F.R. Attacks Opponents Of Re-Organization Bill

Voices Opinion In Speech At Warm Springs

Says Organized Forces Cannot 'Purchase' U. S. Senate

By D. HAROLD OLIVER
WARM SPRINGS, Ga., March 29 (AP)—President Roosevelt bitterly condemned an unnamed source of opposition to his government re-organization bill today, asserting senate passage of the measure proved that body "cannot be purchased by organized telegrams based on direct misrepresentation."

Talking to reporters while sitting in his new open car in front of a press cottage, he repeated the word, "purchased" when an aide interrupted as if to inquire whether that was what he meant to say.

He also gave his remarks further emphasis by permitting newsmen to quote him directly. He did not name the organized opposition, but showed plainly his elation over the senate's action.

The senate passed the re-organization bill, delegating broad powers to the chief executive to consolidate bureaus, late yesterday, 49 to 42.

Several features have yet to be passed upon by the house, although it already has approved the merger powers, principal target of opponents in and out of congress.

Fresh from a swim in the Warm Springs foundation pool, the president talked also about the railroad situation, which he regarded as critical.

He said as soon as he received additional opinions on his special committee's report recommending a solution, he would prepare a message to congress proposing legislative remedies.

He asserted quick action was essential and that further investigation would be unnecessary because all the information needed already was in the hands of the interstate commerce commission, the securities, and exchange commission and the reconstruction finance corporation.

The vacationing chief executive would not disclose any phases of the railroad report. When asked whether it proposed creation of a special tribunal to hasten re-organization of debt-burdened carriers, he replied if he mentioned one angle he would be obliged to give the whole story.

SLAPSTICK GORILLA Keeper Presents Cake—And Runs

CHICAGO, March 29 (AP)—A keeper handed "Bushman," 350-pound gorilla, his birthday present today and then ran to beat 60. "Bushman," a 10-year-old $20,000 beast, pride of Lincoln Park zoo, likes to share his food with his keepers. He throws it at them. The birthday present was an angel food cake plastered with whipped cream.

Soviet Government Demands Purge of Northern Seamen

MOSCOW, March 29 (AP)—The Soviet government disclosed today that half the Soviet fleet of icebreakers and Arctic merchant ships was in danger in polar seas and demanded a purge among those trying to conquer the frozen north.

At the same time, a terse communique in a provincial newspaper announced execution of U. Kulumbetoff, former president of Kazakhstan, middle Asiatic republic, and 18 others.

They were tried secretly at Alma Ata from March 6 to March 12 on charges of treason similar to those for which Nikolai Bucharin, famed Soviet editor, and 17 others were shot after a public mass trial in Moscow.

Italian Anti-Aircraft Reserves Called On Eve of Il Duce's Military Statement

ROME, March 29 (AP)—Reserves of the Italian anti-aircraft force were called out tonight on the eve of Premier Mussolini's important statement of military policy to the Italian senate tomorrow.

The reserve call was seen both as a show of Italy's military preparedness and as emphasis of Italy's annoyance over a mysterious night flight of a French warplane above Italian territory last week.

The number of reservists involved was not disclosed, but it was said the men had been assigned to anti-aircraft batteries at strategic points of the nation. Il Duce's speech tomorrow was expected to be a warning to the world of fascist readiness to meet any attack on "Italy or her interests."

Informed quarters believed the calling of reserves showed Italian irritation over the French military plane which crashed in Sardinia last Friday.

An official Italian inquiry is under way seeking to determine the flight's purpose.

The fascist press continued to make demands that France furnish a full and prompt explanation, apparently reflecting the serious view the government took of the incident.

The object of the Chinese thrust, which at some points gained as much as 15 miles, was to drive back Japanese armies threatening Suchow, junction of the north-south Tientsin-Pukow railway and the Lunghai.

The center of the fighting was in southern Shantung province, where for three months Japanese armies have attempted to drive southward to the Lunghai and meet another Japanese force pushing north from Nanking.

In Shanghai itself new friction developed between British military authorities and Japanese. The British lodged a vigorous protest listing instances in which they said Japanese soldiers had threatened British soldiers or civilians and had been discourteous.

It was understood the protest demanded guarantees that the situation would be remedied, otherwise British soldiers would be ordered to defend themselves.

Monday, the British protest said, a Japanese soldier in Chinese clothes threatened British Maj. E. T. Heslop with a loaded pistol when British halted truckloads of Chinese coolies waving flags of the new Japanese-dominated regime at Nanking. British took the flags away before permitting them to enter the British-defended zone of the international settlement.

Japanese planes ranging over the China warfront were reported by Chinese to have bombed Suchow, and struck again at the Canton-Hankow railway line.

Political tension reached the breaking point in the house of deputies when communists tried to howl down the German spokesman, Ernst Kundt. Their clamor drowned out his voice until a loud-speaker could be hooked up to amplify it.

Even then, the communists raised such a tumult that his words were barely audible.

Kundt declared that the Praha government, if it expected to establish confidence, must agree to a new election.

A Hungarian deputy, Geza Szuelloe, in asking autonomy for Hungarians, explained that he also was speaking in the name of the Slovaks. For the Polish minority, Leon Wolf argued that autonomy is the only thing that can save the Poles in Czechoslovakia from the threat of denationalization.

Referring to the church, he said: "We want to leave concerns about the other world to the church, but this world is ours—the church may have God's mandate, but we have the people's mandate."

The number of imperiled ships was not stated, but several hundred persons were believed to be endangered by ice piling up around the vessels and dwindling food supplies.

Counter Attack Seems Stalled By Nipponese

Battle May Decide Fate Of Lunghai Area, Observers Say

SHANGHAI, March 30 (Wednesday) (AP)—Japanese bombs and big guns today apparently had stalled the Chinese counter attack which pushed back Japanese along a 100-mile front in central China.

