Two Years College Training Required For Bar Admission

Iowa Supreme Court Adopts Strong Rules

Changes Requested By Bar Association, Board of Examiners

DES MOINES, Dec. 12 (AP)—The Iowa supreme court today adopted new rules requiring at least two years of college training for candidates seeking admission to the Iowa bar and otherwise tightened regulations for admission to the practice of law in the state.

The rules were requested by the Iowa State Bar association, the state board of law examiners and by Atty. Gen. John M. Mitchell.

It was reported that the supreme court had adopted the changes exactly as proposed about a week ago and Attorney General Mitchell said he was "very much pleased" by the court's action.

Adopts Other Changes

In addition to requiring that a candidate for the bar show that he has studied two years in a reputable college or university before commencing the study of law—instead of the present rule requiring only a high school education—the supreme court adopted the following other rules:

1. Strict restriction of the allowance of credit given for study pursued in private law offices, ruling out all credit for law study carried on by correspondence or privately outside a law office.

2. Provision for waiting periods following the written bar examinations to enable the board of law examiners to devote adequate time to the review of examination papers. This waiting period will be from six to eight weeks.

Raises Fees

4. General raising of application fees for candidates seeking admission to the bar, including attorneys from other states seeking admission to the Iowa bar, to finance more comprehensive investigation of their qualifications.

The increase for Iowans will be from $5 to $20 and from $10 to $40 for lawyers from other states. The latter will have to have five years practice within the last five instead of only one year as now required.

5. A limitation on the number of times a person can take the state bar examination and provision for a year's waiting period for those desiring to take the examination again after failing. There is no limit now on the number of times one can take the test. The new limit will be three.

The new rules will go into effect Jan. 1. They do not affect in any way persons now members of the Iowa bar.

In asking the changes, the petitioners to the supreme court declared there had been virtually no change in the rules and regulations for approximately 30 years and that Iowa's standards were below those of most other states.

Judge Weighs Cases of Mail Order Houses

DES MOINES, Dec. 12 (AP)—Lawsuits of two large mail order houses to restrain the state from cancelling their licenses to do business in Iowa because of their alleged failure to collect the two per cent use (sales) tax were being considered by District Judge John J. Halloran tonight.

Attorneys for the state and Sears, Roebuck & Co. concluded their arguments in the injunction suit against the state this afternoon. Evidence and arguments in a similar suit by Montgomery Ward & Co. were heard several weeks ago and the judge took the case under advisement until he heard the Sears case.

Evidence in the Sears matter was submitted on stipulation by the state and company attorneys, from the record made in U.S. district court here. The Sears case was first heard there because of the interstate nature of the company's business.

It Ain't Funny

Geo. Burns Indicted On Nine Counts In Jewelry Smuggling

NEW YORK, Dec. 12 (AP)—George Burns, whose air of reigned indignation at the cheerful grotesqueries of "Gracie" Allen and the "straight man" to her characterization of a vague and "dumb" female, was released immediately without bond.

Burns, the husband of Miss Allen and the "straight man" to her characterization of a vague and "dumb" female, was released immediately without bond.

Government counsel said he was subject to possible maximum penalties of 18 years imprisonment and fines totaling $45,000 under the nine counts in two indictments against him, despite the fact that the offenses were defined in the statute as misdemeanors.

Against United States Attorney Joseph V. Delaney asked consideration for the comedian because he had cooperated with the government in a broad investigation of smuggling which began with a raid late in October on the Park Avenue apartment of Mrs. Edgar Lauer, wife of a state supreme court justice, by treasury agents in search of smuggled Parisian knick-knacks and finery.

Burns, who appeared in a dark suit, red scarf and white shirt, declined to say whether he would testify for the prosecution against his accused co-defendants, Albert N. Chaperau, the "mystery man" of the whole affair, and a woman known variously as Paula Gheyskens, Paula Mahoney and Paula Chaperau. She was named by one.

Specifically, Burns was indicted for the smuggling of two bracelets and a ring, valued by the government at $4,885.

Chaperau, who has described himself as a commercial agent for the Nicaraguan consulate-general here, has been pictured by the government as the actual carrier of smuggled goods, escaping customs examination through diplomatic courtesy, and investigators have obtained a long list of men and women prominent in the entertainment world who were among his supposed acquaintances.

Plans Art Bill

Damrosch Suggests Federal Bureau

NEW YORK, Dec. 12 (AP)—Walter Damrosch has evolved still another plan for a federal bureau of the fine arts, and has incorporated his suggestions into a bill to be presented to the next congress. His aid has been N. Henry Josephs, the attorney who acted as counsel against the real Pepper-Coffee bills at a senate subcommittee hearing.

The bill has no connection with relief, Dr. Damrosch explained tonight. Neither does it contemplate establishing a federal conservatory of music or a national theater.

