CHAMBERLAIN, HITLER WILL CONFER

Camp Concedes Defeat in Georgia Race

Sen. George, Talmadge Run Race for Lead

Camp Expresses Idea People Will Demand Liberalism Later

ATLANTA, Sept. 14 (AP) — New Dealer Lawrence S. Camp, endorsed by President Roosevelt, conceded defeat in the Georgia senatorial primary late tonight as the veteran Senator Walter F. George and former Gov. Eugene Talmadge battled it out for the lead in the race.

Expressing gratitude for the vote accorded him in running third in the three-way contest, Camp said, "I regret that the fight has not succeeded at this time but it is a fight that must win in the end. I am convinced that when the people realize the full meaning of the issues involved that they will demand liberal representation in the senate."

George was put on the spot for political liquidation as a "conservative" by the president last month in a speech at Barnesville, Ga., in which he likewise rapped Talmadge, an administration critic.

Camp said he would "bow to the will of the electorate and I congratulate the nominee and pledge him my full support in the coming election." He did not hint who he believed the candidate would be.

A midnight tabulation of incomplete returns from 156 of the state's 159 counties gave the veteran Senator George 100,093 popular votes with a possible 192 county unit votes from his lead in 67 counties.

Talmadge, trailing with 75,931 votes, led in 82 counties which could give him 194 unit votes if the complete returns put them definitely in his column. Camp had 53,265 popular votes with a possible 118 unit votes from seven counties.

A majority of the state's 410 unit votes, which may be obtained without a popular vote majority, is required for nomination of a senator or governor. The democratic nomination in this state is equivalent to election.

In the gubernatorial race, Gov. E. D. Rivers, bidding for an endorsement term on a platform of completion of his "little new deal" program for Georgia, led in both popular and unit votes.

The unofficial and incomplete tabulation of votes from 155 counties gave Rivers 111,885 popular votes with a possible 220 unit votes, more than enough for nomination, from 78 counties in which he led. Hugh Howell, former (See PRIMARY page 8)

Senator George, a veteran, was still in the running as late tabulations were announced in the Georgia primary last night. Marked for purging by the president, George was running neck and neck with former Governor Talmadge.

Says Clothes Used by Bank Robbers Found

MARENGO, Sept. 14 (AP) — Clothing and other articles Sheriff E. E. Tremmel said were worn or used by participants in the recent Hedrick and North English bank robberies were found today under a straw pile on the William McDonald Jr., farm near Victor.

The sheriff, with his deputy, B. Long, State Agent Paul Gruber and Federal Agent Vogel visited the farm with Richard Ringler, one of those sentenced to life in prison for his part in the robberies.

Sheriff Tremmel said the officers found a sack which contained three loaded revolvers, several shirts, a pair of overalls, straw hat, three pair of rubber gloves, a mask made from the top of a woman's stocking, another mask made of a handkerchief, several pieces of clothing.

After accompanying the officers on their visit to the farm, Ringler was returned to the Sigourney jail. Mr. and Mrs. McDonald are awaiting grand jury action on a charge of participation in the robberies.

Actress Ends Life LOS ANGELES (AP)—Kyuks Walks-Alone, 25, Indian movie actress and dancer, ended her life yesterday by taking poison, Deputy Sheriff George O. Banning reported, because of overwork and the theft of an automobile she prized highly.

'It's Iowa's Year'

In keeping with this slogan The Daily Iowan, in cooperation with city and campus organizations, has called a pep meeting for the evening of Sept. 21 at 7:30 to boost the team on its way to California. All groups interested in contributing boxes and lumber for a huge bonfire are urged to call 4191 and ask for a member of the pep committee.

Radio Station WSUI Will Broadcast Send-Off Pep Meeting from Old Iowa Field Sept. 21

Radio station WSUI will carry a broadcast of the Iowa pep meeting Wednesday night starting at 7:30, it was announced yesterday by Carl Menzer, WSUI station director.

With plans for "the biggest opening game pep meeting in Iowa athletic history" progressing with remarkable speed, this announcement of the broadcast has cast a new light on the pep picture. First planned as just a local venture, this broadcast makes a state-wide participation possible.

This second annual Daily Iowan send-off will be held at the north end of historic Old Iowa field. WSUI will install a public address system in order that the thousands may hear the speakers.

A spokesman for the "I" club yesterday revealed that the members of this organization planned to attend the session in a body.

Present plans call for two groups, led by band units, to leave from Currier hall and the Quadrangle approximately at 7 o'clock and to converge on Iowa field.

Calls from various business houses have poured into The Daily Iowan offices offering boxes and barrels for the bonfire which should surpass even the huge blaze fired last year. Fraternity, sorority and dormitory presidents have been or will be contacted in the next few days asking them to urge their respective groups to cooperate by contributing boxes adorned with the house crest or name.

Prof. Harry G. Barnes, chairman of the executive committee on freshman week activities, has offered to include the pep meeting in the regular freshman week schedule of events.

"It's Iowa's year" and town and gown alike are responding to the challenge to show the team that Iowa City is behind it.

Several Score of Nation's Largest Stores Report Striking Retail Business Upturn

NEW YORK, Sept. 14 (AP)—A striking upturn in retail business was reported today by several score of the nation's leading department stores.

In all parts of the country selected big stores, with few exceptions, told The Associated Press their sales so far in September were rapidly approaching or had already broken through the levels of September, 1937, which averaged the highest of last year, allowing for seasonal factors.

The sharp and partly unexpected rise, which began around Labor day, marked a complete reversal of the discouraging downward trend of last winter and was heralded in some quarters as the forerunner of the autumn business upturn predicted by many economists.

Estimates of the increase of post-Labor day business compared with that in the same period in 1937 ranged up to 30 per cent or more in a few instances. A considerable number of those reporting indicated increases of 10 to 15 per cent.

Big Chicago mail order houses said they were now doing business equal to the September, 1937, peak, whereas they had expected to be not less than 10 per cent under that figure at this time.

Union Men, Truck Operators End Session Without Agreeing

Both Willing To Continue To Seek Basis for Settlement

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 14 (AP)—Union officials and truck operators adjourned their peace meeting tonight and announced no basis was reached for discussion of contract difficulties which halted motor transports in Omaha and Lincoln and sent pickets along major highways.

Separating after a 90-minute conference, representatives of the General Drivers union and the Nebraska Commercial Truckers association asserted no arrangements were made for further meetings. Both groups, however, said they are willing to confer again.

Four hundred Lincoln drivers were added today to those idle here when the Lincoln local called a strike pending signing of the area contract.

Reports from other cities in Nebraska and surrounding states said members of the Omaha local quit work pending a settlement.

Council Bluffs police said a Topeka, Kan., trucker suffered cuts on the face and head when a truck was thrown through his windshield.

Well Founded Those Fears Peggy Had Were Justified

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Sept. 14 (AP)—Peggy Fears, former Follies beauty who disclosed last week that she was down to her last string of pearls and was going to sing in a night club to get money to eat, found today that she may be working to pay for what she has already eaten.

Justice of the Peace Cecil Holland issued an attachment for $154.26 against her pay check at a Hollywood night club—for a past-due grocery bill.

The writ was served on Phil Selznick, manager of the club, who remarked:

"Looks as if Peggy's going on a diet."

She is the estranged wife of A. C. Blumenthal, wealthy theatrical producer.

State Safety Council Reports 18 Counties Without Auto Deaths

DES MOINES, Sept. 14 (AP)—The state safety council reported today 18 Iowa counties have had no fatal highway accidents thus far this year.

