Audience Sides With Iowa In Serious Debate

300 Vote Against U. S. Alliance for Peace In Europe

An enthusiastic audience of approximately 800 persons voted with the University of Iowa debaters at the international debate last night, agreeing that the United States should not ally itself with Great Britain and France to promote European peace.

The debate was one of the most serious of the international series begun in 1924. It lacked the steady flow of English witticisms and quips usually associated with British debate, characterized instead by a sharp conflict over issues involved.

Visiting Speakers

The visiting speakers were David Sealand-Jones of the University of Wales and Harold Munro of Glasgow university, and Iowa was represented by Betty Holt, A3 of Iowa City, and Addison Hickman, G of Sioux City. Iowa's guests took the affirmative with the home team defending the negative.

Formal statement of the question was: "Resolved, that the United States should ally itself with Great Britain and France to promote European peace." Following the debate the audience voted on the merits of the question, not on the merits of the debate, with a substantial majority confirming Iowa's negative position.

"Because of America's world interest and wide foreign trade, she cannot remain neutral unless she is willing to face industrial discontent, investment decline, putting international trade at a standstill and causing even greater unemployment," Mr. Munro declared.

War Disastrous For U. S.

The negative advanced the argument that if the United States did combine with the two European powers, she would not prevent war but only precipitate a world crisis. "War would be disastrous, and the United States has nothing to gain," Miss Holt said.

"By an alliance between Great Britain, France and America, due to their combined control of world trade and capital, they could strangle the aggression by trade embargo," Mr. Sealand-Jones asserted.

"Such an alliance as advocated by the affirmative is like a blank check because it could be filled in and cashed at anytime," Mr. Hickman said.

China Fighting Heavy Odds

By JAMES A. MILLS

SHANGHAI, Nov. 17 (Wednesday) (AP) — China was fighting a desperate, back-to-the-wall fight today to preserve her independence from Japan with the odds increasingly against her.

The government already was evacuating Nanking, the capital. Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's forces were striving frantically to hold Soochow, pivotal point of the main Chinese defense line, against 250,000 Japanese stretching across a 110-mile front 50 miles west of Shanghai.

Chinese Flee

Terrified Chinese were fleeing by thousands from the path of two Japanese armies — one striking west from Shanghai in a drive on Nanking, the other closing in on Tsinan, capital of Shantung province in North China.

China's forces in the north struggled to prevent the Japanese from crossing the Yellow river, the main barrier to Tsinan, despite heavy casualties from air and artillery attacks.

If the Japanese penetrate the powerful Hindenburg line anchored on Soochow, Changshu and Kashing, the Chinese were expected to fall back to new positions stretching from Kiangyin, on the Yangtze river, to Wusih, 100 miles east of Nanking.

That line would be much shorter than the Soochow - Changshu - Kashing line, therefore considerably easier to defend.

Ministries Evacuate

Central government civil ministries were to be dispersed among several cities with Hankow, on the Yangtze river 300 miles west of Shanghai, as the main haven. The ministry of communications began evacuating staff and records to a Hankow-bound steamer. The ministry of foreign affairs and finance also was to go there.

Old Grand Ducal Line Almost Ends by Crash

11 Passengers Of Plane Killed

Belgian Air Liner Goes Down in Flames In Dense Fog

OSTEND, Belgium, Nov. 16 (AP) — A flaming Belgian air liner crashed in the white death of a Belgian fog today, all but wiping out the ancient grand ducal line of Hess Bei Rhein.

All 11 occupants of the London-bound plane were killed — including five members of the former German royal family which has close blood ties with every reigning house in Europe.

Victoria's Grandson Dies

The victims:

The grand duke's 26-year old wife, the former Princess Cecile of Greece and Denmark and a first cousin of the Duchess of Kent.

Their sons, Prince Ludwig Ernst, 6, and Prince Alexander George, 4.

The grand duke's mother, the dowager Grand Duchess Eleonore Von Hesse Bei Rhein, 66, widow of Grand Duke Ludwig who died recently.

Baron Von Reidessell Uzeisenbach, marshal of the grand duke's court.

Herr Martens, German glider expert.

Lina Hahn, maid.

Three crew members.

The tragedy which left Ludwig Von Hesse Bei Rhein the only surviving male member of his branch of the family also cast a pall about Buckingham palace where King Leopold of Belgium was a guest at a state banquet given for King George VI.

Fog Cancels Stop

The grand duke's wedding party had boarded the plane at Frankfort - on - the - Main, Germany. The liner did not make a scheduled stop at Brussels because of the fog, continuing 50 miles to Ostend, on the North sea.

Chapter May Place Emergency Station In Johnson County

Johnson county may have another Red Cross emergency first aid station besides the one at Tiffin, it was announced yesterday by James T. Gwynne, roll call chairman of the local chapter.

Location of this proposed first aid post will be south of Iowa City on U. S. highway 161, perhaps at Hills, if plans of the local chapter are followed out.

There are 48 stations already established in the state.

London, Berlin Entertain State Peace Visitors

LONDON, Nov. 16 (AP) — King Leopold of Belgium came to London tonight and Viscount Halifax left for Berlin, both on state visits in the interests of Europe's peace.

Leopold received a glittering state welcome when he arrived for a three-day visit by which he hopes to strengthen the friendship between his country and the British Empire.

A few hours earlier, Viscount Halifax left for Berlin to confer with Chancellor Adolf Hitler on matters of importance to British-German relations.

King George, wearing the Crimson tunic of a field marshal, welcomed the youthful Belgian monarch at Victoria station and took him to Buckingham palace where he was the guest at a state banquet tonight. Leopold wore a khaki service uniform, with the blue ribbon of the order of the 1933 O'Connell kidnapping.

