Muscular Control for Artificial Limbs

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE AP Science Editor NEW YORK, Oct. 21 — A new surgical method of giving muscular movement to artificial arms, hands and fingers was announced to the American College of Surgeons today. The surgical knife creates links of living tissue which hook the muscles of a "stump" to the cords that manipulate the artificial part. These "hooks" are hollow tubes made from the living tissues re-maintaining at the site of amputation. But they are unlike any tube nature ever made. They are inside out, that is, their inside is lined with skin while their exteriors are tissues which normally lie under the skin. These tubes are thrust like pins through and across the ends of a muscle of the "stump" of arm. Their exterior tissues take root, so that the tube unites with the muscle surrounding it. The cord which manipulates the fingers is passed through the interior of the tube, where the skin lining protects against chafing. Dr. Kessler described 78 cases of this operation and said that 44 of these otherwise one-armed persons are now employed in remunerative work such as clerk, lithographer, painter, truck driver, inspector of transmission lines, watchman, track walker, bookkeeper, leather embosser, machinist, elevator operator, fur sorter, laborer, needle board repairman, commercial letters and stereotype operator. In their work all use the "prosthetic" hand.

Close Plants To Discredit Wage Hour Power

Administrators Accuse Small Group Of Violating Laws

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21 (AP)—The wage and hour administration, accusing a "small minority" of employers of shutting down their plants in an effort to discredit the new wage-hour law and intimidate its administrators, served notice today that the statute would be enforced uniformly and compellingly. Administrator Elmer F. Andrews pointed out in a formal statement to the press that the law provided heavy penalties for violations, and he said his office had no choice but to carry out the will of congress.

Declaring the willingness of the vast majority of employers to cooperate had re-enforced his determination to enforce the statute uniformly, Andrews denounced those few who, he said, were claiming preposterous exemptions or shutting down their plants to avoid compliance. The new law, providing in general for a minimum wage of 25 cents an hour and a maximum work week of 44 hours in interstate commerce, goes into effect Monday.

Some shutdowns which employers have attributed to the statute have actually resulted from the completion of seasonal operations, the administrator said, and in some instances plants have been run at capacity for weeks to build up inventories "preparatory to a shutdown which would be blamed on the fair labor standards act." These suspensions of operations seem to have been timed in an effort to bring the law into disrepute," Andrews continued, "evidently with the hope of intimidating the wage and hour division in its administration of the law's provisions."

Accused Spies in Court

Unrevealing are the faces of the Johann Hofmann, Erich Glaser and Otto H. Voss, shown at Federal Court, New York City, where they are on trial charged with selling military secrets to the German government. Testimony of Gustave Rumrich, who pleaded guilty, directly implicated Miss Hofmann in the spy ring.

CHAIN PRISONERS Tree, Padlock, Chain Used for Jail

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 21 (AP)—The boom town of Disney is going to have to stop substituting a tree, a chain and a padlock for a jail, Mrs. Mabel Bassett, state commissioner of charities and corrections, declared today. "They have no place to keep prisoners," said Mrs. Bassett, who investigated the situation. "They chain men to a tree. Last week they chained an intoxicated woman to the tree. She didn't like it and I don't blame her. They have chained men there in the past."

She wrote D. C. Armstrong, chairman of the Disney townsite board, the practice must be stopped.

600 Teamsters Still on Strike

DES MOINES, Oct. 21 (AP) — With the motor freight transport strike only a day old, officials of the local Team and Truck Drivers' union reported tonight the reduction by a third of the number of drivers and warehousemen who went on strike at midnight Thursday.

At least 15 truck line operators signed union contracts during the day, Leo Quinn, secretary of the union, said. That left between 30 and 35 operators still tied up, and about 600 drivers idle. Nearly 1,000 answered the strike call Thursday night, according to the union.

Pickets on highways into Des Moines were stopping trucks today, but no violence was reported. Quinn said trucks operated by firms not under contracts, were turned back. According to Quinn, about half of the firms who signed the contracts have Des Moines headquarters, and the rest use loading docks and branch offices here.

Carl Keul, union business agent, said tonight he and Walter L. Stewart, attorney representing the unsigned operators, had agreed to a meeting for further discussion of a contract. Keul said no time had been set for the session. Pickets were not halting persons hauling their own goods. Those were farmers, grocers and others coming to Des Moines to pick up supplies or merchandise.

Gov. Kraschel Is Notified Of Latest Plans

Sausage House To Rehire Discharged Men, Warns Loepp

SIOWA CITY, Oct. 21 (AP)—Developments piled thick and fast today around the Swift packing plant tied up by CIO strikers since Sept. 29. Tonight found both labor and management getting ready for a conference tomorrow afternoon to seek a basis for arbitration.

Today's actions included: 1. Union leaders' acceptance of the company's substitute proposal to meet here tomorrow at 4 p.m. Union men last night suggested the meeting be today but company officials found that inconvenient. 2. The company advised Gov. Nelson G. Kraschel it would be ready to reopen its plant if it is assured "law and order will be permanently maintained."

Kraschel also was informed of the conference tomorrow. 3. Mayor David F. Loepp announced the plant would not reopen unless the firm restores the jobs of all those discharged at the start of the strike—including the 165 over whose status the opposing factions have been at loggerheads.

4. National guard troops consolidated their position by setting up soup kitchens and better sleeping arrangements. Quiet continued at the closed plant, where all but a few city police left to return to normal duties. After the exchange of messages arranging tomorrow's meeting, James Porter, regional CIO organizer, disclosed Swift workers have started signing a "back to work" petition calling for restoration of jobs to all discharged employees pending settlement—the union demand to which the company has objected.

In repeated statements, company representatives said the firm was willing to reopen only if the cases of the 165 strikers could be considered individually. Those believed to have had no part in property damage would be reemployed, company spokesmen explained, while others could appeal to the National Labor Relations board.

Strikers and sympathizers planned a mass meeting Sunday to hear reports on tomorrow's discussions. Late this afternoon, Porter presented the strikers' attitude to a committee of local business men who met at the chamber of commerce.

Gov't Airplanes Bomb Burgos With Silk Hose

HENDAYE, France (At the Spanish Frontier), Oct. 21 (AP)—Airplane "bombing" of Burgos, Spanish capital, with silk stockings and other articles of clothing was described today in advices from across the border. Tons of stockings, shirts and other pieces of apparel were dropped by government planes in an effort to emphasize that textiles were scarce in Franco territory.

F. D. R. to Reopen Court Fight; To Ask Power to Reorganize

HYDE PARK, Oct. 21 (AP)—President Roosevelt indicated today he would ask congress again to grant him authority to reorganize the federal administrative machinery.

Rebuffed in the last session on this issue, which aroused cries of dictatorship and personal disavowal by the president of such intentions, the chief executive cited at a press conference the results obtained in simplifying federal court rules of procedure as a striking example of what might be accomplished in reorganizing government departments.

1938-1939 Theater Schedule Released

'Tovarich' To Open Season

G. B. Shaw's Play, 'Saint Joan,' Most Serious of Series

The five dramas which will be presented by University theater during the 1938-39 community season were announced yesterday by Prof. E. C. Mabie, theater director.

The play schedule: "Tovarich"—Nov. 7, 8, 9, 10 and 11; matinee Nov. 12. "The Blue Bird"—Dec. 6, 7, 8 and 9; matinee Dec. 10. "Johnny Johnson"—Feb. 21, 22, 23 and 24; matinee Feb. 25. "Saint Joan"—March 14, 15, 16 and 17; matinee March 18. "The Rose of the Rancho"—May 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12; matinee May 13.

The opening play, "Tovarich," is the rollicking story of an exiled grand duchess of Russia and her husband, a Russian prince, who find work as servants in a Paris home after the revolution. Focal point for the action is a four-billion-franc bank account given them in trust by the Russian royal family and sought in turn by both the French and Soviet governments.

"Tovarich," which means "Comrade," was written by Jacques Deval, French dramatist and novelist, and produced for the first time in Paris in 1933. It was translated into English by Robert E. Sherwood, the American playwright, and was an instantaneous hit in both London and New York, with Eugenie Leonovich, the Russian actress, playing the grand duchess's part.

The season's second play, Maurice Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird," is a part of Prof. Mabie's plan to give the Iowa playgoer the best of what the drama's history has to offer. Besides being a charming story, "The Blue Bird" is a good example of the drama of symbolism.

It is the story of the search by two children, Tyltyl and Mytyl, for the Blue Bird of happiness. In a fantastic dream, they are allowed to penetrate the future and the past and to see into the very soul of things. Maeterlinck's symbolism is sometimes gloomy, but in "The Blue Bird" it is sheer humor and charm.

Actress Makes Suicide Leap

NEW YORK, Oct. 21 (AP)—A 16-story plunge brought death early today to Dorothy Hale, attractive actress and art dilettante, who numbered WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins among her close friends. Clad in a black evening dress on which was pinned a corsage of tea roses, the actress' body was found on the sidewalk below the window of her apartment in the exclusive Hampshire House facing on Central park.

Detectives recorded the case as "fell or jumped—probably suicide." Friends of Hopkins, who was in seclusion at the temporary white house at Hyde Park, said he was "deeply shocked." Hopkins and Mrs. Hale were introduced last spring by James Roosevelt, son of the president. They were seen together often after that and their engagement was rumored, but neither would discuss the report.

Mrs. Hale, 33, was the widow of Gardner Hale, Chicago artist who was killed in 1931 when his automobile went over a 500-foot cliff in California. Previously she had been divorced from T. Gaillard Thomas, 2nd, millionaire clubman.

Japanese Conquest of Canton Accomplished Minus Bloodshed

Small, Mobile Unit Overcomes Many Chinese Defenders

CANTON, Oct. 22 (AP)—The Japanese conquerors of Canton, birthplace of Chinese nationalism, deployed in force today throughout the city, confident of complete occupation without firing a shot.

The south China metropolis was captured yesterday afternoon after one of the most astounding campaigns of modern warfare—a victory in which a comparatively small but highly mobile and formidable equipped column stepped hundreds of thousands of Chinese soldiers.

Pointed by corps of tanks, their turreted guns inactive, the column swung into the virtually deserted city shortly after noon. Behind the tanks rolled a trail of trucks loaded with infantrymen.