More than 200,000 Chinese and Japanese were engaged in the battle, which observers said might decide the fate of the Lunghai railway area separating Japanese-conquered portions of north China and the Yangtze river valley. Casualties were said to be extremely heavy.

German Chancellor Pleads For Peaceful Nazification of Austria In Lieu of Internal Conflict

HAMBURG, Germany, March 29 (AP)—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler told an audience of 20,000 tonight he pleaded for 12 hours with Kurt Schuschnigg, former Austrian chancellor, at their Berchtesgaden conference to choose gradual nazification of Austria instead of civil strife.

"Twelve hours end—a whole long day—I labor to convince this man that the way he was going would lead inevitably to bloodshed," der fuhrer said.

The two chancellors met at Berchtesgaden Feb. 12, a month before Germany annexed Austria.

At the end of the 12 hours Schuschnigg seemed convinced and expressed his willingness to sign a new agreement, Hitler said, which would have aimed at a gradual reconciliation between opposing camps.

He asserted Schuschnigg had repudiated the agreement, for "this man had mistaken my goodheartedness for weakness."

"Then came Austria's cry for help," he continued, "and I decided immediately to answer it. It was determined to eliminate this man."

Tonight's speech was Hitler's fourth in his series preparing for the Austrian Anschluss plebiscite April 10. Most of the speech was a reiteration of arguments already voiced at Koebnigsberg, Linz, and Berlin.

In view of Hamburg's commercial importance, however, he laid particular stress on the economic side of the Nazi program.

"The decisive factor is not money," he declared, "but production. Money never can be substituted for production. There are foreign countries which are smothering in their gold because of a belief that man can be nourished with gold instead of bread."

Coincidentally with Hitler's visit here, shipping circles announced that since the advent of the Nazi regime five years ago ship building—one of Germany's key industries—had increased four fold by number of ships and eight fold by tonnage.

Any suggestion that helium imported into Germany from the United States might be used for war purposes, he said, is "pure nonsense and betrays a woeful ignorance of the question."

German aviation experts said four factors virtually forbid the use of dirigibles in the next war: low speed, high cost, bulkiness and the necessity of maintaining large air and ground crews.

They rated the value of a zeppelin as an aggressive weapon as practically nothing because "the bulky, slow-flying airship is the easiest target for even the smallest high-powered, modern pursuit plane."

It will be five years, physicians think, before sufficient data is assembled to make definite commitments, but, they say, "the indications are good that something really has been found."

A "progress report," outlining the research, was presented recently in Boston at a surgical society meeting.

Specifically, it was reported then that what had been proved was that the staphylococcus germ, which causes the pus infections, was surrounded by a capsule. It was this capsule which gave it its virulence.

Pneumonia germs are similarly surrounded with capsules. Pneumonia serums break down these capsules and the germs are then easily destroyed by the white blood cells.

Serums to give immunity to staphylococcus infections act in a similar way.

With their present knowledge, the hospital research doctors said, it appears that a vaccine which will promise immunity can be made up from the germs in an individual's own body.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 30, 1938

Still Time To Count to Ten

TWO EVENTS within the last few days have conspired to hold up our political machinery for public inspection: senatorial approval of the reorganization bill and the apparent futility of protest telegrams sent to congressmen by thousands of voters who fondly hoped they had some voice in government during March as well as November.

That political machinery stood condemned as bound by red tape and hampered by overlapping functions cannot be denied. Each taxpayer, particularly at this season, feels the need for a government which is business-like and economical. Every citizen in this period of political and financial uncertainty feels the need for administrative machinery which can act quickly and efficiently. But large blocs of voters doubt that the present reorganization bill is the best and safest answer.

Briefly, the bill provides for the co-ordination of executive agencies at the expense of congressional supervision. It would authorize the president to abolish the bi-partisan civil service commission in favor of a single administrator; it would remove the comptroller general, "watchdog of the treasury," and substitute an auditor general with power to criticize expenditures only after they have been made. In addition the bill would permit creation of six administrative assistants subject to the coordinating control of the executive.

It is not at all a question of whether President Roosevelt may be trusted with extraordinary powers at this time. It is a question of whether it is wise to overthrow constitutional checks and balances in the interests of efficiency, or whether it is wise to risk forging a legal tool which may be used to destroy American democracy.

America has no grounds for the belief that "it can't happen here." Political scientists, moreover, point out that in every case since Mussolini's coup in 1922, democracy has first been undermined by a substantial increase in executive authority.

The bill as passed by the senate has yet to be approved by the house. It is to be hoped that representatives will see that its provisions constitute not a minor adjustment but a major operation, that they will appreciate the danger in setting out to alter in a few days what the constitution and the precedent of 150 years have established.

The Case of Jones vs. Society

OUT OF THE death house of the Ohio state penitentiary last week came a sharp indictment of modern society. Everett Jones, doomed to die, left a statement which echoes with truth, a truth which calls upon humanity for solution. The man who was about to die said, "If only I had a single understanding friend when I was young, if my mother hadn't died, if my father had been a pal, with just a minimum chance I could have made a comfortable place for myself in the world."

Thus a man who had spent 19 of his 33 years in prison looked back. At 14 he had been committed to the boy's industrial school. Later he spent 12 years in the state reformatory. Last week he died in the electric chair—charged with murder.

After hearing his story, can a man help thinking twice? Does it not behoove him to thank God that his was at least a minimum chance? It should make him realize his fortune, but it should, too, tell him to remember the fortunes of those like Jones.

Jones criticized the penal system of Ohio, but his life is a far more vivid criticism than any he could have made with words. He cried out against the inhuman treatment given youths and against the system of seclusion and forced penance, but the tale of his life is a far weightier argument.