The trio — Percy Geary, 34, John Oley, 36, and Harold Crowley, 35 — trussed up six guards, menaced them with smuggled guns early this morning and fled from the Onondaga county penitentiary nearby Jamesville, where they were held pending appeal from federal prison sentences for the 1933 O'Connell kidnapping.

The three men, convicted with five others last Aug. 12 of kidnapping John J. O'Connell Jr., scion of a politically prominent Albany, N. Y., family, drove in a commandered car to Syracuse after their escape and disappeared.

Desperate Men

Chief Inspector Albert B. Moore, of the New York state police bureau of criminal investigation, described them as "desperate men, ready to shoot it out with anyone who tries to stop them."

Their escape came less than a week after the arrest in Los Angeles of James Sweeney, last of 13 men indicted for the kidnapping. Two suspects committed suicide in jail while awaiting trial and two pleaded guilty of lesser charges after testifying for the government.

More than 350 state police and scores of federal agents and Syracuse police, armed with machine guns, patrolled all highways leading from Syracuse in what Capt. George P. Dutton, deputy superintendent of state police, described as "New York's greatest manhunt."

Outside Help

The escape, including such stock props as sawed bars and smuggled guns, was led by Geary "with apparent outside help," H. H. Paddock, jail superintendent, said.

Paddock said Geary saved the bars from his cell door, held up the guards at the point of his smuggled guns and forced them to release Oley and Crowley. Then, he added, the three kidnapped Edward Hayes, another guard, and forced him to drive them five miles to Syracuse.

There Hayes was released and spread the alarm.

In Washington, J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the federal department of justice, announced appointment of a special squad of federal agents to direct the search.

Kidnappers Pull Early Morning Prison Break

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 16 (AP) — Three convicted members of the "nation's last organized kidnap gang," armed with two guns and ready to "shoot it out," left a faint trail tonight for federal and state pursuers after an early morning jail break.

Leaders Watch Helplessly As Plans Go Awry

Southerners Conduct An Old Fashioned Filibuster

By RICHARD L. TURNER
WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 (AP) — Administration leaders helplessly watched their well-laid plans go awry today and President Roosevelt's special session program came to an abrupt, if temporary, halt.

In the senate, meantime, southerners conducted an old fashioned filibuster against anti-lynching legislation, adorned with the usual trimmings of full-throated oratory and lengthy reading from old congressional records.

In the house, while confusion got the better of Speaker Bankhead's gavel, republicans spoke bitingly of calling a special session with no work ready to be done. Then they blocked an effort to adjourn until Friday.

The root of the difficulty was the fact that, while both houses had agreed to take up crop control legislation immediately upon reconvening, their agriculture committees were not ready to submit a bill for consideration on the floor.

The president had called for a farm bill, wage and hour legislation, government reorganization and regional planning, and had given a signal to go ahead with preliminary work on tax revision.

Only government reorganization legislation was ready. House leaders decided yesterday that the time was inappropriate for considering it, and in the senate the anti-lynching issue was interposed today.

The chairman of the committees which have charge of revenue legislation indicated that tax revision, which has been demanded as a means of encouraging business, might be deferred until January.

The wage and hour bill passed last session by the senate was still securely sewed up in the house rules committee, but an effort was begun today to rip it loose by means of a petition. If 212 signatures are obtained, the bill will go to the floor automatically.

Chairman Norton (D-NJ) of the house labor committee instituted the action. At the beginning of the day's session she laid the petition on the speaker's desk and a long queue of representatives awaited the outcome.

Both houses had been informed that the bill would be referred to the House Rules Committee. The speaker said the bill was to be referred to the House Rules Committee.

Congress Begins
Muddling Through

WITH THE SPECIAL session of congress only two days old, appearances indicate that what was hoped would be a short, businesslike gathering, replete with accomplishments, is turning into a long, muddling session, much the same as the late and unlamented one last summer.

Meeting two days ago with a definite program of legislation before it, congress had yesterday been slowed to an almost complete stop by a confusion of conflicting purposes.

The farm bill, which was to have been acted upon first, was not yet ready for consideration in the house. The wage and hour bill was securely set up in a house committee. In the Senate any discussion related to the program proposed by President Roosevelt in his message to congress quickly gave way to a continuation of debate which had begun last summer on the anti-lynching act.

Although there can be no disputing that congress is often a time-waster, it is only fair to admit that the blame is not always to be placed on that body. During the last session it was the court reorganization plan—tossed blithely and unexpectedly upon the heels of the administrative reorganization program—which kept congress at Washington far into the summer, only to adjourn with little accomplished.

Now tax revision, which many believe necessary to ward off further recessions in business, threatens to do the same thing. President Roosevelt indicated in his special message to congress that such a tax revision was desirable, but forgot to mention whether or not it was desirable for this session, a fact which has administration leaders in congress puzzled as to just what the president wants.

While there is little doubt that such revision is both necessary and inevitable, it is scarcely probable that it will receive on such short notice the consideration demanded by a measure of importance.

If congress is to accomplish anything worthwhile at this session two things must happen. The president must refrain from throwing any more legislative bombs such as the court bill, and congress itself must curb its tendency to wander from the pointed paths before it into attractive, but futile, legislative byways.

A Lesson In Child Training

MOST PARENTS seeing boys gamble will either punish them severely or shake their heads and comment that gambling is an instinct, that instincts are a part of human nature, and that you can't change human nature.

Here is what the headmaster of one of the nation's leading academies did to solve such a problem:

He went to police headquarters, secured a confiscated gambling machine and had it set up in the mathematics room of his school. He arranged with the instructor to work up a problem involving the law of mathematical probability. Using "phoney" money, the boys discovered several surprising things in solving the problem.