A "National Bureau of Fine Arts" would be created, to be administered by a board of 11 unpaid trustees appointed by the president. Nine of these would be directly connected with the arts and not employees of any governmental agency.

These would appoint directors and secretaries, one each for five departments: music, theater and dance, literature, graphic and plastic arts, architecture. The directors would formulate plans for advancing their respective arts, using first existing agencies and advancing farther as money and material became available.

Dr. Damrosch's plan would include such activities, he explained, as subsidizing the really fine orchestras such as the Boston Symphony in shorter seasons in lesser cities; subsidizing such organizations as the Metropolitan Museum of Art, so that in the automobile industry, any manufacturer is virtually free to use any device patented by a competitor.

The occasion was the scheduled arraignment of 40 individual and corporate defendants in the ice cream industry, indicted along with 57 other defendants in the milk industry on Sherman anti-trust act charges.

Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan continued the arraignments until January 16, the date for filing of defense motions.

Leo F. Tierney, special assistant to the attorney general, agreed with defense attorneys who asked for more time but he told Judge Sullivan that the time was not asked "for the purpose of delay or to seek a consent decree," Tierney added.

"The government is not seeking a consent decree, either in this case or in the milk case." His remarks were contained in a prepared statement.

Injuries Fatal

CHICAGO, Dec. 12 (AP)—The government served notice today that it would attempt to send to jail national leaders of the dairy industry charged with monopolistic practices.

The occasion was the scheduled arraignment of 40 individual and corporate defendants in the ice cream industry, indicted along with 57 other defendants in the milk industry on Sherman anti-trust act charges.

Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan continued the arraignments until January 16, the date for filing of defense motions.

"The government is not seeking a consent decree, either in this case or in the milk case." His remarks were contained in a prepared statement.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12 (AP)—Injuries sustained by Donald Lauerman, 21, son of Nick Lauerman, Sioux City, in an automobile accident west of Cherokee early Saturday proved fatal here yesterday.

Without explaining its action, the court refused a board request that it review a decision of the fifth federal circuit court, which set aside a board order requiring reinstatement of the men.

The order had been directed against the Peninsular and Occidental Steamship company.

It was the second setback with as many weeks for the NLRB. The court ruled formally last

Predicts Revolution in U. S. Trotzky Says New Deal Heralds Decay Of Capitalism; No Cure Seen

TUCSON, Ariz., Dec. 12 (AP)—Leon Trotsky, exiled Russian revolutionary, in an interview released here tonight described the new deal as not revolutionary but as "a program of mere palliatives seeking to cure a badly diseased body."

Trotzky, interviewed in his guarded villa near Mexico City, by William R. Mathews, publisher of the Arizona Daily Star of Tucson, said the new deal program "represents the culmination of the final contradictions in the decay and fall of capitalism."

"It will, of course, fail, because it is doing nothing to cure the causes of the disease," the one-time head of the Soviet war machine declared.

"Capitalism has reached its zenith in America and has exhausted itself. It is now living on its savings, consuming its own fat. Look at your unemployed. No form of society can continue long that permits such conditions to exist. You are doing nothing to increase wealth."

Trotzky asserted that the "democracy of capitalism is finished."

"Look at France, where it is making dying gashes," he said.

"Note how Daladier is asking for full powers. That means dictatorship."

He predicted a "terrible revolution" in the United States, and described Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City as a more powerful figure than President Roosevelt and as the symbol of American political reaction. The Rockefellers, he said, symbolize this nation's ruling class.

"You will have a revolution, a terrible revolution," the famed exile told Mathews. "What course it takes will depend much on what Mr. Rockefeller tells Mr. Hague to do. Mr. Rockefeller is a symbol of the American ruling class, and Mr. Hague is a symbol of its political tools."

But What About The Americans?

PUBLIC spirited individuals in the United States have clamored for a huge spending program to aid the persecuted Jews in Germany. The plans call for the Jews to be transported to the United States where they may start life anew and in a new country, free from the whims of the dictators.

In keeping with our ideals of freedom for all, this extensive program has the support of the country—with the exception of a few individuals who look to the future.

A college senior recently had a letter published condemning this proposal. This young man contended that his parents had come over from Germany of their own volition, that they did not ask government aid in coming over here and that since settling in this country, his parents had worked long and hard to make a place for their family. Now, after struggling to send the son to college for four years, the parents are faced with the task of supporting the son until a job opens up for him.

Now, says the writer, we are opening our arms to people who did not intend to come to this country until Europe became too hot for them—people who are not interested in becoming Americans but are interested rather in saving their own necks.

We are opening our arms and our pocketbooks to these refugees, says this senior, when there are thousands on our relief rolls already, when there are millions of American citizens poorly-housed and poorly clothed, when there are thousands of homes where Christmas food and gifts are just a myth.