At the corresponding time last year, 16 counties had had no fatal accidents.

Asserts People Thinking Of Their Country

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Sept. 14 (AP)—United States Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg (R-Mich) asserted tonight that "like-thinkers" must find a political party "even though they have to invent one" which will enable them to unite "on a common battle line."

In a speech prepared for delivery at the ninth annual northern dinner of Miami's "committee of one hundred," the senior Michigan senator said he believed that more persons "are thinking of their country rather than their party today than ever before since Lincoln pushed a coalition to essential victory in 1864."

Would Save America

"I, for one, want to save the American system," Vandenberg said. "I want intelligent free enterprise. I want social-mindedness and practical social progress. I want reform which does not create more problems than it solves. I want recovery, American-style. So, I believe, do at least 51 per cent of the American electorate."

"It makes no difference what you call the political party that produces these things. But it makes a great deal of difference if like-thinkers do not find a political party—even though they have to invent one—which will permit them to make common cause on a common battle line so they may win a common victory for our institutions, our traditions, and our children."

Wants Independence

Asserting that "our vital, fundamental need" is to "maintain our checks and balances," Vandenberg said this could be done only by preserving an independent judiciary and an "independent, uncowed deliberative congress of the United States."

"Not only must we have a republican form of government, but we must have a solvent government," Vandenberg said. "Bankrupt democracy is no blessing to anybody."

The senator remarked that "we are in our ninth consecutive year of federal deficits" and added that he believed the deficit of this fiscal year "will be the biggest yet."

Will Brookhart Run in 1940?

CHICAGO, Sept. 14 (AP)—Gov. Nelson G. Kraschel tonight denied he had conferred today with Gov. Phillip La Follette of Wisconsin at Madison.

DES MOINES, Sept. 14 (AP)—The name of Smith Wildman Brookhart has returned to haunt the dreams of Iowa political leaders.

The Capitol Times, progressive newspaper in Madison, Wis., today said it has been informed that Gov. Phillip La Follette would not interfere with the national progressive party program in Iowa.

Governor La Follette, who launched the progressive party on a national scale last spring, lunched with Gov. Nelson G. Kraschel today. The newspaper said La Follette announced his "hands off" policy to the Iowa chief executive.

The progressive party's Iowa program lists former Senator Brookhart as a "potential progressive candidate for the United States senate," according to John F. Wirts of Iowa Falls. Wirts is expected to be the party's candidate for governor.

Neither governor could be reached for comment after the conference in Madison today. At least two other Iowans, State Librarian John Denison and Robert Buran-game, the latter Kraschel's former secretary, also visited Governor La Follette today.

The president, after talking with Secretary Hull by telephone, told a station crowd at Rochester he had decided to return "straight through to Washington because, as you know, having read the papers, the condition of affairs in other parts of the world is extremely serious."

Originally, the president had arranged to go back to the summer White House at Hyde Park, N. Y. The chief executive, since his arrival at Rochester Sunday, has kept in close touch with Hull by telephone. His decision to return to Washington today was reached after a lengthy conversation with the secretary of state.

Polite and respectful — like all other groups which gathered to see the president during his stay in Rochester — the crowd applauded before and after Mr. Roosevelt's talk.

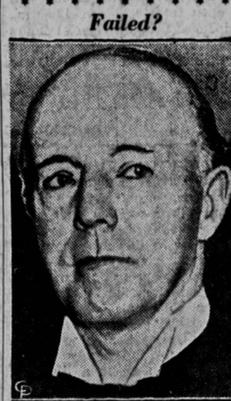

"I want to thank all of you for what I can best describe as an understanding heart on the part of the people of Rochester," the president told his listeners. "You have understood that I have come here not as a president, but as a father, and you have treated me accordingly."

Mr. Roosevelt left Rochester, Minn., shortly after 11 a.m. (Central Standard Time) today. He arranged to reach Washington tomorrow evening. Before departing, he had a final talk with his eldest son, James, who underwent a gastric ulcer operation Sunday.

The chief executive received physicians' assurances that James was recuperating satisfactorily.

The news was greeted with obvious relaxation of tension at the French foreign office where it was said the decision for Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's visit to Berchtesgaden was made "in common" between Britain and France.

Paris Relieved By Diplomacy

PARIS, Sept. 14 (AP)—The announcement Britain's prime minister will make a dramatic airplane flight to Germany to intercede personally with Adolf Hitler in an effort to keep peace in Europe brought a sigh of relief in Paris diplomatic quarters tonight.

Continued Violence In Czechoslovakia Precipitates Parley

By The Associated Press

Britain's prime minister, Neville Chamberlain capped a day of bloody civil strife in Czechoslovakia yesterday with the announcement he would fly to Germany today for a face-to-face appeal to Adolf Hitler for the peace of Europe.

At least 23 were slain and 75 wounded in fighting between Sudeten Germans and Czechoslovak gendarmerie in Sudeten German towns. These outbreaks, in which machine guns and hand grenades were used, accelerated fears the long-dreaded European conflagration might be at hand.

In Tense Setting In this tense setting, Prime Minister Chamberlain at 9 p.m. yesterday dramatically announced he had asked the German Fuehrer for an interview "to try to find a peaceful solution."

Cancellor Hitler had accepted the proposal immediately, and the British prime minister prepared to leave London by plane at 8:30 a.m. (1:30 a.m. C.S.T.) and reach Munich, Germany, at 1 p.m. (6 a.m. C.S.T.). The interview was set for Hitler's Bavarian mountain home near Berchtesgaden.

In Paris it was disclosed Chamberlain would have the full backing of the French government. Premier Edouard Daladier himself, it was disclosed, had first proposed the Chamberlain-Hitler interview, for which a precedent was sought in vain.

Nazis Proud In Berlin nazi spokesmen displayed obvious pride because the British prime minister had asked to come to Germany to consult with their Fuehrer.

Although announcement of the meeting appeared to temporarily ease world tension, underlying troubles still were there to be solved.

Berlin said the least Hitler could agree to would be complete autonomy for the Sudeten Germans of Czechoslovakia within the framework of the Czechoslovak state.

In Paris it was stated in semi-official quarters both Britain and France were agreed to exclude a plebiscite for the Sudetens in which they could vote for union with Germany.

In Prague, Czechoslovak capital, reaction to the scheduled Hitler-Chamberlain meeting was mixed. Many argued Chamberlain should not make any overture to Hitler in which Czechoslovakia would be sacrificed.

A Czechoslovak spokesman in Geneva summed up the situation with the words:

"Does this mean we go on the butcher's block, or can it be our champion is going forth to battle?"

Despite the French initiative, however, a spokesman at the Quai d'Orsay said Chamberlain would go to Berchtesgaden without informing France exactly what he (See CHAMBERLAIN page 8)

Germany Startled by Briton's Action

BERLIN, Sept. 14 (AP)—Metho-dical Germans searched in vain tonight for a historical parallel to the dramatic decision of Britain's Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain to visit Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

Chamberlain's eleventh hour request and Hitler's affirmative reply for a heart-to-heart talk on the Czechoslovak crisis was the most startling event in a day of rapid fire developments which included unofficial advice from the United States consulate to American tourists to go home.

Germans agreed Kaiser Wilhelm's telegraphic exchange with Czar Nicholas of Russia on the eve of the World war was the nearest parallel to Chamberlain's action.

They found this in no wise comparable, however, to the unusualness of tomorrow's meeting between the premier of a mighty British empire and the undisputed master over the life and death of a virile, reborn nation of 75,000,000 Germans.

