as the invasion of Berlin is concerned, sailed in a solvent condition. Actually it was short a little less than $2,000 but this sum has been guaranteed by reliable sources, Gustavus T. Kirby, treasurer of the committee, announced.

All told the Olympic committee still needs at least $75,000—third for operating expenses; one-third to meet an obligation to the permanent Olympic association, and the remaining third to reimburse the athletes themselves, who raised that amount through loans, mortgages or the pawning of personal property.

More Money "I shall not rest content until additional sums in the amount of another $25,000 (making $100,000 in all), are raised with which to defray the expenses of the athletes from the port of New York to their home towns," he said.

Happy that the successful fight he led last winter against an American boycott of the Olympics was crowned with the sailing of the largest team ever to represent the United States in foreign competition, Brundage announced a plan he hopes will obviate repetition in the future of the frenzied financing officials and athletes were put to make the journey.

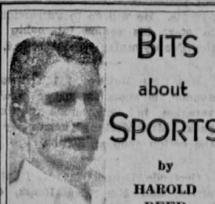

Brooklyn Trades George Earnshaw To St. Louis Cards

ST. LOUIS, July 13 (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinal management today announced acquisition of the veteran pitcher, George Earnshaw, from the Brooklyn Dodgers.

To Brooklyn went Eddie Morgan, rookie outfielder, now with Columbus of the American association after a trial with St. Louis early in the season. Morgan will report to Brooklyn at the end of the 1936 season.

All other league clubs waived on the one-time age of the Athletics. Cash also was involved, said the Cardinal officials, but would not disclose whether St. Louis or Brooklyn was to pay it.

The Cardinals have not decided who will be released to keep the club within the 23-player limit.

BITS about SPORTS by HAROLD REED

AN IMPOSING HOST OF COLLEGE and university coaches is taking graduate-work this summer in the department of physical education at the university. The department is a source of constant pride to Prof. E. G. Schroeder, its head, and rightfully too.

Coach A. J. Robertson, director of athletics and head coach at Bradley Tech, Peoria, Ill., comes here every summer to study hygiene and physical education. Incidentally, "Robby" likes his golf and Finkbine links suits him to the proverbial "T." This year he brought his assistant, John Meinen, with him.

John A. Sterritt, director of athletics at St. Thomas college, St. Paul, Minn., is here along with another Gopher-state mentor, C. P. Blakeslee, coach at Mankato State Teachers.

Coaches pour into Iowa City from the banks of the Gulf of Mexico, shores of Puget Sound, and rocky Vermont, Otto Dunbar, coach at New Mexico Normal, Las Vegas, N.M., Sanford Carver, director of athletics at Washington State Normal, Bellingham, Wash., and John P. Sabo of the University of Vermont represent the corners of the United States.

In addition, G. Lockridge of the Panama Canal zone is here.

J. W. Coleman, director of athletics at the University of Nevada, is reversing the usual procedure by coming to Iowa from far off Reno.

RAY WALTERS AND DICK Westerfield are back from the Olympic swimming tryouts, disgusted in no small way with the way the finals were conducted.

First of all, the pool was a makeshift affair filled with murky water, making it impossible to follow the guidelines on the bottom.

Walters, especially, was handicapped. The ace Iowa swimmer found it necessary to break his usual smooth rhythm by pulling his head far out of the water in order to see where he was going. These are not excuses for the Hawkeyes and their failure to make the grade, but they were careful to note the poor arrangements as the eastern swimmers came to the A.A.U. meet at Des Moines, bent upon finding fault with the Iowa pool. It was perfect compared to the rough, shallow Rocky Point pool at Warwick, R.I., in which the finals were staged.

Fans in Move to Place Crayne on All-Star 11

Sidewalk Voting Booth Will Appear On Streets Today

Votes, votes and more votes continued to pour in for Dick Crayne yesterday in an effort to hoist the big Hawkeye full-back into a starting role on the All-American eleven that plays the Detroit Lions, world's professional champions, in a charity game September 1 in Soldier's field, Chicago.

Today, a large voting booth will be installed on the sidewalk outside of Whetstone's drug store at the corner of Washington and Clinton streets. Every person is urged to pick his favorite eleven, and if indisposed to do this, at least stick in a vote for Dick Crayne alone and let other fans over the country, particularly the Minnesotans, support their own favorites.