Everett Jones is dead, but there are thousands facing the possibility of the same future. The streets are swarming with boys having no more chance in life than his. The jails are filled with men and boys whose lives may or may not be ruined.

Everett Jones is not unique; he represents a social problem that cannot be solved merely by jails and electric chairs.

More Gaps In the G. A. R.

THREE MORE Civil war veterans, one of them the state commander of the G.A.R., have gone on their last long march this week, leaving behind them the ever-widening gaps in that thin, straggly line of proud old men who are carrying on the traditions and glory of a bygone day.

Those of us who have been fortunate enough to know a Civil war veteran realize what a loss their passing is. They are continually a source of inspiration for their proud, staunch Americanism and their loyalty to the country for which they gave so much.

They are the men who marched out strong in body, vigorous in step, to meet men who, like themselves, were willing to give all they had for an ideal. They were fighting with less personal animosity than in any other war in American history. To them it was nothing more than a question of principle, mixed perhaps, with pride and a little regret.

They have seen a mighty empire rise. Some of them knew Lincoln. Most of them had seen or heard him. In the 73 years following Appomattox, they saw a tremendous change in America, were responsible for a considerable part of it themselves. Coming from the battlefields of a long and tiresome war, they set to work with the courage and determination they showed at Antietam, Winchester, Gettysburg and Shiloh, as well as in the other battles of the war, and bulled from the tired, exhausted country the greatest nation in the world today.

We owe a lot to these men; we have given them little. We have accepted without thought the many things they worked so hard for, that meant so much to them, and for which many of their comrades gave their lives in '61 through '65.

Some people profess to see only paths in the encampments and occasional parades of the G.A.R. To us the sight of a few veterans bravely carrying the old flag, though it be only a short way longer, is one of inspiration. They awake in us a realization of what it means to be an American—of what we owe to them and to America.

London zoo experts are worried over the problem of how to protect the animals in case of air raid. It seems even the tiger, most ferocious of jungle beasts, doesn't realize he must wear a gas mask if he's going to live amid civilization.

CLIPPED from other COLUMNS

MR. AND MRS. In the year beginning June 1 about 2,000,000 blushing American couples will take off on the adventure called matrimony, and all of them will be sure they're going to live happily ever afterward.

But Dr. Paul Popenoe, director of the Institute of Family Relations, warns that at least 200,000 of them will crack up sooner or later in the divorce courts.

How can you and the sweetest girl keep from being one of the 200,000?

Any battle-scarred survivor can give you a lot of rules. For instance, a successful husband won't call her the Ball-and-Chain, or say her new hat looks like a young coal scuttle, or get binged in company and make her blush with locker-room stories, or neglect to shave on rainy mornings, or dunk his rolls, or hang his clothes on the floor or forget to send flowers on the wedding anniversary, or...

A successful wife won't call him the Old Man, or crack her chewing gum, or serve canned peaches, weak coffee and burned toast for breakfast, or correct his grammar. Dr. Popenoe says a lot of divorces could be dodged if the high contracting parties didn't look on getting married as a "settling down."

An old hand at this game would add two more ingredients for a workable marriage—old-fashioned kindness and a well-oiled sense of humor.

Suggestions to Help Housewife Planning Reducing Diet Menus

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The housewife who is catering to a member of the household on a reducing diet will need to use some ingenuity. The obese person always has indulged himself; that is why he is obese. For articles of diet and menus which he will miss, I suggest the following substitution recipes:

SOY BEAN BREAD—One cup soy bean flour, one teaspoon salt, two teaspoons baking powder, one tablespoon shortening, two-thirds cup water, four egg yolks, four egg whites. Combine the flour, salt, baking powder, fat, water and egg yolks. Fold into this the egg whites which have previously been beaten stiff. Pour into greased loaf tin and bake in a moderate oven 30 to 40 minutes.

RHUBARB PIE—Make crust, using Golden Spread instead of butter. Filling: Cut up rhubarb and cook without water. Thicken by boiling one and one-half cups of the cooked rhubarb and one serving spare ribs and sauerkraut, lettuce and cucumber salad with mineral oil dressing, D-Zerta (sugar-free gelatin dessert can be purchased by that name at the grocery), black coffee.

Diet for Thursday BREAKFAST—Half a washed canned pear (fresh, if in season); one egg, one slice gluten toast and Golden Spread, cup black coffee. DINNER—Tomato soup, one serving spare ribs and sauerkraut, lettuce and cucumber salad with mineral oil dressing, D-Zerta (sugar-free gelatin dessert can be purchased by that name at the grocery), black coffee.

FRESH FRUIT DESSERTS— Fresh sliced pears served in orange juice to which a little curacao is added. Cantaloupe balls and pitted red cherries or peeled grapes. Honey Dew melon, chilled and served with quarter of lime and a sprinkling of powdered ginger.

Whole fresh pears served covered with shredded fresh pineapple. Sprinkle pears with a little lemon juice to prevent turning black. Whole or half fresh peaches peeled and sprinkled with lemon juice to prevent turning black. Served with crushed fresh raspberries.

Uncle Ezra's thought for the day is with sound logic behind it. "Too much celebratin' has kept many a man from becomin' a celebrity."

Charlie MacCarthy is going to get a real present. A blind woman was so captivated by the wooden elf that she has knit a sweater for him.

Some of the answers to Uncle Ezra's "What this country needs" contest were really good. One of them reads, "What this country needs is more people who see the opportunity in the difficulty and fewer who see the difficulty in the opportunity." Another, "What this country needs is more vitamins in apple pie and fewer in spinach."

From Ohogamute, Alaska, came this poem to Uncle Ezra: "If we could see ourselves as others see us We'd wish that we were blind; 'And if we could hear ourselves as others hear us Our words would be more kind."

