Proper Brushing Technique Essential for Healthy Gums

By Logan Cleasby, M.D.

Eighty million people or more important how they are doing their brushing and gums should be guided and instructed in brushing.

Tood, Inc., a manufacturer of toothbrushes, says that brushing is not nearly as important as it is. "A few people think brushing is important, but it is not," said a company official.

The average toothbrush is too big for the mouth and too small for the teeth. It is difficult to get all the surfaces of the teeth cleaned.

The toothbrush should be small enough to reach the corners of the mouth and small enough to get the gum margins. The brush should be the right size and shape for the mouth and teeth.

Object Lessons in Brushing

First, the object of brushing is to clean the teeth. Second, the object is to prevent disease. Third, the object is to maintain good oral health.

A brush should be used for at least two minutes, but not more than five minutes. The brush should be held at an angle to the teeth and the toothbrush should be moved back and forth, up and down, in a circular motion.

The toothbrush should be cleaned and stored properly. It should be washed and dried between uses.

The toothbrush should be replaced every three or four months. The toothbrush should be replaced when the bristles become frayed or broken.

For an adult, a toothbrush should be replaced every three months. For a child, a toothbrush should be replaced every six weeks.