Concerted efforts on the parts of followers of Boise of Minnesota, Grayson of Stanford, and Constable of Princeton, forced Crayne down into fourth place in the national standings yesterday. An influx of 349 Iowa City votes yesterday gave him a total of 883 received from local admirers since the voting here began.

Working Gridders! Hawk Football Men Busy at Varied Tasks in Summer

From working in a steel plant to trucking meat, University of Iowa football players are keeping themselves in physical condition for the 1936 season with varied tasks this summer.

About half of the men on the squad of 62 candidates have reported their occupations, with less than two months before the opening of practice.

Shibley Farroh, guard, probably is the hottest of the group, for he is laboring in a steel pressing plant at Michigan City, Ind. Only one man, Carl Vergamini, also a guard, chose to work in an ice plant.

Life guard jobs are held by Orval Matteson, halfback, at Quincy, Ill., and by Joe Moore of Ida Grove, center, at Lake Okoboji. Corney Walker, senior tackle, is a play-

Shutout Boston Bees, 2 to 0, in Opener Of 3-Tilt Series

CHICAGO, July 15 (AP)—The Chicago Cubs retained their grip on the National league leadership again today by shutting out the Boston Bees, 2 to 0, in the first game of the series.

For the Bees, the defeat was but a small part of a bad afternoon. In the fifth inning, Baxter (Buck) Jordan, Boston first baseman, was accidentally spiked on the right heel by Billy Herman, Cub second sacker. Jordan, who was carried from the field, will be lost to the club for at least two weeks.

Cleve Defeats Taylor to Take Finkbine Flight

Other Final Matches May Be Postponed Pending Cool Days

George Frohwein, defending all-city golf champion, reached the finals in The Daily Iowan's second annual city links tourney by tripping Prof. E. G. Blackstone, 2 and 1, yesterday in a match which found both men on the verge of exhaustion after playing under the scorching sun.

Frank Cleve won the title in the Finkbine flight yesterday by swamping Roscoe Taylor, 5 and 4. This match was played far ahead of schedule to accommodate Cleve who is leaving the city today. He gets his gold winner's medal before he leaves, and in the process, votes this one of the most successful tournaments in which he has ever played.

Unless the weather becomes cooler before Saturday, the day set for the final matches in the other four flights, they will be postponed a few days until the killing heat lessens. It is felt that with Finkbine as hard as it is, with balls carrying for 400 yards on each drive, and the heat, that true golfing ability would not be tested. The finals would be endurance contests instead.

The medals, trophies and plaques will be presented the winners after the matches by Prof. Fred M. Pownall, director of the student board of publications and publisher of The Daily Iowan.

Gilliland to Play F. H. Gilliland, who socked out a sizzling 72 in his first round match for the lowest score of the tourney to date, earned the finals in The Daily Iowan flight yesterday by spanking C. Bookwitz, 3 and 2. In the only other match played yesterday Don Regur defeated Mayor

Utopia! Professor Rucknick Spurns Modern Conveniences

Electric light and cars will have no part in Prof. Christian A. Rucknick's summer vacation. He left with his family yesterday. Five hundred miles north of Iowa City in Minnesota lies Star Island, a Utopia where civilization has had little chance. There he will spend the rest of the summer.

Star Island, named because of its contour, is situated in Cass lake and harbors about 60 cottages. In many respects the island is as it was several hundred years ago. Norway pines, many more than 200 years old, rise to a height of more than 100 feet. Never has any part of the forest been cut or burned except for the purpose of making new trails, and then it is done under supervision of the forestry department. Star Island is a part of the Chippewa national forest preserve.

One of the chief problems of cottagers has been the prevention of the spread of civilization. At one time there was discussion of building a bridge from the mainland to the island. Islanders dropped the measure. It would have meant an invasion by transients leaving behind them a trail of tin cans, chewing gum wrappers and cigar butts. The only convenience that the islanders allow themselves is one telephone cable to the mainland.

The island is governed unofficially by what is called the Star Island protective league. The general welfare committee, headed by Professor Rucknick, passes regulations which contribute to the general welfare and are enforceable only by public opinion.

Youngest Steel Firm President Worked Up From 14-Hour Shift

WEIRTON, W. Va. (AP)—Tom Millsop left school early, worked late and married young. Today, as T. W. Millsop, 37, he is the youngest president of a major steel corporation in America, Weirton Steel, with an employment roll of 14,000.