They learned that a player hits the "jack pot" once in 4,000 times. At a nickel a "throw," therefore, it would cost $200 to win $5. The next highest payoff came once in 2,000 plays, which made it cost $100 to win $1.

The incident was sufficient.

Immediately gambling at the academy became unpopular.

Clear thinking on the part of this headmaster had more effect upon the youngsters than hours of talking by irate parents or indignant moralists could accomplish.

Let Them Dream—

KATHLEEN NORRIS, author of more than 50 books, recalls her brother's enthusiasm when, at the age of 14, he came home one day to tell his mother about the telephone, then in the early stages of its development.

The lad predicted spiritedly that when large hotels were built there would be a telephone on the first floor and also one on the top floor, "so that folks won't have to go all the way down to the first floor to answer the phone."

"And that, son," cautioned his mother, "is the kind of exaggeration which makes the world laugh at you."

How wonderful it is that men young in mind will always dream dreams and see visions. Wise is the man who ponders long before scorning "exaggerations." Is the prediction that some day war will be outmoded and that nations will settle differences around conference tables to be scorned? Is the guess that in the years ahead employers and employees will solve their problems without recourse to strikes and blacklists more than the "exaggeration" of the young chemist who saw aluminum in clay?

Think well before ridiculing those whose visions are perhaps greater than our own. Without them progress would be impossible.

The Ladies' Choice

Though he wears a blank stare so hypnotic
That his "brothers" declare he's neurotic,
He has made such a hit
They are forced to admit
That the girls think he's too exotic!

QUEEN OF PAWN?

Conquest, and love, and war, and Italy! Even in middle age and amid the press of alarms, the two lovers caught at the spring tide under the bewitchment of Italian skies. Five years ago he had thought of her as no more than "a young woman of amiable manners." Six weeks ago he had come back in the blaze of sudden, miraculous fame, and on the deck of his flagship "she fell into his arms more dead than alive!" Had not his victory of the Nile quenched Bonaparte's drive to the British far eastern empire? Today, on his return from Malta, no circumstances could stay their irresistible fate. She was the aged British ambassador. In England a plain, good wife awaited his return. It was bad and mad—but oh! it was so sweet.

From their renewed meeting—just 139 years ago today—flowered one of the great love stories of history. How ironical that it should be torn from the plots woven by the queen of Naples to attach Britain as an ally against the menacing Paris directory! How could that queen—Maria Carolina—imagine that her own lifelong, desperate passion to retain Naples would crash to ruin, and her own name linger vaguely as that of the Austrian woman who brought together Lord Nelson and Lady Hamilton?

All things betrayed Maria Carolina except the romance which brought her no fortune. Her sole plan was to use Emma Hamilton—who performed the service gladly—as the secret intermediary between Naples and the admiral who alone could restore the peace of Europe. Racked from first hope to final despair, Maria Carolina lived to see the French army at the gates, the brief, crack-brained Neapolitan republic, the court's reestablishment at the cost of hideous bloodshed, Napoleon's all-conquering campaigns, her exile, and at last her death during the Congress of Vienna which enforced Austrian imperialism. How scant a repayment for the love story later snuffed at by military historians and taken to the hearts of the English folk! Yet, by in-direction she was the direct agent of an imperishable romance.

On that Britain subsided—until there arose the story of Edward and Wallis.

How strangely the wheel of time revolves its lessons! Nelson died at Trafalgar and Lady Hamilton in obscurity. How few have read the historians' war over Maria Carolina's statescraft! But now Britain must once more summon her fleet to guard the balance of power, and may have need of another Nelson. Not separation but the full requital of love accompanies Windsor and his duchess as they sail tomorrow to the America which hails love but does not desire war. In honor, then, let the words of Maria Carolina again be spoken: "What a hero Nelson is—and his brave nation."

They learned that a player hits the "jack pot" once in 4,000 times. At a nickel a "throw," therefore, it would cost $200 to win $5. The next highest payoff came once in 2,000 plays, which made it cost $100 to win $1.

The incident was sufficient.

Clendening Says Public Has Erroneous Idea About Cancer

BY LOGAN CLDENING, M.D.

It is too often said that we do not know the cause of cancer, and this soon gets translated in the public mind to saying we do not know anything about the nature of cancer, or even to we do not know anything about cancer.

That is very far from the truth. We can formulate some pretty good theories on the subject, and it is probable we never will get much further than we are now.

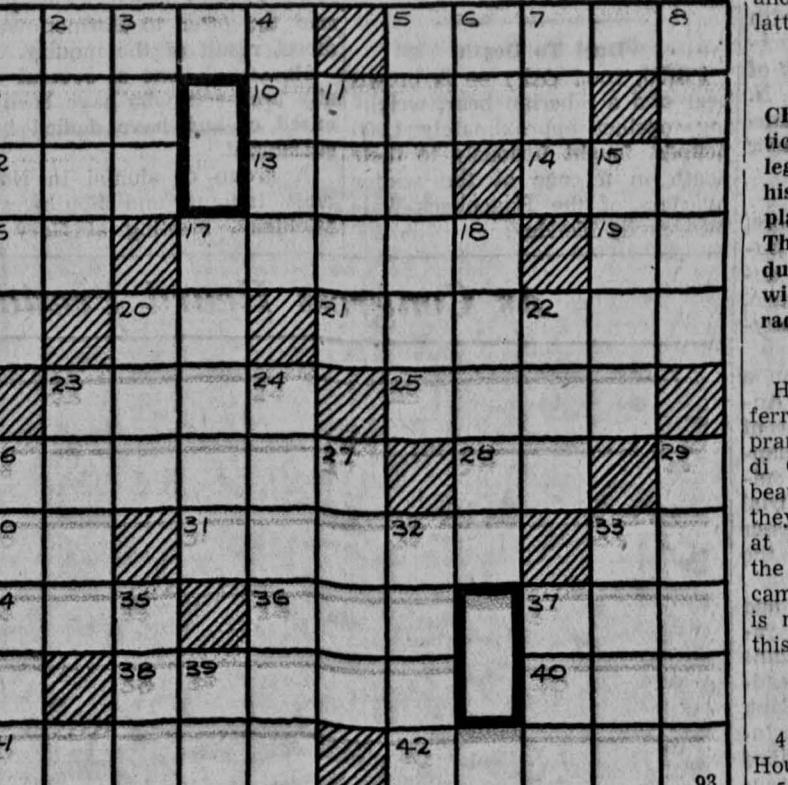

But the life history and the nature of cancer we know very well.