America today has too many workers for the jobs available, yet we are opening our doors to more workers.

In spite of the opposition of many Americans, this refugee proposal may be approved, and, says the college man, "next June I may place my name on the waiting lists BEHIND the names of these people we have befriended."

Yes, it is a wonderful thing to befriend the persecuted races in Europe, it is wonderful to aid in the cleaning up of this mess; it is also wise to care for the poor Americans. Conditions in many of the slums in our larger cities are no more pleasant to see than the squalor of the Jews in Germany.

The United States has some moral obligation to look out for the persecuted races of the world; the United States has a greater obligation to care for its own needy citizens first.

'Oh, Yes, He's In Politics'

FRANKLY. WE'RE A little weary of speeches about "saving democracy." Frankly, it seems to us listening to such speeches is, for many of us, our lazy way of getting at some rather fundamental problems.

For one thing, nobody's mentioned politicians much, except to condemn them for being democrats or to ridicule them for being republicans.

And the whole matter is a little disturbing. We happen to think politics one of our most serious problems.

Why? Well, take any graduating class from any large university these days and canvass the career plans of the most brilliant in the group. Not many of them will be planning a life of politics.

This is for several reasons; partly, that it's not worth it financially. Most of us recognize that relatively few men get into the congress of the United States who have not retired after a successful business life or who are not otherwise independently wealthy. They can't afford it otherwise.

But most important, it's the public's general attitude. In England, the most honorable career and the most respected is that of politics. That's the career for young men of the best and most honored traditions; it's also the career for the most brilliant leaders of their classes no matter what their financial background.

In America when a government crisis arises, when a man in public office makes a speech, we too frequently shrug it off. "Just politics," we say.

It's important that the best and most intelligent young men from our schools and colleges should be attracted to government careers; surely nothing could be more necessary. To do that, we've got to spend more money to make such careers financially attractive, but more we must begin to treat government and politicians with respect and good-will.

In both England and America it's possible to hear people say, "oh, yes, he's in politics." But the tone of voice is quite different.

If it's true that Japan has closed the door to China, why not send some Broadway columnists over to find out what's going on?

Letters To The Editor

The opinions expressed in this column do not necessarily represent the opinions of the editor or The Daily Iowan and should not be construed as such.

To the Editor:

Your reprint on Sunday of an editorial from the Daily Princetonian of March 26, 1938 unwittingly spreads misinformation about the selection of Rhodes scholars.

The American secretary of the Rhodes Trust, President Frank Aydelotte of Swarthmore college, could have given the editor exact information on the subject. Still more accurate and authoritative's the following from the general secretary of the Rhodes Trust in London:

"One question has been widely asked: What is meant by the phrase in Mr. Rhodes' will in which he expressed the hope that his scholars would come to esteem the performance of public duties in after life as their highest aim?" Rhodes left no interpretation of the phrase he used in his will. It is certain that he included in its meaning going into political life. It is, however, clear that in the world, and especially overseas, this has become too narrow an interpretation. The whole scope of "public life" has widened since 1900. The relative importance of the politician has declined and that of the journalist, educationalist, financier, and business man has risen. It is suggested that the right interpretation is that Mr. Rhodes, had he been alive, would have hoped that his scholars, where they could not undertake "public duties," would take an active interest in the public questions of their time inasmuch as the tenure of a scholarship obviously qualified them to contribute to their solution on broad and public-spirited lines, and not regard the scholarship as a mere stepping-stone to personal success in a private career. There is, of course, no obligation on a Rhodes scholar to follow any course in his later life. He is presumably the best judge of what he can most usefully do. But most people seem to think that Mr. Rhodes' hope that he would become an active and public-spirited citizen and not one seeking only his personal profit and success is one which is justifiable to present to the beneficiaries under his will."

Mind Plays Part

But few people realize the extent of this relationship. There is no illness in which the mind does not play a part. As a wise physician has said, "the are two things to sickness—one is the sickness itself and the other is what the patient thinks about the sickness." If you can get the patient in the proper mental attitude towards what is the matter with him, you have often won half the battle.

And much of the illness of the world is due to the patient's inability to take proper mental attitude towards his illness. He either thinks it is more serious than it is, or else he thinks it is not as serious as it is.

We have people with all gradations of attitude. There is the woman with a little indigestion that she thinks is cancer of the stomach, which it isn't at all, but her whole life is made miserable by refusing to accept that. On the contrary, we have the man who doesn't think his diabetes is very serious and thinks it doesn't need much treatment. He goes from bad to worse, simply because he returns to recognize the fact that he is really sick.

One of the great adventures of modern medicine is the fact that treatment of these things is undertaken deliberately and consciously instead of haphazardly. The old fashioned doctor with the good bedside manner, whose very presence in the sickroom made you feel better, was unconsciously using psychotherapy and mental hygiene, but since his day those specialties have become scientific and have been put on a rational basis. Their principles are understood and they can be applied consciously for the patient's benefit.