His rise has been likened to that of Charles M. Schwab, a steel man from the ground floor up. Millsop went to work in the mills at the age of 15, quitting school in the eighth grade. He worked 14 hours in the night shift.

"When the week end came," he recalls, "we worked both shifts. I got the work habit then and never have had a chance to change."

War Veteran During the war he served with the Canadian and American air-services. He married at 19, before leaving the army, and has two daughters, Joan, 18, and Betty, 17. He likes to hunt gray fox with gun and dog, plays golf in the eighties, and plays the piano, "just by ear."

His office here contains three large desks, all clear except for a scratchpad and picture of his late predecessor, J. W. Williams, who died several weeks ago.

"We've got a young organization, closely knit," he said, explaining the cleared desks. "We eat lunch together. There's no delay on decisions. We get them over and move on to new things."

"Super-Salesman" Known to the industry as a "super-salesman," Millsop says: "I always wanted to sell. I studied selling. After the war I was purchasing agent for the Standard Tank company. I found purchasing and selling closely related. Later I was a salesman for a Cleveland scrap iron company. I made friends, and one of them introduced me to Mr. Weir and I went to work for him in 1926."

E. T. Weir is chairman of National Steel, $156,000,000 parent of Weirton Steel.

Speaking of his organization, Millsop said: "No one man can make a success of an enterprise. Mr. Williams built an organization of key men through the years by proper selection and the organization remains. That's the way I hope to carry on."

THE CAMDEN RUBY MURDER BY ADAM BLISS

Copyright - Released by Central Press Association

READ THIS FIRST: Detective Keyes and Garry Maughan are seeking the mysterious slayer of Margalo Younger, an actress and old friend of Maughan. She was murdered with a needle-like instrument as she and Maughan sat in the home of Don Van Every, a collector of rare jewels, listening to his gruesome story of the famous Camden ruby's history. The actress had been wearing Van Every's ruby which he described as a "murder stone." Among those questioned by the detective were Maughan; Van Every; his young niece, Joyce, who lives with him; her fiance, Allan Foster; Joyce's companion, Laura Randall, and a Mrs. Joyce, close friend of Van Every's. Another suspect is Roy Barrimore, close friend of the actress, who shot himself shortly after her death. Margalo's maid finds a duplicate Camden ruby among the effects of her dead mistress which, however, proved to be a fake. Keyes interviews Manuel Gonzalez, a friend of Margalo's. Maughan runs into Laura Randall on the street who promises to have some important information for him the next morning. (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 27 I CLOSED the door and watched Laura Randall's taxi move away. I could see her gray hat, trimmed with the pink rose, bobbing in the back window, which was splashed with rain. I was rather sorry I had not tried to draw out the little woman. She might have wanted to talk. Afterwards, I would have given anything if only I had urged her, listened to her. That is, after what happened. For Miss Randall knew more than all of us together. What information she could bring her in, the mystery of Margalo's murder.

When I reached the desk, the clerk told me there was an urgent call from Dow Van Every. I hurried upstairs to my rooms and had reached for the phone to call him when the bell rang. It was Van Every on the wire.

"My ruby, Maughan!" His voice was excited. "It's gone! You remember my telling you I had taken it from my safe? And that only you and I knew where it was? Well, it's gone. I missed it about an hour ago. I've been trying to get you ever since!"

"Have you called Keyes?" "Let me think. He wasn't in, either. Thought you might be together."

"Suspect anyone?" "No—only the detectives, and that's ridiculous."

I laughed, too. Keyes' detectives stealing the Camden ruby! "Where had you hidden it?"

"In Soan's room in the basement—in one of the idols he has around. All Keyes' fault. He should have let me put it in a vault downtown."

"I promised to call around as soon as I could, and bring Keyes, but I told Van Every I needed a bath first."

I was out of my tub in five minutes and dressed in 15. Not that I could do anything about a ruby. A few calls did not locate Keyes anywhere, so I decided to start out and try him again from Van Every's.

As I stepped through the front swinging door, a breathless taxi driver ran up to me, followed by a policeman. "Here he is!" he cried, clutching my arm.

The policeman wheeled me around into the hotel. In a moment, rather dazed at his questions, I had given my name and all the particulars he wanted. Why he wanted them, I didn't know.

"He's the man, all right!" the driver kept saying. I looked at him closely. The face was not familiar, but I realized later that all taxi drivers in New York looked alike to me.

