German Press Attacks Baruch For Statements

Once War Industries Board Head Warned Of German Threat

MUNICH, Oct. 15 (AP)—Germany looked forward tonight to quick adaptation of Czechoslovakia to her hegemony and to settlement of Hungary's claims for Czechoslovak territory on the same basis as Germany acquired the Sudetenland.

At the same time the German press suddenly ceased all attacks on Czechoslovakia and opened up instead with a flood of criticism of Bernard M. Baruch, former chairman of the United States war industries board.

Even the semi-official Diplomatich Politische Korrespondenz joined the chorus against Baruch for his statements in the United States.

(Baruch declared in Washington Friday that Germany had not gained all the raw materials or markets she needed and said "the real threat to the United States from Germany is in South America and is real and immediate.")

Compares Britain
"Baruch's charges," this publication asserted, "are along the same lines as the efforts of the Belloc clique unfortunately existing in England."

"His charges further constitute a systematic campaign of casting suspicion on the German Reich, with the South American states and to disturb the beginnings of exchange of goods profitable to both."

It said it took satisfaction, however, in the fact that President Roosevelt did not associate himself with Baruch's strictures.

With the departure from Munich of Czechoslovak Foreign Minister Frantisek Chvalkovsky and former Hungarian Premier Koloman Daranyi after conferences with Reichschancellor Adolf Hitler, Germans felt two things would happen in the immediate future:

1. Czechoslovakia would remodel her political, social and military life to adapt herself to Germany's influence.

2. Hungary would receive all those sections of Czechoslovakia on the Hungarian border where the Hungarian race and language predominate.

Same Yardstick
Hitler, according to Germans in touch with the situation, did not designate in his conferences yesterday which cities, towns and villages should be regarded as Hungarian but insisted the same yardstick be applied to the situation on the Hungarian-Czechoslovak border as was used in the Sudeten district.

In other words, he insisted contiguous territory in which more than 50 per cent of the population speaks Hungarian and is of Hungarian stock must be ceded to Hungary forthwith by Czechoslovakia.

With regard to sections with mixed population, a trade might be worked out.

Thus, some town having 40 per cent Hungarians but lying contiguous with predominantly Hungarian land might be considered Hungarian while Hungary, in turn, would desist from any claim to an obviously Hungarian city contiguous with Czechoslovak-people territory.

An Editorial - - -

"Student Editor Silenced"—Des Moines Tribune headline for October 15.

With that headline the Des Moines Register and Tribune, great friends, enthusiastic boosters, consistent supporters of the State University of Iowa, step out to take the lead in their self-styled advocacy of freedom of the press and freedom of thought.

Many people were, no doubt, surprised to read that headline in last night's Tribune. But no one could have been more surprised than the editor of The Daily Iowan.

We want to present the record. The Daily Iowan is America's finest university daily. Throughout most of the long history of the State University of Iowa, The Daily Iowan, through its unique position as an independent, self-sustaining, independently-controlled newspaper, has been in the vanguard in protecting the interest of the students of the university and advancing the principles of freedom and clear thinking which the Cowles enterprises of Des Moines so glibly talk about—and so easily forget.

In 1936, it is our recollection, The Des Moines Register carried a full-page screamer to the effect that squad disunion had split the Iowa football team. The banner "People Pay To See Me Play—Ozzie Simmons" still remains firm in the memories of Iowa sports fans. This was proved a misstatement. The next morning, giving no credence to the sensationalism of irresponsible journalism, The Daily Iowan carried the FACTS—"a serious misunderstanding had been quietly and effectively settled."

Without resort to half-truths, The Daily Iowan succeeded, almost single-handedly, in establishing the "Silver Shadow," university-sponsored night spot for State University of Iowa students. This achievement alone gained for The Daily Iowan the approval of the press of the entire nation. Last month The Mason City Globe-Gazette reprinted in its entirety a Daily Iowan editorial on the question of a war referendum. Said Editor Hall, "This is the best and most thoughtful commentary on the subject we have yet seen."

This is all part of the record. Part of the record, too, should be that now famous morning, only a little more than a year ago, when the Des Moines Register gave one of its largest headlines to a story quoting an ex-official of Johnson county with a slur on the sorority system of the State University of Iowa, a slur so utterly fantastic only the "newspaper Iowa depends upon" could believe it.

Yesterday, "the newspaper Iowa depends upon" headlined the fact that the State University of Iowa would effectively silence the editorial campaign of The Daily Iowan. A campus check-up last night revealed that not a single university official knew about or had anything to do with this statement. The story was clearly, obviously and incontrovertibly a fabrication.

Article I of the Bill of Rights states that, "Congress shall make no law ABRIDGING THE FREEDOM OF SPEECH OR OF THE PRESS . . ."

The State University of Iowa, a leader in academic freedom and individual responsibility, certainly considers this section of America's basic law its personal responsibility. The Daily Iowan consistently, in its position as America's finest university daily, has considered the truth as its only guide.

In closing, then, we turn to the cry we have heard again and again from every corner of the state. What have the Des Moines Register and Tribune against the University of Iowa?

We don't know the answer. We hope the Des Moines Register and Tribune do.

Iowa Health Officials Want to Remove Legitimacy Clause in Birth Certificate

DES MOINES, Oct. 15 (AP)—Iowa health department officials today said they favored a "square deal" for the illegitimate child by removing the legitimacy reference from the state birth certificate.

Dr. Walter Biering, state health commissioner, and R. W. Taiman, vital statistics director, said an act of the legislature may be necessary to delete that section of the certificate.

"No child is illegitimate," Taiman declared. "The act that created such a child is illegitimate. The youngster is given a raw deal under the present set-up."

Item No. 7 on the department of health's birth certificate is the following brief question: "Legitimate?"

The majority of workers employed in public health service generally feel that no reference to a person's legitimacy should be made in the permanent birth record, Taiman said. Laws of several states already have removed that reference, he added, and in Massachusetts the doctor who includes legitimacy status on the certificate is subject to $1,000 fine.

