Secretary Hall Warns Japan To Steer Clear Of Chinese Customs

Future of Open Door in China Gives Concern

U.S. Maintains Contact With Other Nations On Part Fear

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27 (AP) - Secretary Hull, concerned by the growing influence of China's "open door," warned Japan today of the "dangerous" position in which the United States has placed itself.

"We are not in the least urging any of these countries to change their policies;" he said. "We are not in the least indulging in criticism of the conditions of their trade;" he added, "but we do ask that the future course of Japan be decided in the interest of the whole world and in the interest of Japan itself."

Whether Washington and the other nations will heed this warning remains to be seen. The United States, which has consistently held to the "open door" policy, has recently been forced to admit that it is in a state of "economic isolation." This admission has led some to speculate that the United States may be prepared to adopt a more flexible policy in its relations with China.

Doctors Find Use of Insulin Helpful for Mental Diseases

By LEON C. question, M.D.

I read the other day some of the latest results of the use of insulin in the treatment of certain mental diseases. Upon certain, well-proven grounds, which probably will be discussed on May 2, at the annual meeting of the American Medical Association, I report that the case of a young man that I saw not so long ago illustrates the possibility of a new method of treatment.

The patient was a young man of 25 years, who had been a student at the University of Iowa and who had been doing well until he began to show symptoms of mental disease. He was first seen by me five years ago, and I found that he was suffering from a chronic disease of the nervous system. For a long time, he had been unable to work, and he had become very depressed.

I thought that the patient might be helped by the use of insulin, and I therefore recommended that he be given a trial of the treatment. At first, he did not want to try it, but I was able to persuade him to do so. I gave him insulin in a dose of 0.1 cc. every hour, and the results were quite striking. Within a few days, he began to feel better, and within a month, he was able to return to work. He has continued to take insulin ever since, and he has been quite well ever since.

It seems to me that this is a promising method of treatment, and I hope that it may be tried in other cases of mental disease. I believe that the use of insulin may prove to be a valuable addition to the armamentarium of the physician.

"Christmas is coming - why air, sunshine and tropical music."

Let us mention another clue for the clever buyers who are planning to impress their loved ones with unique gifts this season.

On the campus, the atmosphere is buzzing with excitement as students prepare for their important exams. The stress of academic demands can be overwhelming, but taking care of yourself is crucial.

Small things like getting enough sleep, eating healthy, and taking breaks can help reduce stress and improve your performance. Remember, you're not alone in this. Your friends and classmates are going through the same struggles, and it's important to support each other.

In conclusion, whether you're buying for yourself or someone else, remember to take care of yourself. Christmas is a time to celebrate, but it's also important to prioritize your well-being.

Big Jim Craig Scores For Winners In First Period

By ALAN GODEL

New York, Nov. 27—1937—California with a 3rd quarter touchdown, its first of the game, gave Army the victory over the Fighting Irish by a score of 6 to 0 in heavy mud and fog at Yankee Stadium Saturday afternoon.

The Cadets had the ball twice in the 1st period but were unable to score and had to settle for punts. The Irish were able to score a touchdown from a short distance in the 3rd period after the Irish defense had held the Cadets scoreless for most of the game.

Executive Editor of the New York Times, Wm. J. Shepard, was one of four New York officials who officiated at the game.

The game was played in front of a capacity crowd of 100,000 and the weather was heavy rain and fog. The wind was from the east.

Make Plans For Mikado Matinée At High School

A matinee performance of "The Mikado," to be presented by the students of the G. A. H., is under the auspices of the high school drama department. A matinee performance will be given Wednesday afternoon. The booking office is open from 12 to 1 p.m. under the direction of Miss Frandle, Mrs. M. A. Neumann, and J. R. Johnson. The booking office is located in the old music room.

The play will be presented by the high school drama department in cooperation with the G. A. H. and the local community. The play is expected to be a hit with audiences of all ages, and tickets are on sale for $1.00 each. The proceeds will go to support the drama department and the G. A. H.