"Without more ado, the policeman hurried me to a cab and we started for some place I had no idea where. I tried to ask him what it was all about, but he gruffly told me to "shut up." All I could get out of the driver was that "He's the man." The driver was sitting in the back seat with the policeman and me.

We stopped finally, and my guard for guard I decided he was now, led me none too gently through a door. My mind was seething with questions. I could not imagine what had happened. It was plain, though, that the officer had no intention of letting me get away. He gripped my sleeve firmly with one of his brawny hands.

The driver was still gibbering incoherently as we entered some sort of an office. Then I knew, as we passed through another door. Knew. This was a morgue. The stillness, the sheeted forms on the long, white marble slabs, an attendant, wearing a white coat, coming forward.

The officer shoved me forward, and I saw in front of me little Laura Randall, her face still pinched with cold, her lips blue, her eyes staring wide open. Her hat was missing, and her gray hair, from which a few hairpins had fallen, was spread fanlike over the cold marble bed.

"Just brought her in," the attendant announced.

Her coat was still buttoned up at the neck, and her hand was holding her big black bag in a tight grasp. I could not believe she was dead. Standing there, dumbly, I saw her fragile figure, still. Half an hour ago, less than that, she had been with me in the taxi. Half an hour ago. Now she was here, dead, in a public morgue. The driver—he seemed more familiar. Surely, I knew, now. He was the driver of the cab I had taken! But what had happened to Miss Randall?

The gray figure fascinated me. I could not take my eyes off it. "Is she dead?" I asked softly.

"She is. And well ask you to identify her," the officer who was my guard demanded roughly.

"Laura Randall, maid and companion of Miss Joyce Van Every," I answered quickly, watching him make notes of my answer. I gave the address, too.

"This taxi driver's a good man," the officer said. "If it hadn't been for him, we never would have got you. Quick work, I'll say."

"How'd it happen?" "How? You know, don't you? If you don't, you ought to! Better examine the woman and find out if there are any more wounds on her."

"Wounds! I gasped. The officer ran his fingers over the woman's temple. My eyes followed his gaze, and I saw, rather felt because his hand had grasped mine and guided it to the spot, a thin, steel-like needle protruding from her forehead.

"Murder, that's what it is, and I don't know anybody that murdered her but you!"

"Me?" "You were the last guy with her, wasn't you? Ain't likely you don't know what happened!"

The attendant started stripping off the gray coat. Then I saw it, gleaming on the bosom of her prim, gray dress. The Camden ruby! Or was it the other, the fake?

"My Lord, she's wearing jewels!" the officer gasped. I persuaded him then to get hold of Keyes as quickly as he could, and leaving me in charge of another policeman, he went to the phone. The taxi driver, whose name I learned was Jerry Knox, told me the whole tale in his own fashion when we sat down later on two chairs outside the rail of the morgue.

"You left her, gov'nor, at the Warrenton. Paid my fare up to—West Seventy-fourth street. Well, when you left I started on my way. I heard what she said when you left. That she'd have something to tell you tomorrow. But I didn't pay no attention. I heard the door slam when you went away."

I remembered Miss Randall's hat through the back window, and nodded.

"Well, at the next corner I stopped for traffic, that's Twenty-ninth and Fifth—the Warrenton is at Twenty-eighth. Lots of traffic there, where I stopped. I looked back to see who was behind me, and if I could swing a little out of line. This lady seemed all right. Fine, she was smiling to herself. I looked away, seeing I didn't have no space to get to the left so I could turn. Then I heard the lady turn down her window and call out something to somebody on the street in another car. 'Miss Joy, I think it was. She said it a couple of times. I looked back thinkin' I would tell her I'd stop, so she could get out if she wanted and see her party. When I looked, the window was still open, but she was crumpled on the seat, her hat on the floor. Lucky I was on the inside track, and a cop was there. Lucky, too, there was a doctor in the crowd that gathered. He said the woman was dead, instant death, and as he rubbed his hand over her forehead he found this here needle thing. The cops called a taxi and shoved her into it. But we left before that. I had to find you. You had been the last guy to speak to her while she was alive. The cops thought you knew something about it. You see, the first thing I told them about was you."

"Nice of you," I murmured. "Which window did she run up?"

"The window toward the street, not the one toward the sidewalk. You see, we was next to the curb."