There was little or no disorder among the 50,000 civilians who remained in the once-teeming metropolis to meet the invaders. The Chinese stared impassively at the newcomers. The Japanese, with fixed bayonets, started back and Canton was a fallen city.

As the occupation of Canton proceeded today, amazed military observers sought to evaluate the 10-day-old south China invasion as it related to the 15-month-old Chinese-Japanese war and particularly the months-long encroachment of Hankow, Chinese military capital some 500 miles to the north.

Foreign observers always have maintained that Japan must take both Canton and Hankow to achieve real victory. With the capture of Canton the task perhaps was half done.

Canton not only had been the principal gateway into China for military supplies used against the Japanese, but was the only major port left for other Chinese commerce.

The full import of the choking of this artery of supplies was not yet apparent, for against the possibility of losing Canton the Chinese several months ago started a highway from Burma to Yunnan in extreme southwestern China. This highway must be nearly if not yet complete.

Jury Acquits Model 'Hubby'

Courtroom Crowd Stands and Cheers Reading of Verdict

CHICAGO, Oct. 21 (AP)—Rudolph Sikora, "the perfect husband," was acquitted by a criminal court jury tonight of a charge that he murdered Edward Solomon, the man who stole the love of his wife.

The jury of 11 married men and a bachelor deliberated approximately an hour and a half.

The court had given the jury four possible verdicts: conviction with the death penalty, conviction with life imprisonment, conviction with 14 or more years imprisonment — and acquittal. "He acted in a way that should protect the sanctity of the American home," Russell F. Hornburg, 35, foreman of the jury, declared after he had read the verdict.

Sikora's acquittal was greeted by a courtroom audience which stood up and cheered. The defendant, choked with emotion, stood up and offered his hand to Prosecutor Leslie Curtis. Curtis shook it and said, "All right, old man, be good."

"I feel swell," Sikora gasped. His pretty wife, Margaret, 22, who testified for the state and said of Solomon, "I loved him," was present when the verdict was returned. She appeared to accept it calmly, remarking: "I expected that verdict. All I can say is the jury heard the evidence. They were the decisive factor."

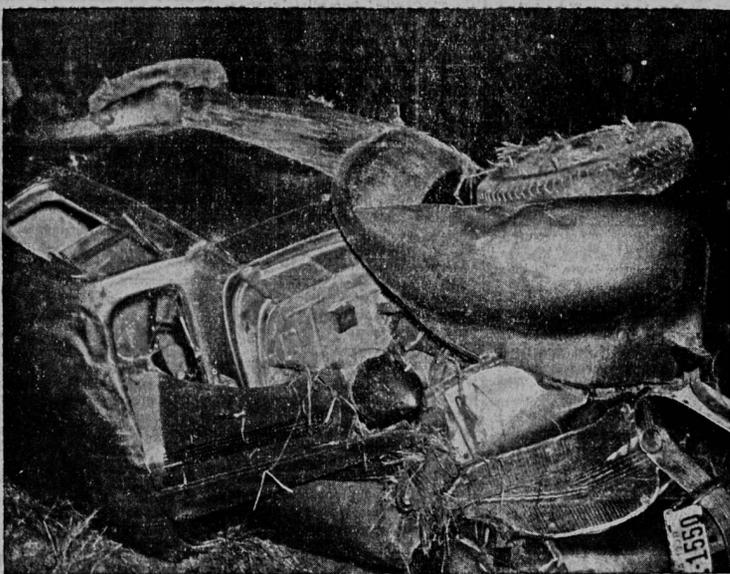

Defense attorneys, in their closing arguments, had pictured the young defendant as a fond husband, tortured by the loss of his wife's love, who suffered a "mental breakdown."

Students' Car Wrecked North of City

Shown above is the wreck of the car which police reported ran into a light pole on highway 218 near the Red Ball inn north of town last night. Police said Dean Reasoner, 630 N. Dubuque street, was the driver of the car. Police reported the car a total wreck. The car was turned over and the light pole was broken. Occupants of the car at the time of the accident as listed on the police docket were Dean Reasoner, Tommy Locker and Bob Conrad of 630 N. Dubuque street, Betty Garland, Dorothy Price and Maxine Fox of 823 E. Burlington street. The telephone pole was sheared in two and lay prone across the road until it was moved. The car also ripped open a cement manhole cover. Turf around the scene of the accident was torn up "as if by a tractor," it was described. Wreckage has been removed. The severity of the injuries incurred by the occupants of the car was not known, police said.

If It's Not One Crisis

The spirit of the Japanese nation is, by its nature, a thing that must be propagated over the seven seas and extended over the five continents. Anything that may hinder its progress must be abolished, even by force.

The immediate crisis in Europe past, the spotlight of the news shifts to the Orient where we find the Nipponese slowly and surely gaining in their rape of China.

For a time there was fervent hope in the hearts of free people everywhere that China's magnificent stand against the invading horde would be successful, but gradually the poorly equipped and badly organized forces of China were pushed back by the highly mechanized army of Japan.

While the Chinese have not yet admitted defeat, it seems certain that the Nipponese will soon have a strangle hold on their enemy. What if the Japanese do finally succeed in defeating China? All through the present war the Chinese have destroyed all valuable property as they retreated, leaving nothing that could later be put to profit by Japan.

They call the recent baseball championship games the world series, but as far as the National League is concerned, the word is spelled "serious."

Master-Minds Miss Their Signals ADOLF HITLER and Hermann Goering — almost as famous for their Aryan supremacy theory as for their Nazi conquests — chanced to visit an art gallery in Mannheim recently and in stopping before Corot's "Portrait of a Girl" saw fit to comment on the pure Germanic charm of the model.

Just another revelation, eh Adolf?

Don't Tantalize U. S. Mr. Baruch No More War Profits! So declared Bernard Baruch recently, in urging that America expand and speed up her preparedness program.

He claims that plans have been made to eliminate the profit motive from armament industries. Many of us justifiably wonder what Aladdin's lamp he has discovered that will control so powerfully a genie.

This secret of his is probably of far more importance to most of us than his views on America's woeful lack of preparedness. We've been told about that by dozens of people, but Mr. Baruch's brevity concerning the elimination of war profits is keeping us in suspense.

Japan's Objective In China

As Japan's legions close in on the Chinese capital of Hankow it becomes more apparent that the land of the rising sun is set on carrying on to her objective.

The objective, variously defined, seems to us to be subjugation of China for the purpose of exploiting her raw materials. Japan, quick to learn Western imperialism, has set out on such a policy for herself.

Not for population (official Japanese figures show fewer immigrants have settled in conquered territory than have been born in any one year in Japan) but for raw materials for her factories is Japan pursuing this policy.

Though it means the end of China's independence, the Japanese control of that country would mean economic security for the Japanese.

CLIPPED from other COLUMNS

THE SACK OF ROME

THE RED tongues of cannon licked through the fog that caped the walled circuit of Rome. Through the mist broke howling the imperial army unpaid by the German Emperor Charles V and seeing in pillage their only hope of recompense. At prayer in the chapel of the Vatican, Clement VII fled along the corridor to the Castle of St. Angelo — that aged paper fastness from Goth, Norman, German, Roman nobles and the Roman mob. Screened by a tower, the Pope looked down upon a night of horror: Roman soldiers and citizens piked by the German and Spanish mercenaries; the streets choked with the furniture of churches, and the relics and sacred ornaments of the altars.

For six months thereafter Charles held Clement for a ransom of 400,000 ducats and the capitulation of papal revenues and cities — all to finance the emperor's interminable wars with France. Thus the Hapsburg, himself a Catholic, continued to enforce an historic spoliation that was, at bottom, not religious, but political; and thus Clement was added to the prelates who must, through the centuries, surrender to the conqueror lest the lands and cities be wasted, and the people starve and die.

In reality, the long "war of investiture" between the spiritual and the temporal power was a systematic process whereby the German emperors sought to control or seize the tithes and treasures of the church. New civil laws were made to order or dug up, and opposed to canon law to legalize the greedy alienation of crops, mines and bullion. More often than not, the Castle of St. Angelo withstood the marauder, but John X, Gregory VII, Pascal II, and Gelastus II — to name only a few — suffered outrage and captivity; and today, in Vienna, Theodore Cardinal Innitzer is no less an actual prisoner of German imperialism.

No Castle of St. Angelo the archbishop had to bar out the mob which sacked his palace. By new "law" and official expropriation the Nazis plan to strip the Austrian church of its wealth gathered through the ages, and therein they will imitate the exact course once pursued, not this time, by a German, but by Henry VIII of England. Under the old common law of the "king's visitation" that monarch sent a committee to "discover" — or invent — "immorality" among the monks and "oppression" of the people to cloak a capital levy wherewith he later gorged his treasury and his nobles — remaining orthodox, himself, and setting up the new English merchant class. Upon Hitler he has descended the ambitions of the English Henry VIII and the German Henry IV.

Surely, Cardinal Innitzer must turn the eyes of the mind backward upon the vistas of the past, and know that, although the Castle of St. Angelo has often been taken and looted, the Castle of the church stands forever, with towers not built by hands, and ramparts invincible against the dark.

(ALFRED P.) SLOAN'S LINIMENT!

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—If it surprised you Joan Crawford fans that she actually sought to play in something called "Ice Follies" the explanation is simple: The role gives the girl a chance to sing; and "Ice Follies," despite its name, is a very good script.

It was a very good script when it was filmed before, and it should be good still. It's the stage play, "Excess Baggage," made in the silents with William Haines and Josephine Dunn, and a darn good movie it was. All about a vaudeville trouper whose wife wasn't helping much with the act, and was being "carried along" in kindness until the tables turned. Then the trouper's wife became the real star and the husband became the superfluous freight. They've adapted the story to ice—and Joan's the girl whose singing doesn't click in an ice circus but gets her a movie contract.

Reason enough for Joan to want it, but it may seem odd that Metro should take to the ice when that commodity already has been worn thin for movie purposes by Sonja Henie, whose need for stronger stories is so great that her next film is being postponed.

Metro figures, however, that it has a strong story in "Excess Baggage," and it figures also that the "Ice Follies" troupe will offer something different from the work familiarized by Sonja. The difference will lie in the work of skating comedians—the comedy in Sonja's films has never been on the ice.