Every German was conscious that history of the gravest consequence would be made between the two government heads at Hitler's Berchtesgaden retreat in the Bavarian mountains.

No sooner had the news of Chamberlain's coming been announced than friends called one another on the telephone and groups in restaurants and theaters eagerly bought up early editions of newspapers in the hope of learning more.

That Germany again was a world power which can even induce the British prime minister to come into its confines at a moment of highest international tension was more than counterbalanced by the feeling of relief at the possibility that war might yet be averted over the Czechoslovak-Sudeten dispute.

Many Germans hinted that tomorrow's meeting must be of the nature of give and take. If it were to be a one-sided proposition, they suggested that Chamberlain need not come.

At the same time, it was set forth that the least Hitler could agree to would be complete autonomy for the Sudetens within the framework of the Czechoslovak state.

The hearing was conducted by Lieut. Col. E. E. Gesler, Rock Island, Ill., United States army engineer, and revolved around feasibility of the proposed project.

The shooting by an unidentified assailant occurred as Critelli and his wife, 26, who escaped injury from two blasts of a shotgun, were getting out of their car in front of their home here.

WASHINGTON WORLD

By CHARLES F. STEWART

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Senor Vicente Villamin, noted Filipino lawyer and economist, advances the novel proposition that such set-backs as President Roosevelt may suffer in this fall's congressional campaign probably will prove advantageous to the White House, tenant in the long run.

Health Hints

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

Oxygen is the greater energizer of the world. We live in a sea of air and we use it every second. Perhaps the most astonishing adaptation of nature is that we exchange chemicals in the air with the plants. The plants can't get along without carbon dioxide, which is pure waste to us, while we can't get along without oxygen, which is pure waste to the plants.

Health Hints

Here, again, this process goes on automatically. We breathe just as much as we have to — slowly when sitting still, more rapidly when moving around, with painful frequency when we run a race.

Health Hints

These adjustments are carried out by a very delicate mechanism in the base of the brain called the respiratory center. This center was supposed formerly to occupy a very small amount of space, but studies in our own day indicate it is more diffuse and multiple.

Health Hints

Thus we have a paradoxical situation so that if an anesthetist wants to restore a patient to better breathing, he gives carbon dioxide which is a kind of body poison. When enough of this accumulates, the respiratory center is stimulated and the lungs themselves wash all the extra carbon dioxide out and take the oxygen in.

Health Hints

"My conclusion," concludes our Filipino observer, "is that a third term for President Roosevelt will become less unacceptable to many good and patriotic Americans as a result of the primary contests in which folk have demonstrated that they still are sovereign citizens."

It's a friendly, outsider's viewpoint. Interesting!

AROUND THE TOWN

With MERLE MILLER

I COVER IOWA CITY (Some Sort of Apology to Max Miller) Came the morning of the fourth year . . .

I have been here so long that even the squirrels must recognize me. (Although a few of the older ones caught on right away) and pass the word from tree to tree, from acorn to acorn, from professor to professor . . .

Fellow freshmen of mine have become editors and travelling salesmen and chain radio announcers . . . Some have even become seniors . . .

Yet here I am, what I have been for three straight years, a columnist . . . True I am a good columnist, the best news columnist in Iowa City . . . But also I am the only one . . .

I am nearing 21, and should the price of wheat in Abyssinia or the strength of champagne or the state of the republican party be discussed, I would crawl back into my typewriter. (Just behind the "B" key.) . . . There I would toss words until the discussers found me out . . .

The predicament has passed control. . . . Coming back, handsome and youthful, they ask me, "What are you doing?" . . . And I must reply that I am doing the same old thing, nothing for about 19 hours a day . . .

"He had such promise," they say, and shake their heads pityingly. "To be plucked off in the full bloom of youth" . . .

I who had, had such hopes too, hopes of Phi Beta Kappa keys and A. E. I. affiliations . . . But those went to wiser chaps, those heading their fathers' businesses in towns of 150 and others doing quite well on WPA writers' projects . . .

The second year blended into the third, the third into the fourth; and still I wear the bright blue uniform of a beginner in military, handling a gun with fumbling but loving hands . . .

I have tried to escape, heaven knows. . . . I have written to CBS describing myself and my talents . . . And they kindly suggested that I write to NBC, since it's a larger chain . . .

And I have my application on the files of many large, kind newspapers . . . The New York Times has promised me a fine job on the editorial staff—just as soon as they take care of the other 700 applications on their files . . .

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—This new hair-do the gals are supposed to be wearing is something a male who is extremely mere will have to get used to in small doses.

The first time I saw one—a studio secretary, not a star—I thought it was a mistake. The lady obviously had been called from the tub in a hurry, and had forgotten to take the pins out and let the locks down before she came to work. . . .

I have shaken the hand of Jim Farley and written long personal letters to Franklin Roosevelt . . . And I have solved many great problems, have dispensed of the war in Spain, the reorganization bill and the Austrian situation . . .

But the voters of Maryland, South Carolina and Georgia go their happy way, unperturbed, unlistening . . .

I have nearly passed courses in almost every department . . . I have failed tests given by some of the greatest scholars in America . . . And I have discovered that some professors like their work . . .

I find that some of my writings are being saved, preserved for humanity . . . The other day I came across a dusty old witticism of mine preserved in a news sheet that neatly wrapped a package of stale garbage . . .

In my time I have misspelled the name of almost every Iowa Citizen and have hailed numerous others into libelous headlines . . . But they have forgiven me—smiling the while in an understanding way . . .

People point me out now as I walk down the street . . . I have become a figure, an institution . . . Children are brought to look at me—even as the discolored angel in city park and the winding staircase in Old Capitol . . .

I have borrowed money from almost everyone of my friends (and even paid back a few) . . . And I have a standing fine in almost every library on the campus . . .

And I know things, little things I don't always tell . . . Like what biggie spends 141 days of 365 on a paying vacation . . . And what "Mr." should be called "professor" and vice versa . . .

And what non-attorneys like to think they are—in print . . . And this week the freshmen will arrive . . . And I shall greet them, in my way (meaning hurriedly plucking the grey from my hair), and continue my way, as un-noticed and unobtrusive as a steam calliope on North Dubuque street.

As Bill Saroyan would say (and did)—Ah Life, Ah Death, Ah Everything . . .

A Man ABOUT MANHATTAN

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK — Here is an amusing thought, at the time, annoying little contretemps that happened the other day, and as it is something that might very well happen to you at one time or another, I think you ought to know about it. It may save you some grief, especially if you ride taxicabs in New York.

This friend of mine, this Mr. A., got into a cab with his valise, and instructed the driver to take him to the Shelton hotel. A few minutes later he changed his mind. He yelled, "Hey, driver, let me off at the McAlpin. I have to see Ernest, Ernest is my favorite barber, and I need a hair trim. I'll tell you what. You let me off at the McAlpin and then you take my bag on over to the Shelton and check it for me. Leave the check in my name at the desk."

This was absolutely okay with the driver, and after Mr. A. wrote down his name and gave him sufficient money to cover the fare and the baggage check, the caddy drove away. Meanwhile something prompted Mr. A. to make a note of the cab's license number.

Time passed. It became dark. Soon the night wore away, and about 9 o'clock next morning your agile correspondent entered the Shelton and went up to Mr. A.'s room to have a cup of coffee with him. Mr. A. and I belong to a very exclusive coffee club. We are the only members there are. But he wasn't joyously sipping his brew when I arrived. He was sitting on the side of the bed, chin in hand, gazing morosely into space. Furthermore, the usually impeccable Mr. A. was badly in need of a shave. That he had slept in his shorts was obvious, there being no pajamas in sight.