Approximately 42,000 children are born in Iowa each year. Vital statistics records list around 750 of them as illegitimate.

whole defense system may be copied quickly below the Rio Grande. The retreat of democratic protectors before Germany's threats against Czechoslovakia, and the economic inroads already made in South America by Germany, Japan and Italy, are reported to have

Military Circles Say War Department Considering Asking Congress to O. K. Additional Planes for Army Air Corps

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15 (AP)—Military circles heard tonight that the war department was considering asking congress to authorize a future strength of 4,000 or more planes for the army air corps—nearly double the present goal of 2,320 first line warcraft. This development came shortly after President Roosevelt had announced that the country's defense needs were being surveyed in the light of world conditions. Mr. Roosevelt said that the re-study, under way for a year, had been forced to a head by events of recent weeks. A tentative figure mentioned as the objective under consideration by the war department was 4,120 aircraft. This would combine the army's former goal of 1,800 planes and the present one of 2,320, set in 1935 by the board headed by former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker. With about 1,500 first line planes in service now and upwards of 1,000 on order, the army expects to realize the Baker objective by mid-1940. Officials stressed that congressional authorizations represent future goals and provide no funds to attain them. Actual appropriations are acted upon separately.

Roosevelt Attends Play; 2nd Time in 5 Years

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15 (AP)—A gay musical comedy which makes fun of the government in early New York drew President Roosevelt to the National theater tonight.

He had attended only one other play in more than five years. The comedy, "Knickerbocker Holiday," was written by Maxwell Anderson and Kurt Weill.

Compared by some reviewers with the Gilbert and Sullivan operettas, it tells a story of government in New Amsterdam.

Peter Stuyvesant, played by Walter Huston, is the governor of the early 17th century city. The peg-legged Peter assumes the role of a dictator, agreeing with his council that the purpose of government is to "Keep the people down."

Finally, however, the governor abandons a plan to enforce obedience by gunfire, deciding that he will be regarded more kindly by posterity if he adopts a conciliatory attitude toward the people.

Members of the council, which Peter describes as "stupid," include a "Roosevelt" and a "Vanderbilt."

The only other play Mr. Roosevelt had seen since he came to the White House was a performance of "Dodsworth," the Sinclair Lewis drama in which Huston also starred.

The president worked through this afternoon to clear his desk in preparation for his departure at noon tomorrow for the summer White House at Hyde Park, N. Y. He talked by telephone with Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York, and is expected to see Lehman at Hyde Park on Tuesday. The president will make a radio address from his Hyde Park home Nov. 4 in support of the New York state democratic ticket.

Jerry Niles Sparks Scoring Drives as Hawkeyes Display Powerful Running Attack To Rout Chicago

By J. DENNIS SULLIVAN
Daily Iowan Sports Editor

CHICAGO, Oct. 15 (Special to Daily Iowan)—A scrappy, short mated Chicago team went down before Iowa's power here in Stagg field this afternoon by a score of 27-14.

Iowa scored in every period in piling up the greatest number of points a Hawkeye grid squad has compiled since the opener of the '35 season when Bradley was defeated, 42-2. It was also Iowa's first conference victory since the '35 season.

While winning, the Hawkeyes displayed a woefully weak pass defense, Chicago completing 13 aerial heaves out of 32 attempts good for 190 yards.

Only in spurts did the Hawkeyes flash anything comparable to Big Ten class. At the outset of the game, the Iowans looked as if they were out to slaughter the Maroons, scoring a touchdown after 4:15 of play, McLain carrying the ball over after a drive down the field.

The Hawkeyes opened their second touchdown drive late in the initial quarter. They were down on the Chicago 21 as they were the first period ended and they continued to march to the goal as the second stanza started. Ray Murphy, sophomore back, climaxed the drive with a 13 yard run for a touchdown.

Iowa cut loose and made its third touchdown within three minutes of play in the third quarter. Intercepting a Maroon pass, Russell Busk twisted and squirmed his way to the Chicago 25. The Hawks on plunges then smashed their way to the two yard line, from where Niles bucked over.

The Hawkeyes increased their lead to 27-7 after about 10 minutes of the fourth period. With Niles slashing the Maroon line until it became crimson, Murphy once again furnished the scoring, this time with an 11 yard cut-back.

Niles was by far the outstanding player of the afternoon, carrying the ball 31 times for a total gain of 143.

Henry Wallace Will Speak in Des Moines, Council Bluffs Tomorrow; Waterloo, Tuesday

DES MOINES, Oct. 15 (AP)—Henry Wallace's third political trek into Iowa this week end emphasizes the "Wallace issue" in the state's general election campaign.

Observers agree that the national secretary of agriculture has much at stake in the outcome of the Nov. 8 battle, more possibly than the opposing candidates themselves.

For one thing, a senatorial victory for L. J. Dickinson, republican nominee and mortal foe of the new deal, in the secretary's home state would add no stars to Wallace's crown in the Washington orbit. And a Dickinson triumph likewise would be no boost to the plans of the secretary's followers to promote him for the democratic presidential nomination in 1940.

Wallace will see what he can do about preventing any such result by delivering three speeches in behalf of Senator Guy M. Gillette and the rest of the Iowa democratic ticket. He will speak over a radio network here Monday, at a Council Bluffs meeting Monday night, and at Waterloo Tuesday.

The secretary delivered the principal address of the Iowa democratic Jackson Day dinner and was the party's state convention keynote speaker last summer.

Dickinson, when he is not discussing Senator Gillette's supreme court record, is directing much of his campaign fire at Wallace.

For Human Needs

THOUGH the community chest plan has been in operation now for more than 25 years, though today United States boasts a hundred more "chest cities" than days in that year, there is a prevalent ignorance on the part of potential benefactors concerning the object of the community chest drive.

The general opinion is that giving to the community chest is equivalent to sprinkling a lawn during a downpour, a "no-point" donation. However, contrary to general notions, the community chest plan is the putting of charities on a planned, charitable basis.

Primary aim is that of consolidating the budgets of various local welfare organizations already in operation, — the monetary allotment to specific charitable groups from the Community chest being determined by the necessity of that particular type of charitable work in the community.