Working in the picture by day, the "Follies" troupe is performing for the public here by night. Opening night the rinkside looked like a Hollywood convention — with Joan Crawford there with Cesar Romero, Janet Gaynor with Gilbert Adrian, the designer, the Richard Barthelmesses, the Harold Lloyds, Valter Bruce and husband J. Walter Ruben.

They saw a good show—beauty, speed, skill, and comedy. Metro is hopeful of Bess Ehrhardt as a screen acting possibility, all skidding aside. In the comedy department—where they look to be different from Sonja—there's Heinie Brook, whose "drunk act" on skates has a Chaplinish quality that might mean something in pictures; and there's Les Hamilton and Eddie Shipstad and Oscar Johnson.

But if you see the "Follies" on tour, don't expect to see the same show in the movie. You can count on Metro to lavish things up. Those two tents in the Indian number will multiply, and they'll have gigantic totem poles, and a real campfire that sings the soundstage ratters.

Wallace Ford is going to Broadway, but to make a movie, "Home Town," for William K. Howard. His new house at Malibu will be closed because wife Martha and daughter are going along. House is called "Martha's Vineyard"—after wife, not island. Brilliant educational opportunity: the five-year-old selected to play the junior Tarzan in the jungle epics will have personal instruction from Johnny Weissmuller. Papa's pedagogical vocabulary will be limited as usual to grunts and the well-known yell.

TUNING IN By Loren Hickerson

By popular request, will guest star on tonight's "Avalon Time," new all-American musical show starring Red Foley, at 6 o'clock over the NBC-Red network.

"Tutti - Frutti" and "Sweet Sue" will be their musical contributions. The college medley will honor Georgia Tech, Purdue and Michigan universities.

BETTY LOU Of Tommy Riggs fame, will entertain George Givot on the "Quaker Party" at 7 o'clock tonight over the NBC-Red network.

Givot has long been the Greek Ambassador of good will on the stage, screen and in radio. Lately he's been playing character roles in front of the camera, with and without his classic dialect.

Larry Clinton and his orchestra, with Bea Wain as vocalist, will supply the musical background for the show.

FAMOUS LULLABIES Will be featured on the "Saturday Night Serenade" over the Columbia network at 8:30 tonight.

Honors will be divided between Mary Eastman and Bill Perry, American and Italian singers.

"Mah Curly Headed Baby," the soprano's selection, will be followed by Perry's rendition of "Bambina."

The Serenaders and Gus Haenschen's orchestra will contribute "Stop Beatin' Round the Mulberry Bush," "Garden of the Moon," "Taboo," "Love is Where you Find It," and "Don't Cross Your Fingers, Cross Your Heart."

ADOLPHE MENJOU And Verree Teasdale, the all-time guest star champions of the air, have a full - time job—and radio may have a Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt as a result.

Menjou, one of the cream's most versatile actors, and his attractive wife made eight joint guest performances last year on the network's leading shows—Radio Theater, the Charlie McCarthy show, Bing Crosby series, Jack Oakie's, Al Jolson's and others. The "best - dressed man in Hollywood" made his own total 10 with two single appearances.

This fall, Menjou has a spot of his own as master of ceremonies on the star - spangled Texaco Star Theater, heard each Wednesday. Verree Teasdale figures in Producer Bill Becher's plans also, and will appear in frequent dramatic sketches on the show with her actor husband.

The new series began a long hoped for opportunity to do the Menjous, who have been reading material avidly, and studying radio methods with a joint career on the air in mind.

STRETCHING IN By Loren Hickerson

Visiting Californians find New York little different from Hollywood these crisp October days, with so many film satellites in town. Roaming midtown you are apt to encounter Miriam Hopkins, Bing Crosby, Douglas Fairbanks, Peter, Frank Capra, Robert Montgomery, Douglas Montgomery, Basil Rathbone, Glenda Farrell, Sam Goldwyn, Groucho and Harpo Marx, Pat O'Brien, George Raft, and George Jessel.

Crosby and his wife, the former Dixie Lee, have just returned from Bermuda; Rathbone is conducting Shakespearean classes at Columbia university; blond Miriam Hopkins is looking for a suitable play with which to make a Broadway comeback; Bob Montgomery is enroute to his upstate farm; Groucho and Harpo are just kibitzing around; Raft is vacationing, and so is Pat O'Brien. Oh, yes, Garbo is here, or was. Outside of a surprise visit to the Rainbow Room, which so excited everybody that the headwaiter is still wide-eyed, nobody knows what Garbo did, except one person. This is Bob Reud, and he ain't telling. Stokowski or no Stokowski, Reud is Garbo's only intimate in New York. It's been that way ever since Maurice Stiller brought her over here a decade ago.

Each week, Eddie selects one pair of prospective newcomers from the columns of the Los Angeles papers, and presents them on his program. Last Monday, Miss Crowner and Mr. Rawson were the couple interviewed by Cantor.

In the midst of the interview, Miss Crowner asked, "How would you like to come to our wedding?" Cantor immediately answered, "I will—and I'll bring Ida!"

The young couple were delighted, but the appearance of the famous star will necessitate several changes in the nuptial plans. Special guards will be placed outside of the Little Church of the Flowers in Forest Lawn, Glendale, where the marriage will take place, to be sure that auto-graph hunters drawn by the presence of celebrities will not halt the progress of guests going into and out of the church. Each guest will be asked to present his or her invitation to the door before being allowed to enter, to prevent outsiders from "crashing."

Elaborate newsreel equipment will also attract crowds. The appearance of Cantor has added many more complications. "I think I understand now the lack of privacy which the stars say is the price for fame," said Miss Crowner. "All this is fun for me and I love it—but a steady diet of public interest in everything I did would eventually drive me crazy."

The couple will leave on a honeymoon, made possible by a cash gift from Cantor, immediately after the wedding.

Japan seems to be gaining the most yards in China, but can't seem to score a touchdown.

The gentleman at the next desk says he doesn't think much of the Munich four-power conference if all it did was to save Hitler's face.

A Man ABOUT MANHATTAN

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK — The five hour surge of "Hamlet" which asks the customers to be in their seats at 6:30 p.m. and remain until 11 has a 30-minute intermission around 9:30 so that folk can rush out and grab off a snack. However, with so many to be cared for in the nearby cafes you are apt to miss your pie or the first scene of the first post-dinner act, depending on which direction your sympathies lie. The waiters just can't take that many orders.

Therefore this hungry philosopher suggests: Have your dinner before 6:30 and at intermission merely refresh yourself with a soda or a cup of coffee. Then there's no hurry, no worry, no impatient delay, no gulping food, no snarling at harassed waitresses, no sudden and violent cases of indigestion, no anything but a pleasant interlude and a breath of fresh air.

Incidentally, this 6:30 curtain call with a dinner intermission isn't exactly a novelty on Broadway. "Strange Interlude" began at 4:30 in the afternoon, with an hour's intermission for dinner and lasted through 11 complete acts. Remember?

There is a heart-tug in the sight of that blind musician who strolls past the theaters at night, playing his accordion. His name is Phil Goldfarb, and for awhile last season he enjoyed a brief hour of fame. Various nightclub operators gave him spots in their shows, but the opulent days, for him, are gone, and he is back at his old trade of serenading the passers-by.

The late George Gershwin was a schoolmate of his back in adolescent days on the East side, and Goldfarb it was who introduced Gershwin to the teacher who gave him his first music lesson. Gershwin never forgot and always contributed generously while he lived. Others who know and have a fondness for the accordionist include Irving Berlin, Bill Robinson, Cab Calloway, Walter Donaldson, Ted Frenkel, and Zornia. All contribute half-dollars to the little tin cup Goldfarb carries.

Trains to Get Warning Before Blizzards Strike

ALAMOSA, Col. (AP)—Cumbres pass, one of the deepest snow regions in the United States may be without its train tie-ups this winter.

Railroad officials have devised an instrument by which the train conductors can stop the train at any point, hook into the nearby telephone line and obtain up-to-the-minute weather information from all stations on the route. Heretofore the train crews have relied upon weather reports available only at designated stations and blizzards have struck so unexpectedly trains occasionally were snowbound for days.

Dog Buys Own Food

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — If Jiggs, bulldog, gets indigestion, his mistress, Mrs. W. B. Francis, says it will be his own fault. Jiggs does his own buying each morning at a grocery, where he goes and selects a can of dog food, charges it to Mrs. Francis, and carries it home for consumption. Recently he has been making a second trip to the grocery in the afternoon, for an extra meal.

Health Hints By Logan Clendening, M. D.

I have found a little book called "Sleep," by Ray Giles, quite amusing. I don't know whether reading it will improve anyone's insomnia, but at least it collects a large number of experiences. It stresses the physical aids to sleep rather than the psychological aspects of the question. In my experience the psychological reasons for insomnia are the more important, but I will repeat some of the other remedies which Mr. Giles gives.

Getting the skin well aired is a method which has the authority of Benjamin Franklin. He and John Adams were sleeping together when John woke up and found Ben walking in and down the cold room in the nude. Ben said he had found it well nigh a specific for inducing sleep.

Exercise Has Fans Exercise before retiring has many advocates. "You never saw a sleepless ditch digger," said Arthur McGovern, author of "The Secret of Keeping Fit." An account explains the effect of his nightly walks thus: "My walks at night are primarily to ease the tension I find all over my body from desk work. First I step outside and imagine myself a huge Newfoundland dog just getting out of the water. I shake myself all over as though trying to get dry. As I walk the street (I live in a very quiet neighborhood where I can act foolish without being seen), I begin to pull, wiggle, twist and otherwise contort those muscles which feel tied in knots. By the time I am back home I feel as limp as a kitten."

QUESTIONS FROM READERS T: "Will bad enlarged adenoids cause swelling of the eyelids and severe headaches?" Answer: Adenoids will cause lots of things. Why not have them removed? G.O.A.: "Please tell me where I can secure nicotinic acid for pellagra. Also tell me where I can get Vitamin D and E extracts." Answer: Doctors are using nicotinic acid now very widely. All drug stores sell extracts of the vitamins.

H. O. C.: "Will you please advise in your column what to do for cracking of the joints of the ankles?" Answer: The thing to do is not to worry about it. It has no significance and everybody, especially after the age of 40, has some of it.