Preventing mental ill health has become a movement with a definite objective for an increasingly large number of informed people. Mental hygiene assumes that mental health and ill health actually exist and can be understood. It assumes that the distress of a personality struggling with an environment is simply a struggle and not a matter of devils and witches, sin or orneriness, nor yet a matter of feeble intellect or feeble will. Mental hygiene further assumes, as Dr. Karl Menninger said, that mental health is attainable and our failure to attain it or retain it is to some extent dependent upon our ignorance of general principles.

AROUND THE TOWN

With MERLE MILLER

HOW ODD OF ODD

(Today's comment, in the manner of the florid and now mourned O. O. McIntyre marks the first of an occasional series of mockings styled after the daily columnists of here and there. Who would be next?)

Iowa City—Diary: Up with a splitting ache in the right thumb and thus for an hour with a book. And Ben Shambaugh, who is working on the history of the historic Old Capitol, lucky man. And came a comic note from the department of physical education inquiring as to my whereabouts on a Wednesday afternoon at 3 p.m. . . . And thus bedded myself for the day . . .

Then over to Smith's eatery and an hour with John O'Hara's college charmer in the just-out New Yorker and thought about O'Hara for some minutes . . . Thus exhausted went to my bed.

Thoughts while strolling: George Haskell should teach economics. Dean Kay has the same first name as George Haskell. George Haskell is a teacher of economics and has a first name like Dean Kay.

A favorite city editor of my boyhood was Merle Miller, who gave me many a byline. I knew him in my youth when I was young.

Personal nomination for the best magician to appear in McBride hall last week—Harlan Tarbell.

There are reputedly five movie theaters in Iowa City. University theater should produce Maurice Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird," which is a play about a bird that is blue.

E. A. Baldwin and W. R. Hart are both attorneys . . . Bagatelles: Robert Virovai plays the fiddle.

And saw Nelson MacDonald and Jeanette Eddy in "Sweethearts" in technicolor. And did at the time remark to someone about the color of Miss McDonald's hair which is reddish in color and very colorful.

Was surprised, delighted, amazed and surprised and delighted to find the magic man Harlan Tarbell remembered well my childhood chum who was once the world's greatest magic man whose name was D. Tommy Downs who lived next door to our humble home in Marshalltown and who frequently pulled coins from my hair because he was known as the King of Koins.

Health Hints

By Logan Clendenning, M. D.

We have been reviewing in the past few weeks the nervous system and the six senses. It is appropriate to go from that subject to discuss what that part of the nervous system which we call the mind can do to influence the body in sickness and in health.

Everybody must know instances of such an effect. In fact, our common speech is full of phrases which indicate such relationships—some sort of a sight made a person "sick at his stomach"; some emotion "broke my heart"; the mental processes of pity turned his bowels to water."

Mind Plays Part

But few people realize the extent of this relationship. There is no illness in which the mind does not play a part. ## TUNING IN

By Loren Hickerson

KATE SMITH . . . and Sinew L. Riley, a full-blooded Apache, who is one of the last of the United States army's Indian scouts, will share spotlight honor when both are guests of Gabriel Heatter on "We, the People" over the Columbia network at 8 o'clock tonight.

Kate Smith will explain her interest in "God Save America," the new Irving Berlin composition which the latter hopes will be generally accepted as a national anthem, and which Kate has sung on repeated requests on her program.

Alack and alack and alack! Now Marshalltown is but a shadow of its former self, and D. Tommy Downs is far from us earthlings.

Yet we knew him when he had scarcely a pocket penny. Alack!

Look-alikes: Dean Phillips of the college of commerce and Chester Phillips.

Did silently chide the November, 1938, for placing Poet Paul Engle (who writes verse) in Iowa City, when everyone knows he is an Iowa City resident.

And a comic note in the mail from the cleaner's asking if I could make an early call . . . Must remind myself to make a jotting in my notebook.

Some of my happiest hours have been spent watching the 40-cent movies of my youth . . . And so bedded myself for the night.

A spitting of snow and sleet in the air . . .

And while walking did recall that George Haskell has a first name like that of Dean Kay and that Chester Phillips is a perfect double for Dean Phillips of the college of commerce.

Jottings: The Daily Iowan where I labored as a youth, was then located on North Dubuque street . . . Where are all the old ones I knew then?

Dean Kay has a first name like that of George Haskell, and Dean Lierle is not a dean at all but that is merely by way of being his first affixed name.

Christmas will be on December 25 this year.

And all the streets are by way of being daily decorated these days as if for a festive occasion and did thereby recall my boyhood days in Marshalltown, Iowa, when we kids used to bank the snow and have snow fights when I was a boy and young in Marshalltown, Iowa. Alack!