Tuning In with Betty Harpel

with Betty Harpel

The cast of "Jack Armstrong" was rather embarrassed the other day. They were amusing themselves with Hindustan phrases while riding down the elevator from the studios when a tall stranger accosted them and told them how happy he was to hear that language again, as he had spent years in that country. The actors practically fell over themselves explaining that all they knew of the tongue were a few phrases that the author had written into the scripts.

Bob (Spencer Bently) of "Betty and Bob" says that his most absent minded moment occurred one time when he was playing in stock. He returned to his dressing room at the end of the second act, removed his make-up and went home. They had to hold the curtain until someone could locate him, and then they finished the play.

A Man ABOUT MANHATTAN

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—You can find a dozen reasons why prominent American authors are quietly booking passage for Europe.

But none of them strikes so closely to the root of the matter as the influx of foreign celebrities fleeing to these shores as refugees from Germany's nazism, Russia's communism, and Italy's fascism.

In other years while on their travels the Americans were royally entertained by their fellow-workers abroad. Now it is their turn to play host and prepare the guest room for occupancy. This would be easy if the number of visitors was on a par with other years, but it isn't and that's the point. So many are arriving on every boat that busy American writers with literary chores to perform just can't find time to turn guide and remain authors at the same time.

For instance, one of Broadway's ablest playwrights gave a dinner the other night for 14 guests. With the exception of the host and myself, all were foreigners with political or artistic axes to grind. Included in the company were three Russians, two Germans, and an Italian.

The Russians were outspoken in their appraisal of Hitler and the Austrian coup, but shut up like clams when Moscow was mentioned. The Germans were willing to discuss anything under the wide sky except Berlin and the Third Reich. And the Italian grew bored when Mussolini got an airing, but he quite readily explained how he would reorganize the Soviet state if given the chance.

Two days later this playwright embarked for far places. Unable to complete his chores at home, he will sit on an Irish hillside, portable typewriter in lap, and work for the next two months. As for his friends who entertained him of yore in chateaus and castles in the Alps and along the Rhine, they will just have to get along as best they can.

You would be amazed at some of the "whisky" being purveyed behind the darkened doorways of Harlem town. After two or three "powders" you break out in spots. Then all your hair falls out.

Washington World

By CHARLES P. STEWART WASHINGTON, D. C.—Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York has opened up a subject the discussion of which might advantageously have started some time ago.

The nub of the governor's argument is that federal taxation has become so heavy that nothing is left for the individual states to tax.

He might have added that nothing is left, either, for smaller units than the states (counties, municipalities and school districts) to keep themselves solvent with.

In other words, when Uncle Sam has taken his share, the various states' remaining shares and the shares of their various still more local governments are insufficient to support them. If they tried to impose such levies they would take the whole thing—and more too.

To Centralize? The New Yorker contends that this process is wiping the states out as separate entities.

It is, of course; if they cannot pay expenses they much evaporate.

Which means, says Governor Lehman, centralization of everything in Washington. Some political philosophers reason that this will be all right—that we have ceased to be a UNION but are ONE COUNTRY. Maybe so, but it was not the founding fathers' original intention.

Stewart Looks Back I can remember, within my own generation's span, when economists accepted it, prima facie, that we were particularly prosperous, in comparison with the rest of the world, because our taxation rate relatively was so low.

Contrasted with then our present rate is a sockdolager.

We aren't so prosperous, either. Perhaps the old fellows knew what they were talking about.

World-Wide Condition In those days, even, there were localities which overdid themselves. They made so-called improvements faster than they were able to pay for them and ran excessively into debt, resulting in local hard times.

But that was not so bad, for sufferers in these restricted areas trekked on into new areas where taxes were not so high.

Federal taxation cannot be avoided thus now. The taxpayer is "stuck," wherever he is.

Practice Game Carded Today For Iowa Baseball Candidates

Hawks Begin Season Against Bradley Friday

Hawkeys Will Travel To Peoria For Two Games

With the University of Iowa baseball team slated to take on the Bradley Tech Engineers at Peoria, Ill., Friday, in the first of a two-game series, Coach Otto Vogel plans to send his charges on the field for a six-inning practice game this afternoon.

The Regular-Yannigan practice game carded for yesterday was cancelled because of soggy footing and the squad of sluggers went through a long batting and ball shagging drill.

Several members of the Regular infield did not report last night because of tests, but Vogel filled in with Yannigans and conducted a fast infield drill.

The infield that Vogel has been using nearly all spring finds Elmer Bratten at first base, Erwin Prasse at second base, Andy Kantor at shortstop and Capt. Eddie Kadell at third base.

Vogel said last night that a squad of 16 or 17 players will make the Bradley Tech trip. The members of the squad will not be disclosed until Thursday night.

Art Manush and Bill Vogt, along with Bill Kelly, have formed the regular outer garden brigade for the majority of the practice games.

The final affair of the spring semester will be the Big Ten championships at Columbus, Ohio, May 20 and 21.

Three meets scheduled for June around out the outdoor quota. On June 3, the Iowans will participate in the Central Intercollegiate championships at Milwaukee, Wis.

Davenport, the 1937 runner-up, has 30 men, the largest team entered to date; while Roosevelt of Des Moines, fourth last year, has 20 enrolled.

CHICAGO, March 29 (AP) - Football's old grids, the professionals, always on the lookout for new tricks if they're good, are ready to pull one out of the collegiate "grid bag."

The national pro league rules committee will meet April 10 at Pittsburgh, and it's extremely likely the professionals, to make certain their game keeps rolling at top speed, will adopt one college game regulation and pass a few other radical rule amendments.