Special attention is given to underprivileged children by the plan. Leaders of this movement realize that wholesome childhood environment is conducive to a cynicless outlook in coming years — happy, unsophisticated children lighten the very atmosphere around them.

Must We?

History Is The Record

History is full of invasions, full of wars and of aggressions and there have always been pacts, always military guarantees, and always military security.

History is again repeating itself. Today we are madly preparing for war, and we are sure to get that for which we are preparing unless we can stop before it is too late.

At the present moment the world is engaged in the most insane armament race in the history of the world. The United States, not to be outdone, is letting Europe lead her toward destruction.

with an eye to possibly joining in Europe's mess.

There can be no hope for the future peace of the world while a nation as isolated as is the United States has to keep armed to the teeth.

Some nation must find the courage and foresight to take the lead in disarmament and soon, or one day a match will be lit to the powder keg on which the world is so precariously sitting.

Turning The Tables On Der Fuehrer

We have admired the Danes in the past for their almost unique ability to remain neutral and progressive in the midst of a strife-ridden world. We have looked upon them as a nation whose ability to place pacifism in the fore has been a model for the great powers to envy.

Now comes a story from Berlin of unforeseen courage and diplomacy that again wins laurels for that race. The Danish minority in Schleswig - Holstein, according to a news dispatch, has made capital of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's own words on the treatment of minorities by addressing to him an open letter in an effort to improve the status of Danes living in northern Germany.

Charging that members of the minority were cut off from social benefits, and quoting from Hitler's pronouncements on self-determination, the letter said, "We know that you, acclaimed by our people as creator of the new Reich, love your people above everything else and that we especially are certain to find our sympathy for the fact that we also (quoting Hitler) 'cling to our own racial nationality in unbounded love and faithfulness.'"

We will watch with interest the reaction of the fuehrer to this well-timed diplomatic move by a daring race.

A California poet sued his wife for separation, charging desertion. Even the Muse, it seems, must eat.

THE STRACHEY AFFAIR

Evening John St. Loe Strachey of Eton and Oxford is a suave and amiable writer who used to call himself a Communist and now seems to prefer the name of Socialist. His books are freely circulated here and widely read, but the State Department appears to believe that his physical entrance to lecture for eight weeks at a number of universities and before women's clubs and the like, would be a menace to American institutions.

Several mysteries have presented themselves. If Mr. Strachey was granted a visa in the first place, why did the State Department wait until Mr. Strachey was halfway across the ocean before canceling this visa? The answer now given by the State Department is that Mr. Strachey appeared before the American Consul-General in London on Sept. 7 and obtained a temporary visitor's visa after having certified, among other things, that he was not a member of the Communist party.

It is true that some of Mr. Strachey's replies to theoretical questions, when deportation proceedings were brought against him here in 1935, were perhaps a little disingenuous. This applies, for example, to his distinction between advocating revolution and merely predicting it. But he has repeatedly denied either that he is a member of the Communist party anywhere or that he believes in the overthrow of the United States Government by force or violence.

To the extent that the law allows any discretion or the facts any room for doubt, the State Department should certainly give Mr. Strachey the benefit of it.

The great fuss about his exclusion gives him and his views a publicity far in excess of what they would otherwise have received. And the whole affair will puzzle thousands of Americans and foreigners regarding the inconsistencies of our official attitude. We exclude a parlor radical like Strachey, while we keep a working radical who really means business, like the Australian-born Harry Bridges. The Labor Department has suspended any action in the Bridges case until the Supreme Court has passed on the question of whether membership in the Communist party is itself a sufficient ground for deportation.

Mr. Strachey ought to have the advantage of at least as great legal scruples as are effective in the case of Mr. Bridges. —New York Times

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Ever since reading George Jean Nathan's "The Morning After the First Night" I've been attending plays and scrutinizing the reviews next day with more than usual care. In these after thoughts on the theater Mr. Nathan is inclined to chide his fellow critics for a lack of honesty in reporting certain aspects of the Broadway premieres.

For instance, he points out, a certain star on opening night arrived before the footlights so tanked on gin that he was unable to remember his lines. Next day the reviewers excused these mental lapses with the convenient explanation that the actor had only recently recovered from a long illness and no doubt he would soon settle down and become his usual reliable self.

Nathan went on to say that the actor hadn't been ill at all, and he wonders why a simple statement of fact wouldn't be better than long and involved lies.

On another occasion an actress of more than usual merit also opened in a play and she was so highly alcoholized that she was in distress most of the evening. This likewise was brushed aside being due to nervous reaction, or something. Any number of similar incidents are recalled by Nathan, who feels that any actor or actress who comes up to an opening night senselessly intoxicated isn't entitled to protection from the newspaper reviewers.

Mr. Nathan is on record also as believing the New York critics, of which he is one, are a gullible lot, and parades a stream of incidents as evidence of this fact. He recalls the time where smart press agents began spreading the happy tidings that a certain Chinese playwright, one S. I. Hsiung, was no less a person than the "Shakespeare of the Chinese theater." At that time "Lady Precious Stream" by this author was to be produced, and the critics wrote prose sonnets to the genius of this great Oriental Bard. As a matter of great record, Nathan declares, Mr. Hsiung was merely a nice, gentle soul devoted to the theater, but so little a part of it that he was scarcely known in his native land.

Perhaps the most classic example of this gullibility, as Nathan expresses it, came when the Theatre Guild produced one of Mr. Eugene O'Neill's dramas. The press-agents primed the critics with suggestion that they observe how firm a grasp Mr. O'Neill had on his subject, how surely he approached his objective, how sharply defined his plot and characters were.

After the premiere certain reviewers noted the new maturity in Mr. O'Neill's craftsmanship, and lauded it accordingly. Later it was learned that, in writing this play, Mr. O'Neill had moved steadily downhill, that is, he had written away from his climax and to correct this fallacy, the Guild had taken it upon itself to reverse order of the acts and produce the play backward.