Common Mistakes Asked to give the three commonest mistakes made about sleeping, Norman Dine, manager of Lewis and Conger's Sleep Shop, answered: 1. Too many married people,

U-High Slaughters Mt. Vernon 48-0 In Homecoming Tilt

Vicious Blocking Paves Way For Blues' Touchdown Drives

Carson, Hightshoe Tally Often on Long Jaunts to Pay Dirt

Before a colorful Homecoming crowd, U - High's football team swamped and outclassed Mt. Vernon high under an avalanche of touchdowns yesterday afternoon, to overwhelm the invaders 48-0.

Hard accurate blocking by the entire team was the prime factor in their decisive victory. It was this vicious blocking that shook Clarence Hightshoe and Duane Carson loose on their long touchdown jaunts, it was great blocking which made it possible for the locals to maneuver so effectively their vaunted razzle-dazzle attack which stunned the entire Mt. Vernon team.

The Blues scored their first touchdown in the opening minutes of play on a lateral pass from Burns to Carson from the three yard line, after Carson and Hightshoe had placed the ball there on runs of 35 and 16 yards, respectively. Hightshoe added the extra point on an end sweep to make the score 7-0.

Hightshoe scored their second touchdown early in the second period from the one yard stripe, after Hightshoe and Carson behind perfect blocking had placed the ball there on two lateral pass plays which netted 30 and 34 yards, respectively. These two lateral pass plays were so perfectly executed that they caught the entire Mt. Vernon team flatfooted. Hightshoe failed to add the point after touchdown and the score remained U-High 13, Mt. Vernon 0.

In the third quarter the Blues shelved their vaunted razzle-dazzle attack in favor of a powerful running game which resulted in two more touchdowns. The initial score in the second half was the result of a double reverse which saw Hightshoe circle his own left end, behind beautiful interference, for 33 yards and a touchdown. Carson swept right end for the extra point to bring the count to 20-0. A few minutes later Carson, behind deadly blocking, swept his own right end for 65 yards to again cross the visitor's goal. On a wide end run, Hightshoe added the extra point. Score 26-0.

But it was in the fourth period that the locals really turned on the heat, pushing over three scores, two of which were tallied by the second team. Two long passes from Burns to Carson put the ball on the eight yard line from which point Carson crashed it over. Burns added the extra point to make the score 34-0.

After the regulars had placed the ball on the Mt. Vernon six yard marker, as the result of Burns' 25 yard pass to Furlmester, the reserves were sent into the game and promptly rang up another score with Buddy Means lugging the pigskin. Dunn circled right end for the extra point. Score 41-0.

In a desperate attempt to score, Mt. Vernon launched an aerial attack in the closing minutes of play only to have Buddy Means, alert U - High back, intercept a pass and return it 25 yards in to the pay chamber. Means added the extra point on a line plunge. Score 48-0.

The only redeeming feature of the game from the Mt. Vernon standpoint was the great kicking of Captain Fisher, who booted eight times averaging 35 yards on each kick. Fisher played center on both offensive and defense and was called back to do the kicking.

East Meets West Today

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 21 (AP) — Michigan's heavy, powerful football team was a strong favorite to stop Yale here tomorrow when they resume gridiron relations after a lapse of 55 years. More than 45,000 fans, several thousand from the midwest, were expected to more than half fill the bowl for the inter-sectional scap. Although the Michigan squad, which arrived here this morning, brimmed with confidence, Fritz Crisler, the Wolverines' new head coach, wanted no part of it. He recalled that during the past four years, three of his Princeton-tutored eleven were knocked off by Yale, twice under circumstances similar to the present setup when his teams were outstanding favorites.

BITS about Sports

By J. DENNIS SULLIVAN

Today, as most of you know, Iowa meets Colgate in what figures to be one of the better games of the year — from the spectators standpoint. The Red Raiders — fresh from a victory over Columbia — invade the Iowa playing field seeking revenge for the beating administered them by Iowa's '35 eleven.

There is genuine interest in the outcome of this battle, both here and in the east. Andy Kerr doesn't win 'em all but he comes as close as most.

Now comes the catch to the whole proceedings, and, believe me ladies and gents, it's quite a hitch.

Here on Iowa campus there is an organization whose only excuse for existence is the fact that it's supposed to promote and direct pep-meetings. If you've never heard of the organization — and I can understand that — it functions under the title of Pi Epsilon Pi.

Pi Epsilon Pi is jokingly referred to as a pep fraternity — national pep fraternity, if you please.

Last night, and you can take this or leave it — it'll probably be denied anyway — this office was deluged with calls inquiring the whereabouts of the pep-meeting.

When informed, that to the best of our knowledge, there was to be no rally, many of the callers expressed amazement that the eve of an inter-sectional football game should be without a fitting gathering, one calculated to generate a bit of enthusiasm among the many who intend to attend the game.

If this alleged "pep fraternity" intends to promote pep rallies — or the title is a misnomer — it's high time it gets down to business or folds up entirely and desist in trying to fool the general public.

Mr. Dexter Teed, publicity agent par excellent, came to town yesterday bearing tales of his beloved Colgate. If you don't already know, Mr. Teed is employed by the eastern institution to provide what publicity Andy Kerr's athletes might be needful of during the course of the football season — other sports, too, as far as I know.

I really felt sorry for Mr. Teed last night when he launched into his favorite subject — Colgate Athletics. It seems that Mr. Teed's nomination for all American, Hal Lube, was knocked about by the Columbia lads last week, and, if Mr. Teed can be trusted — and who would doubt his word — will not start today's game. However, don't count Lube out until today's game is over.

Smashing Fullback

Jerry Niles, above, the Big Ten's leading scorer, will be in at the fullback position today when the festivities get under way. He will try to convince the Red Raiders that his record is well deserved by pushing across a touchdown or so.

He Passes 'Em

Nile Kinnick, above, is one of Iowa's most potent scoring threats. In addition to his running ability, Kinnick can pass and run with the best. Hampered by an injured ankle, Nile has had trouble in getting started this year. This may be the day.

Irish, Scotch In Day's Football Grudge Battle

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 21 (AP) — Carnegie Tech and Notre Dame, two of the nation's major undefeated eleven, will meet in Notre Dame stadium tomorrow for the 16th time in one of football's most colorful rivalries.

The Irish, three and four deep at every position and possessing one of the best running games in recent history, will be slight favorites. Tech, however, upset Notre Dame, 9 to 7, last year and usually hits its peak against Irish teams. In 1928 Notre Dame, driving toward national honors, was defeated 19 to 0 by Tech in one of the sport's most outstanding reverses.

With both eleven's boasting strong lines the game may be decided in the air. Notre Dame has drilled throughout the week on pass defense.

Touchballers In Four Games On Frat, Crest Front

Hillcrest and fraternity touchballers battled through four games yesterday as the second week of intramural competition drew near its close.

Sigma Chi took the worst licking of the day as they were trampled by a strong team from Phi Kappa Psi, 21-0. In the other game on the Greek letter front, Phi Gamma Delta handed Pi Kappa Alpha a 17-12 beating.

In two games in the Hillcrest league, second - north took the measure of third - east, 12-7, and first - north triumphed over third - north, 18-12.

BULLETIN

By EVERETT FEAY (Daily Iowan Sports Reporter)

DUBUQUE — (Special to The Daily Iowan) — Unleashing a powerful running and passing attack, combined with razzle-dazzle plays concocted by Coach Herb Cormack, the Iowa City Hawkeyes last night out-ran, out-passed and outplayed a stubborn Dubuque eleven to the tune of 16-6.

The Little Hawks went all over the field, rushing the Rams hither and yon. They scored their first touchdown on an end sweep by Miller that was good for eight yards, after the Hawkeyes had gained the upper hand in a kicking duel.

Later, the local gridders opened up. After kidding around with the Rams for a while, a lateral and a forward accounted for 20 yards and a touchdown. Miller showed a lateral into McGinnis' arms. McGinnis ran wide to his left and then tossed a 20 yard pass to Crumley, who counted for the second score.

Not content with shoving the Dubuque boys back on their heels, Wright broke through to block a punt behind the Ram goal. A Dubuque man fell on it and added two points to the Iowa City score. The Rams scored their only goal late in the fourth period when Halling tossed a pass to Brun who raced six yards for the tally.

Seeking revenge for a 12-6 pasting administered by the Hawkeyes in 1935, Andy Kerr brings his Colgate Red Raiders into town today to provide the Iowans their second inter-sectional contest of the year.

On the eve of the battle, it was reliably reported that Hal Lube, sensational Colgate passing ace, will be a doubtful starter, his side injured in the Columbia game still giving him considerable trouble.

Tit for Tat

With nothing to lose and everything to gain, it is expected that both teams will open up with aerial barrages early in the game in an effort to get the jump in the scoring column. Lube, should he get into the game, is sure to fess passes far and wide.

Not to be outdone, the Hawkeyes have been grooming Kinnick to retaliate with his accurate heaves, a sort of tit for tat affair.

New Faces

Iowa fans will probably be greeted with several new faces in the starting lineup when the game gets under way. Jerry Niles, while not exactly a stranger to Hawkeye fans, will be in at full, while Russell Busk, pint sized speedster, will do the signal barking.

Ray Murphy, who tallied twice in the Chicago game, is certain to start at one of the halves. Murphy, son of a former Iowa grid captain, will be making his starting debut before a home crowd, his one former appearance being in the Wisconsin encounter and then only for a short while.

Speed

The quest for speed has not been confined to the backfield. Prasse and Evans, fleetest of Iowa's crop of ends, getting the nod over Smith and Pettit because the former are capable of more speed than the latter, and are more likely to get under Kinnick's expected forward tosses.

Kelly and Nead, both of whom tip the scales around the 215 mark, are likely choices at the tackles, with Allen and Brady at guards.

Steady

Andruska, who improves with each performance, is slated to do his stuff at center, rounding out the fastest possible Hawkeye lineup.

In preparation for the game, the Iowans indulged in a light workout last evening. There was no contact work, the session being confined to limbering up exercises.

Long Suffering

Iowa fans, perhaps the most long suffering in the country, are expected to turn out again today to see their favorites in action against the Colgate brigade. The greater part of them will attend the game expecting the worst but hoping for the best. In fairness to the squad it can be said that it looked better during the past week than at any previous time this year. Thursday's session was one of the most spirited engaged in by the Hawkeyes in some time. The same sort of spirit it may go a long way in returning them a winner in today's tilt.