It was worked out over three-quarters of a century ago by one of the greatest medical scientists who ever lived, Rudolph Virchow.

Sometimes a group of cells begins to multiply for no obvious reason. They do not know when to stop, so the result is a lump or tumor. The one easiest for most of us to see is a wart, which is a set of cells which have over-multiplied.

There is one other distinction in these tumors. If it grows continually and also shoots some of its cells out into the lymph or blood stream, so they can be carried to some distant part of the body and start a new growth, it is called malignant.

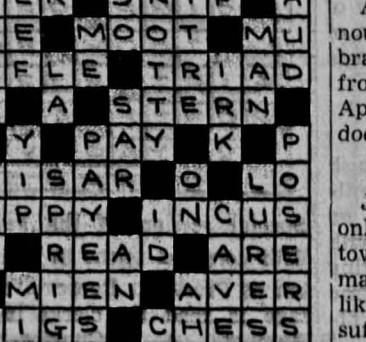

Cancers are malignant tumors growing in epithelial tissue.

Tubbs Seeks to Develop Offensive Punch

Mentor Sends Team Through Long Practice

Passing Attack Given Attention; Frosh Gain in Line

Driving his men hard in an effort to fashion an offensive drive that will puncture the powerful Nebraska line, Coach Irvin Tubbs yesterday sent his University of Iowa football team through a long drill on the wind-swept practice field.

The Hawkeyes will end their season against the Cornhuskers at Lincoln, Neb., next Saturday before an estimated sell-out crowd of 36,000.

Pointing for the season finale, the Iowa mentor sent his men through a long scrimmage session against the freshman squad. The yearlings were able to break through the varsity line for several long gains and Tubbs has promised another hard workout for today in an effort to stem the defensive slump that has apparently hit the Hawks.

Aerial Drill

The development of a potent aerial attack also came in for a good deal of attention. With Nile Kinnick, Frank Balazs and Bill Kelly alternating at the throwing end the Hawkeyes completed several tosses for good gains. The Cornhusker passing defense is stronger than most of the teams that Iowa has met this year with a record of only 25 completions made on the 83 passes tried against them. They have intercepted 16 of the enemy's tosses.

Unless the Husker forwards suffer a severe letdown after the Pittsburgh game, the six rugged seniors and the one junior in the line will be the season's toughest combination for the Hawkeye band wagon...

Husker Line Tough

The Iowa line will concentrate on stopping the towering plainsmen, Ted Doyle and Fred Shirey, tackles, and Charles Brock, center. Although many of the Nebraskans opponents have made fine gains, against the Cornhuskers, the Nebraskans have proved especially difficult near their own goal line.

The Indiana team made 130 yards against them, but lost, 7-0. The Hoosiers made only 55 against Iowa. The Minnesota Gophers, although they lost, 14-9, registered 191 yards. This tenacious goal-line defense, something that has bothered the Hawkeyes all year, is necessitating unusual emphasis on offense in the Iowa camp.

The injury jinx, a sore thumb for the Hawks all season, is still a hindering factor for the Iowa team as they prepare for the Cornhuskers. Capt. Homer Harris is still bothered by a sore shoulder, although he has seen some action in both of Iowa's last two games. Robert "Tarzan" Herman will be ready for the Huskers but will be hampered by a knee injury that has kept him from practicing for the past three days. Frank Gallagher, who held down a regular starting post at one of the tackles until just before the Purdue game, may be ready for the season's last game but he too will be bothered by a lack of practice.

Trip plans, announced yesterday, call for the Iowa squad of 33 athletes and about eight officials to board Pullmans tomorrow at 10 p.m.; the train leaving Friday at 4:42 a.m. Arrival in Omaha is scheduled for Friday at 12:45 p.m. and after the season's last workout, the party will spend the night at the Paxton hotel in Omaha. The 55-mile trip to Lincoln will be made Saturday morning, with the team scheduled to arrive several hours before game time.

Hod Shots

By G. R. HODENFIELD

I received a letter from Coin, a small, southwestern Iowa town, the other day that the writers seemed to feel expressed the opinions of all Hawkeye fans in that part of the state. The letter is much too long to reproduce in full here, but parts of it may be of interest.

Starting with the regime of Ossie Solem as mentor at Iowa, the letter follows the football fortunes of the Hawkeyes until they left for the Purdue game several weeks ago. The biggest gripe of the writers seems to be the lack of conference basketball and football championships at Iowa since the golden days of the early '20's.

Says the letter in part: "Some news reports lead us to believe that Iowa's material is still lacking, others say that Iowa's spirit, especially among the players, is about to flicker out completely...

Drake University at Des Moines seems to have more fight than Iowa, and even poor, down-trodden Iowa State seems to have more team spirit than the Hawkeyes...

It has been suggested that the Drake team don Iowa uniforms and play Minnesota in the Homecoming game this fall for fear of a repetition of the 52-0 disgrace of last fall at Minneapolis...