Well, "White Banners" turned the trick. She's ever so grateful to it, and right now she's grateful to have escaped from it. She was afraid she'd have to keep on playing martyred, noble women indefinitely. HOLLYWOOD—Fay Bainter sits in the sun. She's wearing knockabout clothes. Pink sweater, nondescript skirt. Her brown hair, graying, is mussed because she frequently pushes it back with a careless, practical hand. She isn't wearing rouge, or lipstick, or make-up of any kind. She isn't being glamorous like a movie star, in any fashion. She's being Fay Bainter at home, on a day off.

She sits in the sun, on the divan in the beach house living room, and the ocean is behind her, its booming muffled by the closed door. The light is the most unflattering possible, but she can stand it. She isn't beautiful. She isn't even pretty. I take that back. Fay Bainter is beautiful.

Not in looks. It's in a combination of things. Naturalness, first. Sincerity. Humor. Intelligence. Character. Oh, well—charm.

She has a 15-year-old boy, Reg Jr., just gone back to school in the east after a big California summer. (Reg Jr. couldn't get over some of the movie star neighbors, like Cary Grant, having swimming pools when the whole big ocean was so handy.)

The thing you can't help noticing about Miss Bainter, very soon, is that she's more Reg Jr.'s mother and Reg (Sr.) Venable's wife than she is a movie star. Reg Sr., who's out in the sandy backyard talking things over with an old Annapolis classmate, was a navy commander, now resigned.

Pictures? Oh, yes, pictures, of course. "White Banners" turned the trick. She's ever so grateful to it, and right now she's grateful to have escaped from it. She was afraid she'd have to keep on playing martyred, noble women indefinitely. TUNING IN

By Loren Hickerson

A WEIGHING IN contest between his program's two biggest players, Don Wilson and Andy Devine, will be conducted by Jack Benny in his broadcast with Mary Livingstone, Kenny Baker and the Phil Harris orchestra over the NBC-Red network at 6 o'clock tonight.

Don, the lusty Benny salesman, has been trying to keep his specific gravity down by a strict diet of marshmallows and bubble gum, and claims that he will enter the contest three chins lighter than his gravel-voiced competitor.

Personally, I'll take Kenny Baker, who'll sing "I Used to Be Color Blind" from "Carefree" and Phil Harris, whose band will play "For No Reason in Rhyme" and a new arrangement of "Don't Cross Your Fingers."

SILVER THEATER With Conrad Nagel and Cary Grant, will present a radio version of "Wings in the Dark" during the broadcast at 6 o'clock tonight over the Columbia network.

When Cary Grant (whose acting in "The Awful Truth" was one of the truly fine comic highspots of the last five years, methinks) appeared in a Silver Theater dramatic production last season, his fiancée, actress Phyllis Brooks, stood in the wings of the CBS radio playhouse and watched him enact a love scene with enchanting Constance Bennett.

But tonight, that lady has made certain that she won't be in the same predicament a third time. When Cary Grant appears on tonight's Silver Theater, Phyllis herself will be Cary's leading lady.

"Wings in the Dark" is the story of a blind aviator whose affliction proved to be the key to his greatest triumph, after a girl who had faith in him showed him the way. Grant played the leading role in Paramount's film version of the story several years ago. Remember?

A THUMB NAIL SKETCH shows Grant to be 29 years old . . . wanted to be an inventor as a boy. . . Grandfather Percival Wife. Originally she was in it, you know—in the script of Zoe Akins, who wrote a part with her in mind. If you try to guess which part, you'll never. It was the role of "Pick," the black faithful of Luise Rainer.

Fay Bainter wanted to play it, for all it was worth, in blackface. Studio wouldn't let her, but that's the only reason she didn't. I say she won't be typed.

Other vocalizing will be offered by the mystery singer, Cantor's stellar attraction and newest discovery.

DON'T MISS . . . Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy at 7 tonight; Manhattan Merry-go-round at 8; Horace Heidt and the People's Platform with Lyman Bryson at 9, and so far for the night.

THE FILES SHOW . . . that Jose Iturbi has been signed to direct 10 of the CBS Sunday evening hours starting Oct. 9—that's one for tonight.

. . . that a television transmitter, as powerful as any now in operation, is being installed by CBS on the 72nd and 73rd floors of the Chrysler building.

. . . that Andre Kostelanetz has been selected as music supervisor for the largest of the many spectacular entertainments planned for the New York World's fair.

. . . that Paul Whitman has introduced Peter de Rose's sequel to "Deep Purple"—"Royal Blue." If the former number is any index, "Royal Blue" should be top.

. . . that Sally Rand's recent guest appearance on the "Fog-Men Only" program attracted hundreds of candid camera fans, anxious to snap the fan dancers in street clothes, sans feathers.

EVEN THE STENOGRAPHS HAVE A SAINT PARIS (AP)—Even French stenographers have their own patron saint—St. Genes.