Cornell Wins

MT. VERNON (AP) — In a dull, slow moving game, Cornell college downed the Simpson eleven 15 to 0 here yesterday.

Who Wouldn't

SIOUX FALLS (AP) — Charles "Gabby" Hartnett, bulky manager of the Chicago Cubs, en route pheasant hunting, declared here yesterday that he favors any player trade "that will bolster the club," and said he will attend the winter baseball meeting at New Orleans "ready to do business with all comers."

Invitational Mile Meet Today

Passing to Predominate In Nation's Grid Games Today

NEW YORK, Oct. 21 (AP) — In these days of football confusion, when possession of a good passer puts the under-dog on practically even terms with the favorite and practically every under-dog possesses a good passer, it's a great satisfaction to be able to pick a few concrete facts from tomorrow's national college program.

Among these facts are: 1. That the most interesting game to speculate about is that between Notre Dame and Carnegie Tech, since it's the pre-Army game test for a very promising Irish team, since Carnegie is reported to be loaded, since both teams are unbeaten, and since Notre Dame will be out to avenge last year's defeat by the Tartans. 2. That also there are such attractive battles as Harvard-Dartmouth, Yale-Michigan and Fordham-Oregon in the east; Michigan State - Syracuse, Iowa - Colgate, Northwestern-Illinois and Oklahoma - Nebraska in the middle west; Louisiana State-Vanderbilt and Auburn-Georgia Tech in the

Old Timer Yost Believes Teams Better on Whole

NEW YORK, Oct. 21 (AP) — Fielding H. Yost, whose football coaching career at Michigan spanned the stone age and streamline years of the game, thinks players of today are better on the whole but, "by jiminy, I don't see fellows like Willie Heston, Neil Snow and 'Germany' Schultz around."

Yost is eager to see Michigan, one of the 'Big Ten's most dangerous eleven, meet Yale tomorrow in a resumption of a rivalry that goes back to the elegant eighties. He's right, proud of Fritz Crisler's first Michigan team but he's prone to wander back to the days when "Yale was king of the east and Michigan ruled the west." "That Heston," he mused, "first year I had him I didn't think he'd be anything wonderful, just a green kid. But I was wrong, thank goodness. He was all-American for two years. Say, he ran right over a couple of boys one day for three or four plays and then holtered, 'You fellows better get out of there or you'll be killed.'"

Three Groups, 28 Entries Meet Today

With 28 high schools competing in three sections, the University of Iowa's invitational one mile high school team run will send 170 high school thinclads into action at 11 o'clock this morning.

The most crowded section will be class A, with 13 schools sending 70 runners for the meet. The class B runners number 57, and represent nine teams, while six class C schools have entered 41 men.

The meet will be scored as a cross country run and, although a school may enter more men, only three runners will count for each team entry. Team members and coaches will be guests of the university at the Iowa-Colgate football game this afternoon.

Graceful Action on the Gridiron

Hal Lube, above, may be on the sideline when the whistle signals the start of today's inter-sectional clash between the Red Raiders from Colgate and Iowa's Hawkeyes. Lube was injured in last week's game with Columbia and hasn't fully recovered.

Selection of Rhodes Candidates To Take Place Dec. 15 in Ames

Two Iowans Are Eligible for Honor Says Van der Zee

Two candidates from Iowa, eligible for Rhodes scholarships, will be chosen by the Iowa committee at a meeting at Ames Dec. 15, it was announced Prof. J. Van der Zee of the political science department yesterday.

The applications of the two people selected will go before the district committee Dec. 17 and the scholars elected in this competition will enter the University of Oxford in October, 1939.

The scholarships, which are $2 in number, are made possible by the will of Cecil John Rhodes. Each appointment is made for two years in the first instance, with a possible third year for those whose record at Oxford and plan of study makes such an award advisable.

Must Be Male Citizen

A candidate to be eligible must be a male citizen of the United States between the ages of 19 and 25 on Oct. 1, 1939, have completed at least his sophomore year by the time of application. No restriction is placed upon a Rhodes scholar's choice of studies. The stipend is fixed at about $1,700.

The qualities which Rhodes specified in his will as forming the basis of selection are (1) literary and scholastic ability and attainments; (2) qualities of manhood, truth, courage, devotion to duty, sympathy, kindness, unselfishness and fellowship; (3) exhibition of moral force of character and of instincts to lead and to take an interest in his schoolmates; (4) physical vigor as shown by interest in outdoor sports or in other ways.

Distinction Is Requirement

Some definite quality of distinction, whether in intellect, character or personality, or in any combination of them is the most important requirement for a Rhodes scholarship. Financial need does not constitute a special claim for consideration.

The competition for Rhodes scholarships is organized by states and districts. There are eight districts of six states each. Upon recommendation by his college or university, a prospective candidate may apply either in the state in which he resides or in the state in which he has received at least two years of his college education by the time of application.

Two Nominated

Each state committee may nominate two candidates to appear before the district committee and from the 12 men appearing before it, the district committee may select four to represent their states at Oxford.

In very college and university there is an institutional representative of the Rhodes scholarships from whom copies of the memorandum of regulations, application blanks and other information may be obtained. In the University of Iowa the person designated by the president to act in that capacity is Professor Van der Zee, 301-A, Schaeffer hall.

Girls' Club To Give Reception

Theta Rho Invite New Members To Reception and Tea

The Theta Rho girls' club will entertain tomorrow afternoon at a tea for prospective members. The informal affair will be in the I.O.O.F. hall from 3 until 5 p.m. Each member is expected to bring a guest.

Different members will pour, so that each girl will have an opportunity to meet the visitors. Virginia Mackey, Janet Tipton and Marion Farnsworth are on the reception committee. Evelyn Wiese, Colleen Frenzen, Delores Eicher, Gladys Parizek and Marjorie Huffman comprise the refreshment committee.

There will be a routine business meeting in the club room Monday at 7:30 p.m.

Prospects High For Rifle Team

Sergt. Wendlandt Has Promising Squad; King Voted Captain

With a squad of 20 riflemen drilling every Wednesday night, Sgt. H. W. Wendlandt, coach of the university marksmen, has high hopes of a team that will repeat the performances of the Iowa R. O. T. C. team that last year won over three - quarters of its matches.

The record of Hawkeye riflemen last year was even more impressive when it is remembered that they won the grand championship trophy of the Camp Perry indoor meet at Booneville, Mo., while Sergeant Wendlandt's freshman team won the basic R. O. T. C. championship trophy and the advanced team took a second place in its division at the meet.

Also on the varsity record of last year were a third place in the Big Ten meet at Chicago, a second in the Dewar matches at Chicago and a second in the state matches. The freshman record, besides the win at Booneville, included a victory in the National Postal matches.

Of the last year's team, 11 are with the squad that is in training this year. They include Kenneth Smith, Robert Kadgh, Howard King, Arlo Gill, James Bielenberg, Marvin Schaefer, Parker Pelzer, Jay Higby, George E. Brown, Robert Pugh and Conrad Schadt.

At a recent meeting of the squad members, Howard King was elected team captain, and James Bielenberg was elected student manager and secretary.

Meet Frances and Oscar

"He's my guardian angel," laughingly explained Frances Vogel, A1 of Davenport, exhibiting "Oscar," her hand-carved, angry Ethiopian wooden costume pin.

Frances, herself, who is an art major, made Oscar last summer from a piece of gum wood. With the aid of a pearl - handled pen knife, sandpaper, several brass rings, walnut stain, shellac, and floor wax, she fashioned the attractive mask - like pin.

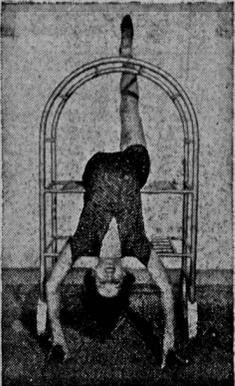

"I spent several days working at intervals on him," Frances continued.

Oscar is as large as the palm of Frances' hand, and consequently, is a striking piece of costume jewelry.

"I got the idea from a pin which I saw in a shop," Frances said, adding that she is contemplating carving a Mrs. Oscar in the very near future.

Oscar is the only thing she has ever carved, but sewing is her favorite hobby, and she designs and makes all of her own clothes. She is also interested in other phases of sewing including making hooked rugs and quilts.

Keeping Fit

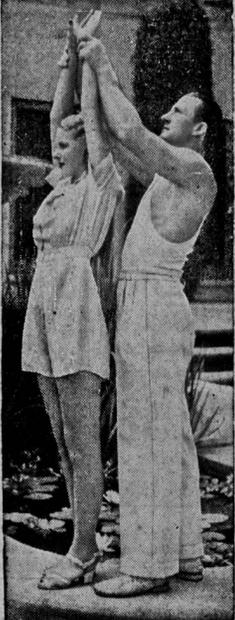

So you exercise every morning! Or you don't. Either way, exactly what can you expect exercise to do for you?

Two things which proper exercising will do for you are to limber you up and to coordinate your muscles.

Many specialized methods which purport to reduce certain areas—hips, legs, etc.—do not actually reduce but rather redistribute weight. Proper dieting is necessary in addition to exercising to accomplish the desired results.

One effective exercise is the trunk circle. Sit erect. Put your hands on your hips. Bend to the right, then to the left. Then swing your body in a forward semi-circle. Repeat, but start by bending first to the left, then the semi-circle. Alternate from then on, doing each five times.

To misquote the old adage might be effective, so we will conclude by saying "Practice makes limber and coordinated muscles."

In the upper left picture, Mary Howard enlists the aid of her specially designed exercising apparatus to demonstrate this exercise which is excellent for stretching, strengthening and limbering the whole body.

Jean Chabrun (right) is seen taking physical instruction from Don Loomis. Mr. Loomis steps behind Miss Chabrun and raises her hands above her head, stretching them as much as possible which stretches the arm and back muscles and strengthens them.

George Hickox, Iowa Alumnus, Visits Campus

George H. Hickox, who is in charge of the hydraulics laboratory of the Tennessee Valley Authority at Norris, Tenn., was a visitor at the hydraulics laboratory and on the campus yesterday.