"In this section, Nebraska is looked upon as a model of football fighting spirit but if, Iowa were to show their share of this spirit we are sure that more fans would climb back on the Hawkeye band wagon...

"We few fans here in southwestern Iowa have been supporting the Hawks for years, always hoping against hope for that day we could brag a little about Iowa's Big Ten champions in football, basketball or both, only to have our hopes grow dimmer with each succeeding contest..."

The only answer that can be made to the writers of this letter will be in the form of an invitation. Since Coin, if my geography is correct, is only about 30 miles from Lincoln, Neb., I suggest that the authors travel to Lincoln next Saturday to see the Hawkeyes battle the Cornhuskers. The odds all point to a Nebraska victory but I'll bet my bottom dollar that the 36,000 fans that are expected to witness the game will see one of the 'fightin' Iowans' teams that has ever played for the Old Gold and Black.

University High Drills for First Basketball Tilt

Working with one of the smallest squads physically and also one of the most inexperienced he has ever had, Coach William R. Wood, University high basketball mentor, yesterday continued drilling his cage hopefuls on fundamentals in preparation for their game with Roosevelt of Cedar Rapids on Nov. 26.

In the workout, Coach Wood stressed shot shots and footwork. After a lengthy drill on these phases, a short scrimmage between the sophomore and varsity squads ensued.

From the showing of the varsity squad in scrimmage sessions the best lineup seems to be Duane Carson and Ham Ries at the guard posts, Capt. George Miller at one forward and Bob Carson and Ernie Krogh alternating at the other and Ed Burns playing at center.

The Blue and White quintet plays its first game of the season Nov. 26 against Roosevelt of Cedar Rapids.

Two Intramural Games Called Off

Interfraternity touch football games scheduled for yesterday afternoon turned out to be a complete fizzle as far as any playing was concerned.

Sigma Chi won their game by forfeit from Delta Chi when the latter failed to appear on the chilly field.

Beta Theta Pi and Sigma Phi Epsilon postponed their game until some time next week.

All Set For Basketball Season

Sam Johnson, captain elect of the University of Iowa basketball team is shown here talking over prospects of a winning season with Coach Rollie Williams. Seven returning lettermen along with some promising sophomore talent bolsters Iowa's hopes.

This year's season will get underway, Dec. 9, when the Hawkeyes will play host to Carleton college in a double-header affair.

Erickson Takes Race

Winner Makes Good Time In 2 Mile Chase

Merlin T. Erickson, sophomore from Waterville, brought the fall outdoor track season to an end yesterday afternoon when he led six weary two-milers to the tape in the annual Hawkeye run. Running against the weather as well as his competitors, Erickson covered the distance in 10 minutes 34 seconds. Wearing gloves in addition to the usual track clothes, the seven men left the west side track to wind around Finkbine field and back to the track.

At least they aren't going to be able to shake their heads and say "He gave the whole thing away before the game."

Iowa football players, stopping in Omaha Friday night won't get a chance to see how Biff's Cornhuskers look against Pitt last week.

After tonight's showing of Pitt-Nebraska motion pictures here, Freshman Coach Ed Weir announced simply that Friday's performance has been postponed.

Due to the presence in Omaha Friday evening of the University of Iowa football team, the motion pictures of the Nebraska-Pittsburgh game will not be shown at the community playhouse that evening. Persons who have already purchased tickets for the showing may return same and receive a refund or tickets for the Nebraska-Iowa pictures, which will be shown at the playhouse Nov. 26.

Time Considered Good

According to Coach George Bresnahan the time made by Erickson was very good as 10 minutes 10 seconds is considered good time in normally warm weather. Coach Bresnahan also expressed his regret that the track had been in such bad shape for the balance of the fall season, thus causing the postponement of several events.

Those entered in the event were Erickson; Vincent Sabatini, junior from Rochester, N.Y.; Orr, a sophomore from Thorburn; Larry Zuccolo, New York City; Jimmy Lyle, senior from Des Moines; and Graves, Cherokee junior.

Wins Trophy, Medal

The winner will be awarded the travelling trophy now in the possession of Cameron Campbell, who won it last year in the time of 11 minutes 26.9 seconds. Erickson will also receive a gold medal for winning the event. Graves and Orr will receive silver and bronze medals for their respective second and third places.

The meet was the last in the outdoor series of all university intramural track events and was under the supervision of the varsity track department. Coach George Bresnahan acted as official starter. Francis Cretzmeier was in charge of the event.

The remainder of the schedule is as follows:

Mon., Nov. 22: 7:30-Lower A vs. Lower C. 8:15-Lower B vs. Lower D. 9:00-Upper A vs. Upper D.

Wed., Nov. 24: 7:30-Upper A vs. Upper C. 8:15-Upper B vs. Upper D. 9:00-Lower A vs. Lower C.

Mon., Nov. 29: 7:30-Lower A vs. Lower D. 8:15-Lower B vs. Lower C. 9:00-Upper B vs. Upper C.

Wed., Dec. 1: 7:30-Upper A vs. Upper D. 8:15-Upper B vs. Upper D. 9:00-Lower B vs. Lower C.

Mon., Dec. 6: 7:30-Lower A vs. Lower B. 8:15-Lower C vs. Lower D.

Wed., Dec. 8: 7:30-Upper A vs. Upper B. 8:15-Upper C vs. Upper D. 9:00-Lower B vs. Lower D.

Auto Show Causes Postponement Of Pole Vault Event

Because of the auto show being held in the field house the Canby pole vault competition has been postponed until Nov. 30. All those interested in entering this event should get in touch with assistant track coach Ted Swenson or Francis Cretzmeier. A travelling trophy will be awarded the winner and gold, silver and bronze medals to the first three places.