Alfred G. Otsby, of the drama department, has been appointed to direct the production. The cast includes several talented and experienced actors, and the play is expected to be a memorable experience for all who attend.

The Mikado is a classic opera by Gilbert and Sullivan, first performed in 1879. The story is set in Japan and follows the adventures of the Count Ohnara, who is transformed into a woman and marries the King of the Mikado. The play features a rich score and a colorful setting, making it a must-see production.

Don't miss your chance to see the Mikado Matinée at High School. Tickets are on sale now, so make sure to get yours today and experience the magic of this timeless classic.
‘Something Remains’ Out Of Over-Written, Amless Novel

Nebraska Clan Lives, Loves, Hates In Sandoz Novel

"OLOGIC HOUSE" by Willa Cather

Willa Cather's "Log Cabin" - the first of her Nebraska novels - does not appear in the October 13th issue of the "New Republic," as announced.

The "Log Cabin" was written in 1919, and has been described as "the most characteristic" of Cather's work. It was published in 1921.

The book is about the life of a Nebraska family, the Sorensens, who live on a farm near Lincoln. The story is told through the eyes of the oldest daughter, Anna, who is attending college.

The novel takes place during the early 1900s, and is set in the small town of Lincoln, Nebraska. The Sorensens are a middle-class family, and the book follows their lives through the years as they face the challenges of rural life.

One of the main themes of the novel is the struggle between tradition and modernity. The Sorensens are often at odds with their neighbors, who are more interested in the city and modern technology.

Another important theme is the role of education in shaping people's lives. Anna's decision to go to college is seen as a radical move, and she faces criticism from some of her family and friends.

"OLOGIC HOUSE" by Willa Cather is a classic of American literature, and is highly recommended for anyone interested in the history of Nebraska and its people. It is a moving and realistic portrayal of the lives of ordinary people, and is a testament to Cather's skill as a writer.
Postmen To Make 2nd Unemployment Count In 2 Weeks

Will Find Number Not in First Registration; To Check 2 Million

Revealed Survey Will List All Over 14 Years

The second unemployment count now being made will list all over 14 years, according to the Bureau of Labor. This was announced yesterday by J. C. F. Earl, post master in charge of the registration work.

The survey is being made in order to check the number of persons not engaged in the labor force.

The Bureau of Labor has made a survey of the unemployment situation in the country, and the results indicate that the number of persons not employed is over two million.

The survey will be made in cooperation with the state and local authorities.

DO AMERICA'S FLIERS APPRECIATE COSTLIER TOBACCOS IN CAM?

YEAH, but they do! In aviation there is one of the most discriminating groups of smokers in the country. The famous record holder, Col. Turner, smokes Camel. So do many other long-haul pilots. Capt. David Hawks, and TWA's chief pilot John Kott, mentioned only a few. As Col. Turner put it, "I don't know if you noticed that most in aviation are great smokers. And, from what I see, most flies share my regard for CAMELS. They need a steady source. That's one thing why so many of us stick to CAMELS."

PETER KILLIAN is a news photographer. His claim: "CAMELS are cheaper in the present crisis. I prefer CAMELS because they're less transferable, especially in the air. CAMELS help my digestion to keep churning the day after day."

ED GRAFF,给足退休养老金, says: "I believe smoking, a man doesn't really know what honest to get—what good habits are. Be smoker, I'll stick a pack for a CAMEL!"

ARTHUR KAIDRO, 26, is in College. He says: "If you've got a tough cigarette to begin with, you've got a tough end too. I prefer CAMELS."

WINFRED CASTLE works long hours in his atelier because he wears a lot. He says: "I think there's nothing like CAMELS for a tobacco. It's a strong cigarette and good tobacco."

DO AMERICA'S FLIERS APPRECIATE THE COSTLIER TOBACCOs IN CAMELS?

YOU bet they do! In aviation is one of the most discriminating groups of smokers in the country. The in-flight attendants, Col. Turner, always smokes Camels. He does so with Lee Dadd, Capt. Frank Hawks, and TWA's chief pilot Hal Dean — in addition to a few of Col. Turner's post. "I guess nobody wanted that one to aviation and other airlines. The pilots' habit is for Camels. They smoke habitually. That's one reason why so many of us stick to Camels.