"What in the world has happened to you?" I cried. He sighed, shrugged, and announced solemnly: "The detectives will be here any minute now."

Noting my stupefaction, he explained. He told how the taxi man had gone off with his bag. In that bag were his razor, his change of linen, everything he needed. Only there was no bag. There was no trace of a bag.

Of course, in this extremity, he had telephoned the police. And now they were coming up. It was at this juncture that Detectives Frank Raihl and Hugh Fox of the 51st police station walked into the room. They came jauntily in with huge smiles on their faces. And the bag. They had the bag, all right. With the taxi license number as a guide, they had hauled the frightened driver before the bar at 4 o'clock that morning.

But this caddy. He told a very good story, and proved it. He was French, and spoke English only brokenly. He had misinterpreted Mr. A. and had checked the bag into another hotel. He had even left a note for Mr. A. with the bag. And so the poor caddy wasn't to blame at all.

Nevertheless, it is a good thing that Mr. A. had jotted down the caddy's number. There are 31,000 taxicabs in New York. Without that number the hunt might have been a difficult one. Detectives Raihl and Fox believed they could have located the bag anyway. They probably could have.

Moral: Never ask a taxi driver to check your bag unless you check his number, even if Ernest is going to trim your hair. If you do you may wake up to find that you've been trimmed in more ways than one. At all events, keep your chin up and put in a hurry call for the police — preferably Detectives Raihl and Fox. If results are possible, they'll get them for you.

Medical and hospital bills for home accident victims last year averaged almost $2,000,000 a day, on the basis of best available statistics.

TUNING IN

By Loren Hickerson

WE TAKE TIME OUT . . . to look at one of the little stories that has something of romance and intrigue about it—one of those stories that are constantly cropping up . . .

This one's about a man in famous Radio City, where stars shine more brightly than any other spot in radio . . . a romantic Radio City where the dreams of young hopefuls occasionally come true, more frequently leave only memories of one of the most amazing places on earth.

There's nothing unusual about the man. He's a piano tuner. . . his name is Herman F. Krausser.

In the morning, every morning, NBC artists enter the studios of Radio City. In those vast studios are 38 pianos, very unromantic pianos — within themselves.

All day long, artists pound those pianos as they prepare and present precious minutes of national network programs. There's a rehearsal to be done, actual broadcasts to execute. . . pianos play an important part in an unimportant way.

Then late at night, those stars leave Radio City and for a few brief hours there is quiet in its halls.

It's during those briefly quiet hours that Herman F. Krausser does his work. It's his job to keep those 38 pianos in tune. . . in tune for the stars who'll return the next morning . . .

The tuning is a full time job. From 1 to 8 a.m., six days a week, Krausser tunes pianos. He comes from a family of piano men. . . he's been in the business for 35 years.

"When I first started working at NBC," he says, "there were only a few pianos and I worked on them during the day when they were not in use. But now it is different!"

All of the pianos used on NBC programs are his charge — four concert grands, one baby grand and 27 parlor grands. All are of ebony hue with the exception of one used for television, which is gray. The black just does not televise. . . gray does. . . but there's no difference in the tuning.

Krausser has met only a few of the NBC artists who use his pianos. Sometimes he finds some of their personal belongings hidden away inside the instruments — compacts, handkerchiefs, fountain pens, pencils, hair pins — even keys and odd coins.

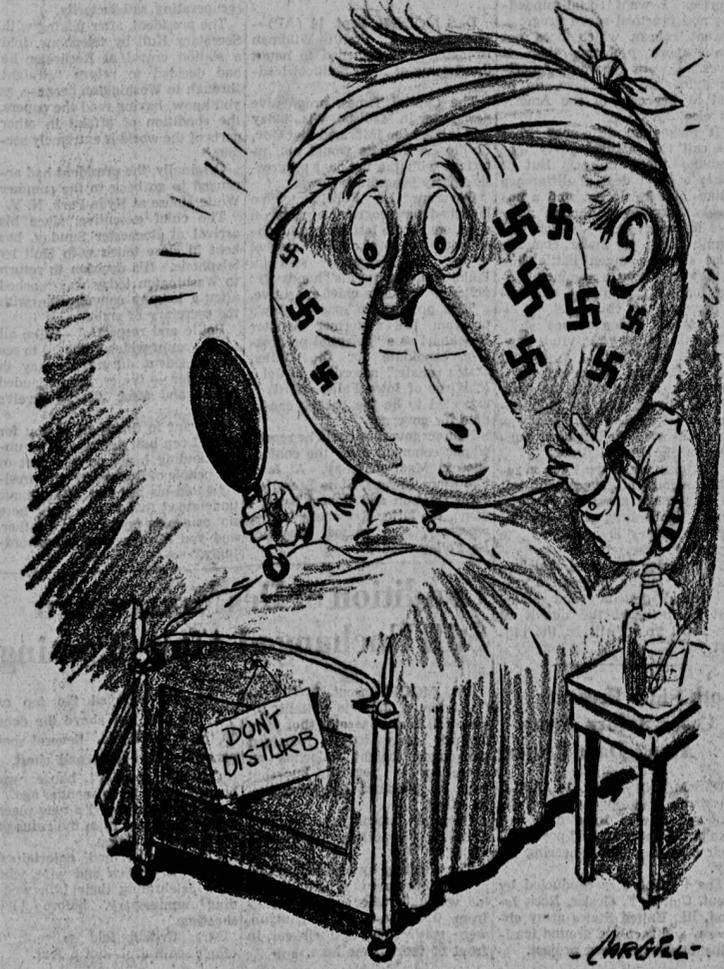

Krausser doesn't mind working while the rest of the world sleeps. In fact he says he is so accustomed to it now that he likes it and wouldn't want to go back to working days.

From 1 until 7:30 a.m., the studios are his own special province. There is no one around to bother him, for the cleaners and watchmen have their own duties, and keep out of the way.

I wonder what he thinks about as he tunes pianos night after night . . . if he thinks about the stars who use the pianos the next day. . .

But more than that, I wonder if the stars know this little story. . . ever bother to think about their pianos being tuned.

"GERMAN MEASLES"

And Hague Still Reigns FEDERAL department of justice officials have found no evidence that Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City has violated the federal civil rights statute, the one against conspiracy to deprive any citizen of his natural rights.

The item in last week's newspapers received comparatively little publicity, Mayor Hague has apparently ceased to be important news. Yet the effects of the decision might be far-reaching, certainly are final.

Thus ends, apparently, the hope that federal persecution of the czar of Jersey City could be made a reality. Hague has not stopped his actions, of course; they have merely become so commonplace they are no longer worthy of headlines.

The one remaining rope is that the Senate Civil Liberties committee can undertake a thorough investigation of the whole Hague dynasty, its far-reaching and autocratic scandals.

James F. "Jeff" Burkitt who dared speak against Hague is still serving a prison sentence for "disorderly conduct," a sentence amusingly long enough for a murderer in the south.

Other atrocities that the Hague machine has committed have already been mentioned here. Enough to say now that if the department of justice cannot act, someone else must.

A Headline

"AMERICAN business and finance is prepared to meet the shock of general European war in the opinion of leading Wall street figures and government fiscal authorities."

A news headline from New York. Nice to know, but we assume it won't be necessary.