He is an alumnus of the University of Iowa, having received his M.S. degree here in 1926. He is the co-author of a book "Applied Fluid Mechanics" which was recently published by McGraw Hill.

Mrs. Ingram Will Entertain

Dr. J. F. Shirley To Talk to Child Conservation Club

"Building Self Confidence in Children" will be the subject of an address to be given by Dr. H. F. Shirley at the meeting of the Child Conservation Club Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 p.m. Mrs. W. R. Ingram, 122 Grand avenue court, is to be hostess to the group.

This meeting will be the club's annual guest day. As this is the only meeting during the year to which outsiders are invited, each member may bring a visitor.

Assistant hostesses are Mrs. Walter Daykin, Mrs. E. G. Gross, Mrs. S. J. Davis and Mrs. H. M. Hines.

During the afternoon there will be special music on the program. Mrs. Davis is in charge.

Mrs. Mitchell Passes Away

Former Ottumwa Resident Lived Here For Two Months

Mrs. Jesse E. Mitchell, 73, passed away at her home, 620 N. Lin street, at 2:45 p.m. yesterday. Death was sudden, although Mrs. Mitchell had been in poor health for six months.

She was born on a farm near Savannah, Ill., Jan. 10, 1865, coming to Iowa when a child. She lived at Marion for a time, and then moved to Ottumwa where she lived for 35 years. The family moved to Iowa City last September.

Mrs. Mitchell was married in 1887 to Charles D. Mitchell. He wrote the news of the university and was a member of the Congregational church and Order of Eastern Star at Ottumwa. She was a past president of the Grand International Auxiliary of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

She is survived by her husband, one daughter, Mrs. Emil Boland of Iowa City; three sons, James W. and Charles E., both of Seattle, Wash., and Wayne E. of Ottumwa. Three grandchildren also survive.

Funeral services, which have not been arranged, will be in Ottumwa. The body is at the Oat-hout funeral home.

Works of American Artists On Exhibition at Art Building

Fine Reproductions In Colors Feature Contemporary Art

Twelve American artists are represented in a new exhibition of color reproductions which opened at the fine arts building Thursday. Those included are Adolf Dehn — "Minnesota Farm"; John Whorf — "Beach-combers"; Grant Wood — "Woman with Plant"; Millard Sheets — "Toilers at Sunset"; Keon Kroll — "The Willows"; Robert Brackman — "Study—Morning Interlude"; Lucile Blanch — "Spring Flowers"; Raphael Sayer — "Morning Tempo"; Thomas Benton — "Cotton Pickers—Ga."; Luigi Lucien — "Sunlit Patterns".

The group offers a fine cross-section of contemporary American painting in various parts of the country. Millard Sheets from California, Grant Wood from Iowa, Thomas Benton from Missouri, John Whorf from Massachusetts, and John Costigan from New York contribute to its national character.

In reviewing the exhibition, which comes from the Associated American Artists, "Time" this week carried the following comment:

"This week the expansion of A.A.A. made news to an art public which has watched the course of color reproduction in the United States with critical reserve.

"On sale in 101 United States cities and by mail order, went a portfolio of 12 big color prints of water colors, pastels and oils by A.A.A. artists. Nine of the 12 were the exact size of the original. "The reproductions, the product of several years' research by Edward Stern and company, Inc., of Philadelphia, appeared to be the richest and most faithful yet turned out in the United States for popularity. Grant Wood's Woman with Plant, which impressed the artist, is better than the original oil."

Hiking Club Meeting Will Be Led By Prof., Mrs. Baird

Prof. and Mrs. A. Craig Baird, 200 Person avenue, will be the leaders for the Monday meeting of the Hiking club. The group will meet at 5 p.m. at Iowa Union and there will be the usual gathering at the Union for dinner after the hike.

Special Agents Continue With WPA Query

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Oct. 21 (AP)—Special agents of the criminal investigation division of the WPA carried ahead today the investigation into state WPA activities culminated yesterday in wholesale indictments by a federal grand jury.

Everett Grantham, United States district attorney, who directed the grand jury in its statewide inquiry, said five investigators were continuing in the field and indicated additional developments would be forthcoming in the federal court term starting December 1.

Stanley W. P. Miller, assistant United States district attorney, among 73 persons of varying political and WPA rank indicted for conspiracy to use the WPA for political purposes, was relieved today of duty as a federal attorney.

A general reorganization of the state WPA was in progress, meanwhile.

WPA investigators, it became generally known today, have been quietly gathering evidence for the grand jury since it was charged with the investigation September 7.

Nino Martini Will Open University Concert Course Wednesday

"I'll Stick to Opera—"

Noted Artists Will Feature 1938 Season

Outstanding Tenor Of Opera, Radio To Appear at Union

The 1938-39 concert course will open Wednesday, when Nino Martini, outstanding tenor of stage, screen and radio, comes to Iowa Union as the opening attraction — an attraction that the concert course committee has tried for several years to arrange. The concert will begin at 8 p.m.

Martini was listed by Variety magazine in June as the leading concert box-office draw for 1938.

Having begun his vocal career in his home town, as a choir-boy in Verona's historic Church of San Fermo, at 18 Martini had never sung except in his own town, and various nearby cities.

After singing for several years in Verona, Martini was heard by the impresario of a Milan opera company, and was invited to give an audition. When Martini stood before his auditors, Gino Marinuzzi and Ettore Panizza, he volunteered to sing arias from the opera, "I Puritani" in its natural key. He hits his high notes with the greatest of ease.

The auditors flung up their hands in fright. "Don't try it!" they said incredulously. "It will break your vocal cords."

His debut, however, was so sensational that he sang the role 16 times. A concert tour through Europe followed.

During the tour he was heard by Jesse Lasky, the famous Hollywood producer, who invited him to come to America. There, combined with his appearances at the Metropolitan opera company, on radio and on the concert stage, he made several outstanding pictures, among them "The Gay Desperado."

Martini has been re-engaged for concert performances for the sixth consecutive year in Washington, D. C., and for the fourth consecutive year in Toronto and Montreal. He has appeared on the concert stage in all parts of the United States.

When Martini appears here Wednesday, Miguel Sandoval will accompany his concert on the piano. Martini's concert follows: Tu lo sai Terelli Le Violette A. Scarlatti Il mio Tesoro, from "Don Giovanni" Mozart

Martini Melody Gluck - Sgambati Gavotte and Musette E. Trucco Mr. Sandoval Sagesse E. Panizza Chevauchee Cosaque Foudrain Je Crois Entendre Encore, from "Les Pêcheurs des Perles" Bizet

Martini Intermission Racconte di Rodolfo, from "La Boheme" Puccini Blue Are Her Eyes Wintter Watts I Come To You Sandoval The Floods of Spring Rachmaninoff

Martini Andante Spianato Opus 22 Chopin Grande Polonaise Brillante Mr. Sandoval Quisiera Olvidar tus Ojos Albeniz-Sandoval Princesita Padilla El Trust de los Tenorios Serrano

Concert course tickets are available at the office of Prof. Charles B. Righter, chairman, in room 15, music studio building. Tickets are available for single performances and for the entire course, by general admission or reserved seats.

Other artists who will appear this year are Vronsky and Babin, world-famed double piano team; Robert Virova, the finest of the young violinists; the famous St. Louis symphony orchestra and Josephine Antoine, young American coloratura soprano of the Metropolitan opera company.

Visitors to Luther's city of Wittenburg in Germany today may see the famous, theses that he nailed on the church door in 1517. The present doors are of metal and the text of his protest is deeply inscribed in the metal.

"I'll stick to opera!" That's what Nino Martini, famous star of stage, screen and radio, assured Alvero Georgetti after watching the dizzy whirl of pedalists at New York's six-day bicycle race in which Georgetti, right, was a consistent leader. Martini will open the 1938-39 concert course series here Wednesday when he appears at 8 p.m. in Iowa Union. Listed as 1938's leading boxoffice attraction, Martini came to America from his native Italy in 1929, after having been contracted there by Jesse L. Lasky, the famous Hollywood showman. Martini is the first of a complete list of outstanding artists who will appear here during the year.

Offer $1,000 In Confederacy Essay Contest

Contest Sponsored By United Daughters Of The Confederacy

The United Daughters of the Confederacy will offer biennially, the Mrs. Simon Baruch university prize of $1,000 for the best monograph or essay of high merit in the field of southern history.

The contest is open to undergraduate or graduate students of universities and standard colleges in the United States and is limited to those who shall have been students in such institutions within the preceding three calendar years. Proof of eligibility must be submitted with the manuscript. The manuscript must be unpublished and any phase of life or policy may be treated. If no essay of high merit shall be submitted in any competition, the prize will not be awarded for that year.

As the contest is held for the purpose of encouraging research in the history of the south, the essay should be preferably in or near the period of the Confederacy or bearing on the causes that led to the war between the states.

Essays must be in scholarly form and must be based, partly at least, upon the use of source materials. Important statements are to be accompanied with citations of the sources from which the data have been drawn and a bibliography should be appended.

Essays should not comprise more than 10,000 words. Effectiveness of research, originality of thought, accuracy of statement and excellence of style will be considered in making the award.

The prize will be paid in two installments of $500 each, the first at the time of the award and the second when the manuscript is printed. This arrangement is intended to promote the printing of the essay in substantial permanent form. If the printing is not done within two years from the time of the award, the second installment will be forfeited.

The next competition will close May 1, 1940 and before that time all essays must be in the hands of the chairman, Mrs. Livingston Rowe Schuyler, 520 West 114th street, New York. The award will be announced at the convention the following November.

Iowa State Favored Over Kansas in Big Six Clash

Protect Undefeated Slate in Battle; Experience Factor

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 21 (AP)—The stages were set tonight, but they still were having trouble with the casting for Big Six football games tomorrow at Ames, and Norman, Okla., none of the teams will take the role of stogie.

Iowa State meets Kansas at Ames and Oklahoma plays Nebraska at Norman, and the undefeated records of the host teams, as well as the prospects of bang-up ball games, were expected to lure a capacity crowd of 17,000 to the Ames gridiron and a record crowd of 30,000 to Norman.

Iowa State's smooth, experienced eleven rated a marked edge over the Kansas, who last week lost to Oklahoma, 19-0. The Oklahoma powerhouse also is given an edge over Nebraska, but the edge is not so marked.