The singing career of Richard Bonelli, Metropolitan opera baritone, who will appear here in the university concert series next Tuesday evening, has covered France, Germany, Italy and Cuba. Although an operatic career has made him world-famous, his true love is engineering and tinkering about inventing a new type of spark plug that was accepted by the inventor.

Bonelli is a man's man. He dotes on golf and can't break below 100, which is a big worry to him. He has had almost as many different kinds of jobs as there are letters in the alphabet. When Bonelli was a little boy, he was one of those thousands of boys that shouts "Extra, extra! Paper, mister!" filling his lusty lungs with the bitter cold, wintry air.

He was an ambitious chap and worked up to circulation manager in the newspaper at Port Byron, N. Y., his home town. Still, he was not satisfied, he took other jobs as magazine salesman, bank messenger, farmers' help in harvest time, mechanic's helper and finally won a scholarship to Syracuse university and told him to come to Paris.

Gets Help From Friend

A jubilant but anxious Bonelli went back to New York with nothing between him and Paris but a nice stretch of ocean and no money. A friend came to his rescue and offered him $85 a month to study abroad. Bonelli boarded the next boat and sailed for France.

He had his "ups and downs" even after his student days were over, but after meeting the noted impresario of Monte Carlo opera, Raoul Gunsbourg, attained his goal — he thought — and would be an engineer.

Gets Singing Disease

Here fate started working and infected Bonelli with the "singing disease" that sounded the death knell for his engineering hopes and his singing career was born. From hotel to hotel on the west coast he went, asking for a singing job. Fate turned thumbs down until he came to the orange grove country. He found a hotel that needed him, and here he worked and studied until Arthur Alexander, composer and musician wrote to Bonelli and told him to come to Paris.

He Started His Steady Climb to Success

Although he was engaged by the Monte Carlo Opera company, and later by the Chicago Civic Opera company and the Metropolitan Opera company, Bonelli still tinkers with his shiny roadster and continually reads countless motor magazines.

In 1932, he was contracted with the Metropolitan but the ghost of his university days still lingered. It was not an uncommon sight to see him carry a mysterious package under his arm to rehearsals, which turned out to be nothing but a bunch of motor magazines that he studied at his time.

Last year, he attained the greatest height of his career. Of all the baritones of America, he was chosen to sing at the inaugural concert at Washington, D. C. Still, he is the same Richard Bonelli of his student days, "jogging" along in his car, talking to people on the way with his inventive mind still delving into the unknown to discover and create.

Prof. K. Porter Talks to Order At Iowa Union

"They ought to patch up the neutrality act by repealing it," Prof. Kirk H. Porter of the political science department declared at a luncheon of the Order of Artus in Iowa Union yesterday noon.

"The neutrality act calls upon the president to take sides and to abandon international law," Professor Porter said. He also stressed the problem of closing up the loopholes in the tax laws on corporation surpluses and the need to patch up the social security act which is too complex.

"The main objectives of the new deal still remain to be carried out," Professor Porter stated. It is necessary to go forward with these main objectives, to try to do what the NRA attempted concerning hours and wages and to try to do again what the AAA started concerning agricultural production control," Professor Porter declared.

FOLLOWING THE TRIALOGUE THE TEAM WILL CARRY ON A CONVERSATION AMONG THEMSELVES. AT THIS TIME THE AUDIENCE MAY ASK QUESTIONS PERTAINING TO THE SUBJECT. THIS SERVICE IS OPEN TO THE PUBLIC.

ON THE SAME DAY THE GOVERNING BOARD OF THE SCHOOL OF RELIGION WILL HOLD ITS REGULAR SEMI-ANNUAL MEETING. THIS WILL CONSIST OF A PRIVATE LUNCHEON IN IOWA UNION, FOLLOWED BY A BUSINESS SESSION IN THE BOARD ROOM OF OLD CAPITOL.

Methodist

In inviting the Chicago physician to speak from here, President Lenox R. Lohr of the NBC said Dr. Fishbein, as a physician and editor, was familiar with the problems surrounding network broadcasting on the topic of social diseases.

Dr. Fishbein said in his prepared address:

"Known to the world for centuries, the general diseases, sometimes called the social diseases, have gradually developed in increasing prevalence and prominence, while other infectious diseases have gradually been brought under control."

If these diseases were transmitted chiefly by flies or mosquitoes, they would long since have been stamped out."

The north-midwest section includes engineering schools in Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin. The convention accepted the invitation of Michigan college of mining and technology to meet at Houghton, Mich., next year.

Engineers Elect Kurtz to Office

Prof. E. B. Kurtz, head of the electrical engineering department, was elected vice-president of north-midwest section of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education at an annual meeting in Milwaukee, Wis., where Marquette university served as host.

His remarks were broadcast at the invitation of the radio system "to emphasize the NBC sympathy with the current campaign against social diseases and to illuminate its policy." Last Wednesday NBC banned a broadcast by General Hugh Johnson on the same subject.

General Johnson, however, was asked to introduce Dr. Fishbein. His introduction was picked up from Washington.

Taxpayers Ask For Legislation On Bond Issue

DES MOINES, Nov. 16 (AP)—Iowa taxpayers association representatives, meeting here today, urged passage of a law by the next legislature to prohibit the issuance of general obligation bonds — with certain exceptions — by any Iowa municipality unless approved by 60 per cent of the voters.

Legislative Program Chairman H. S. Van Alstine of Gilmore City stated:

Such a law will close some of the open doors which now allow new bonded debt to be contracted without the knowledge of the man who pays the bill until he calls at the county treasurer's office to get his tax receipt.

Other points in the legislative program unanimously approved by the association membership called for:

1. No new taxes until present revenues are efficiently distributed and expended.

2. No increase in functions or increases in taxes until present functions are properly coordinated.

3. Endorsement and approval of the budget appeal law passed by the last legislature.

4. A pledge to protect the right of the taxpayer to have his objections, to what he considers waste and extravagance, heard and passed upon by an impartial body before the money is spent.