No Comment

NOBODY'S said much about it, and we won't, but last week the British national debt reached a new high — approximately 38 billions of dollars, equivalent to about $800 for each of the nation's 44,790,485 citizens.

John Roosevelt works in a Boston department store for $18 a week, but pays $100 a month for an apartment. The gentleman at the next desk says it sounds like a trick he learned from his old man.

Chicago Gains; Giants Move Up

Yanks Need Four Wins to Clinch Flag in American Loop

The Pittsburgh Pirates, dropping a doubleheader to the New York Giants, had their National League lead cut to 2½ games yesterday. The Chicago Cubs, whipping Boston, climbed closer to the top, while the Cincinnati Reds, by splitting with Brooklyn, were deadlocked for third place with the Giants, who moved up a notch.

In the American league, the Yankees were rained out and the second-place Boston Red Sox defeated Detroit. This shaved half a game from the Yanks, lead, cutting it to 1½ games.

Since their game with Cleveland was cancelled—the last time the two clubs meet this season—the Yanks now need only four victories to clinch the pennant. That number would give them a record of 97 victories and 56 defeats. Boston, by winning all its 20 remaining contests, could still show 97 victories, but would have one more game on the losing side than the Yanks.

KLINGER HURT

Rookie's Injury Blow To Bucs

NEW YORK, Sept. 14 (AP)—The league-leading Pittsburgh Pirates suffered a severe blow today when Bob Klinger, star rookie pitcher, was lost to the club indefinitely with a sore arm.

Klinger, due to pitch the opener against the Giants whom he had beaten four times this year, warmed up for about 10 minutes but could barely lift his arm and Cy Blanton was given the assignment.

Klinger was out for about three weeks in mid-season with the same arm ailment. He has won 10 games and lost five this season.

Dick Evans

Ray Murphy

Quarterback Nile Kinnick takes the pass from center and fades back to throw a pass. Purdue linemen seep through the Hawkeye line and are chopped down by the alert backs protecting the passer. For a moment, as Kinnick scans the field for an eligible receiver, it looks as if the little quarterback may be snowed under by the swarming Boiler-makers. Suddenly, out of the mass of players, a lanky end wearing the Old Gold uniform of Iowa appears as if by magic. Kinnick spots the runner and lets fly in his direction. A gasp from the crowd as the toss appears to be too far for the speeding end to reach. Then, at the last moment, the potential receiver leaps high in the air to snare the pass with one hand. Cecil Isbell, Purdue's great back, comes over fast to nail the ball carrier after a gain of 47 yards.

The man who snagged that difficult pass and enabled the Hawkeyes to threaten the Purdue goal was Dick Evans, a junior this year who is making a determined bid to clinch the starting position at one of the ends on the 1938 Iowa football team.

Evans, who hails from Chicago, is one of the three veteran ends available for duty this year. He is three inches over the six-foot marker and weighs 190 pounds. With such men as Erwin Prasse and Fred Smith, lettermen, and Jens Norgaard, Ken Pettit, Max Hawkins and Howard Wakefield up from the freshman squad and all trying for the two flank positions, Dick may not make the grade as a regular, but it is a certainty that he will give the men who do make the grade a tough battle.

Son of a famous father who made football history at the University of Iowa long years ago, Ray Murphy, who lives in New York, will be out there trying to emulate the glorious deeds of his father, Ray Sr.

Ray Sr., captained the 1911 team and was an all-western fullback.

Not a bit awed by the reputation of his father, Ray Jr., is out there every day trying to make those old-timers who remember his dad recognize the fact that he's good, too.

He's a dangerous ball carrier and plays the game for keeps. Standing 6-2 and weighing approximately 190, he'll make his presence felt during the coming season.

City High Has Veteran Eleven

Ten Lettermen In Lineup For Friday's Game

Naming 10 lettermen to his starting eleven, Coach Herb Cormack will put a veteran team on the field when his Little Hawk football team opens its season against DeWitt on Shrader field Friday night.

Named on the probable starting lineup were Walsh and Crumley at ends; Maher and Hirt at tackles; Mueller and Fetig or White at guards; Wright at center. The backfield will consist of Buckley or Heacock at quarter; McGinnis and McLaughlin at halves, and Lewis at fullback.

Last night's practice was devoted mostly to improving blocking and polishing up on pass plays until rain cut the play short.

Among others who will probably see service in the opening game will be Voelchers, Martin, Lillick, Putnam, Caywood, Parker, Walden and Miller.

Until rain cut it short, last night's practice was devoted mainly to improving blocking and polishing up pass plays.

To all appearances Iowa City will put a fairly strong team on the field again this year. The line will be rather heavy but not slow. Fetig, Mueller and Hirt add a lot of weight to the forward wall. "Dusty" Maher, made over from an end, is ranga but not as heavy as the others. He makes this up in speed. Walsh and Crumley look good at ends.

The backs will be fast and elusive, McGinnis, McLaughlin, Buckley and Lewis making a well-balanced backfield. Jay Walden, one of St. Pat's mainstays last year, will alternate with Ted Lewis to give power to the backfield. Passing duties will be divided between McGinnis and Buckley while McGinnis and Walden will probably share the kicking duties.

"We're going to have a stronger team than last year's," Cormack said. "We will be tough in our games, but I don't want just that. I want to win games."

"We have been having some tough luck in practice in that injuries have prevented us from putting our entire squad through its drills together."

In speaking of blocking, Cormack said it has been "off and on" during practice sessions. "The boys will have to be in there and fighting all the time," he said. "It will be the difference between a good and poor team."

What's This? Coast to Coast Golf Marathon

CHICAGO, Sept. 14 (AP)—J. Smith Ferebee, the 31-year-old broker who started the golf marathon craze by playing 144 holes Aug. 5, decided today to play 576 holes from coast to coast in four days "to end this marathon golf fad."

Ferebee, with the aid of an airplane sleeper plane chartered for him by Reuben Trane, La Crosse, Wis., sportsman, plans to play 144 holes a day on four successive days over courses in eight cities. He will play 72 holes on two courses in different cities each day.

The half share of his Virginia plantation he won Aug. 5 from Fred Tuerck, another La Salle street broker, will be at stake again, with Tuerck regaining his interest, with an equity of $9,000, should Ferebee fail. Should Ferebee win, he'll earn the plane ride and the exercise.

Ferebee's schedule called for daily rounds at Los Angeles and Phoenix, Ariz.; Kansas City and St. Louis; Milwaukee and Chicago, and Philadelphia and New York. He expects to start Sept. 25.

Sooners Get Pass Defense; Punt Returns

NORMAN, Okla., Sept. 14 (AP)—University of Oklahoma football squadmen turned their attention to pass defense and returning of enemy punts today. Most of the backfield men looked impressive on punt returns.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Sept. 14 (AP)—The Missouri Tigers took to the air today.

Bill Amelung, Paul Christman, Bob Faurot and Pete Ewing did most of the tossing. Christman seemed to have the least difficulty finding his targets.

Assistant Coach Herb Bunker worked linemen at dummy blocking.

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 14 (AP)—Coach Biff Jones' sophomores—Backs Harry Hopp and Herman Rohrig in particular—stole the show today as the major sent his University of Nebraska football squad through its first scrimmage of the season.

Bill Iverson, sophomore guard candidate, suffered a broken nose in today's workouts, the last of the two-day sessions. Classes will begin tomorrow.

MANHATTAN, Kan., Sept. 14 (AP)—Coach Wes Fry continued with routine drill today in preparation for his Kansas State Wildcats' first stiff scrimmage Saturday.