The Iowans have defeated Nebraska and Missouri in the conference. Kansas lost to Oklahoma in its only loop start which incidentally was Oklahoma's only conference game.

The Sooner rating, however, is based primarily on its victory over Rice. Nebraska lost to a potent Minnesota team, and after the Huskers' defeat by Iowa State, they came back to tie a good Indiana team. Considering that on the whole the Nebraska opposition has been tougher than that of Oklahoma, and that the steadily improving Huskers had a statistical edge over both Iowa State and Indiana, Oklahoma's work appears to be cut out for it.

An Oklahoma victory virtually would eliminate the Huskers, perennial champions, from title considerations and would put the Sooners on the inside track. A Nebraska victory, however, would further scramble a situation already well churned and, in event of an Iowa State victory over Kansas, would put the spotlight on the Cyclones and the still very active Kansas State machine.

Big Ten In Crucial Tilts In Conference

Badgers, Purdue In Title Tilt On Boilers' Grid

CHICAGO, Oct. 21 (AP)—Minnesota's Golden Gophers, with an open date tomorrow, will keep a sharp eye on the day's western conference football program and may see developments which might measurably brighten their Big Ten championship hopes.

The Gophers already have defeated Purdue and Michigan and have to play Northwestern, Iowa and Wisconsin. Both Northwestern and Wisconsin engage in important Big Ten skirmishes tomorrow and the outcome of those games will have definite bearings on Minnesota's title chances.

Wisconsin, holding a victory over Iowa, goes against Purdue at Lafayette. Victory for the Purdue eleven would dampen the high Badger hopes. At the same time, Northwestern will battle Illinois at Champaign in a game testing two title contenders.

Illinois has downed Indiana in its only conference start, with Northwestern showing a tie with Ohio State on its Big Ten ledger. A week from tomorrow Minnesota tangles with Northwestern—the Big Ten team accorded the best chance of stopping Bernie Bierman's aggregation. Northwestern, with a lineup of veterans, will be favored over Illinois.

Ohio State entertains Chicago's Red Raiders favored to take Iowa's measure at Iowa City. Indiana plays host to Kansas State and Michigan's strong Wolverines do inter-sectional battle with Yale at New Haven. After losing to Minnesota by one point, the Wolverines may take it out on the Elis.

Hoosiers Play Kansas State In Home Tilt

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Oct. 21 (AP)—Alvin Nugent McMillin will trot out his crippled sophomores tomorrow afternoon for a tilt, first home game of the season, with a heavy Kansas State eleven which carries a reputation of blasting hard-charging linesmen out of the stadium.

A Homecoming crowd of 20,000, including Boy Scout troops from all parts of the state, is expected to witness the game.

Washington World

By CHARLES F. STEWART

WASHINGTON—Tom Mooney's case is reminiscent of one I was familiar with in London, when I was an American news correspondent there years ago. The English police have a great reputation for catching murderers, English courts for convicting them and English hangmen for stringing them up. They have been greatly praised for their efficiency. They're proud of their record for never being muffed off by technicalities, as sometimes we are here. However, at the time I mention, there had been an irritating succession of murders in London's East End, which the police had fallen down on. They were being bitterly criticized for having done so. Then there was another murder. The bobbies couldn't stand it any longer. They scooped in a suspect, one Stinie Morrison. He looked promising, for he was an ex-convict—a tough mug, to begin with.

At his trial the testimony was all what's known as "police testimony." In the midst of it one of the police witnesses broke down. He confessed that Morrison was being framed to maintain Scotland Yard's reputation; he gagged at helping to send an innocent man to the gallows. Thereupon all the rest of the witnesses admitted the same thing. The whole prosecution collapsed.

And Then What?
As an ignorant foreigner, I thought the court would turn Stinie loose.

Not so. The case went to the jury, which convicted him and he was sentenced to be hanged.

This caused a holler, even in England. It was so loud a holler that the Home Office, which has jurisdiction over such situations there, had to notice it. Did it free Stinie? Oh, no. It commuted his sentence to life imprisonment, and finally he died in Dartmoor or some other penitentiary.

The theory was that, having been a suitable person to hang, he ought to have been thankful to have his life given to him at all.

He wasn't guilty but the ruling powers wished he had been. Now, Tom Mooney, a couple of decades ago, was a labor agitator—a California pest to certain interests.

Somebody chucked a bomb into a Preparedness Day parade in San Francisco in 1916, and there were several fatalities. Mooney seemed an appropriate person to hold responsible, and he was.

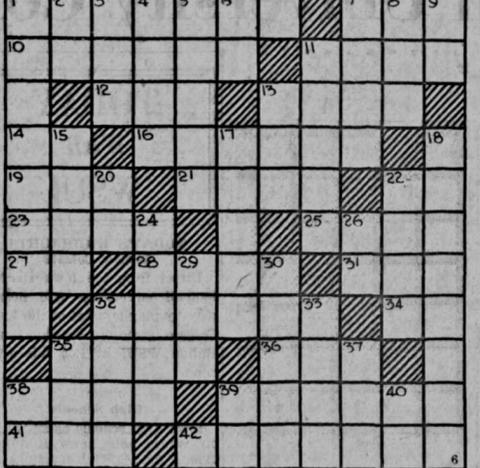

Convicted, like Stinie Morrison, he was sentenced to be hanged. The evidence against him did not manifest itself, as in Stinie's case, in the actual course of the trial, but it very early began to look flimsy—so much so that President Wilson exercised his influence. Result—Tom, like Stinie, got a commutation to life imprisonment.

In short, the conclusion was that he wasn't guilty, but he ought to get life anyway.

Such evidence as there was presently frazzled out utterly.

Witnesses against Tom owned that they had perjured themselves. The trial judge deposed that there in the dramatic arts department, has adapted the play for University theater's use.

Straight off Broadway is "Johnny Johnson" by Paul Green. It is an anti-war play, but is treated in a satirical vein, and critics describe it as "ferociously funny."

Johnny Johnson is an ordinary man who volunteers in the World war to "save the world for democracy." Once he reaches the war zone, however, he treats with the enemy as man to man and once nearly stops the war. To guard against any such possibility, Johnny is sent to a hospital for the insane.

The series' most important play is "Saint Joan" by George Bernard Shaw, who departs from his frequent satire to tell the dramatic story of Joan of Arc. He traces the career of the Maid of Orleans from her first contact with the leaders of France until her canonization as a saint several hundred years later. "Saint Joan" was presented by University theater 14 years ago. "The Rose of the Rancho," written by David Belasco and Richard Walton Tully, is a colorful, romantic story laid in old California. It relates the love story of Juanita, a daughter of the Spanish aristocracy, and Kearney, an American government agent.

As a background for the action is the conflict between the old Spanish settlers and the American "land jumpers" who try to take the land away from the Spaniards just after the United States acquired California. Season tickets are now on sale for the entire series. Students who wish to sell tickets on commission may apply at Room 8-A, Schaeffer hall.

AFRAID TO MARRY

HELEN WELSHIMER

CHAPTER 47
SUNDAY AFTERNOON Judy went to tea at her father's penthouse. Sarita had telephoned inviting her. Ordinarily she would have given an excuse. Today she wanted to go.

Brushing her hair, Judy admitted to the candid eyes in her dressing table mirror that she had a reason. Somebody might have news of Ronald and the law firm. In the excitement of seeing him the night before, she had forgotten to ask him the outcome of his resignation. He had not offered the information. But of course the resignation would be rejected.

And yet—the proud old legal firm hated publicity. It did not deal with sensationalism. Its clients were solid, reputable houses with a dislike for notoriety.

The long drawing room at the penthouse had not changed. The tea table with its silver stood near the white fireplace. Sarita, in a red dress, sat on a white leather chair, as she poured tea. All that was part of yesterday.

Judy felt strange and formal. Six months ago this was home. Her own room had been down the hall. She wondered how it looked with her possessions removed from it. She slipped away to the room.

Sarita had refreshed it, copying her bookshelves, tables, lamps, chairs, even the bed, as closely as possible. If her own prints had been there Judy could have believed she had stepped over the threshold to yesterday.

"Your father did it," Judy did not know Sarita had followed her until her stepmother spoke at her shoulder.

"My father?"

"He still believes that some day you will come home. When you do, he wants everything waiting for you just as it was."

"No one uses it now?" Judy asked.

"No one, my darling! It's your room."

Judy went to the chest of drawers, opened the top one.

"Why, Sarita!" she exclaimed. There were piles of cobwebby underthings in it.

Sarita smiled. "I did that, Judy. You'll need things, you know!"

Judy laughed, half provoked. "You're a pair of darlings and I love you both for it, but don't you believe I can take care of myself? I'm doing it—I'm saving money every week."

Yet she was touched. Her father did want her. He had not banned her in his heart or he would not have made ready for her when she would choose to return. Sarita was kind, too.

When Sarita and Judy returned to the drawing room they found more guests. Mr. Heaton and Mrs. Heaton were there. They greeted Judy warmly.

At the first opportunity she spoke to Mr. Heaton. "Have you seen Ronald?"

The man put down his tea cup. "No, I haven't, and I've been trying everywhere to reach him. Can you help me?"

"I saw him last night. If his apartment doesn't answer, I would not know where he is."

Around them voices rose, fell, punctuated with laughter. Life followed a casual pattern, gay and charming. It had returned to its former routine.

Yet Judy sat apart, having no interest in the scene except as the lawyer's words concerned Ronald.

"We didn't accept the boy's resignation," Mr. Heaton continued. "The young fool doesn't know it. Can't reach him to tell him so?"

The attorney chuckled. "I've sent him two telegrams—no reply to either of them. I think I'll have to send out a search warrant so I can apologize and congratulate him."

"Mr. Heaton, you're splendid!" Judy exclaimed, not knowing her eyes were stary, her voice tremulous.

The lawyer patted her hand as he rose to move away. "The lad's real stuff, Judy. Stick to him."

When the girl looked into the lawyer's face, startled wonder on her own, the man sat down again.

"Ronald is dependable, Judy. Especially as husband material. I never would have known that it was his innate chivalry in helping Miss Boland that got him into this trouble of his own if I had depended on getting the reason from him."

Mr. Boland explained to me. He's sorry about it all—but he thinks Ronald would be an asset as a son-in-law."