"The colleges have held back on what we have shown an asset to the game, permission to pass from any point back of the ball, scrimmage line instead of only from the five yard point," said Rules Chairman George Halas.

Mickelson Says New York Team Sure to Win Third Straight Title

By PAUL MICKELSON NEW ORLEANS, La., March 29 (AP) - After almost a month's investigation, a search that took me through training camps, record books, night clubs, and even hospitals, I'm very sorry to report the situation unchanged in the American league.

The magnates, managers and players might as well save their pride and stop their whistling in the dark by handing the pennant to the New York Yankees. They could go even further by settling for approximately the same position they won last year.

This is how they finished in 1937 and this is how all conscientious reckoning figures our heroes to wind up in 1938:

- 1. New York 2. Chicago 3. Cleveland 4. Boston 5. Washington 7. Philadelphia 8. St. Louis

Only eight games separated the Detroit from the Boston last year, so there is every possibility of a shakeup among those four clubs, but the over-winter improvements look even, whereas the other also-rans look approximately the same.

Philadelphia - Old Connie Mack, fully recovered in health again, is sure to pull some surprises again and might even take fifth or sixth place with a pretty good staff of country pitchers.

St. Louis - Lots of changes on this club, but give 'em time - plenty of time.

Senators Conquer Columbus, 13-4

WINTER HAVEN, Fla., March 29 (AP) - Washington defeated Columbus in an exhibition game today, 13 to 4.

The Senators won in the sixth inning when they drove across seven runs. Dutch Leonard pitching the last five innings for Washington, allowed but four hits and no runs.

Philadelphia - Old Connie Mack, fully recovered in health again, is sure to pull some surprises again and might even take fifth or sixth place with a pretty good staff of country pitchers.

St. Louis - Lots of changes on this club, but give 'em time - plenty of time.

Cards Lose 13-Inning Game to Rochester

TARPON SPRINGS, Fla., March 29 (AP) - Two walks off Morton Cooper and a single by Ray Gillenwater gave the Rochester Red Wings a 1-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in 13 innings here today.

Rickey Prepared To Answer Judge Landis

ST. LOUIS, March 29 (AP) - Branch Rickey may next take up the St. Louis Cardinals' rebuttal of Baseball Commissioner Keneaw Mountain Landis' recent decision criticizing the team's "gentlemen's agreements" with minor league clubs.

Rickey, vice-president of the National league baseball club, bore the brunt of the judge's disapproval, since the frowned-on transactions were entered into under his direction as active administrator of the team's far-flung farm system.

But, whether he answers or not, Rickey's position was fortified by the knowledge he has the full confidence and support of the owner of the Cardinals, Sam Breadon. In fact, Breadon said baseball owed more to Rickey than to "any man or official connected with the game."

AUSTIN, Tex., March 29 (AP) - It's lieutenant-colonel now sergeant, Gabby Street from now on. Gov. James V. Allred appointed the manager of the St. Louis Browns a lieutenant-colonel on his staff today in ceremonies preceding the Browns' exhibition game with the University of Texas team. Street was a sergeant in the army during the World war.

Yankees Nose Out Kansas City, 5-4

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 29 (AP) - With Lou Gehrig back in the lineup, the New York Yankees again conquered their Kansas City "farm" team in an exhibition game today, 5 to 4.

K. C. (AA) 000 010 210-4 9 4 N. Y. (A) 000 010 201-5 7 1 Brewer, Crutchfield, Washburn, Piechota and Brees; Chandle, Donald and Jorgens.

Red Sox Rally Down Cincinnati

TAMPA, Fla., March 29 (AP) - Breaking a 4-4 deadlock with two-run rallies in each of the last two innings, the Boston Red Sox defeated Cincinnati today 8 to 4.

Boston (A) 100 010 111-8 7 0 Cincin. (N) 000 013 000-4 11 2 Wilson, Rogers and DeSautels, Vandermeer, R. Davis; L. Moore and V. Davis, Hershberger.

Breadon, saying Rickey also may issue a statement, praised him as the saviour of the minor leagues through his development of the farm system, which, he asserted, "has had, as everyone knows, the constant opposition of the commissioner's office."

In the major portion of his decision, Judge Landis held the Cardinals had infringed on baseball players by entering into a secret agreement with Cedar Rapids of the three-I league which gave them control of two teams in each of four minor leagues.

Pep Frat Will Give Party At Union April 8

To Select Queen, Two Attendants From 10 Candidates

Bringing to the campus his individual style of smooth swing music, Art Kassel and his orchestra will play for the informal Pep Jamboree, the all-university party sponsored by Pi Epsilon Pi, pep fraternity, April 8 in Iowa Union, the committee announced yesterday.

Coming from the Bismark hotel in Chicago Kassel has been featured recently at the Stevens and Morrison hotels in Chicago, the Lowry hotel in St. Paul and the Williams hotel in Pittsburgh.

The Chicago-born maestro started his career of baton waving with a four-piece orchestra composed of a few high school friends in Chicago shortly after the World war. He gradually added musicians making the full-sized band he now has.

"In spare moments Kassel devotes his time to composing new tunes, among them "Hell's Bells," "Doodle-Do-Do," his theme song, "Around the Corner," "De-loures," "I'll Get By" and "When We Meet Again."

Marion Holmes, attractive and petite young songstress, and Jack Gerard, young organist, are among the headline attractions of his band.

The feature attraction of the evening will be the presentation of the 1938 Pep queen. The Dinner Honors S. U. I. Women Monday at Six

50 Will Attend Annual Good Will Dinner In Iowa Union

Fifty university women will receive invitations this week to the annual Good Will dinner, sometimes known as the Pinkbine dinner for women. The dinner will be Monday at 6 p.m. in Iowa Union.