"Then she saw someone she knew either in another car or across the street?"

"Yeah, and you know how old ladies are? They want to stop right away if they see a friend."

"You didn't see anyone in a passing car?"

"No, I didn't—but the cops are checking them up. When I left the place was in an uproar. I knew I had to find you right away, else the cops would think I done her up. They get funny ideas, you know."

Urge Board To Recover Costs

Report Recommends New County Claim On Jail Expense

Recommendations that the Johnson county board of supervisors recover $3,965.10 from the City of Iowa City for the cost of maintaining city prisoners at the county jail from Jan. 1, 1931 to March 1, 1936, is renewed in an audit report filed at the county courthouse.

Stating that in the audit for 1934, made last winter, the recommendation had been made and the claim prepared and filed with the city, the audit for 1935 states:

"Today no action has been taken by the city. Section 5772 of the 1935 code provides in part: 'Any city or town shall have the right to use the jail of the county for the confinement of such persons as may be subject to imprisonment under the ordinances of such city or town, but it shall pay the county the cost of keeping such prisoners.'

"We recommend that this matter be considered and action taken for the recovery for this item, which when collected reverts to the benefit of the county fund."

City Without Funds

Pointing out that upon the first presentation of the bill the city was without funds in the current budget to pay the claim, the city officials indicated that the bill was referred to the claims committee for investigation.

The audit, which was prepared for State Auditor C. W. Storms by Carl J. Pilmaler, Jerome Kleiner and B. B. Douglas, also recommends that special attention be made to collection of $537.18 in delinquent interest of school funds loans.

Fees Exceed Expense

In a letter accompanying the audit, State Auditor Storms pointed out that the fees collected in 1935 in the clerk's office exceeded the net expense of the office for the year by $18.06 and that the fees in the recorder's office were $123.71 less than the entire office expenses.

Bury 2 Cosgrove Collision Victims

Funeral service for Marjorie Dunbar and Mrs. Paul W. Hogan, victims in the head-on auto crash two miles north of Cosgrove Sunday night, were conducted yesterday.

Miss Dunbar, whose home was in Glenwood, was buried near Hastings yesterday afternoon, and funeral service for Mrs. Hogan was in the morning at St. Patrick's church, with burial in St. Joseph's cemetery.

Playgrounds

Volley ball is the popular game this week on the Horace Mann playground.

The boys on both the Horace Mann and Henry Sabin playgrounds are practicing this week for the kittenball game tomorrow. The game between the playgrounds will be played on the Horace Mann diamond.

Playground youngsters will swim again this morning at the Big Dipper. Children with permission from their parents may swim each Tuesday and Thursday at 10 o'clock. Tickets are distributed on the playgrounds to the children when permission has been granted. Each child furnishes his own suit.

Making Christmas cards in this heat is the phenomenal activity on the Henry Sabin playground as the would-be artists cut stencils in linoleum. These linoleum cuts will be used as patterns to decorate Christmas cards.

A puppet stage was made in the handicraft class at the Henry Sabin playground. Many of the youngsters are making animals of various kinds.

Paul Krotz is the Henry Sabin big game hunter. At least one he would have thought so to see the three original elephants lined up on his arm, leaving paint images wherever they touched.

Sixty-seven years ago J. H. Webb of Orland, Cal., was struck by an Indian arrow as he was rescuing a two-year-old girl from a covered wagon massacre. Now the old wound is making him lame.

About 7,000,000 tons of commercial fertilizer, valued at about $175,000,000, will be used on more than 2,000,000 American farms in 1936, U. S. agricultural engineers estimate.

AROUND THE TOWN

with MERLE MILLER

The tests must go on! Deprived of lights and electric fans through the burning of a university electric cable, teachers in university hall still conducted examinations yesterday.

The cable burned in two at 9 a.m. yesterday, and electric service was not resumed until 5 p.m. in university hall, the chemistry building, University elementary school, and Currier hall.

Repairing the cable in a university tunnel was a warm job, Roy J. McGinnis, head electrician, said.

"Down there it was about 150 degrees," he remarked, "and it really felt cool outside."

We saw a newsboy whom we'd heard about. He was using crutches and we caught a quick glance at him when he thought he was unobserved. It was true. He could stand perfectly well without the aid of support. We'd always stuck up for him before.