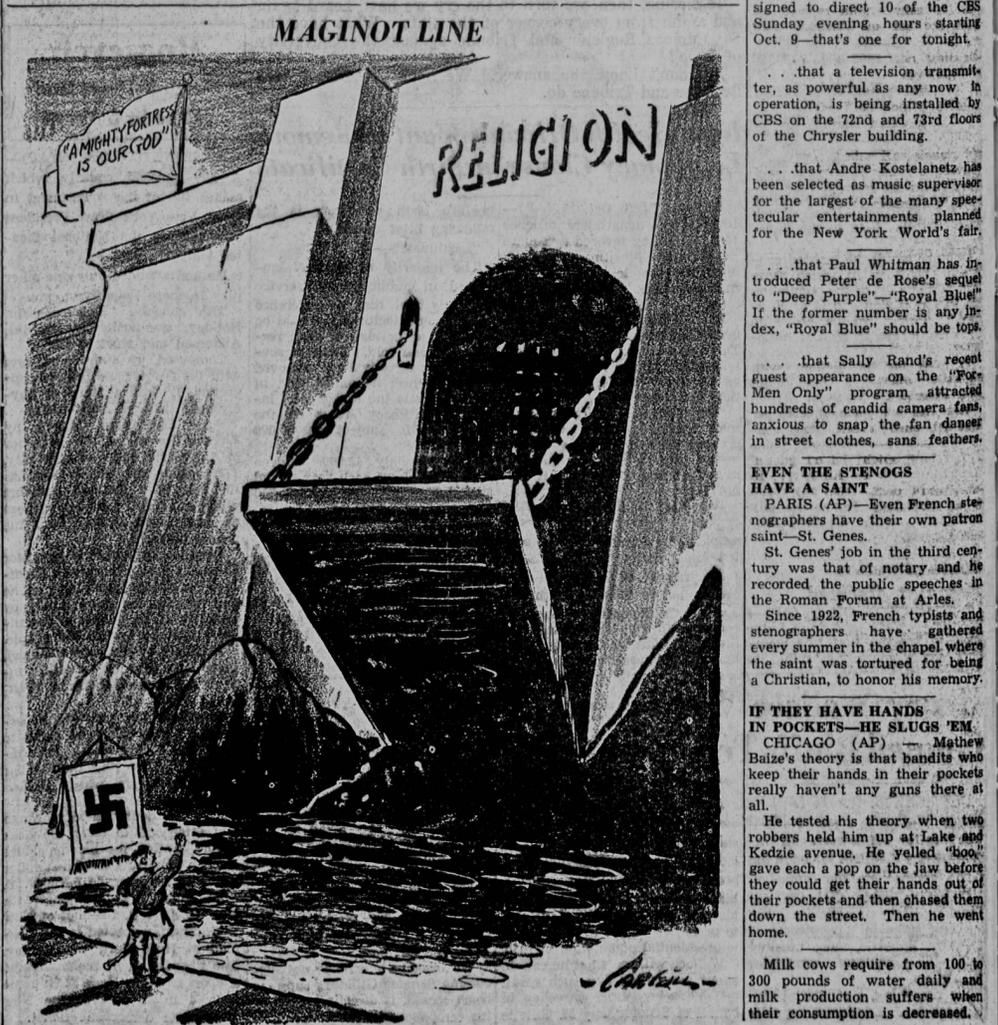

St. Genes' job in the third century was that of notary and he recorded the public speeches in the Roman Forum at Arles.

Since 1922, French typists and stenographers have gathered every summer in the chapel where the saint was tortured for being a Christian, to honor his memory.

IF THEY HAVE HANDS IN POCKETS—HE SLUGS 'EM. CHICAGO (AP)—Mathew Balze's theory is that bandits who keep their hands in their pockets really haven't any guns there at all.

He tested his theory when two robbers held him up at Lake and Kedzie avenues. He yelled "loo," gave each a pop on the jaw before they could get their hands out of their pockets and then chased them down the street. Then he went home.

Van Every's Passes Lead To Touchdown

Michigan Outplays Arch Rivals But Fresh Adds Point

By JAY VESSELS
MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 15 (AP)—Minnesota's mighty men of the gridiron, third powerhouse dynamite by a scrappy Michigan wrecking crew, unveiled a puzzling passing attack to come from behind with six minutes to play and win 7 to 6, today.

Fifty-five thousand homecoming fans saw the Big Ten champions retain the historic Little Brown Jug in a game that found Coach Fritz Crisler's huskies gain the edge in everything but the final score.

It was just a case of the Golden Gophers doing what the Michigan teams of old did in finishing second in the statistics but paying off on the point needed to grab victory.

In that last quarter with Michigan holding a 6 to 0 edge after a great 90 yard march up the field, Coach Bernie Bierman's squad called on the injured Harold Van Every, triple-threat halfback, to search for success through the air.

Van Every, out of action since the opener against Washington, shot a perfect strike from his own 48 yard line to Bill Johnson, sub right end, who caught the ball on the Michigan 18 and plunged to the 14 with three Michigan players taking a ride.

Two plunges took the ball to the ten. Then Van Every stepped back and pitched another strike to halfback Wilbur Moore. He grabbed it on the Michigan three and with a trio of Wolverines hanging on hit the goal at the extreme corner of the field. Quarterback George Faust place kicked the extra point, something that Dan Smiek, Michigan end, had failed to do in the first few minutes of the last quarter.

Moore, smothered in a cluster of maize and blue behind the Michigan goal line on the winning touchdown, was hurt and was carried from the field with a badly hurt leg.

The last minute Minnesota victory certainly broke the hearts of Michigan's cagey outfit. They outgained the Gophers from scrimmage almost two to one, completed seven out of 16 passes, flashed a terrific ground gaining attack behind a hard-hitting line and became the first to smash the Minnesota powerhouse into smithereens.

Without those two telling last period passes, the Big Ten champions got mighty little success in any offensive that had wrecked Washington, Nebraska and Purdue.

The only time Minnesota power threatened came after a poor Michigan punt in the second quarter. Moore, Buhler and Franck blasted to the 19 where the Wolverines held and Horace Bell missed a place kick.

Colgate Stops Luckman, Beats Columbia, 12-0

NEW YORK, Oct. 15 (AP)—Colgate's Red Raiders threw up an air-tight defense against Sid Luckman's passes when it was necessary today and in so doing handed the Columbia Lions their first setback of the season, 12 to 0, before 30,000 fans at Baker field.

Not only was Luckman throttled in the pinches, but one of his aerials was intercepted and run back by Howard Herman 50 yards for Colgate's second touchdown in the final period. Out of the 16 passes attempted by Luckman only five were completed for a total gain of 48 yards.

While Andy Kerr's eleven drove 52 yards for its initial touchdown in the second quarter, it was Colgate's superb defense that caught the eye. Columbia carved out 13 first downs, the same as Colgate, but never got nearer than 17 yards of the winners' goal line.

Colgate ripped down the field 50 yards to Columbia's 10-yard line the first time they got hold of the ball, and in the second period they made successive drives of 40 and 52 yards, Hoague plunging across from the one-yard line to climax the second. Davis' two attempts to dropkick the extra point were blocked.

Littleford took a forward from Hamity and raced to the Iowa 40. Hamity made a marvelous toss to Davenport who caught the ball on the five yard line and raced over the goal for a Chicago touchdown. Littleford drop kicked for the extra point.