George Haskell and Dean Kay have a first name that is exactly alike . . . And so bedded myself for the night.

Beg Pardon, Odd, it was a great old column. Wish you were back with us telling us of the New York that nobody knew but you. The New York that didn't exist except in your mind. We miss you, all 12,000, 000 of us who read your fairy tales daily.

HAWKEYES DOWN WASHINGTON, 42-26

Who Threw That Ball?

For your information it was Angie Anapol, sophomore forward, who is establishing quite a reputation this year as a basketball player. Together with Capt. Benny Stephens, Anapol has had much to do with the quintet's two victories thus far by a 42-27 score, Rollie Williams,

Daily Iowan Photo, Engraving
Iowa cage coach, was far from pleased with the performance of his charges, declaring that much improvement must be made if Iowa is to finish toward the top of the Big Ten in the current season.

Falls Frequent as Wrestling Tournament Gets Under Way

Heavyweight Title Bout to Be Held Today; Nead Favored

University wrestlers got away on the first lap of the all-university wrestling tourney yesterday as matmen in four different weights won their way to the semifinals.

Not one match of the five that came off yesterday lasted the limit, although none of the falls came exceptionally early. The quickest fall to be scored came when Howard Krouse, 145 pounder, pinned Robert Jensen in 3:05. Another that lasted slightly longer, saw Wayne Hardin throw Herb Kerstein in 3:39 in a match in the 136 pound division.

One other match in the 145 division, besides the Krouse-Jensen fray, was the one in which Louis George took William Langfitt in 4:40. In the 155 division, Merrill Johnson threw Eddy Berryhill in 6:36, and, in the 175, Paul Whitmore won from Ervin Goodman in 6:36.

On tonight's card are eight matches, including one, the heavyweight, a final. The reason for the heavy division being finished so early is that both Carl Vergamini and Wilbur Nead, who are still in the running, are to be busy on Wednesday. Vergamini will wrestle Richard Fesemeyer, the winner to take on Nead. Plenty of excitement is promised with this lineup, with no favorites in sight.

165: Ralph Geppert—Wendell Weid.

175: Xavier Leonard—Virgil Neuhauser.

Heavyweight: Carl Vergamini—Richard Fesemeyer, Wilbur Nead—winner of Vergamini—Fesemeyer match.

Matches begin at 4:15 in the wrestling room at the field house.

Roosevelt Five Next Foe Of Little Hawks

U-High Set To Launch Title Drive

Sparked by their thrilling victory over a previously unbeaten St. Mary's, U-High will journey to Tipton tonight to launch their 1938-39 conference campaign.

Seeking to give its forwards more experience under close guarding, Merten sent his first string guards, Joe McGinnis and John Lemons, to the second string and boosted Maher and Lewis to first string berths during the practice. McGinnis and Lemons will start against Roosevelt, however.

Vergil "Seth" Parker was the only member of the varsity squad not reporting for practice. Coach Merten kept him from the Wilson game last Saturday, fearing that should he have played it would have brought on "Seth's" appendicitis trouble.

DON BUDGE TOPS NATION

Given Battle
By Armstrong

Red Head Awarded
First of 26 Of
63 Sports Scribes

NEW YORK, Dec. 12 (AP) — For his unprecedented achievements on the tennis court, Don Budge again tops the list as the country's foremost athlete of 1938.

In a nation-wide poll conducted by The Associated Press, the red-headed Californian was given top ranking by 26 of the 63 participating sports writers and enough seconds and thirds to roll up 122 points. During the year the lanky tennis ace won the Australian, French, British and American titles before turning pro for $75,000.

Competition

Budge's triumph, however, was not as great as last year, when he was selected almost to the exclusion of all others. This time he was given a battle right down to the final ballots by Henry Armstrong, great Negro fighter who likewise created history by holding the featherweight, lightweight and welterweight championships at the same time.

The west coast boxer polled 19 first-place votes and finished with 104, only 18 points back of Budge. There was a big gap between Armstrong and Johnny Vander Meer, Cincinnati southpaw who hurled two successive no-hits, no-run games for another record. Johnny was the choice of eight writers and altogether polled 37 votes for third place.

Nosed Out

Glenn Cunningham, who set a 4:04 performance at Hanover, N. Y., set a new world indoor mile record, received three first place votes but Davey O'Brien, Texas Christian's all-American quarterback, coupled enough seconds and thirds with his two No. 1 votes to beat out the veteran track star for fourth. Single first place ballot were received by Ralph Guldahl, winner of the national open golf championship for the second straight year; Sam Snead, golf's leading money winner and Hank Greenberg of the Detroit Tigers and Jimmie Foxx of the Boston Red Sox.