The 50 women to be honored are selected on a basis of character, scholarship, some contribution made to campus life and promise of achievement for the future. Since the number chosen is limited to 50, in recent years the selection has been made from members of the senior class.

A faculty committee appointed by President Eugene A. Gilmore makes the plans and selects the guest list with the assistance of suggestions from university departments.

The tradition of the good will dinner was established in 1925 by Dorothy Pinkbine Souers and her aunts, Marie and Emille Stapp. They sponsored it in honor of Mrs. Souers' father, William O. Finkbine, a prominent alumnus of the university.

Provision has been made so that an income will always be available to finance the dinner.

None of the founders will be present at the dinner this year. Mrs. Souers died shortly after the death of her father and her aunts now reside in Mississippi and cannot attend.

Adviser to Theta Rho

Adviser of the first Theta Rho girls' club to be organized in Iowa is Mrs. R. L. Mackey, 419 E. Bloomington street, shown in The Daily Iowan club picture series.

Although the national organization, a branch of Oddfellowship, was established in 1933 it was not until 1935 that the Iowa organizations were provided for. The local club, first of the five now in the state, was organized in January, 1936, under the leadership of the two Iowa City Rebekah lodges. The local group has also been instrumental in the establishment of clubs in Lone Tree and Waterloo.

The club's members — ranging in age from 12 to 21 — have as their motto "happiness through service." In explaining the motto, Mrs. Mackey said, "The purpose of the club is to teach unselfishness and patriotism and to encourage mental and physical development. We promote the idea that happiness is obtained through service, and we believe that obedience to morals is important for better government and protection of home and country." For their training in the club's work the girls have adopted an elderly lady in the Oddfellows' home for whom they do something each month. They also take part in social service work, and at Christmas time they have given baskets to the needy. Pictured with Mrs. Mackey are her daughter, Virginia, club financial secretary, on the arm of the chair, and Ethel Hughes, supporter to the vice-president.

Children Help Juvenile Home

Gather Clothing, A. B. C. Books and Toys; Present Them in Person

Two groups of children in Iowa City have through their own initiative collected clothing to give to the children of the juvenile home.

Becky Jane Eversole, who attends the university pre-school, noticed her mother, Mrs. W. G. Eversole, 708 Rundell street, reading a story in The Daily Iowan which was illustrated with pictures of children from the juvenile home. Becky Jane wanted to know what her mother was reading.

Mrs. Eversole read to her daughter the story about children who live away from their fathers and mothers and who lack many of the nice things that Becky Jane has.

Speechless Children
Becky Jane was particularly impressed by the story of the two little girls her own age, Virginia and Evelyn, whose father and mother didn't speak to each other and who had never learned to talk.

Soon after that, Becky began to find dresses, suddenly grown too tight for her, that she thought perhaps Virginia or Evelyn could wear. She thought about the two children for several days.

Enlists Friends
Then she spoke to her friends who also attend the pre-school. They all had articles of clothing that the speechless children could use. A. B. C. books, toys and clothes were assembled, and Monday the children took their collection to Virginia and Evelyn at the juvenile home.

The two little girls couldn't speak their thank you's, but they were glad to receive the clothes. The primary department at the Presbyterian church has also, at the suggestion of some of the children, decided to help the children of the home who are between the ages of six and nine years. Clothing and any other articles that the primary pupils believe will fit into a juvenile home will be collected at Sunday school the next two Sundays and will be taken to the home by a committee of three children.

Rare Flower

Tropical Plant Grown By Mrs. Norris

Seldom growing out of its native habitat, the tropical aroid, known as a very rare plant by botanical experts, is difficult to grow in temperate climes. Yet, there is one in Iowa City!

The possessor of this flower rarity, of which there are only a few specimens in the United States, is Mrs. S. L. Norris, 523 Iowa avenue.

Mrs. Norris obtained the bulb of the plant three years ago from a friend who was unsuccessful in growing it. Even Mrs. Norris was not successful in raising it until this spring.

"I went down into the cellar several weeks ago, and while rummaging about my flower bulbs, I saw the aroid bulb had sprouted," Mrs. Norris said yesterday.

"Thinking it might blossom this spring, I set it in a large flower pot, and a week ago, it started growing at a fast rate," she added. The plant blossomed after attaining a height of four and one-half feet. The blossom then developed into a flower with a 10-inch calyx or petal, with a one and one-half foot spike growing out of the center of it.

After the plant had blossomed, Mrs. Norris called Prof. W. A. Anderson of the botany department, because she had not seen anything like the flower before.

"This odd species is commonly and wrongly known as an African lily," Prof. Anderson said. "However, it is neither a lily nor from Africa," he continued. "Its brothers grow in the tropical forests of the Malayan peninsula."

One of the peculiarities of the plant is its odor, very similar to skunk cabbage, which grows in the eastern section of the United States, according to Prof. Anderson. This odor is created in the calyx of the flower. Its true purpose is not known.

The North American relative of the aroid is the calla "lily," Prof. Anderson asserted. He compared the rare plant, which sports a green stalk, green and red mottled outside leaf, and wine-red spike, with the tassel and ear of the familiar corn stalk.

He also gave the aroid resemblance to a Jack-in-the-pulpit on a large scale, and said that its roots are similar to those of an Indian turnip.

Mrs. Norris is very proud of the exotic plant specimen. "It is very unusual and pretty," she declared, "and like all flower lovers, I will be very sorry when the flower closes again."

Tattoo Replaces Brand

SACRAMENTO, Cal., (AP)—Tattooing is replacing branding to some extent for identification of animals, says E. Clyde Harris of the state livestock service. The marks are made inside the ear.

For general range cattle the old fashioned brand, made either with an iron or acid, is to be preferred, he said. This is partly for visibility and partly because the ear of a stolen animal might be mutilated.