It's O. K. Mack. As Danielle Darrieux would say— "... We can't do it."

It looks like a kicking and passing duel next week when Colgate comes here... Kerr-coached teams usually make up for their deficiency in power with dangerous passing plays... and the Red Raiders of the Chenango have a passer that is as good if not better than Columbia's Sid Luckman. He's Hal Lube.

Lube, along with Luckman and Syracuse's Marty Glickman were all-city in New York a few years back. Many were the Saturday afternoons when this trio would be out tossing strikes on the gridiron.

'Tis said that Colgate is not publicizing any star this year. Well, I'd like to know more about this boy Joe Hoague then. He's been getting quite a build-up this past week as the guy who out-kicked Duke's Eric Tipton — generally conceded to be the best punter in the South.

The way the Colgate aggregation stopped Sid Luckman cold bears no little attention. Next week they come here, and with the Hawks aerial attack nothing to brag about and the pass defense worse, the Red Raiders may pass Iowa to the ground.

It'll be a pretty sight — the Hawks on the ground.

Well, I certainly flubbed my dub on those predictions. Minnesota barely beat out the Wolverines... Lafayette won— much to my amazement.

Colgate stopped Luckman, another wrong guess... Princeton beat Penn (I can't get one right)... The Tide lost... and Syracuse beat Cornell.

Well, at least I can thank Pitt—they came through

That was a nice game at Columbia, Mo. — and Ames looks like it may end up at the top of the Big Six heap. If Everett Kischer keeps playing the way he does he'll be a sure all-American.

By HAROLD CLAASSEN
COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 15 (AP)—Everett Kischer, Iowa State's flatfoot floggie of the gridirons, was the floy in the ointment for Missouri here today as the Cyclones defeated the Tigers, 16 to 13, in a Big Six football game.

Eight thousand shirt-sleeved football "jitterbugs" watched as the 155-pound Iowan led his teammates to a victory which kept them at the top of the conference standings.

Kischer spun through the line like a whirling dervish and passed when the occasion demanded. He played 59 minutes of the contest and at the end was still directing his mates in a successful effort to protect their narrow margin.

Sharing the spotlight was Paul Christman, the nonchalant Missouri sophomore, who did the Tigers' passing. Missouri's aerial attack connected in 14 out of 28 attempts for a total of 218 yards—110 yards more than the Iowans were able to accomplish during the entire game by all methods.

Mixed among the Missouri plays was a quadruple lateral in the third quarter.

Christman casually stepped back and fired the ball to Jim Starmer. Starmer took a step, whirled and tossed to Bob Orf who handed the ball to his twin brother, Roland Orf, surrounded by a horde of red-shirted Iowans, lateraled to Notowitz. The entire play netted 26 yards but the Iowans took the ball on downs two plays later.

Iowa State's contribution to the aerial circus was a triple lateral, good for a touchdown.

Kischer spotted Chuck Helleman in the open on the Missouri 11. The towering end snared the ball and heaved to Co-Captain Ed Bock, a guard. Bock whipped it to Henry Wilder who used his 193 pounds to worm through a fast-gathering army of white-shirted Missourians.

The touchdown and conversion placed the Cyclones in the lead which they never relinquished.

Not content, however, they added two more points in the same period when Bob Bock, guard and co-captain, hurled the Missouri line to block Porter Robb's punt with his chest. The ball landed behind the goal posts for an automatic safety and two points.

A break helped the Iowans to their third and winning touchdown. Kischer punted from deep in his own territory to the Missouri 26 where the ball bounced crazily and struck the ill-fated Robb on the shoulder.

Martin Boswell, an end, fell on it. On the next play Wilder went far around his own left end for the remaining distance to the goal line. Kischer converted both the Cyclone tallies.

Without those two telling last period passes, the Big Ten champions got mighty little success in any offensive that had wrecked Washington, Nebraska and Purdue.

The only time Minnesota power threatened came after a poor Michigan punt in the second quarter. Moore, Buhler and Franck blasted to the 19 where the Wolverines held and Horace Bell missed a place kick.

Encourage Visual Instruction University Extension Division Distributes Lantern Slides, Motion Pictures

The University of Iowa, through the extension division, has for a number of years maintained a department of visual instruction. This department is provided to make the best possible collection of visual materials available to schools and other organizations.

The use of lantern slides and motion pictures to supplement and vitalize classroom instruction has become more and more common. In many fields of instruction, the visual appeal has been proved the most effective approach to learning.

Lessons may be enriched by means of pictures, charts, models, field trips, maps, stereographs, slides and moving pictures. All of the educational films available at the department, have been made by authorities in their respective fields.

Four new films were added to the list of films this year for use in geography. "Down the Colorado by Boat" shows scenes of a thousand mile trip down the Colorado river from the upper canyons of the Yintah mountains in Utah to the Black canyon where the Boulder dam now blocks the river.

"Hunting Mountain Lion" shows wild life on the great Kaibab plateau in northern Arizona, which is one of the few remaining primitive areas in this country.

"Bryce Canyon National Monument" presents the scenic wonders of nature in the impressive gorges emptying into the Colorado river. The other film in this group is "Silk" and contains views of raw silk culture in Japan.

In the health group, one new film is available: "The Road to Health and Happiness," depicting mental habits, health habits, cleanliness, safety, mental and medical examinations and other problems in public health.

In science, a film called "Weather Forecasting" can be obtained wherein tabulations and interpretations of weather data procured from observations and instruments are shown.

Two films, "Governor's day and Federal inspection" and "A Summer Session at Iowa University" in technicolor have been made about the campus here.

In the educational sound film group there are also a number of new pictures. "How Living Things Find a Home on Earth" is offered for use in biological science.

In human biology, "The Allimentary Tract" and "Reproduction Among Mammals" are available.

"The Plot that Broke the Plains," tracing the story of the plains country during the last 50 years and surveying the various movements in the Great Plains area—the passing of the buffalo, the successive invasions of range cattle, the homesteader and the large - scale wheat farm—

Dr. Stearns To Talk on Mauna Loa Eruption

Scientist on U. S. Geological Survey To Speak Tomorrow

The recent eruption of Mauna Loa volcano in Hawaii will be the subject of Dr. Harold T. Stearns, senior geologist of the United States Geological Survey in Honolulu, when he presents a graduate college lecture at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the chemistry auditorium.