5. Moving-pictures of the Iowa-Washington football game were shown at the junior chamber of commerce meeting last night at the Iowa grill. Glenn Devine, a member of Iowa's coaching staff, described the pictures, and "Dutch" Lewis operated the movie machine.

A committee was appointed to manage the out-of-town basketball radio broadcasts, to be given under the auspices of the junior chamber.

Oppose Motion For Dismissal Of Gas Case

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 16 (AP)—A federal prosecutor, opposing defense motions for dismissal of the government's gasoline price fixing case, took the position today that market publications were innocent tools of the major oil companies' "conspiracy."

Defense attorneys, in arguing before Judge Patrick T. Stone for a directed verdict of acquittal, had asserted the government's dismissal of charges against trade journals because of failure to link them to the alleged conspiracy, had created "fatal variance" between the government's case and the indictment, which named the journals as co-conspirators.

Special Prosecutor John Henry Lewin, replying for the government to the defense motion, declared that John Steiger, 24-year-old Tulsa market checker for Platt's Oligram, was "completely in the hands" of the independent refiners from whom the major companies purchased gasoline at allegedly high prices in 1935 and 1936.

Referring to Steiger, Lewin said "he took what (prior information) he gave him and published it, and his employer let him do it."

The FIREFLY

WHAT HAS HAPPENED THIS FAR: The coronation of King Ferdinand the Seventh in 1808, is the signal for wild celebration in Madrid. In popular cafe "El Asador," known as "the Firefly," encourages a flirtation with a handsome young Spaniard, Don Diego. Etienne, a French officer who is infatuated with Nina, observes the episode and, furious, challenges Don Diego to a duel.

Chapter Two

Without another word, the Frenchman rejoined Etienne. Don Diego took Nina's arm.

"Well, where shall we go for our supper?" he said, unconcernedly.

"Listen to me. You get on your horses and go right now. Go back to Valencia. That man is an expert kinsman."

"I've beaten him so far."

"But I tell you, you can't fight with him. He'll kill you."

"It doesn't matter," Don Diego replied. "After this night, I'll be willing to die."

Nina looked at him, a little conscience-stricken now at the impending tragedy. Just then, as they stood there, a handsome coach came along the cobble street. As she saw it, Nina stepped forward.

"Your coach?" Don Diego asked.

"Yes."

Immediately, Don Diego stepped to the middle of the street. When the horses pulled to a sudden stop, he opened the door of the coach with a flourish, and turned to Nina, waiting for her to enter. On his face was a look of delightful expectancy. But in the next moment a very impressive-looking man stepped from the carriage. It was the Marquis de Melito, one of Ferdinand's councillors. Don Diego looked on with amazement while Nina stepped into the coach.

As the horses started off, Nina waved a hand to the Spaniard.

"Good luck, tomorrow morning," she called.

Inside the coach, the Marquis watched her closely. "You seems very interested," he remarked.

"No, not really. Are you worried?"

"A little," the Marquis admitted.

Nina put her hand on his, speaking with simple sincerity.

"You needn't worry. You should know that by now," she said.

A few minutes later, the coach stopped outside the residence of the Marquis. In silence, it was entered the house and made their way to a small, official-looking room. The Marquis placed a chair for Nina. The dancer picked up a cigarette, and the nobleman lighted it for her.

"Well, did you find out anything here?"

"A little."

"Good."

"Those French officers are so sure of themselves that it isn't very hard to make them talk," Nina continued. "The only difficulty is getting rid of them afterwards. The last was the worst of all. But he was not the most difficult. She sniffed slowly at her cigarette.

"It seems that Napoleon is sending down thirty thousand more French troops."

The Marquis looked thoughtful. "Thirty thousand!" he exclaimed. "That will make over one hundred thousand French soldiers in Spain." He paused, then stood up. "What have the officers been told?"

"Why do they think they are here?"

"It's always the same thing," Nina replied. "That they're here as a protection in case the English start to invade the continent."

"There is no talk of war with us?"

"No. Only with the English."

The Marquis impudently.

"I'm sorry," Nina said. "That's all they seem to know."

"I'm convinced that that is all any of them know," the Marquis said. He hesitated for a moment.

"Nina, I'm going to send you on an important trip," he went on impressively. "The most important one you've ever taken."

Nina faced him, listening intently.

"I have arranged a professional appearance for you in Bayonne, where the conference between Ferdinand and Napoleon is to be held."

Nina was amazed. "You mean that the King is really going? He's leaving his country at a time like this?"

The Marquis shrugged his shoulders. "He and his councillors believe the conference is a friendly one. That Napoleon's only interest

1938 Streamlined Cars Featured in 4th Annual Auto Display

Six Hundred Examine Latest Models at Automobile Show

First Day of Exhibition Draws Crowds To Fieldhouse

Six hundred Iowa Citians—eager to see the latest developments in automobile design and manufacture—thronged the Iowa City Lions club fourth annual automobile show in the fieldhouse last night.

They inspected 32 streamlined 1938-model cars—exhibited by Iowa City dealers—to learn the result of an additional year's automotive research to gain safer and more comfortable highway travel.

Inquisitive motorists seated themselves within the glistening models and kept exhibitors busy with a stream of questions.

Chromium Radiators

All the 1938 models featured a distinctive chromium radiator grille which accentuated the car's rounded fenders, body and headlights.

Two cutaway models—stripped to the chassis—showed Iowa Citians the inner workings of modern automobile engines. Other spectators peered into open radiator hoods of the models to learn about the engines.