Reviews Nevers' Record

Statistics Prove Ernie's Greatness as Player;
Faced Irish With Ribs Broken

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, Dec. 12 (AP) — Mr. Haugrud cites the specific incidents to back up the record claims, and the incidents indicate that from a durability standpoint over certain periods Nevers was matchless.

There may have been players who performed over longer periods, such as Roy "Link" Lyman, now Nebraska line coach, but when it is realized Nevers played in the backfield, where the wear and tear is heavier, his length of duty was remarkable. Lyman was a tackle, and so big the game couldn't tire him. He just tired of the game.

Never's 17 consecutive pass completions brought 27 points against Pottsville, Pa., in a National league game, and in another league game he place-kicked five field goals for a 15-0 win over Hartford, Conn. He scored six touchdowns and made four conversions for the 40 points which whopped the Chicago Bears, 40 to 6.

At the Polo Grounds in New York he intercepted a pass on his own 45, then carried the ball over in nine running plays. Playing with the Eskimos against Milwaukee he stood on his own 40 and tossed a pass into the end zone to Joe Rooney for a winning touchdown.

And if there still is any doubt that Mr. Ernie Nevers is a sissy, it might be mentioned that he played 60 minutes against Notre Dame's four horsemen in his final college game after both ankles were broken earlier in the season. And that's really putting on a show without props.

Major Leagues Meet Today

Trade Winds Blow
As Three Day Confab Gets Under Way

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK, Dec. 12 (AP) —

Baseball's bargain counters opened for business all over town today, but in most cases — including a rumored three-cornered

American league deal involving

Detroit, Cleveland and Boston —

the activity was confined to sales talks.

There was much whispering as baseball men from all over the map gathered for tomorrow's start of the three-day major league meetings. In hotel rooms — smoke-filled or otherwise — there was lots of good old-fashioned chin-ning, but although the trade winds blew hot around several transactions, no one was ready to come

Keynote

Perhaps Oscar Vitt, Cleveland's manager, and old Bob Quinn, the Boston Bees' master-mind, key-noted the affair with two remarks.

Quinn strolled into the lobby of a downtown hotel and, addressing a manager colleague, and asked, "Well, what are you giving away today?"

Vitt came out of an all-afternoon talk with Detroit officials to report nothing definite had been done, and then shouted, "I want action." At a late hour tonight, no one was found giving away any ivory, and Vitt was still reported looking for action.

The trading, if there is going to be any, seemed to center around these possibilities:

Rumors

1.—Outfielder Earl Averill and

Pitcher Denny Galehouse will go from the Indians to Detroit in return for a set-up shot shortly after the opening of hostilities.

The Hawkeyes maintained the lead until midway in the period when Desmond Lee poured in two rapid shots from the field to knot the count at 12-12.

Stephens, following up his own shot, sank the rebound to put

Iowa back in the lead which it never relinquished.

Iowa continued pecking away at Washington's basket and led at the half time, 22-16.

Shortly after the opening of the second period free throws by Irvine and Stephens and a field goal and free throw by Evans gave the Hawkeyes a lead of 27-18.

Quinn, Former Iowa Professor, Receives Honor

Prof. Alonzo W. Quinn, who taught at the University of Iowa in 1926, receiving his M.S. degree the following year, was recently elected president of the Geological Society of Boston, succeeding Prof. Hervy W. Shimer of M. I. T.

Now connected with the geology department at Brown university, Professor Quinn's interests in the field of geology are chiefly in petrography and mineralogy, and he has made extensive microscopic studies of igneous and metamorphic rocks.

As president of the geological society, Professor Quinn will be working in cooperation with its 200 members in the interests of related sciences. Most of the members of the society are connected with colleges and universities in eastern New England, including Boston university, Brown, Clark, Harvard, Tufts, M. I. T. and the University of New Hampshire.

An associate professor of geology at Brown since 1936, Professor Quinn came to the university in 1929 as an instructor. He received his B.S. degree from Denison university in 1924 and his Ph.D. degree from Harvard in 1931.

From his first teaching position at the University of Kansas in 1924, Professor Quinn came to the University of Iowa and taught the following year at Williams college.

In addition to his teaching, Prof. Quinn has served with the United States geological survey, working in the Rocky Mountain area.

Prof. Quinn is a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the American Mineralogical society and Sigma XI.

Jack Harbert, Who Placed in McCall Pattern Contest, to Be on Ripley Program

This is Jack Harbert, A1 of Seymour, dress designer and second place winner in the McCall-Talon dressmaking contest conducted last year. Jack was the only boy in the contest, competing with over 10,000 girls. He will be heard over Bob Ripley's "Believe it or Not" program sometime in February.

By LORRAINE BENEKE

There he was—Jack Harbert, A1 of Seymour—sitting at a sewing machine making curtains for the home economics Christmas dinner! Sewing and enjoying it! Unusual, but the fact remains that the male domestic instinct is coming to the fore!