Jack Blanke, letterman quarterback, was on the tossing end in pass combinations, with Ends Bill Beeley and Emile Kientz running 'em down.

Suspensions To Hold—N. B. A.

MONTREAL, Sept. 14 (AP)—The National Boxing association at its convention today voted automatic suspension, beginning Oct. 1, for any fighter engaging in a bout with a suspended boxer in other than N. B. A.-controlled territory. The ruling, it was pointed out, would not apply to John Henry Lewis and Roscoe Toles, who, the convention explained, are signed to fight the suspended Jimmy Adamic of Detroit this month.

Delegates voted to uphold the California athletic commission in its six-month suspension of Eddie Simms, Ohio heavyweight, for "an unsatisfactory performance" against Phil Brubaker, Oakland, Cal.

The state of Arkansas was suspended by the association "until payment of dues and arrears."

Gonzales Gets Flying Start

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 14 (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals gave Mike Gonzales a flying start in his debut as a manager today by defeating the Phillies in both ends of a doubleheader, 12-9 and 3-2.

The Cards outslugged the Phillies to take the first game, but had to come from behind to win the second, despite a three-hit pitching performance by Morton Cooper, a rookie.

No Country

In his cabin aboard the U. S. liner President Harding is John Dolanuch, 43, a man without a country destined to remain aboard ship because of technicalities growing out of the Versailles treaty. Born in Hatna, then part of Austria, he failed to apply for Rumanian citizenship when Hatna was taken over by the Bucharest government. After 1933 he was no longer eligible to do so.

HOSTESS HINTS

By LOUISE BENNETT WEAVER
AP Feature Service Writer

Treat yourself to a real steak dinner one of these nights very soon. Not a Swiss steak or a country fried steak, but a thick, broiled sirloin or porterhouse, dripping juicy, tender as can be, and done to a turn.

And be sure that the rest of the menu does justice to the steak. There should be big Idaho potatoes, or French fries if you like them better. The second vegetable may be broiled tomatoes, French fried onions or sweet peas or perhaps a dish of buttered zucchini. The salad without question, should be a vegetable salad bowl with lettuce, cress, tomato and asparagus with a tart French dressing—or better yet—a Roquefort French dressing. The dessert depends upon family preference. To some families a steak dinner without apple pie as a finishing touch just would not be complete. But to the family that really eats beef steak—a platter of cream cheese, green seedless grapes and toasted crackers is a nice finale that isn't too overpowering.

The steak itself is the really important part, of course. Buy a sirloin steak if you have more than three people to serve; a large Porterhouse for two or three; or individual club steaks for T-bones if you prefer to serve a whole steak to each person. For small individual steaks you may have them cut three and one-fourth inches thick, but a bigger steak cut one to two inches thick is really far superior both for juiciness and tenderness. Allow at least three-fourths of a pound per person (individual steaks will exceed this weight).

And you'll want to make sure it is a tender steak. In purchasing the meat ask for a steak from branded beef, the highest grade, and be sure to look for plenty of fat inside and outside the meat itself. And if you like the extra flavor and tenderness of "aged" or "hung" beef you will find your dealer willing to get it for you even if he has to make a special order.

You can pass some of the responsibility for final goodness to the inherent tenderness of the meat itself, but the way you cook it is in the final analysis the real answer to its quality. Don't cook it too fast, or too much, and don't doctor it up with fancy garnishes. Broiling is by far the best method for cooking. The broiler is pre-heated, the steak placed on the rack and turned only once during the cooking. No seasoning is added until after the steak is done. Then salt and pepper is added and a cheese or butter dressing applied quickly.

The main thing is to cook the steak to the stage of doneness most desirable to you. Rare steaks are tenderest, medium done steaks next in tenderness and a well-done steak least tender and juicy. Never cook it past the medium done or "pink inside" stage.

For specific directions follow recipes below:

Broiled Sirloin Steak—Roquefort Cheese
2 1-2 to 3 pounds sirloin steak, one to one and one-half inches thick
2 teaspoons salt
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon Roquefort cheese
Preheat boiler 15 minutes with oven regulator set at 450 degrees Fahrenheit. Place steak on broiler rack, set three to three and one-half inches under heating unit, and let broil, turning once, for time specified below. When done, season, spread surface with the Roquefort cheese and butter creamed together and return to broiler for one minute. Serve hot with parsley garnish. The recipe serves five.

Total time for broiling steaks follows. For steaks one inch thick: rare, eight to 10 minutes; medium, 14 to 15 minutes; well-done, 18 to 20 minutes. For steaks one and one-half inches thick: rare, 12 to 15 minutes; medium, 18 to 20 minutes; well-done, 25 to 30 minutes.

Porterhouse Steaks with Parsley Butter Sauce
Porterhouse steak, one inch thick
2 teaspoons salt
1 1-2 teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
Preheat boiler 15 minutes with regulator set at 450 degrees Fahrenheit. Place steak on rack three and one-half to four inches under heat unit and broil for 14 to 15 minutes for a "medium done" steak, turning only once. For "rare" steak broil 10 minutes. When done spread with butter and sprinkle with chopped parsley. Serve at once, garnished with whole carrots and halved broiled tomatoes.

Miss Foster Wed Saturday

Graduate of Iowa Married to Lester Kuni in Illinois

Of local interest is the wedding of Margaret Florence Foster, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Foster of Aurora, Ill., and Lester E. Kuni, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick T. Kuni of Belleville, Ill., which was solemnized Saturday in the home of the bride's parents.

The Rev. Henry Moser officiated at the single ring ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an ivory gro-de-landri taffeta dress, made in bouffant style with hoop-skirt and sweetheart neckline. Her elbow-length veil fell from a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a colonial bouquet of white sweetheart roses.

Attending the bride as maid of honor was Gwendolyn Seippel of Dubuque. Her gown was of dusty pink chantilly lace, fashioned with a fitted bodice, full skirt, and a bolero jacket. Her shoulder-length veil was held in place by a halo which matched the royal purple, velvet ribbon tie on her jacket. She carried a small colonial bouquet.

Laurence Foster, brother of the bride, served as best man.

Following the ceremony, dinner was served to 24 guests at the Aurora Country club. Later the couple left for a wedding trip in the west until Oct. 1, when they will make their home in Aurora.

The bride attended the University of Dubuque and was graduated from the University of Iowa in 1937. She is a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority. Mr. Kuni received his B.A. degree from the University of Illinois, where he was affiliated with Theta Xi fraternity. He is now employed with the International Harvester company in Aurora.

AFRAID TO MARRY

HELEN WELSHIMER

CHAPTER 15
IN THAT moment that she heard her name spoken in the lobby, as she left Mary Banner's apartment, Judy thought that Craig had said it. She did not want to see him—not until she had adjusted a mask over her face so he would not see the hurt wonderment in her eyes. It was not Craig who had spoken. It was Ronald Birrell. In her relief she smiled. He was so strong, so tall, so dependable. She did not even ask why he had come. He told her, though.

"I telephoned Marjorie, searching for you, and she knew you were coming here. Is everything all right?" He asked it almost timidly.

"Everything is lovely!" Everything, but I'm crying way down inside. Maybe I'll never stop. Just cry on and on for years, she was telling herself.

"Judy, you are grand." He said it solemnly, worshipfully. The tone now she knew. Craig's voice when he mentioned Mary. But Ronald must not think of her in that way. She was finished with love, forever and forever.