The lecture will be illustrated by slides and two reels of pictures of Mauna Loa in action. Some of these pictures were taken from the air.

Dr. Stearns was the only scientist aboard the army plane which bombed the volcano in an attempt to stop the lava flow, and he took pictures of the stages of the eruption, showing a complete sequence of the eruption, starting with huge fountains at the source and covering all of the phases to the last rush of the highly fluid lava.

According to Dr. T. A. Jaggar, noted volcanologist, these films are the finest pictures ever taken of the Hawaiian volcanoes in action.

Dr. Stearns is primarily a ground water geologist and is in direct charge of ground water investigations for the Hawaiian Islands, together with his activity in the field of volcanology.

He is an experienced lecturer, having made a tour of the United States in 1935, when he talked on the Hawaiian volcanoes. He has spoken at Harvard, Yale, Cornell, Columbia and other eastern institutions.

This lecture is one in the series of graduate college addresses sponsored by the geology department. Faculty, graduate students, undergraduate majors, and the public are invited to attend.

Dr. Stearns will be asked when he arrives to speak informally to the Geology club either tomorrow or Tuesday at 4:10 p.m.

1st Religious Sound Picture Will Be Shown at Church

"The Thunder of the Sea," the first full-length sound picture to be produced by any religious body, will be shown following a pot-luck supper at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday in the First Lutheran church, it is announced by the Rev. Ralph M. Krueger, pastor.

The occasion is the birthday observance of the 20th anniversary of the formation of the United Lutheran church in America.

Produced by the staff of the Board of American Missions, the picture is being presented as a 20th anniversary appeal for evangelism and church extension in the United States and Canada.

Filed in the "March of Time" fashion, it presents a full panorama of modern life. The role of the modern church is to serve as an adequate solution to the evil forces devastating the world.

This year a million people will see the film, and approximately 4,000 separate showings will be held.

Union Team Wins Trophy

Defeat Hillcrest Dining Service Crew By 19-0 Score, Start Rivalry

By OSCAR HARGRAVE
Daily Iowan Sports Writer

Inspired by the clamor of their bloodthirsty following, the four horsemen of Union cafeteria struck spurs to their steeds yesterday to ride a wild steeplechase over the hopes of a stubborn eleven that represented the Hillcrest dining service crew in a grid battle that ended 19-0.

The battle, however, was not so one-sided as the score might indicate. The Union backfield, Captain Bailey, Mel Sogge, Kenneth Bigelow and Joe Kehoe, although their way was paved by a powerful line, took many a fall before they finished their rides.

It was early in the first quarter when the Union boys made their first serious threat. Long runs by Bigelow and Sogge carried the ball to the shadow of the Hillcrest goal posts before a goal line stand gave Hillcrest the ball on downs.

From the two yard line they punted out of danger. The respite was short, however, for another offensive drive, in which Kehoe's 15 yard smash through the center of the line was a feature, brought Union back to the three yard marker before they lost the ball on a fumble. After that they were unable to make any headway for the rest of the period.

The second quarter was in its infancy when Union shoved over the first touchdown. Bigelow went over from the 8 after his teammates had staged a march from midfield. Union failed to convert and as neither team was able to threaten again, the score at half time stood 6-0.

Hillcrest fumbled on the initial kickoff of the second half to give the opportunity for another score. Union recovered on its own 35 and in three plays, the last a 17 yard pass from Sogge to Herman, Bigelow's final strike again. Bigelow's kick for the extra point was good.

Receiving the next kickoff, Hillcrest was forced to punt. Union immediately went back to work. They rushed the ball down to the opponents 20 yard line, and from there Sogge faded back to the 35 and rifled a pass to Wayne Peters who stepped into the end zone for a touchdown. The try for extra point failed.

After this, Hillcrest, on the short end of the 19-0 score, took the initiative. Midway in the last period, they staged their strongest bid. Three first downs in succession carried them deep into enemy territory, but a fumble cut short this last chance to counter, and left the Union team in possession of the traveling trophy for a year. This trophy will be the object of future rivalry between the two groups.

AFRAID TO MARRY

CHAPTER 42
 JUDY EXPLAINED, as the cab bumped along the road that paralleled the wharves and fish markets, just how the mysterious, slight man in the green fedora and plaid overcoat had reappeared at Coralie Myers' residence in New Jersey to buy letters of the alphabet.

He had given no name and address, she added. Mr. Myers could not check on the generous buyer of the printed letters.

Ronald glanced at the initials carefully.

"I've had no messages in writing," he said, "concerning anything. I'm afraid there's nothing to compare. But it might be that the police department has specimens related to these. Of course, there's a chance, since that pen expert of yours sells these things to the general market, that the police could have them from some other party. It needn't relate to our man in any way."

Judy continued the line of thought, leaning toward him in the dusky cab.

"Mr. Myers knows the purposes to which the other people put the letters. They want notes, or names for certificates, or mottoes. This man is his only mysterious customer. I asked him."

Ronald leaned forward, slipped down the glass, gave a curt direction to the driver.

"Central Police Headquarters!" Ronald was a favorite at police headquarters. It was instantly apparent to Judy that sympathy was with him in the attack made against him.

Another lawyer, a mean-mouthed, beady-eyed creature, was standing near the door of the office to which Ronald went. The lawyer looked at him and laughed with a crackling accent.

"Well, Birrell, maybe it won't be long until you'll be entering through another door!"

For a moment Judy thought the red-headed attorney was going to swing out with a strong fist and land the cocky little representative of his profession a neatly timed wallop. The gray eyes flashed, the lean jaw stiffened, but Ronald passed on.

The taunting laugh of the cruel attorney followed them down the hall.

Judy was having difficulty keeping up with Ronald. He seemed to have forgotten her. She glanced down ruefully at the high-heeled patent leather pumps she wore and decided she would wear low-heeled brogues tomorrow. You couldn't run after Ronald in silly spikes. You couldn't run after him in anything.