Patrolmen Watch Car Lights

Officers Continue Drive on Motorists; Require Violators to Check Up

By LUTHER BOWERS

Last night while I was driving on Dubuque street a brown-clad state highway patrolman stepped from the curb and motioned me to a stop with a wave of his flashlight. I was caught, but fortunately the driver's license was in my pocket.

He wasn't so interested in driver's licenses, however, for he said, "One of your headlights is out."

"Is it? That's funny, it was on a few minutes ago."

"Well, it is out now," said he, as he reached for his ticket book. I was in a tough spot.

"We're cooperating with the Iowa City police in a drive on motorists with faulty lights, bad brakes and no licenses," he explained. "With most of the emphasis on the lights."

"Do you do this work often?" I asked.

"Several times a year," he went on, "and during the same drive in a town we check three or four different times to insure the success of the drive." Then he went into action.

Out came the book and he asked for my driver's license. From that article he learned my name and address, which he proceeded to jot down on the ticket. My heart sank, for there would be court costs to pay -- if nothing else.

"This is merely a warning," he said, "but you must have that light fixed immediately." The garage mechanic would put his okay on the warning, and I was to present the warning to the police. This would strike my name from the blotter.

"You have 24 hours to get that light fixed and okayed by the police," he emphasized. "A second offense will necessitate the filing of charges."

He excused me with a pleasant "good evening" and I drove away to get the light fixed. This all happened, as I said, far out on Dubuque street. Three blocks away -- on Clinton street -- a second flashlight beckoned me to the curb. The same offense, the same procedure, but no ticket.

"One in a night is plenty," laughed this officer. "Yes, we work in teams," he said, "Six of us are checking Iowa City tonight."

"We get some interesting cases," he admitted. "One woman tonight didn't know there was a button on her car which raised and dimmed the lights!"

Some people get provoked -- especially those with new cars, he said. "New cars often need more light adjustment than older machines," he told me. Another pleasant "good evening" and I proceeded to the nearest filling station for a checkup.

25 Qualify For Training Corps

Twenty-three University of Iowa students were accepted as qualified candidates for flying training at the army air corps training center at Randolph and Kelly fields near San Antonio, Tex., by a reviewing board of army officers which left Iowa City yesterday.

Nearly one hundred students were examined by the board -- the largest number of candidates the officers had examined in their visit to 13 colleges and universities this spring, officials announced.

Students accepted for training included John Maney, A3 of Cedar Rapids; Jack Dale, A3 of Davenport; Eugene Ford of West Bend; Edward Meyers of Iowa City; John Birchenough, A3 of Decorah; Alexander Evanoff, A4 of Belle Plaine; John Montgomery, C4 of Belle Plaine.

Donald Clarke, C3 of Alta; Ronald Hardy, L1 of Tabor; Ansel Wheeler, P4 of Geneseo, N. Y.; Charles Lefingwell, P4 of Oxford Junction; William Hoffman, L3 of Des Moines; William Trigg, E4 of Hedrick; Carl Hagemester, A4 of Muscatine; Charles Hodson of Iowa City.

Ronald Shumway, P4 of Arlington; Chester Acher, P4 of Ft. Dodge; George Walker, A3 of Council Bluffs; Thomas Rodgers, A4 of Pilot Mound; Werner Moeller, E3 of Iowa City; Charles Sonnkaeb of Dubuque; Edward Ponda of Iowa City, and Russell Kempf, G of Jamaica.

The accepted candidates will receive a year of instruction at the air corps training center field. Upon successful completion of the course they will be commissioned second lieutenants in the air corps reserve and, if they desire, will be placed on active duty as officers for any period they may elect, not to exceed five years.

Self-Support 1878 S. U. I. Students Labored Too

It's not the depression era that has made the student at the University of Iowa work for all or part of his self-support, Dr. Vernon Carstensen declares in his research for a doctor's degree in history.

For his proof, Dr. Carstensen goes back to 1878, 60 years ago, when approximately 30 per cent of the university students were working for all or part of their expenses. At that time, there were only 612 students in the university and the cost of an education ranged from $100 to $300. Their jobs were much the same as they are today -- janitor work, tutoring, library service and housework in Iowa City homes.

It was also found in Dr. Carstensen's report that students aided in keeping university buildings warm by the sawing, splitting and carrying of wood for the stoves.

British Production Up
LONDON (AP)—All records were broken in industrial production in Britain during the last quarter of 1937, according to the Board of Trade Journal. For the whole year there was an increase of nearly seven per cent over 1936.

State Patrolman to Speak at Traffic School Tomorrow

Sergeant Edgar Faber Is First Out-of-Towner to Appear Here

17 Violators Sentenced To Attend Thursday Night's Session

Sgt. Edgar Faber, head of the state highway patrol office at West Liberty, and organizer of one of the first traffic schools in Iowa, will speak on "Country Driving" at the fifth session of the Iowa City traffic school at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow.

The speaker started a driving school at Mason City about three years ago, conducting the majority of the classes himself. He has also spoken at other driving schools and aided in a number of highway safety campaigns.

Sergeant Faber will be the first out-of-town speaker at the Iowa City school. Former speakers have been Mayor Myron J. Walker, Claude Reed, H. I. Jennings and Charles Bowman.

Using actual experiences as a basis for his talk, Sergeant Faber expects to talk on methods of increasing cooperation among motorists, driving in zoned areas, and general driving conduct in rural areas. His talk will also include an interpretation of recent traffic laws.

It has been indicated that the speaker may be given the 20 minutes allotted to Police Judge Burke N. Carson, since much of his talk would cover the explanation of traffic laws.

Patrolman Richard Hohl, also stationed at West Liberty, and former organizer of a traffic school at Waterloo, will be present to aid Faber in the discussion.