He did not ask her if she were free. He led her to his car and was quiet until they had driven a few blocks. Then he put an irrelevant question to her.

"Do you like to fish?" "I used to like to, when I was little. Sometimes my father took me with him. That was before he married Sarita. It's been years since I tried."

"I know of a fishing lodge up in Connecticut where I go sometimes. I have some friends, another lawyer and his wife, who like it there. It's late for fishing, I know, but I like to sit in a boat, under a gray sky, and think. Would you go this week-end?"

"Yes, I'd like to." "As simply as that it was settled. Judy's rent was more than a week overdue, and her wardrobe had lost one dress and one hat, sold for money with which to buy food. Absolutely she put aside these worries. She would take them up when she came back Sunday night."

It was wholesome and merry and happy in the woods and on the lake. She lay awake the first night hearing the night sounds, watching the play of long moonlight on the water, breathing deeply of cold, sharp air. In the other bunk in the alcove Mrs. Thomas, the lawyer's wife, slept quietly. From the lower floor, where the two men still sat by the fire, came the low accents of their voices.

The bands that had been clutching her heart relaxed. For the first time in many days Craig didn't matter. Judy fell asleep, happy and contented.

The spell held all through Saturday and Sunday. A pleasant companionship developed naturally. Ronald displayed a protective attitude toward her that was comforting after the weeks of battling employment offices.

They were headed for the city on Sunday evening when he asked her about her job hunting.

"No good," she answered. "But this is a new week, a better week. I know I'll find something."

"Are you free Thursday night?" he asked.

"Thursday! That was four days away. He wasn't in any hurry to see more of her. Well, she wouldn't let him know that she cared.

"Sorry, not Thursday. But Friday is open."

"I can't make it Friday," he said regretfully. "What about Saturday?"

"I wish I could make it sooner—a week's such a long time to wait—but the Bolings are having a shindig tomorrow night and I'm taking Abbey to the theater Wednesday. I have to work Tuesday—that's the way it goes."

"Yes, isn't it?" Judy asked too quietly. Never let yourself get excited again, Judy Rogers, she was reciting inwardly. You've had all sorts of lessons. Abbey Boling has what you haven't—money. Good old coin of the realm. Men like it. Abbey has yellow hair, too. Men go ga-ga over that. Don't be forgetting.

Then she remembered that kiss, and the words that Ronald had told Marjorie about the one girl, a brown-haired girl, he could marry, and the reverence in his tone. It was too complicated. Thank fortune she wouldn't have time to think. She must get a job.

Ronald did not go with Judy into the hotel. There was no parking place and it was late. She was glad that he had not, a few moments later. If he had, she might have lingered, talking to him, and the clerk at the desk might have spoken to her in his presence. As it was, she went directly to her room. Her key did not seem to fit. She examined it carefully. It bore her room number. She inserted it in the lock again. It would not move.

Realization came slowly. She was locked out! Her possessions were locked in. They would be held until she paid her rent. She began to laugh. She leaned against the door of the room and shook until her stomach ached, her head throbbed, her throat hurt.

Finally she went downstairs. She approached the cashier.

"I'm sorry Miss Rogers, but you are late with your rent," he said. "Until it is paid, I can't let you in."

"It wasn't such a pleasant room anyway," Judy answered summoning a smile from somewhere. "I'll be giving it up tomorrow when I pay you."

She walked to the door, holding her bag. In it were sports clothes, and one evening outfit, taken along in case there was a country club where the party might dine on Saturday night. There had not been, and she was glad.

She was standing in the doorway when the honking of a car attracted her attention. It was Ronald. Her first instinct was to run. Her second was to face it. She walked to the side of the car. He held out a small black leather purse.

"You dropped it," he said. "It must have fallen out of your bag when you reached for a powder puff or lipstick."

"Thanks." It held 35 cents. She hoped he hadn't looked inside. "Mind giving me a lift to the nearest subway?"

"I'll do better than that. I'll take you. Where are you going?" "Either the Grand Central Station or Marjorie's. I didn't want to accept favors, even when they were thrust upon me, and now I'm asking them. Maybe a bench wouldn't be hard if I strolled around often enough."

He came directly to the point. "Locked out?"

Ronald said something softly under his breath. Then he faced her. "Judy, let me make you a loan. It's purely business."

"No." Her head came up proudly, the eyebrows, the smile, the whole contour winging, singing upward. "I appreciate it. But I can't do it. I'll get a job. I'm designing more clothes all the time."

"The market is filled with ambitious young designers, but I'm proud of you. You'll make the grade, Judy. You have to!"

"Why?" she asked curiously.

He hesitated. "Well—just because I want you to."

Resignations of Four Teachers Accepted by Iowa City Board

Staff of 94 Will Function This Year In School System

Resignations of James Storing, Jeannette Woolley, Florence Bradley and Perry G. Rawland, all teachers in Iowa City public schools, were accepted last night by the Iowa City independent school board.

At the same meeting board members approved the following new teachers and their salaries: Mary Covey — $1,200; Minnie Landau — $1,200; Annie L. Fisher — $1,200; M. B. Street — $900; and Alice N. Daniels — $1,200. Mr. Street will only teach three-fifths time.

Increased responsibilities will raise Marion Ross' salary to $1,350.

Secretary of the school board, Charles S. Gallier, reported the expenditures for the month of August to be $5,916.77 from the general fund and $56,851.01 from the construction fund. There were no receipts.

Superintendent Iver A. Opstad reported that the present staff of 94 teachers would be sufficient to carry out the educational duties in the city's public schools.

chairman of the democratic executive committee under the Talmadge regime, ran second with 95,164 popular votes and a possible 180 unit votes in 76 counties; John J. Mangham, former chairman of the state highway board, was third with 12,348 popular votes and possible two unit votes, and Robert F. Wood, Athens salesman, was fourth with 11,225 popular votes.

The midnight tabulation represented around 230,000 votes, or a little more than half of the total registration of approximately 435,000. Most observers felt the total vote probably would not run much over 325,000.

Effect of the remainder of the votes on the units going to each candidate could not be foretold because of inequities in distribution of unit votes to population distribution.

Talmadge's strength in the early returns came from the country districts where he always has had a large following. He trailed in first reports from a few of the larger cities. He campaigned intensively in both rural and urban sections, on a platform of homesteading the needy.

A change in the trend of popular votes could easily swing counties from one column to another in view of the incomplete returns.

The Georgia election was the climax of a week which saw Senator Millard E. Tydings, Maryland democrat, renominated over President Roosevelt's objections, and primary elections of lesser national importance in numerous states. Simultaneously with the Georgia voting today, two states held party conventions. Connecticut democrats renominated Senator Augustine Lonergan and Gov. Wilbur L. Cross. Delaware republicans convened, principally to select a nominee for the house.

Other elections of the week, mostly held Tuesday, produced the following results:

Former Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald was given the republican gubernatorial nomination in Michigan, to oppose Gov. Frank Murphy, democrat, in the November elections.

Vermont republicans, clinging to a state tradition of keeping their office holders in office, renominated Gov. George O. Aiken and Senator Ernest W. Gibson. They will be opposed in November by Fred C. Martin and John McGrath, democrats nominated without opposition.

In South Carolina, Burnet P. Maybank was the apparent winner of the democratic run-off primary for the governorship, equivalent to election. His opponent, Wyndham M. Manning, entered a protest, however, and troops seized the ballot boxes in Charleston county.