Jack was awarded second place last year in a dressmaking contest sponsored by the McCall Pattern company and the Talon Fastener company. Ten thousand girls were competing for a Gruen watch. That didn't deter Jack who was the only boy in the contest. Maintaining that in the end the male is always superior, he proved his point.

The requirements of the contest were to submit a dress using a McCall pattern as a base and making any alterations and trimmings desirable, and to use a Talon Fastener either as trimming or by actors in "The Blue Bird."

Since boys were not eligible, Jack decided to enter his finished product under the name of "Jacklyn" Harbert. However, fearing that it wasn't exactly ethical, Jack wrote to the judges explaining that "Jacklyn" was really Jack!

One of the judges of the contest was Julia Colburn, leading designer of New York city, who was on the campus last week. Jack had never seen her before. She promised him that when he comes to New York she will arrange introductions with some of New York's leading fashion designers.

Besides making one dress, which has taken an award, he has designed and sewed a number of things. He makes all his own suits, jackets, coats, shirts and in addition his mother's clothes. He also knits, crochets and is noted for his creation of feminine forms.

He started sewing seriously when a sophomore in Seymour high school. "However," he said, "I guess I've always liked to sew."

Between the home economics department and University theater, Jack is kept quite busy. He has been helping with the decorations for the home economics Christmas dinner tonight, and the costumes for the play, "The Blue Bird."

Where did Jack get the inspiration for his winning dress? After some coaxing, he admitted that he had a particular girl in mind when designing it. He designed the dress as an afternoon frock of black wool with gold and black fringed belt, gold filigree buttons and accessories to match.

Not only does he excel in sewing but he can cook! His steaks would make your mouth water, those who know say. His pies and cakes are excellent. Just ask the fellows at Kellogg house! He prepares dinner there three times a week.

Bob Ripley has made arrangements to have Jack on his "Believe it or Not" radio program in February.

Eventually Jack intends to be "a buyer or something along that line." At present he is enrolled in home economics department.

By the way, Jack is not a sissy!

Poet to Be At Cornell College

MT. VERNON (Special to The Daily Iowan)—Edna St. Vincent Millay, outstanding American poet, will appear tonight on the Cornell college campus as a feature of the Artist-Lecture course. Miss Millay will present a recital of her own verse with comments.

Probably the best known woman poet in America, Miss Millay began her writing career early in life. At nineteen she wrote the well-known "Renaissance," which was the title poem of her first volume of verse published the year she graduated from Vassar college, 1917.

Burgess is here to discuss the planning of programs of various campus organizations, to begin preparations for the Iowa Collegiate Peace conference which will be held here Feb. 24-26, and to create interest in the national convention of the youth committee against war that will take place in Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 27-30.

The Student Peace service functions to aid peace groups. Field secretaries of the organization are maintained over the country to assist groups in peace discussion and the organization of programs.

Clare Hummil, Child Welfare Authority, Speaks at Luncheon

League of Women Voters Participate In Open Discussion

"Child Welfare services should consist of a reorientation of all available resources for the good of the child," asserted Clare Hummil, field representative for the state department of child welfare, at a luncheon meeting of the League of Women Voters yesterday in the foyer of Iowa Union.

After outlining the history of the child welfare movement in Iowa, Miss Hummil explained the structure of the department which has been in existence only a year and a half.

"This is a new idea for a state to take up the responsibility of welfare of its individual members," she said, pointing out that it is difficult to evaluate services in comparison with material relief.

"No one has yet devised a way to measure the value of these welfare services," she added. "Consequently, we do not know definitely how we are progressing."

The important work of the department is the coordination of the welfare services, she continued, explaining that the primary aim of the department is to promote the good of the child.

"The need of the individual child is not always considered," Miss Hummil said. "Differences of opinions on what should be done about delinquency cases often result in wrong remedies."

In discussing the situation in Iowa City and in Johnson county, Miss Hummil explained that the local resources are much better than many places. She also told of her own work as field representatives in studying homes where foster children might be placed.

"However," she said, "the problem doesn't end with the placing of the child in a foster home. Frequent conferences with the foster father are necessary to enable the child to adjust himself properly."

"There is," Miss Hummil concluded, "constant need for reorientation of the child welfare services and reevaluation of those resources to fit them to the needs of the individual child."

After Miss Hummil's address, the group participated in an open forum with members asking questions of Miss Hummil. Preceding the address, Mrs. H. V. Cherrington presided at a short business session.

CHAPTER 33
WORTHINGTON GURLEY had never actually told Sara Sue that he loved her. He had imagined it quite heartily — Sara Sue being extremely pretty—and it was pleasant imagining for an impressionable lad among strangers. Infatuation comes easily that way. And, too, he hadn't felt like just giving in to Bob Towne; competition breeds determination, without rational cause.