Trailer Shown

Hundreds walked into a modern automobile trailer to see a completely furnished kitchen—with stove, refrigerator and sink—a dining room and bedroom. The interior is veneer.

The national championship Iowa City high school orchestra, conducted by Lloyd F. Swartley, played semi-classical music during the four-hour show. Public address system announcements were made by Ted Hunter of Iowa City.

Art Sheppard on Hand Tonight

Tonight's show, starting at 6:30, will feature Art Sheppard, WMT radio announcer, who will roam through the crowd asking questions. Sheppard will use the public address system.

Dusty Keaton's orchestra will also play tonight, and two Iowa City girls, Jean Irvin and Norma Leineny, will dance.

Style Show Tomorrow

The exhibition will close tomorrow night with a style show. The latest modes in women's gowns, dresses and coats will be displayed by 15 models. The style show will be sponsored by Willard's Apparel shop.

Motion pictures illustrating highway safety are displayed at a booth sponsored by the Iowa City Board of Underwriters. Other booths located in the center of the armory displayed household equipment.

The cars are lined against the armory walls and a stage is located in the east end, just west of the basketball court.

Holders of chauffeurs' licenses have until Dec. 31 to renew present licenses for 1938, W. E. Smith, county treasurer, has announced.

New applications will not be accepted until Jan. 1, 1938. Persons having lost a stub from their licenses are required to take a complete examination before being issued another license.

Justice Fines Employees

Intoxication Named As Charge Against Trio of Road Crew

Three employees of the J. P. Abrahamson construction company of Des Moines each were fined $25 and costs for intoxication on a public road by Justice of the Peace T. M. Fairchild Monday.

The men, Roscoe Hiatt of Des Moines, Loren Hamman of Cedar Rapids and Albert Hamman of Shellsburg ran two 10-ton dirt-moving machines and an automobile into a ditch seven miles south of here Saturday. They were then reported to Sheriff Don McComas, who took them to the county jail.

The two dirt-moving machines, operated by Roscoe Hiatt and Loren Hamman, and the car, driven by Albert Hamman, went into the ditch at the same time.

Hiatt and Loren Hamman were moving the machines from Cedar Rapids to Burlington, accompanied by Albert Hamman in the car.

1938 Cars Are Shown

Many Booths, Even Furnished Bedroom, Compete for Honors

By HELEN RIES

Announced by triumphant red, yellow and white banners, enthusiastic exhibitors and the shine of flood lights on shining chrome trim the cars of 1938 last night made a dramatic appearance as they were lined in the west end of the fieldhouse at the annual auto show sponsored by the Iowa City Lions club.

Radios, stokers, refrigerators, wall paper, men's clothing, home made games and even a furnished bedroom made up the booths that competed with the new cars in attractiveness.

Spectators, chilled by the raw weather, crowded around a modern trailer and clamored to see the compact inner finishings.

Leaving the trailer the spectator wandered up the line of new cars—all of them. New trim, new body shapes, new fabric in upholstering, new type horns, improvements in motors and in "gadgets," all these were pointed out by the men who wore the white ribbons in their lapels labeled, "exhibitor."

Boy Scouts had prepared a table on which they showed some of the many things that had been learned at national jamboree. Girl Scouts chose to demonstrate winter bird shelters.

Iowa City milk men were giving free cups of milk to all comers. The milk was given out as a feature of national milk week.

What the well-dressed man will wear when he drives his 1938 car was displayed before the foot lights of still another booth. Tastefully arranged flower groups lined the back of an exhibit.

Electric refrigerators, ironers, washing machines and stokers attracted crowds of prospective buyers who looked for the best equipped machines. New radios boomed out rhumba music, and Iowa City high school's band played its instruments upon the large stage at the east of the show room.

Scouting Group Hears Talk By Missouri Man

William Lacy of Kansas City, Mo., discussed activities of Alpha Phi Omega, honorary scouting fraternity, at a dinner-meeting of the local chapter last night. The group met on the sun porch of Iowa Union.

Lacy is a national representative of the fraternity which lists 53 chapters. The discussion was informal.

Wintery Blasts Chill Midwest; Snowfall Heavy in Kansas

CHICAGO, Nov. 16 (AP) — Winter's advance agents—cold and snow—chilled the midwest today.

Temperatures ranged from freezing at many points to two above zero at Devils Lake, N. D.

The heaviest snow, eight inches, was reported at Pittsburgh, Kan., but Meteorologist S. D. Flora viewed the fall in the central and south sectors of that state as "a life saver for wheat."

Light snow fell in northern Oklahoma, eastern South Dakota, southwestern Missouri, the Great Lakes region and the Canadian provinces. Flurries occurred in Chicago, Milwaukee and the Texas panhandle.

Two deaths in automobile accidents, one in Kansas and the other in Oklahoma, were attributed to the storm.

Householders stoked their fires against colder weather overnight.

Cotton Regulations Battle May Delay Administration Program

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 (AP) — Senate farm leaders called in Secretary Wallace today to help clarify the confused crop control situation.

A dispute between senate and house subcommittees on cotton regulations appeared likely to delay the whole administration program for 10 days.

Chairman Smith (D-SC), shouting determination to call the senate agriculture committee together every day and nights and Sunday, too, if necessary to get out a bill, announced a conference tomorrow with the secretary.

"We've asked Wallace and his crowd up here to explain just what all these farm bills mean," he said.

Jumping the gun on the committee, Senator Ellender (D-La.) introduced in the senate a proposal for tobacco marketing quotas to become effective on a two thirds referendum vote of the producers.

He said he would make a similar proposal for rice.

A house agriculture subcommittee headed by Representative Fullmer (D-SC) brought out a voluntary control program for cotton. It went to the full committee for inclusion, if approved, in a house farm bill.