Republican voters in New Hampshire gave Gov. Francis P. Murphy, seeking renomination, a narrow victory, and chose Charles W. Tobey, Townsend plan advocate, to be their senatorial candidate. He will meet Senator Fred H. Brown, democrat, in November.

While the Townsend planners were successful in nominating Tobey, they failed by a wide margin in the state of Washington, where their candidate, Otto A. Case, was defeated for the democratic senatorial nomination by Senator Homer T. Bone.

A close race for the Arizona democratic gubernatorial nomination developed between R. T. Jones and James H. Kerby, with Jones leading. Senator Carl W. Hayden, democrat, was renominated easily.

In Colorado, Gov. Teller Ammons, democrat, was well ahead of George J. Knapp for the democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Wilson Opens Campaign FORT DODGE (AP)—Declaring the nation must "set before the American farm the shield of the American factory," George Wilson, Des Moines, republican candidate for governor, opened his campaign here last night.

Chamberlain--

may propose to Hitler or what agreement or understanding he may attempt to bring back.

American observers hailed the announcement of the impending visit as the "best news for a long time."

Not for an instant, however, despite the lifting of the clouds for the immediate future, was there to be a relaxation of military precautions.

Informed quarters said the government had completed plans for mobilization of enough reservists to have 4,000,000 men under arms in the empire, if necessary.

France's preparations for mobilization were in addition to precautionary operations which have brought an estimated 2,000,000 men under arms already in France, some hundreds of thousands of them in the Maginot line facing Germany.

The plans said to have been completed would provide for eventual mobilization of all classes from 1924 to 1931, inclusive—men from 27 to 34 years of age.

Such a mobilization would be a natural move if the Czechoslovak-German crisis took an acute turn for the worse. Hence it was not surprising that plans had been drafted for an orderly massing of manpower.

Sudeten-Czech Fights Continue

PRAGUE, Sept. 14 (AP)—Czechoslovakia's Sudeten German borderland alongside the frontier of the nazi reich was spilled with blood today in a series of fights between the Berlin-backed German minority and Czechoslovak gendarmes.

At least 23 were killed and 75 wounded in the outbreaks, which provided a dire threat to the peace of Europe.

A Prague tense over prospect of war heard with mixed feelings of the scheduled interview between British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler tomorrow.

Many Czechs felt Chamberlain should not sacrifice Czechoslovakia for a settlement with Hitler, and that Czechoslovakia would fight to save her integrity.

Today's fighting was done with machine guns, hand grenades, rifles and pistols, some of which, the government announced officially late tonight, "probably came from abroad."

One of the gravest disturbances was at Schwaderbach, Sudeten German town directly on the German border opposite the German city of Sachsenberg.

The government said the situation was "particularly serious" here and that "the elements combatting the authorities were in a situation which enabled them to cross the international border at will."

Late tonight the foreign office said the Schwaderbach incident was "completely liquidated" after a number of Sudeten Germans had crossed over the frontier into Germany.

The Schwaderbach incident began when 2,000 Sudeten Germans attacked and occupied a gendarmerie station.

33 Injured As Roof Collapses At High School

CLARKDALE, Ariz., Sept. 14 (AP)—Thirty-three children were injured today when the roof collapsed upon 100 pupils in the second story study auditorium of Clarkdale high school.

Seven were taken to a hospital and 26 were cut and bruised. One girl jumped from a window and was critically injured. Others were pinned beneath wreckage.

The number of Georgia farms reporting they have no milk cows dropped from 100,000 in 1930 to approximately 70,000 in 1935.

Sears Reports Iowa Spending

Late Figures Show Firm Deeply Rooted In Iowa Industry

Expenditures of Sears, Roebuck and company in the state of Iowa increased 162 per cent during last year, to reach a total of $7,182,571. G. F. Trotter, manager of Sears store here, has made known.

Mr. Trotter's figures were taken from a report sent out by Sears' executive offices in connection with the company's 52nd anniversary celebration, which begins Thursday and will continue for 15 days.

Of the total expenditure, $6,037,895 covered the cost of manufactured goods purchased from 69 sources located in 30 cities and towns. This represents a 250 per cent increase over 1936, the report stated.

In addition to its expenditures for Iowa made merchandise, Sears spent the following: for wages and salaries of resident employees, $783,848; for newspaper advertising, $169,833 and for rents and taxes, $190,995.

"For the past several years it has been the custom of our executive offices to send out this annual report regarding Sears expenditures in the various states," said Mr. Trotter.

"Largely as a matter of personal interest for the members of my store staff upon the receipt of this latest report I made a compilation of Sears expenditures in Iowa for the past five years, 1933 through 1937. I found that the average yearly expenditure for that period amounts to $3,037,061.

"Undoubtedly this sum has proved of great benefit to business in this state during that five year period," said Mr. Trotter. "The company's 1937 expenditures were 136 per cent higher than the yearly average. This fact in itself indicates that Sears is spending increasingly large sums within the borders of our state."

Today a $40,000,000 merchandising hippodrome, extending from coast to coast and playing simultaneously in 440 cities, will start when 490 Sears, Roebuck and company stores hoist the curtains on the firm's "52nd anniversary celebration."

Political Group To Map Plans

County Republican Central Committee To Meet Wednesday

Chairman Robert L. Larson of the Johnson county republican central committee has announced a committee meeting of the Johnson county central committee for next Wednesday at 8 p.m. The meeting will be in the Johnson county court room.

At the meeting campaign plans for the November election will be discussed, and the location of the county republican headquarters in Iowa City will be decided.

A few members will be elected to fill vacancies in the county central committee.

September 30 Last Day For P.W.A. Grants

Urging the immediate action of municipal and other governmental subdivisions contemplating seeking federal aid and communities wanting public works administration projects under the 1938 program, PWA Director R. A. Radford yesterday stated that Sept. 30 is the last day applications will be accepted by congress.

Iowa City now has on file an application for a grant of funds to be used in a paving project. City officials have received authority from the state comptroller for a transfer of funds which he posted as security for the city's cost of the project.

Approval of the project is expected within the next week.

Giving Speech, Milroy Starts GOP Campaign

DES MOINES, Sept. 14 — Delivering what is generally viewed as the down beat on the 1938 Iowa republican campaign in an address before the Iowa Women's republican club here today at Hotel Savery, State Chairman J. H. Milroy of the republican central committee lifted the curtain for a brief preview of the "streamlined" GOP state program.

As far as the republican party is concerned the 1938 campaign will be no three-ring circus Milroy said. "The issues involved are too deadly serious and of so much immediate concern to the state that we can give no time to the cheap ballyhoo and absurd profundities of our bombastic opposition."

None of the time-honored devices designed to mislead and confuse voters have any place in the republican party plan, Milroy told his listeners. Quoting Abraham Lincoln who once said that "no man possesses a good enough memory to become a successful liar," the GOP chairman said "it is the simple truth, unadorned by more than the hard facts now of public record, that our candidates will carry through the state during the next few weeks."

Liberia has been an independent republic since 1847.

National Merit Club Awards Two Prizes To Two Local Men

Outstanding in their respective departments, Glen Eves, service manager, and Lawrence Kendall, parts manager of the Burkett-Updegraff Motor company, have won prizes in the national merit club sponsored annually by the Ford Motor company, according to E. J. Lenthe, head of the local concern.

Mr. Eves has received first prize for the fifth consecutive time. A cash prize and a trip to Des Moines are the awards given Lawrence Kendall, who received second place in his division.

Winners were determined on the basis of points earned on efforts and accomplishments, merchandising ability and general improvement in their respective departments.