Judy nodded mutely.

"What do you think about Abbey and Ronald?" the man asked her almost sharply.

"I hope they'll be happy," Judy said, and wandered off to join the group by the tea table.

It was no use consoling herself with the erroneous idea that loyalty alone had held Ronald to Abbey. An engagement was an engagement, and while the glittering Abbey might not want Ronald as a husband, she would retain him as a fiance until she found another count, prince, duke, heir to a soap flakes fortune, or someone else with some kind of a publicity bid.

As for herself, she had her work. She would give her time to it, and become so successful that some day people would wear gowns by Judy Rogers. They would not be gowns designed merely for the debutantes and dowagers who wrote checks with careless hands. They would be simple, attractive, and in a price range low enough that Coralee and her friends could afford some of them.

She gave herself up to the dream, there in the firelight, scarcely knowing when someone asked her a question, and she embroidered the edge of the conversation with an unimportant word in answer.

Mr. Heaton, hat in hand, strolled back from the library.

"I located the young scallawag. He's on his way into town. Been out at the Bolands! Abbey wanted to stage some kind of shindig in celebration of truth prevailing and I take it he walked out. But the party's still on the books. I'm going to his apartment to waylay him now."

Judy got her hat and coat and pocketbook, thanked her stepmother for the tea, and started home. She decided to walk for awhile. Fifth avenue was cold and bare and the clothes for the Florida resorts and cruises to Bermuda had been removed from the windows of the shops. Some were presenting the more sedate things for early spring. Other windows were covered with canvas or silk—prepared them. A raw wind was blowing. She hailed a taxicab and leaned against the slippery leather cushions while it raced down Fifth avenue, green lights with it.

She must remember that all that mattered was to build your own life securely, on a firm basis of accomplishment. Then winds might blow, waters rise, floods come, and lesser houses go to sea, but you would stand, strong as a citadel on a rocky hill.

Work—it stayed by you. But could it comfort you forever and forever?

She sat up and dabbed at her eyes with a scrap of lace.

"Judy Rogers, snap out of it! You don't want a man who doesn't want you! You don't want anyone! You've been so afraid of marriage. Don't be forgetting!"

She turned the radio low in her apartment, and piled wood on the fire while a swing band, far away, gathered its music and sent it over the world. She had discarded program after program until she found something as impersonal as swing. Today she would be gay. Why were Sunday programs so fraught with sentiment?

She slipped into some velvet lounging pajamas that were the warm brown of her hair, and found their matching mules. She had not worn them for a long time. She turned on a lamp and sat down to read the Sunday papers.

At twelve o'clock Ronald had not called. She admitted to herself, then, that she had been waiting for his voice on the telephone or speaking through the tube above her doorbell ever since Mr. Heaton had telephoned the Boland estate and been told that Ronald was leaving.

She was an undulated, simple fool!

She repeated the words with more vehemence when she saw the morning newspapers. Was she always to get her news of Ronald from the press—always to catch her breath at his name leaping out in scary black letters?

Mayor Gives Proclamation Citizens Urged To Join in Navy Day Observance, Oct. 27

With the eyes of the world focused on land and sea forces of major powers distributed by the turbulence of dictatorial policies, Mayor Myron J. Walker, retired lieutenant commander of the United States navy, yesterday officially proclaimed the observance of Navy Day for Iowa City.

"Whereas, Thursday, the 27th day of October, 1933, is the anniversary of the adoption by the Continental congress of the act providing for the construction of the first United States men-of-war, and the anniversary of the birthday of Theodore Roosevelt, and marks the sixteenth anniversary of the observance of Navy Day; and

"Whereas, at the present time, great unrest and almost universal distrust exist among nations of the world outside of America, it behooves the United States of America to maintain a national defense adequate to meet any exigency; and

"Whereas, the history of our navy records and unswerving loyalty and devotion to the interests of our country; and

"Whereas, the history of our country shows that the United States has been drawn into war only at times when the navy had been weakened by 'starvation' appropriations and support;

"Now, Therefore, All citizens should give serious thought to the plan of action, which will adequately maintain our 'First Line of Defense' and prevent the lapsing of our strongest 'Peace Insurance Policy', in keeping with this thought, it is requested that the national colors be displayed in all public buildings, homes and places of business from 8 a.m. to sunset on Thursday, the 27th day of October, 1933.

"I, THEREFORE PROCLAIM Thursday, the 27th day of October, 1933, as Navy Day, and it is urged that our citizens, public schools, patriotic and civic organizations, and churches join in this national observance day by devoting a part of the day to honoring our navy and the memory of Theodore Roosevelt.

"Given under my hand and seal of the City of Iowa City, Iowa, this 21st day of October, 1933."

AROUND THE TOWN

With MERLE MILLER

Forty-Five Miles To Be Sub-Titled, 'A Beginning in College Education'

The girl, who had bright, over-red lips and who was smoking too numerous cigarets, was reading a magazine when the boy who now sat across the aisle got on the train. . . The magazine was a Cosmopolitan, and she was not reading it really—having finished the Faith Baldwin serial.

Therefore she had been aware of the tall, gangling boy who had come in carrying two suit-cases and a brief-case. . . He was, the girl decided, not bad. . . Not handsome exactly, certainly not sophisticated, too young (She herself was 18, and he could not have been more than 17)—but cute. . . Curly black hair and a straight, almost Roman nose. . .

So, soon after the boy seated himself, the girl, who was experienced in such matters (She being a member of one of the best sororities), chose just at that moment to turn toward the boy's window. . . She took a deep breath of air and then looked at the boy.

"I wonder," she cooed, "if you'd mind throwing out my cigaret? My window won't open."

The boy, who was evidently shy, blushed deeply. . . "Oh, no," he replied. . . "I'd be delighted. . ."

He took the cigaret, the end of which was very red and hurled it through the window.

"Nice breeze," he said to the girl, conversationally. . .

"Yes," she replied. "Isn't it? . . . There was a brief pause. . . My window won't open, you see. We tried."

The boy looked at her quickly again, closely this time. . . "I wonder," he began. . . "I mean, well, you'll probably think I'm very bold; but would you like to sit over here, in my seat I mean. There's a nice breeze."

"Sure," the girl said. "I'd like to."

"Cigaret?" she offered, opening her silver case as she joined him.

"No," he replied, hesitating. . . "No thanks."

"Well," she said, flicking the lighter on the opposite end of the case it's a good idea. You're not supposed to smoke in here."

"I think," she then continued, blowing clouds of smoke out of her nose, "that we're going to the same place. . . The state university. . . Am I right? . . ."

"Yes," he smiled. "That's where I'm going. How'd 'you know?"

"There are ways," she said. "And you're a freshman too. . . Only a freshman takes a typewriter to school anyway, and only a freshman needs a brief case after he gets there. That's one of the first things you'll learn. I know, I'm going back."

"Senior?"

"Don't I wish it. No, sophomore."

"Well," he said heartily, "I can hardly wait. I guess it'll be a lot different from my home town in lots of ways, bigger, I mean, and—different."

"Sure," she puffed. . . "Where are you going to stay while you're at school?"

"They've asked me to stay at the fraternity house this week. House guest."

"Going to pledge a fraternity?"

"Well," he said. . . "They haven't asked me yet, not exactly. . . But I guess they'll ask me to pledge the Jewish fraternity."

"Oh," said the girl, and softly. "Oh. . . And then for just a second she said nothing at all, and the boy wondered if anything were wrong."

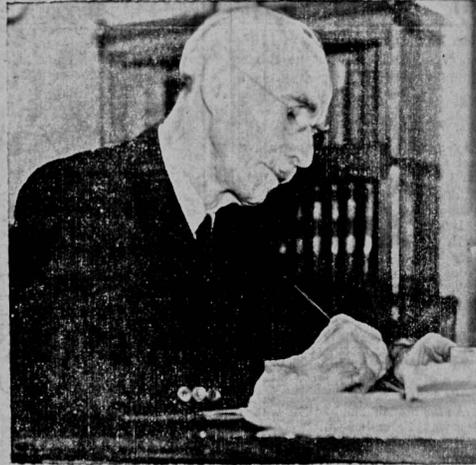

Then she laughed prettily. . . "Would you excuse me?" she asked. . . "I want to get a drink of water and powder my nose."

As she got up she picked up her Cosmopolitan and the silver cigaret case from the seat and threw them, as she passed, on her own seat across the aisle. . .

The boy, who was Jewish, wondered if she would return. . . He knew, somehow, that she wouldn't.

The train just then was pulling according to Roscoe E. Taylor, general director.

The public schools division, headed by F. S. Orr, is the first to have completed solicitations, that group contributing $388.50, or 86 per cent of their $450 goal. Last year this division, having the same goal, came within $3.75 of the mark.

A certificate of loyalty has been awarded to the First Capital National Bank, employees of the organization being 100 per cent in their subscription to the chest. It has also been reported that all fraternities, sororities and housemothers have pledged in full.

Police to Escort Youngsters In Hallowe'en Loop Parade

Youngsters of Iowa City will officially celebrate Hallowe'en Monday evening, Oct. 31, by participating in a police escorted costume parade through the business district to the university fieldhouse. After arrival at the fieldhouse the children will take part in a game frolic.

These plans were announced yesterday by M. Eugene Trowbridge, general chairman of the frolic committee.

The party plans are taking form under the sponsorship of the city's youth organizations and the local chamber of commerce.

Following the parade the costumes will be judged, prizes and ribbons awarded, and the game frolic held under the supervision of game leaders from the women's physical education department of the university.

Other members of the committee, besides Trowbridge, include Ruth Sumner, girl scout director; Owen B. Thiel, boy scout director; Miriam Taylor, instructor in the women's physical education department of the university, and Charles A. Bowman, chamber of commerce secretary.

Use of the fieldhouse armory has been arranged through the cooperation of Col. G. F. N. Dailey.

The various classes in which costumes will be judged include the following:

1. Best decorated or costumed bicycle and rider combination.
2. Best impersonation of a historical, story book or theatrical character.
3. Best witch, ghost, cat, owl or similar Hallowe'en symbol.
4. Best hobo, pirate or scarecrow.
5. Best comic strip characterization or clown.
6. Best costume representing a local business organization.
7. Best couple or group impersonation of famous characters taken from life or fiction (four-person limit).