Approximately 17 traffic violators have been sentenced to the school. All interested persons are invited to attend, whether they enroll or not.

Sgt. Herbert F. Beranek and Patrolmen Laurance Ham, Ben A. Hauber and Frank Burns will be called as witnesses.

After the jury panel was selected Monday afternoon, Judge Gaffney continued the trial until this morning. Attorney W. F. Murphy represents Cross.

Johnson County 4-H Club Group Attends Meeting

Nine Johnson county 4-H club girls and leaders and County Agent Emmett C. Gardner and Mrs. Gardner attended the all day 4-H posture training school in Cedar Rapids yesterday.

Minnie the Manikin, a jointed cardboard creature, was one of the chief attractions of the school. Designed to bulge and slump at the will of Ella Gardner, United States demonstration agent specialist from the federal extension service, Washington, D. C., who conducted the school, Minnie showed the club girls how change in posture could transform her from an "unnoticeable" to a charming girl.

Mrs. Edith Barker, in charge of Iowa 4-H girls' work, introduced Miss Gardner and her aide, following which Miss Gardner discussed posture.

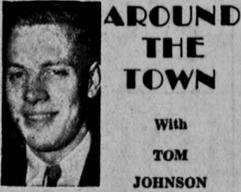

Leaders attending from Johnson county were Mrs. B. P. Hunter and Mrs. Grover Hudson, both of Iowa City; Mrs. Charles Zahradnek, Riverside, and Mrs. Lloyd Barr of Lone Tree. 4-H club girls attending were, Louise Warren, Katherine Nolan, Wilma Lee Hudson and Evelyn Cole, all of Iowa City and Delores Schott of Riverside.

Calculus 24

Students fall asleep during mathematics lectures, too! Yesterday, for instance, four dozed in one math class, and the instructor, annoyed, left the room. The period was about half through. And there were about 15 or so students who hadn't fallen asleep. They, however, were deprived of instruction. Theoretically, it was due them...

I can't blame an instructor for adopting an attitude towards inattentive students - nor can I sympathize with tuition students who snooze during the class schedule.

I was just thinking about the fellows who kept awake...

OUCH!

The college of dentistry's annual dance will be Saturday night in the Silver Shadow. The tooth-pullers are having a contest to name the affair. They expect it to be a regular event.

How about calling it the Driller's Dance, the Cocaine Injector's Hop, the Molar Extractor's Prom - or what have you...?

Talking about dentistry and teeth, how will the new technical films affect the (dental) rating of cinema stars?

Any dentist can detect which actor has false teeth. Or, did you know that? I'm told that one of America's best appeared in a recent technical production - and dentists gasped to learn his teeth were imitations. They appeared so natural in the black and whites...

Luckily for the fans, they can't tell... will still believe their heroes and heroines are perfect specimens...

Toboggan

Don't look now, but the stock market hit a new five year low yesterday. Of the 973 stocks traded, there were 770 losers. Railroads went the lowest in six years.

Thank You

Iowa City theater-goers responded to Walter Hampden's fine showing in "Ethan Frome" last night with plentiful applause.

The veteran actor took five bows. That really is tops. One or two is the usual number, and that only after an exceptional performance...

Johnson County Champion

W. H. BAILEY

Checker Champion

Shrewdest Player In Johnson County Is W. H. Bailey, 78

W. H. Bailey, who will be 79 years old April 19, defeated Charles Kettles in a special play-off match to win the 1938 checker championship of Johnson county at the annual Octagon club tournament finals Monday night in the clubrooms. About 20 contestants took part in the tournament, which started in January.

Mr. Bailey, who started playing checkers in 1885-53 years ago - won the county championship in 1934 and 1935 and was awarded a permanent trophy. He lives at 228 S. Linn street.

With his 1938 victory he wins the first leg on a traveling club trophy that he must win two more years to keep. The presentation was made by Olin Hauth, president of the club.

Mr. Bailey said the hardest game in this tournament was played the first night in January against Clifford Hess, defending champion. In 1937 Mr. Bailey missed by one point of being included in the four that made up the championship group. He was beaten out by Hess. Mr. Bailey played through all the sessions of this year's tournament without losing a game.

In the final play-off with Kettles, a tight moment arose when Mr. Bailey was practically certain of the second game, but Kettles with a clever move saved the game and turned it into a draw. Mr. Bailey said the longest game of checkers he ever played took an hour and a half.

In 1893 - 44 years ago - Mr. Bailey attended the Chicago World's fair, where he played checkers against the national champion. "I spent more time at the Checker club than I did at the fair," he said with a chuckle. "But that fellow beat me two out of three."

Mr. Bailey says he played his best checkers along in 1903 and 1904. He received a law degree from the university in 1881. Mr. Bailey explained that in tournament checkers the first move of each player is decided by drawing cards on which the first moves are indicated.

He thinks checkers is a deeper and more difficult game than chess, because once a move is made the checkers cannot be reversed. Trading men is good checkers, he thinks, especially if by trading a player can break up a solid group of his opponent's checkers.

He considers it good strategy always to keep three men in the king row and two in front of them for a guard row as long as possible.

To Complete Farm Acreage Allotments Early Next Month

The work of computing individual acreage allotments for Johnson county farmers will be completed early in April, it was announced yesterday by M. F. Sullivan, chairman of the Johnson county AAA committee.

Before the county committee can announce a single farm allotment, it must cover all the land in the county, divide all the corn acres and total soil-depleting acres as equitably as possible under AAA regulations and make the total of the individual allotments correspond to the county allotments. For this reason, Sullivan says it is impossible to give any man his official acreage allotment until the last allotment is set.

As soon as the individual farm allotments are announced, the committee will be glad to help farmers figure out their individual problems.