There was a couple who had been married for over 50 years. She was a frail little lady, not weighing much over 90 pounds and he was a huge old gentleman who loved to gossip. Her personality was submerged in his and everyone thought she would pass on long before he did. Not long ago he died. Everyone watched the papers for her death which they knew would follow. They are still looking. She is beginning to develop a personality of her own.

One of our readers informs us that she keeps cool by following the iceman around mornings.

Smith Directed To Assign County's Claim Against Receivership

Members of the Johnson county board of supervisors yesterday directed County Treasurer W. E. Smith to assign the county's claim against the Iowa City Savings bank receivership for $91,000 of the state of Iowa for payment out of the state sinking fund.

The board's resolution is expected to be the last step preparatory to the county receiving the funds which have been tied up since the bank closed in 1932.

Prof. Hawley Has Summer Position

Prof. Charles A. Hawley of the school of religion is teaching in New York City this summer in the Union Theological seminary.

Monkeys in the San Diego zoo have to be treated early every week for "hangovers." Mrs. Belle Benchley, the director, reports Sunday visitors feed them too many nuts and sweetmeats.

Would-Be Suicide Checked by Janitor

A would-be suicide yesterday almost drove the office girls in the east wing on the fourth floor of East hall out of the building.

It seems when the man who wanted to end it all tried to drink some highly pungent stuff, better known as Lysol, the odor pervaded the atmosphere and forced the girls in a big hurry from their offices. Smelling their way to the source, they saw the man wrestling with a woman who wanted to prevent him from taking his life.

Professor To Give Series Of Lectures Here

Prof. Victor Bohet of the University of Liege, Belgium, will give a series of lectures next Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8 p. m. in the senate chamber of Old Capitol.

Thursday he will speak on "Democracy Versus Dictatorship in Europe," and Saturday on "Capitalism Versus Communism in Europe." Professor Bohet teaches contemporary drama at the University of Liege and is an authority on Bernard Shaw. He has also studied international relations.

Much of his time he has spent as an exchange professor. The school of letters at the University of Iowa had Professor Bohet as a lecturer for the summers of 1929, 1930 and 1931.

For several years following his connection with the school of letters here, he was a fellow in the C. R. B. foundation.

Last year Professor Bohet taught as an exchange professor in Russia, Germany and England.

This summer Professor Bohet has been teaching in the University of Wyoming during the first summer session.

Second Term Enrollment To Fall Off

As graduating students leave the university, others will register tomorrow and Saturday for the second term.

Only about 60 per cent of the number of students here during the first term will probably be registered for the rest of the summer session, Charles Maruth, assistant registrar, said last night.

During the first term about 3,200 students were on the campus. Registration will be only in University hall and not in Iowa Union, where first term enrollment was carried on.

Students will choose from about 350 courses in 36 departments. Many regular faculty members, who did not teach during the first term, will return to their classrooms Monday.

Graduate students will probably outnumber undergraduates even more decisively than during the first term, with most of them working toward a higher degree.

Classes will begin Monday for the second term, and will end with convocation Aug. 20.

Helen Gilbert Will Oppose Match Winner

Helen Gilbert, G of Clinton, Mo., will play the winner of a badminton match between Katherine Cook and Grace Blizard, G of Fonda.

Because parents are unable to contribute large amounts for the support of their children, the home in which the child is placed must be financially secure.

"They want someone who will act as substitute parents and love and care for the child as they would their own," declared the social worker.

The social service league is located at 19 E. Market street.

Graduate College Offices Will Have New Location Soon

Both organizations will be in their new offices in about a month.

Community Service Social Service League Finds Homes For Children Here

A new type of community service is being gradually built up by the Iowa City social service league—the boarding of children.

Several local persons have already responded to the opportunity to serve as foster parents.

A social worker said yesterday: "There are many different reasons for this need—a working parent, illness in the home, or the death of a parent. Besides many children are sent to Iowa City during the summer to attend the speech clinic conducted by the psychopathic hospital or the reading clinics or other university facilities."

In many instances the need for a foster home is only temporary but it is important that the home used be one of high standards.

An ideal sort of home is that offered by the social service league for use by parents interested in the welfare of their children.

Because parents are unable to contribute large amounts for the support of their children, the home in which the child is placed must be financially secure.

"They want someone who will act as substitute parents and love and care for the child as they would their own," declared the social worker.

The social service league is located at 19 E. Market street.

Plan Rites For Mary Widman