Replics and camera keep her busy.

As a child in Cleveland, Margaret Bourke-White, the photographer, had a corner of her room housing 20 turtles, a lily, two tiny 200-g-women. The letter was a natural. Later it was a question with her of which college had the best turtles to study.

She tried Columbia first in 1922. Then she tinkered with an elementary course in photography, mostly for credits. A transfer to the University of Michigan brought her closer to her main interest, biology and herpetology (reptiles). To carry on, she continued to work in a paradise of turtles, snakes, and camels, Cleveland's museum of natural history. In 1927 Margaret Bourke-White was a Cornell graduate, an AUP, and her interest in reptiles started again. Through her career at Cornell Miss Bourke-White had started to catch beauty and expression in man and animal. She began photographing the campus because she needed money. Soon she had students selling her pictures for her.

In 1928-29 contact photographs were awarded and delighted to see Miss Bourke-White's pictures of Everest creators and midnights on their seeking holders' statements and dividend reports. When the depression came, manufacturers cut the luxury of pangemgraph. Miss Bourke-White's salary remained in the twelve-figure class. She wears Paris clothes, but seldom in photographs Russian women, famine, drought, American workers, all of which have come to interest her more than in-bores. She keeps as pets in her New York studio two alligators and eight turtles.

Many Future Stage Stars Begin Careers in College

Practically every U.S. college and university has its student dramatic organization, but only 100 have drama departments. This all-important curricular and extra-curricular activity attracts an estimated 30,000 participants, who appear annually in 1,000 plays before almost 2,000,000 ticket buyers. Just what goes on behind-the-scenes in training future stage and screen stars is told in the installment of This Is College, which features photos taken in the workshop and on the stage of the Duke University Players.

I note that you carried a picture of the Union College student dramatic organization, which is described as a "very fine theater group," in your last issue. The facts are that the group has been very fortunate in its personnel, and some of its members are now in very responsible positions in the theatrical field. The group has been very successful in raising funds, and the officers have been able to secure the services of several well-known dramatists in the field to instruct the members in their work. The group is in a very fine position to take advantage of the opportunities which are offered to it, and I am sure that it will do so.

What's the Cheerer?

In your last issue of Collegiate Digest you published a picture of a group of students and yourself on page four. A series of football scenes are illustrated. There is a picture of the lower flanked closure, under which the following headline appears: "Harvey! Thine Days Are Numbered." Also other scenes from the same game are shown. Also on school side-line the picture was snapped, from them.

To the Editor:

Just received the Collegiate Digest with the University pharmacy layout and want to say that it is the best thing in the world. The layout was for the first time in the history of the professional pharmacy field. From the idea to the actual layout was a great effort on the part of the University at Cranford, N.J. E. B.

I was very glad to see your previous paragraph, headed "God Control." Quite a few of my friends at Harvard made me realize only after the fact that the picture I saw was not the correct one. I would like to say that I am of the opinion that it is not necessary to give in more about the whole business. Cranford, N.J.

To the Editor:

I was delighted with the "God Control" feature, except for one error. Bill Pickels was cut out of the picture which follows from the fact that Bill Pickels is no longer in the profession. Please have his name put in. Cranford, N.J.

To the Editor:

I was tremendously interested in the pictures and news of the world wide spiritual front called the Oxford Group. I have been one of the leaders of that work for many years. I have tried to help others find Christ, and feel that when God guides a man, He takes care of the fear of having your job, leaving with nothing left and gives you a chance and nothing else. Pardon Our Omission

To the Editor: I was very glad to see your pictorial paragraph, headed "A Case of God Control," which appeared in your April 1 edition. But I am sorry to hear that you had to make a very grandiose about this article. Can you imagine how this will appear in your regular columns and give it more worth than the whole feature.

Reasons, Mrs. Smith.