"It certainly is funny, how everything in life works out all right," he told her. "Remember how you couldn't meet me for that swim a week ago, Sara Sue? Well, that was where I met Marcia, and say—she's grand!"

"She is, truly, Worthington." "Yeah man! And I was mad at you for a while, for not keeping your date. Well, Fate does things like that, doesn't it?"

Sara Sue smiled. "You aren't mad at me any more? We can still be friends?"

"Oh, gosh, Sara Sue! I should say so! Why, you were the one who brought us together. I can never repay you for that!"

"I thought you laid it to Fate?"

She couldn't think that dig.

"Well, yes, but—well, you know what I mean. You couldn't keep the date and all. I guess I was pestering you anyway. I—I'm young enough to be your kid brother!"

She squeezed his arm then, and gave him a truly lovely smile. "I wish I did have a kid brother, Worthington. Like you. I hope we will always be friends. Close friends. Marcia and I are."

"Well, gosh, Sara Sue—you bet! You just call on me, any time you want anything. Anything, ever. Gosh, you're swell, Sara Sue!" The young fellow felt it, and meant it. There is no loyalty in Christendom like that of a teen age for an ideal.

Sara Sue Davis, Incorporated, was made immensely happy by that little conference. Worthington had been a problem customer. She had solved his problem (somehow she felt it was a permanent solution) and enjoyed the process.

She was making $300 a month from her novel Counsel in Romance cottage, but beyond that was the immense satisfaction, not to be measured in figures at all, of unselfishly helping others to achieve happiness. "It seems sort of a copybook philosophy, but it works," she mused. "I feel so sorry for people who are cynical about such things."

Two days later she had to listen to a detailed girl-to-girl confession from dainty little Marcia herself. "Had to" perhaps is incorrect; "had the privilege" is better, for it was a distinct privilege. It always is—to have a happy friend pour out heart secrets. Little Marcia was glowing.

Sara Sue thought she was done with her youngsters, then, except for casual jollity with the gang in her living room. But in that surmise she was wrong.

Ten days after the broken swimming date, Sara Sue was awakened at 11 p.m. by someone gently calling. She awoke with a slight start, but was not frightened because the voice was outside her bedroom window, and she recognized it anyway. It came in a stage whisper — "Sara Sue! Oh, Sara Sue!"

"What is it?" she answered, face to the screen.

"It's me. Worthington. And Marcia. Let us in!"

"Whatever's the matter? It's awfully late."

"It's not midnight. And it's urgent. Emergency."

She slipped into negligee and went to her door, expecting some sort of joke. They came in, both blushing, smiling.

"Listen, aSra Sue," he resumed, "will you let us borrow your wedding ring?"

They might have asked her for kitchen stove, or her tooth brush, or her lawn mower, and still not have surprised her as much. Her wedding ring! She only stared at them, dopey.

"Oh, please, Sara Sue! It's late. Nothing's open now downtown. And we—we're going to get married! Tonight! We just have to have a ring. It wouldn't be like marrying at all, without a ring. Marcia says, and she's right. Will you?"

She flopped down onto a divan, looking at the kids. Not knowing whether to burst into laughter or tears, and somehow wanting to do both.

Recreation Center Gymnasium Completed, Director Discloses

Basketball, Boxing, Wrestling, Dancing To Start This Week

With the completion yesterday of the gymnasium on the second floor of the recreational center, Eugene Trowbridge, director, announced that basketball, boxing and wrestling for boys, and dancing for girls will begin this week. Boys have been divided into four classes for use of the basketball court. Midgets, including the ages of 8, 9 and 10, and juniors, 11, 12 and 13, will be given use of the floor from 4 to 5 p.m. every day as well as Saturday mornings.

Intermediates, 14 and 15 years old, and seniors, 16 through 20, will have the floor together during the evenings and Saturday afternoons.

Bill Wittstein, athletic director, announced that classes for boxing and wrestling will be planned in the next few days. Girls, too, have been remembered in the project. Tap dancing and social dancing are on the schedules of amusement to be begun this week.

The gymnasium floor measures 30x51 feet, surrounded by a balcony and topped by a 20-foot ceiling. This structure, equipped with dressing rooms, is the first ever constructed in an Iowa City recreational center, Trowbridge revealed. "We invite all youths in the city," he continued, "to join in the fun we're planning for the boys this winter."

Local adult commercial and non-commercial teams are welcome to use the court for practice, Wittenstein announced. Because the balcony space will seat only a few spectators, he added, public games will not be held there.

The "ladder" ping pong tournament now being held in the recreational center has continued to attract new contestants. A doubles division has been added in order to afford boys the chance of playing in teams. This contest will continue indefinitely, Trowbridge said, and serve as a practice tournament to give way to the city-wide tournament scheduled to be held in February.