They entered the office of the official whom they wished to see—whom Ronald wished to see, Judy corrected her thoughts. She had no knowledge of the mechanism of the law, except that the men were heroes in the movies and generally got their man from the front page of the newspapers, too. Also, if you speeded up Westchester way, you got a police tag and paid a fine.

"Coming all right, Judy?" Ronald asked with one of his swift, flashing smiles as he held the door for her.

The next hour was a hodgepodge of curt commands, explanations, conferences. More detectives were summoned. Ronald's red hair stood up, crisp and glistening. Judy tossed her hat on a table, forgot that her tilted nose was shining, plunged into the melee, gloriing in it.

The head of the handwriting department took the disassembled alphabet. He sent for some information which presently arrived. There were consultations and examinations and eventually he returned to say:

"These letters are identical with those in two notes we have on hand in connection with a blackmail case. If this suspect of yours didn't send the notes, then another client of Myers' did. We are sending for the handwriting immediately."

"Blackmail?" Ronald repeated. His hands clenched the table until the knuckles turned white. Only Judy caught the recognition and acceptance of some unseen agent which was in Ronald's tones.

"Received any blackmail letters, Birrell?" an officer asked.

"Not one." Ronald had recovered quickly.

Judy was taken into another department and hundreds, thousands of pictures were placed before her. She was asked to identify the man she had seen. Face after face—young, old, firm, savage, weak, treacherous. They swam before her eyes, they grinned and leered and wept.

"No," she said.

"None of these," she began to judge them in groups.

Then a picture came from another group.

Judy nodded her head slowly.

"Yes, that's the man. I mean I think it is. Here he has a cap and black suit. And his head doesn't precede his body. If I could see him walk—"

The two officers exchanged knowing looks. Judy intercepted the glance.

"Who is he?" she asked.

"A guy who's been earning a pretty penny at blackmail. Been up three times and indicted once and served a sentence. He's out now and we've been working on the idea that he's the brains in a blackmail racket we're after now. Been wanting to hold him under suspicion."

"You know where to get him?" Judy asked.

"The boys will pick him up," the answer came.

There was nothing more for Ronald and Judy to do until the police gathered some information, so they came from the police station into the cold winter air.

Spring had receded, winter was definitely reinstated. Snow blew in eddies around the corners.

Judy did not want Ronald to send her home. She wanted to stay with him. They could go to a movie together and sit some place where they needn't watch the picture very much. Or they could get something to eat. Maybe he would explain why the word "blackmail" had startled him.

Besides she must present her gift or loan.

When Ronald said: "Judy, I must go to the office and clean out my desk. Want to come?" She was so glad she could only nod mutely. Ronald went into a restaurant in the law building and came out with his arms filled with bundles.

"Food," he said. "Mind eating in my office?"

She cleared the wide sweep of polished oak, spread the paper tablecloth that came with the containers of food, placed the silver and plates. There were two cartons of hot chicken soup; lamb chops with their legs neatly wrapped in white frills and their browned surfaces decked with parsley; potato salad and cheese and pickles; two big pieces of huckleberry pie and two cartons of coffee.

It was the kind of a meal that a man would assemble, Judy mused, but a tender mist clouded her eyes. Ronald walked to the window and stood, hands in his pockets, looking down into the snowy recesses of the cleared street.

When the food was ready, Judy went to stand by him. All around them was a blanket of silence, silence so vast that it reached up and up to the few stars shining in the open space where the buildings did not hide the sky. Ah, there was the moon, too.

What was it scientists said, Judy pondered. Then she remembered and told Ronald.

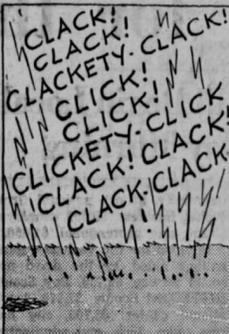

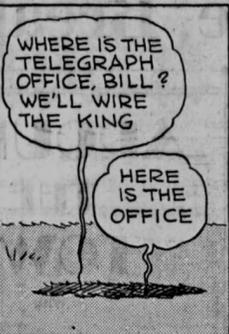

"Did you know that people must go 20 miles away from the electrical illuminations at Times Square to get the full effect of moonlight and starlight? The Neon signs and the glittering bulbs dim them."

Ronald took her hand in his, quietly this time, and he, too, looked up to the stars.

"Farther away than that, Judy," he said. "Much farther."

The regular meeting of the organization will be held tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in the courthouse and delegates to the district convention at Fairfield will be elected.
Greenwood is a national speaker of the Townsend clubs and comes here recommended by T. E. Stevens, state director, who was favorably impressed by Greenwood's speech in Des Moines two months ago.

An Idea 30 Years Old

Library, Women's Rest Rooms, Among Services Available

(This is the last in a series of articles explaining aims and purposes of the five service and character building organizations participating in the 1938 community chest campaign. This year's quota is $18,915.)
The idea for the city hall rest room, now sponsored by the community chest, originated with the Kings Daughters about 30 years ago for the purpose of providing a reading room - rest room where any women could come.
A loan library is maintained in the large reception room which is provided with a couch, reclining chairs and tables where women can read the books and magazines provided. Toilets are in a small adjoining room.
Last month 1,864 women availed themselves of these services, women coming not only from Iowa City but also from many states and neighboring towns. For the year preceding October, 1938, 22,193 women visited the rest room, callers coming from 13 states and 48 cities in Iowa.
Some of the services of the rest room follow:
Sometimes babies are left there while their mothers are shopping.
Rural children wait there until their drivers come to take them home from school.
Busy housewives rest there a while before continuing home after a busy day of shopping.
Housemaids on their afternoon off meet their friends here.
Many a winter finds people there thawing out frozen noses and fingers, preparatory to first aid administration.
Esther E. Larsen, appointed by the community chest director, begins her fourth year as rest room matron this month. The city donates the room and pays utility bills, while the community chest pays for furniture needed from time to time and the matron's salary.
